Life went on as normal, only things were easier now that Max had given up work and Nasta was on paperwork duties again. Harry, Draco and Blaise were getting through all their homework, Braiden was fine, the only real challenge now was the pregnancy, which was moving into its fourth month and making Harry so miserable that all of them were feeling down and miserable.

Harry was facing the very real possibility of failing his general education and the thought made him cry, he didn’t want to stop his education, he had to remain in the school anyway for Blaise and Draco, why should he have to give up his education when he had to remain in the school regardless?

He strove to prove everyone wrong, that he could do it, that he could finish his education, but he only served to prove them right when he had collapsed in Defence Against the Dark Arts. He had woken up in the hospital wing, surrounded by worried mates and an unhappy Braiden.

Harry had still refused to give up his education after that incident and had also refused to drop a subject pointing out that he had already dropped Potions so he was struggling through, just waiting for the Christmas holidays to start so that he could have a few weeks’ break. It wasn’t long now, it was the fifteenth of December, just one more school week and then the holidays would start and they’d be back at Max’s home, he could survive until then.

Braiden had surprised them all by rolling around the floor. Harry had laughed so hard he had almost wet himself as Blaise scooped Braiden up before he rolled into leg of the coffee table. Braiden grinned at them cheekily and Blaise had put him down again, only for Braiden to roll continuously to his right until he had to be picked up before he hit something. They tried getting him to roll to his left, but he favoured his right side and he would only roll right. They moved him out of his bassinet and into his cot the very same day. Harry was taking absolutely no chances with Braiden rolling now, just in case his son made the bassinet tip over while Braiden was inside.

“He looks like such a big boy now.” Harry said tearfully as he put Braiden into the cot and tucked him in.

Draco chuckled and kissed his cheek. “He is a big boy now, look at the size of him.”
Harry looked at his son now and pictured him when he was just born, that tiny little baby in his arms, and he couldn’t. He only really got a true understanding of how small Braiden had been when he looked at his tiny newborn clothes and held them to Braiden’s body. It was hard to imagine that he had ever once fit in them, but Braiden had been wearing them only four months ago.

Harry went to bed himself not too long after Braiden had been put down. It might only be half ten at night, but he was aching, tired, sore and he wanted some sleep. He took a few sips of sleeping potion as Max looked on and he fell asleep almost immediately as Max tucked him up and kissed him goodnight.

Thank you all for reading and reviewing!

The vote that is not a vote is back! Five babies, who are their daddies, that is what I want to know. Tell me your thoughts, feelings, choices etc. I’d love to hear them, but remember it’s not an official vote and the story is in no way affected by the winners of said vote.

Chapter Fifty-Two – Christmas Tidings

Harry was so glad when they arrived at Myron’s home. It had been a last minute change to their plans, but they had been invited to spend the holidays with Myron, Richard and Ashleigh, who had apologised to him sincerely, but Harry remained stiff and cool towards her. Which seemed to surprise her and upset her, but Harry didn’t care. She should never have said those things to him and she should have apologised sooner if she felt any true regret. She had said it over a month ago, almost two months ago now and he hadn’t heard a word from her since. He also growled every time she went too close to Braiden, not because he thought that she was dangerous to him, but purely because he did not want her near him.

Harry also became spiteful when he played on her own living room floor with Braiden, making him huff and giggle and laugh and he refused to include her when she asked if she could join them. Myron just looked at Ashleigh unimpressed and told her that she had brought it upon herself when she went crying to him. Richard was more sympathetic towards her, but not by much.

Harry enjoyed being fawned over by Alexander and Kimberly when they came for the entire of the Christmas week, Aneirin had been invited and he and Sanex were there too, but Marianna hadn’t come because Josiah was actually home for Christmas for once. But overall it was lucky that Myron had such a big house, though it was sad that he had bought a big house in preparation for a huge family and that that wish and desire had been ripped away from them.

“Braiden, say Mama.” Harry encouraged as he sat cuddled up with Braiden, who was looking at him through Blaise’s eyes.
“Ah!” Braiden exclaimed as he bounced in Harry’s arms.

“Mama.” Harry repeated.

Braiden just stuck his fist into his mouth and sucked on it. Harry sighed. He had been trying to get Braiden to say his first word for a month now, but his son just did not want to speak.

He was in the living room on his own as everyone rushed around decorating and preparing for Christmas day. Harry had started helping, but when a fine tremble had started in his knees he had quickly demanded Richard, the nearest person to him at that moment, to help him to a chair. Richard had hefted him up and carried him to the settee and then Draco had dumped Braiden on him as he was roped into help with finding the tree.

Harry hummed Braiden to sleep and took a nap himself as the hustle and bustle went on around him. He was woken up to a kiss on his lips and he smiled.

“You’re not supposed to laugh as I kiss you.” Max’s voice came to him. “You’re supposed to open your mouth to accept my talented tongue and moan.”

Harry chuckled sleepily and he peeled his eyes open to find Braiden missing and himself covered with a thick, woollen blanket on the settee.

“We left you to sleep as long as possible, but you slept through lunch and Nasta’s having kittens about you sleeping through dinner as well.”

Harry smiled and stretched his body, but not too much, he’d been warned that he could rip his sac and his skin if he stretched too much or too far. He did not want open sores on his belly as well as stretch marks and bruises; he was already going through a bottle of moisturising lotion every few days to keep the dry, stretched skin on his belly from splitting.

He held his arms up to Max, who grinned as he indulged him by picking him up and carrying him to Myron’s kitchen, which wasn’t as open and spacious as Max’s, but it was very large and just as beautiful, just in a different way.

Max sat him between Alexander and Nasta and Harry sleepily rubbed his eyes, even as he was served dinner and his belly rumbled loudly. He was passed a jar of honey automatically and Harry smiled gratefully as he slathered his chicken with honey, everyone at the table acting like he hadn’t done anything more than ask for more carrots. Which he was thankful for.

Harry finished eating his black cherry pie and custard; of course it also had a good helping of honey as well, and he sat back with a pleased groan. He felt full…for now.
“Ma ma!”

Harry’s neck cricked with how quickly he turned to face Braiden, who was in his brand new, state of the art, carrycot gifted to them by Alexander, at the end of the table. No one moved or said anything as they stared at the baby struggling with his straps.

“Ma ma!” Braiden repeated and Harry forced his body up using the table top and he went to Braiden, unstrapped him and held him up to eye level.

“Say it again, Braiden love. Say Mama.”

“Ma ma ma!” Braiden babbled and Harry hugged him tightly with tears in his eyes.

“He’s talking!” He told the others unnecessarily. “He said his first words!”

“Of course Mama would be his first.” Max grinned as he kissed Braiden’s cheek. “Such a clever boy.”

Harry kissed Braiden repeatedly and Braiden huffed his little giggles and Harry was so happy.

“Oh I wonder when he’ll be walking!” Ashleigh considered out loud.

“Soon enough I bet.” Max answered with a quick, uncertain glance to Harry, who had ignored the comment.

“May I be excused? I’m still tired and I want to get some sleep.” Harry asked Myron, who nodded.

“You remember where the bedroom is?” Richard asked.

“He’s not walking up those stairs alone!” Nasta countered astonished that it was even suggested.
Harry giggled and held an arm up to Nasta, who pulled him up onto his hip, one arm under his bum, the other helping him support Braiden as Harry’s free arm wrapped around Nasta’s neck.

Nasta carried him to bed and sat him carefully down on the mattress, Braiden still in Harry’s arms.

“I can’t believe he spoke.” Harry said happily.

“The next step is getting him to say Dada.” Nasta said with a grin. “Or even Baba.”

“Ah ba!” Braiden told them seriously.

Harry could have cried as he peppered Braiden’s face with kisses.

“He’s so clever!” Harry praised.

Nasta chuckled and kissed him, then kissed Braiden, before taking him from Harry’s arms, stripping him, putting him in his sleepsuit and then putting him in his cot beside their bed. Nasta tucked Harry up and kissed him before kissing his huge belly.

“Don’t touch it!” Harry hissed unhappily. “I don’t like you touching it; it’s bad enough you have to see it.”

“Don’t be so ridiculous.” Nasta told him softly as he nuzzled the belly. “My children are in here, of course I want to touch, kiss and hold it as much as I can. I love you, I love Braiden and I love them.”

“I…I don’t want them, Nasta.” Harry told him, looking away ashamedly.

Nasta held Harry to his heart and brushed that thick hair with his fingers. “That’s alright, Harry. They came suddenly, they’re growing at an alarming rate and they’re changing your body and your emotions, of course you’ll have some reservations about them. It’s alright that you feel this way at the moment, love; it’s when they’re born that we have to watch out for. If you still don’t love them then, or if you refuse them or don’t protect them, then we’ll call a Healer and see if you’re suffering from postnatal depression.”
Harry looked at Nasta with a frown. “Will…will the Healer make me love them?”

Nasta smiled at Harry and kissed him soundly. “I have every faith in you, Harry and in your Dracken, I’m positive that it will never come to that. As soon as these five are born, you will never let them go again, just like Braiden.”

They both looked to the baby, who was sucking slowly on a few fingers, drifting slowly to sleep. Harry smiled, reassured by Nasta and he allowed his oldest lover to nuzzle and kiss his belly, which felt like it was tearing from the inside out as it grew rapidly.

“The one thing we’ll have to look out for the most though is directly after birth.” Nasta confided. “You may kill them yourself.”

Harry looked at Nasta horrified.

“If your Dracken doesn’t want them, or sees them as threats or intrusions, then you may well kill them, or some of them, before we can reach you.”

“I can’t!” Harry whispered hoarsely. “Please, don’t let me kill them, Nasta!”

Nasta smiled. “Your reaction has just told me that we don’t face that problem. I remember a few years back, a dominant killed his submissive, because she had killed their quadruplets. She’d just given birth to triplets on her previous heat, they were nine months old when she birthed the quadruplets. Her dominant had lost his job, they couldn’t afford more mouths to feed, but he swore that they would make it work, but she resented them because she was angry and upset with her mate. She kept telling him that she didn’t want them and that they had ruined everything, that she was going to kill them. He brushed it off as submissive dramatics and carried on looking after their triplets and their firstborn daughter. She went into her nest, birthed the babies and then he heard her killing them. He rushed to her nest just in time to watch her spear their last child on her claws. He tore her head from her shoulders and presented it to the Counsel.”

“Wouldn’t they have killed him then? What about their four other children?”

“The Counsel are fair and just, Harry. They listened to his story and cleared him of the murder of his mate for her heinous actions. What she had done would have made the most mild tempered dominant livid, feral and unreasonable. The Counsel even allowed him to join the meets to take another mate.
“Did he find one?” Harry asked, hoping with all his heart that he had.

“He was still relatively young, very handsome and strong and not every single submissive is an Amelle or a Miette. He found a woman that loved children so much that she was willing to take on his four other children as well and she enjoyed the maturity that came to him from parenthood. They are still together and have eleven children altogether so far.”

Harry smiled at the happy ending and he let himself be eased back onto his side, a body pillow under his huge, straining bump and he fell asleep without the aid of the sleeping potion. Perhaps he should have taken some as he woke in the middle of the night, sweating and shaking; he had dreamt that he had torn the heads from all five of his children as he birthed them, one by one.

He felt sick and fevered and he quickly took Braiden and fled down the stairs, going down them on his bum like he had become used to at Hogwarts whilst pregnant with Braiden.

He put Braiden down into the pop-up travel cot that had been placed by the end of the kitchen table, where the bassinet had once been, but now that Braiden was rolling, Harry refused to use it for safety reasons.

He made himself a cup of tea and after seeing that it was three in the morning, he left Braiden where he was. He hadn’t woken up for Braiden’s night feed, which was unusual, even with the potions he woke when Braiden started crying for his two o’clock feed.

Harry stayed awake for the rest of the night, his mind in turmoil from his dream, a hand pressed firmly against his bump, stubborn thoughts going through his mind until at half five in the morning Alexander came into the kitchen.

“I thought I could hear movement down here. Harry, sweet one, what has you so troubled?”

Harry bit his lip and tried to control his anguish, but it all flooded from him as he looked into those kind, concerned, compassionate, dark grey eyes and he broke down sobbing.

Alexander held him and listened to him as he told him about his conversation with Nasta, his feelings about his pregnancy and his new children and the dream he had had.

He was given a shaky sip of calming draught and Alexander sat next to him at the table and took both of his hands into his own.

“Look at me, Harry. You have been through so much, in such a short space of time. No one can blame you for your thoughts and feelings on this matter. I will confide to you a piece of information that only my mate knows. When she was having her first large clutch, our Keanu, Edward, Enrique and Oliver, our first quadruplets after a string of six singletons, I was apprehensive. I was afraid and fearful for her health. I pleaded with her to terminate them. I told her that she was having too many at one time, that her body had become so used to birthing single babies that a sudden clutch of four would damage her. She refused to terminate them, she remained stubborn and she insisted that she was going to go through with it. I hated them all, Harry. Every single baby from conception, all throughout the pregnancy and I hate them until the day that my mate laid them in my arms. Kimberly was so proud of them, so pleased with herself as she handed me my four newborn sons. I have loved them ever since, Harry. I learnt a very strong lesson that day, a very important lesson, to have faith. Kimberly had faith in herself and in her abilities to birth the children and look after them when we already had six young children. Our oldest, Xerxes, was only eight when Kimberly birthed our quads. Since that day, I never even suggested termination again, I was by her side throughout the rest of her pregnancies, even the clutch of five she had later in life, that frightened me more than anything else, seeing her swollen up with five children, much like you are now, but I calmed myself and reminded myself of holding my first four for the first time and I began wondering what five would feel like in my arms, I kept faith in myself and in Kimberly. So have some faith in yourself, Harry. Your dream was not a premonition of the future, it was just a bad dream brought on by your talk with Nasta and your stressed, restless mind. You are a kind, loving, wonderful and strong boy, if anyone can get through this, it will be you. Now if Caesar came home and told that his Amelle was pregnant with five, I’d fear for him and the children, but with you? I feel only calm and growing excitement of getting five new great-grandchildren.”

Harry smiled happily, feeling so much better and he was so completely reassured that he hugged Alexander tightly and allowed the hands on his bump and the kiss to his forehead.

“Now let’s get you some more tea and maybe a jar of honey before that spoil sport of a Delericey comes down and takes it from you.” Alexander winked and Harry laughed, feeling genuinely happy for the first time in what seemed like months.

Severus Snape holed himself up in his rooms for the Christmas break, immersed himself in Potions, texts and an odd glass of Firewhisky or elf made wine.

Seeing Potter so happy with a baby at his breast and a bump already forming had been almost more than he could bear. Regulus had been apprehensive, but so excited for their daughter to be born and then Potter senior had dashed those hopes and plans to pieces.

Regulus had been distraught when he had been told that their daughter was no more, that the little baby girl that they had been looking forward to welcoming into their lives had been killed inside Regulus’ sac. The worst part of it was when Regulus had to have the operation to remove the dead foetus from inside of him. Regulus had been having nightmares for years afterwards.

Severus took another gulp of whiskey and savoured the burn down his throat. He had sworn that he would pay Potter back in kind, that he would one day kill his firstborn, with whomever he settled down with, but he hadn’t counted on that woman being Lily. Strong, fiery, sweet, loving, kind, lovely Lily. How could he kill Lily’s child, but he had sworn to kill Potter’s firstborn for his own daughter, for Regulus.

He saw that boy now, the baby he had sworn to kill before he was even born, he had his own child now and more on the way, Severus would guess at three or four of them from the size of Potter. He had seen a submissive pregnant with six children in an illustrated book. She had looked like she was swimming in her own flesh, her stomach so rounded with child that she couldn’t move, not even to roll over. Potter didn’t look like she had, but he was very large.

Severus scanned the history book once again, turning the page and scouring it closely for even a hint that his mate had gone to the Potter wedding party. He had looked a hundred thousand times, through photos, through texts, through written accounts of guests and newspaper articles, but he could find no hint of Regulus being there, but where else would his vengeful mate go? Regulus had also sworn to kill Potter, the elder not the junior who had yet to be born, so it made sense that his mate had gone to the wedding party when Lily had innocently invited him, plus one. Neither of them had gone and it was likely that Potter hadn’t even told her that he had killed their daughter, so she saw no harm in inviting them. Regulus had been in fits of rage for the week preceding the wedding and when they had argued on the night of the wedding, Regulus had stormed out and Severus had let him go, before realising two hours later, once he had cooled down, that if Regulus went and killed Potter, then he would be arrested, if he showed his Dracken attributes or was found to be a Dracken, then he would be executed. He had rushed to the Potter wedding, searched high and low for Regulus, he had startled Lily badly when she had come across him searching and he had demanded to know if she had seen him. Regulus hadn’t been there, so he had gone and scoured every haunt and known place that Regulus would go, from Hogwarts, to his parents’ home, where a tearful, nasty, vile elf had screamed at him to go away and leave Master Regulus in peace, that he had ripped the Black family apart, that he had hurt his poor Mistress. He had deduced that Regulus was not there after booting the elf aside and scouring the Black ancestral home as Orion Black was in work and Walburga Black at the Malfoy home.

Nothing made sense. Regulus had been in fits about the invitation, but he also went on about a locket. Severus could find no mention anywhere of any Black’s owning lockets. He had scoured through the Black family history, through all the private Black family journals he had taken as soon as Sirius Black had died and the house passed down to Potter and he found nothing, not even in Regulus’ journal.

Scrubbing his face with long, thin, potion stained fingers, Severus knocked the book he was reading to the floor. He just wanted to know what had happened to Regulus. He wanted to find his bones and bury them in the empty coffin that he had bought and buried so long ago now. He just wanted peace and solace for Regulus as well as himself. He needed to know what had happened all those years ago and where Regulus had gone and why.

Christmas Day was a buzz of activity as Harry helped Braiden open a mountain of presents that stood taller than Harry did when he was sat down and was wider across than he was tall.

“I told you all not to go overboard!” He chastised, even as he knew damn well that half of the presents in front of Braiden were from himself.
His mates sat around him chuckling, all of their gifts already opened, watching Harry as he and Braiden opened the presents together, revealing clothes, toys, books, shampoo and soaps, brushes and combs, a blanket, two new cot sets, a snow suit and an inflatable ball pit, including three hundred brightly coloured, hollow plastic balls to go inside it.

“Thank you, everyone.” Harry said a bit tearfully as he watched Braiden pull a fabric block to himself and put it straight into his mouth.

“We have another present for you.” Ashleigh told him. She was smiling for the occasion, but she hadn’t been her usual bubbly self.

She handed Harry a brightly wrapped box and he opened it. Inside were five beautifully designed, beautifully made, pure white cotton nightdresses. Each one had a delicate design on the front, they were similar, but different and Harry loved them.

He swallowed the lump in his throat, taking his pride and stubbornness with it and he hugged Ashleigh for the first time in two months, thanking her softly.

“You want them to all be girls then?” He asked as he wiped his eyes on his robes, not caring that they were expensive velvet and had been made just for him to wear on Christmas Day and presented to him by Draco the night before.

“Honey, they’re unisex. A baby boy can wear a nightdress as much as a little girl. Here, I found these in the attic.” She handed him a dusty photo of a big baby laying sleeping on a bed in a white nightdress similar to the ones that she had gifted to him.

“That’s Max.” She told him and Harry chuckled as Max groaned and whined behind him as Harry passed the photo around.

“Merlin, you were a big baby.” Draco teased.

Max pulled him into his lap and kissed him silent as ‘punishment’

They all laughed at that. “There’s another present underneath those, for Braiden and the five new ones.” Myron told them and Harry pulled out all five of the nightdresses and picked up the six white boxes underneath. They were hand and foot casting kits with spaces for a photograph and an inscription and Harry hugged Myron tightly, thanking him and making a mental note to use the one kit quickly, before Braiden grew even more.

Harry spent the rest of the day playing with Braiden and his new toys. Christmas dinner was very, very filling and Harry felt truly full for the first time in weeks, until the Christmas Pudding was brought out, then he decided that he wasn’t quite full after all and he had enough room left for a large piece of pudding with extra thick cream.

They had taken enough photos to fill two new albums, had worn Braiden out by the time that seven o’clock rolled around and they had worn themselves out by nine. They went to sleep happy, full, wound up and eager for Boxing Day.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Lucius Malfoy could see that his Wife was miserable. Her crystal blue eyes would continuously dart to the spot where their Draco usually sat for Winter solstice, the gift they had chosen together to give to him sat where his plate would have been, untouched and unopened because their son was not here with them to celebrate the holiday.

Dinner was a quiet affair; usually Draco kept them entertained with stories from Hogwarts or delighted them by showing off another Outstanding in his studies. He complained about this Hufflepuff, whined about that Gryffindor, updated them about his small circle of friends and talked over any plans he had for when he went back to school.

Life was quiet without Draco. Life was peaceful without his seventeen year old son whining like a small child in his ear. The summer had been particularly quiet and drab without Draco to accompany them on their summer break to Milan, though his Wife had informed him that Draco had had his own holiday to an island called Guadeloupe with the four men whom he had chosen to settle down with. Narcissa had also informed him that Potter was pregnant once again, this time with five children.

It was a strange thing, to think of the small, scrawny boy that was Harry Potter pregnant with five children. That any one of those children could be his first grandchild, but then Narcissa had dashed those ideas when she had informed him that their Draco was not a Father to any of the five children.

At first he had been angry, thinking that perhaps it had been Potter’s fault, that he was denying Draco his needs, but Narcissa had assured him that Potter getting pregnant had been an accident and it had taken all of the boys by surprise and that Potter couldn’t be held responsible when Draco hadn’t taken the chance to continue his line.

Now he didn’t know what to think or how to feel. How was any man supposed to feel about the boy he had repeatedly tried to capture to take to his death settling down with his only son? How was he supposed to act around Potter? What was he supposed to do? What was he supposed to say to the boy he had tormented since he was a young child?

He went to bed beside his Wife, his mind spinning around wild thoughts and sleep did not come to him easily. He saw Draco as a very young child, about five or six, thanking him with a hug and a huge grin for his several holiday gifts. Draco hadn’t hugged him since he was ten years old and that thought had never bothered him until now. Draco was polite and cool like he himself was with acquaintances and business partners, but he had never acted as such to his family. Was that his failing? Had he taught Draco to become a cold, distant, aloof man? He would have liked to say no, that that wasn’t his child, that his child had not become what he had strived to keep him away from, but with a sinking heart, Lucius realised that he had in fact taught his son these lessons through his own behaviour.

He had stopped mollycoddling Draco at ten to prepare him for Hogwarts, to help him to grow up a bit more, but it seemed now, in hindsight, to have backfired on him. The more he had refused to give Draco hugs and kisses and refused to allow him childish comforts and stopped him from having tantrums, fits and other childish behaviours, the more childish Draco acted as he got older. The boy was seventeen and he still whined like a toddler, still pouted and threw a fit when something didn’t go his way. Draco had yet to grow up and realise that he was a man now and should not act like a spoiled child and it was his failing as a parent, the blame rested heavy upon his shoulders and the guilt settled in his stomach like a stone.

The sky was just lightening to a steely grey when sleep took him and it was only a few short hours later when he felt the bed move beside him and it woke him from sleep. Narcissa was awake and had moved straight to her vanity table to brush the knots and tangles from her hair as she always did first thing every morning.

Lucius sat up and tried to ignore the guilt he still felt, which only grew as he saw his Wife’s sad and distant eyes through the mirror as her hand automatically stroked the brush forlornly through her golden hair.

He showered with the imprint of those miserable eyes stuck in front of him, he dried and dressed himself and brushed out his own hair before tying it up and out of his way with a ribbon.

Narcissa looked at him strangely when he came into the dining room for breakfast; he only tied his hair up when he left the house and they had no plans for today.

“Did the Minister floo call you, Lucius? I believe he promised to let you have Boxing Day off from work as well.”

“He did promise me that and no he never called, Cissa.”

“Then where are you going, dear?”
“We are going to accept that invitation after all.” He spoke as he sipped his tea, speaking of the invitation from Myron Maddison to join him and his family at his home for the festive period, along with his children, his parents, his grandchild and sons-in-law, which happened to include Draco, their son.

Narcissa blinked before her entire face brightened. Then her mouth downturned.

“But Lucius, we responded that we weren’t going, they aren’t expecting us, it’s rude to drop in unannounced.”

“Draco is our son; we don’t need an appointment to see him.” Lucius held back his sneer at that thought by the skin of his teeth.

Narcissa nodded distractedly as she made herself presentable and plucked up Draco’s gift, still on the table from yesterday, untouched, unopened.

“Should we wait until it’s more reasonable a time, dear?” Narcissa fretted then.

Lucius could have shook her. He was going to go now before his courage failed him, social politeness and etiquette be damned, otherwise he was never going to be able to share in his son’s life. His son, his only child.

“I’m sure someone will be up to receive us, darling.” He answered as he took her arm and led her to the fireplace.

“But what if they aren’t dressed or presentable, we’ll embarrass them!”

“Narcissa, I do not care if they receive us in their undergarments! If I wish to see my son at seven in the morning, I shall.”

That made his shrewd Wife suspicious; he could see it in her narrowed eyes and thinned lips.

“What do you want with Draco so early in the morning on Boxing Day?”
Lucius sighed and cursed himself for a fool for marrying Narcissa Black; he should have taken the offer of Irene Goyle instead and saved himself the questions and stalling.

“You will see when we get there, dear, if we ever do get there that is.”

Narcissa closed her mouth but the glaring to the back of his head let him know that she was thinking about caving it in with one of the solid bronze candlesticks that framed either side of the antique marble fireplace in their receiving room.

Her fears were unfounded as they found nearly the entire household enjoying breakfast, the only one’s missing were the ones he had come to see.

“Draco is not awake yet?” Narcissa questioned warmly as she engaged immediately with the women of the room.

“They’re all awake, they like to bathe Braiden in the mornings and shower before coming down and it takes a while for five adults to shower if they don’t double up.”

“Not at the breakfast table, Richard.” Myron chastised, like Richard was one of his children and not a spouse, but then how did you treat a spouse that acted like your child? “Please be seated and help yourself, my son took the liberty of making breakfast when he woke up before going to wake his lovers.”

Narcissa tittered amusedly. “Maximilius is a wonderful man.” She complimented graciously. “A very creative cook as well.”

Myron inclined his head at the compliment before turning back to Aneirin Delericey, whom Lucius had only heard of by name and reputation before and had only met him once, in that disastrous meeting that had led to the three men in front of him, threatening to kill him.

He was invited to join them and he did so, talking about the Ministry and the new upcoming bills that would hopefully come to pass in March.

It was another half an hour before Potter himself was carried in by Aneirin’s son, Nasta. Lucius couldn’t help but stare at the size of the boy, who must have put on at least two and a half stone of weight and had expanded his waistline by at least thirty inches. He looked almost unrecognisable from the chest down, but there was no mistaking that ethereal face, with those large, wide eyes and the lightning bolt off to the side of his forehead, above his right eye.

They paid him no mind, for all the notice they gave him he was an empty chair, but they both greeted Narcissa warmly and exuberantly, Potter even handed the Zabini child to her, who had grown considerably as well and was now holding his head up for short spaces of time, even if Narcissa still supported his neck.

Maximilius was the next down, grinning so much like his unbiological Father that he wondered if Myron had had a paternity test done to know that he was his own. Max kissed his Mother and hugged both of his Fathers and even his grandparents, not caring about anyone seeing or watching and Lucius swallowed, reminded harshly of how much he had ruined Draco with his past decisions.

Draco came into the kitchen with a smile, his hand clamped around Blaise Zabini’s, their fingers laced together like honeymoon lovers. It was the warm smile on his son’s lips that drew his attention the most, Draco looked like he was happy, like he was enjoying life to its fullest and Lucius couldn’t fathom how. How could sharing your lover with three other men bring him happiness? How could looking after six children that weren’t even his put that glimmer of love and peace in those silvery eyes. What was he not comprehending, what was it that he wasn’t seeing that attracted Draco, a spoilt, very unsharing and possessive boy, to this lifestyle?

Draco caught sight of his Mother and then turned to him and Lucius felt like he’d been dealt a huge blow as he watched the happiness slide off of that handsome, angular face and a cool mask settled in its place. Draco let go of Blaise’s hand so quickly it was as though he had been burnt as his hands flew to the front of his shirt and straightened it unnecessarily.

“Father, how nice of you to join us.” Was the calm, cool, drawling tone he was used to hearing from Draco. Did his son wear a mask at all times around him? Was it only him who didn’t know the real person his own son was? Was the son he saw, spoke to and lived with just a mask? Was there a completely different, much warmer, happier man living underneath the mask of the man he thought was his son?

“Good morning, Draco.” He greeted politely, before mentally hitting himself, it was this behaviour and cool, polite distance that had gotten him into this rut with Draco in the first place. “If I could take a moment of your time. In private.” Lucius mentally hit himself again. This was his son, not some Ministry official, but he couldn’t snap the ingrained responses.

“Of course.” Draco replied indifferently “Mister Maddison, if we may use your front room?”

Myron looked livid, and with good reason. They were Father and son and were treating one another like distant work colleagues.

“You may.” The man rumbled his deep voice tight with anger.
Lucius followed Draco and steeled himself for whatever was going to happen in this room. One way or another, he would either have his son back, or he would no longer have a son that recognised him.

Lucius closed the door behind him and turned to find Draco looking at him through those dull, cold eyes and his carefully planned speech flew out of the window, Lucius just did not want those eyes looking at him anymore. He crossed the room in four long strides and pulled Draco to him in the first hug he had given the boy in seven years.

Draco remained stiff and distant in his arms, until he realised that Lucius was not going to let go. Then those huge shoulders started quivering and then shaking and then large, muscled arms slipped around his slim waist and he was awkwardly holding a seventeen year old man who was sobbing for all his worth onto his shoulder.

Lucius remembered the last time he had hugged Draco, the small, happy, slender ten year old boy who came up to his elbow. It had been the same day that he had gotten his Hogwarts letter. He had held a grinning, excited Draco in congratulation and pride, but he had told himself then that it was time for Draco to grow up, but Draco hadn’t grown up, he had hidden.

He felt his shoulder become wet where Draco was resting his eyes and Lucius wondered at what point Draco had become taller than himself. It was a strange thing, to see his son but to only just now realise that said son was taller than him, was broader through the shoulders. It was only now that he had his son in his arms for the first time in seven or so years that he truly took notice that Draco was taller and bigger than himself.

He had always said that Draco would surpass him in both looks, body and excellence, but to see this strong, strapping man his tiny, pink bundle of baby with white fuzz had grown into brought a lump to his throat.

Draco was the best son any man could ask for. He was intelligent, a straight O student, handsome, well behaved, eloquent and well spoken, he had impeccable mannerisms and he was the light of his Mother’s eye. He could see that now. Narcissa’s happiness revolved around Draco. The sadness and melancholy of that morning had vanished as soon as Draco had walked into the room, her blue eyes sparkling with inner happiness at the sight of Draco’s apparent happiness.

It was himself that was the problem, he was the one destroying Draco and he couldn’t stand the thought that his son was suffering because of his actions. He promised to change, to be more accepting as he held that huge man to him, remembering with sadness the small boy he had been the last time he had held Draco this way. It should never have been so long, it should never have happened. It would never happen again, he should never have let him go all of those years ago. His biggest regret was that he would never get that time back now that he had finally realised his terrible mistake.

“I’m never letting you go again.” Lucius whispered into that platinum blond hair, holding the tears back by the very edge of his fingernails, he would not cry, Draco needed him to be strong for him, he could do that much for him. “Never again.” He repeated as he gently brushed Draco’s silky hair with his fingertips.
Harry was concerned as Draco remained in the front room with Lucius all morning. Narcissa was tense as well, keeping half an ear towards the front room, likely expecting screaming and shouting, like he was.

Harry ate a big lunch cooked by Max, who possessively waved his Mother away from her own cooker and started making lunch for everyone.

Harry sat on a chair cuddling Braiden, resting the baby, who was refusing to go to sleep, on his considerable bump.

“Have you tried him on solids yet, Harry?” Narcissa asked him. “He’s four months now isn’t he?”

Harry nodded. “I don’t think he’s ready yet, I want to bottle feed him for a month or so more first, but we tried giving him boiled carrots the other week, Max made sure they were really soft and completely pureed but Braiden just dipped his fingers into the puree into the puree on the spoon as it came towards his mouth and I don’t think he liked the feel of it. He didn’t even think to put it in his mouth, he just looked at the orange muck on his fingers and he started crying until we’d cleaned them off.”

Narcissa chuckled delicately. “Draco didn’t try to eat solids until he was eight months old. He was a breastfed baby and he was happy on the breast until eight months, when he actually took an interest in what Lucius and I were eating.”

Max roared with laughter and the grin on his face told them that he was not going to let Draco forget that he had been sucking from his Mother’s breast for eight months.

“Max refused to latch on.” Ashleigh commented. “I thought that it was something that I was doing wrong, until I had Caesar, who latched on immediately. He was unhappy when his little sister came about because I had to wean him quickly to free up my breasts for Julinda. Max was just a fussy baby, he’d only take milk at a certain temperature, it had to be the same strength and the same taste or he’d refuse it, I was actually glad when he started showing an interest in food at four months. I used to cut up bits of food and put it in front of him and let him pick and choose what he wanted.”

Max saluted him with a smile before he tugged him into a deep lip lock. Harry chuckled as Braiden watched his Dads kissing interestedly, one of his new animal toys stuck in his mouth being gummed to the rubbish bin.

Draco made an appearance at one in the afternoon and he was so happy that Harry smiled, wrapping
Draco in a hug, who kissed him before kissing Braiden and diving into the conversation with vigour. He was a changed man and Harry looked to Lucius Malfoy who was standing in the doorway and gave him a small smile and a nod, before turning back to his conversation with Nasta.

Caesar came around that afternoon for dinner; he brought an unhappy Amelle and a smothered Eleonora, who was five months old and not happy with being confined to her Mother’s arms when all she wanted to do was explore her new surroundings.

Harry had to sit through a monologue of how Eleonora was just so much better than Braiden, how she had already started trying to push herself up and was on her way to crawling, how she was already eating ‘real’ food, how she kept saying her first word (ooh) which Harry didn’t think was much of a first word and was just more of a noise.

Harry maturely endured through all of this, ignoring the woman as best as he could and making humming noises when she stopped speaking as if in agreement with her. His family were so proud, even as Caesar told Amelle to keep quiet and his own mates got angrier. That was until Braiden opened his little mouth and clearly said “Ma ma.” Harry grinned.

“My Braiden also said his first words.” He told Amelle gloatingly before turning to Braiden. “Haven’t you baby?”

“Ma ma ma!” Braiden babbled.

“Ooh!” Narcissa cried in delight. “You never said he was talking, Draco!”

Draco grinned. “He started the other day. He likes saying ‘ba’ and ‘ah’ as well.”

“It’s outstanding how quickly he’s developing.” Aneirin commented. “But then you see that with the Dracken born babies, they’re much more advanced than babies born by humans, though none are more advanced than the merpeople’s young, they are practically born children with the ability to swim, with fully formed teeth, hair and communication skills and understanding.”

“Who’s young is the least advanced?” Harry asked curiously.

“Vampires have the least developed start to life. Their young are so dependent upon their parents that if they are left alone for any longer than an hour then they could die, but they make up for this in their childhood, they develop so quickly during childhood that they are fully grown at fourteen, fifteen and have a higher understanding over others of their own age.”
“Which is why vampires are such snobs.” Nasta put in.

Harry chuckled at that.

“But, unfortunately, it’s the Faeries who have the second most underdeveloped children, like the vampires they also have a slow start, but unlike the vampires, Faerie children stay underdeveloped throughout childhood and are years behind other children their age. It’s only when they are teenagers that they start quickening and developing and they continue on throughout their adult life.”

“Why unfortunately?” Ashleigh asked curiously.

“Faerie blood runs in the Delericey bloodline. Any one of the children that Nasta could give me could be a Faerie.” Harry answered her, already understanding that if he had a Faerie child, a whole host of problems would arise.

“It’s not very likely, Harry; a Faerie hasn’t been born into the Delericey bloodlines for a hundred and fifty years or more.” Aneirin said.

“Don’t say that!” Harry whined. “I’m Harry freaking Potter, of course if you say that it’ll happen! I begged for one child and I got five!”

“That doesn’t prove anything.”

Harry snorted. “My entire life has gone from bad to worse, well…until I found this lot, of course.” Harry kissed Blaise and snuggled Braiden.

“I would have thought it went from worse to bad.” Max said quietly, after all they didn’t like bringing up the abuse he had suffered through. “You were in Hogwarts for most of the year when you hit your teens or…or did it actually get worse the older you got?”

“That too.” Harry said flippantly.
Nasta swallowed and licked his lips and Harry knew what was coming and he prepared himself for the therapy.

“If you want to talk about it, Harry, then we will listen, but don’t stress yourself in your condition.”

Harry considered that and he wondered if he felt up to telling them, maybe not about the Dursleys, but about his adventures at Hogwarts.

“Well after Hagrid saved me from the house on the rock…”

Harry glared at Max, who mimed zipping up his lips. Harry chuckled.

“When I started getting my Hogwarts letter, I was forbidden from opening it. They even moved me out of the cupboard under…”

“What cupboard?” Narcissa demanded, her blue eyes alight with fire.

Harry sighed and he realised that he’d have to go right back to the beginning.

“After my parents were killed I was sent to live with them. They never wanted me, never cared or even gave a passing thought to me. I was kept in the cupboard under the stairs until I was ten, just before my eleventh birthday when I started getting my Hogwarts letters.”

“I filed the report on them two weeks ago, they should be going into review soon, then they will be arrested and kept in holding cells until a court hearing can be set. Everything is moving smoothly and I’ll push to get it over and done with quickly so it doesn’t get dragged out. It’s a pretty cut and clear case.” Richard answered, turned into a mature, grown man for just a moment.
“Well anyway, one of my Uncle’s attempts to stop me from reading my Hogwarts letter was to take us to a broken down shack on a pile of rocks out to sea. I thought the roof would cave in at any moment. But Hagrid came on my eleventh birthday and gave me my letter. He took me shopping for my school things and told me about the wizarding world in general. But fast forwarding, in my first year I saved Hermione from a mountain troll…”

“A mountain troll? In a school full of children!” Myron hissed before turning to Lucius. “You were a school governor at this point, what did you do?”

“There was a full inquiry.” Lucius answered smoothly. “A teacher let the troll into the school as a distraction, but that teacher died before the inquest could be completed.”

“I killed him.” Harry said sadly.

“You were an eleven year old boy!” Aneirin refuted with a head shake. “You couldn’t have killed him.”

“I burnt him to death, I watched him turn to ash under my fingers.” Harry said hollowly. “My magic did that.”

Blaise hugged him and Nasta made a distressed sound in his throat as he came and sat on his other side, holding him comfortingly.

“I also met Fluffy, a monstrous three headed dog that was in the forbidden corridor.”

“Trust you to go snooping in the forbidden corridor and find a Cerberus.” Draco said weakly.

“There was also Norbert the Norwegian Ridgeback. Charlie tells me that the dragon was renamed Norberta after emerging that he was actually a she.”

“You came across a fully grown drag…”

“No, no. Norberta was just a baby. I watched her hatch.”
Nasta’s eyes were wide. “Harry, I can count on one hand the amount of times I’ve seen a dragon hatching and I’ve been a dragon handler for twenty years. The dragons are too protective of their eggs to let anyone go near them.”

“Norberta only had Hagrid and though he’s a protective Momma bear he let me, Ron and Hermione watch. Draco was also there if my memory serves me right.”

Draco blushed. “My ear has never been the same.”

Harry chuckled. “Then I think it was when we actually went to retrieve the Philosophers Stone from the trapdoor underneath Fluffy.”

“Excuse me, you did what?” Myron demanded and Harry huddled up, no longer excited about telling the story. Myron’s right hand clenched and Harry swallowed. He wondered if he was now going to be spanked for the first time in his life by a parental figure, he could see it in those jet black eyes that Myron wanted to do it.

“I…we, me, Ron and Hermione, went through the trapdoor that Fluffy was guarding because we thought Snape was trying to steal the stone.” Harry defended weakly.

“You thought Severus was doing what?” Narcissa actually giggled.

“Pray tell what was beyond this trapdoor?” Lucius asked.

Harry avoided looking at anyone as he scratched at the nape of his neck embarrassedly. “Devil’s Snare.”

“I couldn’t have heard you right.” Aneirin told him. “I thought that you said that you encountered Devil’s Snare, a very vicious, murderous plant that strangles and crushes anything that touches it.”

Harry licked dry lips and suddenly combatting the plant didn’t seem as fun or as big an achievement as it had before. For the first time, when put like that, it seemed like a dangerous and stupid thing to do.
“I did.”

“How did three first years know how to deal with this plant?” Myron demanded.

“Hermione. Ron and I would have died without her there. She…she’s proficient at lighting waterproof bluebell flames, she actually set Snape on fire in our first year, which is a funny story, but she cast her fire and the plant recoiled away from it and released Ron and I.”

“Granger set Professor Snape on fire?!” Draco asked.

“Yeah, in the first Quidditch match where Quirrell was jinxing my broom, she thought it was Snape and set him on fire to break his eye contact.”

Max laughed at that and Harry giggled a bit, but Myron was not amused and he looked like he was going to drag him over his knee at any moment, Harry almost didn’t want to continue.

“What were you doing on a broom in the first place; don’t you have to be in the second year of Hogwarts before you can play Quidditch because of the violent nature of the game?” Sanex asked.

“I got special permission to play by Dumbledore because I showed great talent on a broomstick.”

Max chuckled evilly and Harry knew what he was going to say before he did. “You have a lot of talent on a ‘broomstick’, Harry.”

Myron took a huge hand to the side of Max’s head, the smack making everyone wince, but Max just pouted and rubbed his sore spot before grinning happily once more. That smack had made Harry wince more than anyone else; he did not want that hand on his bum.

“What came after the Devil’s Snare?” Lucius asked coolly. He was not impressed either.

Harry thought hard and the tinkling and buzzing came back to his mind. “Keys.” He said. “Winged keys. You had to catch the key that unlocked the next door, there had to have been a thousand keys in that room.”

“And three eleven year olds caught the right key to the door?”

“It was pretty obvious. It had a broken wing from already being caught once.” Harry said meekly.

“What came next?”

“Wizards chess is a very violent game without it being life sized and including three children!” Ashleigh hissed. “Did any of you get hurt?”

“Ron did. The only way to win the game was for Ron to be taken by the queen piece and for me to checkmate the king. He was knocked unconscious from the blow, but he was fine afterwards.”

“He could have lost his head!”

“Good.” Draco hissed, everyone ignored him and Harry carried on quickly.

“After that was a huge troll that was already knocked out, thankfully, it was even bigger than the one I faced before and after that was a table of potions and a riddle. Hermione solved that, but only one of us could go forward, the other had to go back.”

Myron huffed irritated. “Let me guess, you went forward?”

“I went forward and found Quirrell with Voldemort sticking out of the back of his head.”

“I beg your pardon?”
“Voldemort was possessing Quirrell, but because he was just a spirit, he latched onto the host’s body like a parasite and sort of grew out of the back of Quirrell’s head, which is why he always wore that absurd turban. I had nightmares for months after that.”

“What happened after that?” Ashleigh asked almost breathlessly in fear.

“Voldemort asked me to join him. I’ll always remember what he said. ‘There is no good or evil, Harry, there is only power and those too weak to seek it. Join me and together we can do extraordinary things. Better to save your own life and join me or you’ll meet the same end as your parents’ I told him exactly where to shove that idea. He told me how he killed my Father first and then went after my Mother when I told him that I’d never join him, I might have called him a liar as well, but afterwards he screamed at Quirrell to kill me.”

“He couldn’t touch me. Dumbledore said it was because my Mother sacrificed her life for me and that because Voldemort couldn’t understand that, it became his weakness and he couldn’t touch me. Because Voldemort was sharing Quirrell’s body, he couldn’t touch me either and when he tried to suffocate me by cutting off my windpipe, his hands started blistering, the longer he held onto me the more they blistered until the hand died and turned to ash. He tried with his other hand and the same thing happened. I knew what I was doing, I knew that I’d kill him when I did it, but I latched onto his face, pushing my hands into his face and I watched the terror in his eyes, the pain and the fear as his face turned to ash under my hands and still I didn’t let go. I passed out sometime after that and woke up in the hospital wing a week later.”

“It was self-defence.” Richard told him as he finished. “No wizarding court in the whole of Britain would convict you for murder under those circumstances.”

“They wouldn’t?” Harry asked hopefully, needing the reassurance.

“Absolutely not.” Richard answered firmly. “An eleven year old boy being set upon by a grown man intent on strangling him? No. It would assuredly be ruled as self-defence even if you had taken a knife to his throat.”

Harry yawned widely and cuddled Braiden tightly as he slept soundly, the middle and ring fingers of his right hand encased in a softly sucking mouth.
“It’s bedtime I think.” Nasta said softly as he looked to the clock and to Harry’s half closed eyes.

“I never had a nap today.” Harry said surprised. “No wonder I’m so tired when it’s only nine.”

“How old are you, three?” Amelle sneered as she came in from the kitchen with a squirming Eleonora, who had been bathed, changed, fed and was now refusing to sleep.

“No, but I am pregnant with five babies and you’re not, are you?” Harry said with a pointed look to her empty belly.

Amelle hissed and took a step forward. Blaise was in front of him before she could take a second.

“Don’t even think about coming any closer to him or I will tear off every finger you have and bury them in your eye sockets.” He hissed.

Amelle looked around, saw that no one was on her side, before she looked for Caesar, who had gone to the toilet at the end of Harry’s tale and then she realised that she was alone. She growled and hissed as she backed away and Harry waved to her as she backed herself and Eleonora out of the room. He giggled and rolled himself onto Nasta and settled himself on his lap, yawning once again before giving Nasta a little kick with his heel to get him moving.

“I’m sure you think I’m a horse.” He said as he eased himself to his feet and settled Harry and Braiden more securely in his arms.

“No, you’re my loving, amazing mate who doesn’t want to see me struggling up all of those stairs whilst carrying your five children…oh, no Braiden makes six. Do you want to watch me fight all of those stairs with six babies? What if I fell?”

“You coercing little fiend.” Nasta teased, rubbing their noses together as they said goodnight and climbed the stairs to the bedroom, the others following after saying their own goodnights.

Nasta settled him down and nuzzled his face as he stripped Harry and redressed him in warm pyjama bottoms and one of Max’s shirts. Blaise got Braiden ready for bed and settled him in his cot, which had once belonged to Max and his siblings, only with a new mattress and linens.

Harry yawned and fell asleep quickly, feeling loved, cherished and cared for as the soft voices of his mates murmured around him as they got ready for bed themselves.

Chapter End Notes

A/N: I love this chapter. I just absolutely love it and I hope you do too.

The votes results are:-

Blaise – 36
Max – 70
Nasta – 80

More girls than boys in the clutch – 20
More boys than girls in the clutch – 18

Only three people have the right number of babies per Father and only one person has the right genders, no one has guessed correctly both the genders and Fathers! You have one more chapter to join in this fun vote and then it’ll all be over!

Don’t forget to read the side story, The Rise of the Drackens: The Scaled Bits!

Chapter Fifty-Three – Complications

It was a week later when things came to a head. Amelle was still staying at Myron’s home with Caesar and their daughter and Harry was holding back his temper, and his tears, by the skin of his teeth. He wanted to hurt her so badly that he was often walking around with his claws out, which made taking care of Braiden difficult and the amount of times he had shallowly stabbed himself because he forgot they were out was ridiculous.

He was also carting around two, two litre water bottles of blood from his mates as he had taken to drinking so much from them that they started feeling dizzy and nauseous if he took it all in one go. He had one bottle which he gulped from throughout the day and a second, back up bottle just in case.

The highlight of the week had been when Braiden had learnt a new word. Oh ah. Almost certainly learnt from Eleonora, who still only said ‘ooh’ despite Amelle almost demanding her to say ‘Mommy’.

Braiden particularly enjoyed bashing his wooden animals about this week before shoving them back into his mouth.

Harry was currently lying on his back on the rug in front of the fireplace, Myron was sat by his head in an armchair, in fact, Harry’s head was pillowed on his sock covered feet and he giggled every time that Myron moved his toes.

Braiden was on his chest, sleeping soundly through the afternoon. Harry had only woken up fifteen minutes ago and he was now rubbing the back of his head against Myron’s feet. Myron chuckled from behind his paperwork and bent forward to ruffle his hair.

“Did you sleep alright?” He asked.
Harry hummed in agreement. “I could have done with an extra hour, but a baby is squashing a kidney.”

“Have you been taking your potions?”

“Yes, but there’s nothing they can do for organ squashing.” Harry said, accepting the arms that plucked him up from his prone position and sat him upright as he held Braiden still to stop him from waking up.

Harry now felt fit to burst and couldn’t see himself going another month of this, let alone another three months, but he took every day as it came, one day after the other and it seemed to be working. Harry’s stomach grumbled so loudly that Braiden made an unhappy noise and Myron chuckled.

“It’s almost lunch time.” Myron told him. “Max will be almost done with the meal after forcing his Mother from the kitchen.”

Harry chuckled and flapped about with his one arm until Myron took pity on him and got him on his feet, tucking away his paperwork and escorting him to the kitchen.

Harry sat himself on Draco, who made a soft ‘oof’ noise that Harry ignored. He knew he was heavy, he was now over ten stone and it all centred around his stomach, abdomen and hips area. Draco’s arms slid around him and nuzzled the back of his neck.

“You need a haircut.” He groused as he tugged on the over long clumps of hair, which were so long now it was curling.

“You can cut it if you like.” Harry said, uncaring about his hair, he didn’t really care what it looked like, it was just hair.

“You sure it won’t just grow back?” Blaise teased.

Harry chuckled. “As long as Draco doesn’t plan on shearing it to my scalp, leaving five inches of fringe in the front to hide my scar then it should be fine, but the hair has a life of its own.”
“Don’t we know that.” Nasta rumbled, ruffling it up and smirking as it didn’t lie back down flat but remained stuck up and ruffled.

So Harry found himself sat on a chair, a towel around his neck like a bib and Draco carefully cutting and styling his hair with a comb as Braiden was held securely by Blaise to keep his little fingers away from the scissors.

“You’re enjoying this too much.” Harry grumbled, watching another tuft go falling past his face from his head.

“You’re well overdue for a haircut.” Draco said distractedly as he combed another tuft up and trimmed it.

“Maybe you should become a barber.”

“My Father would die of an aneurism.” Draco snorted. “His perfect, pureblood, straight O student, son cutting hair for a living out of some small shop off of Diagon Alley.”

Harry chuckled at the image and caressed Draco’s belly as he moved to stand in front of him. His hands were slapped.

“Stop that. I’m trying to make your hair decent.”

“It’ll never be decent.” Harry complained as he pushed his hands under Draco’s shirt.

“You randy bugger.” Max teased as he stirred a saucepan of something on the cooker.

“You’re only saying that because it isn’t you.” Harry said cheekily and Max winked at him.

Caesar came in with Eleonora on his hip, her head sitting upright on her shoulders as she looked around through chocolate brown eyes, Caesar’s eyes and by extension, Richard’s.

“You actually wrestled her away?” Max asked happily as he held his arms out for his niece.
Caesar handed her over and Max kissed and nuzzled her, blowing a raspberry on her cheek making her giggle.

“How are you, Nora?” He asked her. “Uncle Max finally, finally, gets to hold you after five months.”

“Ooh!” Eleonora cooed and Max nodded as if she had actually spoken like he always did with Braiden, stirring his simmering saucepan as he did so.

“Yes honey, Uncle Max is cooking lunch, do you want some?” Max turned to Caesar. “She’s being weaned isn’t she?”

“Yeah, mainly vegetables, but she takes some fruits as well, she hates banana.”

“Harry, do you want to try Braiden on some pureed peas and green beans?”

“It can’t hurt.” Harry nodded. Draco bopped his head.

“Keep still; you’ll ruin your hair.” The blond admonished as he studied the thick, black tufts.

“Just shave his head and be done with it.” Caesar grinned, sitting at the table next to Nasta.

“Shave my head and I’ll shave off both of your eyebrows when you’re sleeping.”

“Tell me to stop breathing as well why don’t you.” Harry huffed as he took Braiden from Blaise and cuddled him tightly.

It was half one before lunch was ready, but Harry ignored his own lunch in favour of trying to get Braiden to eat the green paste from the tiny bowl that Max had given him, using the absolutely tiny, soft weaning spoon.

Eleonora was eating gutsily, Amelle, who had been in a forced sleep and had since woken up and taken control of her daughter, was gloating and praising Nora loudly as Harry tried to get Braiden to see the green paste as food.

Harry actually put a spoonful into his own mouth to encourage Braiden, but his son seemed to find it hilarious as he huffed his little giggles at him as the spoon disappeared into his mouth and came out empty.

“He doesn’t want to know.” He announced decisively, just knowing instinctively that Braiden wasn’t ready to come off of his milk just yet.

“Of course he doesn’t. He not as advanced as Eleonora.” Amelle said snidely as Nora gummed a spoonful of the green paste.

Harry picked up Braiden’s bowl of pureed peas and green beans and threw it at Amelle. The paste went all over her, but the little bowl caught her eye and she started bleeding, which turned Caesar feral and made Max rush to intercept his brother before he could launch himself at Harry.

Max dragged Caesar out the back door and Nasta came around the table, picked him up and carried him out of the room, Braiden joining them as Harry had snarled at Blaise, who had tried to take the baby from him.

“That was childish and foolish, Harry.” Nasta told him as he settled them in the front room, Harry sitting on his lap. “In front of Braiden as well, what if the bowl had bounced off of Amelle and hit Eleonora?”

Harry bit his lip. He had regretted doing it as soon as the bowl had left his fingers, but hearing that he could have hit little Nora was a blow to the gut.

“I can see you regret doing it, Harry, but did you need me to tell you why you have to regret it or do you regret it on your own?”

“I regretted it the moment the bowl left my hand; I just wanted her to stop talking. I can’t take her putting Braiden down so much; I can’t listen to it anymore. Braiden is not second best, he’s not stupid or more under developed than Eleonora, he’s just a different baby and he’s younger than her too. I love him how he is, why should he be put down by her because he’s not interested in pureed peas? Why should he be scorned just because he can’t hold his head up for more than five minutes yet? I’ve tried to ignore her and to not let it bother me but it does! I just wanted her to shut up.”
Nasta pulled his head into a light kiss to the lips and held his head against his shoulder.

“That’s alright, love. I know it’s hard, I want to rip her tongue out myself, we all do. All of us love Braiden so much and to hear the things that she’s saying about him makes my teeth grind together with the effort to stop myself from burying my claws in her forehead. Max and I have been crushing each other’s hands under the table to keep from attacking her and I’ve had to kick Draco’s shin twice.”

Harry chuckled and savoured that mental image, he felt better knowing that his mates were feeling the same as he was, that they all wanted to hurt her and make her stop talking. He steeled himself, if they could ignore her and behave, he could too, he was an adult, it’s time he started behaving like one.

Nasta carried him back into the kitchen and made him swap places with Max, so that Harry was at the farthest end of the table as far as he could get from Amelle. Harry was given his plate and he started eating, Braiden in the crook of his arm playing with his own hands.

Harry ate so much that he thought his stomach had grown five inches as he had sat at the table, he rubbed his belly with a moan and rested his head on Nasta’s shoulder.

“Do you feel better?” Nasta whispered to him, ignoring Amelle who was now showing everyone how amazing Eleonora was because she could grasp a moving object and Braiden couldn’t.

“Much.” Harry answered softly. “I needed that lunch.”

“Ah ma.” Braiden joined in, Harry kissed his forehead lovingly as Braiden practised his limited number of words.

Nasta chuckled. “He’s such a cutie.”

“Never thought I’d hear you say the ‘C’ word.” Harry teased, a bit too loudly because Aneirin stopped talking and turned around.

“Who said the ‘C’ word? Surely not you, Nasta.” He hissed in anger. “Not when your four month old child is practically on your lap. I raised you better than to use such foul language.”
“No Dad, the ‘C’ word is Harry’s forbidden word, he doesn’t like hearing how cute he is.”

“I am not CUTE!” Harry hissed dangerously.

“You are.” Richard told him with a sly smirk. Harry growled threateningly. “See? It’s so cute that you’re standing up to me, your hair all sticking up like it’s channelling your anger and your pretty eyes glaring and afire.”

“You’re going to talk yourself into your grave.” Myron warned as he patted Richard’s knee before standing up and digging out a warm chocolate pudding from the oven that Ashleigh had actually been able to make, though Max had pouted.

Harry was given the first, big slice of pudding that had been drizzled with a melted chocolate sauce; he didn’t even feel the craving to shove any honey on it as he took a huge spoonful and shoved it into his mouth. He moaned around the spoon and helped himself to another spoonful.

“I can see where Max got his cooking skills from.” He complimented as he licked the chocolate sauce from his spoon.

Ashleigh giggled and thanked him.

“You’re welcome here any time, Harry.” She said happily.

“Does that mean I’m not?” Max sobbed fakely. “I’m your son, why aren’t I invited any time I want to?”

“Because you steal my cooker every time you’re here!” Ashleigh answered teasingly.

Max laughed and dug into his own piece of pudding. Harry grinned as he noticed that Amelle was served the smallest piece. It was petty, he knew that, but it still made him feel better to know that Myron wasn’t too fond of her and when he kissed Eleonora, his only Granddaughter, as he walked around the table serving everyone, Amelle swiped at him with her claws and hissed.

“Amelle, don’t do that to my Father.” Caesar growled. “Nora is his granddaughter and he has every right to hold her and kiss her."

time.”

“Just what are you trying to say?!” Myron thundered, pulling himself up to his full, intimidating, impressive height of six foot ten inches. Even with a serving tray of pudding in one hand and a serving spoon in the other he looked so dangerous, exuding his feral, threatening pheromones, that Harry shrunk into Nasta’s side.

“Ignore her.” Harry spoke up in a soft voice as everything was silent and no one moved or breathed, the tension thick enough to walk on. “She wouldn’t know a decent person if they stood in front of her face. You can babysit Braiden while I slip away for a relaxing bath.”

Harry forced himself up and he made himself approach that dangerous looking man and he trustingly handed Braiden to Myron, who had put the serving spoon and pudding tray down on the table top likely thinking to free his hands of weapons so he wouldn’t be tempted to smack Amelle with them. Harry latched onto one of those huge shoulders and pulled himself up and Myron down and chastely pecked his lips before turning to his mates.

“Who wants to carry me up the stairs today? I really want that bath and I want it now.”

They all looked at each other and Harry scowled. “Would you rather I try to get up them myself?” He demanded and Blaise ate the last spoonful of pudding, swallowed, stood up and tugged him into his arms, Harry giggling happily at having manipulated them to do his will.

“Thank you, Blaise, you get a present now, you can join me in the bath!”

“That bathtub barely fits Max, how are you and Blaise going to fit?” Draco scoffed.

Harry sent him his nastiest glare that he could muster up and turned away from him and urged Blaise up the stairs.

“Ignore him, love. How about you get in the bath and I rub your back like I used to, we’ve barely had the time to do anything together lately and I miss you.”
Harry smiled beatifically and he kissed Blaise so passionately that his mate had to stop walking or risk walking into something or falling over.

They carried onto Max’s childhood bedroom, which was so cute to see with its posters of his Quiditch team, The Appleby Arrows, their pale blue robes adored with a single silver arrow and what amused them all the most was the playwizard magazine that was tucked behind his bedside cabinet. Draco had found it and had laughed uproariously and teased Max for days and still teased him now. Max had gone bright red and explained that it was from when he was a teenager and got aroused by any sight of skin, though he said that he had realised quite quickly that he was more interested in the male body, but he used the magazines to get used to the female form, because he had thought that he would end up mated to a female and that the most he could have hoped for was a second male dominant. Harry had grinned at Max and kissed him, indicating the other three and had said ‘Now you have four men to please, how do you feel?’ Max had replied with a soft, goofy smile ‘I feel like my wish came true and I couldn’t be happier.’

Harry smiled as he remembered that conversation and he had even skimmed through the magazine, though he had felt nauseous afterwards, boobs he could look at, faces he could see as beautiful, but it was the other parts that made him feel a bit…queasy. It did absolutely nothing for him.

Blaise run him a bath in Max’s en suite. As the oldest child, Max had the second biggest bedroom after his parents and had the only other bedroom with an en suite, which he still goaded his three sisters about thirty years on.

Harry felt himself sink into the warm water and as Blaise stripped off his shirt and knelt beside him and started rubbing his shoulders and neck he felt like the luckiest man on the planet.

“You’re so good to me.” Harry moaned appreciatively.

Blaise chuckled and kissed him soundly. “You deserve to be treated good and how I treated you that day…I’m sorry, Harry, so sorry. I’ll never be able to make it up to you but I swear, no matter how hard things get from now on, no matter if you have half a hundred babies at once, I’ll be right by your side.”

“If I had half a hundred babies at once you and the other three would be six feet under.” Harry said seriously.

Blaise chuckled and nuzzled his neck as his smooth hands rubbed the knots from his shoulders, moving slowly lower as the water cooled around him. Harry was drowsy when Blaise finished and he was quickly dunked under the water and Blaise washed his hair and body for him before tugging him out and rubbing him dry with a warm fluffy towel. Harry felt like a King as he was then dressed in Nasta’s favourite, softest pyjamas and carried back downstairs to settle in with the others, who were all in the living room, Myron with a sleeping Braiden down the right side of his chest, one huge hand that swallowed his entire back and bottom holding him in place.

Harry waddled to Max and hefted himself next to the big man and snuggled into his side, ignoring the coos it caused, he was too mellowed out to care and he sighed happily as Blaise sandwiched him from the other side, Max’s arm wrapping around the both of them.

“Did you enjoy your two and a half hour bath?” Ashleigh teased.

“Oh very much.” Harry purred.

Harry could tell from their looks, from Myron’s scowl, Aneirin’s eye roll, Sanex and Caesar’s grins and Ashleigh’s childish delight that they thought that he and Blaise had had sex together, when he really had just gone for an extra-long bath and had all of his muscles massaged into tranquillity by Blaise’s expert hands.

The soft conversations and murmurings around him, the weight of the filling meal he had eaten and the relaxing bath he had taken as well as Blaise’s massage had left Harry so peaceful and quiet that not even Amelle’s snide comments could permeate his sleepy bubble.

He let her make snide comments about him, Braiden, his mates, his pregnancy and his five new babies who weren’t even born yet. He just didn’t care, in many ways Amelle was just a foolish child and you didn’t get into a slanging match with a child, you ignored them and carried on, unless it was your own child, then some small punishment was in order, but Amelle wasn’t his child, she wasn’t even his mate, his friend or his sister. So he ignored her, she didn’t matter, though he did perk up a bit when Caesar let out a growl and marched her out of the room, her arm twisted high behind her back, he settled down once they were gone and the calm and the peace left behind soon had him falling asleep cuddled up to Max’s side, the warmth of two bodies pressing in on him, keeping the chill of the December snows away from him.

The next day Harry bundled Braiden up in his brand new snow suit, attached mittens to his little hands and a woollen bobble hat to his head, thick socks on his feet which were then tucked into the snow suit and he took him out into the snow.

He sat down and let Braiden pat at the snow, seeing how different it was to the grass and the carpet he was used to. It was so silent, the world muffled under a blanket of pure white, untouched snow as January came ever closer and Harry relaxed and enjoyed the time to himself as he let Braiden kick and squirm in the snow.

They didn’t stay outside for long, twenty minutes if that and there was a big mug of hot chocolate waiting for him and a warm bottle for Braiden and he took them both into the living room and sat cosy by the fire as he fed Braiden the warm milk and gulped his hot chocolate.

“Did you enjoy yourself outside?” Richard asked.
Harry nodded. “Just don’t tell the others when they get back or I’ll lose my head.”

Max had gone food shopping with his Mother as he enjoyed it so much, but Ashleigh had insisted that it was because he didn’t trust her with a shopping list instead. Nasta had been called in urgently as a Welsh Green bull went rampaging through the reserve in agony with a sliced up wing that he couldn’t fly with. Blaise had gone to visit Marianna and Harry had waved Draco off to his parents when Lucius had owled him saying that he would enjoy Draco’s company for an afternoon. Harry smiled every time he thought of how happy and excited Draco had been as he scrutinised every item of clothing as though it were his first date. Caesar had taken Eleonora to visit Alexander and Kimberly and likely his sisters as well and left Amelle knocked out on potions again. Harry was sure it wasn’t healthy for her, but he had to admit that things were more peaceful without her harping on in his ear.

Harry was left with Richard and Sanex as Myron and Aneirin had gone to visit a mutual business partner over some upcoming bill or something, he forgot, politics talk bored him to tears.

He yawned and lay down on the rug and left Braiden on his little belly, pushing himself up in a push-up position, he was getting stronger day by day.

“Ah hell.” Richard groused a half hour later as an owl floated through the window. He tore it open and read the curling parchment. “I have to leave you boys for an hour or two, problems with the damn Dursley case.”

“What problems?” Harry asked as he lifted his head up so fast that his neck cricked, his heart in his throat.

“What? No! Hell no. If anything this will damn them further. I’ll explain later but I need to be there as soon as possible, you’ll be alright looking after Harry won’t you, Nex? It won’t be for long. Myron and your Dad will be back soon, so will Max and Ashleigh and I won’t be any longer than two hours.”

“We’ll be fine! What harm can possibly happen in a few hours?” Sanex replied airily and Harry felt his stomach sink, those words did not bode well for them and he laid himself back on the rug and hoped his clenching gut wasn’t telling him that something would happen to Braiden.
It was only half an hour later that they found out exactly how bad things could get when Harry rolled himself to his knees and stretched lazily, thinking of scavenging for some more food.

The popping sound was so loud that it even made Sanex look up from where he was doing his paperwork.

“What was that?” He asked with a frown.

Harry quivered as he felt around his abdomen, feeling a looseness that wasn’t there previously. He was shaking and adrenaline was pouring into his bloodstream but he didn’t know why and then a smaller, quieter pop was followed by a ripping sensation that was so agonising that it threw his head back as he screamed.

“Shit, Harry. What is it? What do I do?”

“Call the Healer! Call my mates!” Harry hissed out through gritted teeth as Braiden cried beside him, frightened by Harry’s screaming. He tried to hold the next scream back and bit through his tongue, but it was no use and he screamed again.

His wings burst from his body and the change threw his balance and he face planted the carpet, leaving smears of blood from his mouth on the cream fabric.

His Dracken was fighting him, was fighting him viciously, urging him to take flight and get away from the danger. Sanex had his head in the floo, talking frantically to the person on the other end. Harry scooped Braiden up and urged his wings to work, but the pain was agonising and he could barely fly in a straight line. He was halfway up the stairs when he heard Sanex shouting for him. He made it to a bedroom, bouncing off the walls as he went, before Sanex caught up to him and Harry growled and hissed and tried to tear out the throat of the approaching threat, his baby Dracken tucked under his arm.

He tucked himself into the corner of the room and placed his baby Dracken on the floor behind his body, the pain almost crippling him, but he had to stand and fight the human off, he needed to keep his baby Dracken safe and secure the area before his five new babies could come into the world.

He growled threateningly and smelt weakness as the human backed away from him; he swiped and almost sunk his claws into him. The human stumbled back quickly and Harry advanced, clutching his stomach which was a burning, stabbing pain that almost made him blind, but he couldn’t become vulnerable with a threat in the same room as him.
Harry backed the human into a corner and hissed deeply, a rumble in his belly as his claws coated themselves in venom. He saw the human swallow and his eyes becoming wider, the whites showing more pronounced. He could smell the fear on him and it smelt like food and it had been so long since he had had fresh meat and warm blood.

“Please, Harry. It’s Sanex. Remember who I am? Sanex, Nasta’s brother. I just want to help you!”

Harry let out a continuous growl and snapped fangs at the human as a particularly vicious pain in his abdomen almost bent him double.

“Alright, alright, you win. I’m leaving.”

The human wasn’t leaving, Harry decided as he closed in, inching closer to the human backing him further into the corner, his hands up and out as if to fend him off.

A clattering downstairs had Harry’s head snapping to the open door. More threats could come in at any moment and he would be outnumbered and surrounded. Him and his baby Dracken and his five unborns.

Harry was momentarily startled as a flash of green sparks seared his eyes and he cried out as he flung his face away from the sparks. He heard the human rushing past him and Harry lashed out with claws, still shielding his eyes and managed to swipe clothing, which ripped, but he didn’t catch any skin.

Harry made sure the room he was in was clear before he shut, locked and bared the door, putting up heavy wards to keep away all intruders and threats. He heard hard, fast foot falls coming towards him and he backed away into the corner of the room with his baby Dracken. The door shook under the weight that hit it, but the wards held as the hammering on the door continued.

“Harry? It’s Myron. Open the door, you need immediate help!”

Harry hissed lowly and crawled onto the bed, bringing his baby Dracken with him. He bunched up the soft duvet and made a soft cradle to keep his precious baby Dracken safe and warm as he started stripping himself of the restricting clothing, the pain he felt making him retch as his vision blurred for a moment.

He hated it here; he wanted a proper nest with a vantage point so he could better protect himself and his babies, but there was no time as a child squirmed under his skin, fighting to be released.

He tried to prepare as much as he could, making himself comfortable on a bed that smelt safe and comforting, he had two big bottles of blood within reach and his baby Dracken was calming in his crude cradle.
The most vicious pain yet ripped through him and he screamed, mixing it with an unconscious distress call. He felt four comforting rumbles answer; they were all a long way away, his protection was not near him. He was alone.

“Harry! You need a Healer, you can’t birth this soon, the babies aren’t viable for another three weeks!”

Harry hissed as his knees and wrists trembled. Something wasn’t right; this didn’t seem to be the same as his last labour. It was different and he couldn’t place why.

He stroked his engorged belly with venom coated claws and as soon as he pressed in, his body gushed outwards with fluid. He quickly split his stomach open wide and a baby fell out as soon as the split was big enough, pushed out by siblings fighting for space. His sac had ripped on its own.

He ignored everything else as he put the baby more securely on the bed, before reaching inside, ripping the split in his sac wider and pulling out a second baby as soon as he found a neck to wrap his fingers around. The third baby was attached to the second, grasping on tightly to the second baby’s thumb and they came out one after the other easily. The fourth baby was hard to find as all he could feel was arms, legs and cords, no necks.

He shoved down on the top of his bump and a baby moved and he grasped a neck and pulled the baby out quickly. The final baby was easy to find and cupping the baby’s neck, Harry eased it out of himself before realising that he had nothing to clamp the cords with. Panicked and losing blood, he looked around desperately. He found two shoe laces, a camera cord and he shredded the sheets for little strips of material. He tied them all around the babies’ umbilical cords tightly, before severing them. He ripped out all the placentas in his sac with an inhuman screech of agony before reaching over and draining a bottle of blood. It was cold and it was thick and sluggish going down his throat, but it did its job. He swallowed the second bottle as an extra safety measure as there was still a thick opening where he had cut himself that was oozing blood, but with the second bottle, it closed fully, leaving a livid red scar.

Two of his babies were wailing incessantly, a third was squalling, red faced and blood coated. Two babies were not moving, they were not crying, they were not breathing.

Panicked Harry picked them up and cradled them. They were tiny. So, so tiny that he was afraid to touch them, but he forced himself to lay back with the babies on his chest, snatching his discarded shirt and rubbing them frantically with it, trying to stimulate breathing. One dribbled fluid from a tiny puckered mouth and started crying wetly, the other did nothing, did not respond.

His Dracken screamed in distress and he could feel his throat ripping at the ferocity of the cry, ignoring the background noise going on around him as he rubbed harder, limp limbs floppy and little extremities turning pale blue. He screamed again and again, willing his baby to live, he could feel the tears, could feel the adrenaline and distress his body was in. He was so tired, he ached and he was sore, but he shoved it out of his mind as he hefted the absolutely tiny baby higher up his chest, resting that floppy head on his shoulder and he jogged the baby, still rubbing vigorously. His hand caught something that made his heart freeze; he looked down at his baby’s back and saw all the blood, the veins and the mucus, it was raw. It looked like a part of his baby’s back had been turned inside out and he vomited over the side of the bed, tears streaming from his eyes as he screamed his distress and his wretched misery long and loud for all to hear.
Draco was happily enjoying his life at the moment. He was with his Father in his study at his ancestral home; they were sitting side by side on the soft, calf’s leather settee, sipping wine and talking.

His first indication that something was wrong was the tight feeling in his chest. He brushed it aside and took another swallow of wine. Then the pain increased and he flashed, for just a moment on the smell of chestnuts and knew that something was wrong with Harry.

He stood up and put his wineglass down.

“Is something the matter, Draco? I thought you were enjoying our get together.”

“I was. I am, but I think something’s wrong with Harry, I can smell him, I feel all tight and there is a sense of urgency to get to him. I’m sorry but I need to check on him.”

Lucius nodded understandingly and he followed his son to the receiving room and followed him through the floo.

Myron Maddison’s house was in chaos and turmoil as Aneirin Delericey comforted his shaking son Sanex, Richard and Ashleigh Maddison-Seppen were anxious and tense as they held one another and a man he did not know, in Healer’s lime green robes stood still and silent.

“What has happened?” Draco demanded just as a scream of agony came from upstairs and Draco was gone in the blink of an eye.

“Harry went into labour.”

“He’s only four months pregnant!” Lucius said shocked, his grey eyes found the smears of blood on the cream carpet almost automatically.

“It’s unlikely that all of the babies will survive at four months gestation.” Aneirin said softly. “The biggest and strongest will likely survive, but the others aren’t viable.”

The most agonising scream that Lucius had ever heard blasted through the house and Ashleigh winced and trembled, her blue, blue eyes glistening with tears.

“What can we do?” Lucius asked.

“Nothing. Harry has warded the room he is in tighter than a Gringotts vault. Myron has been trying to get in for the past half hour and Nasta and Max are up there trying to do the same. They can’t get in and Harry is in no state of mind to hear, understand or even listen to them. He’ll be feral by now, he tried to kill Sanex because he tried to help and he almost succeeded, I dread to think what would have happened if Harry had even grazed Sanex with a claw. Humans are so much more susceptible to Dracken venom than other Drackens or other creatures are.”

Sanex shuddered in his Father’s hold, who shushed him and cuddled him tighter, even as Sanex squirmed and reminded his Father that he was almost a forty year old man.

Lucius headed up the stairs and was almost bowled over halfway up them by the Zabini boy as he darted past as quick as a viper.

He reached the top landing safely and he witnessed the pandemonium that was going on outside a bedroom door. The Zabini boy was being updated and it seemed he brought a new question to light. Did Potter…Harry have the baby, Braiden in the room with him?

The sounds were horrendous, the screaming was heart rendering, the scent of blood was so thick he could smell it with his human nose, he wondered what it was like for the Drackens beside him.

It took a further ten minutes of ramshackle chaos before they heard the loudest, most pain filled scream yet and Lucius winched in sympathy for the boy on the opposite side of the wall. Then the moment that had been waiting for, the wailing of a newborn baby and everyone on the top landing hushed. At least one baby was alive. A second baby joined its lungs to the first and then a third and Lucius actually wondered if the boy had beaten the odds and birthed a full set of five living babies at four months gestation. They waited with bated breath, all of them, for the fourth and fifth cry, but they never came. It took two breathless minutes before a fourth fainter cry started and the boys breathed in relief, before realising that a fifth cry couldn’t be heard.

Harry screamed and the sound was so mournful and distressed that Lucius just knew that one baby was dead. Harry did not stop screaming in distress and misery. Draco shook where he stood and Maximilius slung an arm over his shoulder, ducting his own head, his blue, blue eyes, just a shade darker than his Mother’s, welled with tears. They had lost a child. Blaise wormed his way into the middle of Draco and Max and Nasta came from the other side and they all held one another, but it was clear on their faces and the way they all stood facing the door, that the person they really wanted to comfort at this moment was Harry, who was locked and warded behind a door that they couldn’t get past. He knew it was a waiting game now, he had been reading a lot of Dracken books lately, since he had found out that his son was a Dracken last June and he knew that no one was permitted to enter the submissive Dracken’s nest until the submissive gave them permission. It was now a gruelling wait until the boy inside, who was likely cradling his stillborn child, to feel the urge to let them in.
Harry did not give up rubbing, jogging and nuzzling the baby in his arms, ignoring the other four crying as he focused all his attention on the baby in his arms. It was hard to ignore the crying of the newborns as his Dracken tried to turn his attention away from the dead baby to focus on the four living ones. He wouldn’t. He wouldn’t give up on his baby, his four others would be alright, he couldn’t feed them anyway, he nothing to give them.

A tiny, weak cough and liquid on his shoulder and then the baby in his arms was crying faintly, so faintly and Harry screamed out for his mates, cried for them to come to him and the pounding on the door became more insistent. But he didn’t want to let them in just yet. It was confusing, he wanted them, he wanted the comfort, he wanted to share in his joy and elation at getting his fifth baby to start breathing, to start living, but he didn’t want them near his children yet, he needed to clean them up and sort them out first.

Harry didn’t move as screaming words came from behind the door, useless noise that was frightening his babies. He didn’t think he could move as he tried to soothe all five wailing babies. He had no bottles, no milk, no provisions, not even a nappy or a bodysuit. He was so frightfully unprepared. He wasn’t supposed to give birth for another three months.

Breathing deeply and forcing away his fatigue. Harry gathered his baby Dracken to him, wrapped in the cupped, bowled duvet and he carried him on trembling legs to the corner of the room. He made the cradle bigger, using the double duvet and hoping the thick carpet padded his babies enough and kept them warm enough. He cleaned off each baby as much as he could and wrapped them in the thick, fleecy shirts he found in the wardrobe before tucking them in with his baby Dracken.

He curled around them, made sure they were all alright, before giving in to his exhaustion and settling down to take a short nap, the baby with the inside out back cradled in his arms so he could feel the soft, quiet breaths on his bare chest, reassuring him that the baby was still breathing, still living.

He’d have to leave his birthing area, because he was loath to call this farce a nest, sooner than he’d like because he was so unprepared and his babies would be wanting their first feed soon. He promised himself that he’d sleep for just an hour or two before he pulled down the wards and let his mates in and he fell asleep quickly and deeply despite the hammering on the door to his birth area.

Chapter Fifty-Four - Endurance

Harry woke up quivering and his arms were jerky when he tried to move them, his fingers curled loosely into his palms and he couldn’t seem to straighten them as he shook violently. He was so cold. He felt nauseous and dizzy.

He swallowed; his throat was so dry it felt like he was trying to swallow a bludger. He sat himself up and a spasm of pain ripped right through his abdomen. He choked back a scream as everything was quiet and he didn’t want to disturb any of his children.

His eyes snapped wide when he remembered that he had a critically injured baby and he searched the pile of sleeping, jumper wrapped babies for the smallest one, the baby that was half the size of the other babies that he had birthed, lying closest to him. He pulled the baby to his nose, to his mouth and he inhaled deeply, smiling lightly as he felt the light puffs of air against his neck.

The baby smelt bitter and earthy. It flashed an image in his mind of a familiar person he couldn’t name, of a soft mouth, pale skin and bright, curious eyes.

He checked on the other babies, only one out of the five he had birthed was a Dracken. The others all smelt bitter, like the smell of a heavy storm, but his curious child was different again, earthy and bitter together. They smelt like a place he barely remembered, a huge stone castle milling with children that all held that strange bitter smell of an electrical storm.

He stroked the baby’s thin, soft, pale hair as he checked on the baby’s back after drawing up the courage, there was a part on the baby’s back that was just completely raw and there was no skin. Harry could see the veins clearly and it looked so painful and wrong and raw. It throbbed as well, like it had its own heartbeat or the flesh that actually was there was so thin that he could clearly see the baby's heartbeat through it. It was a sick and horrifying sight that made tears burn in his eyes. His youngest child.

He gave a tentative lick to the raw patch on his child's back and a little face screwed up and started crying so faintly that Harry was shocked, he was used to a healthy cry, not this weak, soft, almost whimper of a cry that he could only just hear with the baby right next to his ear. It was obviously painful for his little baby. He needed to get help. He needed help for his youngest baby.

He ripped the wards around the room down and called out hesitantly, he wasn't quite ready for anyone else to come in here, but he needed the help and he had enough of himself currently that he could recognise the need and understand it. Several rumbles answered and he got flashes of images of faces and hints of names. He knew four were more important than the other Drackens. He cooed softly in invitation and the door eased open.

The bed was a red ruin, coated, almost painted, in dried blood, there was so much it was still wet in odd places and the placentas he had ripped out were still on the bedspread, the umbilical cords lying about like sleeping snakes. It was to the bed that they first looked and then Harry witnessed their panic as they couldn't see him. He cooed softly, to bring their attention to the dark, cosy corner he was secluded in as more of his mind came back to him with the urgency of the situation.

They approached him slowly, cautiously and he recognised them, his mates. Nasta, Max, Draco and Blaise. They eased down around him, but he growled when Max went for a baby, swiping at his hand lazily, not trying to catch him, but warning him not to touch.

“How are you feeling, Harry?” Nasta asked as he feasted on the babies with his eyes, Harry holding his youngest in his arms still. He couldn’t put the baby down.

“Sore, tired, angry, upset, a bit confused as well.” He answered thickly through a screamed raw throat.

“We need to get you to St Mungo’s, love. You and the babies. Can we move you?” Max asked carefully.

Harry lowered his head to his babies and inhaled from each of them deeply, ingraining their scent deeply into his memory. He nodded only after he had finished and was absolutely sure that he had all of their scents ingrained into him.

“First tell us, who is who.” Draco tried to inject some lightness into the situation and it worked because Harry smiled.

“That one is the Firstborn. Max’s baby.”
Max grinned so widely as Harry allowed him to remove the little baby from the little nest, wrapped up in a jumper.

“The second and third babies came out together, the third baby holding the second baby’s thumb.”

Blaise made a soft cooing noise to them, letting them hear his voice.

“They’re both Nasta’s.”

The pride in Nasta’s dark eyes swelled Harry’s heart.

“The fourth baby born is Max’s. The baby...he wouldn’t breathe when I cut the cord. I had to fight to get him to breathe.” Harry sobbed.

Max scooped this baby up too and nuzzled the soft spot on the front of his head.

“Harry, one baby didn’t...we never heard a fifth cry.” Draco bumbled out, his voice thick with tension.

Harry looked down to the baby he was cradling, who was laying so still and so quiet in his arms.

“Is...is that the baby?” Blaise asked, licking his lips nervously as he cradled Braiden tightly.

“Nasta’s baby.” Harry said softly.

Nasta closed his eyes and breathed out a choppy, shuddering breath.

“Boy or girl?” He forced himself to ask painfully.

“Baby boy. I got him to breathe. He cries so faintly.”
They all looked to him, then to the baby and back to him, though all at different times. Draco’s eyes never left the baby.

“He…he’s alive?” Nasta croaked.

“For now, but we need to get to a hospital. There’s something wrong with him, half the skin on his back is missing and it’s really painful for him. I can see his veins and it’s covered with blood and mucus, he needs a Healer.”

Nasta scooped him up immediately and Draco picked up Nasta’s two other babies, holding them close in their jumper beds.

Harry held the baby in his arms tighter and when they reached the living room, they met Healer Almus, who went to take the baby from his arms. Harry snarled and he backed away.

Ashleigh had been busy making up five bottles and Harry grumbled as two babies were handed to people who weren’t his mates, but they smelt familial, so he allowed it as the humans fed his first and second born. Though he kept an eye on the Drackens around as the two girls, Talia and Alayla if his memory was right, fed his newborn babies.

“Harry, please give me the baby, it’ll only hurt you worse the longer you hold on.” The Healer coaxed.

“We need another bottle.” Nasta spoke, his voice light with relief. “Harry got the fifth baby breathing, but it was so faint we couldn’t hear it through the door, all five of them survived.”

Ashleigh let out a half sob as she rushed to get another bottle.

“You got all five of them breathing?” Myron whispered as if he couldn’t bear to speak louder and have his dream shattered.

Harry nodded. “The last two born, the fourth and fifth, both boys. They weren’t breathing when I cut the cords. I don’t know why, but something told me to rub them, so I got my shirt and started rubbing their chests. The fourth baby started breathing after fluid came out of his throat; the fifth took more vigorous rubbing and jogging to get him to take that first breath. My Dracken kept telling me that he was dead, that we should leave him and focus on the others, but there was nothing I could do for the others, so I kept with the fifth and he started breathing.”
“The baby boys are always more fragile than the baby girls. It’s such a stereotype that girls are weaker, but it’s the baby boys that are more likely to die in their first year, not the girls.” Ashleigh said as she handed him a bottle, which had been cooled to the perfect temperature.

Harry realised quickly that the bottle teat was too big and he wailed in distress.

“The teat is too big; it won’t go in his mouth.”

“Let’s get you to the hospital.” Healer Almus suggested. “You need to get these babies checked out, they were born early, even for a Dracken and we want to make sure that they are all alright and that you are alright.”

Harry nodded and he controlled the panic, with the help of Nasta, as he went through the floo and lost sight of four of his new babies.

Instead of landing in the reception area of the hospital, they were in an office and Healer Almus called an orderly, she came strolling in, in her pale yellow robes before stopping dead. She just stared at him as if feasting on his body and it was only then that Harry realised that he was naked, holding a jumper wrapped newborn in the arms of a gorgeous man. He went pink.

“I forgot to get dressed!” He whispered horrified to his mates.

They looked to him, naked in Nasta’s arms, realising themselves that Harry wasn’t wearing anything and Nasta moved his arms to cover him up more securely, his large arms acting as shields against curious gazes.

“I would be asking you to get undressed anyway, Harry.” Healer Almus told him professionally. “I want to do a full examination.”

They were led down a corridor, orderlies and patients’ alike stopping to stare at them and Harry closed his eyes against Nasta’s shoulder so he couldn’t see their gawping faces. The Healer opened a door to a large room. In fact Harry was sure that this was supposed to be a full ward with five beds, not just the one bed.

“I had this ward cleared out and decked just for your impending birth.” Healer Almus stated. “One of the waiting rooms downstairs has been turned into a ward temporarily. We only have two rooms suitable for pregnant males and the equipment for the inevitable high multiple children, for the first time in history, both rooms are being used, which leaves you with no room, so I had this one prepared especially for you, sometimes being a Senior Healer and the Head of the Natal Ward has its uses.”

Harry was settled in the bed, which was almost double size and his legs and privates were covered possessively by Nasta as the orderly fluttered about, staring unashamedly at him.

“Holly, if you could please go and fetch Healer Cole and two additional on duty orderlies?” Healer Almus requested as he started checking Harry over.

“Babies first!” Harry demanded, cringing away as much as he could.

Healer Almus raised an eyebrow. “Who is the Healer here? I will check you first because of the trauma and shock of such a sudden birth could still kill you.”

Harry pouted and growled all through the inspection, of having his vitals checked, his blood pressure checked and various spells cast as another Healer in a lime green overcoat came in and started assisting Healer Almus and two new orderlies in their pale yellow overcoats came in wheeling little glass bassinets.

Harry glared at them as they took his children, checked their cords, replaced his makeshift clamps with real cord clamps, checked their eyes, ears, throats, hands, feet, grip, reflexes and then weighed them.

“Healer, the biggest baby is two pounds and ten ounces.” One of the more demure orderlies informed Healer Almus.

“The Firstborn is two pounds and ten ounces, the second born is two pounds three ounces, the third born is two pounds one ounce, the fourth born is two pounds exactly and the fifth is one pound and two ounces.” Harry snarled.

The orderlies blinked at him and checked the weight charts.

“How did you know?” One asked. “We haven’t even weighed the smallest baby yet.”
“You will not touch him.” Harry said decisively.

“The youngest needs help.” Nasta told the two Healers.

Harry nodded and sat up with help from Max. He undid the jumper that was wrapped around his smallest and youngest and pulled him up; showing the hideous, raw section of his back and his mates recoiled in shock, the three orderlies gasped and Healer Almus took a step back, the other Healer, Healer Cole, who had to have been in his early eighties at least, stepped forward and inspected the baby’s back closely.

“I’ve seen this several times before.” He said and he smiled at Harry. “You have nothing to worry about, Mister Potter, am I right in thinking that one of your lovers has Faerie blood?”

“Yes.” Nasta answered defensively.

“How early were these babies? Two months or more?”

“Three months.” Harry said softly.

“Nothing to worry about? Are you looking at his back?!” Draco demanded, his eyes wide as he saw the baby’s back for the first time.

“That is not his back.” The Healer told them. “Those are his wings attached to his back. If a Faerie is born before five months gestation their wings will not be properly formed and the wings will be uncovered and unprotected, you need to be extremely cautious with them as they are very easily damaged and painful whilst uncovered.”

“They don’t look like wings.” Harry said tearfully as he checked.

“They are spread out and plastered to his back, he doesn’t have the mobility to move them yet, so they look like a part of his back and they will continue to look like part of his back until he’s about a year old. They are so thin at the moment, but the cartilage spines that make up the structure of his wings will start to thicken and the skin covering them will toughen up over time.”

“Is he in much pain?” Harry asked.

“No more than a bit of discomfort, I assure you, all of the nerve endings are covered and protected. They will feel much like a fresh graze until the skin protecting the wings forms, which is why they are leaking some plasma, you may see some blood spots, but they won’t bleed properly.”

“When will the skin form?” Nasta asked, a large hand cupping the baby’s head, under Harry’s hand.

“It will take a week or two.” Healer Cole told them and Harry sniffled, the adrenaline in his blood seeping away now that he knew his youngest son wasn’t hurt in any way.

“Do any of them have any risks of dying?” Max asked. “This one wasn’t breathing right away either.”

Healer Almus checked the baby over before shaking his head.

“He likely had a bit of fluid in his throat and lungs.”

“He coughed up fluid and started crying wetly after I got him breathing by rubbing him.”

“It’s a very good thing that you started rubbing them both when you did, Harry.” Healer Almus told him.

Harry nodded and groaned as he tried to shift himself and a sear of pain went through his abdomen. He was surrounded by worried mates and he shoved them all aside as the Healer played about with his stomach.

“You have torn your stomach muscles, you cut too far across.”

“I didn’t cut too far across, I barely cut at all, the first baby forced his way out and I tore a bit, I just cleaned up the cut a bit before grabbing the second baby.”
“Nonetheless you have damaged the stomach muscles; you won’t be getting up for a while.”

“Watch me.” Harry answered.

“If the Healer says you stay in bed, you stay in bed.” Nasta told him, his tone and his gaze brooking no argument.

“I recommend that he stays in bed for a few days to a week.” Healer Almus told them.

Harry groaned.

“Ma ma!” Braiden cooed from Blaise’s arms.

Harry smiled and Blaise handed the four month old over and Harry cuddled him in the opposite arm to his little Faerie child.

“Have you thought of names?” One orderly asked breathily, like she couldn’t quite keep her mouth shut.

“No.” Harry replied immediately, not even looking at her.

“Well I think you and the children are alright to stay overnight, Mister Potter, you have some severe blood loss, so a blood replenisher is in order and a pain killer will be administered to you.” Healer Cole said, his narrowed eyes on the orderly who had spoken, he did not look impressed. “As long as you can stay on bed rest when you go home tomorrow that is or you’ll be here all week, but in the future if any of these five look like they are having any problems, even something small, call us immediately. This is my home floo address, don’t lose it and do not hesitate to call.”

Harry was handed a small white card and he smiled gratefully. He watched as his children were bedded down around him, all with clean nappies on and wrapped in cellular blankets well within reach if he stayed sat in the bed, he did not let go of his Faerie child or Braiden throughout the night, sleeping dead straight on his back, he couldn’t turn over even if he had wanted to, as the hours passed, his abdomen became a white hot agony and he needed help just to move an inch, let alone be able to turn over.
It wasn’t usually allowed, but all of his mates remained with him, they couldn’t have gotten them out of the room even if they had cared to try. Nasta did not sleep that night; he remained awake, alert and vigilant, facing the door as he sat in front of Harry’s bed and the babies in the incubators. He could not, would not relax his guard in such an unfamiliar place and Harry was grateful, he knew he wouldn’t have been able to relax his guard and fall asleep if all of his mates had been sleeping and at the moment he really needed the rest.

The next day was horrendous as Harry relieved Nasta of his guard and allowed his exhausted mate to sleep for an hour or two.

An orderly in pale yellow robes brought him six bottles every two hours, even though he had tried to tell her that Braiden only took a feed every four hours. One baby, the oldest one, was very, very gutsy with the milk and did not like that it run out so quickly. Harry gave the baby a half ounce more milk from the spare bottle and the baby seemed happier for it.

The hardest to feed was his little Faerie baby, who had to have a special bottle, one that was small enough to fit his tiny mouth. He was on such a small amount of milk that Harry worried for him, especially as half of the time the baby didn’t even finish the bottle. But he was assured that when the others would move onto four hourly feeds, his baby would remain on two hourly feeds, Healer Almus had told him that as long as he ate little and often, he would be fine.

The orderly who was looking after him and his babies quietly slipped into the room and Nasta grumbled in his sleep, which was echoed by the three others. She smiled thinly as she handed him a breakfast tray, there were five plates, all full of food and the six customary bottles. She left quickly and Harry wondered why when usually she cooed over the babies, never touching them of course, but she did look in on them as she watched to see if Harry fed them properly, as if he was some cack-handed child who didn’t know how to feed and change a baby.

Harry fed his gutsy baby first, then it was an almost automated process of feeding and burping each baby, Harry had gotten quite good at picking up a sleeping baby, waking them up gently before shoving the bottle teat into their mouths before they could cry. It didn’t always work as one baby would usually wake up as Harry was feeding another baby and wake up one or all of his mates. But he was in luck with this feed and as he fed his sleepy Braiden and burped him, he checked all of their nappies before he started on his breakfast. He was just finishing off his plate and his glass of pumpkin juice when he spied a newspaper under one of the plates.

Everything was quiet, his mates were all still asleep, the babies were all asleep except for Braiden, who was quiet and sucking on his own hand, cooing and babbling at it every so often, making Harry’s heart melt.

He decided he could probably get away with reading just the headlines before a baby wetted a nappy or a mate woke up.

It only took the headlines for him to screech in absolute rage. A picture of himself, naked in Nasta’s arms, his eyes closed and head against Nasta’s shoulder, a tiny baby in his arms with the caption: ‘Saviour in hospital after five foetus pregnancy forces early labour at four months.’

Nasta was by his side in an instant and it didn’t take long before he realised the reason for his screech and he snatched the paper from Harry and looked at it himself and started reading it out loud.

“It was reported last night that Saviour, Harry Potter, seventeen, was rushed to hospital after the pressure of a five foetus pregnancy was too much for his slight frame to handle. The five babies, of unknown gender, unknown paternity and unknown condition, were born five months early, at only four months gestation. It is unknown if any survived such an early birth.” Nasta read aloud, his voice getting quieter and quieter, getting so angry he was almost hissing. “Harry, pictured with his strange collection of lovers which include schoolmates Draco Malfoy, seventeen and Blaise Zabini, eighteen, and sons of the illustrious businessmen, Myron Maddison and Aneirin Delericey, Maximilius, thirty-two and Nasta, thirty-seven, also pictured, were on the scene as lover Harry was seen to by two senior Healers and at least three orderlies at Saint Mungos hospital late yesterday evening as it became almost common knowledge that one of the babies, who weighed just one pound, was born with a birth defect which left the miniscule eleven inch baby with no skin. It is thought that the baby will not survive, if the poor thing was even alive to begin with.”

“Who gave this to you?” Nasta demanded as he threw the paper to Draco in disgust.

“It was under the plate the orderly brought me.” Harry said sobbing, clutching his little Faerie baby, assuring himself that he was still alive.

“Those little fuckers are going to pay!” Draco snarled as the paper balled up under the onslaught of his hands. Max tugged it out carelessly and wrapped an arm around Draco’s neck, hand dangling down to his belly.

“Who was in the corridor yesterday? How many people? One of them had to have taken that photo! I’m naked!” Harry cried out.

Nasta snarled and slipped a hand under the blankets to pet his private parts possessively.

“They will not get away with it!” He growled. He was feral or as close to it that it didn’t matter.

Nasta let out a shuddering breath and sat down heavily on the bed, touching the pale hair on the head of the Faerie baby.
Healer Almus came through the door and he looked angry too. He shook his head brusquely.

“One of my own orderlies let slip about the youngest baby, she was instantly dismissed. We take patient confidentiality very seriously here and though the charms on her contract forbade her from saying the true nature of the baby, she could hint enough that they got that the baby had missing skin.”

“Can we go home now?” Harry asked softly. “All of us survived the night, the babies are eating well, even Faerie baby.”

Healer Almus nodded. “Yes, I just want to do a final check.”

“Go ahead.” Harry said as he shifted around on the bed, watching as all of his babies were checked over and examined.

“This one is going very well.” The Healer said as he checked one baby.

“The firstborn.” Harry smiled. “I had to give him a half ounce more milk than the others because he was still looking for more when he had finished.”

“That’s a very good sign for him. Right, all of them are fine, but please don’t hesitate to call us if anything is worrying you, I’ll be coming to see you all tomorrow, just as a precautionary check, we’ll also want to see them again in a week, to keep up with their progress, but I see no reason to keep you all here, they’re all very strong, even Faerie baby.”

Harry grinned as the Healer took up his nickname for the fifth baby with a wry humour. He was scooped up once again and he held tightly onto Braiden and Faerie baby as Nasta carried them home.

There were even more people in the corridor today as it was common knowledge in the hospital that they were going home this morning as they were only being kept overnight. Healer Almus and Healer Cole had tried to clear them out, but they were still loitering and finding something to keep them busy, but not so busy that they couldn’t gawp. The babies were all covered over from head to foot as Harry had insisted, using the cellular blankets that the hospital had provided them, two in blinding white and three in crisp lemon, Braiden was happy wrapped up in pale blue, just one little sock covered foot peeking out.

They went to the Healer’s office and flooed back home, Harry growling steadily under his breath.

They were met in Myron’s living room by the entire family, including Remus and Tonks and the Weasleys. It was lucky the room was so big.

“I saw the article.” Myron greeted them.

“Myron! Not as soon as they come into the house!” Ashleigh chastised as she practically devoured the babies with her eyes.

Harry closed his eyes as a vicious urge to claw out her eyes almost turned him feral. He didn’t want her to look at or touch his babies. He wanted to claw her eyes out so that she would stop looking at his babies like that. He swallowed and instead smiled happily.

“It’s alright, Mum. We saw it too. A very helpful orderly just happened to give Harry that particular newspaper this morning with his breakfast.” Max sighed.

“I will rip that reporter to pieces!” Alexander threatened.

“I’ll help, Granddad!” Julinda offered with a grin that was more in place on a well fed lion.

Alexander hugged her tightly and kissed her forehead, his eyes gleaming with an easy pride that was directed at every one of his children and every grandchild.

Remus came and hugged him gently, Harry heard him subtly sniffing his hair and he grinned into Remus’s shirt that just smelt of Remus, reminding Harry of his third year. He wondered what his mates would do if they found out that he had chased after a ‘mass-murderer’ had encountered a werewolf not under the effects of the Wolfsbane potion and took on a hundred Dementors all in one night. He grinned wider and thought that maybe he’d keep that information to himself, he had no desire to be spanked and now that he wasn’t pregnant anymore, he had no excuse to hide from Myron’s stinging palm.

“How are you feeling?” Remus asked him.
“A bit tired. I’m just angry at that damn article. How dare they say that none of my children could survive!”

“They don’t know that they are Drackens, a good thing too.” Myron answered. “Most wizard born children would not be able to survive at four months, where a Dracken born child has a higher chance of survival.”

“Harry, I know this is a bit…a bit forward and bold, but may I hold a baby?” Ashleigh asked, looking at the newborns, whose faces had been uncovered after the walk through the hospital and the trip through the floo.

“I have a present for you!” Harry declared with a smile, forcing himself to relax as he looked around at the five newborns, looking over them critically, sniffing them subtly before he plucked the one from Max’s arms, wrapped in a lemon blanket, and shoved the baby at her.

“Is this one Max’s baby?” Ashleigh asked as she cradled the tiny newborn.

“No, Nasta’s, but she is the only girl out of this bunch.”

“I have a second granddaughter? Oh!” Ashleigh cuddled the baby tighter. “Oh she’s beautiful and so tiny and perfect, isn’t she, Myron?” Ashleigh shoved the baby under his nose and he smirked amusedly.

“She’s perfect.” He agreed.

“Are you looking at her, Richard?!” Ashleigh snapped at her other dominant.

“I can see her, love, she’s beautiful.” Richard replied with a grin.

“Did our Maxie give you any children this time around?” Alexander asked. “I did tell him to get in there quick; I’ll be disappointed if he didn’t. I’ll tell you if I was a hundred years younger, I’d be right in there!”
Harry laughed so hard that he choked and needed Max’s huge hand to rub the breath back into him.

“Max gave me two sons.” Harry answered happily. “Nasta gave me two sons and a daughter.”

“Now you just need a little blonde to complete your set.” Alexander cackled giving Draco a wink, who went pink cheeked.

“May I see my grandsons?” Myron asked.

It was with a shock that Harry realised that Max’s two sons were Myron’s only blood grandchildren and he had only had Caesar’s daughter, Eleonora, as a grandchild before, who wasn’t his by blood and Amelle wouldn’t let anyone near her.

Harry took a baby from Draco and handed him to Myron, who studied the little face, brushing it gently with a thumb.

“Thank you, Harry.” He whispered.

“That’s my fourth born, the one who wasn’t breathing at birth. The Healers said he just had a bit of fluid in his throat and that he’ll be fine. Max’s other son, my firstborn, is the gutsiest little thing I’ve ever met. He sucks that milk so strongly I fear he’ll pull the teat right off the bottle.”

“Just like Max.” Ashleigh giggled. “I was disappointed when he was a newborn and he wouldn’t latch onto me, but now, looking back, I probably wouldn’t have had a breast left.”

Harry laughed as Max stammered and blushed, but he couldn’t get the smile off of his face, no matter how embarrassed he was.

Nasta scooped him up one handed and settled him on the settee; Harry frowned at him but made himself comfortable.

“Harry needs to stay on bed rest for a week. Healers orders.” He explained to everyone.

“My belly hurts as well.” He admitted.
Blaise sat beside him and rubbed gentle, experienced fingers into the scar tissue and Harry relaxed back with a sigh.

“I’ll get some of the scar reducing salve for you.” Max nodded. “It’ll help to make it feel less tight as well.”

“I don’t mind all of you holding and touching them, but feeding, bathing and nappy changing are mine.”

“I won’t argue that.” Richard said with a grin as he fawned over the little girl in Ashleigh’s arms, then cooed over the baby boy in Myron’s.

“Which two boys are Nasta’s?” Sanex asked, Harry couldn’t help but notice that Aneirin was purposefully standing between him and Sanex and he wondered why. Something niggled at his brain, but he shoved it away, he was too tired to deal with it right now.

“Max has one and I’ve got the other. The third born and the fifth.”

“Which one can I hold?”

“The one Max has, no one is allowed near my littlest.”

“He’s…” Nasta started but Harry cut him off with a deep hiss, glaring at him viciously and Nasta held both hands up and smiled at him.

“He’s what?” Aneirin asked a hint of caution in his voice.

“My firstborn, Max’s son, was two pounds, ten ounces and sixteen inches.”

“Oh that’s so small!” Marianna fretted as she cuddled with Braiden.
“The second born was Nasta’s daughter, two pounds, three ounces and fourteen inches.”

“They’re going to get lighter and smaller.” Myron said in a sudden moment of clarity.

“My third born was her brother, he was two pounds, one ounce and thirteen inches. The fourth born was Max’s second son, he was two pounds exactly and fourteen inches.”

“Only two pounds?” Ashleigh whimpered. “That’s too small.”

Harry bit his lip. “My last born, Nasta’s second son was one pound, two ounces and eleven inches.”

“Should he be out of the hospital?” Aneirin demanded.

Harry nodded. “He’s fine. The Healer said that as long as he eats little and often, he’ll be alright, but…”

Harry licked his lips and wondered how everyone was going to react to his Faerie baby. He unwrapped the cellular blanket and, making sure that he had hold of his son’s nappy clad bum, he let it fall away.

There were gasps, curses, Marianna let out a choked, sobbing sound, Mrs Weasley drew in a startled gasp and Narcissa almost fainted, clutching at Lucius with a steel grip as she teetered backwards.

The wings on his Faerie baby’s back were red and raw looking today, a sign that the skin that would cover his son’s wings was growing in, but it was irritating, hence the redness and small droplets of sticky plasma oozing out.

“The papers were partly right.” Harry admitted. “The fifth baby is missing skin, which is currently growing in, but there is nothing wrong with him. The Healer said that this is perfectly normal for babies like him, who were born before five months, to be missing skin where he is.”

“Why?” Lucius asked. “Why is this normal?”

“He took Nasta’s Faerie blood. He’s a Faerie and Faeries born before five months haven’t had the time to develop completely. He’s missing the skin on his wings, but I’ve been assured that he’s completely fine and after his rough start, he’s doing well. His wings feel like a fresh graze, it’s not truly painful, just discomforting and a bit irritating, but the skin should grow in in a week or two.”

“Poor baby.” Alayla cooed, tears in her eyes.

“There hasn’t been a Faerie in the Delericey bloodlines in over a hundred and fifty years, all the Faeries claimed that our blood had been tainted by the introduction of the Dracken blood. They said that it diluted the Faerie blood too much and they don’t recognise us anymore.” Aneirin stated. “They stopped recognising us when my Great-Grandfather, Nesta, who Nasta is named after, failed to produce a Faerie child.”

“Of course not and if they tried I’d kill them.” Aneirin said easily. “But this is going to be so sweet, those stuck up Faeries have been denying us for a hundred years and now that a Faerie child has come through our blood they’ll have to swallow their pride and accept the Delericeys’ back into the fold.”

Harry chuckled at how excited Aneirin was as he nuzzled his Faerie baby. He had to think of names as well, but he couldn’t get his brain to think, he really only wanted to go to sleep, but it was only mid-morning and it was too soon. Though he would have a nap in the afternoon, hell come to anyone who tried to stop him.

Harry woke up and for a minute he wondered why he had, then the faint, rapid puffs of air on his neck and the tiny whimpering cries came to his ears. Faerie baby was crying.

He sat up with the baby in his arms and checked him over, he needed a nappy change. It had been only one day since he had birthed his quintuplets and already the owls were rushing in, some carrying presents, others well wishes and cards, but some were not so nice and they upset him, so Myron had shooed him off as he sorted through the junk with the help from Caesar, Aneirin, Marianna, Max, Nasta, Narcissa and Lucius. Harry stayed cuddled up in his warm bed, his six children around him and the warm weight of Blaise cuddled behind him, who was sat in the bed finishing his Christmas homework as Harry slept beside him, Faerie baby in his arms.

“Is that his crying?” Blaise asked shocked. “We’ll never hear him when we’re all asleep! I can’t hear him when I’m awake!”
“He won’t leave my arms.” Harry assured him. “I can feel the change in his breathing and hear it faintly and I instantly wake up. I think my Dracken is more in tune to the babies’ needs.”

Blaise kissed him as Harry cleaned the soiled nappy, handing the dirty one to Blaise, who scrunched up his nose, but otherwise made no complaint as he disposed of it as Harry clad Faerie baby back into a nappy and wrapped him up in the blanket. He had tried to put him in one of Braiden’s old sleepsuits, the tiny little suits he had thought so tiny and so adorable drowned his four bigger children and became a hazard for Faerie baby as he was almost lost in the folds of fabric. Draco had gone out with Talia and Alayla to get some much needed clothing and emergency bassinets for the five.

“I’ve been thinking.” Harry told Blaise softly.

“How about, Prezioso?” Blaise asked, putting his quill down.

“The babies, what else. I’ve been thinking about names. Running a few through my head, because we can’t keep calling them babies one to four and Faerie baby.”

“You’re going to tell me first? Before the others?”

“I love you, Blaise. I don’t just say those words; I mean them with every ounce of my mind and body. You were my first for a lot of things, my first boyfriend, my first mate, my first lover, the Father of my first ever child. I love you for everything you’ve done for me and for the way you support and love me back, I don’t love any of the others any more or any less than I love you.”

Blaise smiled and they kissed heatedly, before breaking apart.

“You have no need to be jealous of the others or to feel insecure, I will always accept your love and affections and I’ll never turn you away, whether you want a hug, a kiss or something a bit more.”

Harry winked and Blaise chuckled.

“Now, back to baby names. I like Farren.”
“For the little girl?”

“No, for the first born. Max’s son, the little monster that ripped my stomach muscles as he forced himself out of me and is keeping me on bed rest.”

Blaise chuckled and got the first born baby out, who had been given a solid silver bracelet from a box that Aneirin had given them. Apparently they were common among male birthed babies to tell which baby was born in which order, not that Harry needed them because he could inhale and tell everyone exactly which baby was where, but Aneirin had told him that it had become tradition to use claiming bracelets and it would seem strange not to use them with such a large clutch.

“He looks like a little Farren. How did you come up with the name?”

Harry looked a bit sheepish, before reaching over to the bedside cabinet and pulling out an absolutely huge book and thunked it on the bed.

“A complete guide to naming your child.” Blaise read the title. “With examples of famous names and name origins and meanings.”

“Hermione gave it to me when I was pregnant with Braiden, I forgot all about it until this morning.”

“You read up to F in a few hours?”

Harry blushed. “I skipped over some letters completely and over even more names. I’ve found a few I like, but none seem to fit these little ones, but Farren does. Farren Deon Maddison.”

Blaise smiled. “I think Max will be very happy with Farren. I am. What does his name mean?”

Harry grinned. “Farren means Thunder. The way he cries it’s a wonder we’ve still got windows left. It was also the name of a King a hundred odd years ago; it was spelt differently, F A R O N instead of F A R R E N but it’s pronounced the same, to keep with Max’s family tradition of naming their children after warriors and rulers.”

“I think he’ll love it. Have you thought of the others?”
Harry shrugged. “It’s so difficult to name so many babies. I wasn’t prepared at all. I like Lyra, but it doesn’t fit my baby girl, she’s not a Lyra. I also like Mathias, but again it doesn’t fit them. I tried to name Faerie baby Ashden, but I couldn’t keep it up, my mind kept calling him Faerie baby, so that name’s out. I tried Phoebe, but that didn’t stick either.”

“Keep trying, love. I know you’ll name them all perfectly and I know you’ll say no, but if you want the help, none of us will mind.”

Harry smiled as he shifted Faerie baby into his one arm and flipped the book open to R after skipping the Qs and began the tortuous task of reading every name and weighing them, checking their means and making sure that it wasn’t the name of some mass murderer somewhere.

Harry was allowed to be carried downstairs the next day for breakfast, his book, which was at least five and half inches thick, tucked under his arm, Faerie baby in the other.

Harry had been asleep when all of his dominant mates came to bed, so his children had only been dressed in their new sleepsuits when Harry had woken up. Draco had some wicked taste in fashion and Harry chuckled every time he saw the gorgeous outfits that had been bought, not just for the five, but for Braiden as well, who was growing rapidly.

“I see you are searching for names.” Myron told him as he accepted the biggest baby, the first born,
Max’s first son, who was now named Farren.

Harry grinned a secretive grin.

“You’ve named some of them.” Marianna accused him.

“Oh you must share, Harry!” Ashleigh begged.

Harry smiled a bit bashfully, worried that they might not like the name. He looked to Max, who gave him an encouraging smile.
“I’ll love any name you’ve picked out.” He assured.

“I won’t.” Draco sniffed. “Imagine having a child named something ridiculous or insipid like Betty or Simon.”

Harry giggled, not at all offended. “I’ve named two of them. My firstborn and my third born.”

They all looked to the babies that had been named. One Max’s heir and the other Nasta’s heir.

“Well don’t keep us in suspense little one.” Alexander chided.

“Farren Deon Maddison and Regan Aneirin Delericey.” Harry announced with a grin.

Max pouted.

“You don’t like it?” Harry asked, feeling short of breath and a bit panicky, not sure what he’d do if his mates didn’t like the name, especially the baby’s own Father. Nasta pressed a hand to his back and urged him to breathe, giving Max a glare.

“But…but…Braiden got named after Blaise! Braiden Blaise Enzo Zabini. Why can’t he be Farren Maximilius Deon Maddison?”

“Because that sounds awful.” Draco supplied after a sip of tea.

Max huffed, but took the baby from his Father gently and kissed him.

“Welcome to the family, Farren! Now we just need to name your brother, even though he’ll be a Potter-Maddison, he’ll still be your baby brother, and even though your other brothers and your sister have different last names and different Fathers, you all share an amazing Mother and you will protect them all as the elder sibling.”

“Braiden’s the oldest.” Harry reminded him.
“Details!” Max grinned. “My boy will be twice the size of Braiden, a day old and eating heartily.”

“If he keeps eating like that he’ll be twice as wide as Braiden maybe.” Blaise quipped.

Harry chuckled and told them both to knock it off and that it didn’t matter who was bigger or older, his children would be taught to look after one another, regardless of age, gender or size.

“Have you got any more names for us?” Ashleigh asked as she cooed over the fourth born.

Harry shook his head. “I’m still reading the book. I’ll find the perfect names though.”

“How is she?” He asked.

“Worried for you and your little ones. Though after that newspaper article everyone is worried for you and the babes. When she found out that she was pregnant with twins, she rejoiced, then it was found out you had quintuplets and she was frightened for you, dear one. She wants to make sure you’re alright.”

“That’s alright, she can come and see me, I don’t mind. We’ve been talking through owls since we met.”

“Ba!” Braiden supplied from Narcissa’s arms.

“That’s right Braiden, owls.” Harry encouraged.
“How the hell did ba sound like owls?” Draco asked.

“It’s to encourage him!” Harry said back. “It's the principle of it, not what he actually said, he’s learning, that’s all that matters.”

“Well said, Harry.” Aneirin told him as he cuddled with his granddaughter and a name popped into his head, seemingly randomly. Lowri.

It had been Nasta’s Mother’s name. Would he want his daughter named after his Mother? Harry didn’t. The memory of his Mother was sacred to him, she had died for him, much like Nasta’s had died for him, but the memory of her, of her red hair and vibrant green eyes, so much like his own, cut something deep into him and her name and his Father’s would forever be tainted with the vileness that was Voldemort. Perhaps further down the line, in a few years’ time he wouldn’t feel as strongly, but right now he couldn’t bear it, but did Nasta feel the same way about his Mother. Harry turned the page and then another one, thinking, considering and then he saw it. Halfway down the page, the perfect name for his baby girl and he grinned at her, wondering if the others would like it as much as he did.

Chapter End Notes

A/N: Ha! How much do you want to kill me for that ending? So you have the genders, the parentage, the weights and lengths, but you only have two names. Unless Faerie baby counts as a temporary name, then you have three.

Work is hell as usual, going back after a week off has only solidified my want of winning the lottery so I can leave and spend the rest of my life writing.

Right! The vote that isn’t a vote is over! You all know now what genders they are and who fathered who.

The vote ended:

Nasta – 153
Max – 136
Draco – 7

More girls – 52
More boys – 43

None of you got both the fathers and the genders right!

Chapter Fifty-Five – Madness

It was the seventh of January and they were going back to Hogwarts in five days. Harry just didn’t want to go, especially not with his Faerie baby.

Three of his babies had names, two did not. He had his Farren Deon Maddison, who was still a gutsy little boy and had moved onto another additional half ounce of milk, so he was drinking a good ounce more than his other siblings. He had his Regan Aneirin Delericye, who did not like the feeling of clothes on his body and tried twisting and wiggling away from his own skin until he got used to them again and settled down. His only daughter, who had been named Tegan Lowri Potter-Delericye, was the opposite. She did not like having her clothing removed and she pitched a fit loud enough to burst his eardrums every time he changed her.

Nasta had been teary as Harry had told him that he wanted to call their daughter Tegan Lowri. He loved the name and when Harry had told him about hesitating over the middle name due to respecting the dead, Nasta had laughed and told him that he was silly and that he was honoured to have his first daughter named after the Mother who had died birthing him.

Faerie baby was still unnamed as was his fourth born and after a week of being alive he was being urged on more urgently to name them and the pressure was heaping onto him to find the perfect names that actually suited his two youngest.

He had been ripping through the baby name book Hermione had given him, pouring over Max and Nasta’s family histories and still nothing suited them. Then came a revelation that almost destroyed all of the research that Harry had been doing for the past few days.
“You know that one of those boys has to be a Potter don’t you?” Draco told him.

“What?” Harry asked as he looked up from where he was scanning through the book.

“One of the babies needs to be a Potter, after you. The Potter line need’s an heir, then the Black line need’s an heir too, as your Godfather named you as the sole inheritor of the Black estate and fortunes, it’s up to you to name an heir.”

Harry blinked and then looked to his two youngest babies. One had to be a Potter, the other a Black. He wondered if Max or Nasta cared or if they had already assumed that he’d have to name their youngest sons Black and Potter. It changed everything and he flipped to the front of the book in a huff and he started all over again.

He was pulled away from his search halfway through the B’s for lunch and he moodily stabbed at his food, eating minimally and when a baby cried for food, he seized the opportunity to abandon his meal to tend to him.

He looked down at Regan and smiled. He was perfect and had a perfect name to match, why couldn’t he name his youngest two; they were just as perfect and deserved perfect names too.

Faerie baby started crying, his cry had gotten slightly louder as he got stronger and developed a bit more. The skin on his miniscule wings was growing in and Harry had never been more relieved to see patches of skin in his life. There were still some areas that were uncovered and raw, but for the most part his Faerie baby, who was going to be baby Potter, no matter that he had been born last, was doing amazingly well.

“Why don’t you name him for your own Father?” Richard had suggested, but they just didn’t understand that he couldn’t. They were his parents, the two people he had begged to come and get him throughout childhood even though he had known that they were dead, they were the people who had loved him most in the world, the people who had given their lives for his, he couldn’t name his children after them, he just couldn’t. But maybe he could give him a name that could be linked to his parents.

“Seriously? Do you have to give our child such a Gryffindor name?” Draco demanded.

“Yes, because both of my parents were proud Gryffindors. I can’t name him after them, but maybe I can link his name to the both of them.”
“I think it’s a lovely name.” Ashleigh said. “Little Leo.”

Harry smiled and gazed at Leolin who was sucking his milk from his tiny bottle with a tentativeness that his siblings did not share.

It was that evening when Harry found the perfect middle name for him.

“You want to name him what?!” Draco once again shouted.

“Leolin Siorus Potter. After my parents and after Sirius.” Harry said defiantly, daring Draco with his eyes to stand up to him on this.

“Have you found a name for my second son?” Max asked as he cuddled with said son.

Harry shook his head. “Do you have any ideas?”

“Nope. I’ll leave all the baby naming up to you, I’ll just play and coo and cuddle him until you find the perfect name.”

Harry chuckled and kissed Max and then little baby Black. He poured over the books and dived into the Black history, but he hated the names of all the constellations, who would name their child Monoceros, Ophiuchus, Pavo or Vulpecula? Even as middle names they were all hideous, so Harry struck constellations out almost immediately.

It was as he was lounging on the bed after having a nap, his fourth baby in front of him to bring him inspiration while he was devouring an ancient text on ancient rulers that he came across the name. He grinned as he looked to baby number four and he applied the name to him. It stuck. He scooped the baby up and wandered down the stairs to the living room where he could hear Braiden’s screeches of joy as he was tickled mercilessly by Draco’s quick fingers.

“Does my son have a name?” Max asked, like he always did when Harry came into a room, as he sat burping Faerie baby with just two fingers, Harry mentally shook his head, he couldn’t stop calling Leolin Faerie baby, he had a name now, a perfect name that he had given to him. He needed to get used to using it.

“Yes, he does. His name is Calix.”
“A good, strong Pureblood name.” Draco approved.

“It was also the name of an ancient warrior.” Harry said and noted the approval from Myron, who had loved his Father’s idea of naming his children after rulers, warriors and royalty.

“Does he have a middle name?” Nasta asked, Tegan in one arm, Farren in the other.

Harry nodded. “Calix Bowen Black.”

“Ohh, such a beautiful name.” Ashleigh sighed. “I wish I had thought of Bowen, then maybe Caesar wouldn’t be stuck with Demencio. I loved it when he was a baby, but now that we’re both older, I realise that it sounds a lot like demented.”

“It fit’s him to a tee.” Max grinned.

Richard started laughing, then choking and he needed Myron to thump his back with a shake of his head. He handed the ever present bottle of potion to Richard, who took a swig and handed it back.

“You need to stop making me laugh so much, Maxie.” He tittered, no heat behind his words and still with laughter in his voice, but his eyes were pained.

“I’ve never laughed so much lately.” Richard waved away.

Harry passed Calix to Richard, accepted the kiss from him, before easing himself to the floor to play with Braiden, who turned indigo eyes to him and grinned widely.

“Who’s my gorgeous little boy?” Harry cooed, bending down to rub noses against Braiden, who shrieked in happiness and grabbed fistfuls of Harry’s hair. “Oh! Ow, ow, ow!” Harry cried and Draco quickly dislodged Braiden’s fingers from his hair.

Harry rubbed the top of his head with tears in his eyes. “He has a hell of a grip.” He said as the soreness eased away.

“I used to have a little beard before I had kids. Max used to pull on it so hard the hairs would come off in his chubby hands. It hurt like hell so I had to shave it off.” Richard told them. “I looked gorgeous with it too.”

“He didn’t.” Myron assured them. “He only grew it because without it people assumed that he was a little boy. I was holding his hand once when we went to Gringotts and I had some old woman tell me that I had a well behaved son.”

Harry snorted in laughter and he heard it echoed all around the room as everyone laughed uproariously. Even Braiden joined in and Harry snuggled him tightly.

“Fine, pick on poor me, but I’ll have you know that that woman was half blind.”

That set everyone off again and Harry tried to taper his laughing down when an ache started in his belly. Max had been rubbing it with a scar reducer and it was getting better, but it still hurt now and then.

Harry sat Braiden up and propped him up with cushions, enough to soften his fall if he toppled, but not enough to support him properly. He slowly let go of Braiden’s hands and held them ready to catch Braiden if he fell. He didn’t.

“Look!” He demanded of the others and they broke off their conversations to look at Braiden, who looked a bit confused as to why the world suddenly looked so different.

“He’s getting stronger and developing more quickly now.”

“The next step is to get him crawling and to start him weaning.” Nasta nodded. “But he’s doing so amazingly well. Our baby boy is growing up.”

Harry grinned at Nasta and he chuckled. “I was thinking we could start brushing his gums as well. He could cut his first tooth in a month or so, it’ll be better to get him used to it before he actually has teeth.”

“I’ll go out this afternoon and pick him up a baby toothbrush.” Max said.
“Can I come?” He asked.

“Of course you can, I’m not going to stop you from coming to the supermarket with me.”

“You’re going to leave the three of us with six babies?” Draco asked, a note of panic in his voice.

“Of course not. Braiden and Leolin will come with us.”

“Do you think it’s a good idea to take Leolin anywhere?” Blaise asked.

“I think he’ll be just fine.” Harry answered. “He’s got those coverings from the hospital and he’ll be in the baby sling, the pressure will be off of his back. He needs to get used to the outside world anyway and you know I don’t like him being far from me.”

“Keep his face hidden.” Myron suggested. “If there are any…photographers watching you, the last thing we need is to see Leolin’s face in the evening Prophet.”

Harry nodded; noticing Myron’s emphasis on the word photographers, the man hated the media almost as much as he hated suck ups and brown nosers.

“What about Braiden?” Ashleigh fretted.

“I’ll be right beside Braiden.” Harry assured. “And I’m sure Max won’t let anything happen to any of us.”

“Of course not.” Max said with a grin, Leolin looking impossibly tiny sleeping cuddled up on Max’s forearm.

“Can we go now?” Harry asked, excitement colouring his tone.
“You know we’re only going shopping right?” Max asked a bit curiously.

“I’ve only been in a supermarket once and that was because Aunt Petunia couldn’t leave me with the woman over the road. Uncle Vernon wanted to leave me in the car, but there were too many people around.”

Harry left to get ready, never noticing the faces of the people he left behind. He came back, his wallet in his back pocket, thankful he had converted some Galleons to pounds the last time he was in Gringotts and he sat down to tug on his shoes, shoving his unshed baby weight out of the way. It was pissing him off currently, though he was thankful that Max’s potion worked on his stretch marks also.

“How many times have you been left in a car on your own, Harry?” Richard asked him randomly.

“How old were you?”

“Uhh…it was Dudley’s eighth birthday, so I would have been seven.”

“The first time you slept in a proper bed was when you were seven?” Myron hissed.

“Only for one night, I was back in the cupboard the next day.”

“Harry honey, what did you sleep on in the cupboard?” Ashleigh asked, looking like her heart was breaking just for asking.

“A nest of sorts wasn’t it. On a hard tiled floor.” Richard told him, licking his lips and opening a brown envelope packet that he took from his work case.

“Yeah, made up of a single blanket and my clothes.” Harry nodded feeling severely uncomfortable now. He just wanted to go shopping and forget this conversation.

“The day you went into labour, Harry, I left. I told you it was to do with the Dursley case.”

Harry nodded, frowning heavily, trying to remember that day. Things were still very blurry.

“You left me alone with Sanex.” He said after a while, remembering lying on the rug in front of the fire and a smiling Sanex behind him.

“Well I told you that what came with that owl would damn them further. Do you remember that?”

Harry nodded, vaguely remembering those words now that they had been repeated to him.

“I shouldn’t be showing any of you this, but as long as you don’t discuss it where anyone can overhear you, especially reporters, I see no harm in it.”

“You found my nest.” Harry said in a burst of clarity. “It was still there.”

Richard smiled sadly and pulled out a bunch of photographs bound together with an elastic band. Richard pulled the band off and showed them the tiny little cupboard under the stairs, a small space that wasn’t taken up by two large suitcases, the vacuum cleaner and the cleaning supplies was covered in a thin ratty blanket and holey, worn thin clothing. There was one shelf and on it were two broken plastic soldiers, two children’s books, an Oxford dictionary and a piece of paper sticking out the end of the shelf. The next photo was a close up of the contents of the shelf, the next was a man’s hand holding open the baby scribble drawing, Harry smiled as he looked at it. There were three people scribbled in crayon standing in a field dotted with large, crude flowers with a bright blue sky and a large yellow sun, the man almost filled the paper, he had jet black hair and green eyes, the woman was half the size of the man, with yellow hair and green eyes and there was a tiny little person at the bottom, with black hair, green eyes and glasses, a red slash over his forehead, holding both of their hands and smiling wider than his face.

Harry’s eyes welled up as he saw it. He bent forward to touch the picture through the photograph.
“That’s what I thought my parents looked like. Everyone’s Mum had blonde hair, so I thought that all Mum’s had blonde hair, I didn’t know about different coloured eyes in families either. Uncle Vernon and Aunt Petunia both had blue eyes and so did Dudley, so I thought that because I had green eyes, both of my parents must have as well. I loved that picture and when I drew it in school I wanted it so badly, all of my other pictures had been ripped up and thrown in the bin, but I wanted that one so badly, so I hid it.”

Harry looked up slowly, away from the photo of his picture before the words made it into his mind and he frowned.

“I never cast any spells and the trace on my wand would have been picked up.”

“This signature goes back well before you started at Hogwarts, Harry. You wanted so badly for your little haven to be safe, along with all your most precious possessions that your magic rushed to comply, your relatives couldn’t touch or destroy anything you took into your cupboard.”

“That makes sense.” Harry whispered. “Aunt Petunia told me numerous times to bring her my picture, but I couldn’t, I didn’t want it destroyed, so I always refused.”

“What did she do?” Nasta asked appalled.

“Tried to hit me with the frying pan, but she always missed, she couldn’t swing it very fast and I was good at ducking.” Harry shrugged.

“Harry, it’s the next photos that have damned them irreversibly.” Richard said as he took out a small bundle of photos, pulled off the elastic band and Harry was looking at every room of the Dursley household. The state of the art kitchen, the thick carpets, the expensive artwork and all of the photos on the walls, which every single one was photographed to show that Harry wasn’t in any of them. The huge, expensive TV, both the one in the living room and in the kitchen, the state of the art computers, one in the living room, the other in Dudley’s room, which was cluttered with electronics, game consoles, another huge TV, a large, expensive computer on the metal framed desk, a wardrobe filled to bursting with expensive, branded clothing, a large double bed, a stocked mini fridge and more gadgets and odd things than most shops owned.

The next few photos were his Aunt and Uncle’s room, perfectly furnished, the large double bed quilted in some big designer’s hideous paisley rubbish that Aunt Petunia loved washing and hanging high on the washing line for the neighbours to see. The large vanity mirror with the bottles of expensive perfume and powders, the en suite bathroom filled with foul smelling products that were all hideously expensive and then finally the point that was trying to be made. The white wooden door with five locks on it and a cat flap in the bottom.

Harry heard Nasta’s knuckles cracking and Draco’s deep growl.

“We couldn’t work out why there was a cat flap.” Richard told Harry. “In all of our years working in the law field, we couldn’t figure it out and your relatives were less than helpful, they tried to tell us that you had installed it yourself with your ‘freakishness’, whatever that means.” Richard winked and Harry understood all at once. Richard’s colleagues were Muggles and he worked for a Muggle law firm. “I asked Myron and he didn’t know either and when Myron doesn’t know something, no one else has a hope in hell at guessing.”

“It was for food.” Harry said with a sigh.

“Come again?” Aneirin asked, speaking up for the first time.

“They pushed small amounts of food through the cat flap so I didn’t die in their home.”

“I thought you were just locked in overnight, I’m no fool, I saw the five locks, but are you saying that you were actually locked up during the day also?”

“All day, every day, all night, every night.” Harry said miserably.

“They didn’t let you out for food? What about using the bathroom?”

Harry just shook his head and heard several hisses.

“What about when you needed to go.”

“I held it as long as I could and then banged hell out of the door and hoped that someone let me out and that I’d get off with just a smack for disturbing them from their day.”
“That’s barbaric.” Draco growled.

Richard was writing it all down and Harry felt half an inch high. Then came the worst part of it, the photographs of his bedroom.

The stained carpet was in the first few photos, but then, in the next several photos it had been ripped up to show the bare, rough wooded floorboards underneath. The damp spotted, pale, peeling wallpapers, the battered wardrobe that Aunt Petunia had bought from a car boot sale for just three pounds, a wooden desk that Dudley hadn’t wanted and a tiny four foot bed that had once been Dudley’s cot and had transformed into his first toddler bed and had then been given to Harry out of the goodness of his Aunt and Uncle’s hearts. There was no duvet and no pillow and just a lumpy, bare mattress. Harry had been grateful they had left him the mattress so he didn’t have to sleep on the wooden slats.

There were broken toys and games littering his bedroom and books on the higher shelves that Harry had read repeatedly to stave off his boredom. Harry’s eyes went wide at the next photo, a close up of a rust brown stain marked with a yellow sign with a black number one on it.

There were twenty-two of those little yellow signs and every one marked rust brown stains, some as small as the tip of his finger, some as big as an apple and one was a small puddle, right in the spare corner of his room, like he had sat or laid there and just bled.

“Forensics are working to date these blood samples, Harry, but all of them are the same blood type. My colleagues will match it to you when you come in, but all I needed was one simple spell to tell me that they were all from you.”

“You said they never hit you!” Blaise accused.

“They never hit me as an everyday thing; I’d have had to have done something really bad to be hit.” Harry said as he curled up on himself, Aneirin scooted over a seat to hold him against his body, comforting him.

“Did you hurt yourself?” Max asked hesitantly.

Harry shook his head.

“Then why is that room filled with your blood?” Myron demanded.

“Dudley and his friends used to hit me. I…Uncle Vernon accidentally kicked over a milk bottle and yelled at me to clean it up, he shoved me onto the broken glass and it cut me. I dropped a plate and I cut myself cleaning up the shards, Aunt Petunia caught my fingers in a door when she slammed it closed on me and two of my fingers bled. Her nails used to graze me as well and sometimes cut me, but she was just grabbing me, not hitting me.”

“But they were still hurting you.” Richard said firmly.

Harry bit his lip. “Can I just go to bed now?” He asked.

“I thought you were coming to the supermarket with me.” Max asked.

“I don’t want to go anymore.” Harry said as he kicked his shoes off and carried Regan up the stairs to the bedroom.

Nasta joined him a few minutes later; Harry was sat on the bed rocking Regan, tears falling silently down his cheeks.

Nasta sat behind him and held around his waist, pressing his lips against his neck. They were both silent.

They stayed that way for a while until Harry rested his head back against Nasta’s shoulder and relaxed back against his body.

“I hate speaking about it, why do you make me speak about it?” He asked tearfully.

Nasta rubbed his cheek against his forehead. “You need to speak about it; you need to let it all out so that you can heal from it. Richard needs the details for his case, the Dursleys have all been arrested, the court date is coming up and Richard needs to know everything, he didn’t want to put pressure on you when you were pregnant, but you’re not pregnant anymore, Caru. Finding that cupboard and what passed for your bedroom has helped convict them insurmountably. Richard hadn’t been expecting to find so much damning evidence just left about for anyone to see it, but he knew why when he found the compulsion charms that those Muggles can’t see, feel or even know exist. That is an amazing stroke of luck, love.”

“He needs to know, Caru. If you find it easier talking to just him, then take him into a different room, but the defence barristers will not be so gentle or understanding, they will rip you to pieces. Every memory or incident you tell the courts will be questioned and ripped apart, they are vicious jackals that are trying to get your relatives off and out of prison, it’s their job to do so, but you can’t get tongue tied, you can’t mix up stories, we’re just trying to help you, trying to prepare you for it. There will be people watching and listening, strangers you have never met, the judge and the jurors scrutinising everything you say. It will be nerve wracking, but Draco will be with you, sitting right behind you and me and the others will be waiting at home for you, Richard will be right beside you.”

“I thought you said that you and the others would be in the courtroom with me?” Harry said panicked.

“We can’t leave all six babies alone without any protection. My Dad and brother will be here, Myron and Ashleigh and likely Alexander and Kimberly as well, but where we could have allowed them to look after Braiden, we can’t ask them to look after all six, even though they’d have no problem with it, you still won’t let anyone other than us look after Leolin. It would probably be safer if we all stayed home anyway, no matter how much we don’t want to, if I saw those bastards calling you a liar in court I wouldn’t be able to stop myself from leaping over the chairs and tearing their heads off.”

Harry giggled at the mental image and rested back against Nasta more fully.

“If I could take it all from you I would.” Nasta told him a little while later. “If I could go in your place I would, but only you know what happened, love, how you felt and how they treated you, they deserve to be in prison for what they did and the more they talk about you being ‘freakish and abnormal’ they are going to end up in mental institutions.”

“I have to do it myself. I’ll never be free of them if I don’t do it myself.” Harry said. “It’s just so hard to talk about it! I don’t want everyone knowing, I don’t want to sit down and just let it all out, it makes me feel unhappy and miserable when I think about it and I don’t want to be. I have four loving men living with me, six beautiful babies who need all of my attention and devotion, not just half of it and I just want to move on with my life. I don’t want the happiness my life has become to be coloured by my misery of the past. I was so unhappy, Nas, my life was just an endless line of misery and pain and hunger and desolate loneliness, I was always so alone that I thought my heart would shrivel. No one cared, no one gave a damn about little Harry Potter in his baggy clothes and taped up glasses. My relatives despised me, the school kids hated me, the teachers ignored me, the neighbours’ tutted and shooed me away from their perfect gardens and their immaculate cars as if I’d sully them just by standing too close. I was just always alone. I hate being alone, please, never leave me alone, Nasta.”

Nasta wrapped Harry up tighter and squeezed him as much as he dared with Harry’s stomach still tender. He laid desperate kisses on Harry’s neck.

“I swear I’ll never leave you alone, cariad. If you ever feel alone, no matter when it is, what any of us are doing, find one of us to talk to or just for a cwtch if you need one. We love you and we want you to be happy.”

“Can I take that cwtch now?” Harry asked softly.

Nasta scooped Harry’s knees up and sat him sideways across his lap and wrapped him in a warm, tight, safe hug, keeping his left arm arm wrapped around Harry’s back, his hand resting on a hip, his right arm was bent up his back, holding Harry’s right shoulder to his chest so that his little submissive was turned fully into his body, his hand stroking through black, messy hair soothingly, keeping Harry’s head tucked under his chin as he rocked Harry and by extension Regan, his firstborn son.

“You can have a cwtch any time you want one, Caru. You don’t even have to ask, just throw your arms around me and I’ll happily do the same.”

“Even if you’re angry at me?”

“Especially then.” Nasta answered nuzzling Harry’s cheek.

“You won’t shrug me off?” Harry questioned.

“Never.” Nasta replied firmly.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Harry walked down the stairs with Nasta, who had relinquished his arms of Regan and joined the others, who had moved into the kitchen with the babies.

“Are we still going to the supermarket, Harry?” Max asked as he waved a considerable list in his direction.

Harry chuckled and nodded as Blaise threw his trainers at him one after the other. He caught them and sat down to slip them on.
“How are we getting there?” He asked.

“Driving. I do have a car you know and I’ve missed it since we’ve been travelling magically all over the place.”

“When did you bring that here?” Harry asked curiously.

“I take it everywhere; I usually shrink it in my pocket.”

“Doesn’t that mess with the car though?”

“Nope, I’ve been doing it for years.”

“As long as you drive safely, we’ll have two babies in the car.” Harry said as he stood up and took out two carrycots from the corner that they were using to store the baby stuff in while they were at Myron’s.

Braiden was secured into one with a soft ‘Ah Na’ as it interrupted his playing with his favourite wooden horse. Harry gave it right back to him and smiled as Braiden shrieked in joy.

Faerie baby was strapped into the special carry cot bought just for him. It was heavily cushioned and padded to support his back without crushing his wings and it was small enough to cradle him without flinging him into the plastic sides around every turn.

“Those four had better be alright when I come back.” Harry warned as he kissed all the babies goodbye, before moving onto his mates.

“They’ll be fine.” Blaise assured as he kissed his lips.

Harry carried the two carrycots outside, to where Max was enlarging his car to its rightful size.

“You’re positive that doing that doesn’t damage the electricals or the brakes or anything?” Harry asked.
“Very positive, love. I had it all tested when I first started doing it and it was in perfect working condition. It goes for a regular MOT as well.”

Harry nodded and secured the carrycots into the back seats, made sure they were absolutely one hundred percent secured before slipping between the two carrycots and buckling himself in.

Max buckled himself in and adjusted his mirror to grin at Harry, who grinned back.

“Just so I can see your gorgeous face and our two little angels.” He said.

Harry chuckled and held Faerie baby’s hand and Braiden’s leg as Max started the bright blue car and set off.

Max drove slowly and safely and Harry enjoyed the car ride to the supermarket and sent Max off to find a trolley for the two boys as he had decided against wearing the baby sling. His scar was too sore.

Max came back with a trolley and unbuckled Braiden and laid him into the little trolley chair, buckling him in as Harry placed a carrycot cushion into the other reclined seat before placing Leolin into it and buckling him up. Harry made sure that Braiden still had his wooden horse and that Max had shut up and locked the car, before pushing the trolley into the supermarket.

“Where to first?” Harry asked as Max wrapped his arms around him and bent his head to kiss his neck.

“I love that we’re doing something so domestic.” Max said. “I’ve wanted to bring you shopping for months, but you’ve always been so busy.”

“Always pregnant you mean.” Harry whispered and Max chuckled deeply.

Max stood up, but he stayed behind Harry, holding the trolley handlebar beside Harry’s hands, walking so closely together that their bodies brushed as they walked. Harry couldn’t stop laughing, ignoring the looks they got as they stopped to kiss as they picked up bags, nets and punnets of every fruit in the produce section.

“Nasta and his bloody fruit. If he eats any more he’ll become a fruit.” Max grumbled.

“I thought he already was a fruit.”
“Now that’s not nice.” Max said with a grin.

“I thought we were all fruits.”

Max laughed. “I wonder if any of our kids will become fruits, after all they were created from our seeds.”

It was Harry’s turn to laugh and he kissed Leolin and Braiden and then Max, the woman on the aisle with them gasped, they ignored her.

“Right, oranges, where are oranges?” Harry asked as he read off of Max’s list, checking things off with a pencil. “Why do we need a kilo of oranges?”

“Nasta eats an orange a day and he uses three oranges whenever he had one of those smoothie things he likes so much and Draco’s fond of them too.” Max answered as he put the net of oranges into the trolley, kissing Leolin on his way back up. Faerie baby was happily sleeping.

“Does Nasta eat one of every fruit a day?” Harry asked. “I know he eats a banana after breakfast and an apple after dinner.”

“He eats an orange after lunch and usually a kiwi or a different fruit before he goes to bed. Speaking of seed, have you noticed that his is always fruity?”

Harry choked on his spit and he laughed so hard that he had to crouch down and cross his legs to keep from wetting himself. Max chuckled above him as he put a punnet of plums and two whole pineapples into the trolley. Harry was helped to his feet as the customers looked at him like he was walking around with no clothes on, smeared in mud or worse things.

“If eating five fruits a day does that, give ‘em to me, I might get more mouth action.” Max grinned lecherously.

Harry felt tears fall down his cheeks as he continued laughing as they moved down to the vegetables and once again Max added more than the average person bought.
They moved on to buy milk and cheese and yoghurts, enough fresh meat to feed a family of five for a month, but would last them a week, and then it was onto jars and tins, sauces and condiments, where Max bought a bottle of vinegar with a wink to Harry, who blushed as he remembered kicking Max’s vinegar over once, before he humiliated himself for the first time by having a damned flashback.

“Damn it, we just went past sugar.” Max pouted as he went back down the one aisle to collect the sugar.

He ran into a pretty woman and almost knocked her hand flying as he reached for the same bag of sugar that she had been.

“I’m sorry.” He told her politely as he got the sugar down and handed it to her before reaching for another bag for himself.

“That’s alright, it was my fault.” She said demurely, even though they both knew that it was clearly his fault for rushing and not looking. “I’m Caitlin.”

Max looked at her in puzzlement. “I’m Max.”

“Do you live close by, Max?” She asked, fluttering her eyelashes at him, pouting her lips. He couldn’t help but think that Harry did it cuter when he wasn’t doing it purposefully and sexier when he was.

“No, listen Caitlin, I think you’ve got it all wrong. I’m married.”

“Oh.” She looked so disappointed that he wondered if she was that desperate or if she was trying to make him feel so sorry for her that he’d leave his mates. “But you aren’t wearing a ring.”

Max cursed. “We’re as good as married.” He told her.

“But you aren’t married yet?” She perked up at that.
“Listen lady, I don’t know who you are, but I’m very, very happy.”

“Is this lady bothering you?” Max could have kissed Harry as he pushed the trolley down the aisle towards them.

“What’s it to you?!?” The woman snarled.

Harry raised an eyebrow and turned to Max.

“Is she bothering you, love?” Harry stressed the last word.

Max put the sugar in the trolley and walked around to kiss Harry firmly on the lips.

“This is Caitlin, love. I almost knocked her over in my rush to get the sugar and get back to you and our sons.”

Caitlin looked wide eyed to them and then the two baby boys in the trolley infant seats.

“You…you’re both men.”

“Very well observed.” Harry hissed cattily.

“You were allowed to adopt two babies?”

Max squeezed Harry’s hand. “What’s it to you?” He demanded, aware that Braiden looked like Blaise and Leolin had pale hair due to his stunted development, it would get darker the more he developed as it started to produce melanin, but neither baby looked like him or Harry, it would be easier to just tell the Muggle woman that they were adopted. “If you don’t mind, we’re shopping.”

Max turned the trolley around and stood behind Harry, protecting him as he stood between the woman and Harry and their two sons. He got them into the main aisle before going down the one that held all the different cartons of eggs.

“I’m going to eat her.” Harry snarled and Max chuckled.

“With this trolley filled with lovely food, you want to eat that scrawny bag of bones?”

Max felt accomplished as Harry chuckled lightly. He just wanted to forget all about the woman.

“I’m craving raw meat.” Harry whispered suddenly. “I didn’t realise until we went down the meat aisle, but I want raw meat.”

Max grinned savagely. “Please, please let me go hunt something for you? It’s been almost a year since we last hunted and I want to get you your first meal, please?”

“Of course, but does this mean that my breeding cycle has started? I can’t be pregnant again, Max! I can’t!”

“Calm down!” Max said startled as he wrapped Harry in a huge hug and swayed with him, before taking one hand and putting four boxes of twelve large eggs into the trolley. “You’re not starting your breeding cycle; you’re just being a Dracken. Raw meat contains bacteria that your pregnant body can’t deal with, so you stop craving it when pregnant and me and the others have been avoiding it because the smell would have made you sick, but now that you aren’t pregnant, you’re Dracken will want fresh meat again. The reintroduction of it into our diets will give us more energy and will make us all a lot happier and fitter.”

Harry grinned. “I can’t wait.”

“Just a few more things.” Max promised as he squeezed Harry’s bum, making him jump and glare.

Max laughed and wheeled the trolley around carefully and set off to buy soap powder, antibacterial wipes and washing up liquid. They got more than a few derisive looks, some curious looks and only a handful looked at them like they were just ordinary lovers in the supermarket to buy groceries with their sons.

Max got his usual washing up liquid and a bottle of sensitive fabric conditioner for the babies along with a box of non-biological washing powder before heading to the toiletry aisles, searching for toothbrushes. He found them and chucked a load into the trolley along with three tubes of toothpaste, before searching for baby brushes. They were on the bottom shelf so Harry got them; he found a blue one with a little train on it and a tube of baby toothpaste.

“It can’t hurt to get it now in case we can’t get here easily if he cuts his first tooth while we’re at school.” He explained as he chucked them into the trolley, which was very full now.

Leolin started wailing and Harry dove into the nappy bag and pulled his special bottle out of the thermal pouch, shook it as Max unstrapped the baby from the seat and placed him into Harry’s arms as Harry carefully stroked his cheek with the bottle teat, watching as Leolin rooted for it and caught it with his mouth and sucked.

Harry walked around the store, Max’s hand on his back guiding him as his mate pushed the trolley down the baby aisle to pick up nappies, wipes and creams, Harry looked up from feeding Leolin to look at all the little pouches of pureed fruits.

“Do you think Braiden will like any of these?” He asked. “They say from four months plus.”

Max looked over from chucking in another pack of nappies and considered it before plucking up a pouch of plum branded weaning food.

“Stage one pouches, blueberry, banana and vanilla, naturally organic ingredients, made especially for first tastes, perfect for weaning. Food for super babies. What do you think, Braiden; do you want to be a super baby?” Max asked the baby chewing on the wooden horse still. He made a grab for the pouch as Max waved it. “There we have it, he wants to be a super baby. We’ll buy one and see how he goes with it. It sounds nice, so if he doesn’t want it, I’ll have it.”

Harry laughed and then spied something that made him grin wider. A selection of different dummies. He got three packs of six right off and threw them into the trolley.

“Do you think that’s a good idea?” Max asked as he picked one up and looked it over.

“Can you handle six babies all crying together? If sucking a dummy helps to calm them down then I see absolutely no harm in giving them one for a few years, it won’t be all the time, just in the evening and maybe at night.”

“Alayla had a dummy.” Max said. “The only one of us to have one; I think Mum was trying to keep her little girl a bit longer, after each baby she babied the new baby more and more. It drove Dad mad, but when she lost...lost the baby, she tried to keep Alayla as a baby, so she had a dummy until she was seven. Dad went ballistic, I remember him telling Mum off every time she gave Laya the dummy, he’d go up to her and take it off her, but then she’d cry and scream and throw a fit until she was sick, she was just so attached to it.”

“No, we’ll take it off of them at three or four.” Harry said firmly. “So they can learn to talk properly, I just can’t handle six babies all crying during the night when we’ve got school. I know you gave up work and I’m grateful for that and to Nasta too, for taking paperwork duties even though he hates it, but I don’t think it’ll be enough, Max.”

“We’ll get through it, love, I swear it. We’re being careful, no unprotected sex until your hormones are calm again, we don’t want to be caught out again, we’ll keep watch over your diet and scent to check for your cycle, but I don’t think we have anything to worry about for a while. The Dracken wants babies, but it’s not cruel. It can feel how many children you have; I don’t think it’ll give you any more.”

Harry smiled as Leolin continued to suckle from his special bottle, it was then that Harry realised that the dummies he had put in the trolley, probably wouldn’t fit in Leolin's mouth. Sighing Harry scanned the shelves until he saw a specially shaped dummy, looking like a sideways number eight or an infinity sign, it was a bit more expensive, but the three, clear dummies were smaller than the rest and had cut outs on either side so it wouldn’t hurt Leolin's nose and they had more of a curve around them, so it would sit on Leolin's face without sticking off either end of his cheeks. He put a pack of them into the trolley and walked around to the other side, following Max as he fed the baby and he blushed when he saw Max calmly and confidently put four bottles of lubricant into the trolley along with two large boxes of condoms. Draco was always the first to complain of any mess.

“Do we have to buy those here?!” He hissed.

“Where else would I buy them from?”

“I don’t know, can’t you owl order them?!”

Max scoffed. “Harry, there’s no need to be embarrassed because we enjoy being with one another, if more people shoved away their embarrassment at the supposed taboo around these products then I’m sure there’d be less sexual diseases and less unwanted pregnancies. Condoms are friends to hormonal teenaged boys and grown men who aren’t trying for a seventh baby just yet.”

Harry glared at Max, not happy with the reminder that Max and Nasta had been fucking for years. He accepted it, he knew why they had done it, he knew they hadn’t even known about him and that he hadn’t even been born when Nasta had lost his virginity, but he didn’t like it damn it!

“Are we done now?” Harry asked as he looked at the list and nodded to himself that every item was checked off.

“I believe so, unless there was anything else that you wanted?”

Harry shook his head and then changed his mind as they walked past a small cabinet with warmed doughnuts. He just stared at the one of them and he wanted it.

“Actually, I want one of those.”

Max looked over and moaned. “I see them every time I come in here, but Nasta would have both our balls if we even stare at them for much longer.”

“One can’t hurt.” Harry said as she strode towards it, Leolin still suckling slowly. “I want that one, the white iced one with the yellow on it.”

“Lemon meringue.” Max read off the card. “Ah hell, if we eat it in the car he’ll never know.”

Max got a bag and scooped two lemon meringue doughnuts into it and then he hurried away to the checkouts, hiding the doughnuts like Harry would have done the bottles of lube that were clearly on show in their trolley.

Harry ignored everyone in the queue as he heard them cooing and tutting at him as he fed Leolin, whose tentative suckling was slowing down further. Max put the heaped trolley full of items onto the conveyor belt and shoved the trolley around to the other side; he needed to use forty shopping bags.

“I hate these stupid shopping bags.” He grumbled as he packed it all into the bags and then back into the trolley.

Harry hummed in agreement as Leolin pulled his mouth from the bottle teat before the milk was finished. Harry sighed and hefted him over a shoulder and patted his lower back, it wasn’t as effective, but he did not want to pat Leolin’s tiny developing wings.
“He still doesn’t finish a bottle.” He sighed as he placed Faerie baby back into his padded cushion and strapped him back in.

“Excuse me, your son dropped this.”

Harry turned and looked to the smiling woman holding out Braiden’s wooden horse.

“Oh, thank you, he loves that thing.” Harry said as he took it off of her, wiped it with a sanitizer gel from his nappy bag, checked it automatically, yet subtly for spells, wards or Portkeys as he spread the gel around it and gave it to a fussy Braiden, who shoved it straight into his mouth and gummed on it.

“He’s adorable, how old are they?”

“This one’s four months and that one is seven days.”

“How adorable.”

Harry accepted the compliment, but he really just wanted the woman to go away as Max continued packing up their hefty shop.

“That’s four hundred and twenty-eight pounds, sir.” The cashier told Max and Harry sucked in a breath at the total.

Max paid by using his Muggle debit card. He had two bank accounts, one with Gringotts and one with a Muggle bank; he transferred money over to his Muggle account when he knew he’d have to buy something with Muggle money so he didn’t have to deal with a wad of cash in hand.

“I wasn’t expecting it to be that much.” Harry said quietly as they went back to the car.

“I was expecting it to be more.” Max answered. “We got a great deal on those three chickens for ten pounds, they’re six pounds each and the nappies were buy one get one free and so was the lube, the wipes were buy one get one half price, the formula milk we use was buy one get two free, which is an amazing deal that I took excessive advantage of and the fruit punnets were three for two mix and match. I was expecting it to be close to six hundred.”

“But this is just a weekly shop.” Harry said as he secured Leolin into the car seat.

“Yeah, it takes a lot of money to feed five grown men and keep six babies in nappies, wipes and formula milk, but such is life. It’s why Nasta and I are working and were working well before any submissives came along. A dominant knows that if he’s going to have a submissive, he’d better have a damn good paying job, one of the usual questions a submissive asks a dominant is where he works, what he does and exactly how much he earns.”

“I didn’t.” Harry said thoughtfully, wondering if he had done anything right in his own meeting.

“You, my gorgeous love, are not a typical submissive and thank fuck for that because if you were I wouldn’t love you half as much as I do. Imagine if you acted, behaved and talked like Amelle?”

Harry pulled a face.

“Exactly! I couldn’t be stuck with Amelle for life, I feel sorry for Caesar, but he’s a grown man and he was a grown man when he pursued her so viciously. I was at that meeting and I was not impressed with her, but when Caesar showed interest in her, well, he’s my baby brother, of course I was going to help him out a bit.”

“What did you do?” Harry asked as he sat up front this time as Leolin was fast asleep after his milk and Braiden was getting drowsy from his busy day.

“I cleared the field for him a bit, I wouldn’t have bothered, but he was so desperate to get her. He always did have a thing for auburn haired women.”

Harry chuckled as he ate his own doughnut and held out the other doughnut for Max to bite as he manoeuvred the car carefully out of the car park. Max’s doughnut was gone in five bites, Harry’s took a little longer, but Harry did make sure to clean Max’s face for him with his tongue as they stopped at a set of traffic lights. Max groaned and Harry spied a bulge in the front of Max’s jeans that he caressed with his hand.

“Stop it!” Max part groaned, part growled, his jeans rising further.
“Is this for me, or for the doughnut?” Harry asked with a grin.

Max pulled him into a vicious kiss which only stopped when the car behind honked its horn angrily. The light had turned green.

Max panted, cursed and put the car into gear and drove off carefully. Harry huffed in breaths and felt his body tightening.

They arrived home and Harry slipped out of the car. Max shut off the engine, strode around the car, pulled him away from the door that he had been about to open to get the babies before he walked him to the front of the car and threw him, carefully, on the bonnet. Max covered him with his own body and pushed an insistent tongue into his mouth, one hand pinning his hands above his head by the windscreen, his other drifted up his shirt to pinch a nipple as Max climbed onto the bonnet with him and pressed their bodies together.

Harry felt how hard Max was and he responded. The air was cold, but the warmth of the bonnet at his back and Max against his front heated his blood until he shook off Max’s hand and wrapped them around his neck, pawing at his back, tugging off his shirt and scratching red marks onto his back and shoulders as they kissed more insistently.

“Maximilius!” Myron’s angry, clipped voice broke through their rushed, sexual frenzy and they looked to see the family standing at the front door, obviously having heard the car come back and they had come out to help unload the shopping bags.

Richard and Alexander were laughing uproariously. Ashleigh looked pleased as she giggled with Alayla and Talia, but it was the lust in the three mates who were standing in the group that made Harry swallow; he wondered what he and Max must look like spread on a car bonnet, kissing and petting each other passionately and possessively to put that look on their faces.

Max dropped his head beside his face and groaned in repressed sexual frustration and he gave his ear a lingering lick before he slithered off of the car and helped Harry slide down onto his feet as well.

“You couldn’t have given us even five minutes, Dad!” He whined.

“Do you think that’s acceptable behaviour, not only in front of your children, but in a public place as well?” Myron demanded.

“Leave off of him, Myron.” Richard said softly. “Max is still a kid at heart; don’t you remember what we were like? I remember an incident with a rubber dinghy, out on the ocean, in full view of a public beach that was packed with families, including our own, complete with three year old Max and year old Caesar. We conceived Julinda in that dinghy.”
Myron blushed so brightly that Harry wondered if there was enough blood left in the rest of his body. Ashleigh laughed so much she had to support herself on the doorframe.

“I remember that. That was an amazing day, we took the boys to the beach for the first time, Max was so happy. I was so sure that all three of us wouldn’t fit in that little rubber raft.” She gasped through her tears of laughter. “You boys had to prove me wrong, I thought that it was going to tip and dump us into the ocean with every thrust.”

“Mum, please!” Caesar snapped as he covered his ears, his face screwed up in horror, as his sisters shrieked and covered their own ears.

Max laughed so hard tears streamed down his face. “You never told us that story before, Dad!” He called out cheekily.

Alexander shook his head. “It’s a grey day when you look up to check on your son and his mates in a little rubber boat on the sea and all you see is a white bottom mooning back at you.”

Harry laughed so hard he couldn’t breathe and he needed Nasta’s hand on his back to get him to take in some much needed air. The look on Nasta’s face was utter amusement, even as he helped Harry support himself.

“Let’s get the bags in before they spoil.” He said, trying to calm down the laughter.

Everyone grabbed a fistful of bags as Harry and Kimberly got out Leolin and Braiden and carried them into the house to join their brothers and sister.

Harry placed a heavily sleeping Leolin onto the soft, cushioned little bean bag that they had bought for him so that he could sleep on his back, but without the pressure to his little wings, but he took Braiden from Kimberly and brushed the thick black hair he was growing out of his face.

“Four months old and already it looks like he’ll need a haircut.” He said as he watched the others putting away all the food, Max keeping one bag by his legs. Harry knew that it had the lube and condoms in it, but the top showed toothbrushes, toothpaste and two boxes of three bars of soap. Max had packed the bag cleverly.

“Right, I’ll be back in a bit.” Max said as he winked to Harry and took the one bag upstairs.
Harry staved off the blush and glared at Max all the way out of the kitchen. Max didn’t come back for an hour and when he did come back, he was covered in blood and wrestling a skinned lump of meat towards Harry.

He presented it to him with a happy, proud grin at his accomplishment, but Harry didn’t see it. Instinct took over at the scent of fresh meat and warm blood and his wings, fangs and claws pulled out of his body and he fell onto the skinned bear and tore into it like an animal, making feral noises and he growled and hissed furiously when anyone approached his meat.

“Any particular reason that you decided to bring a bear home?” Myron asked as he watched Harry tear a chunk of warm, bloody meat from a bone with his teeth before swallowing it whole. “I thought we were over this when you and Caesar had left home.”

“Harry told me in the supermarket that he was craving raw meat again and I asked if I could hunt for him and he agreed.”

“I never understood why you had to wrestle with bears.” Ashleigh said. “I remember when your Fathers took you hunting for the first time; they came back looking paler than ghosts.”

“Why?” Aneirin asked. “Nasta was a natural, took down a stallion in just three hits.” He said proudly.

“Max decided that he wanted a bear and nothing else would do.” Myron said, his face white as he remembered. “I’ve never been so frightened for Max in my life.”

“I thought my heart would stop.” Richard said. “We had pointed out a stallion grazing, but he had picked up the scent of a male bear and he just had to show off.”

“It took him eight hits before he could even get the bear off of its feet, just the one to end its life.” Myron said, a hint of pride in his voice, but he was frowning with past worry and he was still pale.

“Since then it’s always been bears.” Richard sighed. “Though poor Caesar was practically dumped in front of his first prey after Max’s stunt.”

“It wasn’t a stunt!” Max denied. “The bear smelt so delicious, so much better than that stringy horse.”
Richard laughed wheezily, but the crunching of bone drowned it out when Harry slid his fangs over a rib to get the meat off of it, cracking it twice with the force of his jaws. All attention went back to Harry then, whose face, hands and arms were smeared with blood as he picked apart the most tender and juicy bits of meat, leaving what he didn’t want. When he was finished eating his fill, he lay back and groaned, allowing his mates to eat what was left as he curled into a ball and just lay on the floor with his belly pleasantly full.

Harry was carried to the settee and laid on it, five minutes later he had crawled back off of it to sprawl on the rug in front of the fire where he fell deeply asleep with the scent of his mates, his children and his family around him all wrapped up in the scent of the wood burning fire.

Last Time

Harry was carried to the settee and laid on it, five minutes later he had crawled back off of it to sprawl on the rug in front of the fire where he fell deeply asleep with the scent of his mates, his children and his family around him all wrapped up in the scent of the wood burning fire.

Chapter Fifty-Six – Bitterness

Harry woke up in bed with a heavy someone pinned to his back. He groaned lightly and wiggled out from under Draco, who grunted in his sleep, which was answered by a soft growl from Nasta, who was laying half out of the bed.

Harry rolled his eyes and tucked Nasta’s leg back in before scooping up his children one by one and transferring them to the en suite bathroom. He shut the door, not bothering to lock it; he didn’t want to keep his mates out if they woke up after all, he just wanted to keep the noise in.

He did put up silencing charms as he stripped and stepped into the shower, quickly washing his body and hair before stepping out and setting up the baby bath as he dried off, he dressed himself before scooping up the first baby to be bathed. Calix went first, because he loved the bath and didn’t so much as whimper as he had his head and face quickly washed before he was dunked in and cleaned.

Harry dried his baby off, nuzzling and kissing that soft, soft skin, dressing Calix in a nappy, a standard, plain white bodysuit, a little, pale blue tee-shirt overlaid with a cardigan and thick trousers, finishing off with socks, scratch mitts, a matching hat and a bright blue dummy.

Harry tipped out the water and refilled the bath and Leolin was next, as even though he wailed as he touched the water, he didn’t cry fully and his little wails weren’t loud enough to wake his siblings, Harry took great care with his son’s wings, running a wet cotton wool ball around them so very gently.

Harry was halfway through bathing the last baby, Braiden, who screamed until his little face went bright red and his little fists were clenched tight when the bathroom door opened and a panicked Draco peeked in. He let out a visible sigh of relief when he saw Harry struggling with the thrashing baby, before slipping to his knees to help finish off.

The cries that had escaped the bathroom when the door had been opened had roused the others, who trickled in to take care of business and have their own morning showers before taking a baby or two off his hands as he and Draco dried Braiden, dressed him and shoved a dummy into his mouth to suck on to stop him from screaming the house down.

There was a heated debate going on when he stepped into the kitchen, between Max and Myron and Harry had an inclination over what it was when Myron turned to glare at him. The dummies.

Braiden was in his arms dozing, sucking slowly on his light pink dummy as Nasta popped Farren’s green dummy out to feed him his bottle.

“They’re babies, Dad.” Max said softly as the silence stretched. “Braiden’s just five months old and the quintuplets are not even two weeks old yet. A dummy for a year or two isn’t going to harm them or their development.”

Myron’s burning black eyes swung back to Max and he breathed deeply and harshly for a few minutes before he sat down heavily and it took him a minute or so to relax his entire body.

“You’re right. It’s none of my business, I’m their grandfather, not their father. But I still think it’s a terrible idea, if they get attached to them and won’t let them go, what then?”

“I’ll tell them that the other babies need them.” Harry answered.

“And if you don’t have any other babies?” Myron demanded of him.

“They don’t have to be siblings, I’ll tell them the babies in the hospital need them more and that they need to be big boys and be a big girl and hand them over. Failing that I’ll take them and bin them all when they’re asleep.”

Richard snorted and coughed a bit, then he started choking, which broke Myron out of his mood as he rushed to help his mate and Husband, Ashleigh already rubbing circles on his back as Myron tipped the potion down Richard’s throat. It was upsetting to watch, but they had been living with it for over twenty years, it was common place for them now.

Nasta handed out bottles and Harry took the bottle for Braiden, popped out the pink dummy and replaced it with the bottle teat, Braiden immediately pouted his mouth around the bulb of the bottle and sucked strongly.

“Who’s such a good boy?” Harry cooed, nuzzling his suckling baby.

A prickling on his neck made him look up, his eyes wide and his nostrils flared as he sniffed.
Something was wrong. He looked around quickly, his wings vibrating hard against his spine…he let out a ferocious snarl as he saw Blaise passing Leolin over to Talia, so she could feed him while Blaise fed Tegan, who already had a bottle at an awkward angle in her mouth.

“Harry?”

Harry pressed Braiden to the nearest person to him, Richard, who fumbled the bottle to keep it in Braiden’s mouth as Harry stormed to Blaise and Talia, growling furiously, releasing fear inducing pheromones as he went.

Myron grabbed Talia and pulled her behind him, blocking Harry from his human daughter, but Harry didn’t want the woman, he wanted his little Faerie baby. He snatched the baby from Blaise with a snarl, snatching the bottle that was handed over meekly, before he huddled his shoulders down as he sat down and fed Leolin, darting suspicious glances around him as he fed his youngest baby as if expecting someone to sneak up on him and rob the baby from his arms.

Nasta straddled the chair he was on, worming his way behind him, which was very difficult even though Harry was perched on the very end, before pulling him back against him and whispering soothingly, murmuring little noises to calm him down and when Harry burped Leolin delicately he was calm and rational again, but not very apologetic. He had told them to not give away Leolin. His baby still smelt strange to his Dracken and because of that, he wouldn’t have a non-mate touch him.

“You’re going back to Hogwarts soon, have you thought about how you’re going to cope?” Aneirin asked.

“Take it one day at a time.” Harry answered. “It’s all we can do.”

“You are still too stubborn to ask for help.” Aneirin shook his head. “I’ve taken a holiday from work for the first time in forty years, I would like to help you if I can, even if I come to your rooms for a few hours a day just to give Max and Nasta a hand with the six of them or so they can get their heads down for an hour after the nightly feeds.”

Harry looked at the man shocked. “You’d do that?”

“Of course, it’s already done; it’s up to you to decide how I spend my time off, with my family and grandchildren, or moping around regretting taking the time off in the first place.”

“But…but you’re their granddad, you shouldn’t be doing the hard stuff.”
“Oh please, handling Sanex as a toddler was hard work, then Nasta wasn’t much different, a thousand questions a day that boy asked. What’s that? What’s that? What’s that? What does that do? What’s that for? Why? Why? Why? Why? It’s all I got off of him for the first five years of his life, I regretted teaching him to talk in the first place.”

“Thanks for that.” Nasta said dryly as he nuzzled Harry’s thick black hair.

“You know I’m only joking, Nas. I answered all of your questions and then some; I even encouraged you to learn languages.”

“You told me to shut up, stop asking so many questions and that if I wanted to know what the people around me were saying then to learn their language myself. So I did.”

Richard started laughing and Myron let out a smirk. Aneirin was completely unfazed.

“You learnt them didn’t you?”

“Of course.”

“You loved learning them.”

“Yes.”

“So it all turned out fine in the end.”

Harry chuckled and accepted Braiden back off of Richard, snuggling his oldest and youngest together. Braiden was staring at Leolin through his indigo eyes, a perfect match to his Father’s.

“Braiden love, this is your baby brother Leolin.” Harry told him softly, not expecting his five month old to understand, but doing it all the same.

Braiden soon lost interest in the sleeping baby and turned his attention to his hands, which he found much more entertaining as he flexed his fingers and gummed on them, drooling all over his hands, arms and long sleeved shirt. Braiden stopped all movement and Harry looked at him curiously before Braiden let out a quick, sudden sneeze that completely covered his top.

“Oh Braiden! I’m going to get him cleaned up.” Harry said with a sigh as he stood up and went upstairs.

He made a little bed for Leolin to lie in, keeping his back from pressing too hard against the bed and he wiped Braiden’s nose thoroughly before he set himself to changing Braiden’s shirt and cleaning up the snot and drool. He changed the wet nappy while he was at it and wondered if it would have just been quicker and easier to put Braiden back in the bath, but then he remembered the headache inducing screams from that morning and he thought better of it.

Harry spun around, completely surprised and shocked, to see Amelle standing in the bedroom doorway, her head bent off to the side looking at the carpet, her arms wrapped around Eleonora, who was coming up to six months old. Harry was about to retort angrily, but he stopped, she hadn’t actually said that sentence maliciously, just factually. It was almost like she was trying to be bland so that he wouldn’t rise up in anger automatically.

“Two.” Harry answered softly, wondering what was going on and where Amelle had found her new attitude. “Two of them weren’t breathing after the cords were cut, but I could have so easily lost all of them.”

Amelle nodded, acting strangely. Harry wondered if Caesar had actually gone ahead and drugged her, but he shook his head of those thoughts. Caesar would never treat his Wife so appallingly as to drug her, no matter what she had done.

“Four months is a bit too soon for them to come, but they…they’re doing fine aren’t they?”

Harry lowered his eyebrows and slowly made his way to the bed to pick up Leolin. “Yes.”

“Even…even the one…the one who has Faerie blood?”

“Leolin’s doing fine all things considered.”
Amelle nodded jerkily and wandered in to sit on Max’s bed, the bearskin blanket that he liked showing off was still so very, very soft even after sixteen years.

“I…I lost my first child.” Amelle told him softly, her voice almost a whisper.

Harry felt a pang of sympathy for Amelle then, the first he had ever felt for the woman. He laid Braiden in his pop up travel cot, put Leolin in the bedside bassinet and sat as close to Amelle as he could stand. If she wanted to talk, then he’d listen, but the first bad word against him, his babies or his mates and he was gone.

“A little boy.” She told him, her voice hardly above a breath. “My first mate tried to protect us both.”

Amelle fell silent again, playing with the pink shawl around Eleonora.

“I didn’t know you had a mate before Caesar.” Harry said after the pause became lengthy.

Amelle nodded jerkily again. “Cordell. He was a tall and handsome African-American, he lived close by me, only a state or so away from me and my family and he was so fit and strong. He was a bit too old for my tastes at twenty-three, but he paid so much attention to me, he wooed me thoroughly, he even took me away from my home for a romantic dinner in a fancy, expensive restaurant to prove he had enough money to not only support me, but to keep me in luxury. We had to take the chaperone, but I forgot he was even there after I started talking to Cordell.”

Amelle fell silent again and Harry wondered what the hell had brought this on.

“I held out as long as I could. I wanted to make Cordell fight for me and he did. He fought so viciously that he got jealous when I spent any amount of time with the other dominants. My meeting lasted for a month, that’s as long as I could hold out against him. I wanted him so badly. I got pregnant immediately and he was so proud and boastful. When we found out that I didn’t need a grounding mate, oh that night was so special as he knew that he had been my first and he would be my only.”

Harry made a face, but fought to control it. He did not want to hear about Amelle having sex with her previous dominant, or her current one for that matter.
“He was always by my side, he came to every scan and when we found out that we were having a boy, he was just so happy. He had wanted a boy so badly and I felt so happy to give him what he wanted the most. I was six months pregnant when…when it happened.”

“What happened?” Harry asked as softly as he could, insanely curious.

“The poachers had found out where we lived.”

Harry’s heart clenched tightly as he realised where this story was going. He swallowed heavily and his heart started to thud faster in his chest.

“They came in the middle of the night, sixteen of them. I was only a month from giving birth, I was just getting my nesting instincts and I was gathering a cache of materials to build my nest with when they came. Cordell heard them first and he stood in front of me, his gorgeous ebony wings flared, his claws and fangs displayed as they burst through the door. There were just too many of them. I thought at first that everything would be fine, but I was a naïve child. Cordell killed two of them right away, one with a swipe of his left hand claws, the other with the right, but they kept coming, he kept fighting and then suddenly he had been moved away from me and I was forced to defend myself and my unborn child. I killed three before they pinned me down. I screamed for my mate as they dragged me from the bed that I had felt so safe in moments before they had arrived. Cordell was insane with fear and rage as he tried to cut his way to me. I was dragged further from him, towards the door and I knew then that I was their true target, that they wanted to take me away and harvest me. I lashed out and they kicked back. My stomach, they purposefully aimed for my stomach. My waters broke and the blood came not too long after. Cordell was incensed as he watched them kick me like a dog, he was forced to watch as I started to miscarry our precious baby boy.”

Amelle’s voice trailed off and Harry swallowed around the lump in his throat. How could she be so calm in telling this story? How could she sit there beside him and tell this horrific tale without a single emotion in her bland voice?

“My body expelled the baby as they caught Cordell between four of them. He still fought and struggled, but there were too many of them. They taunted me with my baby and I snapped. I launched for the one and raked my claws across his face, he dropped my baby and I caught him, cradling him close. He was a beautiful little boy, cocoa coloured skin, thick black hair and a tiny, perfect little face; he would have been just as handsome as his Father. I was screaming, Cordell was struggling and fighting…they shoved a spike through his throat. I watched him choke on his own blood, struggling to breathe even as he still tried to reach me and our son. He bled out on the floor, leaving me alone with our dead son to fend off six poachers. I felt sick, I was in shock, my perfect son had been kicked out of me and my dominant had been murdered in front of me, I was frozen…I just couldn’t move. Thankfully my family had felt my distress calls and they had come for me. My Father burst through the door just as the poachers were surrounding me and he was like a god send. My older brothers followed and between the four of them, they killed the remaining six poachers and... got me to a Healer, but there was nothing they could do for Cordell or my baby, they were already dead. I went through such a deep depression that my Mother couldn’t stand to be near me. It hurt her and her Dracken to see me so hurt and sad, but my Father never left me alone. He or one of my brothers were always there, I think they thought that I was going to kill myself. I thought about it, oh I thought about joining Cordell and our baby so many times, I even went to do it a few times, but I never did. I was pushed through so many hours of therapy. For years I kept going back to the therapists for help, eight years of constant therapy and I’m only now feeling better. I should have stayed with the therapy for longer, but I was fed up of repeating the exact details of what had happened that night. The Counsel elders had their own therapist check me over and she decided that I was mentally and physically able to mate again and I hated her. I hated her so much for saying that I was fine when I clearly wasn’t because I was immediately put into another mate meeting and I was forced to pick another mate that I didn’t even want.”

Harry was beginning to understand why Amelle had such a problem with Caesar and his family. It wasn’t him, or them or even her; it had been the Counsel’s fault. Them and the therapist who had declared that Amelle was ready for another mate when she obviously hadn’t been.

“I held out that meeting for months. I didn’t need to rush, I felt like I had all the time in the world. I didn’t want any of them; I banished half of them within the first week. Some of them killed one another and I didn’t care. I hoped that they all killed one another until none of them were left. I couldn’t stop thinking about Cordell and our son, buried together in a grave that I had spent a fortune on and it just wasn’t enough. I would have spent every Knut I had on their coffins and graves, but my parents curbed me, I hated them for that.”

“What…what made you choose Caesar?” Harry asked.

Amelle turned to him, showing her slate grey eyes filled with unshed tears. Her voice may have been emotionless, but her eyes couldn’t hide the pain and the sadness that she felt over the memories.

Amelle shrugged. “He fought as hard as Cordell did for me the first time around. The Maddisons’ didn’t make it to the meeting the first time I was looking for a mate, a family dilemma or something, but they were there in force when I was forced to take another mate, all of their Uncles and their Aunt and the two youngest, Max and Caesar. Max was thirty already, I was only twenty-five and thirty sounded so old. But he was so tall and strong and handsome.”

Harry recoiled at that. “You wanted Max?!” He hissed.

“He was the biggest, the strongest, the most physically appealing dominant there. I wanted a stronger mate than Cordell, not many filled that requirement, but Max did. I watched him fool about with his Uncles; they bet him that he couldn’t lift more than his body weight and he turned around, laid on his back and picked up the thick, heavy, solid oak dining table. He could bench press a table! I wanted
Harry felt like he couldn’t breathe, it felt like his heart had stopped.

“He, of course, didn’t want me. I thought that it was something I had said or done, or thought that maybe he was one of those dominants who would only accept a virgin submissive, but then I found out that his younger brother wanted me for himself so Max had bowed himself out of the running. I was so angry.”

“Why did you chose Caesar if you were so angry with him?” Harry asked, trying to keep the demand from his voice, he liked Caesar.

“He was the second most suitable, he wasn’t the strongest or the biggest, but at twenty-eight he was the right age for me, the only other big and strong dominants were Max’s Uncles, who were all over fifty! I thought that even if Caesar wasn’t big and strong, that his family were and that they’d be able to protect me.”

“You chose Caesar just for his family?!” Harry hissed outraged.

“You wouldn’t understand.” Amelle sighed sadly. “To lose a mate and a child together, my Dracken was so angry, with Cordell for not protecting us, with my family for not coming sooner after I let out the distress calls, with the Counsel for forcing me to pick another mate. I was so angry all the time and nothing helped. Nothing. I wasn’t in that young state of mind where a mate meant children. I wanted a mate that could protect me and a large, strong family around me, so when Max bowed out, I chose Caesar. If for some reason they had both bowed out I would have chosen their youngest Uncle, Nicodemus. I was adamant that I would be a part of their family for the protection they offered. Only it backfired on me, the Maddisons’ aren’t like normal Dracken families, who rally around the submissives and protect them no matter what; they hate me and many other submissives in their family and they would gladly leave us to die if they could. I saw that after the fights that you and I had. It was you that they rallied around, not me, even though I’ve been a part of their family for longer than you have, it doesn’t matter, because they actually like you, so they protect you.”

“To be honest though, I’m not a complete bitch.” Harry pointed out.

Amelle smiled, just a little flick up of the lips. “I don’t mean to be. I don’t know how you force your Dracken away, how you just ignore your instincts so easily when it’s so difficult for me to even think straight when my Dracken comes to the forefront.”
“I already lose myself when I’m on a heat period without doing it when I’m not on heat. My Dracken will not force me to do things that I don’t want to do. I won’t allow it.”

“But how? I’ve tried, Caesar has told me to try harder, but I just can’t do it.”

“Pass me Nora.” Harry said suddenly and watched as Amelle pulled the baby higher up her shoulder and turned to shield her. “See? You don’t think before you react, Amelle. Just stop and think, what do you think I’ll do to her? Do you honestly think that anyone in this family will hurt her or let anything, anything at all happen to her? The family dislike you because you act like all the other pampered, spoilt submissives. You’re rude, bitchy, arrogant and you won’t let them get to know their own grandchildren, of course they aren’t going to like that. The key to getting them to like you and protect you is in your arms, let them hold and play with Eleonora and let them see the real you, under all the Dracken instincts and the fear of losing her like you did your son. I assume the perpetrator who sold you out was caught?”

Amelle nodded. “My supposed best friend in school. I foolishly told her what I was and I boasted about how a hundred men would be falling at my feet. She told her Father, who informed the Dracken poachers of where Cordell and I lived together.”

“She’s dead isn’t she? Her Father is dead, the poachers are all dead and no one knows your secret. You’re safe here with us. We aren’t going to sell you out because we’re Drackens too, we’d be selling out ourselves too. They may not like you, but they wouldn’t see you dead, Amelle, because it would kill Caesar. He loves you so much and you just don’t seem to care. He’s trying his hardest and he loves you and Nora, but he also loves his family. You have put him in such an awkward, horrible position and he’s miserable. You’ve been mated for two years now; surely there must be some feelings between you other than the ones created with Eleonora.”

“I…I suppose there are. I wouldn’t want anything to happen to him, especially not what happened to Cordell. But it’s so hard for me to forget the past, even with the therapy I’ve had I wake up sometimes and expect to see Cordell in bed with me and not Caesar; I keep changing Eleonora and expecting to see male genitals, not female and I get confused when I unwrap her and she’s this pale, pink baby, not my perfect cocoa baby that I had birthed. But I’m slowly getting more used to the changes and the confusion over my two babies is happening less and less now that Nora is getting older.”

“That’s good, that means you are making progress and if you can show that progress then you’d get the support you need from the family.”

Harry went and picked up Braiden. He licked his lips and took a chance. He pressed his son into Amelle’s arms and watched as she held him, looked at him. She blinked her slate blue-grey eyes and took several deep breaths before handing him Eleonora.
Harry made sure he held her supportively and safely as Amelle watched him critically. He stroked a chubby cheek and brushed auburn hair from chocolate coloured eyes.

“She’s going to be a stunner when she’s older.” He praised and that made Amelle smile.

“I didn’t mean what I said about Braiden. He’s not ugly or slow. I was just jealous that everyone was paying more attention to him than to Nora.”

“Only because you wouldn’t let anyone see her. It’s hard to tell what a baby looks like through a shawl.” Harry teased lightly.

Amelle let out that tinkling laugh. “I suppose. Let’s go back down before they realise that I’m missing and they think I’m descaling you.”

“They’d be more worried that I’m shredding you. How is your leg?”

“Better now that Max actually agreed to give Caesar the scar reducer.”

“Max can’t resist his baby brother’s begs.”

“That’s true. Max is a sucker for his siblings.”

Harry grinned. “That he is, I think it’s cute.”

Amelle went on ahead with Braiden, while Harry scooped Leolin up out of the bassinet and showed him to Nora.

“This is your baby cousin Nora, Leolin.”

“Ooh!” She cooed, poking at Leolin’s face with rough fingers, Harry caught her hand and sat her up higher on his shoulder so she couldn’t poke Leolin.
Harry was only just behind Amelle, so he heard the screams as she walked into the kitchen with Braiden.

“What are you doing with my son?!” Blaise roared.

“You shut your mouth.” Harry said as he walked in carrying Leolin and Eleonora. That stopped all of them short.

“You seem to have mixed up children.” Alexander pointed out.

Harry and Amelle looked at one another, Harry a bit put out because he had to look up to see Amelle, who stood an inch or so higher than he did.

“No. No we haven’t. We’re doing trust exercises.”

“Trust exercises?” Max asked as if he couldn’t comprehend what they were saying.

“Yes. I’m trusting Amelle with Braiden and she’s trusting me with Eleonora. We’re bonding.”

“Bonding?” Draco questioned.

“Must you repeat the last thing I say?” Harry frowned. “Yes. We’re bonding, is that such a bad thing?”

“No. No it’s brilliant!” Caesar exclaimed with tears shimmering in his chocolate eyes. He looked so happy that Harry had to smile softly at him.

Amelle sat down with Braiden, whose indigo eyes flickered to everything within eyesight. Harry sat down with Leo and Nora and he cuddled them both being watched by the family as if the entire world had suddenly turned upside down and the sky was green and the grass was now blue.

Harry soothed Amelle all throughout the exercise as his mates surrounded him; some of them touching Eleonora and Harry patted and squeezed Amelle’s hand to calm her. He passed Leolin to Nasta, who passed him Tegan, the only two girls of five boys.
“You need to have another girl.” He teased Amelle. “Or these two are going to be outnumbered for life.”

“Why don’t you have another girl?” She replied back as she let Braiden play with her slender fingers.

“I already have six kids! I’m not planning on making it seven for a very long time. I’m sure Caesar won’t say no to another baby.”

Amelle looked at Caesar through a fall of her hair and he almost stumbled over himself answering.

“Of course I wouldn’t mind! I’d love to have a second child with you.”

“You would? You never said before.” Amelle said quietly.

“I didn’t want to upset you by bringing it up.” Caesar admitted softly.

“I think we had best leave.” Harry elbowed his gawking mates to get them moving and swapped Eleonora for Braiden and he left the kitchen to go to the living room to give the two some privacy. He had no idea what had happened to Amelle, if she had knocked her head, if she had fallen and had some sense bashed into her brain, but he hoped that whatever it was that it wasn’t a temporary thing and that her new attitude didn’t wear off. She was a lot more tolerable when she was calm and rational and not trying to always attack him.

Harry and his mates had decided to go home, to Max’s, for the last few days before they left for Hogwarts. Ashleigh had giggled and winked at them, thinking that they meant privacy for some ‘alone time’ and she had even offered to look after all six babies for them, but what she didn’t know was they had had sex twice in Max’s childhood bedroom since the birth of their quintuplets.

Harry grinned goofily as he thought back to those times and Nasta scowled at him, a light pink covering his cheeks, partially hidden by the stubble that was growing back in.
“No need to ask what you’re thinking about.” Max grinned roguishly, giving him a naughty wink.

Harry laughed. “I’m thinking that sex will be a lot different now that I’m not going to be rubbing my bare back against a real bear skin.”

“I can go and get it for you if you want it.” Max said mildly.

“It hasn’t come off your bed in sixteen years.” Harry replied.

Max shrugged. “Mum wanted it on there to remind her of me when I was off being ‘a grown-up’ in my own house. She hated it when I left, so I left my room as it was, I think with the addition of Grandchildren floating around, she’s forgotten all about it.”

Harry chuckled. “It’s fine for now, but I want all of your first kill skins to decorate our bed when we finally upgrade from this house. Where is your first skin?” Harry asked Nasta.

“At my Grandparents house.” He answered as he handed him a cup of honey tea. Harry made an excited noise and gulped it.

“What was your first kill?” Harry asked.

Max laughed happily.

“I killed a buck.” Blaise boasted.

“What was your first kill, Draco?”

The blond blushed and turned away from them.
“Draco?” Harry questioned curiously.

“Three rabbits.” He said stiffly. “I didn’t grow up with Drackens or know what I was, so I didn’t keep the skins for you.”

“That’s alright.” Harry said softly, embracing Draco from behind and worming his head under Draco’s arm to kiss a smooth cheek.

“Why rabbits?” Max asked curiously, ignoring the glare that Harry sent him. “Usually the Dracken wants the biggest pray it can find.”

“I lived in a Wiltshire mansion on grass plains, there are no forests or limitless wilderness. A rabbit was the biggest prey I could find unless I ate my Father’s prized albino peacocks…or the house elves.” He replied defensively.

“If you want you can hunt for dinner and we can keep that animal to skin to put with the rest.” Harry offered.

“You want me to hunt for dinner?”

“If you don’t mind that is.”

“Of course I don’t mind, I’d love to.” Draco smiled then and Harry smiled before pecking Draco’s mouth, his head was seized and he was kissed thoroughly.

“So, can we enjoy one another tonight? Or do you think I’m ‘unfit enough to perform’” He said scathingly, quoting the Healer who had examined his stomach and said that he was unfit to be walking, lifting or going to the bathroom by himself, he had gotten into a fighting match with the Healer, proving that he could walk and lift things, but the Healer had ignored him and had written him off as unfit. Harry was still livid about it.

Max and Nasta looked at one another, despite having sex twice since the birth; it had stopped a few days ago, as soon as that Healer had said that he was ‘unfit to perform simple tasks’ all logic had gone out of the window.
“I don’t think it’s a good idea.” Max finally answered.

“Fuck you!” Harry spat.

Max stepped forward and gripped his hair, bending his neck backwards. Harry hadn’t even tried to run. He was learning. He just stood there, not saying anything, not moving, thinking up ways in which he could kill Max without leaving a body behind.

“Say sorry.” Max said gently, loosening his fist.

“Bitch.” Harry answered and grimaced as that hand clenched in his hair again.

“Don’t you think that was childish, Harry?” Nasta coaxed.

“Do you think I care, Nasta?” Harry growled back.

“Say sorry!” Max almost demanded, angling his neck back more. Harry gritted his teeth together, locking his jaw.

Harry stayed silent and felt Max’s hand start tugging on his hair, if Max pulled anymore then he would be losing a clump of hair.

“Ease off, Max.” Nasta coaxed, patting the hand clenched in his hair. “Say sorry to Max, Harry.”

Harry pulled a face and growled.

“Harry!” Nasta put the order into his voice, not full force, but enough to make Harry hesitate and he fought back his instincts that wanted him to clutch both of their legs and beg for forgiveness.

He tore his own head away from Max’s loosened hand, leaving more than a few strands in Max’s closed fist, he snarled at Max before backing out of the room. Max growled and went to follow him, but Nasta wrapped an arm around his waist.
Harry made it upstairs, banging and stomping like a spoilt child, but he didn’t care. He was being treated like a child; he’d damn well act like one! How dare they deny him sex again? Like his opinion or wants didn’t even matter!

He was too damned angry to think and he knew the skirt idea wouldn’t work a second time, not that he had the skirt anymore since Max had burnt it. The bastard!

He claws came through his nail beds and his fangs tore free from his gums. His wings sprang from his back so violently that he felt a warm trickle of blood over his back.

His Dracken urged him to go and eliminate the one who had made him angry, but he had enough of himself to know he didn’t want to kill Max, just maim him a little. He chuckled at that and it slipped roughly from his throat.

He peeked in on his sleeping children and cooed and purred over them. Such sweet, beautiful babes. He had the most perfect babies; no child was more perfect, more sweet, more cute, more adorable. He had the smartest, most beautiful children in the entire world and no other baby compared to his six. He’d cut up anyone who said otherwise!

Stretching his wings out, as he stretched his body, Harry climbed onto the bed and curled up on his arms and legs, lying on his stomach on his curled up limbs, folding his wings into his sides. He rubbed his face on the duvet and yawned. He’d just sleep with his children for a bit, he’d hear them if they woke up and he’d hear anyone who came into the room.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Harry woke up slowly, gradually and he shook his head to clear it. He almost put his own eye out when he rubbed them with his hands, which had claws attached to them.

He stretched and tucked in all of his Dracken attributes and yawned and stretched again. All of the babies were sleeping still, but someone had been in to tend to them, an empty bottle was on the bedside table. They must have been incredibly quiet not to wake him up and then his mind kick started and he frowned as he realised that there was a silencing bubble around him. That made him angry again.

“Twatting bastards.” He hissed.

He kissed each baby carefully, being mindful of his fangs and claws before heading down the stairs to the smell of cooking.

Max wouldn’t even look at him as the other three greeted him and Harry glared at his back, hoping the heat of his glare peeled the skin from his back.

“Have you calmed down now?”
“Yes.” Harry answered his top dominant softly.

“Do you have anything you want to say to Max?” Nasta encouraged.

Harry sat down and said nothing. Max snorted from the cooker and stirred something he was making. Harry was surprised when ten minutes later a plate was shoved viciously under his nose, he hadn’t expected anything.

He found out why he had been given a plate after only one forkful. He choked on his mouthful and ran to the sink to get a drink of water. It tasted like Max had used the entire contents of his spice cupboard in the chilli he had made.

“Harry?” Nasta questioned confusedly. Max looked smug as he ate his own food easily.

“You know I don’t like spicy food!” Harry yelled at him.

Nasta took up Harry’s fork and tasted the chilli on his plate, then his own.

“They’re the same, Harry.” He said.

Harry walked around Nasta angrily, took his fork and ate from his plate and shuddered, his eyes streaming.

“You have to eat something.” Blaise fretted.

“Apparently I don’t.” Harry spat. “But that’s okay, isn’t it? It’s not as if I’m not already used to always going hungry.” Was his parting shot as he left the kitchen.

“See what you’ve done!” Draco yelled at Max, who looked a bit guilty as Harry left the kitchen without eating.
“It’s a double edged sword.” Blaise said quietly as he tried a small forkful of his own food and pulled a face. “You seem to have forgotten that I can’t eat spicy food either as it makes me feel sick, so it looks like both Harry and I are going without dinner.”

Blaise pushed his plate away, got to his feet and he followed Harry out of the kitchen and up the stairs. He found him crying in the main bedroom. The huge, wracking sobs widened his eyes; he didn’t think that Harry had been this upset. He had expected him to be more angry than upset.

He climbed onto the bed; passing through Nasta’s silencing bubble and he wrapped Harry up in his arms, kissing that upturned face as Harry looked up at him to see who had joined him.

“Why…?”

“I don’t like spicy food either, so Max really screwed up that revenge plan.” Blaise replied.

Harry smiled depreciatingly. “All I wanted was some love.”

Blaise nosed around his ear and pressed an open mouthed kiss behind it.

“I don’t agree with the Healer. I’m not as sexually experienced as Max or Nasta, but I wouldn’t say no to sinking into your luscious body.” He breathed hotly into that tiny ear.

“You don’t believe the Healer?” Harry asked tremulously.

“Of course not. He said you were unable to walk or lift anything. I have watched you walk, run, jump and carry two of our children at a time. The Healer was wrong about that because he doesn’t understand your Dracken nature, so why would he be right about you not being ready for sex? As long as you tell me if I hurt you or if it’s too uncomfortable, I would gladly make love to you all night, Prezioso. All you had to do was ask me.”

Harry was embarrassed to realise that he had tears in his eyes and he threw himself around Blaise’s body and kissed those sensual lips with all the passion that he could muster.

“Hold on.” Blaise whispered as he pushed Harry onto the bed, taking out his wand and waving it.
Harry lowered his eyebrows and looked curiously at Blaise, who grinned evilly.

“A very handy ward that I found a while back. Anyone who crosses over it will be immobilised. So the other three idiots will be forced to stand there and watch as I completely and utterly ravish you and they won’t be able to do a thing about it…or interrupt us.” Blaise finished with a hot whisper and he immediately kissed Harry’s mouth, adding a tongue as Harry responded readily to him.

“We fed them only half an hour before you came down, they should be good for an hour and a half at least.”

Harry grinned and he went straight back to kissing Blaise’s mouth, tangling their tongues together as other body parts rubbed and slid against one another.

“I’ve wanted this for what seems like years.” Blaise panted. “For it to be just me and you, like it used to be, with none of the others. I’ve come to love them so much but for a while I’ve just wanted you for myself, just once, Bello. Just once.”

“Why didn’t you say?” Harry asked as his shirt was pulled over his head. “I would have jumped on you.”

“For one, when I started feeling this way you were pregnant with quintuplets. Then you had a traumatic birth and there was no time to tell you that I wanted just an hour or so of your time to ravish you. I’m trying to block out the thoughts of what the Healer said, because I know different, but it’s difficult to do when the thought that I could hurt you comes floating in.”

“You won’t hurt me. It hurts me more not to be physically connected to those I love so very much.”

Blaise attacked his nipple with lips and teeth and Harry held his head there by his hair and arched into Blaise’s mouth, making soft noises as Blaise nipped at his one nipple, before sucking at the other one.

Harry moaned and Blaise bit down, forcing Harry to let out a choked scream.
“That’s it; scream for me tonight, no one else, just me.” Blaise whispered against his chest before he came up to kiss his lips, kissing him as if he could eat his mouth.

Harry pulled Blaise’s jumper from him, unbuckled the belt, undid the trousers and opened them, all in quick succession. Blaise chuckled deeply and it went right down his spine like an infectious liquid and pooled in his groin. He knew his eyes had blown wide when he looked at Blaise, who groaned deeply and kissed him desperately, his own indigo iris’ being reduced to a tiny ring around a pool of black.

Their mouths meshed together, opened to the other’s tongue, moving their heads in tandem against one another as Harry moved those last few inches to sit fully in Blaise’s lap, feeling the hardness of him there pressed against his own as he wrapped his legs tightly around him, still kissing as if the world would stop if they did.

Blaise tipped him backwards, but came with him, not letting him catch his breath, not letting any space separate them as he laid against the front of his body, pressing him down into the mattress and it made Harry’s blood run hot as their kisses became fevered and crazed.

Blaise ripped the button open and tugged his zip down on his trousers and Harry helped Blaise by wriggling his hips as Blaise pulled them down his legs, trying to do it blind as they continued kissing, but one leg of his trousers got caught around his ankle and they broke apart laughing as Blaise moved down to remove it.

Blaise kissed the arch of his foot and Harry giggled as those wet and warm lips tickled him, but Blaise held on and tongued around his ankle bone and nibbled the top of his foot. Harry screeched with uncontrollable giggles which made Blaise chuckle.

Blaise travelled up his shin, paid attention to his knobbly knee, up his thigh, and then he licked around the edges of his boxers and tongued at the length of him through the cotton of his shorts.

Harry moaned breathily and tugged on Blaise’s hair, trying to keep his mouth on such a sensitive, aching part of his body, but Blaise turned his head and sucked a love bite onto his hip instead.

“Mark me.” Harry breathed. “Cover my body with your marks! Please, Blaise!”

Blaise let out a deep growl and bit into the flesh of his belly and sucked hard as Harry arched into his mouth and screeched.

Blaise made a line of bites and marks and teeth imprints all up to his mouth, where he nibbled his lips and drove his tongue into his mouth once again and Harry wrapped his body around Blaise and rubbed against him.

Blaise pulled off his own livid orange boxer-briefs and Harry devoured the naked line of his body with his eyes.

“It always makes me hot to see you looking at me like that.” Blaise growled lowly, looking back at him with love, lust and a hint of danger.
“I want you.” Harry said softly, looking up at Blaise with wide eyes, panting rapidly.

Blaise tugged his boxers down, threw them clear over a bassinet and rolled to the bedside draw and dug out a bottle of lube.

“Condoms or no?” Blaise questioned.

Harry shook his head. “No, I want to feel you flood me.”

Blaise’s eyes flashed and his mouth pulled up into a familiar cocky smirk that he had always worn back in the first few weeks of their mating.

“Ti amo, Harry.” He said and Harry’s heart flipped at the familiar words that had come so easily between them once, but had dropped off as more and more men appeared.

“Ti amo, Blaise. Ti amo.”

Blaise kissed him, fevered and impassioned, pushing a finger Harry hadn’t realised had already been lubricated into his body slowly, a complete contrast to the fast paced kisses.

Harry gasped and moved his hips into that finger and shivered in pleasure as Blaise moved that finger slowly and smoothly, before slipping it out and pressing back in with two fingers and more lubricant.

Harry slipped his one leg up and over Blaise’s shoulder, wrapping his knee around his neck so Blaise had better access to his most intimate parts.

“You look gorgeous like this.” Blaise bent down to whisper into his ear, flicking a tongue out to lick at it.

Blaise scissored his fingers inside him and Harry gasped and arched as those slender fingers brushed the little gland that he had fallen in love with over the past year.

“Blaise!” Harry gasped and he heard Blaise growl again into his ear.
“I need you.” Blaise hissed deeply. “I need you so badly.”

Blaise slipped a third finger into him and spread them all out as wide as he could manage, before pressing them in as deeply as he could. Harry made a small noise as the burn at the penetration site became a bit too much. Blaise pulled out immediately and looked at him.

“It’s alright, just a small burn.” Harry said breathily. “I think Draco split me the last time I was permitted to have sex.”

Blaise nosed around his cheek, kissing his soft skin before pressing into him smoothly. Harry gasped and locked his body around Blaise as he came to a stop at the end of his body.

“How does that feel?” Blaise asked.

“Amazing.” Harry answered, kissing Blaise full on the mouth, adding tongue as Blaise rocked inside of him, building up to a smooth thrusting motion as their kiss got heavier and they mirrored their mouths to their lower bodies.

Harry felt his orgasm building much quicker than he would have liked, Blaise had teased him into a frenzy and now he wouldn’t last, but Blaise had also aroused himself and Harry had teased him back, which meant that when Harry felt that warmth that had built in his gut release, Blaise was completely in tandem with him and they both arched their backs and threw their heads back together as they orgasmed together, both screaming their pleasure and release.

Harry breathed deeply and heavily as he came back into himself to find Blaise panting and sweaty beside him, nosing around his hair and ear, he was grinning wider than Harry had ever seen him.

“Look who got the lion’s share of the meat.” Harry teased Blaise’s prideful, self-satisfied grin.

“Don’t call yourself meat.” Blaise teased back and Harry laughed even as his flushed cheeks went a bit darker.

Harry got his breath back and looked at his babies around him, still sleeping peacefully.
“It has to be said, we make good-looking kids.”

Blaise laughed his voice rough from growling and screaming.

“Leolin will be waking up soon, after he’s been fed, I have an idea if you’re up for it.”

Harry grinned naughtily.

“I can be up for whatever you have in mind.”

Blaise laughed again and he got up, waved his wand, removing the smell of sex and sweat from his body, he dressed himself immaculately, brushed his hair and then left to make up the bottles, leaving Harry covered in semen and sweat, watching him leave the bedroom, too tired to move, but watching that arse covered in denim with his eyes and wistfully thinking about seeing it out of those jeans again very soon.

Blaise came back with six bottles and he kicked the door shut again; he put the bottles on the bedside table and stripped himself once again.

“That was quick.”

“Max already had them made up, I met him just coming out of the kitchen, I think he wants to apologise, but I told him to leave you be. He made us both something to eat because he felt guilty and foolish for what he did. I think Nasta had at him after we left.”

“Good.” Harry pouted. Though it did make him feel better that Max wanted to apologise for how he had acted, Harry wasn’t quite ready to forgive him just yet. Maybe after another few rounds of sex with Blaise he’d feel more forgiving.

Blaise finished undressing and he snuggled up to him, kissing and licking at him until Harry started moaning and responding to his ministrations.

“What’s this plan of yours?” Harry asked curiously as they waited for the quintuplets to wake up.
Blaise looked down pointedly at the mattress and Harry’s eyebrows lowered.

“You want us to have sex under the bed?” He guessed and Blaise let out a startled burst of laughter.

“No, we have a box of unused toys under the bed. Toys that Max has wanted nothing more than to try. If you’re up for it, mio amore, we can use them, then lure him up here only for him to get stuck in the immobilising ward, we’ll show him what he’s missing.”

Harry’s eyes went wide and a very naughty grin spread over his face.

“Does that mean you want to try it?” Blaise asked.

Harry nodded and he rolled off the bed and pulled Ginny’s box out from under it. He climbed back onto the bed and threw the lid off of it and then lost his nerve as he looked at all the different boxes of toys.

“What if they hurt?”

“Then we’ll burn that particular toy and move onto another one.” Blaise said. “We’ll try them all and see what you like and what you don’t, it’s all about experimentation.”

Harry smiled and he went digging through the box until he found a bright purple toy and he handed it to Blaise.

“I want to try that one first.” He said with a blush. “It reminds me of your wings.”

Blaise grinned and that cocky smirk came back as he kissed him, shoved the box off the bed to give them some room to work and he took the leaflet out of the box to read the instructions as they waited still for the babies to wake up, praying that none of the others came up too soon, before they were ready for them.

Leolin’s tiny cry came first from his specially padded, pale blue bassinet and Harry rolled over the side of the bed to pick him up and cradled him.
“Oh my little Leo, don’t cry baby, Mummy has you.”

Blaise handed the tiny bottle with the specialised teat to him and Harry tested it on his forearm before he manipulated it into Leolin’s mouth, watching as he sucked on it tentatively, almost as if he were afraid of it.

Farren woke up next and he woke up all of his brothers and his sister with his screaming and he and Blaise were outnumbered without the other three, but they managed, feeding one baby at a time, until only Braiden was left and Harry took him up, pressed the bottle into his mouth as Blaise gently brushed the tears from his face. The quintuplets had fallen right back off to sleep after they had been burped and Harry was praying that Braiden did the same. He did and Harry kissed him softly, so gently as Blaise did the same and they placed him into his bassinet before turning and grinning at each other.

They came together and kissed, falling onto the bed. They broke apart panting as they looked at each other with wide grins.

Blaise picked up the phallic shaped, purple toy and smirked at him, making Harry feel a little nervous.

“This one is very special.” Blaise told him.

“Why?” Harry asked.

“It vibrates.”

“Oh.” Was all Harry said, not quite sure what it meant for him. “How are we going to get the others up here?”

“Once we have you writhing on the toy, let out a scream through the baby monitor that I’ll bring into the silencing bubble. They’ll come running and then they will all be stuck in the immobilisation ward.”

Harry grinned as Blaise cast said immobilisation ward again after he had taken it down to leave the room.

Harry was nervous as Blaise lubricated the purple toy and pressed it against his body.

“It’s a bit thicker than I am, but you should have no problems after taking Nasta.” Blaise told him.
Harry nodded to him and he felt the pressure increase until it started slipping into his body. Harry let out a small moan as the cool, unyielding toy was forced into his body, it was so different to an actual man, who was warm, soft underneath his hardness, and somehow more, fuller than the cold purple silicone that was being pushed into him.

“Are you alright?” Blaise asked him, nosing and kissing around his cheek and neck.

Harry let out the breath that he hadn’t know that he had been holding as the end of the toy came to the bottom of his body.

“It feels so strange! It’s completely different to an actual person.”

Blaise nodded. “It was always going to be, mio amore. It is silicone and we are flesh and blood, but wait until you can see what this piece of silicone can do, it’s been rated as very powerful.”

Blaise moved it so very carefully out of him and pressed it back in slowly until Harry got used to the feel of it within his body and he started tentatively moving it into as Blaise pressed it forward. Blaise grinned and moved it faster and harder and it touched his prostate and he moaned and moved his body faster and harder against it.

Blaise touched it with his wand and that was the beginning of the end. The toy started vibrating inside of him and he screamed like a possessed demon as he fucked himself on the toy, gripping his own hair as the toy ripped scream after scream from him, he thrashed his head from side to side and arched his back and ground his hips on to it as it touched his prostate and Blaise kept it there, vibrating against it and sending pleasure shooting through his entire body like tiny bolts of lightning. He orgasmed so quickly and so powerfully that he thought he’d never recover.

Blaise stopped the toy from vibrating and just moved it within him, watching him with possessive, lust filled eyes, his mouth opened and his lips being wetted by a peek of tongue as he panted as if it had been him with the toy inside of him.

Harry closed his eyes and just felt as the toy slid so smoothly into him, but Blaise stopped all movement and Harry snapped his eyes open to glare at him.

“If you don’t move that fucking toy in five seconds…!”

Blaise held a finger to his lips before he reached over and picked up the baby monitor. He pushed the baby monitor to his mouth and Harry remembered the reason they were trying these toys and he grinned evilly. He screamed long and loud into it and heard the clatter of chairs and splintering wood from all the way downstairs.

Blaise stretched over and put the baby monitor back on the bedside table and with a wave of his wand, he took down the silencing bubble and quickly put up separate bubbles around each bassinet, it wouldn’t do to have the other three watching, but not being able to hear anything due to the silencing bubble.

Blaise was moving the toy inside of him and Harry was writhing and pushing back on it again when the three others almost tore the door off to get into the room, all of their Dracken attributes on show, but they hit Blaise’s ward before their brains caught up with their eyes, so they were stuck in the ward as they realised that Harry had screamed from pleasure rather than anything else, really they should have known from how he had screamed, he had not given a distress call.

Blaise grinned at them evilly.

“It’s nice of you to join us. Harry and I are having so much fun; we just had to show you.”

Harry moaned and bent his knees to put his feet flat on the mattress so he could get better leverage to push himself onto the toy.

“Harry wanted to try this toy first, he loves it. I’ll show you.”

Blaise grinned and turned back to Harry, touching the toy with his wand and starting the vibrations again and Harry started screaming and writhing, shoving himself back onto the toy inside him. The three stuck in the ward went wide eyed as they watched, about the only thing they could do as their limbs were locked, unable to move or speak, forced to watch him play with the toys for the first time without their involvement.

Harry gripped his own hair again, but Blaise wormed his fingers out of the strands before he tugged any tufts out and attached them to the headboard, this gave Harry the strength of his arms to thrust himself onto the toy as well as his hips and he used them to full advantage as Blaise touched the toy to his prostate and Harry screamed louder and moved his body faster and harder against it.

His back arched and he threw his head back, but Blaise pulled the toy away from his prostate just as he was about to orgasm.

“No! No, no, no! Please!” He begged desperately, mindlessly. “Please, Blaise, please! Don’t stop it, please don’t make it stop!”

Blaise’s chuckle was so deep that Harry cracked open his eyes to make sure that it was still Blaise devouring his body with his eyes. His eyes had been almost completely swallowed by black and his mouth was open as his chest heaved like he had run a marathon as he watched him with the toy.
“Do you want to cum, mio amore?” Blaise asked, his voice gravelly and rough.

“Please, please, please! I need to! I need to!” He almost sobbed, still pushing himself onto the toy, tugging the headboard until it creaked under his hands.

“Pull your knees to your chest.” Blaise ordered.

Harry obeyed immediately and he held his legs on either side of his body, his knees touching either side of his rib cage and the toy suddenly seemed to go that much deeper into him, it felt that much more pleasurable and Harry rocked his body into it, moving his hips and twisting his head from side to side, sobbing as his body ached for release.

Blaise touched his prostate and his entire body convulsed with the vibrations and he screamed until his throat was raw, moving as much as he could on the toy in this position, but ultimately relying on Blaise to move it harder and faster for him, hitting him deeper, bashing his prostate and holding it there to send those bolts of pleasure through his body and he screamed his orgasm, which seemed somehow that much more powerful than the first.

Blaise slipped the toy from inside him, dropped it over the side of the bed and slid himself inside as Harry was still caught in the waves of his orgasm, still convulsing and his muscles still clenching and Blaise smashed their mouths together and thrust into him and it was so much better than the unyielding silicone and Harry kept his legs bent with his knees to his ribs, but he wrapped his arms around Blaise’s neck and tugged on that choppy black hair, his orgasm still crashing over him in waves, prolonged by Blaise, who Harry knew wouldn’t last much longer.

Harry called out Blaise’s name over and over until Blaise stilled and flooded him with his release and Harry just screamed, arching up into Blaise before they fell still and silent, panting, trying to draw in oxygen, trying to keep breathing. Blaise rolled onto his back and pulled Harry into cuddle with him, the other three looked like they were trying to scream at them, but Harry and Blaise ignored them for the time being.

“I thought you wanted it to be just you?” Harry whispered back, almost hissing as they tried to have a private conversation with the other three almost right beside them.

“I have had you to myself, twice and I’ve played with your body with the toy. I am more than happy, mio Prezioso. I am thinking that now it is my turn to get fucked after I’ve fucked you so very well.”
Harry smiled and kissed Blaise lingeringly, then tongue was added and Blaise rolled him onto his back and kissed him more passionately. He picked up his wand and waved it and all three mates surged forward and ended up on their faces. Harry laughed and Blaise chuckled.

“They must have been trying to get through the wards pretty damn hard for that to happen.” Blaise grinned.

Nasta and Draco came onto the bed growling, Nasta ripped Blaise from him and snogged him viciously as Draco bit all up the one side of his body. He obviously didn’t like that Harry only had Blaise’s marks on him.

Harry tugged him over his neck and kissed him. He only wanted Blaise’s mark on his neck as a place of pride and remembrance that Blaise had been there when he had needed him.

Harry got the feeling that something was missing and he looked to the side and saw that Nasta was already thrusting into Blaise, who was clawing up his back, Nasta’s teeth biting deeply into Blaise’s neck.

He looked to the other side and saw Max, sat on the floor looking miserable and forlorn at the four of them, there was shame, regret, repentance, lust and love swirl in those dark sapphire eyes and Harry growled.

“You have one second to get on this bed or I’m going to be forced to crawl on the floor after you and I don’t want to move.” He hissed.

Max came to the end of the bed, but didn’t get on it, he just cupped his face as Nasta dragged Draco away by an ankle, which made Harry laugh at the hilarious sight and the indignant squawk that Draco let out as Nasta pulled himself out of a spent Blaise and pushed into Draco instead.

“I’m so sorry, I should have listened to you, we all should have, but then Blaise was the only one who seemed to have a brain these past few days. He could see that the Healer was wrong and really we all could, but hearing that you weren’t supposed to be doing these things, it put fear into us that we could hurt you, that you could be very seriously injured and I’m sorry. As for the stunt in the kitchen over dinner, I have no excuse for what I did and nothing to say to excuse my behaviour or my selfish actions. I’m sorry, I should never have done it, I don’t know what I was thinking and as soon as I tell my Dad, he’s going to go ape shit on me and either hit me so hard my brain will rattle or he’ll carry out his threat of spanking me and I won’t be able to sit down for a month.”

Harry rolled over, off of the bed and onto Max’s lap, he tore open the jeans that Max was wearing, ripped open the boxer shorts underneath so violently that the button went flying and he then sat himself down on Max completely in one go.

Max gasped and threw his head back, holding his hips tight enough to bruise.
“I told you if you didn’t get on the bed in one second then I’d have to come after you.” Harry told him, not apologising for his own behaviour because he wasn’t going to. He didn’t feel like he had to when he hadn’t been the one at fault, but he said without words that he had forgiven Max. He had just known that a few rounds with Blaise would wipe out any anger and bad feelings he had, sex always had calmed him down.

Harry moved himself up and down Max’s considerable length and gasped as his sore body was split open again so soon, but the feel of Max within him, pressing deeper than anyone else could get, more than made up for it as he moved himself faster and harder with the help of those hands on his hips.

Max growled in a continuous rumble in the back of his throat before he flung them both sideways, twisting them until Harry was on the carpeted floor and Max was hovering above him and they locked eyes as Max started moving harder and faster than Harry had been able to manage. Harry dragged himself up with the help of those massive shoulders and nibbled and sucked on Max’s bottom lip until his mouth opened and they kissed heavily, passionately.

One of Max’s hands splayed on his lower back and he held their lower bodies together as he found a rhythm and kept to it, Harry tugging two fistfuls of his short hair as he moaned and begged for release.

It seemed that Max didn’t want to upset him, so he immediately gave Harry his wish of orgasm by pushing himself harder and faster and laying him back on the floor so he could use the hand that had been holding their lower bodies together to tug on his over sensitised cock until he screamed his orgasm to the ceiling.

Max collapsed to the side of him and tried to catch his breath, but Harry was tugged up and onto the bed and taken immediately by Draco, who smirked at him as Harry writhed and convulsed, still caught in his orgasm from Max. It did not take long for Draco to bring him to a second orgasm as he held one of his hips, Harry’s one leg wrapped around Draco’s strong, broad back, his other one lying limply on the bed, his hands caught together by Draco’s other hand.

Draco displayed the steely control that the Malfoys were known for by holding out through Harry’s orgasm and keeping him screaming and writhing to another earth shattering orgasm and Harry was sure he was going to pass out, but after Draco had stilled and collapsed onto him and he was feeling sleepy and worn out, Harry was pulled out from under Draco and he turned to see the golden eyes of Nasta, who grinned at him, showing fangs. Harry groaned loudly, sex with any of his mates in Dracken form was just so rough and so amazing that his limp cock, which he had thought wouldn’t be able to ever recover from tonight, sprang back to life and started aching as Nasta started licking and sucking at him, playing with him when all he wanted was to be fucked while Nasta was in Dracken form, his gorgeous wings tucked up slightly to stop them from getting in the way or cuffing one of the others.

Nasta flicked his nipples as he tongued around his balls, which were already tight and felt like they would explode at any moment. He growled and wound his hands around as much of Nasta’s hair as he could get and he tugged harshly.

“If you do not get inside of me now, I am going to slice your cock and balls off and do it myself!” He threatened with a steely gaze, glaring directly into those amused golden eyes.

Nasta took his threat to heart and surged into him and Harry’s back arched from the bed so violently a few vertebrae clicked. He moaned helplessly as Nasta started rocking, then he picked up pace and rhythm and then what Harry had been anticipating and dreading, Nasta’s body rolling, which drove him insane, but built up his orgasm so quickly and powerfully that he couldn’t help but love it.

“Nasta!” He cried out as he sunk his claws into those huge shoulders, likely drawing blood, but Nasta only growled lowly and moved harder and faster, rolling smoothly and hitting Harry’s abused prostate dead on as he refined his technique more by pulling in his hips and tightening his thighs.

Harry moaned and thrashed as he felt his god knew what number orgasm approach, his hands clenched deeply into Nasta’s shoulders, tearing the skin a bit, but it only seemed to enflame Nasta more as he started growling and snarling as he moved faster and harder and Harry’s orgasm took him completely by surprise and he screamed so loudly that he lost his voice.

Nasta released into him and bit his small shoulder, sinking his four fangs into him and drawing blood. It made him writhe and convulse on Nasta before he completely collapsed and just lay on the bed hoping that he would recover sometime this year.

Nasta manipulated him up to the pillows and maneuvered him under the duvet and gave him a sweet kiss, such a contrast to the passionate, tongue filled kisses from moments before.

Harry yawned and made no movement as Nasta and Max got Draco and Blaise under the covers as well, Max went out of the room with the six empty baby bottles and came back up ten minutes later, just as Harry had finished wriggling around to get comfortable, with six new bottles. He put them on the bedside table and Nasta handed him a damp wash cloth that he had gotten from the bathroom.

Max cleaned himself off as Nasta had finished cleaning all three of the others and tucked them into the bed, taking care with the back of Harry’s legs and his abused, sore entrance.

Regan woke up first this time and he wailed for his food. Nasta scooped him up lovingly and pressed a bottle to his cheek, watching him root for it adoringly.

Tegan woke up next and Max took her into his vast arms, cradling her tiny body as he fed her. The two of them were much more smoother in handling all six of them than Harry and Blaise had been, but then they did all of the night feeds by themselves. Harry sat up and he was handed Calix as he woke up for his bottle and Harry cuddled him and kissed him, trying to tell his little boy that he loved him so very much as he fed him.

Nasta burped Regan, placed a red dummy in his mouth and placed him back into his bassinet before he scooped up Braiden as Blaise fed Farren and Draco took little Leolin, nuzzling his little face with his sharp nose. Harry loved seeing Draco so loving and affectionate and he was sad that it really only happened in their bedroom, usually after a great bout of sex.

Once the babies had all been fed, Tegan and Braiden had had nappy changes and they all had a dummy in their mouths, including little Leolin, who had his special dummy between his lips, looking so adorable that Harry had taken several photos the first time he had put the dummy in his mouth, they settled down in bed. Max went to turn out the light as Nasta moved Braiden to the nursery next door, taking one of the three way baby monitors with him. He came back and slipped into the bed, and he reached to the bedside table and turned off the lamp as Max did he same on the other side. Harry yawned as he snuggled down, feeling relaxed, calm, contented, but most of all happy as he was surrounded by his children and his mates, who were also his lovers, his best friends and his life companions. He loved them and he’d love them for life, no matter what little tiffs they had or would have in the future, because there was bound to be more than enough, but life wasn’t going to be easy. Life wasn’t worth living if it was easy, but if they all stuck together, then no matter what came at them, they’d be able to overcome it.

Chapter End Notes

A/N: Now that sex scene took a hell of a lot of doing so you had better bloody enjoy it!

ALL OF YOU HAD BETTER READ THIS!

I am getting sick of repeating the answer for the Regulus question of how Harry can be the first male submissive in a hundred years if Regulus was a male submissive. I am getting sick of answering it, so if anyone asks after this chapter, I’m going to go mental.

No one knew about Regulus. Not even his own parents knew, he had one meeting where he quickly chose Severus and neither of them ever went to the social gatherings. His previous suitors forgot about him as new submissives came forth, and then he died early without ever really leaving a mark, he had no children, no achievements or notable doings, his mate is, and always has been, a recluse who would rather cut off his own leg than go to the Dracken parties, so he faded from everyone’s memories, everyone except for Severus and Kreacher when his parents and Sirius died. No one remembered him, hell if they did it might just be a passing thought like, what was that submissive's name from thirty years ago. They might even think that he was female, not every Dracken in the world saw/spoke/met him, so they might have convinced themselves that he was just another missed opportunity. Severus clings to Regulus’ memory so tightly and fiercely because no one else does, it's that reason why he can't move on, it's that reason why I'll never 'pair him up with another submissive to make him happy' because he doesn't want to be happy. Not every story has a happy ending and unfortunately Severus’ is one of them. He wants to cling to his love for Regulus, he wants to hold onto the man he loved and lost, why would he want some insipid, shallow, vain sixteen year old girl, who is more than likely going to reject him as soon as she sees him, when he has the memories of the smart, beautiful, wonderful man he fell in love with, who chose him over hundreds of others, who was his mate for three years in all ways that mattered, that loved him as he was and for who he was.

So that’s my answer to that, I don’t want to hear any more questions about how Harry can be the only male submissive in a hundred years, yadda yadda. Moving on.

Harry yawned as he snuggled down, feeling relaxed, calm, contented, but most of all happy as he was surrounded by his children and his mates, who were also his lovers, his best friends and his life companions. He loved them and he’d love them for life, no matter what little tiffs they had or would have in the future, because there was bound to be more than enough, but life wasn’t going to be easy. Life wasn’t worth living if it was easy, but if they all stuck together, then no matter what came at them, they’d be able to overcome it.

Harry woke up at ten to four in the morning and he groaned miserably as he looked at the time. He rubbed his eyes and groaned again, he hated that he had woken up so early. Why the hell had he woken up so early?

He huffed in frustration as his attempts to get back to sleep failed, he rolled himself out of the bed and he shimmied into the first pair of boxers that he found in the chest of drawers before carefully scooping up two babies and he moved them down to the kitchen before coming up for another two and did the same with them before he then made a final trip to get the last two. He shook his head, he loved all six of them with his entire heart, he did, but six was too many. They were all still babies, five newborns and a near newborn. He hoped he never, ever had a set of five again, or a set of four for that matter. Three he could maybe handle, but any more than that would put him in Saint Mungos mental ward.

He boiled the kettle and made himself a cup of tea after making up Leolin's tiny bottle. He was the only baby still on two hourly feeds, his brothers and sister were all on four hourly feeds and his oldest brother, Braiden, was now sleeping through most nights, he woke up half way through the night every other day, but feeding him during the night, every night was a thing of the past, now if the others all slept through the night too, then everything would be easier.

Harry was just down to his last few gulps of tea when Leolin started wailing. His cry was still too quiet to disturb his siblings. Harry scooped him up and pressed him against his bare chest, feeding him the tiny bottle. Harry grinned widely as the milk went down further and further until a first happened. Leolin finished an entire bottle of milk, all two fluid ounces of milk. He was getting stronger and healthier and Harry patted his lower back gently to burp him and then he stripped him of his sleepsuit and his body suit and cuddled his little Faerie baby skin to skin on his chest. He checked on the weeny wings, which were now mostly covered in skin, but there were a few patches that were either scabbed over, or raw and red looking still. Harry took great care with the scabs, the very last thing that he wanted to do was to accidentally pull a scab off and he drove his mates mad as he hovered over them when they dressed Leolin to make sure they didn’t catch any clothing on a scab and rip it off, but he couldn’t help it, it was one thing that he just couldn’t control at the moment.

He made himself another cup of tea and he sat at the kitchen table, stroking and caressing his son, but soon a chill brought his body out in goosebumps. He shivered, but couldn’t be bothered to move to either light a fire or to get any clothes on.

“Dobby!” He called out softly.

In a move reminiscent of what had happened in the hospital wing what seemed like forever ago, twin pops were heard and Harry had two squawking, squabbling house elves on his floor.

“Stop it!” He ordered harshly as Leolin made a distressed sound in his sleep.

“Master Harry Potter calls for Dobby.” The green eyed elf bowed lowly.

“Kreacher is Master Harry Potter’s only elf!” Kreacher replied, bowing lower than Dobby had, snarling at the younger elf.

Harry rubbed his eyes and squeezed the bridge of his nose with one hand.

“I just need a fire in the living room please, Dobby, I can’t leave the children.”

“Master Harry Potter has such beautiful children.” Kreacher said oily as Dobby popped out of the room like lightning to get a fire in the going in the next room before Kreacher got there.

“That one by there is the new Heir to the Black family.” Harry told the elf, who really was still the Black family elf and had only come to him because Sirius had named him the sole inheritor.

The elf blinked big brown eyes and peered over the side of the bassinet at Calix, who was sleeping soundly, his little chest raising and falling evenly, his chubby cheeks, his thin nose and his thin, downy hair that was a distinctive black.

“He looks like Master Regulus did.” The elf was choked.
“Master Regulus?” Harry questioned. “Regulus Black?” Of course he meant Regulus Black, Harry didn’t need the elf to nod his head. Kreacher had served the Black family for generations; he would have known Regulus from the cradle.

“Kreacher, what happened to Regulus?”

“No! Master must not ask poor Kreacher, he must not.”

“Tell me!” Harry demanded of the elf, standing up and putting Leolin in the padded bassinet.

“Master must not! Kreacher cannot say, Kreacher swore to Master Regulus.”

“Regulus is dead, Kreacher. I am your Master now, tell me!”

Kreacher croaked for a bit before he fell to the ground and bashed his fists onto it, Dobby came back in wide eyed.

“Dobby, leave us.” Harry growled and the elf squeaked and popped away. “Kreacher, tell me what happened to Regulus, now!”

“Master Regulus changed his mind about being in the Dark Lord’s service, he found out what it was really like and he told Kreacher, he told Kreacher that he was going to bring down the Dark Lord after he used Kreacher to hide his locket. Master Regulus ordered Kreacher to take him back to that place and Kreacher wept but did as he was told like a good elf. Kreacher took Master Regulus back to the cave and showed him the locket in the evil potion. Master Regulus drank the potion and fell to the ground, he ordered Kreacher to take the locket and destroy it, to never speak of what he had done and to never tell and Kreacher was a good, obedient elf to Master Regulus, until you!”

Harry was wide eyed and breathing heavily. He needed to tell Snape, now.

“Stay here!” He ordered the elf. “You stay here, Kreacher!”
Harry wasn’t thinking when he scooped up three of his children, only just managing to get his arms around them. He covered them with a blanket, using his mouth to cover them securely. He got a pinch of floo powder between his fingers and flung it into the fire, he yelled out Myron’s address and he shot out of the fireplace. He placed them carefully into the bassinet that Myron had bought for his children to use over Christmas before flooing back home, grabbing the other three and repeating his actions, Kreacher was right where he had ordered him to stay.

Harry arrived back into Myron’s home to find the man himself, completely taken over by his Dracken side, watching him through those jet black eyes as he put the other three babies in the bassinets that Ashleigh liked having for when he visited.

“What…?”

“You need to look after them for a while, the others are still asleep and they’d only stop me.” He spoke out quickly, his forehead sweating and his eyes too wide with adrenaline. “I won’t be long, I’ll be back soon, I promise.”

“Harry!” Myron called out as he tried to get around the bassinets and grab him, but Harry had gone through the floo before he could reach him.

Harry knew he only had moments, so he ran to the kitchen, grabbed Kreacher and ordered him to take them both to Hogwarts. Myron appeared in the kitchen just as Harry left.

They arrived in the Entrance Hall and Harry dragged Kreacher to Snape’s private office and he hammered hell out of the door.

Snape yanked the door open angrily, still dressed in his bed clothes, looking murderous.

“Potter!” He spat. “Why are you hammering at my door at five in the morning?!”

Harry brushed passed him, still dragging Kreacher and he stood there panting and sweating from his run and his narrow escape from Myron. His mates would be tracking him down soon, they needed to be gone.

“I know where Regulus is.” Harry panted out and immediately Snape’s face twisted into bitterness and pain.

“I have searched for twenty years, Potter.” He spat out his last name like a curse. “What makes you think that you of all people found him?”
“Kreacher was with Regulus when he died, I’m Kreacher’s Master now and I ordered him to tell me.”

Snape got a crazed gleam in his eyes, a gleam of violence and rage and he would have descended upon the elf if Harry hadn’t stopped him.

“We need to leave now, my mates will be coming, they won’t let me go if they catch up.”

“Perhaps that is a good thing.” Snape answered looking at him. “I lost Regulus because he charged off without tell me where he was going.”

“I’ll be with you.”

“That does not guarantee your safety.”

“I’m going!” Harry snapped.

“Fine.” Snape sneered at him. “But don’t come running to me when your mates strip the flesh from your bones in punishment. You can expect a very big punishment for this, they’ll be angry, their trust will be shattered in you and they will smother you for the rest of your insignificant life, but if you still want to go, then let’s go.”

Harry was uncertain then, he knew they’d be angry, but to never trust him again? That was a huge thing, but then he wanted to help Snape finally close the book on what had happened to his mate, but he didn’t want to lose his own mates in the process.

“We’ll wait for Nasta. Out of all my mates, he’ll be here first.”

“You can wait for two more minutes then!” Harry hissed.
Snape lost his temper, truly lost it and his wings sprang from his back in one smooth motion and he snarled at Harry with his fangs bared.

Harry was snatched up and he got a blurred image of gold on black and he knew that Nasta must have run faster than he ever had before to get here so quickly.

He snarled so deeply and dangerously that Harry huddled himself up in his arms before realising why he was here.

“Nasta, I’m not hurt. See?” Harry pressed his arm to Nasta’s face and Nasta licked over his wrist, seemingly incapable of stopping himself, which set him off licking and sniffing and Harry lay as still as he could as his body was licked and sniffed. It was only then that he realised that he was only wearing a pair of boxer shorts that weren’t even his.

“Myron woke us up and said that you left the babies at his and then ran off. Why would you do this?” Nasta grumbled.

“You promised to listen to me.” Harry reminded. “I found out where Snape’s mate is and we’re going to go and get him. I waited here for you so you could come too.”

Nasta wrapped him up.

“You’re going home.”

“I’m not.” Harry answered. “I don’t care what you have to do to me when we get back but I’m not going home, not yet. I could have left without you, Nasta, but I didn’t. The least you could do is respect me enough to let me see this through to the end.”

Nasta shuddered and swallowed. “You stay by my side at all times.” Nasta ordered, using the full force of his authority and Harry could do nothing more than nod in acceptance. “Where are we going?” He asked Snape.

“I don’t know, but as Regulus is my mate do you think that we can leave now?” He bit out sarcastically.

Harry rolled his eyes and took Nasta’s hand, took Kreacher’s and looked at Snape pointedly, who took the house elf’s hand gingerly.
“Take us to the cave, Kreacher.” Harry ordered and the world squeezed down a narrow tube and when he came back to himself he was on all fours on a wet and slimy rock in the middle of an ocean of water, but it was so dark that they had to be inside the cave. He could smell sea water and he inched closer to Nasta. This place had a terrible feel to it.

“Where is Regulus?!” Snape hissed.

Kreacher pointed into the water and Harry felt his heart sink as Snape tested the temperature with his fingers.

“It needs to be.” Kreacher gasped out; pressing against the podium on the flat platform they had landed on. There was a basin of potion on top of it and Harry stayed well away from it. “It needs to keep the bodies from rotting.”

“What bodies?” Nasta demanded as he held Harry to his chest, his fangs and claws out ready to attack.

They got their answer as slimy, white hands and heads broke the surface of the smooth, glass like water. There were dead bodies rising from the water, clambering onto their island, their hands grasping and grabbing, trying to catch their wrists to drag them under the water and drown them, their bodies animated with unnatural strength that only the dead possessed and Nasta let go of him with one arm and stretched the other one out ready to defend him, his other one pressing him tightly to his chest.

But Harry could see the dead bodies coming at them from behind and he unsheathed his own claws.

“Inferi.” Snape hissed as he cut one body back, only for them to get up and come back like zombies. Only these didn’t bleed, they were pale and dead and bloodless and the magic that animated them was very, very strong, but then they had been created by Voldemort and likely maintained by him, that was the thing with Inferi, once they were animated, nothing, not even the death of their creator, could undo them, only burning could permanently undo the evil magics at work.

Harry swallowed back his fear and he remembered Moody’s lesson on Inferi. Light and warmth repelled the dead, who liked the cold and the dark. The cave suddenly made so much sense, it was perfect for holding an Inferi army, cold and dark where no warmth or light could get in naturally. He shoved his instincts back that said that he had to use his claws and fangs and he drew out Nasta’s wand.

He muttered the strongest fire spell that he knew and the Inferi run from the ring of fire that could permanently destroy them, stumbling and shoving at one another to retreat back into the cold, dark water and the fire drew the two part Dragons closer to the flames.

“How are we supposed to find Regulus in this?” Harry demanded as the spell keeping the Inferi at bay sucked rapidly at his energy.

“Kreacher! Find Regulus and bring him here!” Harry ordered and then the elf was gone and Nasta petted and cuddled him as he shook under the power of the spell.

“Hold on love. It’ll be fine.” Nasta rumbled soothingly. “We’ll get back and then you and I are going to have a talk about your suicidal ideas and tendencies.”

“At least I’m not pregnant this time.”

Nasta smiled then against his will. “There is that.” He finally admitted as he couldn’t keep the small smile back.

Kreacher came back soaking wet hugging a bloated body to his chest and sobbing so loudly and violently that Harry just looked at him, until Snape threw the bereaved elf away and took over from him, holding Regulus so tightly that his whole arms mottled white, the strain showed in the underside of his forearms.

“Oh Regulus.” He cried brokenly and Harry was frightened, he had never seen his Professor act like this before.

“We have to go! Now!” Harry bit out shakily as he shuddered as more of his energy was drawn out of him by the spell. “Kreacher! Back to Hogwarts! I can’t hold this spell much longer.”

Kreacher gabbed Nasta’s hand, put a hand on Snape’s shoulder and popped them all away to Hogwarts again.
They landed and Harry was up in Nasta’s arms being nuzzled and kissed. Harry looked at where Snape was rocking Regulus’ dead body and felt sorrow fill him.

Regulus was still perfectly preserved. There must have been something in the water, a potion or spell that stopped the bodies within it decaying so the Inferi stayed fresh, it wouldn’t do to have an army that rotted to nothing after all.

Harry could see how very young Regulus had been when he had died, he was in water damaged robes and there was a swollen wand sticking out of one pocket. What made Harry turn away was the swollen belly, he couldn’t be sure if Regulus had maybe been pregnant when he had died or the water had bloated him so severely in death over the years.

“Professor, we need to get him to Madam Pomfrey.”

Snape looked up at him with anger burning in his eyes.

“He’s dead, Potter! Can’t you see that? No medi-witch is going to be able to help him!”

“No, but she can clean him up and then you can bury him, like you have always wanted to.”

“What happened to him? Why was he in that place?! ” Snape demanded then, ignoring him. “I need to know why he was there!”

“He was trying to take down Voldemort. He put something in that cave and he used Kreacher to do so, so when Kreacher came back, Regulus asked him about what it was and then he asked Kreacher to take him to the cave.”

Snape turned to Kreacher and the look in his eyes was pure loathing and rage. “It’s your fault that Regulus went into that cave.”

“Master Regulus is forcing Kreacher to take him. Kreacher did not want to go back to that cave ever again; Master Regulus ordered it from Kreacher.”

“It’s not his fault.” Harry said softly. “A house elf does as he’s ordered. Regulus wanted to take down Voldemort; he thought that he was doing good. It’s Voldemort’s fault that Regulus is dead, Snape, no one else’s.”
“Leave us.” Snape hissed as he held Regulus close.

Harry nodded to Kreacher, who gladly left. Harry doubted he would come back the next time he called for Dobby.

Nasta pulled him from the room and Harry dug in his heels.

“We can’t leave him.”

Nasta shut the door and tugged him up the corridor.

“We are going to inform the Headmaster and Madam Pomfrey so that they can help him, Harry, we’ve done enough. We got Regulus back and Professor Snape can now have the closure that he deserves, but we’ve done enough.”

Harry nodded as he saw the logic of that and he stopped dragging his heels and matched his stride to Nasta’s holding that large hand with his own. Both of their palms were sweaty from the fear inducing situation they had been thrown into so recently and Nasta was clenching his hand tightly, as if he was worried that Harry would slip away from him if he held his hand any looser.

They made it up to the Headmaster’s office and it was just coming up to eight in the morning and they found him just about to leave for the Great Hall.

“Harry, my boy! How wonderful to see you! I had been meaning to pay you a visit, how are your children?”

“Fine Sir, but we need to speak to you about something more serious.”

“Ah, of course, to what do I owe this oddly dressed meeting?”

Harry blushed as he realised that he was still in just a pair of boxer shorts that looked like they were Draco’s. They back tracked to the office and sat at the desk and Dumbledore set them up with tea. Harry drained his cup before making another one with shaky hands.

“I…we found out about Regulus Black from Kreacher. He knew all along what had happened to him. I rushed to Professor Snape’s office as soon as I knew, which is why I’m not dressed appropriately."

“Oh dear. I can’t see Severus taking that information too well.” Dumbledore stroked his beard, which he only ever did when he was thinking or nervous.

“He didn’t. We went to where Regulus was and retrieved him, Snape is now hugging and rocking his body down in his office and he won’t let anyone near him.”

“Thank you for telling me, Harry, I’ll take it from here.” Dumbledore stated. “I am glad that school is not in session yet.”

“No, a few more days.” Harry said with a nod. “I’ll introduce you to the five new babies when I get back. Four boys and a little girl.”

Dumbledore smiled then. “I’ll look forward to it, Harry, for now if you’d like to use the floo, feel free.”

Harry smiled and nodded and they said their goodbyes and Nasta wrapped him up in his arms and flooed back to Max’s, where the other three mates were waiting with the six babies and a family get together. Harry sighed in exasperation as he was clamoured and tugged on, but he was too tired to push them away as Nasta tried to calm them down. He was not looking forward to the conversation he was about to have, but first, he really needed some clothes.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Harry groaned as the living room descended into arguments and chaos over what he had done and what Nasta had ‘allowed’ him to do. It was just giving him a headache.

“All of you shut up! I did what I did because I wanted to. A submissive I may be, but if you try to take away my free will then you’ll find yourself without a leg!” Harry snapped, getting up and going into the kitchen to get some tea.

Blaise joined him and kissed around his neck and chin as Harry made tea. Harry couldn’t help the giggle that came out.
“Blaise!” He said, wanting it to be a complaint, but it came out as amusement with the breathy undertone of arousal.

Blaise licked, sucked and nibbled on his neck as he held his hips, pressing up against him.

“You’re sexy when you threaten to take off someone’s limb.” He purred. “As long as it’s not mine of course.”

Harry chuckled. “Why would I ever want to take off your limbs?” Harry asked. “You’re so good at using them all.”

Blaise chuckled deeply and he sucked a love bite onto the other side of his neck, opposite the one he had made the night previous.

“Put one at the back of my neck too.” Harry demanded and Blaise complied.

Harry went almost boneless as such a sensitive place on his body was sucked and he groaned.

“How quickly can we get rid of the in-laws and make love? I’m aching for it!” Harry wailed, taking Blaise’s hand and pressing it to the bulge in front of his jeans.

Blaise rumbled deeply and massaged the front of him.

“Oh! Oh!” Harry moaned, pushing himself into Blaise’s hand.

“Quiet, Bello, or you’ll bring the whole family running.” Blaise whispered hotly.

Blaise squeezed him and Harry bit his lip. His first mate licked and sucked at his neck and raked his nails harshly over his bulge through the jeans and Harry’s arms flung out over the counter and sent his teacup flying. It shattered with a tinkle and then everyone was around them asking what had happened, if they were alright and Harry bashed his head onto the counter with a groan of frustration.

Alexander of course started laughing, Ashleigh giggled and Myron started chewing out Blaise about proper behaviour when guests were around, Blaise meekly taking the bollocking from the elder man, his head bent to the floor, but Harry was short enough to see the pleased smirk on those lips, Blaise was not apologetic or sorry about what he had done at all.

“There should be a rule or something against in-laws cock blocking.” Harry pouted.

Max went pale, Draco choked and Alexander and Richard laughed so hard that Harry thought they might have wet themselves as Myron turned angry black eyes to him.

“Oh come on!” Harry whined. “It was a joke, well not really as you did cock block me and I really just wanted to have it hard and fast on the kitchen table, but I don’t mind that much, I’ll just carry on once you’re gone, when are you going?”

“Harry!” Max hissed shocked.

“What? I’m horny as hell after my near death experience of this morning and now that I’m not pregnant either I want you all. I’m not even all that likely to get pregnant again either as it’s got to be only five degrees out! My nipples are as hard as pebbles!”

Nasta couldn’t hide the snort of laughter and he had to quickly school his face as Myron turned his glare onto him.

“That’s not the only part of you that’s hard, though it is a bit bigger than a pebble.” Blaise said slyly.

Harry started laughing and he couldn’t stop.

“Only a bit bigger than a pebble?” Harry demanded in mock insult. “You cheeky fuck, and don’t even try and pretend that it was only me that was cock blocked, I felt you rub up against my arse!”

Myron grabbed his wrist, walked him, still laughing, to the kitchen table and sat down. It was then that Harry’s mind caught up with what was happening and he tried tugging away from Myron as he was pulled up onto that lap and turned onto his belly. He was spanked like a naughty child with three slaps of Myron’s large hand before he was turned over and cuddled, having a kiss pressed to his forehead.
“That hurt!” Harry accused, wriggling on his burning bum.

“It was supposed to, to teach you that talking like that is not appropriate when you have company over, even close family members; we do not want to know what you boys get up to.”

“It wasn’t my fault the cup smashed.” Harry pouted.

“It was your hand that knocked it off, Bello.” Blaise reminded him.

“Only because you were sucking on my…”

“Do you want another three spanks?” Myron asked him, one eyebrow raised in question.

“No.”

“Then enough of this sort of talk.”

“Fine but I want cuddles.” Harry demanded snuggling in. “I’ve had a rough morning.”

Myron happily indulged him like he was a child and said nothing about his rough morning. Seeing dead bodies climbing out of water in a dank, dark cave was enough to give anyone nightmares, that the Inferi were trying to drag them under the water and drown them to join the Inferi army was more than enough to ask for a bit of comfort. So he had had his punishment, now he wanted his comfort and it was gladly given.

“I feel like a child.” He said with a frown.

“Just because you want a hug doesn’t mean you’re a child. I still get hugs from my parents and I’m fifty.”

“Fifty-three.” Richard announced through a fake cough and Myron glared at his mate as he grinned innocently and Ashleigh giggled.
“Do you think Max doesn’t get hugs still?” Myron asked him. “Because if he has told you any differently he’s lying.”

“Hey! I freely admit I like cuddling!” Max pouted.

“That’s different though.” Harry insisted.

“How? Just because he acts like a child doesn’t mean he is one.”

“Oi!” Max complained with an embarrassed blush.

“No, Max will hug any willing body that stands still long enough.”

“I do not!”

“Do so!”

“You can ask for a hug whenever you need one.” Myron told him, rubbing the back of his head soothingly, brushing his hair with his fingers. “Though don’t hug Richard, he’ll run away with you.”

“Will not!” Richard burst out, echoing Max. It wasn’t any wonder that Max had learnt that particular behaviour from Richard.

Harry yawned, he was tired, but he was hungry too. He groaned at his dilemma, before getting up and going to the fridge and pulling out what he needed to make Spaghetti Carbonara. He’d eat what little he could first and then he’d go take a nap.

“Harry if you’re hungry I don’t mind cooking an early lunch.” Max said standing up.

“You sit back down.” Harry ordered a bit more sharply than he’d intended. “You’re not allowed near my food.”
Max looked crushed so Harry smiled to take the bite out of his words, but he carried on getting what he needed before washing his hands and starting his preparation.

“I think you broke him.” Talia said as she looked from her wide eyed, staring brother to Harry who started making them all lunch.

“Why isn’t he allowed near your food?” Myron asked, picking up on the thread of tension from the five of them.

“I… I did something stupid yesterday.” Max admitted, blushing heavily and looking ashamed.

“You messed with his food?” Richard asked, looking astonished. “Even though you knew what he had gone through in his childhood, that those people didn’t feed him, you still played about with his food? What did you do, put a fake spider in his meal?”

“No, worse.” Max admitted.

“You don’t have to say it.” Harry told him, not liking that Max felt like he had to do this in front of almost the entire of his family.

“Yes he does.” Draco said coldly.

“What did you do?” Myron demanded.

“I…I’m ashamed of what I did and I regretted it immediately, but I still did it and it can’t be excused, not when Harry doesn’t trust me to cook for him anymore.”

Harry frowned at that. Did he trust Max to cook? A claw of panic slipped up his throat from his belly and the revelation almost brought him to his knees. No. No, he didn’t trust Max to cook for him anymore. He turned horrified eyes to Max and they looked at one another for a long moment, before
Max buried his face in his hands and his hands in his lap.

Harry swallowed and turned away from all the eyes that were staring at him curiously.

“What did you do, Maximilius?” Myron asked sternly.

“I purposefully made the food too spicy for Harry to eat because I was angry at him.” Max said into his hands.

“Sit up, take your hands from your mouth and tell me what you did clearly. I’m sure I misheard what you mumbled to the floor.” Myron said angrily.

Max sat up and repeated what he had said and Myron looked livid.

“You purposefully messed with your own submissive mate’s food so that he couldn’t eat it, even knowing that during his childhood he was starved and had food used against him as a punishment, just because you were angry?!”

The smack from behind him made Harry flinch as he chopped up little shallot onions. Max was dragged away by Myron, Richard and Alexander and Harry heard the shouting clearly from the next room about how irresponsible he had been, how foolish, how he had been raised better and smarter, how they had thought that they hadn’t raised such a petty man and all the while he hunched down and carried on cooking.

Richard came back in and told them that Myron had gone home to cool off, Ashleigh complained because apparently ‘cooling off’ meant that Myron retreated to his home gym and lifted weights until he was so tired he couldn’t be angry, which took a long time.

Max had retreated upstairs with his Granddad and Harry said nothing. His light lunch didn’t take long to complete and he served it up and he couldn’t help but remember the last time he had tried making this, he had been sent upstairs, again by Max, and he had gone without food all night. Was that a contribution to why he didn’t trust Max when it came to food? Or was it purely his actions yesterday? Had that first moment started the break of trust and yesterday been the straw that broke the camel’s back? He didn’t know and he fiddled with his plate of food, thinking, ignoring the prompts to eat and only taking a forkful into his mouth every now and then.

Max came down, pale faced and smelling of tears. He had been crying, but it was impossible to tell from his face. Harry had purposefully left the seat next to him open and Max was forced to sit next to him and eat.

Harry scooted over until he was eating pressed right in against Max’s side, which made him smile for the first time in about an hour. He ate with his right hand, his left arm wrapped around Harry, rubbing soothing, tickly little patterns onto his side, back and mid-chest, making him giggle when Max hit a ticklish spot.

Max took over the washing up and Harry left for the living room and lined all six of his children up on a patch of carpet padded with three duvets. Leolin was asleep so he was placed on the very end along with Tegan, who was also asleep, but his four remaining boys, Farren, Regan, Calix and Braiden were all awake.

Harry tickled, pulled funny faces, made stupid noises and blew raspberries on them all until Nasta robbed one away to change his nappy and Draco joined in with playtime, Blaise sat behind Harry and started nibbling on his neck again.

“Really, Blaise, what is it with you and my neck?”

“You’ve asked before and the answer is still the same, you have the most gorgeous neck I’ve ever seen, it’s delicious too.” Blaise mumbled against his skin.

“He does?” Draco asked. He bent forward and started sucking and nibbling on the other side and Harry held both of their heads to his neck and tried to roll his hips forward into Draco’s stomach, unfortunately the blond was too far away, which made his act of trying to find friction comical and made Nasta chuckle from the settee, where he was cuddling Farren, who was dozing in his arms.

Max came in after finishing washing, drying and putting away the dishes and he robbed Regan and hefted him up onto his lap, kissing his cheek repeatedly and snatching up a silver backed soft bristled, heirloom, hairbrush and he started brushing Regan’s jet black hair from his little face.

“You put hair gel in any of their hair again and I’ll beat you with a chair.” Harry threatened.

“Oh come on, seeing Braiden with a Mohawk was hilarious and adorable!” Max whined. “Besides it was Caesar’s idea.”

“You’re older than Caesar; you’re supposed to know better!”

Max pouted and Harry had to smile. He had raved and ranted about it, but the photos were safely tucked into the photo albums he had and the babies’ individual baby books. It had been adorable, but Max wasn’t allowed to do it again, he had had to bath Braiden for half an hour to get the gel out of his hair and he had not liked a single second of it and he had cried himself into exhaustion and had fallen asleep soon after. It was not something he wanted to repeat again.
“Just because he’s supposed to know better doesn’t mean he does.” Nasta pointed out wisely and Harry chuckled.

“Ma ma!” Braiden called out and Harry turned to him and made a huge fuss over him, kissing and cuddling him.

“He’s so clever!” Harry cooed at Blaise as he hefted Braiden to his chest. “And he’s getting heavy; he has to be at least fourteen pounds now!”

“Only a stone. Ha, love, I’ve just realised that seven Braiden’s make up your weight.” Max teased and Harry poked a tongue out at him.

“It’s hard to believe that seven babies makes up your weight.” Draco said with a frown poking his belly.

Harry pouted. Draco kissed him and Blaise started nibbling on the back of his neck. He giggled and then moaned.

“Okay, break it up.” Richard gave all three of them a cuff as he moved past them before settling down next to Ashleigh.

Kimberly came tottering in with a large tea tray and Harry got up to help her.

“Why didn’t you say you wanted tea, I would have made it.” He chastised the elderly woman, who scoffed at him.

“I’m ninety, Harry, not dead. Now park your bottom and drink this lovely cup of honey tea that I made for you.”

Harry did as Kimberly told him and parked his bum between Max and Nasta and accepted the china teacup of his honey tea. He sipped it and it was perfect and he moaned into the cup and continued sipping on it.

“So Harry, Draco, Blaise, have you decided on what you want to do after Hogwarts?” Alexander asked as his Wife settled next to him, he wrapped an arm around her and kissed her cheek and she giggled like a school girl, it made Harry smile and he hoped that he and his mates were still in love when they were Alexander and Kimberly’s age and beyond.

“I was thinking about becoming a literature translator.” Blaise hedged after all three of them looked at one another. “I’m having such fun translating the book that Harry gave to me the first Christmas we were together.”

“Even though it frustrates you to the point of madness.” Harry grinned.

“Yes, even then, but I think I’d be good at it and I took Ancient Runes, which is really the only prerequisite they ask for.”

“Go for it.” Harry encouraged enthusiastically with the others murmuring their agreement.

“I’m torn, I always thought I’d be a politician like my Father, but I just don’t have the flare for it like he does and I can’t stand still and be polite to someone who’s annoying the hell out of me like he can, so I was thinking of becoming an Arithmancer.”

“You can take over from Professor Vector.” Blaise teased and Draco scowled at him, staring a play wrestling match, or rather Blaise did and then Draco started whining that it was undignified when they had company over.

“What do you want to do, Harry?”

Harry shrugged. “I haven’t given it much thought, what with having Braiden then the quintuplets; I’ll likely be pregnant again before I can find a job, so I suppose it doesn’t really matter what I want to do.”

“Harry, we’ve talked about this, love, you can have a job if you want one.” Nasta told him, turning his body to face him and taking one of his hands gently.

Harry shrugged again. “I don’t see how I can. What job can I really do when I’m pregnant all the time? When I get heavily pregnant I’m always tired and grouchy, what employer will stick with me when I’m constantly off with pregnancy leave?”
“I’m sure you’ll find something.” Kimberly answered. “I used to own a flower shop, but after I started having children, it got harder and harder to run. When Xerxes was toddling, I only had three children, Xerxes, Cassander and Alexus, but he used to pick all the flower heads off, eat the leaves, he’d cut his hands on the rose thorns, but the last straw was when he was four, nearing five, and I turned around from wrapping up an order and I found him holding Alexus’ hand through a pair of pruning shears. I closed up shop and rushed them home, I called my sister Catherine and I asked if she could take over the shop for me and I never went back to work.”

“That must have been terrifying.”

“It was. To think that I had foolishly turned my back on them even for a minute, a minute more and Alexus could have been without his left hand. All through my negligence. It took me weeks to convince myself to leave them be. I was always hanging over them, watching them, but Alexander soon convinced me to leave them be and that it had been a one off accident.”

“Mama ma.” Braiden cooed from the floor. “Ah ma!”

Blaise picked him up and handed him to Harry, who held him upright on his lap, a hand on his belly, the other one making his favoured wooden horse dance in front of him.

Braiden screeched in happiness and reached out chubby hands for the toy, which was just out of his reach. He huffed, cooed, screeched and shrieked as Harry made the horse dance in mid-air before making it clamber over Braiden’s leg, making him giggle and kick his legs.

Harry chuckled and blew a raspberry on Braiden’s cheek and he shrieked and flapped his arms and kicked his legs, twisting a little sock in the process. Draco immediately bent forward and straightened the little sock carefully on that tiny foot, pulling down the hems of the trouser legs to cover those bared legs while he was at it.

“Da!” Braiden cooed out and everyone stopped moving and looked at Braiden, who was stretching out towards Draco. “Da! Ba Da!”

Harry handed Braiden to Draco, who looked a little shell shocked as he cuddled that small body to his chest. Then Braiden did something unforgiveable. He clenched drool covered fingers into Draco’s perfectly brushed and styled hair and the blond shrieked in horror, Braiden shrieked in happiness and Harry laughed along with Max as Nasta slipped to his knees and unwound the baby’s fingers from Draco’s hair.

Draco rushed to the bathroom to fix his hair, Harry was laughing so hard he had tears rolling down his cheeks and Nasta nuzzled Braiden with his nose, pecking those little lips as Braiden cooed in confusion as he was moved around too quickly.
“Leo needs a nappy change.” Blaise announced handing the smelly baby to Harry, knowing better than to do it himself as Harry would only shove him away and do it himself anyway.

Harry took Leolin, wiped the tears from his eyes and pulled put the padded foam mat they kept in the living room, this one was pale blue, it depicted the waves of an ocean, with two reeds on either side of the mat and a large, grey hippo half underwater in the centre.

He laid Leolin on it carefully; the tiny baby squirmed and let out a little cry. The mat put pressure on his wings, so Harry stripped him and changed him quickly, making sure he wiped up everything before he powdered Leolin's bum and clad him into a clean nappy and redressed him.

“You’re such a good baby, Leolin.” Harry cooed, snuggling him in to his neck tightly, being careful not to crush those tiny wings.

Max and Nasta were hissing at one another in low voices and Harry rolled his eyes and turned to Blaise, who was playing with Tegan and Calix’s feet, licking and nibbling over the soles of their feet and Harry laughed and Blaise turned to look at him and blushed.

“Don’t stop, it’s cute.” Harry said, ignoring Max and Nasta hissing and the adults all talking about boring things that had been in that morning’s newspaper as they sipped their tea.

Harry kept Leolin in his arms, but nuzzled Regan as he blinked dark blue eyes at him. Calix’s blue eyes were the darkest, followed by Regan’s, Tegan’s, Farren’s and then Leolin's, whose eyes were a very pale blue. Leolin's hair, which was the palest, was steadily getting darker, becoming more brown than the oddly colourless and strangely textured hair it had been when he was born.

Alexander and Kimberly left just after six in the evening and Ashleigh and Richard left not too long after to check on Myron and to make sure that he hadn’t killed himself weight lifting all afternoon.

“I’m going to start dinner.” Max announced, all smiles and Harry didn’t say anything as he and Blaise bathed the babies one at a time, once again leaving Braiden for last.

They took the little toothbrush to Braiden’s gums and carefully brushed them. Surprisingly where Braiden hated baths, he loved having his gums brushed and he snatched the toothbrush from them and gummed on it himself. Harry thought it was so cute as he took some more photos of it.

They dressed the babies for bed and placed them all upstairs in their bassinets, Braiden in his cot, with the help of Draco, whose hair had been perfectly styled once more.

Max called them for dinner and Harry nervously went into the kitchen, to find that there were only three plates set on the table, Harry was confused and he looked to Max who looked as nervous as he had been as he walked into the kitchen.

“I hope you don’t mind, Harry, but I know that you don’t trust me to cook for you anymore, so I thought that perhaps we could go to a restaurant instead, that way I’m not cooking, we go on our first proper date and you get to learn how to trust in me again.”

Harry smiled and nodded.

“Give me two minutes to get changed!” Harry said as he darted back up the stairs to get dressed.

“I told you he’d enjoy it.” Nasta said calmly as he ate another bite.

“Does this mean that we each get a solo date with Harry?” Draco asked a little while later.

“If you want one.” Harry said as he skipped back into the room. “I wouldn’t say no to having a date with all of you either.”

He had dressed in his smartest, best fitting jeans, a smart, clean white shirt and the new pair of dragon hide boots that Nasta had bought for him because the profits of the sale went to help his own Dragon reserve in Brecon.

“Nowhere too fancy as I know you don’t like those posh, rich places, but it’s not a complete bug infested dump either.” Max answered.

Harry smiled, kissed the other three goodbye, warned them to look after the babies and he took Max’s hand as he Apparated them into the receiving room of a very relaxed, but still upscale restaurant. The other patrons were dressed smartly, but causally, some businessmen with briefcases of parchments on the tables with them, women were wearing skirts and blouses or dresses, but no ball gowns or evening dresses in sight and there was a relaxed, but clean air about it and Harry happily held Max’s hand.

A man dressed in an immaculate tuxedo greeted them at a podium and Max asked for the reservations under his own last name and the waiter led them to a table for two with a candle and a crystal vase of red, red roses in the centre.

They sat down and they were given a menu each and Harry grinned as he read it. This place served so many of his favourites!

“Oh I don’t know what to choose!” He complained five minutes later, sipping on his glass of red wine, which Max had made him swear not to tell Nasta about as the bottle was placed primly on their table, within easy reach of Max.

“I’d suggest a rare steak.” Max said. “It’ll go well with the wine and it’ll keep away the cravings.”

“Ooo. I want steak.” Harry grinned.

Max grinned back and he gestured to a waiter, who came over to them immediately, and he ordered for the both of them; he instructed the waiter that the steaks were to be a rare as possible. The waiter showed no signs that this was a strange choice and he bowed his way away from their table.

“How are you coping out of work?” Harry asked as he took more wine.

“To be honest, I do miss it, but I realise now that the stress of the job was getting to me and I just didn’t notice, so it’s a good thing overall and if it helps you and Draco and Blaise, then that’s the main thing, your schooling is very important.”

“I’m going to try my hardest, but the most important things to me are my children and my mates.” Harry said softly.

Max smiled at him. “Harry, we want you to have more out of life than us and the kids.”

“And if I told you that when I was younger and the teacher asked me what I wanted out of life when I grew up, I always answered, a family?” Harry admitted quietly.

Max took hold of his hand and laid a kiss to it.
“I love you, Harry. All of us love you so very much, but there is more to life than the four walls of our house and the people inside it. We want you to have independence, a life outside of us and the kids, your own separate life with your own friends.”

“You don’t have any friends.” Harry accused.

Max laughed. “I do, love. My work colleagues and I used to go out for meals and to pubs almost every night before I found you and had children. We still correspond between owls now that I’m not in work, but I don’t want to go out every night now that I have you to come home to. I’ve been there, done that and I’m too old for it now.”

“Perhaps I don’t want to start doing it in the first place.” Harry said lightly. “Perhaps I’m happy staying at home all day every day because it’s what I want to do. Perhaps I want to stay home and cuddle up with my mates and look after my children, not because I’m apparently supposed to, but because I actually want to.”

“If you want to then that’s fine, but don’t do it just because you feel that you have to, because you don’t. There are five of us, if you want an afternoon off or hell, even a whole weekend, to do what you want to do then you can and we’ll still be there when you come back. I can’t promise you won’t find Draco handcuffed to the bed or Nasta gagged and blindfolded and chained to a chair, because let’s face it, they are the biggest killjoys in our family, but everyone will be well cared for and fine and healthy for when you come home.”

Harry grinned. “I thought you were leading to something sexy then with all the talk of tying up to beds and gags, blindfolds and chains.”

Max looked surprised before he burst out laughing and Harry joined him until he was forced to calm down with the appearance of the waiter with two plates in his hands. He placed them down on the table as Harry took a sip of his wine, snorting into the glass when he saw Max pressing his lips together tightly.

They ate in silence for a while and Harry chewed thoughtfully.

“Harry, I am sorry. It was stupid, petulant, petty and I will never do it again. Never. I should never have done it the first time, I knew what had happened in your past, but it wasn’t on my mind when I did it, if it had been, if I had just had that little reminder of how painful it would be for you, I would never have done it. I’m not cruel and I hate being called cruel, I love you, Harry.”

“Who called you cruel?” Harry asked curiously.

“Nasta when he beat the shit out of me when you and Blaise left the kitchen, Draco when he beat the shit out of me when you and Blaise had left. My Dads’, my Granddad said it twice, my Grandma, my Mother and my sisters and Caesar will likely say it when he hears what I did as well.”

“I believe you when you say that you won’t do it again, Max, but I need some time to realise that, it hurt me what you did and it did break my trust in you, at least concerning food and cooking, but I think if I cooked with you for a while and saw that you weren’t adding anything, then I’d get better.”

Max smiled and bent over the table to kiss him. “We can do that if you think it’ll help. It can be practice for when I teach the kids to cook.”

“Oh I’m looking forward to that! Having them stood on a chair beside me as I bake cakes and cookies.” Harry went dreamy eyed and Max grinned.

“You handle the cakes and sweet treats; I’ll handle the main meals! Together we’ll breed culinary geniuses!”

Harry laughed in joy as they continued eating, drinking two bottles of the gorgeous red merlot and talking about all the things they would teach the kids to make in the kitchen and as more wine was consumed, the conversation moved on to, naturally, sexually torturing their missing three mates.

They shared a slice of indulgent chocolate cake and a smooth vanilla cheesecake slice and Max paid their bill and they left, laughing down the dark street.

“We need to get you home and to bed.” Max chuckled as Harry swayed a bit on his feet once the cool night air hit him and the wine he had drunk with dinner seemed to settle all at once into him and he would have stumbled if Max hadn’t caught him, even though he had felt fine in the restaurant.

“I think I need a bed, as long as Blaise is handcuffed to it with Draco balls deep inside of him!”

“Where is Nasta in this fantasy vision?” Max asked deeply.
“Playing with the box of toys wearing a dress.”

Max burst out laughing and led him down the Muggle street and into a dark alleyway.

“We’ll Apparate from here, put your arms around me.”

“You’re drunk.” Max told him.

“Yes, yes I am, but that doesn’t mean I don’t want you still! Besides, you’re drunk too; you had the same amount of wine as me!”

“I did, but I can handle my drink better than you.”

“Liar!” Harry called before he crushed his lips to Max’s.

It all went downhill from there as Max kissed him back and they started a war between their tongues and teeth. Harry biting too hard in his drunken state and cutting Max’s lip with his teeth and making the older man growl in the back of his throat, which made Harry throb in his tight jeans.

Harry popped the button on his jeans and shoved them down and stepped out of them and his boxers before starting on Max’s button and zip all before Max had realised what he had done.

“Harry, we can’t have sex here, just let me get us back home then…oh!”

Harry had wormed a hand into the front of Max’s boxers and gripped him tightly, looking up at his mate with alcohol glazed eyes.

“You will have me here because I want sex NOW! Not when we go home, Max, now! You will have sex with me here!”
“If I refuse?” Max asked softly.

Harry glared and with a burst of magic he had Max sat on the floor with his smart black trousers around his ankles. Harry climbed into that lap and Max found that he couldn’t move.

“Oh fuck, Harry!” He moaned.

This was probably the most sexually aroused he had ever been, to see his tiny, gorgeous submissive mate dominate him in such a way made him throb as Harry pushed his mouth down over him to lubricate him with his saliva.

“Harry, what if we’re seen?! We’re only just off the street; someone could see us, hear us!”

“Let them, as long as they don’t disturb us!” Harry growled.

The wine had to have done something to Harry, because Max had never seen him quite so possessive or sexually dominant as he was now, not even when he had fucked Blaise that one time, not even when he had fucked Nasta in Guadeloupe and Nasta was their top dominant.

“You will have sex with me.” Harry growled as he panted, coming up for air before slipping his mouth back down over his cock, putting it deep into his throat. The wine had definitely done something to him and Max wasn’t sure if it was a good thing or a bad thing as Harry continued to deep throat him down the alleyway. Harry had never been able to deep throat this easily; maybe the wine had reacted somehow with his Dracken, though how that was possible he had no idea, but it had done something!

Harry popped his mouth off of him and Max lamented the loss of that tight, warm throat around him, but forgot about it as soon as Harry’s mouth moved down further than his shaft and licked around his balls instead, tonguing them and sucking them into his mouth and Max really thought that he was going to embarrass himself by cumming so soon, but Harry moved sideways and bit into the meat of his leg, marking him and Max threw his head backwards and moaned.

“Harry, let me go and I’ll fuck you up against that wall!” He promised and suddenly he could move his arms and legs. He kept his word, sucked on two fingers quickly before he pulled Harry into a rough kiss.
He pushed both of those fingers into Harry and he had the pleasure of having Harry moan into his mouth, he almost screamed and Max growled into the kiss, pushing his fingers harder.

He had next to no patience as he pulled his fingers out and pushed himself in, moving to his knees, holding Harry’s thighs tightly in his hands, he stood up and pressed him against the alleyway wall, the red bricks were worn smooth and dirty, but it seemed to enflame Harry as he moaned deeply and he yanked on his hair so hard that Max’s head went with it.

Max growled and he threw his entire body weight behind his thrusts, no longer caring if Harry’s lower back and bum were scraped over the wall or his head occasionally hit the bricks as he focused everything on two things, giving Harry pleasure and holding onto his Dracken side, which wanted to come out and completely dominate Harry and fuck him through the wall.

“Please, Max. Max! Max!” Harry breathed into his ear, tugging on his hair more and squeezing his legs around his waist.

Max dug his short nails into the flesh of Harry’s thighs, clawing slightly and shoving himself into Harry, fucking him, dominating him and pleasuring him as Harry screamed and tried to get a rhythm with him, but Max left him little choice but to just sit on his hands and let him do all the work.

Max let his fangs come out, only his fangs as he clung to his wings which quivered against his spinal cord and his claws, which made his nails ache as he dug them further into Harry’s flesh.

Max slipped in and out of Harry, feeling him clench around him and it rolled his eyes into the back of his head as he threw everything he had into every thrust until Harry screamed his name to the star speckled night sky and tightened around him until he thought that he might not have a cock left to come out of Harry, or at the least a misshapen one.

He bit into Harry’s shoulder, tearing through the shirt he was wearing until he tasted blood and Harry screamed again as he clenched around him again as another wave of his orgasm hit him and Max couldn’t last through it, he worked hard not to clench his jaws anymore, but he did dig his fingers into Harry’s thighs and bum cheeks more as his orgasm washed over him with the force of a charging rhino.

He spilled into Harry and he unclenched his jaws and slipped his fangs out carefully, before pulling them back into his gums and sucking on the two crescent wounds and the four holes made by his teeth and fangs.

They panted harshly as they tried to calm their racing heartbeats and get themselves back to a normal level of breathing. Harry rested himself against Max’s chest, snuggling into Max’s neck.

“I’m tired now.” He said softly.

“Me too. I’ll make sure to get some salve on the bedside table for tomorrow morning; you’re going to be sore.”
Harry just nodded as Max pulled up his boxers and trousers from around his ankles, before hunting down Harry’s boxers and jeans. The jeans they found, the boxers had vanished.

“Fuck it, just leave them. I’m too tired to care over a pair of boxer shorts.” Harry said through a yawn.

Max nodded and he dressed Harry in just the jeans before he concentrated heavily and Apparated home. He got them home without splinching either of them, but he landed heavily and went to his knees with a thump.

Harry giggled hysterically, and loudly, as Max struggled back to his feet and tried to get them up the stairs, but where the fresh air had brought out the wine in Harry, Apparating had brought it out in Max, who couldn’t get himself up the stairs, and it seemed to have amplified the drunkenness in Harry, who just couldn’t stop giggling. So, as a result of this, they now both appeared very drunk as they stumbled into the bedroom, or rather Max stumbled into the bedroom as Harry was being carried, but Harry was still giggling like a mental patient and a sleep tousled group of mates greeted them as they were woken up by their loud, clumsy, intoxicated mates.

“What time do you call this?” Draco demanded in a sleep roughened voice. “It’s two thirty in the morning, you only went for dinner!”

“You…you shut up you!” Harry slurred. “Why aren’t you tied to the bed?! You’re supposed to be tied to the bed!”

“Are you drunk?!” Nasta hissed sitting up suddenly in the bed, inhaling deeply.

“Not as much as I was an hour ago!” Harry answered.

“You said you were taking him for dinner, not out clubbing!” Nasta accused Max.

“We did have dinner; we just had wine with dinner.”

“Too much wine!” Harry added. “Though it was a nice wine, nice dinner too and nice cake, and nice sex. No…very nice sex!”
“You had sex? Where damnit?” Blaise asked curiously.

“Somewhere I forget.” Harry mumbled. “I want bed now. I’m sleep. Maxie makes me sleepy, too good sex.”

Max grimaced as the other three turned to glare at him. “Against a wall in an alleyway on the way home.” He admitted and Harry giggled as three sets of eyes glared at them.

“You had sex in public?” Draco hissed as if it was the biggest scandal that he could possibly comprehend.

“Very nice sex.” Harry reminded Draco as he made himself fall backwards from Max’s arms and onto the bed that Max had approached as they talked.

Harry shimmied out of his ruined shirt and his opened jeans with nothing on underneath before he crawled naked to the nearest pillow, showing off the bite mark in his shoulder, the scratches on his lower back and the top swell of his bum and the small crescent nail cuts and shallow scratches in his thighs.

Harry yawned and snuggled down, until Draco smacked his bum twice.

“Owwww!” He whined. “What was that for?!?”

“Those two were for having sex in public.” Draco smacked his one cheek even harder, looking angrily at him. “That one was for coming back at gone two in the morning and worrying the life out of us.”

Nasta joined in and smacked the opposite cheek to the one Draco had just smacked.

“That one was for getting drunk.” He added disapprovingly.

Harry rolled on to his back to stop them from spanking him in punishment and he pouted at them. “I enjoyed myself and Maxie and me worked everything out! Isn’t that good? So we had sex, no one saw us, though I did lose my boxers, I think I threw them out onto the street, but then they were ripped so I didn’t want them back anyway, but we’re fine, aren’t we, Max?”

“Completely fine.” Max said as he crawled onto the bed and snuggled into Blaise.

“I want cuddles now that you’ve smacked my bum so hard, that hurt! I’ve been fucked hard against a brick wall! I’m tender!”

That made Blaise chuckle and soon all of them were laughing and Nasta cuddled him up in his arms and Draco slipped down to cuddle between him and Blaise, who wrapped up Max in a hug and soon they all fell asleep, though Nasta stayed awake tonight to watch them all drift off, letting out a relieved sigh that Max and Harry had seemingly worked something out over their trust issue with food and cooking. He didn’t want to live in a conflicted household, yet he had wanted them to work their issues out themselves without his interference and he was so glad that they had. He settled himself down with Harry in his arms, making a mental note to bring up a healing salve for Harry when he went down in an hour to make up Leolin's bottle.

Chapter Fifty-Eight – School Time Blues

Max had been called in urgently to work. It had been a bit unnerving to see a grown man begging on the floor for Max to come into work for just a day to help them out. But despite the show of a grown man begging for his help, Max had looked to Harry before he had agreed and he knew that Max would have declined to help the man if Harry had given even a hint that he was unhappy with him going into work today while he was supposed to be off, but as Harry shooed them both out of the house, he wondered what to do. Blaise had gone to visit his Mother and Lucius had called Draco in for some talk or something half an hour later, Harry just hoped that it went well and Draco came back happy or he’d shove his claws through Lucius Malfoy’s throat.

This left him and Nasta with six babies and Harry was currently trying out the Plum goop that he and Max had bought from the supermarket.

The bluish-purply goo was not having any more luck than the home made stuff and Harry sighed as Braiden slapped the spoon away, flinging the goo over the floor.

“Why don’t you try putting the food into his mouth instead of waiting for him to work out that he’s supposed to put his mouth over the spoon?” Nasta suggested lightly from where he was reading the morning paper, Tegan in the crook of the arm that he wasn’t using to turn the pages.

Harry put the spoon in the sink and selected another one of the colourful weaning spoons that they had bought, got some more purply-blue goo onto it and he then tickled under Braiden’s chin to get him giggling, he then placed the spoon into his mouth when it was open.

Braiden immediately gummed on the object in his mouth and he actually tasted his first real food for the first time. Harry grinned as Braiden sucked at the goo and then swallowed.

“He did it, Nasta! Did you see?”

“I saw it all perfectly, love.” Nasta answered, watching with a grin. “Maybe now that he’s tried it he won’t be so adverse to it in the future.”

Braiden kept gumming on the spoon even though there was nothing left, so Harry took it out gently, Braiden giving an unhappy cry as he did so, before he filled it up with a small amount of the smooth goo and pushed it back into Braiden’s mouth, who gummed the spoon to get the food off of it, holding Harry’s hand to keep the spoon in his mouth.

Harry cooed mentally and aloud as he praised Braiden repeatedly and told him over and over how ‘proud Mummy was of him’

Nasta chuckled and rubbed Harry’s back. Harry continued to feed Braiden until Braiden started pushing the spoon away again; Harry put Braiden into Nasta’s arms and cleaned up the spoon and little bowl that he had used for the food, cleaned up the mess on the floor and then kissed Nasta hard as he took Braiden back.

“She tease.” Nasta hissed at his back.

Harry laughed all the way into the living room, where four babies were sleeping peacefully in bassinets.

Harry fell onto the settee with Braiden, who could now not only hold his head up, but could sit up as well without support, though he did have a tendency of toppling over if he reached for something.

Braiden had taken a keen interest in his face it seemed as he poked and pushed little fingers into his mouth, eyes, nose and ears. Harry chuckled and blew a raspberry against Braiden’s hand, which set him off giggling as only a baby could and like all baby giggles, it was infectious.

Harry found himself playing with Braiden for over an hour until his little boy got tired and started yawning and rubbing his eyes.

“Alright love, even I can take that hint.” Harry grinned as he stood up and after giving Braiden a kiss, he placed him down into the travel cot that was so very handy because it could be moved to which ever room they needed it in.
“Ah ma.” Braiden called out sleepily and Harry went misty eyed as he looked down on his yawning baby. He covered him over and bent down with much straining, to kiss that peachy cheek, before leaving Braiden to sleep, heading back to the kitchen.

“Braiden down to sleep?” Nasta asked as he folded up the read newspaper one handed.

“Yes, our little guy just went off. He’s getting so much better with his words, I think he might start babbling to us and himself soon, not just say odd words now and then.”

Nasta smiled at his enthusiasm and excitement and gestured him over. Nasta pulled his head into a passionate kiss by his hair and then turned him around as he was malleable, smacked his bum and asked for a cup of green tea.

Harry laughed at him, but boiled the kettle, putting a green teabag into one mug and an ordinary one into his own, he poured over the boiling water, disposed of the bags, handed Nasta his mug and then drizzled honey and milk into his own before cwtching up to Nasta’s side.

“I love you so much.” Harry said softly, after a moment was taken to savour their respective teas.

Nasta didn’t answer but pulled him into another kiss, Tegan being sandwiched between them gently.

“You are the most amazing person I have ever met.” Nasta murmured against his mouth as they broke apart for air, but their lips were still pressed together. “You have given me six beautiful children, two biological sons and a biological daughter, our only daughter, which I am very boastful about.”

“You shouldn’t tease the others.” Harry scolded without heat.

“I can’t help it, love. Do you know how rare it is for an all-male harem to produce a girl? It’s not impossible like it is the all-female harems’ producing baby boys, but it is very rare and I gave you a baby girl.”

“I live to do the impossible.” Harry rolled his eyes before something clicked. “Hold on, does this mean that I won't have many daughters?”

Nasta nodded. “There isn’t much information on the male submissives, even less about ones like yourself who chose all male dominants, but the few pieces that I managed to dig up, all mentioned how exceedingly difficult it was to conceive a girl. One submissive I’ve read up on had two dominants, both male, and they had sixty-three children, fifty-one of them were boys and only twelve of them were girls. Another harem with a male submissive and three male dominants had one hundred and seventeen children, ninety-eight of them were boys and only nineteen were girls and the last one I found was a male submissive with just the one male dominant, they had forty-eight children and all of them were boys.”

Harry’s face fell as he took Tegan from Nasta and cuddled his only daughter tightly.

“I don’t want only the one daughter. I want as many girls as boys, Nasta; I don’t want so many of the one and next to none of the other.”

Nasta pulled him into his body tightly and pressed a lingering kiss to his hair.

“We’ll have daughters, Cariad, just not as many as we all would like. It may not be as apparent in the beginning, but give it ten years and it’ll be noticeable.”

Harry sighed and he kissed Tegan, brushing her black hair from her little face. Draco couldn’t wait until she was older and had longer hair so that he could brush it. Harry had already warned him that he wasn’t to brush her hair until there was nothing left, but he left it alone when he saw how happy Draco was, cuddling the children, soft bristled hairbrush in hand, carefully and gently brushing the soft downy hair the Quintuplets had. Braiden’s hair was growing in thick and fast now and Harry was wondering if five months was too soon to cut his hair, but very soon his fringe would be in his eyes and as Braiden had taken to pulling on his own hair and then crying because it had hurt, he was giving it serious contemplation.

Harry carried Tegan into the living room and laid her in the bassinet that was between Regan and Calix’s bassinets. He liked keeping her close to Regan, he didn’t know why, but it felt right to let them sleep next to one another, though he did refuse to put them in the same bassinet.

He was stuck then for something to do, anything. He had done all the baby washing that morning, he had even cleaned the house with his limited knowledge of household spells that Mrs Weasley had gifted to him, because his mates refused to see him on his hands and knees scrubbing like a house-elf. Not that he listened to them, he just didn’t parade the fact that he scrubbed the floors and cupboards when he woke up an hour or so before them most days. He enjoyed doing it, like Max enjoyed cooking. Speaking of which Harry was very much enjoying his time spent cooking every meal with Max, sneaking spoonfuls of this and bites of that, and when Max caught him he always got a swat to the bum, which made him laugh.

Harry chuckled and turned on the TV quietly, flipping through the channels. Max’s TV was barely used, Harry didn’t think it had been turned on in months and only then it had been for a weather report.

Harry grinned as he found a sports channel showing pro wrestling, he chuckled and decided to play a little game with Nasta, who claimed that he wasn’t the jealous type. He had proved that to him time and time again that he wasn’t bothered by Harry kissing and having sex with the other mates, even without him, but would he get jealous if Harry started ogling other men outside of their mateship?

The heavily muscled, scantily clad men on the TV, touching and holding each other, pinning the other to the floor, had to be considered soft porn, Harry decided as he watched wide eyed as the one wrestler climbed onto the other’s back, his groin pressed to the other’s bum as he held him around the neck. They were wiggling and writhing over the floor, the one on the bottom was probably trying to buck the other off of him, but to Harry it just looked like he was shoving his arse back into the other’s groin in a mimic of sex. There was something completely homoerotic about the entire match and Harry found himself not only glued to the screen, but getting hard to boot.

He watched several matches, completely transfixed, before Nasta came into the living room to find him.

“Harry?” He called as loudly as he dared with six sleeping babies in the room. “Harry?”

Harry didn’t take his eyes from the screen and Nasta’s eyes widened as the scent of lust and arousal hit him. Harry was getting off on watching wrestling of all things.

Nasta made his way carefully over to where Harry was lying on his stomach in front of the TV, watching as two men threw each other around the ring, his breathing had gone heavy and held a breathless quality to it and Nasta snarled as he dropped onto Harry’s back and bent forward to bite at that delectable neck.

He growled at that and snapped at Harry’s throat, trying to get him to turn his head away from the TV. Harry just batted at him and continued watching the two men roll around the floor.

Jealousy like he had never felt before flooded into him and he snarled and seized Harry’s head and pulled him into a vicious kiss. Harry shouldn’t look at anyone but him with those lustful, smouldering eyes!

“You want to be pinned to the floor?” Nasta growled as he turned Harry onto his back and pinned his wrists down and still Harry tried to arch his head back to watch the TV screen.

“Fuck, Nasta. I’m only watching wrestling!” Harry complained as his little submissive wriggled under him, making his hardness throb at the dominating, controlling position he had over Harry.
“You’re not just watching it though are you?” Nasta hissed. “You’re getting off on it!”

He rolled his hips into Harry’s groin and the younger man threw his head back and groaned as his own hardness was rubbed by the movement.

“When did you get such a fetish?” Nasta asked.

“When I turned on the TV and saw it for the first time?” Harry gave him such a naughty grin that Nasta almost groaned as he swooped down to kiss those gorgeous lips, eating from them and the mouth beyond trying to get Harry to forget all about wrestling and he knew that he had succeeded when Harry wrapped those gorgeous legs around his hips and tried to climb his body like a monkey.

He broke apart for air and he looked at Harry’s heaving chest, his flushed cheeks and glassy eyes and felt accomplished, right up until Harry looked over his own shoulder back at the TV and to the two men having a power struggle on the floor.

He growled, so insanely jealous that two wrestlers could hold Harry’s attention over himself. He was practically throwing himself at Harry and his mate was still looking to the TV. He gripped a fistful of that messy hair and yanked that head back into a possessive kiss, Harry moaning into his mouth at the rough treatment.

“You want it rough? Is that what you’re trying to do? You don’t need to make me jealous to do that, Cariad, you only need to ask.” Nasta whispered the last five words into Harry’s ear hotly and bit at it afterwards, making a passionate cry come from Harry’s throat.

Nasta tore the front of Harry’s jeans clean away with his claws and ripped the boxer shorts underneath until they fell away. He bit at Harry’s body, which was already covered with healing love bites from Blaise and Draco and a set of deeply imprinted crescent teeth marks and four fang holes that had bruised to a purple ruin that Harry had got from Max.

Harry moaned and arched under him as he bit at Harry’s body, sinking his teeth in and reining himself in just enough so that he didn’t bite away a chunk of flesh. He left bleeding marks all over Harry’s body and by the time he reached Harry’s face, Harry’s eyes had rolled into the back of his head. Nasta had had no idea that Harry would be so receptive to such dominating, otherwise painful stimulation during sex. It was a major turn on, he found as he grew harder in his shorts.

He ripped the button and zip from his own jeans, the pressure was too much, too painful to carry on.
with them on. He dug his fingernails deeply into Harry’s hips when he started mewling in complaint as he stopped biting him. Harry arched backwards and let out a strange noise that Nasta had never heard him emit before, it went straight down to his cock and made it throb painfully.

He kissed and sucked harshly at Harry’s neck, right up by his jawbone and Harry bucked uncontrollably under him, then he started trying to roll him over, like the wrestlers on the TV, and Nasta grinned as he played the game, letting Harry roll him over onto the floor before rolling him right back over, twisting Harry until he was on his stomach and Nasta pinned him down roughly.

He pushed himself against Harry’s arse and he thrusted himself against him, his cock slipping between Harry’s cheeks and Harry’s head flew back, almost catching his nose and mouth.

“You’re pinned.” Nasta growled. “Stay where you are, don’t you move!”

Harry moaned, but stayed where he was as Nasta bit down his spine, working to get flesh between his teeth. Harry was losing weight again, he’d have to deal with that, but after he’d thoroughly fucked him first.

He reached the swell of Harry’s arse and he licked the two little dimples there, he moved his hands down and pressed his thumbs into those indents and he grinned, as he always did, as he saw that they still fit perfectly, it was like he had made those dimples on the curve of Harry’s arse with his own thumbs.

He bit the smooth, firm skin covering Harry’s gorgeous arse. Harry had an amazing bum and he loved playing with it, touching it, licking and biting at it.

He sucked on the mouthful of flesh between his teeth and Harry writhed on the living room floor, Nasta was about to lift Harry’s hips, so he didn’t get carpet burn in a very sensitive place, but he caught sight of the TV still showing wrestling matches and he pressed Harry’s lower body back down to grind against the carpet instead. Harry had wanted it rough; he was going to come out of it with a few souvenirs.

Harry cried out and he arched his back up and he threw his head back. Nasta kissed him, nipping at those plush lips, before ducking down to bite a bloody mark into Harry’s other bum cheek, before slipping between them both to lick a wide stripe from balls to tail bone. Harry shrieked and writhed and Nasta growled at him. He slapped a bitten bum cheek hard and Harry yelped.

“I told you to stay still!” He hissed and Harry moaned.

“Nasta.” He moaned breathily and Nasta growled, hearing his name whispered out in such an aroused voice made him throb and he thrusted himself uncontrollably against Harry, catching the head of himself on the rim of Harry’s entrance twice, making his submissive mewl and his hands scrabble to find something to clench.

Nasta licked back down Harry’s spine before burying his tongue into Harry’s body while he pushed Harry’s face down into the carpet as he screamed, he looked over his shoulder at the five bassinets and the travel cot. They were all silent.

“Be quiet.” He ordered with a snarl.

Harry whimpered and pushed himself back into him and Nasta chuckled, bending down to push his tongue back into Harry, who bit his own arm to keep from screaming. Nasta smelt the blood and he growled deep in his throat, nibbling carefully around Harry’s entrance, not willing to bite him here, or be too rough in such a delicate place, Harry wanted to be in a bit of pain as they fucked, not be in absolute agony.

Harry panted and pleaded under his tongue and teeth and it made his ego swell. He was causing Harry to act like this, no one else. Right at this minute, there was no one else, just him and Harry and his Dracken roared his approval as their submissive whimpered and cried for them, only for them.

Nasta couldn’t push off his own pleasure any longer as he rose to his knees behind Harry and used his own saliva as lubricant. He hadn’t exactly been planning on this or he would have at least put some lube within easy reach, but then Harry was in a strange, wound up mood, he may not even want any lubrication. That thought turned him on even more and he swallowed a moan of his own.

He pressed into Harry, who hadn’t been prepared nearly enough, and he was so tight that he had to work himself inside those tight, clenching muscles as Harry gurgled and bit at his own arm once again to stop from screaming.

It took so much effort just to get himself inside Harry, who he was sure was bleeding inside, but he couldn’t be sure as he had bitten Harry until he bled and Harry had bitten himself until he bled, so there was too much blood around to be sure, but Harry was too slick inside for it to be from his saliva alone.

“Are you alright?” He couldn’t help asking, even if it did ruin the fantasy.

It took Harry several attempts at talking before he managed to get any words out without moaning, whimpering or gasping.

“So big.” Harry choked out distractedly, pressing himself back onto his cock and he had to screw his eyes closed at the pressure around him increased before Harry rocked forward again, sliding himself up and down his length. He doubted now that Harry had heard a word that he had said, but he didn’t seem to be in much pain yet.

Nasta’s body spasmed once, from his shoulders to his knees and he couldn’t control it as he thrust himself forward into Harry, who cried out for him, his back flushing with heat as he rocked himself back onto him.
Nasta touched Harry’s heated body and yanked him to his hands and knees, allowing him more freedom to rock more fully, helping him out, not that he needed the help, but the extra tightening of Harry’s muscles as he ‘helped out’ rolled his eyes back into his head and he sunk fingernails into Harry’s waist and used his grip to yank Harry back onto him viciously and Harry mewed from deep in his throat.

Nasta shoved Harry’s head and shoulders down and pulled his hips higher, the new angle allowed him to ram into Harry’s prostate and the screaming started. Nasta jerked his hips hard, fast and rough, knowing that he didn’t have much time before Harry’s increasingly loud screams woke a baby.

Harry’s loudest scream yet signalled his orgasm and Nasta jerked himself into Harry and remained inside of him as his own orgasm took over him so suddenly as Harry clenched so tightly around him.

When the buzzing in his head stopped and his hearing and sight came back to him, he could hear a baby crying and he groaned as he pulled himself out of Harry on shaky arms and he crawled to the bassinet with the crying baby. There were two crying babies, Regan and Calix. He scooped them to his sweaty chest and collapsed back against the settee, shushing the babies distractedly as he watched Harry wiggle and writhe on the carpet, he could see now, from his own cock and the pinkish liquid seeping out of Harry, that he had split him inside and he made a mental note to get one of Max’s healing pastes to apply to Harry’s insides.

The two babies dropped back off to sleep once they had been soothed and he placed them back into their bassinets and he crawled back to Harry, pulling him into his arms, even as Harry moaned and complained, his body writhing in pain and Nasta cuddled him, snuggling him in his lap and rubbing the tension from his shoulders and back.

Nasta chuckled deeply before forcing himself up to his feet and carrying Harry into the kitchen, boiling the kettle to make them both some tea. He held Harry with one arm as he used the other to make tea for them both.

“I could get used to this, I feel like Braiden.” Harry grinned.

“I could put your tea in a bottle.” Nasta said with a matching smirk, raising his one eyebrow.

Harry laughed. “I don’t have Daddy issues. I just want to be held, I don’t think my legs will support me.”

Nasta took the cups over to the table one at a time before sitting down and easing Harry up slightly, so that he wasn’t flat on his back in his arms but was still reclining back slightly, resting on his shoulder. He gave Harry his cup before sipping on his own. The warm tea relaxed his body fully and he let out a long sigh. He felt so much better.

Harry did the same but he was visibly uncomfortable as he shifted continuously on his lap. Nasta slipped his arm from around Harry’s back, to down around his hips, pushing his forearm under his thighs and pulling him up, taking his weight off of his sore bum. The awkward placement and angle of his arm was borderline painful, but when Harry smiled at him so lovingly and gratefully, he didn’t care, especially not when Harry snuggled up to him and pecked at his lips as if feeding from them.

“I love you so much, Nasta.” Harry told him, his eyes burning with sincerity. Nasta loved those eyes only slightly more than he loved those plush, pouty, kissable lips, especially when those eyes burnt with such love for him.

Nasta made sure not to jostle Harry as he kissed him before pressing him to drink his tea, hoping it would relax him some more.

Max came tearing into the room, his wings and fangs displayed as he sniffed deeply, a constant and uncontrollable growl in the back of his throat.

“Harry’s fine, we had a very rough sex session.” Nasta said soothingly as Max came to kneel before Harry and sniffed at his naked, bleeding body.

“Very, very rough.” Max grumbled deeply as he took in the bloody bite marks on Harry’s inside thighs.

“I’m alright. Are you done with work?” Harry inquired as he pushed his teacup at Max, looking at him pleadingly with wide green eyes until Max chuckled and gave him a kiss before going to make some more tea.

“All done. Two sick calls and an outbreak of Scrofungulus in Maidstone that’s spreading very quickly to neighbouring cities. Twelve batches of the antidote done in four hours. My hands are cramping.”

Max set three cups of tea down on the table and he sat down but before he could pick up his cup his hands were caught in small, soft, gentle hands and Harry began massaging his hands, rubbing his fingers and easing the painful tension from him.

“You keep this up and I’ll be forced to marry you.” Max teased, kissing Harry softly.
Harry chuckled and wrapped Max’s hands lovingly around his teacup, pulling back with his fingertips gliding over the backs of Max’s hands teasingly.

“So tell me how you two got to have such a rough ride when I was stuck in work, labouring over potions, where’s Draco?”

“Lucius flooed Draco and wished to speak to him.” Harry answered. “So he left not too long after you did.”

“And the sex?”

“I caught Harry indulging in a new fetish.” Nasta answered.

“You weren’t playing with those toys without us again were you?” Max pleaded.

“No, he was panting and getting off on watching your TV.”

Max lowered his eyebrows. “What the hell was on the TV? I thought I blocked all the porn channels when Caesar went looking for them just after I moved in.”

“You forgot to block the soft porn channels.” Harry grinned.

“Soft porn channels?” Max questioned.

“The contact sports channels.” Nasta elaborated.

Max understood all at once and he grinned and then threw his head back laughing.

“What sport was it? Football, rugby, American football? All of those are homoerotic sports.”

“Wrestling.” Harry said softly.
Max laughed and pinched his cheek gently. “I’m proud of you, love. Only you could know that watching wrestling would wind Nasta up.”

“It did not ‘wind me up’.” Nasta refuted. “He was damn near ignoring me! I was throwing myself at him and he tried to get away from my advances so he could watch his match.”

“I still don’t know who won the Intercontinental championship.” Harry pouted.

Nasta nibbled around his neck and Harry chuckled. “I’m far too sore to go again.” He said apologetically.

“Max, could you get a healing salve for him, I tore his insides. We didn’t use lubricant.”

“Fuck, I wish I’d been there to watch.” Max exclaimed even as he got up to pull down the first aid kit he kept in the top cabinet in the kitchen. He took out the right salve without even needing to look at the little label on the front and he handed it to Nasta.

Nasta coated a finger and without any hesitation, or time to allow Harry to protest or think about it, he pushed that finger into Harry’s body. Harry moaned and dug his heels and his little toes into Nasta’s leg and rubbed his feet against his leg as he mewled and writhed, not entirely in pleasure either as that probing finger rubbed the splits inside his body, no matter how gently.

Max knelt down in front of him again and held his feet tightly to stop him from hurting Nasta accidentally as he applied the healing salve, but he did help take Harry’s mind from what was happening by kissing and licking his kicking feet, which were too ticklish for Harry to ignore the ministrations placed on them, so he alternated between giggling and moaning, which made Max chuckle and Nasta to grin against his neck.

“All done.” Nasta replied, easing his finger out gently, grimacing as it was covered in blood. Harry was bleeding more than he thought he had been. “Give the salve time to work, love then you may want to have a bath, you’re bleeding quite a bit.”

Nasta handed Harry off to Max, who cuddled Harry on his lap tightly before easing himself up into his chair and he pulled the honey tea towards Harry as Nasta went to wash his hands in the sink.

“I haven’t had a bath in ages. We’ve only managed short showers since the quintuplets were born.”
“We’ll take over the afternoon shift.” Max joked, winking at him. “You take as long as you need, though if you stay in for over two hours we’ll assume you’ve drowned and barge in on you.”

Harry chuckled and snuggled into Max as he agreed without too much prompting; he loved baths and he hadn’t had the time to indulge lately. He was looking forward to it.

Draco looked horrified to the man who had been his mentor. He looked to Severus Snape, who was a ruin of the man he had been only a week ago.

His hair, which was usually greasy anyway, hung in limp rats’ tails against a face that was drawn and skeletal looking. He looked like he had aged fifty years overnight and Draco was at a loss for what to say as he stood beside his Father.

The Headmaster had managed to get Regulus’ body away from Severus and he was being prepared for burial. His water swollen wand was clasped tightly in Severus’ hands and a leather cord with a tarnished silver pendant that Draco had never seen before was tied around Severus’ throat.

“Severus, we have been friends for many years and I mislike seeing you like this. You did not deteriorate this badly when Regulus first went missing, why have you now that you have found him? You knew that he was dead long before you saw him, or perhaps it is the manner of which you saw him for the first time in almost two decades that has you acting this way.”

“Harry and Nasta are having nightmares about what they saw.” Draco put in quietly as Severus remained silent. “It’s only logical to think you are as well, especially with the added stress of finding him after so long and in such a place.”

“He drowned.” Severus’ voice was coarse and gruff. “The Inferi dragged him to the bottom of that lake and he drowned.”

Draco swallowed. Nasta and Harry were having nightmares of the Inferi dragging them into the lake and being drowned also, so he found those words clogging his throat with emotion after being woken up three times a night and listening to Nasta and Harry as they talked about the horror of being dragged into the ice cold lake and drowned at the endless bottom in the pitch blackness.

“I can take small comfort in the knowledge that Regulus was not pregnant at his time of death.” Severus told them. “But the pain of seeing him, dead and lifeless, of holding his stone cold body in my arms, looking as young as he was when he died, unchanged and unaged.”

“It cemented it in your mind that he was dead.” Lucius finished. “It affirmed it in your mind that he was dead and gone and it put an image of him as he died in your mind, an image you had lost over the years or had become less real and now that you have seen him again, it has brought all of those images back and with it all of the memories.”

“You need to let him go.” Draco said softly. “Not his memory or his unique person, but his body. You need to let him be buried; you need to bury your hurt and pain with him, because if you don’t, you’ll end up joining him.”

“Is that such a bad thing?” Was the soft, curious reply as if the thought were not only acceptable, but appealing.

“Yes, it is a bad thing, because you have people here who will miss you still.” Draco answered. “Mother and I would be distraught and what would all those dunderheaded first years do without you to weed out the talent and train them in your own unique way? I only have a love of potions now thanks to your teachings.”

“You’re a strong man, Severus.” Lucius slipped in. “You have survived before; you can do so once again. Allow us to help you. Allow us to support and love you, you are young still, you’re life can carry on, but life is only what you make of it, if you wallow around in self-pity and squalor, living in despair and your own filth, then perhaps you are better off dead after all.”

Draco was shocked at his Father’s words and the firm hand that dragged him towards the doorway. The heavy wood door slammed with a resounding bang and Lucius strutted down the corridor, still pulling him along.

“Father…how could you say that to him?” Draco questioned, still stunned.

“Severus is a very stubborn, prideful man, Draco. People like Severus will not accept help from anyone, they need to be forced and manipulated into living once more.”

“You sound like you’re speaking from experience.”

“Who do you think it was that got him to start living his life again after Regulus went missing in the Draco hoped that it worked this time as well and that they didn’t get a floo call informing them that Severus had killed himself in his private rooms. He couldn’t wait to get back home so he could give Harry a hug and reassure him that everything was going to be fine, that the nightmares would eventually abate and the terror that he obviously felt would fade.

He knew that Max was helping Nasta, but he hoped that he would be able to help as well. He didn’t like the thought that Nasta was suffering as Harry was and he wanted to be able to help the older man like he was helping Harry. He didn’t understand why Nasta was only allowing Max and Harry to comfort him after the nightmares. Harry he could understand, he was the one who had gone through the ordeal with him, but why wouldn’t Nasta allow him or Blaise to help him or comfort him when he woke up gasping in a cold sweat? They both wanted to help, but they always seemed to be shut out.

Harry groaned as the staring, pointing and whispering started back up the moment he stepped foot into the Great Hall.

It was the twelfth of January and they were back at Hogwarts after a very chaotic goodbye and a trip through the floo, because Harry refused to waste time he could spend lounging around at home on the gossip mongering, uncomfortable, cramped compartments of the Hogwarts Express.

The newspapers had ignored Richard, Myron and Lucius’ threats and had continued printing lies and rubbish about his children. One particular issue had claimed, very spectacularly, that his ‘defective child had died’ and that he was ‘inconsolable to the point of a complete mental breakdown.’

Harry could have gone a lifetime without hearing the lies spewed about him and his family, but when students noticed that he was in fact still surrounded by his four lovers and that they were carrying six babies and not five, the whispers broke out.

Hermione rushed to him and refrained from breaking his back in her usual hug as he had both arms full of baby. She looked so worried she was actually pale.

“I’ve been reading the papers and…”

“All shit.” Harry cut in immediately. “I haven’t given any interviews, these lot haven’t given an interview, we’ve been trying to stop them from printing shit about me, them and the children, but they’re ignoring us and any legal jargon Lucius, Richard and Myron are sending them. Richard in particular is outraged that he and his law firm are being ignored. He’s threatening to take legal action against them.”
“So you haven’t lost…”

“No. All babies are alive and well.”

“But they said one was born…”

“Leolin looked like he was born without the skin on his back because he was very premature. He took Nasta’s Faerie blood, Hermione, Faeries wings finish developing during the fifth month of pregnancy and the quintuplets were born at four months, so Leolin’s wings didn’t have any skin on them. We had to be so very careful because it’s painful for him and because they were basically open sores we had to be aware at all times of any infections and things, but he’s completely fine, he has a few scabs left, but the skin on his wings has grown in nicely.”

“I’m glad to hear that, Harry, but Leolin, really?” She gave him a knowing look and he felt his cheeks flush with blood.

“See, even Granger thinks it’s a terrible name.” Draco put in as he moved past them to the Slytherin table.

“It’s not a terrible name; I just know why you called him that.” She put in softly as she kissed his cheek. “Ginny and I want to catch up with you later; we haven’t been introduced to the little bundles of joy.” She gave him a grin that he returned and Harry chuckled as he left to the Slytherin table to be pointed at and have nosy little fuckers trying to get a glimpse of his blanket wrapped children.

“I swear to Merlin if they don’t stop I’m going to curse them.” Max hissed possessively as he cradled Regan in his one arm, his other arm slipping around Harry in a display of the possessiveness in his voice.

Harry cuddled Leolin and Farren tightly to his chest as a Ravenclaw ambled past in a faked casual way while waving to a friend halfway down the Ravenclaw table, but her eyes were devouring his mates and the babies they held as she peeked over his shoulder to see if the blankets covered the babies’ faces.

Harry lost his patience and he shoved her away from him, she stumbled, but he hadn’t shoved her hard enough to land her on her arse, thought he had wanted to. He glared at her and she hurried past to the friend that she had been waving to.
“That wasn’t nice, Harry.” Nasta chastised, but there was no real heat to his words and he was trying to hide a smile.

“What? I was just giving her a helping hand, she obviously wanted to reach her friend, but it seemed to me that she hit a section of floor covered in a sticking charm.” Harry answered innocently.

Draco and Blaise snorted, Max let out a laugh and Nasta smiled and handed him a chunk of fudge chocolate.

Harry quickly and safely held Farren and Leolin with one arm, snatched the chocolate chunk and shoved it whole into his mouth, chewed and then swallowed, before moving his sons back into separate arms.

“You said that there was none left.” He accused with a pout.

“You had eaten three bars.”

“They were snack sized bars, they don’t count.”

“What made you change your mind?” Draco asked, leaning over the table and using a napkin to wipe a smear of chocolate off Harry’s lip.

“He deserved a reward for helping the young woman get on her way after hitting a sticking charm.” Nasta replied simply and Harry grinned widely.

“I love you.” He told Nasta.

Someone snorted and the five of them looked to Theo Nott, who was sitting as close to Blaise as he could given that Pansy Parkinson had claimed the seat directly beside him and the Greengrass sisters directly opposite.

“Something you wish to say?” Draco inquired in that snobbish, drawling tone that he pulled off so well that it made you feel like a scummy, inch tall, mollusc.
“You can’t love more than one person.” Theo answered back.

Harry reared back in surprise.

“Who the hell told you that?” Max demanded incredulously. “Because I assure you that they’re wrong. I love my Mother and Fathers, my brother and sisters, my grandfather and grandmother, all of my Uncles and Aunts and cousins. I love my little niece, I love my four lovers and our six children with all of my heart. If what you’re saying is true, then what parent do you love and which one don’t you love? Because if you can only love one person at a time, then you only love one of them and if you love one of your parents, then you can’t possibly love our Blaise as you claim you do.”

Harry grinned at the stressed emphasis on the word ‘our’, ensuring that not even Theo could miss the possessive claim Max put on Blaise.

“You can’t all love him! Not as much as just one person could! I could love him fully, not designate him a time to be in my affections!” Theo burst out passionately.

“Who said anything about our affection being designated to time slots?” Harry demanded. “We love one another fully and completely every moment of every day! I can’t just turn my love for one of them off and move onto another, I love them all, all of the time.”

“You think you do…”

“No, I do. End of!” Harry snarled as he pushed Farren at Max, slipped around him and shoved Blaise along the bench until he was between him and Max and sat in his place, turning his back on Theo and by extension Pansy and latched onto Blaise with the arm not holding Leolin.

“Ma ma!” Braiden cooed from Blaise’s arms and Harry felt all the tension and anger melt from him as he looked into the little face of his five month old son.

Harry kissed those pouted lips, not even minding the drool and he pulled back to rub noses with him, making Braiden screech in delight.

“Pass Leo to me, love.” Nasta encouraged. “You can focus on Braiden then.”
“Leo?” Theo cut in, his face disgusted and horrified. “You let him call a child Leo, Blaise?”

“I didn’t let him do anything, Theo. Harry named them and that’s the end of it. I quite like the name, it fits him.” Blaise said coolly, as he twisted Braiden on his lap to face Harry.

“Just like a Gryffindor to name a child Leo.” Astoria sniffed.

Harry glared at her. “His name is Leolin. Lee-O-leen.” He stressed to them. “Not Leo.”

He turned back to Braiden and tickled his sides and Braiden huffed in screechy, giggling delight and Harry couldn’t not grin at him as those hands reached out to him, little fingers clenching.

“We make an adorable baby, Blaise; you’ll have to give me another one soon.” Harry said loudly.

Blaise kissed him and Harry grinned into that kiss as he heard a hiss come from Theo.

“You too, Draco. I want a baby from you as well.”

Draco smirked at him and saluted him with the glass of water he had taken a sip from.

“Whatever you want, love.” He proclaimed.

“What about me? Don’t you want my babies?” Max actually managed to fake a look of total devastation and Harry chuckled.

“You’ve already gotten two out of me.” Harry reminded him.

“Not nearly enough.” Max pouted. “And what about him?” He said pointing at Nasta, who raised an eyebrow at him silently. “He has three babies.”

“He’s not asking for any more.” Harry winked at Nasta who smirked.
“So the five babies you just birthed were not Draco’s?” Astoria asked looking smug at this thought.

“No. They weren’t.” Harry answered, his tone very unfriendly.

“I could give you a baby, Draco! I’m ovulating today!” She told the blond excitedly.

Harry burst out laughing at the disgusted horror and slight panic that passed over Draco’s face.

“That’s disgusting!” He exclaimed, losing control of his tight, Malfoy mask for a moment. “What could possibly lead you to conceive that I would not only want to have sex with you in the first place, but that I find the idea of having a baby with you remotely pleasant or welcoming?” He demanded.

“But…you want a baby, you need an Heir.” Astoria replied confusedly.

“Yes, I want a baby with my lover Harry, I do need an Heir, but as I’m yet to graduate and my lover has proven himself fertile and a competent, capable Mother, my Father is willing to wait until Harry and I eventually conceive naturally, rather than force the issue and make problems.”

“Really?” Harry questioned.

Draco nodded. “It’s what he wanted to speak to me about yesterday before we went to visit Severus.”

“How is he?” Harry asked softly.

“I am hopeful that he will be fine in time, but as you can see from the presence of Horace Slughorn at the top table, he will not be teaching again this year. Mother insisted that he take the rest of the year off and she is doting at him at his home, much to his ire and annoyance.”

Harry grinned. “I hope he gets better soon.” He whispered as Dumbledore stood to welcome them back after the Christmas season and gave the go ahead for the feast to start.
Harry dove in and filled himself with as much food as he could manage. He had eaten a filling lunch, but Nasta seemed to think that he was still too skinny, so he was eating bigger portions than he normal did, but if it gave Nasta peace of mind then he’d suffer through it.

Harry collapsed onto the settee in their private rooms with a groan, accepting the three babies that were passed to him as Nasta and Max went around making sure that everything was safe and as they had left it, of course Max went right into the little kitchenette and made sure all of his things were there still and that all of his appliances still worked. Harry thought it was cute, but he wouldn’t be saying the ‘C’ word out loud to anyone but the babies.

A harsh yank on his hair had him snapping open his eyes and howling, which of course had his mates surrounding him in seconds and startling the armful of babies he had, including Braiden, who had gripped hold of his hair and pulled it.

“I’m fine, I’m fine. Braiden pulled my hair and I wasn’t expecting it.” Harry answered as he ignored his throbbing scalp and watering eyes to soothe Braiden, Tegan and Calix.

“I think it’s bedtime for them all now anyway.” Nasta put in as he took Tegan from him and nestled her head into his strong neck, patting her back gently and soothingly.

Draco handed a quiet Leolin to Blaise, who already had Regan and Max scooped up Farren as Draco took a crying Braiden from him, leaving Harry to soothe Calix as Blaise took the calm babies into the bedroom.

They got the babies to calm down easy enough and got them off to sleep, it was then time for their ritual snuggling on the settee before they headed to bed themselves. Draco sat against the arm of the settee with Blaise in his lap, leaning against his chest, Nasta claimed the middle spot with Harry lounging all over him and Max sat against the other settee arm with Harry’s lower body in his lap, all because the settee was too small to sit all five of them side by side, so two of them, usually Harry and either Draco or Blaise, had to sit in laps so they could all fit.

“I love this peaceful moment to ourselves.” He told the others as he twisted himself until he could lie on his back with his head in Blaise’s lap, Draco’s fingers carding through his hair and massaging the sore spot that Braiden had tugged on.

“Savour it while it lasts, as soon as those buggers get older we’re going to have absolutely no free time.” Max said lazily, covering a yawn with his hand.
“I think it’s bedtime for us now.” Harry giggled slightly as he stretched and rolled to his feet.

He went into the bedroom, shirked all his clothes off before he climbed up the stairs to their platform and he then crawled naked into the bed.

“I’m going to sandwich myself between you and Max.” Harry told them. “You two run hotter than those two skinny sticks.” He poked his tongue out at Blaise and Draco, the former chuckled and the latter rolled his silver eyes.

Draco dressed into his favourite pyjama bottoms, Blaise did the same and they cuddled up on the right side of the bed, Draco on the outside. Nasta slipped into the middle of the bed and Harry snuggled up to him on one side and Blaise did on the other and then Max pressed tightly against Harry’s naked back and Harry shivered in pleasure and in delight as the warmth of their bodies seeped into his own to chase away the goosebumps that had sprung up over his skin.

The heavy duvet was pulled over all of them and Harry snuggled down between his two biggest, oldest lovers and he eased himself into sleep a bit hesitantly, because no matter how much he tried to play about and brush it off, they all knew why he wanted to be between Nasta and Max and it had nothing to do with how warm they were and absolutely everything to do with the nightmares that he and Nasta had been having since the cave incident. He wanted the comfort and the protection that the both of them offered and if he did wake up with nightmares, then he wanted to feel warm, solid muscle on either side of him and none of his four mates begrudged him that.

Chapter End Notes

A/N: Back at Hogwarts for the last two terms before they graduate! Soon the Hogwarts era will be over! Hell it’s almost been two years since Harry became a Dracken, that’s a scary thought, it’s flown by. Braiden will be a year old in August!

Happy birthday to about five of you who wanted a chapter as a present! This is late for some, early for others, but it’s still your birthday gift, so enjoy.
Don’t forget to please read the Scaled Bits! It’s not a separate story it is actually a collection of missing scenes for this story which will clear up a lot of confusion some of you have and contains added scenes and extras that you won’t want to miss if you love Rise of the Drackens!

Thank you all for reading and reviewing if you bother!

Last Time

The heavy duvet was pulled over all of them and Harry snuggled down between his two biggest, oldest lovers and he eased himself into sleep a bit hesitantly, because no matter how much he tried to play about and brush it off, they all knew why he wanted to be between Nasta and Max and it had nothing to do with how warm they were and absolutely everything to do with the nightmares that he and Nasta had been having since the cave incident. He wanted the comfort and the protection that the both of them offered and if he did wake up with nightmares, then he wanted to feel warm, solid muscle on either side of him and none of his four mates begrudged him that.

Chapter Fifty-Nine – Lessons Learned

Harry felt like a zombie as he made his way to Charms with Hermione. He thanked his aching back that this was his last lesson of the day as his friend nattered his ear off about anything and everything and he just wanted to get through the lesson and get back to Max and Nasta, who he was sure were not coping on their own with six babies.

He hated this, sitting in lessons trying to force himself to learn when all he wanted to be doing was playing and caring for his children. It was torture and it wasn’t fair as he was forced to listen to Professor Flitwick and write out what had been put on the board with a hand that was much more used to holding a bottle than a quill these days.

The bell rang and he swiped his arm over his desk, knocking all of his things into his backpack, he shouted a hasty goodbye to Hermione and he ran to his rooms, taking the stairs three at a time, dodging past little firsties, trying not to knock any of them down. He grinned as he reached the seventh floor and the portrait of a door. He tapped the keyhole with his wand and he rushed into his rooms, everything was peaceful and calm and Nasta and Max were both sleeping on the settee, Max had Regan and Tegan on his chest and Nasta was cuddled up with Calix and Leolin.

“Ma ba!” Braiden cooed out softly as Harry walked into the living room and past the travel cot that he was in.

Harry dumped his backpack and turned around to scoop Braiden up gently.

“It looks like your Daddies had an eventful afternoon, baby.” He said with a grin, kissing a soft cheek. “Oh I missed you so much, Braiden, even though I only saw you at lunch.”

Harry sat on the other settee that was free of sleeping dominants and babies and sat Braiden on his lap facing him.

“Have you got any more new words for me today?” He questioned.

“Ooo boo?” Braiden looked at him confusedly and Harry chuckled, chucking him under the chin and kissing him, which made Braiden throw his arms up and give a wet giggle.

Harry wiped up the excess dribble and curiously checked Braiden’s gums carefully, there was so much drool coming from Braiden now that he was bound to cut his first tooth soon. His gums were redder than normal and slightly swollen at the front. Harry sighed; Braiden was cutting his first tooth.

A chubby fist went into the wet mouth and Braiden gummed on it.

“You want a teething ring don’t you, baby?” He said softly as he got up with Braiden in his arms and he went searching for where they had put the teething rings, but there was so much junk on the floor that he almost broke his neck tripping over.

“Fuck!” He hissed, trying not to wake up Nasta and Max, but he was sure that he had just twisted his ankle tripping over a blanket. “Messy bastards!”

“Ba ba.”

“Yes Braiden, they are.” Harry said to his son as if Braiden’s cooing had been agreement with his statement.

Harry got up and his ankle was tender and it refused to hold his weight.

“Oh fuck this!” Harry snarled as he sat himself back down and he threw an abandoned dummy at Max’s head, aiming higher than normal so he wouldn’t hit a baby. The white dummy bounced off the top of Max’s head and his blue, blue eyes snapped open to see Harry glaring at him from the floor.
“Ooh, what time is it?” He asked as he sat up and stretched, giving a little kick to Nasta on the settee adjacent to his own to wake him up too.

“About quarter past five.”

“Are you alright?” Nasta questioned sleepily as he realised that Harry was grimacing on the floor.

“No, you left all this stuff on the floor and now I’ve twisted my ankle, so a little help please.” Harry answered.

Max immediately put Regan and Tegan into a bassinet apiece and hefted Harry from the floor and settled him onto the settee that he had just got up from.

Nasta put down Leolin and Calix and he looked around at the mess in distaste. He waved his wand and everything flew back to where it belonged, leaving the room spotless as Max hunched over his foot, eased off his shoe and sock and he rolled Harry’s ankle gently between both hands. Harry hissed at him.

“It’s twisted; I’ll get you a potion for it.” Max said as he got up to fetch his first aid kit.

“What were you trying to get or were you going to change Braiden or…?” Nasta trailed off questioningly.

“I was looking for the teething rings. His gums have swollen and gone bright red, he’s drooling constantly and he’s gumming his own hand, I think he’s cutting a tooth.”

Nasta’s eyes widened and he went to a drawer in the side cabinet and pulled out a brand new, wrapped teething ring. He ripped the cardboard backing off of it, removed the plastic and then handed it to Harry, who waved it at Braiden.

“Ah! Ah!” Braiden cried out as he grabbed it and it immediately found a home in the wet mouth, being gummed on hard.

“If he is teething, then these next few weeks are going to be absolute hell!” Max groaned.
“What’s going to be hell?” Blaise asked as he walked in with Draco, just in time to hear the last few words. They had both had Arithmancy as their last lesson.

“How did you get here so fast from Charms?” Draco cut in. “You must have run the entire way.”

“Braiden’s teething and yes I did run from Charms.” Harry answered them both.

“Braiden’s teething?” Blaise asked excitedly as he dumped his backpack and rushed over, cupping Braiden’s face, the teething ring still in his mouth, and he kissed his forehead.

“Why is that hell?” Draco asked as he wandered over after taking the time to slip off his shoes.

“Because he’s teething.” Harry said slowly. “He’s going to be in pain and discomfort, he’ll be grouchy and grizzling at all hours, he’s not going to be sleeping through the night anymore and he’s going to be miserable, which will make me miserable, and I’ll make sure that you four are miserable too.”

“I didn’t think about that.” Draco admitted a bit sheepishly. “But then I haven’t actually been around many teething babies.”

Max handed Harry a potion and Harry drained it with a grimace of distaste.

“Nasty.” He exclaimed, before grinning at his little boy, who was looking up at him through Blaise’s eyes, teething ring in mouth. “He’s adorable. I’m so glad he has your eyes.”

“I wanted him to have your eyes.” Blaise admitted with a small smile. “But he just looks so handsome and adorable; I wouldn’t wish him different at all now.”

“Neither would I.” Draco smiled, pointedly ruffling Braiden’s hair, which fell neatly back into place, all smooth and perfect, so unlike Harry’s hair.

Harry chuckled. “He really needs a haircut though.”
“I’ll dig out the spell later on; I don’t think any of us want a pair of scissors near his head.” Nasta said with a smile, coming to kiss Braiden and then him, he pulled Blaise into a kiss before heading to the kitchen table where all of his paperwork was stacked.

Harry grinned as he saw the faces on Max and Draco, who did not like being left out. Draco reached Nasta first and he yanked his head back and kissed him vigorously until neither of them could stay without air for a moment longer and then Max took over right where Draco left off.

“Well, that was a nice show.” Blaise chuckled. “Do we get to watch the continuance of it later on?”

Harry let out a short giggle and he blushed when his four mates turned to him, either with grins or raised eyebrows. He let out another little giggle and then thought screw it and he carried on giggling, but hiding behind his hand.

“That is so fucking cute.” Max exclaimed.

The smile slid from Harry’s face and he glared at Max.

“Do not, ever, call me the ‘C’ word!” He demanded.

Max held up his hands, a wide grin on his face. “I give I give, don’t kill me.”

Harry smiled then, happily appeased, and he stood Braiden up on his lap and bounced him gently. His son took the teething ring from his mouth to let out a happy, joyous laugh and Harry joined him.

“Oh, I love you so much.” He exclaimed as he pulled Braiden to his chest for a hug, kissing his face.

Someone snapped a photo and Harry shook his head.

“Unposed pictures are so much better.” Draco said as he put the camera back onto the kitchen counter.

“You just wait; I’ll take a picture of you sleeping in the buff and mail it to Witch Weekly.” Harry threatened with a grin.

“You wouldn’t.” Draco replied surely. “You’re too possessive of our bodies and privacy to do anything like that.”

“He’s got you there.” Blaise chuckled, sitting on the floor changing a wet Calix, who wasn’t even crying.

“That baby is so laid back he’s horizontal.” Harry groused as Blaise applied the nappy rash cream.

Because Calix didn’t cry to let them know that he was wet, they often didn’t realise that he needed a nappy change until the rash had already been caused by Calix sleeping in his own urine. It upset Harry more than he let on as the rash was very uncomfortable for his little son, so he demanded that Calix be checked every half an hour for a soiled nappy, which was helping, along with the soothing nappy cream and leaving his nappy off for a little while after having the cream applied.

“We’ve got a teething baby, one with nappy rash and one with scabs on his back, all we need now is colic, diarrhoea and a baby with a fever and we’ll have a full house.”

“Don’t say that.” Harry bit out, not wanting to think about it.

“It’s alright, love, Calix will be fine.” Max soothed him, coming to sit beside him on the settee, wrapping an arm around him in comfort. “We’ve noticed the problem and are actively working to fix it, it’s obvious that Calix takes after his Dad and is far too laid back to care if he’s sitting in his own piss.”

Harry chuckled weakly and cuddled up to Max. “I just can’t stand the thought of him being in pain or uncomfortable because we didn’t realise that he was wet.”

“Well it’s his own fault.” Draco insisted. “His brothers and sister all cry when they’re wet, how are we supposed to know if he doesn’t at least wail to let us know when he’s wet? All we can do if he refuses to let us know is keep checking him, as we have been doing. We’re doing fine, Harry, I think we’re coping spectacularly well with six near newborn babies. No one’s perfect and no one who has a remotely realistic view on parenthood expects us to be perfect, so stop worrying.”

Draco kissed his smiling lips as he walked past to pick up a grizzling Farren.
“Why is it only your kids that are awake when they’re supposed to be sleeping?” Draco asked Max.

Max grinned. “They’re special, just like their Dad. They don’t do conformity.”

Harry laughed as he twisted Braiden around on his lap so he could face the room as he chewed hard on his teething ring.

“His cutting tooth must really be hurting.” He said aloud as he watched Braiden clench his little jaws as hard as he possibly could around the teething ring.

“There’s nothing we can do, love, he has to go through it, imagine never having any teeth.” Blaise said from the floor as he played with Calix, whose bottom half was bare as his delicate skin dried.

“It might make receiving a blow job more pleasurable.” Harry said a bit tearfully, trying to cheer himself up over the thought that he couldn’t stop Braiden from being in pain.

The four startled laughs put a smile back on his face and the kiss to the corner of his mouth from Max made him feel so much better.

Blaise put Calix back in a clean nappy and rubbed his belly soothingly as the baby sucked on a dummy, fighting sleep.

“Pass him to me.” Harry said as Calix fought sleep viciously.

Harry passed Braiden over and accepted Calix, cuddling him and finishing off the tie to his nightdress, with him having nappy rash, it was easier to check him every half an hour if they didn’t have to struggle to get his legs out of his sleepsuit every time they needed to check him, so they were putting Ashleigh, Myron and Richard’s Christmas present to good use.

Harry rocked and soothed Calix, humming lightly as Max cupped the back of Calix’s head with a huge hand, his fingers stroking through soft, black, downy hair.

Even the yawn that Calix gave was fought furiously and Max chuckled deeply.

“It must be your genes, love, because every child we have is just so adorable.” Max said kissing his cheek.
Harry gave Max a glare, but he let it go as he agreed that every child he had was adorable, he just didn’t agree that it came from him.

Calix finally lost his battle with sleep and Harry stood to put him in a bassinet and scooped up Nasta’s firstborn son. Regan was such a quiet baby, much like his Father and Harry felt like he wasn’t spending as much time with Regan as a consequence.

He stripped Regan of his blanket and nightdress, but kept him in his nappy, stripped his own top half to a wolf whistle from Max, who got a teasing, exaggerated shake of the hips as Harry undid his belt and trousers and kicked them off before curling up on the settee with a blanket wrapped around him and Regan as he held his thirdborn son on his chest, bare skin to bare skin.

He murmured softly to Regan, having a one-sided conversation with him as his mates moved around him with the other children, Max started dinner when Blaise complained that he was hungry, Draco was doing homework, trying to get as much of it out of the way as possible and Nasta was doing paperwork now that he wasn’t on baby duty, but Harry was in his own little world with a sleeping Regan.

When it was time for dinner, Harry moved to the table, Regan tucked into one arm and he ate with his other. He was so slow that everyone had finished and Max had started washing up as he ate the last bite of his lasagne.

“Thank you, Max.” He said softly, pulling his tallest mate down for a kiss on the cheek as he dropped his plate into the sink.

Max was so much happier than usual and Harry didn’t understand why until he was told a moment later.

“That’s the first meal that you’ve let me cook on my own since the incident.” He boasted happily.

Harry startled at that as he realised that it was true and he hadn’t felt any apprehension in eating his food whatsoever, he hadn’t even remembered that he was previously watching Max cook to ensure that he didn’t tamper with his meal and it made him grin widely. “Then I guess it was time to forgive you and to hand you my trust again.”

“I won’t abuse it this time, not ever again. I promise.” Max bent down and kissed his lips firmly, before ducking down further to kiss Regan’s sleeping face.

“Though I do want to cook some meals with you. I enjoyed our time together.” Harry shot over his shoulder as he made his way back to the settee.
“I’m sure we can work something out.” Max agreed with a grin.

Nasta took Regan from him and swapped him with Farren as Regan started grizzling and squirming due to his dirty, smelly nappy. Nasta handed him a bottle and Harry placed it off to the side, waiting for when Farren would wake up, he would be the first. His gutsy baby would of course be the first to wake. Harry smiled, very happy with Farren’s appetite, it was Leolin’s that he was worried about as his youngest son was two weeks old now and still hadn’t picked up his milk intake.

Farren woke up with a wail in his throat and Harry smoothed a soft cheek gently before picking up the bottle, testing it against his still bare forearm and sent a wordless, wandless cooling charm at it, tested it again, before he stroked it over Farren’s cheek and he watched indulgently as his secondborn son rooted for the bottle teat.

Harry looked up confusedly, before his attention was pulled back to a suckling Farren and he replied distractedly. “Huh? Oh, yeah, I can’t be bothered to go into my bag to get my wand.”

“Look at him, so flippant and dismissive about it, like it’s not extraordinary.” Blaise shook his head. “It’s amazing, Harry. Every time you do it, it’s amazing.”

Harry flushed a bit. “I’ve always been able to do it, so it’s not anything special to me. It’s just convenient, but not really anything that I’d show off to others about.”

“If it was me I’d be bragging to everyone around me.” Draco told him.

“You do anyway with as much as you can get away with.” Max teased.

“I’m proud of myself and all of my hard earned achievements, why shouldn’t I rub it into everyone else’s faces?” Draco defended.

“We love you for it.” Max assured. “You wouldn’t be you if you didn’t completely trample those less fortunate in the brains, looks and ability departments into the unyielding ground.”
“Don’t forget the academic department.” Nasta added from the kitchen table, where he had started back up with his paperwork, looking thoroughly stressed and overworked, but he was grinning at Draco nonetheless.

“I think lovers department too, I mean, who wouldn’t be jealous of him for having me as a lover?” Max said with a deep, amused laugh.

Harry chuckled even as he watched the last suck of milk disappear from the bottle. He hefted Farren up and burped him, before settling him in the crook of his arm and rocking him gently to sleep, listening as Max and Draco dissolved into an argument over who people would be jealous of for having the other as a lover.

“All right, knock it off the both of you before I gag you both with a dirty nappy.” Nasta threatened as he threw his quill onto his paperwork and stood with a stretch. “Blaise, did you remember to do your Ancient Runes translations? It’s due tomorrow.”

“All done.” Blaise confirmed with a grin as he packed his bag in preparation for tomorrow, waving the sheet of complicated diagrams and runes that confused the hell out of him at Nasta.

“Draco…”

“All homework is done and complete, tomorrow’s books and needed homework is already packed.” Draco cut in with a cocky smirk.

“Harry, did you finish your Transfiguration and Defence essays?”

“I finished the Defence essay.” Harry replied sheepishly.

“You have double Transfiguration first thing tomorrow, love, get your essay out.” Nasta told him firmly.

Harry sighed and didn’t even bother trying to argue, it was fruitless and a waste of time to argue with Nasta over school anyway.

Draco took Farren off of him and he was left to pull out his homework from under yesterday’s newspaper, right where he had left it, with the headline ‘Saviour Potter arrives at Hogwarts with lovers and babies in tow’. Nasta had gone ballistic over the latest allegations that he was a catamite and was being kept as a pleasure slave by two much older men, Draco and Blaise hadn’t even been mentioned and only three babies had been ‘confirmed’ as being seen by eyewitnesses.

Harry trudged through his Transfiguration essay, rewriting it twice because Nasta wasn’t happy with it, before he finally snapped and threw a tantrum. Nasta had caught him, bitten his neck, calmed him down and now he was cuddled up on Nasta’s lap on the settee.

“Why the tantrum, Harry?” His oldest lover asked eventually, still carding his fingers softly through his hair.

“It all seems so pointless.” Harry replied.

“Doing the work or just Transfiguration in general?”

“All of it! I don’t want to be here, doing all this pointless shit when I could be back at home spending all day taking care of my children like I want to be doing.”

“What about job prospects? You won’t get even a half decent job if you don’t graduate from Hogwarts. You need to finish your compulsory education to have even the slightest chance of getting a good job.”

“I don’t want a poxy job! I already have one and that’s looking after my children!” Harry snapped.

“So that’s all you want to do for the next three hundred odd years? What about when our children are all grown up, Harry? When they’re not living at home anymore and you have nothing to distract you from the silence and the emptiness of our house because Max, Draco, Blaise and I are all out at work.”

“You’ll still be working at three hundred?” Harry asked.

Nasta chuckled wryly. “No, but we’ll stop having children when we’re about a hundred, Caru. I very much doubt that our children will be living with us when they’re two hundred themselves. So what are you going to do when we don’t have any more children to look after and they’ve all flown the nest?”
“I…I don’t know.” Harry said quietly.

“Isn’t it a much better idea to get the qualifications that you need now, if not to get a job right away, but to ensure that you can actually get one later on in life, when you have nothing else to do? Even if you do decide not to get a job the moment after you’ve graduated, you can still have those qualifications to fall back on when a time comes when you might need them.”

Harry sighed; he hated it when Nasta was so logical and wise. “I guess that makes sense.” He grumbled.

Nasta chuckled and kissed him. “Get your essay; we’ll go through it together seeing as it’s getting late.”

Harry did as he was told and he clambered back onto Nasta and listened as Nasta made more sense of the essay than the textbook had. The essay was done and completed in forty minutes and he was bound to get an ‘EE’ on it if not an outright ‘O’ it was that good.

Harry kissed Nasta as he packed all of the things that he needed for tomorrow and he was led to the bedroom and up to their platform bed. It was this bed that he had missed the most when he was at home rather than at the school. He loved the platform bed and he’d have to make sure any future house they had, had a platform bed like this one, though maybe with a bigger ledge and a bigger bed. Harry stripped himself bare, not that he was wearing much to begin with, and he forced himself between Max and Draco to curl up to sleep.

Harry woke up the next morning and he groaned as he stretched. He’d only had the one nightmare last night and Nasta hadn’t had any that he knew about, he was glad that it was coming to an end, finally. He rolled over and he was surprised that he actually had the space to move on the bed, then the cold sheets registered in his brain and he opened his eyes to see that he was on his own in the bed and the weak winter sun was trying to force its way through the curtains.

It wasn’t often that he slept longer than his mates and as he realised that every one of the five bassinets around the bed was empty, he got confused. He was normally the first one to wake up and was certainly the one who did the babies’ morning feed. Had he been slipped a sleeping potion? No, he didn’t have the strange after taste in his mouth that a potion induced sleep left.

He climbed out of the bed, found someone’s discarded boxers to wear for now and he padded down the stairs in just a pair of boxer shorts he was almost sure were Blaise’s and went into the living room cum kitchenette. Max was cooking, Nasta was reading the paper, Blaise and Draco were entertaining the six children.
“Sleeping beauty arises!” Max called out from the kitchen as he spotted him.

“I can’t believe I slept for so long.” He murmured as he realised that his mates were all showered and dressed.

“You did have a late night.” Nasta reminded him.

“It was only quarter to twelve.” Harry disputed.

“You’ve been going to bed around ten every night; it’s natural that you slept a bit later once you stayed up later and the nightmare couldn’t have helped.” Draco told him.

Harry grunted and scooped up Tegan on his way to the kitchenette in search of tea. Max was several steps ahead of him and sat him down in front of a cup of tea that was the perfect temperature for consumption.

“Anything in particular you wanted for breakfast, love? I’m making crepes.”

“That’ll be fine, but I want some cereal or something first. I don’t have much time before lessons and I still need to shower and get dressed, so I want to make sure that I’ve actually had something to eat first.”

Max dug out the trusty box of muesli and handed it to him with a bowl, a spoon and a jug of milk. Harry ate quickly and effectively with Tegan in his one arm. He was getting better at eating one handed now.

He finished his cereal, kissed his daughter and handed her off to Draco and rushed to the bathroom to shower and get into his uniform. He barely had time to stuff a blueberry crepe into his mouth before they had to leave for lessons, Harry and Draco to Transfiguration and Blaise to Ancient Runes.

Harry waved Draco away with a kiss and stayed with Hermione and Ginny for the first half hour break, though he knew that it was probably a bad idea as he was already missing Braiden, Farren, Tegan, Regan, Calix and Leolin immensely, but he had a free period next, while everyone else had Potions and then came lunch, so he had plenty of time to catch up with his children and his two older mates a bit later on, but for now he had been kidnapped by the girls and they were bundled up against the snow and the cold of the outside courtyard for their break as they talked about anything and everything until the topic of Ginny’s toys came up.

“Oh, Gin, can you get me some more outfits.” He stressed as she told him and Hermione about the cute pair of ballet shoes that she had gotten for Christmas. “I’ll give you the money for them and give you a little extra.”

“Do I want to hear this?” Hermione asked with a frown.

“Probably not.” Harry answered with a lopsided smile as Ginny grinned from ear to ear.

“You liked my gift! You’ve used it?! I knew it!”

“Yes, Ginny.” He answered with a blush, laughing out his embarrassment. “Max burnt that lovely skirt you got me though, I don’t think he appreciated me wearing it and then telling him not to touch. Does the company do other ones? Perhaps in blue? Max likes the colour blue.”

“Ohh, I’ll get you cute little outfits, did you like the skirt? I wasn’t sure if you would, but Luna said to include it. Do you like cross dressing? Should I find you a dress, oh, let me take your measurements!”

Harry was attacked then as Ginny wove her wand around his body and he felt strangely violated somehow. Though Ginny could give her Mother a run for her money with how quickly and efficiently she casted household spells, though he doubted that Mrs Weasley had fetish clothing and sex outfits in mind when she taught Ginny the spell to get a person’s measurements.

“There. I’ll find you the best that I can get my hands on and those lovers of yours will be crawling after you drooling! Oh I had better go and find Luna, she’d like to help me pick out outfits for you, it’s like dress up only with very skimpy clothes and a live doll.”

Ginny chuckled and then took off running into the castle leaving Harry bemused and Hermione sniffing in disapproval.

“She’s only sixteen, Harry; you shouldn’t encourage her like that.”
“I fell pregnant at sixteen.” Harry said softly, watching the door Ginny had gone through long after she had disappeared. “I had four lovers as well, had had a creature inheritance shoved onto me, was rushed through three mate meetings and basically paired off with four total strangers and told they were my life mates and that I would have children with them. Somehow I think a little fetish shopping won’t do Ginny any harm, Hermione. She’s a strong, bright, wonderful girl who is going to make someone very happy one day, but she’s not stupid enough to put herself into a position where she can be harmed and I doubt very much that she’s foolish enough to have sex without a condom or contraceptive charms, hell maybe she uses both just to be sure, but if she’s doing it, she’s doing it and nothing I say or do will change that, whether I ask her to shop for sexy clothing for me or not, she’ll still be doing it, the most we can hope for is that she’s being safe.”

Harry finally turned away from the door to look at Hermione with a soft smile.

“You really sounded like a proud Father just then, Harry.” She told him.

“I am a proud Father, Hermione, well Mother. But either way I’m a very proud Mother to six children and it’ll be more soon enough.”

“You’re not pregnant again?” Hermione asked, her lovely brown eyes going wide and shocked.

“I fucking hope not!” Harry grinned. “No. I’m happily unpregnant at the moment. Six is enough for now; six is enough for a long while.”

“But with your…genes, it’s not going to be for long is it?” Hermione asked softly.

“Probably not, but Drackens have gone years without falling pregnant again, so my fingers are crossed.”

“You know how I feel about wishes and luck.”

“I know, you’re more for the logic and scientific approach to everything, but when those are taken from you, all you really have is faith and luck. The heat cycle will take away all logic and capacity for thinking and leave me and the guys only with luck that it’s not a fertile heat.”
“I thought all heat cycles were fertile.” Hermione said confusedly.

“No, Nasta was telling me about dry heats. A heat cycle where a submissive’s body temperature doesn’t get up to the one hundred and ten degrees needed for the conception of a baby. It’s basically a practice heat before the real thing to get our bodies used to the cycle again before letting us fall pregnant. It’s why most mass produced creature books about Drackens think we can only get pregnant in the winter, the book I read told me that as well as saying falsely that I could only get pregnant during only two heat cycles per year. I’ve since learnt differently.”

“I’m learning a lot from the book that Nasta gave to me. It’s so informative, Drackens are really very complex creatures and they have such a large and wide history, it’s amazing and I’m learning so much.”

Harry chuckled and linked his arm through Hermione’s, kissing her cheek before getting them walking towards the Entrance Hall on the opposite end of the castle, Hermione for Potions and Harry for his free period, he’d wait for Draco and Blaise so that he could get a kiss from them both and then he’d go and spend the afternoon with his helpless little ones…and his babies too.

X

The very tip of a little white tooth could be seen poking out of Braiden’s gum as he cried constantly and without pause. It was heart rendering and headache inducing as the normally quiet, relaxed baby screamed his lungs and throat raw.

Harry found himself tearing up as he listened and tried to soothe Braiden, but he refused to let his tears fall. He needed to be strong for Braiden, his tears would not help his son feel any better or take away the pain of his first tooth.

It was Saturday morning and Harry was so glad that Braiden’s first tooth had chosen today to make an appearance, when he could spend all day with his son and not be forced to leave him for lessons.

His mates were all bustling around, trying to do what they could, trying to make him and Braiden feel better, but there was nothing that anyone could do, so he had taken control and he had ordered Draco and Blaise to the library to study and do their homework, he had sent Max out to find something, anything, that could help Braiden and he had put Nasta on quintuplet patrol as he paced around the bedroom with a screaming five month old baby in pain.

He sat on the settee under the platform that held their bed and he snuggled a red faced Braiden to his chest, shushing and trying to calm him to no effect. If Max didn’t find something, then he was going to have to call in Ashleigh, Narcissa, Marianna and Aneirin and pray that they as Mothers’ themselves, and a single Father, that had obviously gone through the teething period before, would know what to do.

It was so distressing and stressful to sit here and listen to his baby constantly crying and knowing that it was because he was in pain and not being able to do anything. It made his Dracken scream and he had already accidentally let out two small distress calls that had brought Nasta running. He just wanted to take the pain away from Braiden, he hadn’t slept since he had woken up crying at five that morning, he hadn’t eaten anything since his ten O’clock feed last night and Harry was so worried and completely petrified that it would harm Braiden in some way to have missed those feeds, to have gone so long without food and sleep. He had tried everything just to get some milk into Braiden, even dribbling some into his mouth from a spoon, but Braiden had slapped the spoon away in temper.

Harry heard Max come back in and Nasta directing him through to the bedroom and Harry pleaded with his eyes that Max had found something as he came through the bedroom door.

“Here, try this. The Pharmacist recommended it, she said that it had helped all three of her children when they were teething.” Max told him, digging out a little box, ripping it open and handing Harry the tube. “She says to just put a fingertip sized blob on the affected area.”

Harry did as he was told and prayed that the Bonjela teething gel worked as he gently rubbed Braiden’s gums with his fingertip.

“I called my Mum and asked her for advice; she said she’d be around as soon as Dad got home.” Max told him. “But for now, she said to use the gel and then feed him as soon as it takes effect just to get some fluids into him.”

“Go make up a bottle please, this one went cold a while ago, it might help if he had a fresh bottle instead of a warmed up one.”

Max took the bottle and Harry continued rubbing Braiden’s gums as it seemed to be working. Braiden’s cried trailed off and his tears dried into tracks on his red flushed cheeks.

Harry went out into the living room with a smile and Nasta and Max just looked so relieved that Braiden was quiet. Harry took the magically cooled bottle of milk from Max and coaxed Braiden into drinking it. He managed half before he fell asleep with the teat still in his mouth.

Harry took the bottle from him gently and eased him into his cot before collapsing onto the settee and burying himself into the comforting body of Nasta.

“That was horrible.” He said into the fabric of Nasta’s shirt.

“I know.” Nasta comforted, wrapping an arm around him and pulling him in tighter.

“Imagine in a few months now, all five of the quintuplets teething at the same time.” Max whispered
They won’t. Leolin is a Faerie; Faerie’s don’t start getting their teeth on average until they’re about eighteen, nineteen months old and the chances that the remaining four will all cut their first tooth at the same time is astronomical.” Nasta explained patiently.

“Leolin won’t get his first tooth until he’s a year and a half?” Harry asked.

“No. He’s a Faerie, love; his development is considerably slower than other babies, especially Dracken born babies. I’ll get Dad to go to the Faerie Court to get you some books on it. He’d be happy to do so as he also wants to rub the Court’s face in the fact that he has a Faerie grandson.”

Harry chuckled and he snuggled up to Nasta and yawned. It had been a very long morning for them all, but he was afraid to go to sleep just in case Braiden woke back up, he wanted to be there for his son, not sleeping because he wanted a nap.

“Why don’t you sleep for a bit, love?” Nasta coaxed.

“I want to be here for Braiden.”

“He’s not going anywhere, Harry and I’m very sure he’ll wake everyone up when he does.” Max told him.

“If anyone should be sleeping it’s you two, not me. You did all the night feeds last night and you were up at five this morning with me and Braiden.”

“We’re not the ones who are tired, love, you are.” Nasta pointed out.

“It seems cheeky though to be tired when you’ve been up for longer.”

Max snorted and patted his bum. “This is cheeky, not you wanting to get an hour’s sleep before pacing around the rooms with a teething baby, the gel can only be applied once every three hours and it’s bound to wear off before he can have it again.”
“I hate this.” He confided softly.

“We all do, love, but think how cute he’s going to look with those two bottom, front teeth when he grins now.”

Harry chuckled and yawned again, before deciding that it wasn’t the end of the world to want an hour or two of sleep.

“If your Mum comes before Braiden wakes up, wake me up please. I want to talk to her.”

“Will do, now get some sleep.” Max said with a grin, bending himself over the back of the settee to give him a kiss, coming back up to kiss Nasta, before heading to the kitchen and the bags he had brought from the supermarket.

Remus was unnaturally happy with his life at the moment. The closest that he had ever been to this sort of happiness before was back in his school days and the years shortly after he had graduated, being with Sirius and James and unfortunately Peter. Though back then none of them had had any idea of what Peter had been capable of. Peter had always been a shy and timid boy, but he had still been a close friend, one of the only people at that time to know that he was a werewolf. One of only three people who he had shared his hopes and dreams with in the dead of night when the rest of the castle was sleeping, but four young boys were wide away, eating chocolate, drinking pumpkin juice and butter beer stashed from the latest Hogsmeade weekend.

He sighed and then he smiled as he looked to the photograph that he had stuck to the fridge of Harry, Harry who was surrounded by four grinning young men and six children. It wasn’t the life that he would have pictured for Harry, or one he knew that James and Lily had even considered for their beautiful baby. James had insisted that Harry would be nothing less than Minister for Magic and Lily had even suggested Harry would be a specialist Healer or even a Professor. Neither of them would have ever believed that their baby boy was a Mother to six and a lover to four at just seventeen. He hadn’t even graduated yet, but none of them had thought for a moment that Harry would have a creature inheritance. Lily was a Muggleborn and James had been very human with very human parents, so it hadn’t even crossed their minds, not even Sirius’, whose ancestor had given Harry the Dracken blood in the first place, and Sirius’ own brother had been a Dracken as well without him knowing, apparently it was very easy to hide a Dracken inheritance, even within a family.

Remus remembered Regulus Black, as handsome as his older brother, cocky, arrogant, just like a son of the Blacks, but oddly shy and conciliatory, unlike his outspoken, brash and sociable brother.

He remembered when Regulus was just fifteen and he had started a relationship with Severus Snape, oh how Sirius had hated the very thought of Snape touching his younger brother in such a way. The rivalry between Sirius and James and Severus had been in full swing at fifteen and to find out that Severus was then in a relationship with Sirius’ brother was like adding salt to a wound. Sirius had been certain that Snape was only doing it to get back at him and he’d ranted about it at almost every opportunity he’d had. He’d even tried telling his brother that Snape was only going out with him to get under his skin, but Regulus wouldn’t hear of it and Snape had turned around and told Sirius to stop thinking that the world revolved around him. The both of them had ended up in the hospital wing.

Regulus had changed when he was sixteen, it had been common before that to find him and Severus together, studying or just talking, they had even held hands a few times while coming into the Great Hall after a walk through the grounds, but when Regulus had turned sixteen, everything changed. He became very possessive and jealous, he snogged Snape where everyone could see them, he walked firmly by Severus’ side, head tucked into Snape’s chest, their arms wrapped around one another. It was possible to come across them in secluded corners, Regulus pinned to a wall, his legs wrapped around Severus’ waist and hips and the other Slytherins complained that their love making kept them up all night.

Sirius had lost it, it had been bad enough thinking that his baby brother was in a relationship with Snape, being touched and kissed, but his sixteen year old brother having sex and groping and being groped all over the castle had been too much for him to bear and he had tried to kill Snape.

Sirius had thought it was due to a potion, because Severus was a genius with potions, but thinking back, if Regulus was a Dracken, then he would have come into his submissive Dracken inheritance at sixteen, which would possibly explain his behaviour at that time.

Then came the dreaded news…for Sirius at least. Regulus was pregnant. So not only was he and Severus having sex, but they were having unprotected sex which had resulted in a baby. Remus had thought then that Sirius would have an aneurism at the news.

Then came the unthinkable, Regulus had lost the baby. Severus and Regulus had lost a daughter, Sirius a Niece, and all because James had accidentally knocked Regulus over in his haste to reach the hospital wing after hearing that Lily had fallen ill the night before. James hadn’t even realised it was Regulus that he had knocked down until the boy had started calling him a murderer after his release from Saint Mungos hospital. It had upset James and he and Sirius hadn’t spoken for a week and they had almost come to blows over the incident, because Sirius did still love his brother and he had seen how upset and crushed Regulus had been after losing his daughter, even if the baby was also Snape’s. They had eventually realised that they were being idiots, that James knocking over Regulus had been a complete accident and had made up, which had only heightened Regulus’ rage and his perceived betrayal by his older brother.

Then Regulus had died, just nineteen years old and Sirius of course threw all of his hate and pain at Snape, the person who Regulus had been seeing and living with at the time of his death. He still remembered hearing the killing curse come from Sirius’ lips, he remembered tackling him to send his spell astray so that he didn’t go to Azkaban for life, not that that plan worked as only three years later Sirius had been imprisoned in Azkaban for life anyway, even if it was falsely.

Remus turned with a smile to Tonks, who was wearing just a bathrobe, her usual bubble gum pink hair was dry and bouncy on her shoulders. She was the reason that he had been so happy these past few months. He had expected her to run after just a week with him, but she hadn’t and even seeing him as weak as a newborn kitten the morning after the first full moon that they were together hadn’t turned her away from him. She had in fact spent the day nursing him, feeding him chicken broth, helping him sip water through a straw and applying salves to his skin to help with his bruised body caused by the violent transformation.

“Just some observations from the past that make more sense when looked back upon.” He told her softly. “That and I’m just worried about Harry.”

“He’s a tough kid, give him some credit. I’ve never met a boy so young, with such pressure on him, be so normal. He was just a normal teenaged boy, his bedroom was a normal teenaged boy’s when I first met him, he had the temper and personality of a fifteen year old, even if sometimes he was far more mature and cynical than he should have been. But I just couldn’t believe how normal he was when I actually met him. Normal sixteen year olds are thinking about sex and relationships, Remus. So he’s had a couple of babies in his teenaged years, most wizard couples do, Remus. I told you about my friend Justin, the one who got involved with that man Brian and he got pregnant within the week. He’s twenty-three now and he has had eight children in five years. It’s just the way male couples are and everyone knows that male pregnancies are more likely to be multiples over singletons so it’s no surprise to me that Harry had quintuplets, especially with four lovers to keep happy.”

Remus felt terrible omitting to Tonks that Harry and his lovers were Drackens, but it wasn’t his place to tell her, even if he did find her trustworthy and one of the least likely people to run to poachers with the information. But it wasn’t his life that he was gambling with, it was Harry’s, his mates and his children’s lives and he couldn’t do it and he didn’t think that it was his place to tell her, especially with his track record, because he had thought that Peter was the least likely person to ever run to Voldemort with the information about James, Lily and Harry’s whereabouts and that had been exactly what he’d done.

“It’s just because it’s Harry.” Remus sighed. “I’ve known him since he was born, I was there as James proudly told us that Lily was pregnant. I may not have been there after he was sent to Lily’s sister, but I’ve been there for him since he was thirteen. Knowing that he has six children now, it seems inconceivable to me when I think of the small baby he was and the sweet, but fierce teenager he grew to be.”

“It was always going to be difficult for you. You see him as a son, you’ve looked out for him, changed his nappies, fed him a bottle or two and he was just a baby in your arms, but now he’s in an obvious sexual relationship and he has his own children. But the fact of the matter is, you are always going to see him as too young, even if he was fifty you’d think him too young, because to you he’s always going to be a baby. Harry is obviously happy with his life and he is enjoying it, all you can do, all anyone can do now, is support him in his decisions, because he has obviously decided what he wants from his life and he is not wasting any time in going after it.”
Remus pulled Tonks onto his lap and looked up at her beautiful heart shaped face.

“Why did I have to love someone so smart?” He teased.

“Because you’re usually a smart man, just not when it comes to a certain black haired boy who you see as a son.” Tonks teased back, brushing the tip of his nose with a finger before leaning in to kiss him.

Things got heated between them quickly and Remus pulled the robe from Tonk’s body to find the red silk and black lace lingerie underneath. Tonks blushed and looked embarrassed, which was unusually out of character.

“Is this for me?” He grinned, his eyes drinking in the spill of pale breasts in the sexy bra and sliding a finger teasingly into the elastic of the lacy thong.

“It’s not like I planned for anyone else to see them.” Tonks told him and he chuckled at her defensiveness.

He kissed down her chest to the tops of those breasts and he nipped gently at the left one as two of his fingers touched the small area of fabric between Tonks’ legs. He loved the soft sound that came from her throat.

She turned on his lap to straddle him and he pulled her face to his mouth to kiss her, standing up with a hand holding a bare bum cheek, a finger still managing to fondle the area of fabric that turned Tonks wild with passion.

“I love your strength.” Tonks told him as she bounced in his arms, rubbing herself against him in the process. Remus didn’t even strain himself to hold her weight and he had no problems with the added force of her bouncing, though the rubbing and bouncing breasts in front of his face was very distracting as he made it to the bedroom and spilled the laughing woman onto the bedspread. He loved how happy Tonks always was.

“My strength is good for other things as well, not just carrying you.” He grinned at her and she laughed.

“As I’ve learnt.” She answered with a coy, naughty smile that heated his blood, which was all rushing very quickly south.

Remus pulled the cup of the right side of the bra aside to spill out the naked breast to his gaze. He licked over it and sucked the pointed nipple into his mouth to suck on it, causing Tonks to make more of those soft noises that he loved.

He slipped a hand under her back to unclip the hooks of the bra; he pulled it off gently before taking Tonk’s other breast into his mouth, licking and sucking as she pulled on his hair. He ignored the soft tugging on his scalp and instead he moved his mouth to the valley between her breasts before kissing down her chest, over her belly and down to the red silk of the thong. He gripped either side of the little scrap of fabric and eased it down her legs, carrying on his path downwards with his mouth until the thong came free of her feet and he could push his tongue inside of her body.

Tonks canted her hips towards his face and arched her back, making those little noises that made him shove his tongue as far into her as he could, licking her insides and sucking at her soft skin as best as he could manage.

He moved back up her body and kissed her, even with her taste still on his lips and tongue as his fingers took over where his tongue had left off, easing her open and wetting her insides in preparation of himself.

He was so hard that he was constantly throbbing and the ache was almost a physical pain as he slipped a condom onto himself, taking a moment to stroke himself, to ease off the ache, before he pressed himself slowly and carefully into the woman that he loved.

Tonks gasped breathlessly as he came to the end of her body and the head of himself bumped her cervix, she wrapped her long, lean legs around his waist and he settled on his forearms, placing them on either side of her shoulders so he still had the freedom to kiss her as he waited for her to adjust to him inside of her.

She rocked her hips into his own and he closed his eyes as a groan was pulled from his throat. Tonks had admitted to him that she loved it when he growled during sex, Remus had been embarrassed, but it wasn’t something that he could control. It made it impossible for him to have a relationship without his partner knowing what he was, which is why he loved Tonks so much, because she had known beforehand what he was and she hadn’t cared.

He pulled himself carefully out of her and pushed back in, stopping as he bumped her cervix, making Tonks moan. They had found that she liked having her cervix bumped during sex, which was a good thing, as Remus was not a small man unfortunately and he had been rejected when he was younger by women who didn’t trust him enough to not hurt them.

They moved together, getting faster and rougher as Remus’ werewolf took over without him able to stop it or control it, slamming into Tonks’ cervix, a rough grumble starting in his throat and continuing until he was growling constantly and lowly in his throat. He moved a hand to between Tonks’ legs, just above where he was connected to her and he used a thumb to rub the little bump there, making Tonks scream and her nails to scrabble against the skin of his back.

She clenched around him and the added stimulation threw his head back and he howled as he filled the condom, he relaxed his body to rest onto Tonks’ sweaty chest, relearning how to breathe and getting his heart rate back to normal.
“Amazing, as always.” She complimented him with a wide grin and Remus laughed easing himself out of her and apologizing as she winced with a grimace.

He tied up the condom and wrapped it in a tissue, disposing of it in the bin beside his bed before crawling back onto the bed and cuddling Tonks to his chest.

“I think I’m just going to sleep until tomorrow.” Tonks laughed.

“I thought you wanted to go to dinner tonight.” Remus replied.

“It can wait.” Tonks said through a yawn as she turned onto her side with a deep groan, snuggling into him.

Remus chuckled and threw an arm around the woman that he loved. He was so happy at the moment that he couldn’t believe that he had ever seriously considered denying himself and Tonks this happiness, no matter how briefly.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------

Harry paced with a screaming Braiden; he had kicked Blaise and Nasta into the bedroom with the quintuplets and he had kept Max and Draco with him as he tried fruitlessly to quieten his screaming baby. Max caught him in his arms and pulled him onto his lap, holding him comfortingly as they were forced to listen to Braiden’s agonised cries.

“I hate this!” Harry burst out tearfully. “When can we give him the gel?”

“Another hour and a half.”

“This is ridiculous! I can’t take this anymore. That gel is making it worse!”

A knock at the portrait door made Harry send up a silent prayer. “Thank fuck!”

Draco opened the portrait door and Harry had never been so pleased to see Ashleigh, Myron, Richard, Marianna, Narcissa and Lucius.

“Ohh, what’s the matter with him?” Ashleigh fretted as she hovered over him and Braiden.

“That’s why we need help, Braiden’s teething and we can’t stop him from crying, he won’t sleep and he won’t take his bottle.” Harry answered tearfully. “How did I stop him from being in pain? I don’t want him to be in pain anymore.”

“That’s the emergency?” Richard asked as he flumped onto the settee. “I thought one of you had lost a hand from the way that Max was acting.”

“Ignore him, Harry; he purposefully scheduled high profile court cases when any of his children were teething so that he was away for days at a time.” Ashleigh glared at her younger Husband. “Have you tried teething rings?”

“He won’t take it anymore.” Harry said sadly as he showed her the ring, showing them how Braiden pushed it away, crying so hard he was almost sick, coughing roughly.

“I used a teething potion brewed by Severus for Draco.” Narcissa told him. “It worked a treat.”

“Severus isn’t exactly in a position to brew anything.” Lucius told her. “But perhaps if you could get the recipe he used, Maximilius could brew it for you.”

Harry nodded, acknowledging Lucius’ attempt at being civil. “What can we do for now though? The teething gel we bought can’t be applied often enough to keep him out of pain.”

“I used a wet washcloth with Blaise.” Marianna told them.

“I don’t think smothering him with a wet washcloth will help.” Harry denied furiously.

Marianna laughed delicately for such a large woman. “I would have a few choice words if you smothered my grandson with a wet washcloth, no you give it to him to bite on.”
“I’m willing to try anything.” Harry said tearfully.

Marianna called out to Blaise, who came to hug his Mother with a smile. She kissed his mouth and then turned him towards the bedroom and asked him for a clean, wet washcloth. He looked at her strangely, but he went to get what she had asked for.

Nasta slipped out of the bedroom and greeted everyone politely.

“All the babies are asleep.” He told Harry as he gestured for everyone to sit down.

Blaise came back with the wet cloth and he offered it to his Mother, who took it from him and handed it to Harry. Harry put the damp end into Braiden’s mouth and he tried to push it out with his tongue, but instead he bit down and then he started gumming on it, his tears stopped, though he remained sniffling and making grizzling noises in his throat as he gummed on the cloth hard.

“Thank you.” Harry said to Marianna as he cuddled Braiden on his lap.

“It’s my pleasure, Harry. I know how hard it is to see a little one in pain and know you can’t do anything to prevent it, it’s the worst feeling in the world.”

Harry nodded as he wiped away Braiden’s tears, kissing the bright red cheeks softly, letting his lips linger. He hated hearing Braiden cry, he hated seeing him in a screaming fit, knowing that it was caused by a pain that he couldn’t immediately erase.

“How are the other five?” Myron asked as he settled on the settee easily.

“Leolin's wings are getting so much better, just a few scabs left and then he’ll be all healed!” Harry said happily. “Calix has nappy rash because he’s too laid back to cry when he’s wet, but I blame Max’s lack of brain cells for that.”

Richard laughed and gave him a double thumbs up.

“Is Calix’s rash under control?” Myron inquired.
“Of course, we’re checking him every half an hour, he has cream to be applied and we’re leaving him out of his nappy to let his skin dry. It’s given us an excuse to use the nightdresses; they’re more practical than sleepsuits.”

“I bet they look adorable in nightdresses, especially Tegan.” Narcissa fawned.

“Actually Calix looks the cutest in them.” Harry grinned. “Farren’s too big to really pull it off; Leolin’s too little so his just drowns him and it looks more like a wedding dress on him.”

“You have to show us.” Ashleigh coaxed.

Harry grinned at Max, who nodded and went to get his second son. Calix was tiny in his arms and in the little nightdress with the blue flowers embroidered on the front he looked dainty as he was handed to his Grandmother to coo over.

“Oh he looks absolutely adorable! Do you have pictures of him in the nightdress?”

“More than we possibly know what to do with.” Draco answered with a chuckle. “I suppose we could always repaper the walls, we have more than enough with how many photos Harry has taken.”

“I like taking photos of them; I don’t want to miss a single moment!” Harry said with a smile as he rocked Braiden in his arms, who was gnawing on the wet washcloth until it was time for more teething gel so he could have a bottle and then some sleep.

“At this rate you can line them all up and make a timeline of all their lives.”

Harry stuck his tongue out at Blaise and handed Braiden off to Nasta so that he could get everyone tea. He enjoyed the peace and conversation with the family while it lasted, though he wished that Aneirin and Sanex had agreed to come, but Aneirin was finishing up paperwork so he could come and help them the following week and he had told him that Sanex was also busy with work. Harry wondered if he had done anything to offend either of them recently, but nothing came to mind and their last meeting had been friendly and amicable enough, especially with presenting Aneirin with two grandsons and a granddaughter and Sanex with two Nephews and a Niece. He missed them both and he didn’t understand why they hadn’t come when he had called them asking for help.

“Harry? Love, are you alright?”
Max was standing in front of him and Harry looked up confusedly, blinking slowly.

“Huh?” He asked.

“Did you have a flashback, love?” Max asked, holding his hands softly and pulling him into a hug.

“No.” Harry said a bit defensively, pulling away from Max. He wasn’t some distressed woman and he hated being treated like glass.

“You got the same look on your face and you weren’t responding to us.”

“What about?” Nasta questioned.

“Your Dad and brother.” Harry admitted after realising that they wouldn’t leave it alone. “I don’t know if it’s just me, but they seem to be treating me differently since the birth of the quintuplets. Was it something I did or said? Did I offend them both or something by not allowing them near Leolin, even though he was related to them to blood? Because that wasn’t personal, I didn’t want anyone holding Leolin after his birth.”

“I think that’s our cue to leave.” Richard said in the silence that followed as he stood up.

Harry watched confusedly as everyone said their hurried goodbyes and left quickly, Calix being handed over to Draco, who was avoiding his eyes.

“I did do or say something, didn’t I?” Harry said hollowly as he felt light headed at the thought of offending two much loved and very respected people that he held close to his heart.

Harry slid down the kitchen counter and he stared ahead blankly. Nasta’s face appeared in front of his gaze and Harry realised that his eyes were blurry through tears. He blinked and those tears slid down his face.
“Harry love, no one blames you.”

“I’m not like the other submissives, I’m not, but I couldn’t hand over Leolin after just learning that he was a Faerie and had an open back wound, I just couldn’t.”

“Harry, it’s not about Leolin, love, it happened before Leolin was even born.”

Nasta sighed heavily and pulled him between his crouched legs and held him to his chest, even as Harry struggled and tried to push him away.

“You tried to kill Sanex.” Nasta told him, softly, calmly, as if he had done nothing more than knock over a glass of water.

“What?!” Harry screamed trying more viciously to break Nasta’s hold on him.

“After you had gone into premature labour and gone feral, Sanex foolishly followed you up to the bedroom through concern. He acted like a damned idiot and he’s already been told off by me and Dad for it, but he didn’t think, he heard you screaming and he foolishly followed you. You were feral, in labour and looking for a place to birth and Sanex was in the same room, misguided trying to help you. Of course you reacted negatively to his presence, of course you tried to eliminate the perceived threat to you and your babies. No one blames you, Harry.”

“Obviously they do blame me or they wouldn’t treat me any differently!” Harry snapped as the memory played out in his mind as Nasta’s words uncovered the memory from his mind. “Fuck, I almost killed him, Nasta! I would have managed to kill him if Myron hadn’t come home when he did. I had Sanex pinned down in the corner of the room, he wouldn’t have been able to get out or away from me, but I was distracted by Myron coming home and I turned away from him just long enough for him to slip around me. He could have died! I could have killed him! I almost did kill him!”

“But you didn’t.” Nasta said firmly. “Sanex even admits that it was his own fault. He shouldn’t have gone after you like a brainless idiot, he knew better, Harry, he’s been taught better than that. He’s grown up with Drackens, he’s been taught these things, Cariad, he should have remembered how dangerous a feral Dracken is and kept well away from you, but he didn’t. That was his fault, not
“But I almost killed him!”

“No one blames you.” Nasta answered firmly. “Max, get my brother and Father here now, no excuses.” He ordered. “Harry need’s to hear it from them.”

Harry heard Max moving away and the portrait door opening and closing. Nasta still refused to let him go, holding him tightly and unrelentingly.

It took ten minutes before Max came back into their rooms with a panicky looking Aneirin and a confused Sanex.

“Max said that you needed us and that it was urgent, I was picturing you sick or dying.” Aneirin confessed as he hunched down and clamped Nasta in a hug, kissing him.

“No, I’m well enough, but Harry noticed that you and Sanex are treating him with caution and he believes that it was because he wouldn’t let you hold Leolin.”

“What? Harry, no. I understood why you were more protective of Leolin and why you wouldn’t let him out of your arms. My Dracken is a bit more cautious around you because, well you…”

“Almost killed Sanex.” Harry said tearfully.

“It was my fault, Harry.” Sanex cut in. “I didn’t think, my mind was just completely blank and I followed you without thinking. I never should have followed you up the stairs, let alone into the bedroom.”

Harry got out of Nasta’s arms and slipped his arms around Sanex. “I’m sorry. I don’t want to kill you, no matter how much of a pest you and Caesar are sometimes.”

Sanex laughed at that and hugged him back tightly. “I’m not afraid of you, Harry. I’m afraid of your Dracken though, and with good reason, you are damned scary when you’re feral, I almost shit myself. But I couldn’t be afraid of you now in human form, you’re too cute and your glare is adorable.”
Harry glared at him, his eyes promising death, but Sanex laughed.

“That’s it; you just look so cute like that.”

“Sanex, you carry on speaking and he’ll kill you without his Dracken form.” Nasta warned. “No one calls Harry the ‘A’ or ‘C’ words and lives.”

“It wasn’t your fault, Harry, but you know how Dracken instincts are, I felt that I had to protect my child, my human son, from you after you had tried, and very nearly succeeded, in killing him. But seeing you with him now, I have no desire to rip him from you, or to fight you to protect him, which I would have done if I thought that you were any real threat to Sanex. I don’t blame you; Sanex was a fool who forgot everything that I drilled into him for the last forty years. I admit it was his fault, so stop blaming yourself for something that was obviously the fault of my son.”

Harry smiled and hugged Aneirin.

“Now, where are my Grandchildren? I want to see all six of them before I leave.”

“You still want to come and help next week though, yes?” Harry questioned as if Aneirin might have changed his mind overnight.

“Of course, but I want as much time with my six Grandchildren as possible, even if I will be seeing a lot of them over the coming months.”

Harry chuckled and went to sit on the settee as Max finished making the tea that Harry had abandoned when their guests had fled from him. All six babies were brought out of the bedroom for Aneirin and Sanex to see, though more for the fact that it was coming up to feed time.

Harry cuddled with Braiden, who had fallen asleep with the smallest corner of the damp washcloth clenched between his gums and Blaise couldn’t resist a picture. Draco was cuddling Farren, Aneirin had Leolin cradled carefully in his arms, Sanex had Tegan, Nasta was holding a sleeping Regan and Max was gazing adoringly at little dainty Calix. Hell Harry loved his family, even if they did try to kill one another from time to time, as long as they could still have moments like this, everything would be forgiven and forgotten.

Chapter Sixty – Downhill Slide

The next week was so much easier than Harry could have possibly imagined with Aneirin to help them. They could keep Braiden calm and fed with a combination of the teething gel and the wet washcloth and Harry actually found some enjoyment from seeing the teeny, tiny little tooth that appeared in the front, bottom of Braiden’s mouth which was soon quickly joined by a second front, bottom tooth. It made his smiles absolutely adorable when he showed off those two little bottom teeth and he made sure to get as many photos of it as he could.

His lessons were also picking up pace as they quickly approached February, the work was getting harder and more in depth as every Professor pushed and pushed and pushed all of them, swamping them with homework until Harry felt like crying with the unending homework. He was forced to spend time with his children by holding them on his lap as he did his homework, writing out endless essays and filling in numerous mock exam questions. There was the very real threat of being taken out of the exams by his Professors if he didn’t complete everything given to him, to the standard that they expected, thus never graduating or worse, having to repeat his last year, was hanging heavily over his head.

Blaise was the most affected, becoming short and abrupt with everyone and throwing a fit if he didn’t have complete silence in which to work with, which with six very young babies, was not even remotely possible. So Nasta usually ended up ordering him to the library or to the study hall, which had been converted from a large, disused classroom, set up by the Professors for all seventh year students who wanted some extra help as there was often a Professor or two there to help where they could.
Draco actually impressed Harry, and likely Max and Nasta as well, with how calm he was as he planned every minute of his day to fit in everything that he needed to do. Unlike Hermione, who blocked her homework and revision and spent every minute of her time limit doing what her schedule said to, Draco would start immediately on something else once he had finished the first, regardless of how much time he had left of his allocated limit. This often let him breeze through the subjects that he knew, to spend more time on those that he wasn’t as proficient in and sometimes it even left him with time to spare. Draco didn’t waste this spare time either, he instead used it to play with their children or to help Harry with his own homework, which gave Harry some more free time to spend with their children as well, which made him less stressed and made him that little bit happier.

Today was not one of those days however, as Draco was struggling to keep himself to his own schedule and Harry was half a minute away from bashing his head against the table in frustration. Deciding that he needed a distraction from the screaming babies and from Draco’s fevered quill scratching, Harry swiped his books to the floor and stood up with a huff.

“That’s not going to help you finish your homework.” Nasta told him as he bounced Braiden over his shoulder as their son screamed.

“I don’t care, I’ve had enough.” Harry declared as he moved to the kitchen and started taking out pans and bowls.

“Are you hungry?” Max asked even as he carefully fed a softly suckling Leolin. “We can exchange places if you want.”

“No, I’m not hungry; I’m stressed so I’m going to bake.”

Harry made good on his promise as he beat his cake mixture viciously, watched by his mates, who didn’t say a word to disrupt him in case he turned on them.

Harry threw himself next to Max when the cakes were in the oven and he snuggled in and just touched Leolin’s sleeping face.

“Do you feel any better?” Max asked with a grin.

“Not yet.” Harry answered as he scooped up Farren and inhaled the soft scent of his second child. “I can’t wait until we’re out of this place. I’ll miss it and the teachers, but I can’t deal with so much stress all at once.”
“It’ll be alright soon, love.” Max soothed, sliding Leolin into his other arm and wrapping his free one around Harry, kissing him gently. “It’s almost February, and Nasta’s thirty-eighth birthday. Feeling old yet, Nas?”

Nasta rolled his eyes, but his lips were turned up into a smile. “Not yet, though you are only thirty-two, Max, I doubt you’d feel old even when you turn three hundred.”

“Of course not.” Max laughed. “I’ll be forever young!”

Harry chuckled and bounced Farren a bit more. “Young mentally that is.”

Draco snorted and Max dug a finger into his side to make him squirm. His timer went off and Harry handed Farren to Max and took out his fairy cakes, leaving them to cool as he went and wrapped his arms around Draco and nibbled at his neck. He could feel the amount of stress and tension that Draco swallowed back to keep himself from shoving him off or telling him to get off as he feverishly tried to complete his work.

Harry sat back on his legs and placed his hands on Draco’s shoulders, rubbing gently to begin with, before steadily increasing the pressure until he was working out the knots from Draco’s neck, back and shoulders, gently digging in his thumbs to work out the particularly bad knots.

Draco shuddered under his touch and he let out a deep sigh of air, his entire body relaxing.

“I should have done this ages ago.” Harry chuckled, leaning forward to nibble at Draco’s skin. “I don’t think I’ve given any of you a massage since the night that Nasta joined us! I tricked him into having sex with me.”

“How did you manage that and what does it have to do with a massage?” Max questioned curiously as he put Leolin down and picked up Regan.

“It was Nasta’s very first day with us and I stripped naked for bed and refused to wear any clothes unless Nasta gave me a backrub. He couldn’t do it properly so I straddled him and gave him a real massage to show him how it was done. It sort of escalated into sex when I started rubbing against his front when he rolled me onto the bed. It was damn good sex too, I really should give massages more often.”

“You can massage me if you want to.” Max offered with a grin. “I’ll even give you damn good sex.” Max added a wink and Harry laughed for the first time in what felt like days.
Harry sandwiched himself against Draco and sucked at his neck, hearing the small hitch of breath.

“I could give you a proper massage if you took off your shirt and laid down.” Harry breathed into Draco’s delicately pink ear.

“I need to finish this, Harry.” Draco answered, but it was not half as convincing as perhaps Draco would have liked.

Harry smiled. “One massage, then you can go back to doing your work; you’ll feel better for it.”

“Am I allowed to say no?” Draco inquired.

“No.” Harry replied with a smile and he pulled Draco to lie on the floor, tugging the shirt off as he went. “Throw me a cushion please, Nas.”

Nasta threw the cushion gently to him and Harry caught it, propping it under Draco’s head before climbing to straddle Draco’s bum.

“Oh!” Harry got off of Draco again. “I’ll be right back.” Harry went to the bathroom, got a bottle of lube and carried it back into the living room.

“You can’t really think that you’re going to have sex on the living room floor with how much work we still have to do.” Draco replied, though his silver eyes had blown wide with the beginnings of lust.

“It’s in place of massage gel and I couldn’t find the baby oil. I think Blaise moved it after bathing Braiden in the morning, but I don’t know where he has gone and put it.” Which was a complete lie as he knew where it was, it was just that the lube tasted a hell of a lot better than baby oil.

Harry straddled Draco once again and squirted some lube onto his hands, rubbing them together to warm the gel, he then spread the gel onto Draco’s back, his hands moving so much more smoothly as he rubbed and caressed Draco’s back, who groaned and sunk into the floor as his body let go of all the tension it was carrying.

Harry couldn’t help but lean down to kiss at Draco’s perfect skin, licking up the lube that clung to his lips. He really did prefer it to the baby oil. He licked the gel from Draco’s back, his blond mate groaning further as he felt Harry’s tongue trace his spine.

“Can I have a massage next?” Max whined as he cradled Calix, who had opened very dark blue eyes to peer around at the world around him curiously.

“If you want one.” Harry replied. “You can all have one, all you need to do is ask. I love giving massages.”

When every knot had been worked out of Draco’s body and he was so relaxed that he was almost dozing, Harry lay on his back and kissed him from his shoulder, up his neck, to his face and made his way to his jaw and finally his mouth, where he let his lips linger.

“Now you can do your work.” Harry said as he stood up and stretched. “Max, on the floor.”

Max grinned as he passed Calix to Nasta and took Draco’s spot on the floor. Max’s back was larger than Draco’s and getting his legs straddled over Max’s hips required him to be more flexible than was strictly comfortable, but Harry enjoyed himself as he took to rubbing lube on his lover’s back and sides. Max was decidedly not ticklish as Harry ghosted gently fingertips over his sides and into the soft dent by his hipbones, coming close to his stomach, but Max didn’t even twitch.

Harry mentally timed Max’s massage to Draco’s, he made sure that all the knots were out of his body, before declaring him done and asking for Nasta to lay on the floor.

His oldest mate passed Calix back to Max and tugged off his jumper and the vest underneath, before lying on his stomach and silently accepting the soft, small hands that caressed and smoothed over his skin. Harry took care to kiss as much of Nasta as he could, licking up the lube before spreading more around so his hands could work easier over the skin.

Once again he timed his massage so that it didn’t take any longer than Max or Draco’s had, but he also made sure that all the knots had been removed and that Nasta was relaxed and loose before declaring him done and going to wash the lube from his hands and to finally ice his cooled cupcakes.

He mixed the icing sugar he had made sure that Max had put in the cupboard just for an occasion such as this and he mixed it with a few drops of food colouring to make it a pale blue. He set to icing the cupcakes and he lobbed one at Max, who bit into it and moaned, complimenting him heavily over the taste and the presentation of the simple cupcake, but it made Harry grin and swell a bit with pride and accomplishment.

Harry made tea and served it along with a plate of his cakes to his mates and allowed Nasta to pull him onto his lap, even though every fibre of his being screamed that it was degrading. It wasn’t. How could it be? He loved being cuddled by his mates, so what if Nasta wanted him on his lap, snuggled in like a baby? No one was here to see them and it felt nice, wasn’t that all that mattered? All that should matter?

Blaise came back to their rooms late and he was in a very bad mood and Harry wasn’t prepared to put up with it any longer. Blaise had been his first for many things, he had been mated to him for the longest, had loved him for the longest but he was not going to put up with this behaviour any longer, three days was long enough.

“Get on the floor now.” Harry ordered with a growl. Blaise rumbled warningly at him, but Harry just glared at him until with a sneer and a scrunch to his nose, Blaise sat on the floor by the coffee table, looking to be fully prepared to take his homework out and start working again.

“No. I’m not putting up with this, Blaise. You can’t treat us like this just because you’re having a bad day. We’re all stressed, it’s hard I know, but there is nothing that we can do about the babies, or about how much work the Professors give us, but you can’t treat us so terribly just because it’s getting to you, you’re overworked, love, so take off your shirt and lay down.”

“I wasn’t asking, Blaise.” Harry cut in with a hard edge to his voice, glaring again. “Do it. Now!”

Blaise scoffed, huffed and took off his shirt, Harry pushed him onto his stomach onto the cushion that hadn’t been moved and he picked up the bottle of lube again.

“What are you doing?” Blaise demanded.

“Please, Blaise, shut up. Just shut up.” Harry answered as he warmed the lube before spreading it over Blaise’s back and set to work.

There were so many knots that Harry didn’t know where to start first. He traced Blaise’s spine, running his thumbs lightly over the bone as his fingers fanned out to brush the skin of Blaise’s shoulders, moving downwards until Blaise squirmed. Unlike Max, he was ticklish and Harry’s fingertips so close to his sides made his muscles jump under the skin.

Harry popped bone and loosened knots until he could feel the tension draining out of Blaise’s body like a poison. Harry didn’t need to time Blaise’s massage because very soon Blaise was breathing heavily and evenly, his head pillowed on his folded arms on the cushion, his body more relaxed than it had been in days.

“He fell asleep on me.” Harry said scandalised, but quietly so that he wouldn’t wake him up.
“It could have been worse; at least it wasn’t during sex.” Max pointed out. “Your massages are top class, Harry; you could become a professional masseur.”

Harry scoffed. “As if you’d stand idly by and let me caress men and women’s backs for a living. You’d likely tear the heads off of my customers.”

“There is that, but other than that you’d make an amazing masseur.” Max assured.

Harry chuckled quietly as he took the blanket from the back of the settee and covered Blaise with it.

“If he’s still asleep in an hour I’ll carry him to bed.” Nasta said from the settee, cradling Regan close.

“I hope he sleeps for a long while.” Draco grumbled, working on his own work, but it was with a decidedly more relaxed air about him. “You’re not the only one who his attitude has been grating on.”

“He needs some sleep.” Harry agreed. “Hopefully he’ll wake up in a better mood.”

“What he’s sleeping and getting on with recovering from his almost breakdown, why don’t you start on your own work, hmm?” Nasta suggested lightly.

Harry snorted. “And end up like him? No thanks!”

Nasta just gave him a look and Harry sighed, flumping down and pulling his scattered homework to himself and forcing himself to do it to standard and not just write down random words and nonsense until it was the required length.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Harry woke up and groaned. The screaming in his ear meant that a baby had been what had woken him. He rolled over to several other groans and grumbles and he sat up groggily. He scooped up Tegan and accidentally on purpose kneed Nasta’s shin. His mate grunted in pain and blinked hazel eyes that looked more greenish in the early morning gloom.
“Was that for?” He mumbled sleepily.

“She’s your daughter.” Harry grumbled as he carried her carefully down the stairs and into the little kitchenette to make a bottle for her. He didn’t know why she had woken up an hour early for her feed, but Harry hoped that she didn’t make a habit of it.

Tegan refused the bottle and Harry sighed as he blinked his eyes open a crack, put the bottle down before he turned her over to check her nappy. It was dry and unsoiled. Harry woke up a bit more now as Tegan continued to scream, he turned her over in his arms and actually looked at his little daughter, who was red faced and squalling. Actually, she was more red faced than she should have been, even if she was crying so hard.

Immediately his stomach lurched into his throat and Harry quickly felt her forehead, his hand lingering on her skin and his eyes widened and his heart raced as he felt how warm she actually was. His hand slipped to her cheek and then her neck and then her belly and back, she was really, seriously burning up.

Harry let out a distressed scream and almost instantaneously he was surrounded, each mate speaking until Nasta hit the three others over the head lightly, their chins dropped to their chests and stayed there until Nasta pulled their heads up. They remained quiet.

“Tegan’s burning.” Harry told them now that it was actually quiet. “She’s burning up, she needs a Healer.”

Nasta touched her head and hissed. “Max, Healer now.”

Max was gone before Harry could say anything further; Harry was ushered to sit on the settee with Tegan, Draco brought a cool, wet washcloth and Harry laid it over Tegan’s forehead, hoping that it would help until the Healer arrived.

“How long has she been like this?” Harry demanded. “How long has she been fevered while we were sleeping just inches away from her?!”

“Don’t think about it, Harry.” Blaise soothed. “She let us know when she was ill and we reacted immediately.”

Max came back into the room pulling Madam Pomfrey, who had a belted robe around her body, she had obviously been sleeping.
“I’m sorry, Madam Pomfrey, but please, I don’t know what’s wrong with her.”

Madam Pomfrey’s wand was in hand and already running diagnostic tests, she handed Harry a thermometer.

“Place that in her ear until it beeps, if you would, Harry.”

Harry did as he was told and he swallowed heavily at the reading when it beeped. One-o-one point three degrees.

“She has a high fever; does she have a rash anywhere upon her body? Particularly reddish-purple spots?”

Harry untied the nightdress from around Tegan and slipped her out of it carefully, leaving her in just a nappy. He searched her critically for any spots or blemishes, but there was nothing.

“No, no rash or spots.”

“That’s good. I think she just may have an infection. The fever is telling us that her body is fighting the infection. Viruses thrive at about ninety-eight degrees Fahrenheit, the elevated temperature will help her body fight the infection more effectively and will alert her body to the infection, which will then cause her body to make more white blood cells and antibodies. I wouldn’t suggest giving her medicine at this stage, just keep her clothing light, don’t swaddle her with blankets and keep checking her temperature, if it at all rises, then you need to head to St Mungos and get a specialist to take a look at her.”

“So we leave her?” Harry demanded furiously, not at all happy with that plan.

“Understand, Harry that a fever is the body’s way of dealing with infections. I don’t believe she has a serious infection and her temperature is not dangerously high, so giving her any medication could do her more damage. She seems to have calmed down since you are comforting her, which suggests that her crying was for attention, which is why she refused the bottle as she wasn’t hungry. She’s just uncomfortable, though if she still doesn’t accept a bottle when it’s past time for her usual feed then floo to St Mungos, though I don’t believe this will be the case.”
Harry nodded unhappily as he pulled Tegan’s head through the neck of the nightdress and slipped her arms through one at a time. He gently tied the collar of the nightdress closed before tying the sash at her waist.

“How long until it goes away?” He couldn’t help asking.

“A few days I’d say, any more and again, take her to St Mungos, Harry, though I’m sure she’ll be fine.”

Harry nodded.

“Thank you very much, Madam Pomfrey.” Max told her as he gazed at his daughter worriedly. “I’m sorry for startling you as I did.”

“That’s alright. I’d do anything for any person in this school. If I didn’t like being woken up at odd hours on different days of the week then I’d have applied for the librarian post.”

Harry chuckled and said goodbye to the Healer as she waved away Max’s offer to accompany her back to her rooms.

“I am a grown woman, I am not so old yet as to forget where I sleep, you are needed here more than walking me needlessly to my rooms. Good morning to you all gentlemen.”

“She told you huh?” Blaise teased as she left. Max scowled at him and ruffled his hair.

“There’s no point in going back to sleep, the other five will be waking up soon anyway, I’ll make us some tea.” Nasta said as he kissed Harry and then kissed Tegan.

Nasta was as good as his word and soon enough Harry was cuddled up with a cup in his hands, sipping on the comforting, delicate flavour of honey.

It relaxed him as he brushed gentle fingers through Tegan’s downy hair, which was growing in as black as Braiden’s. She blinked open her eyes and let out a discontented murmur. Harry soothed her and shushed her, rubbing her tummy softly.
“Come on, baby girl. It’s alright, Mummy has you now. I’m not going to let anything happen to you.”

His voice seemed to calm her and when he had finished his tea and pulled her up onto his chest, his heartbeat lulled her into sleep and he was reassured by the small puffs of air against his bare skin. Tegan would be alright, with some tender love and care, she would be fine, he wouldn’t let anything happen to her. Her or any of his children. Not now, not ever.

Aneirin couldn’t keep the smile from his face as he looked around himself to the halls of the Faeries. He had made an appointment to see the Faerie court and he knew that they didn’t want him here. In fact they hated him being here and had put off the meeting twice already, which had been in his best interest as he gathered as much information as he could from his family’s accounts of the Faerie courts, but he had kept onto them and persevered and now he was in the Faerie halls, about to speak to the court and rub their snotty noses in his Faerie grandson.

Harry had fearfully told him about his only granddaughter’s fever and Aneirin had hopefully reassured him about it with the story of when Angharad had gotten a cold when she was only a few days old and the time when Nasta had gotten a fever when he was two months old. He explained that babies’ immune systems needed to be strengthened and that Tegan getting an infection was not a sign of bad parenting, but her body’s way of strengthening itself for when some bigger, more serious infection came along, that it would help her body be prepared to fight it off and give her a better chance of getting through it.

Harry hadn’t looked as fearful, or as tearful, after Aneirin had finished explaining the fever to him and thankfully after only twenty-eight hours, Tegan’s fever had broken and she became her happy, cooing self once more and Harry had been so relieved. He was just glad that it hadn’t been Leolin, because his immune system was almost non-existent, he had told Harry seriously that if Leolin ever got a fever or showed any signs of sickness that he was to immediately go to St Mungos, no wasting time, no messing about, just straight to the hospital’s specialist, magical creatures paediatricians ward as he would need medicine and quite a lot of it to survive.

“Why have you come here?”

Aneirin looked up to the Faerie in front of him and grinned as he recognised him from the photos his ancestors had taken of themselves and their friends.

“It’s been a long time since our families last met, Aubrey.” Aneirin greeted, unable to take the smirk from his mouth. “What has it been, a hundred and ten years?”
“You’re bloodline is too dilute, Delericey.” The tall, slender Faerie told him stiffly. “You have no business being here dragon!”

“It’s pronounced Dracken actually, Tylwyth Teg.” Aneirin replied mildly, not giving anything away until he met with the Faeries of the Seelie and Unseelie court.

Aubrey snarled at him, but another Faerie laid a hand on his shoulder and pushed him off on his way down the corridor, almost making Aubrey fall to the ground as he stumbled at the force.

Aneirin greeted Warren amicably. His family had gotten on with Warren’s for a very long while according to the journals.

“I do not understand why you have come here today, Aneirin Delericey, but it is good to see one of your family again. The Seelie and Unseelie court will see you now.”

“It is good to see you too, Warren, my ancestors always spoke highly of you. You look well.”

“I have been well for these past few centuries, unlike you. I had heard that your grief was unparalleled in its passion when you lost your love. What of your youngest child?”

“Lowri died to birth our second son, Nasta, but he survived. He was born a Dracken. That was almost thirty-eight years ago, Warren.”

“Time passes differently here, you know we do not count the years as other races do.”

Aneirin inclined his head in understanding.

“You have unrested the Seelie and the Unseelie courts, they whisper and taunt. Dragons do not belong in the Faerie courts.” Warren warned him gently.

“Perhaps I do not, but my son and his lover have birthed a Faerie.” Aneirin told the tall Valkyrie, who had been noted in all his family’s journals and biographies, as being a friend to the Delericeys and he had obviously been watching them or keeping up with their news to some extent as he knew about Lowri’s death. Perhaps his family weren’t as excluded from the Faeries as he had once thought.
Warren stopped dead and just looked at him with wide eyes, the same eyes that all Faeries gained after their baby blue eyes changed, the eyes that Leolin would have when they finally changed colour.

“This…this is madness! A Faerie has not been born into your line in a life age!”

“A hundred and fifty-eight years and yes I know that you don’t deal with years here, but that is as long as it has been since the last Faerie in our line was born.”

“The child died not long after birth, did it not?” Warren asked gently.

“Yes, a sickness took her and it ravaged her body until she gave out.” Aneirin answered, thinking about the girl who would have grown to be his great-great-great aunt.

“Unfortunate that we are so strong against such things in adulthood, yet when we are at our most defenceless, we are also at our weakest and most vulnerable against such things. It should not be that the young die in such horrific ways as we watch helpless, I will pray for your son’s child’s good health and speed into adulthood.”

Aneirin nodded in acceptance of the spoken words and they carried on to the courts. Warren gave him a hard, strong slap on the shoulder at the door that would have sent a human flying to the floor, but he was a Dracken and made of much stronger, sterner stuff, so he managed to keep his footing against what was meant to be a good will gesture.

Aneirin didn’t knock on the door, the court had sent for him, they were expecting him and knocking would have been seen as him stalling, which would not be a good impression to make with his first action, so he just walked through the door and walked to stand before the table of nine Seelie and Unseelie Faeries. He greeted them all in their order of seating, the Faerie on the end of the table on the left, then the Faerie on the end of the table on the right side, then back to the left, then the right until he greeted the Faerie sat in the middle of the table, last.

“I am. Aneirin Delericey.”

“You have no Faerie blood in you, you have no place here.” The female Faerie next to Eitri told him. Siusan’s eyes were dark, but still the bright colour of all Faerie’s.

“The blood was weak within your line.” Donella told him, her lips tugged down into a stern frown. “Your blood was cursed with the death of all Faeries in your line.”

“The ancestors have seen fit to lift the curse. A Faerie has been born into my line through my youngest son, whose lover bore him a Faerie son not one moon turn ago.”

“Is this perhaps some cheap trick to associate with the Seelie and Unseelie once more?” Zuzana asked haughtily, her dress adorned with large and tacky, but expensive and glimmering, gems.

“You have not bought the child with you.” Dain pointed out softly, he had been another friend to the Delericeys once upon a time.

“My son and his lover are very protective of the child and they will not allow him out of their sight.”

“Then how do you plan to prove your claim is true?” Alston asked with unfriendly eyes.

Aneirin held up the folder that he had brought with him. He laid it on the table in front of Sindri and watched as the head of the court opened the folder to show pictures of Leolin, most particularly his back in various stages of growth.

“He was not carried to term.” Narilla said softly, her soft eyes bright with tears as she touched the picture of Leolin being held gently on Harry’s bare chest, his raw and sticky wings on show as he wore just a nappy for the photo.

“No, he was born at just four moon turns gestation.”

“That is much too soon! He should not have lived.”
“My son and his lover were very nurturing and took excessive care with him, they are still very possessive and caring of him, but they have requested books so that they may help their son further and adequately so that he may reach adulthood happy and healthy.”

“The child’s eyes have not turned.” Kailen pointed out.

“No, he is less than a moon’s turn old; can you expect his eyes to have turned?”

“No, but your son, I take it he is the taller male? He has your look to him.”

Aneirin nodded. “My son Nasta and his lover Harry.”

“Both males?” Zuzana screeched in scandal.

“Not every man wants a woman.” Aneirin put in bitchily and more than a bit pointedly.

“Your son’s eyes have Faerie hints.” Dain cut in before Zuzana could start a scene.

“Yes. He is a carrier, as we all are, and he passed the full gene to his youngest child.”

“Youngest? Your son and his lover have more than the Faerie child?”

“Yes, my son and Harry have three children, two boys and a girl.”

“Only the youngest boy is Faerie?”

Aneirin nodded in answer.

“This male does not look out of boyhood!” Narilla fretted.
“Harry is seventeen, but he is a Dracken, not a human.”

“Dragons!” Alston spat.

“Yet from two dragons came a Faerie.” Aneirin boasted.

“Drackens are notorious for their lovers and children. How many lovers does Harry have and how many children?” Eitri asked curiously.

“Harry has four lovers, including my son, and between them they currently has six children, three of them are my son’s.”

“Are there any more…animals in the family lines?” Donella inquired spitefully.

“No. Not to our knowledge.” Aneirin answered curtly. “There is just Dracken and Faerie blood.”

“Why have you come here?” Zuzana demanded. “One Faerie does not change your blood status from null!”

“It should.” Aneirin said. “How can my bloodline be claimed as a null one if a Faerie child has been produced? But it was not a change for my blood status that I came for. I came for books, for information, so that my family can properly care for a Faerie child. We wish for him to reach adulthood well.”

“If you cannot adequately care for him, then perhaps he should not be in your care.” Suisan murmured. “I would be happy to accept the babe into my arms and to my breast.”

“Not acceptable.” Aneirin said furiously, anger making his eyes darker, his temper breaking through for the first time since being here, though he had known that this could be a possibility. “Leolin belongs with his Mother and his Fathers, with his brothers and sister, his family. You will not take him from us. I came for information to make his life easier, so that we may raise him properly, but if you do not plan to give me what I have requested, then say so now and I will leave and help my sons raise their child as best as we can.”
“You will never…” Zuzana started, but she was cut off midsentence.

“Your request is granted.” Sindri spoke for the first time, his voice heavy and slow with age. “I will have Warren escort you to the library, where you may take as many books on Faerie children as you need. No Faerie child deserves to be taken from their family and no Faerie child will suffer needlessly while I am the head of this court. If it is information that you need, then you shall be gifted it. It is nice to see the Delericeys back among us once more, Aneirin. Your son Nasta and his son Leolin, along with his Mother Harry, will be most welcome among us should a time come when they wish to visit. I would like to see Leolin before he grows too large and heavy to fit into these bony, weakening arms. I always do like to hold Faerie children, but so few are being born these moon turns and fewer are reaching adulthood, I will pray for him, as I do all babes, and mayhaps the ancestors will hear me this time.”

“I thank you, Sindri, Head of the Seelie and Unseelie court.” Aneirin answered respectfully. “I will bring Nasta, Harry and Leolin to see you when it is convenient.”

Sindri inclined his head and just like that it was over and he was dismissed, picking up the folder of photos and leaving through the door that he had come through, to meet Warren on the outside. The man was smiling at him and clapped him on the back once more, this time in greeting. Aneirin swore that if he was ever choking, he would have Warren help him out.

“You spoke fluently and eloquently and did not get riled up, you did well.” Warren told him, throwing an arm around his shoulders.

“I almost did.” Aneirin grumbled.

“But you did not fall for those harpies’ ploys! Suisan has failed to even birth her four Faeries now and she craves the feel of babes in arms, it is no wonder that she tried for yours and Zuzana cannot find a Valkyrie who will lay with her for children and not pleasure.”

“I don’t know what pleasure can be found from her, but I am somehow glad to hear that she has never had a child.”

Warren chuckled and nodded. “Alston is upset as he lost his daughter to the human son of a Dracken, they married without his blessing and have two children, both are Drackens which his daughter has not let him see. He had intended for her to marry the son of his wealthy friend to create an unbroken union between them. I heard that the dowry was to be quite a sum.”
“What is Donella’s excuse for being a tart?”

Warren chuckled again. “She has tried and failed to raise three Faerie babes to adulthood. It is rumoured that her Valkyrie was being adulterous, so their union was cursed by the ancestors. She does not like to see any babe being raised to adulthood anymore when her own were taken from her.”

“It was nice to see Dain and Kailen still accept the Delericeys.”

“Many here have not forgotten that Dain and Kailen were very close to young Trefor Delericey before he was killed. They were very thick friends and they were both saddened when Trefor’s son’s daughter died and when Nesta did not produce a Faerie child, despite his five children, and then your blood was declared a null line, they were very upset. But they will rejoice again now that Trefor’s blood has thickened once more. It is still rumoured around the city that they and Trefor were more than friends, that they were his lovers and Trefor’s children were their children, which is why they have never taken a Fae in a union.”

“Perhaps they just don’t want someone like Zuzana, Suisan and Donella as a life partner, though Narilla seemed nice enough.”

“Narilla is a Mother to us all. Any babe who becomes orphaned or is in need of help goes to Narilla. She is the epitome of the perfect Fae, her Valkyrie is so proud and so protective of her that he will not let any other Valkyrie near her unattended, he would have been waiting outside the table court exit for her, he does not like leaving her to attend court issues alone.”

“A bit like Harry. He is considered the most perfect submissive Dracken, my son and his three other lovers are so protective, but he takes their actions as smothering and believes that they are trying to take away his independence, so he often lashes out at displays of such protectiveness.”

Warren chuckled. “Your son has his hands full then, Harry sounds like a wildfire.”

“Oh he is that. He can be very aggressive when his children are threatened or taunted, his mate Maximilius has a brother, Caesar and his mate insulted Harry’s first child, Braiden, and he almost tore her leg off. He was pulled away before he could be successful, but he did leave a very nasty scar.”

“I wouldn’t expect anything less from a Mother.” Warren said as they entered the vast, colossus library. “I will be sure to find you the very best books to help you raise your grandson, Aneirin.”

“We have already started.”

Aneirin looked over to see Dain and Kailen with a pile of books off to one side.

“I thank you.”

“Any relative of Trefor is a relative of ours.” Dain said sincerely.

Aneirin did not like how that sentence was phrased and neither did it seem, did Warren, whose thick black eyebrows pulled in to meet over his nose, so deep was his frown. He would have to search his family tree more finely and find out if every child of Trefor’s was by his Husband, though it would be difficult to find out, seeing as Trefor and all of his children were dead.

Aneirin was happy to leave with a charmed bag full of books that would help the boys raise Leolin. Anything at all that would ease their worry would help immensely and he promised Warren, Dain and Kailen that he would return to show them Leolin as soon as he was able.

As his watch told him that it was coming up to half two in the morning, Aneirin decided to head home to bed, he would see the boys tomorrow as he was scheduled to help Max and Nasta with the six children as Harry, Blaise and Draco went to their lessons. In the end he was glad to leave the Faerie city, but he was not glad to leave behind Warren, whom he had only met that day, but felt like he had known his entire life.

Nasta blinked open his eyes and squinted in the dark, trying to work out what had woken him up. Nothing seemed amiss, but he pulled in a deep breath regardless, only to realise that his nose was blocked and the small scents that he could pull in were sweat from his own body and sickness. His own sickness.

Nasta coughed into his hand as quietly as he could and he forced himself up on shaky legs. He almost toppled down the stairs and he had to hold onto the wall to keep himself upright and when he made it to the bottom, he went straight into the bathroom and to the sink to get a drink and it was then that he caught sight of himself in the mirror.

His skin was white and covered in beads of sweat, his eyes were rimmed with red, with black bags further down, his lips were chapped and sore and an inspection of the inside of his mouth showed that his throat was red and swollen. He felt as weak as a kitten; shaking more the longer that he stood up in front of the mirror. He closed his eyes and breathed out unhappily.
He run a hot bath and gathered everything that he needed, being very quiet as he got fresh pyjamas from the bedroom dresser so that he didn’t wake any of the others.

He slipped into the water and reclined back, lying down so that he was as covered by the water as he could be without wetting his hair and he sighed unhappily. The steam helped his blocked nose, even if it did make his head pound. He’d have to take some Paracetamol tablets as he was sure that Max was out of headache relivers after the past two days. Blaise was stressed so he was back to his foul mood and he was showing it vehemently, Draco was stressed so he was in a foul mood, Braiden was getting an upper front tooth and Calix had a bad nappy rash that was likely very uncomfortable for him if the pitch of his crying was any indication. They had all needed headache relievers yesterday and the day before, but he also needed one now, quite a bit more than he had yesterday or the day before as well.

Nasta didn’t stay in the bath for long, just long enough for his body to feel warmer than it had and for the bone deep ache to ease off and then he got out. He towelled himself off and he dressed himself into the warm, fleece lined pyjamas that had been a gift from Harry last Christmas. He hadn’t worn them yet, but he was thankful for them now as the softness relaxed him and the fleece lining retained the heat from his bath.

He crawled onto the settee and wrapped himself in the blanket from the back of it, he couldn’t bring himself to get the tablets, he was just too tired. He fell into a fitful sleep not long after only to be woken up by a large hand on his forehead and Max’s sapphire blue eyes looking at him with such concern after what felt like only minutes of him closing his eyes.

“I think it’s just a cold.” Nasta replied thickly, his tongue felt like lead and his head was throbbing with his heartbeat.

“More like the flu.” Max said as he pulled down the medical kit, pulling out a thermometer that had yet to be used once since they had bought it.

“That had better not be a rectal thermometer.” Nasta joked weakly.

Max grinned. “You’re so weak and feverish that you couldn’t stop me even if it was.”

“Try it.” Nasta refuted, but as Max placed the thermometer gently into his mouth and under his tongue, all joking was put aside as those concerned blue eyes bore into his own hazel, which had brightened with the fever to a pale brown.

Max’s hand stroked through his sweaty hair, brushing it from his face as he timed the thermometer, taking it from under his tongue and sighing.

“Too high for you to be messing around.” Max answered the question in his eyes. “If you were a human then you’d have already had a seizure.”

Max wiped the thermometer with an antibacterial gel and put it away again before getting down his potions case instead and digging through it. He cursed as he realised what Nasta had already known, he had no headache relievers left. He got out a pale blue potion instead and uncorked it, he knelt down next to the settee and slipped an arm under his neck and eased him up enough to sip down the icy potion.

“A fever reducer, it should get you away from the danger zone. If you were Harry then I’d put you on a sex ban for the fear of ending up with another baby, not that I think you’re up for sex at the moment.”

Nasta groaned. “It’s that high?”

“Yes, so there is to be no messing around, no complaining, arguing or fighting anything I tell you to do. I’ll make you some soup now and ply you with hot tea and I’ll get a small cauldron going for a batch of headache relievers, you’ll need one soon I’ll bet.”

“Can’t I just take Paracetamol?” Nasta asked as the pain in his skull spiked.

“You can, but it won't last as long and you won’t be able to take any headache relievers with it once the tablets wear off and the pain comes back. Besides, you can take more headache relievers in twenty-four hours than you can Paracetamol. It'll only take an hour, I promise.” Max assured him as he set to work immediately on the potion, unlocking the cupboard that he kept his personal ingredients in and getting out what he needed.

The hour was set to be gruelling, or at least it was until Max’s hand stroking through his hair lulled him back to sleep.

Nasta was woken once again after what felt like only minutes, to soft voices and a happily shrieking baby.

“Braiden, shush love, please.”
“S’okay.” Nasta mumbled as he forced himself to sit up to meet Harry’s very worried emerald green eyes, Braiden’s stunning indigo and Max’s sapphire blue.

Braiden shrieked again, making the pain in his head turn almost blinding. He felt like his skull was splitting in two halves, but the little baby reached out to him, his two and a half teeth on show as he dribbled and grinned at him and Nasta was a slave to that gorgeous grin as he took the baby from Harry and let him bounce between his hands, no matter how much it made his arms ache to hold Braiden like this. Braiden screeched in happiness again and he flinched as it felt like his skull was crushing his brain.

Thankfully Max had seen him wince and he immediately handed over the single dose of headache reliever. Nasta downed it and almost instantaneously the pressure lifted from his skull and he fell back with Braiden in pleasure.

“Oh that felt good.” He moaned thickly, sniffing as much as he could through his blocked nose.

“I’ll bet.” Max said with a small smile. “I won’t ask if you feel any better, but I thought that you should know that your fever came down a few degrees while you were sleeping, it’s still very high though.”

“Had better not have taken my temperature rectally when I was sleeping.” Nasta tried to glare, but it probably came out as a squint.

“No, I took it from under your tongue again.” Max winked.

“You poor thing.” Harry cooed as he folded his legs under him beside the settee and nuzzled his cheek and chin as his fingers combed through his hair. “Don’t worry; I’ll take care of you.”

Nasta managed a smile and admitted to himself that it was kind of nice to be fussed over once in a while as Max brought over a mug of hot tea and Harry made sure that he was tucked in and continued playing with his hair. Braiden was sat upright in his lap still and he was cooing and clenching little fists into the blanket that he had over him.

Harry kissed him and Nasta scowled weakly.

“I don’t want you getting sick too.” He complained.

“If I’m going to get it, Nas then I’m going to get it. Viruses like the flu are airborne, we’ve all been sleeping next to you and it’s likely that you’ve had this virus for a few days. It takes a while for the symptoms to show.” Harry replied knowledgably as he peppered kisses on his face. “So I’m not going to stop kissing you when I could already have it anyway.”

“Just keep Leolin away from me then.” Nasta begged. “You heard Dad; his immune system isn’t mature enough to handle any viruses or illnesses.”

Harry nodded, but they left the worry that they all felt unspoken. Leolin had been next to the bed in his bassinet. He could have already been exposed to the illness.

“I wonder if this is what Tegan had.” Harry murmured. “Perhaps she gave it to you.”

Nasta chuckled, but it ended in a hacking cough that left his throat searing. He groaned and dropped back against the settee; Braiden giggled and leant forward to pat at his belly.

“It’s alright, boyo, I’ll be fine.” He assured, giving his son eye contact and the biggest smile that he could manage.

“What happened?” Draco asked as he came out fastening the cuffs of his shirt.

“Nasta has the flu.”

Immediately Draco stopped and looked to him with such soft, worried eyes that Nasta wanted to cry. When had Draco grown to love him so much to be so worried over a simple virus?

A cool, pale hand pressed to his forehead and Draco made a small noise of disgust.

“Have you given him anything?” Draco demanded of Max.

“Of course I have you dolt. He’s had a fever reducer and I made a fresh batch of headache relievers. I’ve been keeping him plied with his favourite tea and I’m in the process of making him chicken soup. He’s well taken care of.”

“All of us are going to take such good care of you.” Harry said softly with a loving smile. “You’ll be Nasta was sort of hoping that it took a while for him to get better, though he felt guilty for this desire as he thought about his tiny, vulnerable son. The longer that he stayed sick, the higher chance Leolin had of catching his illness, which could possibly end with a fatality as Leolin had a very immature immune system currently.

Blaise came out of the bedroom and it seemed that he knew immediately that something was wrong as he looked to him and those indigo eyes softened and that sensual mouth pouted out with concern. Blaise wore concern and worry well.

“What’s the matter?” He asked as he came to kiss his forehead, allowing his lips to linger as he tested his temperature. “You’re burning.”

“I’ve got the flu.” Nasta answered weakly, he was getting tired again and so much fussing was draining him.

“Ma ba!” Braiden exclaimed, holding chubby hands out to Blaise, who picked him up almost on autopilot as he tucked the blanket up and around his ears.

“If you tuck me in even more then you might as well just throw the blanket over my head.” He teased, sniffling and ruining Blaise’s tucking in job by raising a hand out of the blanket to rub at his itching eyes.

“How do you feel now?” Harry asked.

“Weak, tired, stuffy.” Nasta answered. “I feel sorry for you three.”

“Why?” Draco asked, looking between Blaise and Harry, whom he had indicated with a nod of the head.

“I’m ill and unable to perform my duties as the top dominant of our mateship, you all defer to Max now.”

The shit eating grin on Max’s face said that he had known this all along and he was very happy to be the acting top dominant, no matter for how long, in Nasta’s place.
“You shouldn’t enjoy this so much, Nasta is sick.” Harry chided him with a frown.

“It’s not like he’s dying, he’ll get better. It’s just a shit that Drackens can’t get any big infection or disease, but the little things take us out for weeks. We can’t get sepsis, but we can get a cold.”

Harry glared. “That’s not the point!”

“Don’t you have a shower to take and a uniform to get on?” Max asked mildly.

Harry glared harder. “You sort out the quintuplets then, because you’re on baby duty all on your own today with Nasta being sick.”

That wiped the smile from Max’s face and Draco chuckled as he moved to the kitchenette to make a cup of tea for himself, pulling down the emergency cereal as breakfast was out of the question this morning with Max having to brew a potion and make soup.

Max sorted out the babies one by one as Nasta watched him from under his blanket and then Harry came hurrying back out of the bedroom fully dried and dressed, but his hair was a tangled mess and he had a smear of toothpaste on his chin. Nasta chuckled as Draco immediately took charge of the situation, pulling out a handkerchief, wetting it with his tongue and rubbing the smear of toothpaste away.

Nasta fully expected Harry to shove Draco away and start a rant on how he wasn’t a child and that he didn’t need his face cleaned like a toddler, but Harry said nothing, he just stood still, tilted his face for Draco to get to the smear easier and he balanced himself by holding Draco’s elbows.

“Can I please at least brush your hair?” Draco nearly begged “It looks like a Snidget nest.”

Nasta thought that Draco was pressing his luck a bit too much with that request, he didn’t know why Harry hadn’t fought back over having his face cleaned, but he thought that maybe it was because he was lying on the settee ill. It was nice…no, amazing to see Harry let them take care of him, no matter that it was in such a small way, and he was upset to think that as soon as he was better that it would stop.

Harry sighed and he made such a face it was as if Draco was asking him to clean the toilet with his tongue.
“If you must, just be quick about it.” Harry replied and Draco looked so happy as he rushed to get a brush, cursing when he couldn’t find the brush that he wanted, acting as though Harry would change his mind at any moment and Nasta wasn’t sure if he was entirely wrong about that assumption as Harry did have a habit of changing his mind at a moment’s notice.

Nasta watched his submissive as he sat down to eat a bowl of cereal, drinking his honey tea and cradling Calix, who wasn’t wearing a nappy underneath his little nightdress.

Draco eventually found his brush and comb and he sat on the settee behind Harry who had moved to the floor with Calix, cooing and speaking to him as Draco carefully and gently brushed his hair.

“You’ve got nice hair.” Draco complimented. “I just wish that it wasn’t so naturally messy!”

Harry chuckled and gave his finger over to Calix, who clenched a tiny fist around it.

“It’s hard to believe they’re almost a month old already.” Harry murmured as his hair was combed, brushed and then styled by Draco. Harry swallowed back every instinct that wanted him to squirm away from the brush and push Draco away.

“They need to have their Dragon Pox injections soon, I’ll make the appointment.” Draco put in and Harry stiffened visibly.

“I’ve taken Braiden for two now, I can’t have five screaming babies on hand.”

“Four.” Nasta put in weakly. “Leolin can’t have his inoculations until he’s older, the vaccinations would kill him.”

“When does Braiden need his third injection? At nine months?” Blaise questioned.

Draco nodded as he curled Harry’s fringe carefully out of his eyes. Harry adjusted Calix until he was resting against his shoulder, trying to lull him to sleep.

“Only three months to go.” Max mock cheered.
“Oh no.” Harry breathed. “The four of them have their second injection when Braiden has his third!”

“Ah fuck.” Max groaned. “That didn’t time out very well.”

“I blame you.” Harry told the bigger man.

“Me? Why me? I didn’t tell you to have the quintuplets three months early.”

“You’re the reason that I was pregnant in the first place.”

“Oh sure, I’m positive that Nasta had nothing to do with it even though he gave you three kids and I only gave you two.”

“You started it, don’t you remember? On that rooftop in the bright sunshine, you jumped off the roof with me and took me on the grass.”

“I seem to remember Blaise taking you first actually.” Max replied.

“Doesn’t matter, you got me off that roof and onto the grass with every intention of fucking me.”

“Don’t make it sound so sordid, Harry; I hardly did it against your will.” Max whined as he flumped onto the floor and put his head in Harry’s lap.

“You know Calix isn’t wearing a nappy, if he has an accident now it’ll go all over your head.” Harry said sweetly.

Max shot out of his lap and Blaise laughed as Harry grinned. Nasta laughed but it turned into a cough and Draco snorted in amusement as he continued playing with Harry’s hair.

“That’s not funny.”
“It is.” Harry assured as he pulled away from Draco to kiss Max.

“Still gross.”

Harry rolled his eyes and let himself be pulled back by Draco.

“Aren’t you done yet? I better not find bows or anything in it.”

“I don’t know about bows, but I’m finding bits of twigs, string and what looks like shredded newspaper.”

“Oh ha ha, I can’t breathe for laughing.” Harry said sarcastically.

Draco chuckled and kissed him. “I like playing with your hair, you hardly ever let me do it, so I’m making the most of it.”

“If I promise to let you do it tomorrow too, will you stop now?” Harry pleaded.

“Of course.” Draco replied smoothly. “As long as you don’t forget our agreement.”

“You have three other witnesses, I won’t forget.”

Draco placed a kiss to the top of his head and put his brush aside, unclenching his legs from around Harry’s shoulders and letting him get up with Calix.

“Our little cutie is finally asleep, I’ll put him in his bassinet and wrap a nappy around him, but I’ll keep it open so that it’s not as tight. He doesn’t roll yet, so I doubt it’ll leak, you make sure you check on him every half hour though.” He directed at Max.

Max nodded his understanding and then kissed him and then Calix, giving his son’s back a soft rub as Harry carried him to the bedroom.

“I love you, Calix, but you have got to start letting us know when you’re wet, you can’t keep sleeping in your own urine, it’s not hygienic and it’s giving you sores. Wouldn’t it be better to just cry?” Harry pleaded to his sleeping son as he laid him down and slipped a nappy under him, leaving it open. He kissed Calix, moved over to kiss Regan, then Tegan, caught Farren’s cheek as his head went from one side to the other and he pecked Leolin’s little lips as he snuffled quietly.

“All five of them are sleeping.” Harry informed Max as he took Braiden for a cuddle and a kiss.

“Ah Da Ba!” Braiden told him as he played with Harry’s shirt collar, lowering his head to suck and gnaw at it.

“Oh Braiden, you can’t eat that, you’ll get an icky soap powder taste in your mouth.” Harry said with a laugh.

Nasta fell into a coughing fit, moaning as he rolled onto his side as he gagged. Max was by his side rubbing his back and Blaise was by his head, combing his hair away from his mouth.

Draco got him a glass of water and helped him sip at it as Harry held a curious Braiden, who was watching his Daddies closely.

“Ooo boo.” He said, looking back up at Harry.

“Yes Braiden, Daddy Nasta isn’t feeling well. We’re going to take care of him until he’s better.”

“Ah! Ah!” Braiden reached out for Nasta, but Harry held him easily.

“No Braiden, we don’t want you getting sick too, but don’t worry, Daddy Nasta will be fine very soon, he’s very strong.”
“Give him here, you three need to get off or you’ll be late.” Max said once Nasta had calmed down, taking Braiden from him and sitting him on his hip, an arm wrapped around him tightly and securely. “Don’t worry about Nas, he’ll be fine with me. I’ve got him some soup on, I’ll make sure he takes his potions and he won’t be moving, in fact I’ll make sure that he does little else other than sleep. You three just focus on your lessons.”

Draco nodded and shouldered his bag. Blaise picked his up and tucked three books into his one arm, holding them up against his body. Harry went to kiss Nasta goodbye and gave him a smile.

“We’ll see you at lunch, love. I hope you feel better soon.”

Nasta smiled weakly and settled onto his side, he was well overdue to get some more sleep. His body felt leaden and he could feel a fine tremble in his muscles and he just felt so weak. It wasn’t a feeling that he was much used to and he decided that he didn’t like it, even if it did get him fussed over and stopped all the arguments and disagreements. He still couldn’t believe that Harry had actually let Draco brush his hair and clean his face for him. Nasta fell asleep once again, leaving Max to finish the soup, keep six babies fed, clean and happy and to play with Braiden, who was getting more and more active and curious about his surroundings as he got older.

Nasta was fussed over even more when his Father came the next day to help with the children. It was made even worse when Max’s parents decided to come and visit and he felt like a five year old again as Max’s Mother Ashleigh made it her life’s mission to keep him covered at all times and continuously fed him soup and tea. It was one thing being fussed over by his mates, a completely different thing being fussed over by overprotective parents.

Harry dashed into the room only three minutes after the school bell rang to signal the end of lessons and he kicked off his shoes, dumped his bag and immediately came to kiss him, feeling his head for his temperature and his eyes went glossy with concern as he felt that he was still running a fever over twenty-four hours after he’d first gone down with it.

“I’m fine.” He stressed. “Don’t waste your free periods worrying over me, do your homework.”

“I’ve done it.” Harry replied. Nasta gave him a look. “No seriously I have. It’s Friday, I had double defence. I finished all my class work and my homework too well before the bell went, I even handed it in to Professor Drios, who was very surprised. I even had time to finish off my other homework too, so I’m free to look after you all weekend.”
“You’ve finished your Transfiguration essay and mock exam booklet, your Herbology questions and your History of Magic essay?” Nasta asked sceptically.

Harry nodded and he pulled all four pieces of homework out of his bag to show him.

“Good boy, Harry.” Nasta complimented sincerely and Harry grinned, kissing him.

Max came out of the bedroom with Farren and dumped him on his Mother as he saw Harry, pulling him immediately into a huge hug and kissing him passionately.

“Which baby needs what?” Harry asked as he saw the overwhelmed desperation in Max’s eyes.

“Aneirin has Calix, Myron has Regan and Richard has Tegan, Leolin needs a bottle, Braiden’s had his but needs a bath after he spit up on himself and Farren needs a nappy change.” Max directed the last one to his Mother, who sighed, but happily went to the changer and pulled out a fresh nappy.

“You take Braiden, I’ll get Leolin.” Harry delegated and he went through to their bedroom to pick up his youngest, grimacing at Braiden’s vomit covered jumper. He’d never get it clean and it was a favourite of his for Braiden.

Harry made up a tiny bottle, used the remaining water to make everyone tea, as that seems to have been what Max was doing if the counter of mugs was anything to go by, and he fed Leolin, who didn’t even open his eyes as he accepted the bottle teat into his mouth and suckled.

Harry was very pleased that Leolin finished his bottle and he proudly announced his youngest son’s feat to everyone as he burped Leolin gently and mindfully of his little wings.

Harry murmured to him and told him how proud he was of him, kissing his cheek and nuzzling his neck. When he pulled back to look at Leolin, he almost dropped him as he let out a little screech of shock.

Despite his illness and current weakness, it was Nasta’s arms who wrapped around him first, even if he did stumble, sway and hold onto him tighter than usual for support.

“It’s fine! I’m fine, I was just startled. Max, get Nasta back on the settee.” Harry ordered, though it was Aneirin who dragged his son back to the settee and tucked him up again, Harry followed and he grinned a secret grin.
“What’s the matter, Harry? What startled you?” Max asked concernedly as he petted Nasta’s hair.

Harry grinned wider as he kissed Leolin, before he turned him around to face the rest of the room; his tiny son was disgruntled as he frowned at the room, his pure, solid gold eyes peering at them as they all gasped, screeched and grinned at the completion of his Faerie heritage, proudly showing his Faerie eyes to the world.

Chapter End Notes

A/N: How many of you guessed during this chapter that it would end this way? How many of you figured out from Aneirin’s visit to the Faerie court and the hint of Nasta’s carrier gene in his eyes meant that Faeries eyes are all gold? None of you mentioned knowing beforehand, so I think this was a successful plot twist!

I hope you all enjoyed this chapter and hopefully now all the Avengers/Thor/Iron Man fics and crossovers are mostly out of my system, it won’t take as long to update chapter 61.

If you are not reading the Scaled Bits, you are missing out on vital information and character developments that you need to properly understand what is happening. I urge you to read it, it’s not just for shits and giggles, it’s part of this story and you are missing out on parts that you need to read in order to understand what is happening.

Chapter Sixty-One – Growing Up

Getting used to Leolin's gold eyes was something they all had to deal with as they were such an inhuman colour that it was a very strange thing to see.

But even stranger was that Leolin’s eyes had changed first, when his brothers’ and sister’s eyes were still varying shades of blue. Though that changed quickly as Nasta’s birthday approached. Tegan woke up one morning with her eyes suddenly a hazel-gold that reminded Harry of Sanex and of course when Regan woke up the next day, his eyes were the same hazel-gold. Nasta, who had recovered fully from his bout of illness after a horrific five days confined to nothing but bedrest and lying, covered from head to foot, on the settee, spent several hours cuddled up with them both, gazing into those eyes as he did everything from tickling and nuzzling them, to reading them a story about a lost unicorn foal and staring into their eyes as they suckled from their bottles in his arms.

The next quintuplet to surprise them with a change was Calix, whose eyes had been steadily getting darker and darker and darker, until one morning he opened his eyes and looked back at Draco through Myron’s jet black eyes. Of course Max had had to immediately floo call his parents and get them to come over, right this very minute. The poor trio had thought that something was wrong with one of the babies and Myron had clipped Max around the ear for alarming them as he had, before he had sat, holding his tiny grandson in his huge arms and cooing gently to the baby who cooed back, jet black eyes looking into jet black eyes. It also didn’t help the image of Calix being Myron’s clone that Calix’s hair was growing out a deep, rich chestnut brown, the hair that he shared with his Father and Grandfather.

The day before Nasta’s birthday Farren had woken up from his afternoon nap with bluish-green eyes and Harry laughed happily as he saw the hint of green that had taken over Farren’s eyes, thinking that perhaps Farren had gotten his eyes, their only child to have done so, but after another week and Farren’s eyes still didn’t go completely green, despite the fact that they changed colour depending on his mood, the lighting and what colour he was wearing. Sometimes they could be more bluey-green, or a more greenish-blue, but never fully blue or fully green and Harry had to concede that Farren’s eyes were blue-green in colour and they were going to stay that way.
Nasta had kept a slight cough for a few days after his illness had finally gone and thankfully none of them, especially not Leolin, had caught Nasta’s flu virus and by the time his thirty-eighth birthday came around, he was feeling much better and had stopped coughing and sneezing randomly throughout the day.

Nasta was woken up to breakfast in bed and several gifts from his smiling mates who all kissed him and wished him a happy birthday.

He loved every gift that he had received and he told his mates so as he was given several books on obscure languages by Max. A very cute, stuffed Welsh Dragon toy and a small, thin, handwritten booklet on Parseltongue by Harry, who promised to help him read and understand the very strange, very alien looking squiggles, that Harry had assured him were actual words and not just random doodles. Harry had told him a bit shyly that it had taken him nearly eight months to put together properly because writing in Parseltongue was apparently even harder than speaking in it.

Draco had given him a full set outfit made completely from dragonhide. Nasta couldn’t help but check the thickness of it, which made his mates snort in amusement and caused Draco to huff that he knew better than to buy him dragonhide anything that had actually killed the dragon, but the biggest surprise came when Nasta recognised the feel of the hide under his hands as a Welsh Green and Draco had admitted to having contacted the Dragon reserve that he worked on and he’d gotten his colleagues to use the hide from one of his favourite buck dragons, Celynwen, to make all of the items. Draco had paid an absolute fortune for the entire outfit to be made from the one dragon and not a mix of different breeds and different dragons, and Draco had hand-picked the dragon used and he went pink as he admitted to giving a bit extra for the outfit, which would go towards helping the reserve along with the profits from the sale. Nasta had crushed him in a hug and given him a kiss.

Blaise had gifted him with a tin of his own favourite coffee and Nasta had looked at him with an unimpressed scowl as Blaise grinned widely and urged him to open it. It was full of Nasta’s favourite, and expensive, imported green tea leaves.

“In the false hope that it’ll make you more used to and accepting of coffee.” Blaise explained when he was asked why it had been put in a coffee tin.

Nasta chuckled and pulled him forward by his neck to kiss his lips.

“Thank you, all of you, I haven’t had much reason to be happy in the past several years, but I have to say, waking up with the four of you, our six children around us, is the best birthday present I could have ever received.”

“Oh you’re going to make me tear up.” Harry sniffed. “You know I’m still girly sometimes after the birth.”

Nasta chuckled and rubbed his thumbs under Harry’s eyes gently.
“I love all of you.”

“Dada!” Braiden cried out from somewhere underneath them.

Max immediately got out of the bed and went down the stairs to the cot that they kept underneath their platform bed, far enough away so that the crying of the hungry quintuplets didn’t wake him up through the night, but close enough to them that they could reach him quickly.

Braiden was happily deposited onto Nasta’s lap, sitting upright and giggling happily now that he was around his most favourite, familiar people.

“Good morning, Braiden.” Harry greeted, pecking that dribbling mouth.

Braiden screeched and smacked his lips together in an imitation kiss and it stopped them all short.

“That’s new.” Draco said as he bent forward and kissed Braiden, who reacted quicker and kissed Draco back, which made him grin.

It was a game they played for the first five minutes of the day. They took it in turns to kiss Braiden and get a drool covered kiss back. By the end of the game, Braiden was also holding his arms out to accept them as they each bent to kiss him and he clenched his arms around them as they wrapped him in a hug. Then Farren woke up and their day properly started as it was a Tuesday and Draco, Blaise and Harry had to go to lessons still.

Max had made them all breakfast, though Nasta had already eaten his, so he was free to play and feed the babies, nuzzling little Leolin as he cradled him gently, watching as he finished all of his milk.

“Do you think it’s time to give him another quarter ounce of milk?” He asked. “He seems to be handling his bottles better, attempting to give him a bit more couldn’t hurt.”

Harry looked up from his breakfast and he smiled at the empty bottle.

“Try it on his next feed, it’s about time we increased his milk intake, he’s been finishing all of his bottles on every feed except for the night one.” Harry agreed, stroking a hand through Leolin’s darkening hair. It was set to go as black as Harry’s, Blaise’s, Nasta’s, Braiden’s, Regan’s and Tegan’s, they were all predominantly black haired. Max and Calix had chestnut brown hair and Farren had gotten a darker brown, but Draco was the only blond and he looked odd.
It was with an accompanying swoop through his stomach and lower abdomen that Harry came to the conclusion that if he were to give Draco children, then he might not be the only blond in the family anymore. Harry shook those thoughts away quickly, he couldn’t be pregnant again, he couldn’t have another baby so soon, he just couldn’t, no matter if Draco was the only blond in the family for a while yet.

“Are you alright, Mio Bello?” Blaise asked, looking at him concernedly.

“Yeah, I’m fine.” Harry answered, shoving away his thoughts and feelings and going back to his raspberry pancakes. “I’m just thinking too hard again.”

Harry smiled tightly and his mates saw through it immediately, but Harry’s pleading green eyes told them to leave it alone and they did…for now.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Harry was cornered by a vicious, wild, frothy-mouthed, redhead after his last lesson, or at least that’s how he saw Ginny as she pushed him right up tight to the wall and slipped him a tiny, palm sized box.

“It enlarges into a very special gift; I got everything that you wanted and then some with the left over money, I doubt you’ll mind though. Your lovers are going to be all over you, Harry. I left instructions for the first thing you should wear, it’ll drive them wild so don’t you dare chicken out! Nothing is hotter than a man who’ll do anything to get his lover’s heart pumping and I assure you, wearing these items will have their hearts beating so fast they’ll stop! I’m sure you can all use some stress relief, especially if Blaise’s public mood is anything to go by, Purebloods don’t usually show such emotion or frustration in public.” Ginny told him as she latched onto his arm and pulled him away from the wall.

Harry saw Draco as he was being dragged away and he gave a helpless, one armed shrug as he was pulled along like a puppet.

“Don’t look so much like I’m leading you towards your death.” Ginny chastised. “Hermione, Luna and I want some time with you as well you know, you haven’t spent any time with us and we haven’t even seen your babies since you arrived, how is that fair? We’re your friends aren’t we?”
“Of course you are, it’s just that so much is going on and I can’t imagine that Hermione’s not revising as well.”

“Oh she is, but she brings her material with her so that we can test her, I’ve been hit with a book twice and Luna had the book snatched off of her when she told Hermione that she was wrong and the answer was Nargles. Hermione almost threw a fit.”

Harry chuckled as he was dragged to the library and he groaned, though he felt slightly better that Seamus, Dean and Neville were also in the dusty room.

Harry indicated Ginny with his head and he grinned. “A bossy little red-headed sixth year.”

Ginny smacked him and Harry made an ‘oof’ sound as his body forcibly expelled air.

“Not so rough, Ginny. I had a tear in my body, right where you hit me mind, only a month ago. I’m tender still.”

“Was that from your Caesarean?” Hermione asked interestedly.

“Yeah, I’ve had two now.” Harry rolled his eyes as he massaged his stomach muscles, which had been playing up all day.

“So, are you up for playing Hufflepuff?” Ginny asked. “I can’t continue being Seeker and Chaser, you’re not pregnant now and you’re fit yes? So can we count on our golden boy to play in March?”

Harry startled. He had forgotten that he was still the Quidditch captain and Seeker.

“I’m not sure; I’ll have to run it past the others…”

“They’re not your parents, Harry; you can make your own choices.” Ginny snapped.
“I know I can, but with something that involves my health like this it’s just better to discuss it with them rather than tell them that I’m going to do it and stressing them out. They’ll more than likely let me play anyway. I’m not pregnant anymore and I could use the stress relief really, I’ve never wanted to cry so much in my life until McGonagall gave us that twenty-three inch essay and two exam booklets.”

“Me neither, I could have hit her with a table leg.” Seamus agreed and Hermione made a half startled, half strangled noise.

“It’s alright, Mione; he doesn’t mean it, though I have the almost untameable urge to introduce Professor Binns to Moaning Myrtle.”

Harry shared a laugh with the guys before Hermione got them all back onto their work with a glare. Harry quelled under that glare meekly and he hurried off to find some books for his History homework.

He was walking down the History section, which was quite a way away from his friends, when he came across someone that he would have rather never seen again in his life. Ron was sat at a small table, his own books out. Harry wondered if it was the absence of any friends to distract him that had Ron in the library, actually studying.

He turned to leave, hopefully unnoticed, but when Ron called out to him, he knew that he had been seen and he turned around, schooling his face carefully blank.

“What do you want?” Harry kept his voice as pleasant as he could given the circumstances of their recent interactions and he wondered if they were going to have a fight right here in the middle of the library.

“I…I wanted to…to apologise.” Ron stammered, not even looking at him.

Harry raised an eyebrow. “Who are you and what have you done with Ron Weasley?” He intoned blandly, Ron shot him a grin.

“I’ve had a lot of time to think. I blamed you for everything because…well because…”

“I was an easy target.” Harry filled in. He was always an easy target, the media were having a field day and people just loved to gossip about him because they had absolutely nothing else to talk about during their long and uneventful days.
Ron looked embarrassed. “Fred and George pointed out what I was doing and Charlie went bloody mental when he found out. They made me realise what I was doing and why and for what good it does, I am sorry.”

Harry sighed. “It’s been two years really since the last time that we spoke properly, Ron. When I was lying on the floor in the Ministry atrium, bleeding from the shattered glass that I was lying in, my nose pouring with blood from the possession I’d had to endure and the way you looked at me…you looked at me as if I was scum, Ron. I was fifteen, the same age as you were, and I had just killed Voldemort. I had done something so terrible as to kill another person, no matter who they were and I needed my friends around me, but the way you looked at me like I was dangerous, like I should be locked up, I just knew what would happen afterwards. Though I had hoped fervently that you’d wait until I was at least out of the hospital first, before you blew up at me right there in the hospital. I was practically catatonic in that hospital bed, pumped full of all sorts of potions and you were standing at the end of my bed yelling shit about me.”

“I was scared and angry.”

“And you think I wasn’t?” Harry snapped. “I had just killed someone, Ron! Killed someone right there in the Ministry of Magic in front of several Aurors and the Minister for Magic himself, I thought I was going to be thrown in Azkaban! I thought I was going to be locked away like a dirty secret, but instead I got a pat on the head and I was sent back to the Dursleys and if you’ve been keeping up with the papers then you’d know all about what happened there!”

“Mum said.” Ron mumbled. “Their trial’s coming up right?”

Harry blew out a deep breath and he nodded curtly. “The date keeps being changed, trust the Dursleys to have gotten the best lawyers that money could get them. They’re trying to stall, hoping that the case will fall through. I’ve been told now that they’re claiming the trial will disrupt their precious baby son’s schooling, so they want it put off until his school’s out for the summer so that it doesn’t affect his exams.”

“Will you have to go back to them if you, for some reason, lose? Because Mum says she has a spare room for you if you need it.”

Harry smiled at the mention of Mrs Weasley’s huge heart and Motherly nature, but he shook his head. “It’s unnecessary, I’ve got my own home now and I doubt your Mum has room for five grown men and six babies.”
“How... how are the kids?” Ron asked hesitantly.

“Fine. I could talk to you for hours about them, but something tells me that you’re not really interested and would find the conversation boring.” Harry replied stiffly. Ron blushed.

“I... is there any chance that we can go back to how we were?” Ron asked softly, not looking at him.

“No.” Harry said regretfully, shaking his head sadly. “No. It’s been too long and we’ve both changed. If I could overlook all the arguments, the fights, every hateful word that you spat at me when I was in that hospital bed, in so much pain and thinking that I was going to prison, that would be fine, but I could never overlook what you did to me knowing that I was pregnant. You almost lost me my first son, Ron and I can never forgive you for that. Braiden is the most important, precious person to me now, him and my five other beautiful children. That you almost took him from me with your actions...” Harry’s right hand clenched into a fist as he trailed off and he gritted his teeth, sucking in a breath between them to keep himself calm. “Knowing that you could have been the reason that I almost lost him, I could kill you for that alone, Ron and I want you to know that if you had killed him, I would have killed you. I would have hunted you down, even if it was the very last thing that I ever did, even if it took me years, I would have hunted you down and killed you for it, because even then, I loved him so very much and the pain of losing him would have been more than I could bear.”

Ron nodded his head and he sighed. “I won’t do anything like that ever again, not to anyone. When we were in the hospital wing and you started screaming like that, I... I was terrified. When you screamed at me to get Madam Pomfrey, I didn’t even think not to do it, I just did it. I wanted you to stop screaming like that, I’ve never heard you scream like that before.”

Harry made a small sound, almost a snort, but softer. “That was a gut wrenching pain; it was more fear than pain though. I knew something was wrong, I just knew that I was losing my baby, so I screamed out the pain and the fear.”

“There really is no chance then?” Ron asked. “I miss you and Hermione.”

“I’m sorry, Ron, perhaps if you talk with Hermione then she’ll start talking to you again, though I do recommend waiting until the exams are over, you know how stressed and uptight she gets, but as for me and you, I want nothing more to do with you. We can be civil, but I don’t want a friendship, I don’t want to talk to you, I’m sorry, Ron, but I can never forgive you for causing me that almost miscarriage, because of you, my Braiden might never have been born and if you saw him now, the little person that he has grown to be, the budding personality that he has, the happy, relaxed six month old he is, you wouldn’t be able to forgive yourself either.”
Harry walked away then and he went to collect his bag.

“Harry? What’s wrong?” Neville asked as Dean craned his neck to look where he had come from.

“Nothing, I think I’m just going to go back to my room’s now, but thanks for reminding me that I have friends and I promise to spend more time with you. You can even come around at the weekend to see the babies if you want, though you may be roped into a feeding or two.” Harry grinned.

“What did he say to you?” Ginny demanded, staring over his shoulder. Harry looked to see Ron with a haphazardly packed backpack, hunched over and leaving the library. “I swear if he said anything…”

“Ginny.” Harry cut in. “I’m a big boy, I can take care of myself. Ron and I just talked. He seems to have grown up a lot this year, we didn’t even fight or curse each other, we just talked to one another, alright?”

“He must have upset you.” Hermione said softly.

“No, he actually didn’t. I just really need to hold Braiden right now.”

“He threatened Braiden again?”

“No, but we dragged up a lot of bad feelings when we were talking, including the miscarriage that he almost caused in the hospital wing and I need my son.”

His friends nodded and Harry smiled. “I’ll catch up with you all later.” He promised as he took long strides out of the library and he started heading for the main staircase so that he could get back to his rooms quickly.

He was on the sixth floor when his skin tightened and the hair on the back of his neck stood up, he spun to the left just as a stunner went flying past his head. His wand was in his hand before he had turned to face his attacker, praying that it wasn’t Ron after their talk, but he was met with the enraged eyes of Theodore Nott instead, those white teeth were clenched so tightly together and bared at him like a feral dog.
“What is your problem?!” Harry spat.

“You are!” Nott hissed. “I’ve had my eyes on Blaise since our fourth year! I befriended him, seduced him, we experimented kissing one another, I watched him as he lost his virginity to that Ravenclaw, he watched me lose mine to that little Hufflepuff and throughout it all we were watching one another! Do you know how hard it is to be a gay Pureblood? Do you know how hard it is to find another gay Pureblood when you yourself are gay? My Father will not permit me to have anyone other than a Pureblood and you took the only other gay Pureblood for yourself!”

“Well that’s too bad.” Harry growled. “Blaise obviously didn’t like you as much as you liked him.”

Harry had to quickly pull up a shield charm as a stinging hex flew at his head.

“He does!” Theo screamed. “We were going to be together, Potter! I was going to impregnate him this summer, we had it planned!”

Harry snorted. “You really don’t know Blaise half as well as you think you do if you think that he’d carry your baby. Blaise is incapable of carrying.”

Theo blinked and breathed heavily like he had run from the Great Hall to the Astronomy Tower and back again.

“There’s a potion that allows a man to carry a baby if he wasn’t born with the sac to do so naturally.” Theo informed him.

“It only works in less than twenty percent of males, how do you know that Blaise would be one of those less than twenty percent? What makes you think that Blaise wants to be pregnant? What makes you think that Blaise would even want to carry your child?” Harry questioned spitefully.

“He would!” Theo roared. “We were getting up from kissing, we were going to move on to more sexual things than kissing and petting, we were going to have sex together as soon as I turned seventeen in November last year, but then you turned up on the scene that very same month and Blaise changed! He wouldn’t even look at anyone else, only you! No one will believe that you slipped him a love potion, that you still are giving him a love potion, not perfect Potter! But I know that you are! He changed overnight!” Nott spat. “People don’t fall in love overnight, Potter not unless they’re given a love potion! Blaise wanted to wait until he was out of school before he had children, but you fell pregnant immediately, disrupting his studies, ruining his marks! It’s no wonder that he’s in such a bad mood these days after you shoved five other babies onto him! Five babies that aren’t even his! No man wants another man’s baby shoved onto him!”

Harry swallowed as all of his fears were dragged up, but he trusted Blaise and he wouldn’t let this bastard rip them apart. He loved Blaise far too much.

“Blaise is happy.” Harry said calmly and clearly. “Blaise loves us, all of us, and you’re just angry because he won’t give you a second glance. Blaise is ours, Nott, he isn’t yours to lay claim to. He is the Father of my firstborn son, he was my first lover, my first love and I will not give him up without a fight, you will never take him from us. Never.”

“Do you know how many people’s virginity Blaise has broken over the years? Sixteen! He loved taking virgins, he loved breaking them in and then leaving them to grovel at his feet for any scrap of attention that he would give them afterwards.”

Harry swallowed and he urged himself to stay calm. Either Nott was lying or Blaise had changed a hell of a lot because Harry had never met this cruel and cold man that Nott was describing.

“Not so cocky now are you, Potter? Blaise and I are perfect for one another because I loved breaking in virgins too, though we both preferred male virgins. We would have been perfect for one another, until you came along!”

Harry sighed. “You only think that you’d be perfect together, you’ve convinced yourself of it, but Blaise would have never loved you, no matter what he did in the past. He was ready to settle down and he obviously got bored of playing games with other people. He wanted a future, a family and he’s got exactly that now with us. He would never have married you and he would never have settled down with you, especially not with you wanting to play games with virgins still.”

‘He’s a Dracken, Nott, you idiot.’ He thought to himself with an inward sigh. ‘He would never have settled down with a human, no matter what he said or what he did before he found his mates.’

“He would have!” Nott screamed, red sparks coming out of his wand tip in his anger and Harry clenched his own tighter, ready for any curse that came at him. “You’re just a filthy whore, Potter! You stole Blaise from me, you stole Draco from Astoria and you’re fucking two grown men.”

“My love life is none of your business. Blaise didn’t want you and Draco didn’t want Astoria.”
“Draco is not gay, he never has been! Blaise and I tried to get him to sleep with us in fifth year and he told us to get away from him before he broke our necks, you should have seen his face, he was disgusted with our suggestion!”

“It must have been the addition of you then, because Draco and Blaise love fucking each other now and they both love fucking me!” Harry hissed, his temper being awoken at long last, he felt that flood of heat that his temper brought, heating his blood and making his hand itch to curse the little stain in front of him.

Thinking on how reluctant that Draco was in the beginning to bottom to anyone, Harry could well imagine that Draco had threatened to break Nott and Blaise’s necks, especially if he knew their little game of breaking in virgins and then dumping them. He still remembered Draco’s face when he had bottomed for the first time to Nasta and had had his virginity taken. It was a memory that was forever imprinted upon his mind.

“You have them both drugged!” Nott screamed at him, more sparks flying from his wand tip. “Anyone who knows them can see it clearly!”

“What, you mean like you and Astoria? Please, Nott, I’ve been with Blaise for a year last October and with Draco a year last January. Don’t you think that Blaise’s Mother and Draco’s parents would have noticed anything amiss with their children over the likes of you?” Harry taunted.

Nott growled and even more sparks came out of his wand, Harry looked at it pointedly and interestedly.

“I wonder if you’re so much of a substandard wizard that you’ll lose control and blow up your wand. I’d love to tell Blaise that story, I’m sure he’d laugh so loud and he could use a laugh these days, because you want to know why he’s so stressed? It’s not because I’m forcing five children that aren’t his on him, it’s because we had to take four of those five babies for their Dragon Pox vaccination over the weekend and they screamed the hospital down, add in that our son Braiden is teething and cries in agony as he cuts a new tooth, it’s getting Blaise stressed because he doesn’t like seeing our children in pain, no matter the reason.”

Nott actually snarled and aimed a bone breaking curse at him that Harry deflected easily.

“Please, Nott. I’m the best in our year at Defence; do you really think that the likes of you can get one over on me? I destroyed Voldemort when I was fifteen.”
“You should have gone to prison for that! I heard you killed him using dark arts!”

Harry snorted. “People always talk when someone’s better than them; there were no dark arts involved or I would have gone to prison for breaking the law, I killed Voldemort in front of several Aurors and the Minister himself, if I had used the dark arts in front of them, I would have gone to Azkaban regardless of the fact that I had used them to kill a madman.”

Nott shot another spell at him, this one a crushing hex and it was aimed at his head. Harry deflected once again, readying his stance for the next spell as they were getting progressively more offensive and dangerous.

“Give it up, Nott, you won’t walk away from this and you will never have Blaise. Just stop because I don’t really want to hurt you, though I will if you carry on!”

“Please, Potter; stop acting as if you’re some amazing hit wizard! You’re just a seventeen year old student! I know how to block as well as you do!”

“All this because you think you love Blaise?”

“I do love him! Just stop drugging him and let him choose for himself! Him and Draco! You can keep your old men; just stop drugging them with love potion!”

“I’m not…”

“You are!” Someone screeched from behind him and Harry made an absolutely idiotic, fundamental mistake.

He spun fully around, giving his back to Nott, to assess the new threat and as he caught sight of Astoria Greengrass, her wand out and aimed at him, he tried to put his back to the wall, like he should have done in the first place, but he didn’t have time to do anything or to correct his mistake as a spell smashed into his back and sent him into a suit of armour, Harry lost consciousness as soon as his head cracked on the solid metal.
A/N: Don’t you just hate the both of those little snots? I haven’t given you a cliffhanger in ages, so I thought, why not? I hope you like it.

I feel the need to explain, as I’ve been asked by a lot of you, about the Faeries. Faerie is the species name, like Drackens, but Faeries use different names for their dominants and submissives, where Drackens just use the simple term dominant Dracken and submissive Dracken, Faeries call dominants Valkyries and submissives Fae. So if I describe someone as a Valkyrie, they’re a dominant Faerie, if I mention Fae, they’re submissive Faeries. Like Drackens, Faeries have female Valkyries and male Fae, but as with Drackens it’s an anomaly that’s very rare. So I hope that clears that up a bit more and yes, we will be seeing a lot more of the Faerie court in the future and don’t be fooled by their supposedly kind nature, they can all be vicious and cruel.

Chapter Sixty-Two – Backlash

- Draco had told them that Harry had been dragged off by his friends and that he was likely being forced to revise for his exams by Hermione, but as the time inched closer and closer to the curfew, they got more and more worried.

Shouldn’t Harry have been back by now? Wouldn’t he have come to tell them that he was staying away for longer than dinner? Were they being too over protective? Were they being stifling and unfair to Harry? Was he just in Gryffindor Tower for the first time this year catching up with his friends and had just lost track of time?

As Nasta tucked Leolin back into his bassinet after his ten O’clock feed and went back out to the living room, seeing that Draco and Blaise were not concentrating on their homework and Max was pacing…again. He let out a sigh.

“Allright, go and find him. I’ll stay here with the kids.” He relented. “Do not assume the worst, because I’m telling you now, if you go barging in on him and his friends, you’ll put us all at risk and embarrass the hell out of him. So be calm and collected, please and remain human at all times and that means no sniffing or licking either and use your brains.”

Draco threw his quill down and jumped up, marching to the door and he hardly waited for Blaise to catch up before he was out of the portrait hole. Nasta shook his head and sat down, trying to relax his jittering nerves.

“You’re worried.” Max stated, wanting to go with the younger two, but knowing that Nasta needed some support with the six babies. He couldn’t protect all six of them if someone threatened them.

Nasta sighed again. “I know. I don’t think Harry would have stayed away for this long, from just us maybe, but not from the kids. He’s still protective over Leolin and with Tegan’s recent fever and Braiden’s teething; I can’t see him staying out too long, but maybe I’m just being paranoid. Maybe Harry really does need this break and he’s just enjoying himself with his friends so much that he has lost track of the time.”

“Hopefully Blaise and Draco will find him safe and well and they can put our minds at ease. I don’t mind him spending a night in Gryffindor Tower with his friends if that’s what he wants, though sleeping with him missing from the bed is going to be hard, who will I cuddle with?” Max pouted.

Nasta cracked a smile and he chuckled; he pulled Max into a hug and kissed his mouth.

“You really are adorable, Max and I’m sure if Harry wants to stay with his friends for the night and you want to cuddle up to someone in bed, Blaise won’t object. Blaise is as big a cuddle monster as you are, though you’ll have to put up with me at your back, because I want to cuddle you too.”

Nasta growled, nipping at Max’s neck.

“Ooo, that growl has a hint of sex in it.” Max grinned as he moved his mouth into alignment with Nasta’s and kissed him hard.

“When was the last time we had sex?” Nasta questioned.

“I don’t remember.”

“Me either.” Nasta growled attacking Max’s mouth, shoving him backwards onto the settee.
“We’re going to have sex now?” Max asked, excitement lacing his voice and lighting up his eyes.

“I haven’t felt any distress from Harry, he’s likely fine and with his friends and until I hear differently, I’m going to try not to assume the worst and I’m going to try not to think about it so I can have my wicked way with you until Draco and Blaise track down our errant submissive and drag him back kicking and screaming.”

“I hope to be doing some screaming of my own.” Max grinned and Nasta growled, attacking that pliant mouth with vigour.

“Damn those little fuckers with their homework and never ending essays.” Max carried on, panting as Nasta moved his mouth from his lips to his neck, nibbling and biting. “I’ve been aching for this for the last month!”

“I think they have too, but Draco and Blaise have been so focused on their final exams and Harry’s been so stressed with his own homework and the kids, then there was that damn illness I got, we just haven’t had the time, not since Christmas.”

“Oh, Christmas was fun.” Max grinned.

Nasta chuckled and licked a wet line from Max’s exposed collarbone to his chin.

“I love you.” He murmured softly.

Max stopped breathing for a moment, before he gripped a fistful of Nasta’s hair and dragged him into a solid, passionate kiss.

“I love you too, now get on with the sex, those whiny brats of ours could be back at any moment with an angry Harry in tow and none of them will be happy with us having sex behind their heads when they’re trying to do homework.”

Nasta chuckled and he undid the buttons on Max’s shirt slowly as he moved his mouth slowly down from his collar to his chest. Max’s breathing hitched as Nasta reached his belly and still went further, undoing his jeans and pulling them from his legs once the last button came free of the fabric of his shirt.
Max clenched one hand into the soft fabric of the settee and the other into Nasta’s hair, tugging on it mindlessly as Nasta’s mouth kissed down the hard length of him, before moving back up to take him into his mouth and he sucked. Max made a strangled sound in his throat and twisted his head into the cushion it was propped up on, his hips arching into Nasta’s mouth as he sucked lightly, almost teasingly on him.

“Please!” He begged gruffly, tightening his hand in Nasta’s hair.

Nasta came off of him and smirked down at him.

“Do you want to cum in my mouth, or would you rather cum while I’m inside you?” He questioned, stroking Max lightly as he asked, making Max groan and roll from side to side on the settee, almost falling off.

“We need a bigger settee.” Max replied, writhing when Nasta’s hand squeezed tightly around him.

“In me, in me!” He answered desperately.

Nasta grinned and he went back to sucking him in his mouth; building him up before backing off and Max yanked on his hair and growled in frustration. Nasta squeezed him tightly in reprimand and Max’s eyes rolled into the back of his head, his toes curling in his socks.

Nasta chuckled and Max opened his eyes to see Nasta removing his shirt and popping the button on his own jeans. He swallowed as his eyes stared at Nasta’s body. Nasta had an amazing body and Max loved it, he loved touching it as he let his fingertips brush over the muscles in Nasta’s stomach, loved the taste of him as he sat up to lick and suck at the skin on Nasta’s chest, moving over his pectoral to his nipple. He sucked on that nipple, nibbled it gently with teeth, letting his tongue run over it before using the tip to run around it lightly, he loved hearing Nasta above him as he moaned softly as he sucked his nipple, he just loved Nasta.

“You’re going to have to make do with conjured lube.” Nasta growled. “I’m not leaving you alone for the time it takes to go and get a bottle from the bedroom; I’ll come back and find you touching yourself, won’t I?”

“Probably.” Max grinned unrepentantly.

Nasta hissed and then smirked as he touched his hand with the tip of his wand. It coated thickly with clear gel and Max moaned at the sight of that gel and Nasta’s smirk together, it never meant anything good, but it would be oh so pleasurable.
Nasta smoothed the excess over himself through his open jeans and the shoved down boxers before he coated his fingers and traced them around Max’s entrance, loving how Max’s entire body clenched, his head going back against the arm of the settee.

“Please, Nas, please!” Max groaned.

Nasta grinned as he gently eased a finger into Max and stroked his insides teasingly. He quickly inserted a second finger and set to stretching Max as his own cock gave a nasty throb of need.

He played with Max, ignoring the hand that was ripping out his hair and the nails in his shoulder, little droplets of blood welling up in the marks.

“No.” Nasta answered as he carefully pushed a third finger into Max, going back to teasing and playing with him, deliberately not seeking out Max’s prostate.

“Oh! Fuck, Nas, please, hurry up damn you!” Max growled.

Nasta chuckled and removed his fingers, before bending down to lick and suck at Max’s leg, moving down to where his fingers had just been, Max moaning and writhing, tugging and yanking on his hair.

Max pulled so hard on his hair that Nasta had no choice but to follow the hand or be scalped. Max pulled him up to his mouth and attacked it with teeth and tongue.

Nasta attacked Max’s mouth in retaliation, fighting and biting and pressing. He used the hand that wasn’t tugging in Max’s chestnut hair to guide himself into Max, pressing himself to Max just enough to keep himself in place, but not enough to breach him.

Max wrenched their mouths apart and glared at him with wild eyes.

“You had better not tease me anymore, Nasta! I swear I will fuck myself on you if you don’t hurry up!” Max growled.

Nasta snarled back and pushed himself inside of Max in one fluid motion, making the larger man throw his head back with a deep moan.
“Oh I love you.” Max groaned.

Nasta chuckled, burying his face into Max’s neck and nibbling the sweat beaded skin.

“You love my cock inside you.” Nasta whispered against that salty tasting skin.

“That too.” Max answered, arching his hips under him to get him moving.

Nasta let out a snort of amusement before he pulled his hips back and then surged forward, watching Max’s face and listening to his cries of pleasure, he kept moving himself minutely until finally Max screamed, the muscles in his body jumping and clenching, those large, powerful legs slipping around his hips, his head flew back exposing that gorgeous throat and two large, strong hands scrabbled for something, anything to grip hold of.

Nasta grinned as he kept his body at the exact same angle, not moving an inch as he pulled out and then rolled his hips back into Max, who writhed and thrashed under him. It was always an ego boost, an aphrodisiac, to have the powerful, large body of Max pinned under him, writhing and screaming in such a way because of him. It made his heart beat faster, it made his hips to move faster, caused his own head to fall back, exposing his throat as his orgasm built higher and higher from Max’s clenching muscles until finally, he fell over the edge of the cliff in a blinding white rush of heat and unimaginable pleasure until they were both screaming for one another, falling into a tangle of limbs onto the floor, the both of them laughing tiredly, but happily.

“Love you too, Cariad.” Nasta replied softly, trying to regulate his breathing.

Nasta rolled off of Max’s chest and onto his back, tucking himself back into his boxers and zipping up his jeans.

“The other three will kill us if they ever found out that we fucked on the settee without them.” He said to the ceiling.

Max snorted beside him. “Let them, I wouldn’t regret that if they stood over us with those cute, scowly faces that they wear so well.”
Nasta laughed before he sat up, searching for his shirt. He found it under the coffee table and tugged it on and threw Max his clothes, finding his wand and cleaning up the mess and removing the heavy scent of sex from the air.

Just as he finished a small cry came over the baby monitor and he sighed.

“Looks like we finished just in time for feeding.” He grinned to Max who hadn’t moved. The larger man groaned.

“I don’t think I can move.”

“You had better; I’m not doing all six of them by myself. My legs already feel like jelly without walking up those stairs ten times tonight.”

Max groaned again before sluggishly tugging on his clothes to help with the kids as Nasta set the kettle to boil before he left for their bedroom and the platform that held five bassinets of hungry babies.

---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------

Draco was rapidly losing his temper as he banged hell out of the portrait that Harry had told them covered the entrance to Gryffindor Tower. The fat lady in the pink silk dress was squawking at him and calling him a brute all the while.

“If they’re having a party in here I’ll skin Harry with my teeth!” Draco told Blaise.

“Just spank his naughty behind and drag him to bed to reaffirm just where his skin should be.” Blaise winked.

Draco snorted. “I won’t begrudge him time with his friends, but six hours is surely enough? I mean,
“what have they been doing for six hours?”

“Catching up most likely, Harry hasn’t exactly been a social butterfly these past few weeks.”

“Has he ever been a social butterfly? Only now instead of spending every minute of the day with Granger and Weasley, he’s spending it with us and Max and Nasta, our family.”

“Just let him explain before you tan his arse over your knee.” Blaise warned as the portrait was pushed open by a Prefect.

“Can I help you?” She sneered as she took in their Slytherin crested robes, not that she wouldn’t know them as Slytherins just by looking at them, even if they hadn’t been wearing Slytherin robes and ties, they were well known on sight through the school as Harry Potter’s Slytherin lovers, though Draco had made a name for himself beyond being Harry Potter’s lover, the same couldn’t be said for Blaise, who had been practically unknown until he suddenly became Harry Potter’s boyfriend over a year ago now.

“We’re looking for Harry.”

“He isn’t here.” She snapped as if she thought they were wasting her time or just wanted to see the inside of their common room.

Blaise sighed heavily. “If he isn’t here can you please go and get one of his friends?”

The girl left with a huff and they were once again looking at the scowling fat lady. Draco was about to start hammering on the portrait door once more as five more slow minutes passed, but just as Draco was grinding his teeth in impatience, the door opened and Ginny Weasley poked her sleepy head out.

“What’s the matter? Is Harry okay?” She asked as she stepped fully out, wrapping her dressing gown tighter around her pyjamas.

“We haven’t seen him; we were hoping that he’d be with you.”
“What? No, Harry left only an hour or two after being with us, he said he wanted to get back to Braiden. I haven’t seen him for about four hours.” Ginny said concernedly.

Draco and Blaise shared a look and then as one they rushed off back to their rooms to inform Max and Nasta. They needed to find Harry.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Nasta swore as he startled so badly that he dropped the bottle that he had just finished feeding to Regan. His arm had automatically tightened around the baby instead of loosening like it had around the bottle.

The panic on Draco and Blaise’s faces stopped him short of chastising them and instead he put Regan down in a handy bassinet and rushed to them.

“He wasn’t in Gryffindor Tower, Ginny said that she hadn’t seen him for four hours. He left the library to come back here, but he never made it here.” Blaise told him in a rush, his panic and fear evident.

“He didn’t give out a distress call, that means he’s either not in distress or he’s unconscious. Draco, go and see if he’s with Dumbledore, if he’s not, get the Headmaster in on the search. Max, go and see the groundskeeper Hagrid, Harry’s good friends with him, perhaps he met him in the corridor and decided to spend some time with him. Blaise, go to Madam Pomfrey and see if she’s seen him. You come back here after!” He ordered them. “I’ll stay with the kids, but I’ll floo the family and let them know that we need them.”

The three rushed off and Nasta combed a hand through his hair roughly.

“Damn it Harry, where are you love?” He asked to the room at large before grabbing the pot of floo powder and setting to call their extended family to let them know that Harry was potentially missing. He was never going to let Harry out of his sight again after this; his heart couldn’t take so much adrenaline.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X
Harry was forcibly woken up by a spell only to find himself cuffed to a bed. Normally this would have gotten his heart racing in excitement for his creative, naughty mates, but the pain in his skull reminded him that he hadn’t been with his mates when he had lost consciousness. He rather thought that the last thing on their minds right now would be sex when the last thing that he remembered was being thrown face first into a suit of armour.

That and Theodore Nott was sat straddling his hips, which brought back his memory much quicker and he growled lowly, dangerously in the back of his throat.

“Now now, Potter, no need to be nasty. Astoria just wanted to bash your little head repeatedly against the plinth that you head-butted and be done with it, but I have a little something else in mind for you, so I sent her away to bed before she was missed by her fluttery dorm mates.”

It was with a jolt that Harry recognised the bed that he was on. He’d been on it before. It was Blaise’s bed in the Slytherin boys’ dormitory. It still smelt like Blaise and his mate hadn’t slept in it for a year. What angered him the most however was that Nott’s scent was on this bed too…he’d been sleeping in Blaise’s bed, inhaling the scent of his mate, carrying on his ridiculous delusion that he and Blaise would be together, while Blaise was actually up in their private rooms with him.

“Get off of me!” Harry snarled lowly, glaring heatedly at Nott.

“Was that the glare you gave the Dark Lord as you killed him? It gave me goosebumps, but a few raised bumps on my arms won’t stop me. I will have Blaise.”

“He doesn’t want you!” Harry snapped. “He’s never wanted you, he doesn’t even like you!”

The pain that rocked through Harry’s jaw had his head flying to the side against the pillows and breathing deeply. He needed to be more careful. He couldn’t let his mouth run away, his hands were literally tied, so he couldn’t defend himself.

He turned his head back to face Nott and he sneered heavily, a facial expression that he had picked up from Draco over the past year. Nott just grinned down at him, trailing his fingers through the blood on his hand that had come from Harry’s split lip.

“You’re insane.” Harry snapped. “There is something very fucking wrong with you!”

“Yes, there is and I’m looking at him!”
Nott smacked him again and Harry growled, tugging on whatever held his hands above his head.

“Why am I here? Do you really think that Blaise won’t find me here?”

“This will be the last place in this entire school that they’ll look for you.” Nott smirked and Harry had a sinking feeling that he was right. “By then you’ll be damaged goods and not fit for anyone.”

“What do you mean?” Harry demanded, trying to sit up, but his restraints did not have a lot of give and he could barely get his shoulders up from the bed.

“Do you think that Blaise will want you after I’m through with you?” Nott asked him, a terrible glint in his eyes. “If I can’t have him, you sure as hell can’t!”

Nott hit him again and Harry blinked away the white dots floating in front of his eyes. He needed to focus, he needed to get out of this place and back to his mates.

When Nott started undoing his belt buckle, his mind clicked. Nott had called him damaged goods, had said that Blaise wouldn’t want him after he was done with him. He meant to rape him.

Harry thrashed and snarled at the fucker who wanted to do something so very heinous to him just because he had false notions of being with his mate.

“Get the fuck off me, Nott! Now!” He growled.

‘Our children, he wants to take our children from us!’ Passed through his mind and he remembered something so very important. If a submissive Dracken had sex, no matter if it was willingly or not, with a non-Dracken then they would become barren. His sac would destroy itself and he would not be able to have any more children for the rest of his life.

Draco’s face floated through his mind as he continued fighting Nott as best as he could with his arms restrained over his head. If this happened here and now, then he would never be able to give Draco biological children. Draco would never have a biological child if he chose to stay with him. Would Draco even stay with him if he couldn’t give him a child? Would he have a choice? An image of Lucius Malfoy looking down on him answered that thought. No. Draco would lose absolutely everything if he chose to stay with him after this, he couldn’t let it happen. He couldn’t.

He pulled his knee to his chest, wormed his foot between him and Nott and he kicked him as hard as he could, feeling very satisfied when Nott went tumbling over the end of the bed. Unfortunately Nott had had a handful of Harry’s waistline when he had kicked him and his button and a scrap of torn fabric had gone with Nott.

Harry scrambled up to the head of the bed and he controlled the panic building within him.
Panicking would not help him, he needed to have a clear head, he needed to think. He unsheathed his claws and sliced through whatever the hell was binding him to the bed before sheathing them again as Nott bore down on him again looking livid. No matter how much he wanted to kill this fucker, he couldn’t. Thinking of his family, of his children and his future children, he couldn’t put them at risk like that, he had enough of himself to know that. Harry Potter or no, defeater of Voldemort or no, if he came out as a Dracken now, then he would be executed as one and his family and his extended family would soon follow.

He surged to his knees, ignoring the tear in his trousers that was exposing his boxers underneath, and he met Nott head on, who was surprised to see him free of the bed. Harry couldn’t stop hitting him, knowing what this man had done, what he had wanted to do, what he was going to destroy, no matter if it had been unknowingly or not, all because of his delusion of being with Blaise, his mate, sent him into a raged fuelled attack on Nott.

The snores from the two beds with their curtains closed made him snarl too. Crabbe and Goyle had been in the room the entire time, there were no silencing wards or even privacy charms, and there was a full scale fight happening in the middle of it and they still didn’t wake up. Harry had no doubts that they were such heavy sleepers that he could have been screaming and crying for help and they wouldn’t have so much as stirred.

That made him angrier than he could have possibly imagined as he punched Nott, who went flying through the door and into the corridor beyond. Harry didn’t stop his assault as he followed, keeping his claws and fangs back by the last of his will power as he tried to beat a hole through Nott’s chest with his bare hands.

Nott managed to get to his feet and he shoved Harry, who just grabbed his wrists and swung Nott around and toppled him down the small flight of stairs and into the Slytherin common room, which was still quite full since the grandfather clock by the fire said it was near enough half eleven, though as most of them were sixth and seventh years they must have been studying.

“Theo? What in the name of Merlin happened to you?” Daphne Greengrass asked.

Harry growled and the Slytherins turned almost as one to look at him, but none of them did a thing to stop him when he jumped right back onto Nott and started hammering at him again, though two people ran out of the common room, likely in search of a Professor. It was just too bad that Snape wasn’t at the school currently, because he would have been the only Professor in this school with the physical strength to stop him as a Dracken himself.

“Potter! Stop it; you’re going to kill him!” Pansy Parkinson shouted. “Do you want his death on your hands? Think of your lovers! Your children! How can you think to put them through this for your own selfish gain?” She urged him and the red cloud covering his eyes and mind seeped off, leaving just anger and pain and an almost overwhelming fear. He wanted his mates, he needed them here with him, he wanted to feel their arms surrounding him, shielding him from everyone and everything.

He gave one last hit to Nott with the side of his clenched fist before allowing himself to fall off of the body that he had pinned to the floor and battered.
“What did he do? How did you even get in here?” Pansy asked him as he breathed heavily on the cool stone floor.

“I don’t know how I got here. I woke up here.”

“What did he do that was so terrible, Harry?” Daphne asked, though from the way her eyes went to his ruined trousers to his red, raw and bleeding wrists, she had a very good guess.

Harry didn’t know if it was the use of his first name, the hint that she already knew or the soft tone used, but he answered her honestly.

“He wanted to rape me to get back at Blaise for choosing me over him.”

Pansy’s face hardened and her small fists clenched. She breathed in deeply before gesturing him to move away from Nott, who was breathing wetly on the floor, his eyes unfocused, but blinking up at the stone ceiling.

The young woman conjured a blanket and wrapped it around his shoulders just as the door burst open and the vast belly of a huffing Professor Slughorn appeared, followed by the rest of him as he cleared the door. His prominent gooseberry coloured eyes widened impossibly further as they took in Theodore Nott rolling onto his side on the floor and Harry a little way away at Pansy’s feet, blood covered and wrapped in a blanket.

“What on earth is going on here?” He asked in horror.

“He attacked me, Professor!” Nott breathed out, spitting a mouthful of blood onto the floor. “He should be expelled! Put in prison!”

Harry snorted and said nothing; Dumbledore was the only one with the power to expel a student, or McGonagall if the Headmaster was unavailable as the Deputy Headmistress. Once they arrived then he’d tell them exactly what happened, he’d even take Veritaserum if he had to, to prove that his story true and then they’d see who’d be expelled.

“Miss Bulstrode, if you’d be kind enough to go and get our Headmaster. Miss Greengrass, perhaps our resident medi-witch also needs to be present, I don’t think either of these boys are up to the long trek to the hospital wing just yet.”
The two girls left and Harry just wanted the familiar feeling of four pairs of very strong arms around him, but how did he give out a distress call in a silent, cavernous room made of stone without everyone questioning his species? He’d just have to wait for Dumbledore to arrive, who could then send for his mates, who must be going mad with worry right about now with it coming up to midnight.

Dumbledore arrived back to their rooms with Draco, and Nasta felt his heart plummet. Blaise was next to arrive only a minute later and he shook his head. Harry had not been in the hospital wing.

Nasta paced and when his family, Max’s family, Blaise’s Mother and Draco’s parents arrived, all cramming themselves into their small rooms. He informed them that Harry had gone missing.

“Weren’t you watching him?” Myron asked furiously.

Nasta gave him an unimpressed glare. “You might watch your mates every single hour of every single day, but I instil a little something called trust in all of my mates. Harry went with his friends after his last lesson and subsequently went missing between the library and making his way back here.”

“He didn’t let out a distress call?” His Father asked.

“No. I heard nothing and felt nothing and I still haven’t since we found him missing.”

“He’s unconscious then.” Marianna nodded, holding Blaise still as he tried to pace.

“Where is Max?” Richard asked.

“He’s checking out the last place that Harry may have gone to instead of here after leaving his friends.”

“I have all the paintings on the lookout for Harry.” Dumbledore informed them. “If one of them has seen anything, we will know.”
A small cry had Nasta sighing, feeling a small amount of irritation at his youngest child for disturbing the search for Harry, but he went to collect Leolin regardless, ordering someone, anyone, to boil the kettle for him.

He scooped Leolin up gently and made sure that the blanket was wrapped around him to stave off the night chill from his tiny body. He carried him out of the bedroom, only for his Father to take him straight off of him and go to the kitchenette to feed him.

“You have enough on your mind.” His Dad told him. “Focus on Harry for now, the kids will be fine with us.”

Max burst back into the room and it was clear that he was about to lose control, but Nasta didn’t have to do a thing as Myron was just there in front of his son, embracing him, soothing him and calming him down so that he didn’t accidentally unfurl his wings, show his scales or pop out his fangs and claws.

“I take it Harry wasn’t with Hagrid?” Nasta asked, the bottom falling out of his stomach, his Dracken telling him to search every single inch of this place until they found him, but he knew that rushing around like a maniac would hinder the search more than help. They needed to think clearly.

“It’s not that. I was coming back up from Hagrid’s, only I took the long way back as it was easier than heading to the back staircase and I smelt Harry’s blood on the sixth floor. It’s been cleaned up, but I could smell it clearly. It’s all over a suit of armour like he was pushed into it or something.”

It got slightly more difficult to control his Dracken once he had heard that Harry had been hurt, that he was bleeding, but through gritted teeth and his nails digging into his palm he managed to keep control, unfortunately Draco lost his and it was the first time that he had ever shown his parents his wings, fangs, claws and glittery scales that were reflecting the candle light of the room.

Nasta reasoned that Blaise didn’t lose control because Marianna was calming him and Max was now breathing deeply in his Father’s embrace, taking in his scent. Nasta shared a look with him, a look that said that whoever had hurt Harry was going to die.

“Headmaster Dumbledore!”

Nasta startled as the landscape portrait in their living room was suddenly occupied by the painting of a young girl holding a Crup.
“You’re needed down in the dungeons, Sir. Professor Slughorn has called for you and for Madam Pomfrey.”

“Then I believe that Horace has found Harry.” Dumbledore said tiredly.

“Draco, regain control of yourself or you’ll be left here.” Nasta ordered, pulling his subordinate’s head into his neck to breathe in his scent. One of the only things that was able to calm an enraged Dracken down was the scent of their top dominant, or a parent, but as both of Draco’s parents were human, that left just him.

Thankfully it didn’t take them long to get Draco calm and back to looking human with the threat of being left in their rooms before they were following Dumbledore down to the dungeons, they passed the suit of armour that smelt like Harry’s blood and it took all of their control and support of one another to remain calm. It was a very heavy, thick scent. Harry had bled a lot.

When they arrived to the Slytherin common room, being directed happily and a bit frantically by the painted people popping up in random portraits, it was to yelling and shouting and Nasta couldn’t help but think that maybe this was just a fight between two Slytherins that had escalated until the need of a medi-witch had arisen, that Harry wasn’t here at all. That thought flew out of the window as soon as he cleared the fake wall that hid the entrance to the Slytherin common rooms. He saw Harry first, his eyes were drawn to him and it was with a flash of almost uncontrollable anger that he took in his little submissive, blood covered and wrapped in a blanket, staring blankly at the wall as a girl with short black hair and a hard face screamed at a bloodied boy on the floor, who was being seen to by Madam Pomfrey.

Nasta felt an almost liquid sense of relief flow through his body as he saw Harry, alive and upright, though the amount of blood on Harry concerned him and the blank look almost stopped his heart as he rushed to Harry, sinking down in front of him and holding him tight.

Harry jumped as arms slid around him, before he recognised those arms, the scent surrounding him and he clenched his arms around Nasta as tightly as he could, taking comfort from the three other pairs of arms that surrounded him.

“What has happened here?” Dumbledore’s voice cut through the screaming.

“He’s a monster, Headmaster!” The girl shrieked and Nasta’s head shot up, wondering if she meant Harry, wondering if she had seen anything that linked Harry to his Dracken side, but she was pointing to the boy on the floor and not to Harry.

“That little freak attacked me!” The boy screeched, spraying out a mouthful of blood.
Harry flinched in their arms and Nasta’s hand jumped to his hair, petting and combing through it, soothing him as he was called that word.

“You deserved it and more!” The girl shouted back. “What you were going to do to him, Nott was utterly foul and unforgivable!”

“Nott?” Blaise snapped his head around to face the bloodied boy, the first time he had taken his eyes off of Harry since they had arrived. “Theo?”

“Look what that thing did to me, Blaise! How can you even like him?” Theo spat.

“What did you do?!” Blaise hissed at Theo, but Harry’s head turned to Blaise, as if he had entertained the thought, for even a moment, that Blaise had been talking to him.

“I didn’t do anything! He attacked me, Blaise! Please listen to me!”

“You are saying that Mister Potter broke into the Slytherin common room just to attack you, am I right, Mister Nott?” Dumbledore asked softly.

“Yes Sir, he was like a wild animal! Look at the state of me, Sir!”

“Mister Potter, how did you come to be in the Slytherin common room at this time of night?”

“I don’t know, Sir. I woke up here after Nott knocked me out on a suit of armour.”

“Where was this suit of armour located, Mister Potter?”

“On the sixth floor, near Professor Slughorn’s office.” Harry croaked, his hands clenching in Nasta’s shirt.

Dumbledore nodded as if Harry had revealed some secret knowledge or had confirmed something the Professor had known that no one else did, but as Max smoothed his ruffled hair from his forehead and kissed the skin there, Harry let it go. He felt weak and shaken, he just wanted some sleep and to never let his dominants go ever again.

“Stay calm.” Harry breathed softly. “Our secret is safe, they don’t know, none of them do, just stay calm.”

“We are calm, Harry.” Draco answered burying his nose into the back of his neck. “Though I think Blaise is going to kill Nott. Good riddance I say.”

“You won’t be in a minute.” Harry said ominously as he poked his head out from the tangle of arms, shooting an arm out to tug at Blaise’s shirt.

Blaise stood back a few paces until he was pressed against Max’s back, his hand in Harry’s, squeezing comfortably.

“So Mister Nott, we have gathered that you attacked Mister Potter on the sixth floor and managed to get him down to the Slytherin common room, where upon Mister Potter woke from his unconsciousness and attacked you. Is that what happened?”

“There are too many missing hours.” Draco whispered.

“Did anyone see Mister Nott bringing in Mister Potter? Or in the case of Mister Nott’s version, see Mister Potter entering the Slytherin common room of his own volition?”

“No Sir.” Pansy answered. “At about twenty-five minutes to midnight, Nott appeared to fall down the stairs from the boys dormitories, he was covered in blood. Harry followed a moment or two later, also covered in blood and he started fighting with Nott.”

“So they came from the boys dormitories? Is there anyone who can account for what happened in the boys dormitories other than Mister Nott and Mister Potter?”

When no one stepped forward Dumbledore sighed. “Very well. I will ask Mister Nott and Mister Potter to accompany me to the hospital wing to give statements. Miss Parkinson, if you would be willing to also come as you seem to have the most inclination as to what has truly happened.”
“Professor, I also saw everything from the moment that Harry and Theo entered the common room from the boys’ dorms.” Daphne spoke up.

“Yes, of course, if you wouldn’t mind also accompanying us, Miss Greengrass?”

Harry was carried securely by Nasta as Nott was levitated by Madam Pomfrey, much to his embarrassment if his undignified screeches were any indication. Harry wrapped arms and legs securely around Nasta and rested his head on his shoulder. He felt safe and calm, but he couldn’t get warm, even with the blanket still wrapped around him. He shivered and Nasta held him tighter. It still wasn’t enough.

They made it to the hospital wing and Nasta sat on a bed, Harry in his lap still being cuddled. Draco climbed up next to them, wrapping a hand around Harry’s and bringing it to his mouth and Blaise sat on the end of the bed by Nasta’s feet glaring at Theo, who was in the opposite bed.

“How long ago did you put it there, Mister Potter?”

“It’s in my trunk in our bedroom. No. Actually I think it’s in Blaise’s trunk, I might have put it there when I went looking for one of his jumpers to wear when I was cold.” Harry said as he glared at Nott. Blaise’s hand found his thigh and curled around it lovingly and protectively. Nott saw it and he bared blood stained teeth at him.

“How long ago did you put it there, Mister Potter?”

“About two weeks ago, Sir. I had it out when I went digging through my trunk for my photo album.”

“You mean when you turfed out your entire trunk onto our bedroom floor.” Draco grumbled good naturedly, nuzzling his cheek against Harry’s torn and sticky knuckles and the back of his hand, kissing it lightly, not caring who was watching or about the blood his lips found there.

“So you do not have your cloak on you?” Dumbledore reiterated.
“No Sir.”

“He’s obviously lying!” Nott spat as he had his cuts tended to by a silent Madam Pomfrey.

“Accio Harry Potter’s cloak.” Dumbledore said clearly, aiming his wand at him. He cancelled the spell when no cloak was immediately forthcoming to prevent any cloak of his from flying through the school.

“We have established that Mister Potter does not have his invisibility cloak with him at this present time. Now, Mister Potter, it is your turn to shed some light on this situation.”

“Well I got dragged off by Ginny to the library after the last lesson of the day. I spent an hour or two with my friends and then I headed back to our rooms. I was on the sixth floor when a spell went past my head and I turned to see Nott.”

“He shot a spell at you first?” Dumbledore interrupted.

“I didn’t even know he was there until he shot the spell at me, Sir.”

“Very well, carry on, Mister Potter.”

“He started saying a lot of things about Blaise, about how he loved him and that they were supposed to be together, that they had planned to have sex as soon as he was seventeen in November and that I had ruined it by taking Blaise from him on Halloween night.”

“That’s not…!”

“Let Mister Potter finish please, Mister Zabini.” Dumbledore chided.

“He started going on about how I had drugged both Blaise and Draco with love potion to make them be with me because they wouldn’t like me any other way. He said that Blaise really loved him and that Draco wasn’t gay and was supposed to be with Astoria Greengrass.”
Daphne made a small noise and Dumbledore held a hand up to prevent her interruption.

“I…I can’t remember much of what happened next, but I told Nott that I hadn’t drugged either of them and then someone shouted from behind me. I…I was damned stupid. Moody would kill me, but I spun fully around instead of half way around and putting my back to the wall. Astoria was behind me with her wand out and I tried to correct myself and put my back to the wall but a spell hit me full in the back and sent me into a suit of armour.” Harry reached up and touched the large split in his forehead which was also the size of a duck egg. “And I don’t remember anything after that, Sir. The next thing I knew I was waking up in the Slytherin boy’s dormitory.”

“So Astoria Greengrass has a part in this also? Horace, if you would be so kind as to fetch the younger Miss Greengrass, I would like to speak to her about her part in this. Mister Potter, what happened in the boys’ dormitory?”

“I was restrained to a bed. Blaise’s old bed.” Harry said softly, knowing that this next part would test the control of all of his mates, Blaise especially as his slender hand tightened around his own. “He said something about me not being nasty because Astoria had wanted to bash my head against the plinth the armour was on to get rid of me outright, but he said that he had something else in mind for me. He had sent Astoria to bed before she was missed by her housemates.”

Harry breathed out shakily and he took in a deep breath of Nasta’s scent, calming himself enough to carry on.

“What happened next, Mister Potter?”

“I…I’m not sure, we were talking, mostly about Blaise, but he hit me a few times for saying that Blaise didn’t want him and then again when I called him insane and once more when he said that if he couldn’t have Blaise then I couldn’t either. I asked why I was in the Slytherin dormitory of all places and he said that it was the last place anyone would look for me. He said…” Harry licked his lips and breathed deeply and calmly. “He said that after he was through with me then I’d be damaged goods, that Blaise wouldn’t look twice at me, that if he couldn’t have Blaise then neither could I, that he was going to make it so that Blaise wouldn’t want me anymore.”

“Did Mister Nott explain what he meant by that?” Dumbledore asked softly, a deadly fire lighting up his blue eyes.

“He meant to rape me.” Harry answered into the soft silence of the hospital wing and all at once he was holding onto Draco tightly as the blond snarled and Max lunged to secure Blaise from ripping Nott’s head off.

“How dare you!” Blaise howled. “How dare you think that you can do that to one of the people I love the most. That I would just abandon Harry and my children just because you had sunk so low as to violate him! You don’t know me, Theo! You only saw what you wanted to see, that’s why I started distancing myself from you! We were best friends, you were one of my only friends, but this is inexcusable! How dare you do this to Harry in my name, in my name!” Blaise screamed as he tried to fight off Max to get to the man in the bed.

“Blaise please.” Harry said softly, tugging on the hand that he had clenched his fingers around.

Blaise turned to him and took his face into his hands and kissed him.

“Mi dispiace, Prezioso. Mi dispiace.” Blaise cried.

“You have nothing to be sorry for, Blaise.” Nasta said calmly. “It wasn’t your fault. It’s his.”

Blaise smiled and brushed away the wetness in his eyes. “Ti amo.”

“Mister Potter, did Mister Nott achieve what he had set out to do?”

The tension had been thick before, but it escalated now as they remembered the dead eyes that Harry had when they had first found him, the knowledge weighing heavy that if Nott had managed to do what he had wanted to do, then Harry was barren, that they would never have any more children because of one man.

“No.” Harry answered quickly to dispel the rising tension. “No, don’t think bad of me, Professor, but if he had, he wouldn’t be alive, but he tried very hard to do it.”

Harry opened the blanket and leant back in Nasta’s arms to show his ruined trousers, the button ripped off, the zip damaged and the fabric torn.
“I tore the restraints that he had put me in until they broke, it felt like a scarf or some such material, but it was cold, so I think it might have been conjured, but once I knew what he was trying to do, I had to get him off of me, I couldn’t let him use me like that, so I got my leg under and between our bodies, because he had thankfully not restrained my legs, and I kicked him off. I tugged my arms free and I just couldn’t stop myself from hitting him, Professor, not after what he had done, not after what he had said and what he had planned to do to me in Blaise’s bed.”

“I think I have heard enough.” Dumbledore said gravelly. “I will call the school governors and your parents Mister Nott and we shall see about having you expelled from this school for this incident.”

“What?! He’s lying!” Nott cried out.

“No, I do not believe that he is. His account makes much more sense and it ties in with Miss Parkinson’s and Miss Greengrass’ account of what they saw after you had left the boys’ dormitory, though if you would like we can use Veritaserum to corroborate your story.”

Theo remained silent and Harry snuggled into Nasta more, sucking in a breath when his large fingers came too close to the bump and split on his forehead.

“I’m sorry, love.” Nasta murmured, kissing just off from his injury.

“S’okay, I just want to be held.” Harry answered.

Draco pressed up against his back, the expensive cologne that he always wore was a familiar and comforting scent as he cuddled in tightly to Nasta, thinking and overthinking everything. If Nott had succeeded or if he had raped him while he had been unconscious, then he would be barren, his sac irreparably destroyed. He would never have had any more children and yes, while he grumbled and bitched about having more, when faced with never having another child ever again, he found that the idea of more children was appealing, that he did want more, just not right now. But if he had to choose between being pregnant right now or being barren, he knew which one he would choose and it would be the one he would carry on choosing as well, the thought of being unable to give his mates children made him feel physically sick and it sent a cold sensation of ice slicing down his spine.

He didn’t realise that he was crying until Max wiped the tears from his cheeks.

“Don’t cry, love. It’s going to be fine. We love you and of course we’ll support you.”
“I ache.” Harry admitted shyly and quietly unused to asking for help to deal with pain, but he couldn’t ignore the agony that he was in any longer.

He was smothered, but much gentler than usual, no mate touching more than fingertips against him barring Nasta, whose lap he was still sat in.

Madam Pomfrey was there then with a potion that he recognised from Max’s potion’s case. A strong pain reliever. He refused the second potion offered to him, one that he recognised as a dreamless sleeping potion. He was getting much better at recognising potions on sight thanks to Max, which from Madam Pomfrey and his mates’ point of view, wasn’t a good thing currently.

“Harry, perhaps it’ll be better if you just sleep for now.” Madam Pomfrey encouraged softly.

Harry shook his head. “I want to see the kids first.”

“Then you’ll take it?” Madam Pomfrey questioned and she smiled thinly when he nodded tiredly.

Max accepted the potion vial that was offered to him and he slipped it into his pocket, trusting that it was unbreakable, as most potion vials were nowadays, or at least should be.

“You took a bad bump to the head, you have a concussion, Harry.”

“I was asleep for about three or four hours, if I had concussion then the damage would already be done wouldn’t it?”

Madam Pomfrey checked him for any more serious damage. “You had a bad headache yes?”

Harry nodded. “Not any more though, thanks to the pain reliever.”

“You may experience some after effects, Harry including nausea, headaches, an intolerance to light or noise, drowsiness and you may become easily upset, confused or withdrawn. You may also have problems with concentration; all of these are normal and should last for a few days. Usually I would keep you here, but given your circumstances and that you have dependent children, I will let you leave, but you are excused from lessons for the rest of the week. I expect him to be rested and taken care of.” The matron directed at his mates, who all nodded seriously.

Harry sighed, he was relieved to be excused from lessons, not so happy that he had to be kept on bed rest, but he supposed that he could deal with it, seeing as it was only Max and Nasta that he had to deal with for most of the day and not all four of his overprotective mates.

“Your bumps and bruises will heal, I’m sure Maximilius has some bruise salve for you so I won’t give you any more and your cuts will heal fine, you have no broken bones so I’m happy to let you go with the promise that you will take that dreamless sleep potion soon, you need to rest.”

Harry was excused then, he wasn’t happy to see a sleepy Astoria standing with Professor Slughorn on the way out, her eyes widened when she saw him and she looked fearfully from Professor Slughorn, to Professor Dumbledore and finally to her older sister. She swallowed heavily as Draco glared hatefully at her as they passed, Max keeping the blond and Blaise well away from the bed containing Nott and they gave a wide berth to Astoria as they left too.

“Brace yourself for when we get back, Harry, we were worried, so we called in the family to help look after the kids while we looked for you.” Max told him.

“I assumed as much, I know you’d never leave our babies alone, no matter if I was being slaughtered in the next room.”

His mates flinched and Harry mentally hit himself for the insensitive remark. He blamed it on the concussion and the trauma of the day he had had.

“Let’s not think about that just now.” Max soothed softly, brushing Harry’s hair through his fingers gently.

“Can I have some tea before I take that potion?” He asked softly, asking purely because he didn’t want to make it himself. He didn’t want to do much of anything himself at the moment.

“Of course.” Nasta said as they reached the seventh floor and headed towards their rooms.

“Also, can we please not talk about this tonight? I just want some tea, I want to hold my babies and then I want to sleep.”
Nasta sighed. “Whatever you want, Harry, but we will be talking about this.”

“I know.”

They reached their rooms quickly after that and no amount of bracing would have prepared him for the onslaught of concern from the family members, the backlash of him being missing for seven or eight hours now.

“Alright!” Nasta called out loudly. “Calm down, just sit and breathe while we get Harry settled. Do you want me to tell them, Harry or would you rather do it yourself?”

“Please.” Harry said softly as he clung to Nasta and insecurely tried to hide himself in his shirt, something that he hadn’t felt the need to do for a year now as he tucked his chin into his collar and averted his eyes away from everyone else, trying to bury himself in Nasta.

Nasta shifted him to the rug in front of the fire and held a hand out to Draco, who took the blanket from the back of one of the settees and threw it to him, though as Nasta leant backwards to cover him with the blanket, Myron, ever the observant one, noticed his ruined trousers.

“You were violated.” His voice was soft, his eyes compassionate, but the terrible anger that trembled through his body was palpable. A large fist clenched tightly, the dry, calloused skin creaking softly with how fierce Myron clenched his hands together. “By who?” He demanded furiously.

“Harry wasn’t violated.” Nasta said calmly as the room was set to go berserk.

“So you’re not barren?” Ashleigh asked tearfully.

Harry shook his head softly as he lay back against the rug, Blaise handed him Braiden and Harry smiled, Braiden always made him smile, especially when his six month old pouted his mouth and clenched his sticky fingers in his hair for a kiss.

“My trousers?” Myron asked unrelentingly.
“Harry wasn’t violated, but the person who attacked him tried very hard to do it.”

“Is this person still alive?” Aneirin asked, a glint that Harry had never seen before in his eyes.

“He wishes he was dead.” Harry answered. “I did a number on him.”

“He did a number on you too.” Marianna said as she looked pointedly to the bruising bump on his head with the bloody gash through it, his bruised cheek and his split lip.

Harry raised a hand to touch the large bloody bump and grimaced. “I hit my head on a suit of armour.”

“Do you have a concussion?” Lucius asked.

Harry nodded.

“He’s on bed rest for the rest of the week.” Max said as he handed Harry a cup of tea and handed out more cups to everyone else.

“You need to be more careful, Harry; even if it’s not consensual you’ll still end up barren, why didn’t you give out a distress call?” Richard asked.

“I know that, it’s all I could think about. Every thought going through my mind was that if he had managed to do what he wanted to, that I would never have another baby again.” Harry replied, his mind going back to the struggle on that bed. “There was never an opportunity to give out the call, I was knocked unconscious, then I was fighting and then I was in a near silent, stone room, the call would have echoed and I didn’t want my family in danger because I couldn’t wait a little longer for comfort.”

“We’ve got you now, love.” Nasta assured him, laying a large hand against his cheek.

Harry sat up and gulped his tea, Braiden being held in his lap, little fist in mouth.
“You had a lucky escape.” Ashleigh told him.

“I know!” Harry snapped. “I don’t want to be reminded of how close I came to being raped every five minutes, I know what happened, I know what was at stake, but I remained calm and I kept my head. I got myself out of my restraints and out of the situation by kicking seven shades of shit out of him. It didn’t happen and I’ll never let it happen, not while I’m still alive and able to fight.”

“You were restrained? To what?” Myron asked him unforgivingly, not letting him drop the subject, no matter how upset it was making him.

Harry sighed and steeled himself to talking about what happened when all he wanted was to go to sleep.

“A bed. He tied me to a bed in the Slytherin dormitory.”

“He was a Slytherin then?”

Harry rubbed his face and tugged on his hair.

“It was Theodore Nott.” He said. “He thinks that he’s in love with Blaise and that Blaise would love him back if I was out of the picture.”

“That boy is still pestering you?” Marianna asked Blaise, who sighed heavily and bit his lip in frustration.

“Yes, I never thought it would go this far or get this serious, it’s my fault. I never took Theo seriously, he said that he’d kill the Ravenclaw that I went to the Yule Ball with in fourth year and he never. He said he’d kill that fling I had in the summer when I was sixteen, he didn’t. When he started on Harry, I didn’t think anything of it.”

“None of us thought Nott of all people would go after Harry.” Draco put in. “He’s all talk.”

“Well apparently he’s not.” Myron snarked.
“He was mostly talk.” Harry said with a small smile. “He went on long monologues worthy of Azkaban’s finest. He only hit me three times in the six hours that he had me at his mercy. Not including the spell that sent me into that suit of armour.”

“Was it a stunner?” Max asked concernedly.

“You know, I’m not sure.” Harry frowned. “Astoria was behind me, so I turned around and I was more focused on her wand and getting my back to a wall, but I don’t think it hurt, hitting my head on that armour hurt.”

“Where did the spell hit you?” Nasta asked.

“Middle of my back I think, maybe a bit higher.” Harry answered.

Nasta nudged him over and Harry huffed as he rolled over, laying Braiden on his back between his elbows and nuzzling into his clothing, kissing his cheeks and pecking his little mouth, ignoring the drool that covered it and his chin.

Nasta slipped his shirt up and hissed, Harry felt a firm mouth press against his skin and a tongue flicked over it, Harry just focused on Braiden who yawned and his gorgeous indigo eyes partly closed. It was then that Harry realised the time, that his baby boy was awake at nearing two in the morning.

“Why is Braiden still awake?” He asked, trying not to get angry.

“He wouldn’t drop off, honey. He missed his Mother.” Narcissa told him.

Harry sighed and dropped his head so he was looking into Braiden’s eyes.

“You are a stubborn little boy.” Harry said gently, kissing Braiden’s soft cheek. “Are you done molesting my back?” He demanded of Nasta, whose tongue was still licking away.

“It was either a melting spell or a fire spell, those robes that Draco encouraged you to buy might have saved you a lot of pain and suffering. You have a hell of a burn on your back, Cariad.”
“Thank you, Draco.” Harry said softly as he rolled onto one elbow to look over his shoulder to try and see where Nasta was licking, he could only just see the edge of a red raw mark. “Is it bad, bad? Do I need to see Madam Pomfrey again?”

Max touched the spot gently and due to the pain reliever in his system Harry didn’t even flinch.

“I stock burn salves because of Nasta’s idiotic and incredibly dangerous job in which he has the annoying habit of being burnt often, it might be too strong a dosage for this, as your robes did take most of the damage, but I’ll apply it anyway and keep an eye on it, one of us should probably give you a mouthful of blood to be sure, but you’ll be fine.”

“I don’t mind donating blood.” Blaise told him, sitting down next to Braiden, petting his thick black hair lovingly.

Harry smiled and pulled Blaise’s arm to his mouth as he let his fangs come out and he bit Blaise gently before sucking as softly as he could so that he didn’t hurt Blaise unnecessarily.

Licking the four holes in Blaise’s arm lovingly, Harry smiled at him in thanks as he let himself relax and he dropped his head onto Braiden’s belly.

“Let’s get the both of you to bed.” Nasta’s tone left no room for argument, not that Harry was arguing, he was getting very tired. Two in the morning was far too late to be going to bed, it was a good thing that he wasn’t in lessons tomorrow, not so good for Draco and Blaise, who did have lessons in the morning.

Once assured that he was well and was being taken care of, their family left them to get ready for bed as it was getting later and later, though after he had put Braiden into his cot and kissed Farren, Calix, Regan, Tegan and Leolin, who were all sleeping, Harry was feeling very uncomfortable and insecure so he happily allowed Nasta to feed him the purple coloured, dreamless sleep potion, undress him, to redress him in his pyjamas and to tuck him into bed when Nasta offered to do so. He was feeling just a tad clingy to his mates and he hoped that they didn’t notice that he was snuggling into them tighter than normal, or if they did, that they wouldn’t say anything, because he didn’t want to stop the feeling of comfort and security that they provided as he wrapped himself tighter around Draco, Blaise’s hand was on his hip, Nasta was wrapped around his back and Harry made sure to trap Max’s hand between his body and Draco’s.

He wanted to be clingy for a little while, just to make him feel better, he didn’t want to be questioned on it, his feelings or his motives, he just wanted to be held as he slept, preferably in silence, though as Blaise had the very adorable habit of snuffling in his sleep, complete silence was out, but as long as none of them were talking or questioning him, he could live with soft breathing, muffled heartbeats, baby murmurs and Blaise’s snuffling. In fact, the familiar noises of the night helped ease him into sleep and as Max nudged Nasta with his hips, who then pressed tighter against him, he smiled and his body went near boneless as the potion took over and he fell into a deep, healing sleep.

Chapter End Notes

A/N: Happy Halloween! Have fun and be safe tonight lovelies, I’ll happily be staying inside and eating all the sweets I bought for Trick or Treaters because Wales is going to be drenched with a very heavy downfall that’ll last all night.

On the topic of America and Hurricane Sandy, I hope you’re all safe and will remain so until it passes, I know many areas are suffering with floods, blackouts and power outages, my thoughts are with you all and I hope this hurricane passes quickly.

I’m done until the next chapter! I’m thinking a Scaled Bits next and then I’ll try and get the third chapter of Lycanthrope Factory out, but I never know what I want to write, so we may have chapter 63 before anything else, it all depends.

I hope you have enjoyed this chapter, I have a lot more up my sleeve to come and I hope you enjoy those and this just as much as you have the previous 61 chapters,

Chapter Sixty-Three – Mine

Harry ate his toast happily enough, Draco and Blaise had been gone before he had even stirred from the bed, he had slept for so long, but he felt so refreshed and amazed as he cuddled a month old Calix in one arm, his other still feeding himself his toast.

“He looks so sweet with black eyes.” Harry announced, making Nasta look up from his paperwork and Max to stop his game with Braiden and look over with a grin.

“Of course he does, he’s my son. My little dainty son, think he’ll be a fruit like his old men?”

Harry rolled his eyes. “Stop being so disparaging! He’s our baby.”

“I’m not being disparaging; I think it’s great he’ll be taking after the both of us by becoming a fruit.”

“Is this what you and Nasta do all day when I’m in lessons? Call our children fruits?”

“Don’t bring me into this, I haven’t opened my mouth.” Nasta said, quill not stopping its incessant scratching against the parchment. “And no Max does not sit here all day and call our children fruits, this is the first time I’ve heard it.”

“Well Calix is a dainty little thing.”

“So was Caesar.” Harry countered.

Max hummed. “I can’t counter that, he was. You should have seen him, he was so short and so slim, soft and sweet, I still say he should have been a fruit.”

“Will you stop saying that word?!” Harry snapped.

Max laughed. “I was thinking that Calix would be a sweet fruit, something that also has a kick and a hardness to it, maybe an apple?”

“Did you give him alcohol?” Harry asked Nasta. “No, stupid question, Max have you drank any alcohol?”

“What? No.”

“He just likes spending time with you, Harry.” Nasta said. “So he’s being more…childish than usual.”

Max grinned before Braiden caught his attention by patting him.

“What do you want, cutie?” He cooed. “I’d give you my hair but I’ve had it cut so there’s not enough for you to grab, even with your teeny weeny fingers.”

“Right, I’m done for the morning.” Nasta said, standing with a groan, stretching his back. “How are you feeling, Harry?”

“Fine. My head aches and my back aches, but other than that…” Harry trailed off as Nasta gave him a look. He blew out a breath. “I want to kill him.” He admitted bitterly. “Is that what you wanted to hear? I want to kill another person because that bastard doesn’t deserve to live after what he did to me, not after what he wanted to do to me! Expulsion isn’t enough.”

Nasta pulled him into a hug, trapped his face between his hands and kissed him hard.

“There’s no shame in what you’re feeling. That man wanted to do terrible things to you; of course you want him dead or at the very least hurting. It was unknowing of the full consequences yes, but that man threatened our family, both current and future. That man could have ripped away your ability to bear our children, it’s normal that you want him dead.”

Nasta kissed him hard once more before looking him right in the eyes. “Yes it is.”

“Nasta’s right, Harry, people wish those who have hurt them dead all the time and it’s a psychological response to what happened to you, to what you went through. It’s a coping mechanism if you will, and it’s completely normal. I want to take my claws to his throat, I won’t throw away my entire family to do it over the likes of him, but I want to. I wish I could tear into him like a wild animal, take my teeth and claws to him and reduce him to a pile of meat and blood, but I won’t, that doesn’t make me a bad person, Harry, it just makes me normal, or as normal as Drackens get. I was very surprised that Draco and Blaise kept it together though.”

“You don’t give them enough credit.” Nasta told him. “Blaise and Draco have come a long way in a year; heavy responsibility has matured them faster and changed them for the better. This family, our family, has shaped them into the men that they are today and they’ve taken on all of that and they are still standing, they could have left, they could have abandoned all of us and our children, but they haven’t.”

“I always said that a man who could abandon his family is not a real man.”

“Growing up without a family, it was difficult.” Harry said softly. “I wanted to be included, I wanted to be praised and loved and I wasn’t, no matter what I did I was always wrong. I was always the bad one, always the one in the wrong. I couldn’t imagine our family being broken up now, I couldn’t stand it.”

“They’ll get what’s coming to them.” Max said through gritted teeth. “I was talking to my Dad yesterday, their application to move their trial back five months for the sake of their son’s exams was denied on the grounds that it would put undue stress upon the victim, which means you, and affect your own exams, so the courts rejected their application. They’re now squabbling over when to actually set the date. Dad said that he’s never known a case like it, though it gives him time to come and speak to you some more, are you alright with that, Harry?”

Harry nodded glumly. He knew it would have been brought back up again some when because Richard and his team needed more information from him, memories and accounts of incidents that only he would be able to provide. Harry just wanted this over and done with already. This long, seemingly endless waiting was making him jittery. Throw him head first into something and he was fine, but make him wait and wait for something that he knew was going to happen eventually and he got nervous.

“It’ll be alright, love.” Max assured. “You know my Dad; it’ll be easier to talk to him about it rather than some random stranger. He’ll be kind and gentle, it’ll be fine. They have enough physical evidence to convict them, but if you were to give accounts of what happened, things that didn’t have physical evidence, they’ll be incriminated further.”

“I know.” Harry replied softly, pulling Calix in to hold him tighter, smiling widely when those black eyes focused on his mouth, even though he didn’t feel like smiling.

“Let’s not talk of this right now.” Nasta coaxed softly.

“What else is there to talk about? My life’s a disaster!”

Nasta sighed and stood, coming around the other side of the kitchenette table and pulling him into a hug.

“Your life isn’t a disaster, Harry, you’ve just had a lot of bad things happen to you that weren’t your fault and personally, the way that you handled Nott was spectacular. Beating the absolute shit out of him like you did showed amazing strength and control. Do you think that Blaise or Draco could have done that in your place? Do you think they would have been able to hold back their Drackens and not just outright killed him?”

“What if he had tied my legs down as well?” Harry voiced aloud the fear that had been gnawing at him since yesterday. “What if I hadn’t been able to get my leg between our bodies and kick him off?”

“Then you would have used your claws to get your hands free and then you would have pummelled the shit out of him with your hands.” Max told him surely.

“It would have been too dangerous, what if he would have seen my claws?”

“He was more focused on getting your belt off wasn’t he? He wouldn’t have seen, besides who would he tell? Dumbledore, Madam Pomfrey? They both knew that you were a Dracken, I think they were surprised that Nott wasn’t a pile of meat as well.”

Harry smiled a bit, reassured that even if Nott had restrained his legs, that he would have been able to get himself out of the situation.

“Esmeralda is here.” Harry announced, directing Max to his owl in the window.

“Ah, there’s my little girl.” Max cooed, Nasta and Harry shared a grin. “It’s from Caesar.”

Max read it and then he couldn’t stop grinning, he let out a laugh and swaggered over to the table, sitting on Harry’s other side.

“You Harry, are a miracle worker.”

“I am?”

“Caesar has delightedly reported that Amelle had two dry heats and then a fertile heat since you spoke to her, Harry, which has left her nine days pregnant.”

Harry grinned widely as he took the letter from Max to read for himself.

“I have to write to her.” Harry declared. “I have to remind her that she needs to have a baby girl.”

Harry rushed off, though not so fast as to jar baby Calix, to get parchment, ink and a quill so that he could write to Amelle, he’d leave it to Max to write his baby brother back.
Harry was on a high for the next week as he corresponded back and forth with Amelle, who was so excited for her forming baby and she promised him that she would do everything in her power to have a baby girl for him, she confided that a baby boy at this point was not entirely welcome after her first son had been killed so ruthlessly. She was getting better with her new counsellor, but it would be a while before she could get over her son’s murder, so she was willing herself to have another daughter.

His sons and daughter were coming along so well that it was almost unreal as the quintuplets came up to six weeks old. Four of them had had their Dragon Pox vaccinations, but little Leolin hadn’t had any vaccinations because of his immature immune system. His Leolin who was still so tiny, who had put on barely two pounds since his birth, who was still having the same amount of milk as a week old baby. Harry tried to feed him more, but the bottle ended up being wasted as Leolin did not finish his feeds and refused to suckle any more after his little belly was full.

Nasta tried to sooth him and tell him that this was normal for Faerie babies, that because Leolin’s rate of growth was so significantly smaller and slower than his siblings, that it would take him half a year to get to the point that his siblings were at currently.

Farren on the other hand was drinking four ounces of milk every four hours, almost the same as Braiden, who was four months older, and who was now taking in six and a quarter ounces of milk and now weighing fourteen pounds ten ounces and measured at twenty-five centimetres. Blaise was very proud of how Braiden was coming on, but Max was the gloater, telling Blaise that his son would be bigger in the next coming months than Braiden, who was four months older, but Blaise just smiled and said that Braiden was perfect how he was and that he wouldn’t change him. Draco didn’t like it though, and he pointed out that Calix was, after Leolin, the smallest baby that they had at five pounds and he was Max’s too, Max had laughed it off and said that Calix took after Harry’s side of the family, to which Harry had scowled heavily.

“What has Max said now?” Nasta sighed as he put his quill down and looked at the pout on Harry’s lips as Harry joined him in the kitchenette.

“Nothing.” Harry huffed.

“If he doesn’t control his excitement a bit more then I’m going to kill him and stuff his bulky body into the wardrobe.” Nasta complained.

This had the good fortune to remind Harry of his first heat with Draco and Blaise and the, then unknown, dominant stuffed into the wardrobe. Max had started his mated life with him in a wardrobe and now it seemed that his life would end in one, which of course Harry found hilarious as he doubled over, actually crying with laughter.
“What?” Nasta asked curiously before understanding dawned on him. “You’re thinking about Max in the wardrobe aren’t you?”

Harry nodded, still grinning.

“I forgot that Draco and Blaise had forced him into the wardrobe when you came off of your heat.”

Harry came and slipped onto Nasta’s lap, this was his last week out of lessons, next Monday he was back to business as usual as Nott’s expulsion had been made final and Harry’s aches and pains had gone and he was feeling better about everything that had happened. Though hearing declarations of physical harm and threats of death and then ingestion from his mates also helped and it kept him laughing.

They were angry, livid really, they each wanted to cause pain to Nott, but Harry wouldn’t let them, he said that it was over and done with. He reminded them that he was healing nicely and he just wanted to forget about it, but every now and then one of his mates would think too heavily and let out a feral growl, or drag him onto their laps or into their arms to sniff and lick at him. Harry conquered this by not giving them enough time to stop and think about anything for too long, with six babies this was easier than breathing, all he had to do was tell them to go hand wash some dirty sleepsuits and bibs or change or feed a baby.

The quintuplets were now getting more and more active and Harry almost screamed when he was doing some catch up homework given to him by Draco, courtesy of Professor McGonagall, and Regan suddenly started cooing and gurgling to himself.

“What! Nasta!” He shouted and his two dominants were just there, Nasta was half dressed with one foot half in a sock, the other foot was bare, and Max was bollock naked, soaking wet and soapy from his shower, which admittedly side tracked Harry for a moment.

“What?! What is it?!” Nasta asked him urgently.

“I…oh…oh! Regan was speaking!” He told them excitedly, going back to his little son, though he had to shift himself carefully because of a little problem that seeing Max’s naked state had caused him.

Both men sagged as the adrenaline eased out of their systems. Nasta placed a large hand over Regan’s head and combed thick fingers through the baby fine black hair. Regan gurgled at the affection shown to him.
“Who’s such a clever boy.” Max cooed back, using the tip of one finger to caress a soft cheek as the rest of him was soapy.

“He’s mine, of course he’s clever.” Nasta gave the other man a light shove, avoiding the soapy areas.

“They’re all clever.” Harry settled, giving a light glare to the other two.

“Yes, of course they are, but Regan is talking first.” Nasta refused to relent.

Harry shook his head and he let it go, they were proud of their children and he was too.

“They’re growing up so fast.” He complained.

“Don’t complain about that, Harry, we want them to grow up.” Max insisted.

“I know, but still. I’m always so busy, I feel like I’m missing out on so much, if Nott hadn’t of attacked me, then I would have been in lessons today, I would have missed Regan’s cooing. How much else am I going to miss because of school?”

“Not that much, I promise you, Cariad.” Nasta assured him. “You have a maximum of three and a half months left in lessons, then you have your exams and then you’re free to do as you please. Braiden will be a little over nine months old and our quintuplets will be five months old, you are not going to miss much.”

“But they’re growing so fast now.” Harry said softly.

“I know, but it’s going to be fine. We have the rest of our lives to enjoy them, love. They are not going to blame us because we have such a busy schedule now.” Max assured him.

“I… I love all of our children, but sometimes I do wish that the quintuplets had waited a year or more to be born.” Harry admitted, not looking at his mates as he said it, feeling absolutely disgusted with himself for even thinking it, let alone admitting it out loud.
A gentle touch to his chin had a devastated Harry looking up to Max, who kissed his cheek softly.

“We love you, Harry, we love all of our children, but it’s okay to think like that. I think all of us have thought of that more than once. They came at a very inconvenient time for us, there’s nothing wrong with saying or thinking that we wished they had come later, we all wish that they had come later, but they didn’t and there’s nothing that we can do about that but suck it up and carry on, we’re in a bad position right now, but it won’t last forever.”

Harry smiled and he threw himself into Max’s arms, who hugged him back tightly.

“I love you.” Harry said forcefully.

Max chuckled. “Of course you do, everyone loves me, I’m just such a lovable guy.”

Nasta bopped him on the head and bent to peck Harry’s cheek. “We all love you, Harry and we know that you love us back fully. Max is right, this situation won’t last forever, very soon you’ll have so much free time on your hands that you’ll be begging the children to wake up for something to do.”

Harry chuckled. “Oh I don’t think I’d go that far, after all, there are a lot more…pleasurable things that we can do with our free time when the babies are asleep.” Harry winked cheekily as he moved away from his two dominants, ignoring his now damp and soapy clothes.

Max gave a feral grin. “Now he’s speaking a language that I like. Suddenly three months seems like a very, very long time.”

Harry grinned back and winked once more. “Wait until you see what I’ve got.”

That wiped away Max’s grin. “It’s not another skirt is it? Dear Merlin, don’t let it be another skirt.”

Harry laughed softly and he went to the bedroom, he went straight to his backpack and opened it, pulling out the shrunken box that he had only just remembered was still inside. He really owed Ginny a million.

He tapped the box with his wand and it expanded to a size that made his eyes as wide as saucers. He had thought that it would be a box similar in size and contents as his last one, but this box was bigger, deeper and when he opened it, it did not contain similar products to his last box, oh no. He was very sure that his last box had not contained a corset, nor high heeled shoes, or a skimpy little dress made of what looked like rubber.

Harry felt his face heat up until he was sure that it was redder than his Gryffindor Quidditch robes. He gingerly shifted the top products so that he could see underneath and he had to laugh when he found a skirt similar to his last one, only it was dark blue, it had a matching Velcro collar and high heels. Harry’s blush increased.

“Oh Ginny, you naughty girl.” He said to himself.

Harry closed the box and shrunk it again; he put it in his trunk and closed it once again, hiding the box from his view and his mates’ knowledge. He’d treat them all soon, but not just yet, though he couldn’t help but give Max a teasing wink and a lingering once over as his biggest mate padded naked back into the bathroom to finish his shower.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Valentine’s Day was a Saturday. It saw Harry waking up to be treated to breakfast in bed by Max, who was really treating them all. Harry smiled as he realised that Max had woken up an hour early just to prepare breakfast in bed for all of them.

The next surprise was from Draco, who handed all four of them a wrapped gift in red heart paper and a red bow. It turned out to be matching necklaces made of rare Welsh gold to honour Nasta and the dragon on the pendant had wings very, very similar to their own, each encrusted with tiny little precious gems to match their own scales.

“It’s gorgeous, Draco!” Harry exclaimed as he fingered his necklace that had been placed around his throat, lightly touching the tiny cut sapphires, diamonds, onyx, amethysts and the golden topaz.

“Where’s yours? You had better have one!”

“I do, it’s in the bedside table.” Draco assured, to which Harry dived on the bedside cabinet and forced Draco’s matching necklace on him.

Blaise’s gift was a very large, very expensive customised chocolate selection box. It contained all of Harry’s favourites, but not just his favourites, but all of their favourites, even bite sized squares of Nasta’s favoured ninety percent cocoa with a touch of mint.

“Oh wow!” Harry exclaimed as he dived right onto a chunk of fudge chocolate before Nasta could stop him.

Nasta didn’t even try to stop him, so Harry tried a bite of something else.

“Eat what you want, Harry, just don’t ruin your lunch.”

“Who are you and what have you done with my Nasta?” Harry threatened, narrowing his eyes on the man that couldn’t possibly be his Nasta.

Nasta rolled his eyes. “It’s Valentine’s Day, you can indulge yourself today of all days, but don’t ruin any of your main meals with chocolate.”

“Deal!” Harry exclaimed as he dove onto the huge selection box and tried a small square of white chocolate dotted with tiny black dots. “Is this real vanilla?” He questioned.

Blaise nodded, watching him eat his gift happily.

“My gift comes later tonight.” Nasta informed him, to which Harry gave him a chocolaty kiss.

“Thank you!”

“Where’s your gift to us as your loving dominants?” Max pouted.

Harry indicated the five bassinets next to their bed. “My gift to you is our adorable children.” Harry said seriously, before bursting out laughing at their faces. “Oh I couldn’t keep a straight face for that!” He giggled. “My gift also comes later.”

“If it’s not you wrapped in a bow, naked on this bed, I don’t want it.” Max pouted.

Harry laughed, but the other four didn’t, they looked at him consideringly.
“I think the bow would detract from the naked beauty of him.” Draco said seriously.

“I think it depends on where the bow was located.” Blaise put in.

“I think if it were covering his gorgeous cock it would detract from the beauty of the scene.” Nasta replied thoughtfully. “If it were around his waist however, I think it could add to the enticement of the moment.”

Harry huffed, and he didn’t need to find an excuse to leave the bed and his stupid mates because a small cry came from below them. Braiden was awake.

Harry jumped right over the banister and four gasps let him know that he had startled his mates, who appeared over the banister as he picked up Braiden, who squealed at seeing him.

“How’s my beautiful boy?” He cooed.

“Don’t do that, Harry!” Blaise breathed, his heart racing.

“Do what?” Harry replied innocently.

“Jump off the platform.” Draco elaborated.

“You lot do it, if you can do it, then I can too. I’m not a girl, I’m not a child, I’m not pregnant. I’m fine, I like doing it.”

“It reminds me of you playing Quidditch.” Max said.

“I’ll be doing that again soon, Gryffindor versus Hufflepuff in March. I can’t wait! I’m so excited!” Harry jabbered, not letting his mates get a word in to deny his place on the Gryffindor Quidditch team. “Isn’t that right, Braiden? Mummy gets to do something that he loves so very much and you get to come and watch! I’m sure your Daddies will bring you and your brothers and sister with them, after all I’ll be very angry if they leave you here alone and I’ll be upset if they don’t come and watch me.”
“When have you got training?” Nasta asked him softly.

Harry looked up at him to see the fear in Nasta’s eyes, but also the resignation, he knew that Harry was going to play no matter what, but he was frightened of what would happen during the match.

“Ginny said they were every Monday, Wednesday and Saturday. I’m training her to be my replacement though, so I only really need to go to one session a week, I’ve been let off this week though due to my ‘injuries’ so I’m excluded from the session tonight.”

“Who’s the new Chaser?” Blaise asked as he came down the stairs.

Harry narrowed his eyes. “Are you asking as my mate and lover, or as the Slytherin Captain and Chaser?”

Blaise chuckled as he came to hug him and Braiden. “As your mate and lover.”

“Dean Thomas, he’s really good, we had him for a sub last year, but with Katie graduating last year, he’s become a main player. We have several substitutes this year though, younger years that show promise, so Ginny and I are running a training programme for them. Hopefully with it in place Gryffindor will be winning well after I’ve graduated.”

“That’s dirty and underhanded.” Draco huffed.

“Is that why you dropped out as Slytherin’s Seeker?” Harry teased.

“No, I dropped out because I would much rather focus on my studies.”

“Are you sure it’s not because Urquhart made Blaise the Captain over you?”

“No.” Draco said sullenly. “It was always my plan to give it up in my seventh year.”

Harry grinned and kissed Draco. “I know, I was just teasing, love. Forgive me?”
“Maybe.” Draco replied snootily.

Harry chuckled and kissed him again before heading into the living room with Braiden.

“Time for breakfast, little man.” Harry told the sixth month old baby, who was now able to sit up on his own and hold the weight of his own head.

Which of course meant that Harry had sent Nasta out to buy a highchair. Harry sat Braiden in it and made sure that he was strapped in securely before going to the cold cupboard and taking out the sealed bowl of baby porridge that Max had made the day before.

A quick heating spell, a taste and temperature test and Harry sat down to feed Braiden the bowl of porridge and pureed fruit.

“He’s such a big boy now!” Harry cooed as Braiden allowed the spoon to be pushed into his mouth, gumming it and scraping his four teeth across the weaning spoon.

Blaise ruffled up Braiden’s mop of black hair and kissed a cheek before it got covered with food.

“I think we can try him on some smooth yoghurts soon.” Max put in. “You know, give him his first taste of dairy, it says from six months.”

“He’ll be eating the same as us soon.” Harry lamented.

“Well, I don’t quite think he’s ready to sink his teeth into steak, but some pureed vegetables might help him on his way.” Nasta replied as he sunk into the seat opposite him and pulled out his work folder.

“Do you have much to do today?” Max asked him.

“No. Just a few write up reports and I need to budget the next month and I’ll be done.”

“What do you need to do for your work?” Harry asked Max.
“Nothing. I have next to nothing to do for my work, I can test myself and my knowledge, but I already know that I know it, so it’s just waiting for an emergency, then I can go in for a few hours and then I’ll do the write up reports when I’m done. That’s it, so whatever you have need of me for, I’m free. Unlike Nasta.” Max added with a saucy wink.

“I’m free.” Blaise denied.

Max shoved him over the arm of the settee. “No he’s not, don’t listen to him, I’m the only one free.”

Harry hummed with a knowing look on his face as he continued to feed Braiden.

“Unfortunately I’m not free. I have six babies to feed, bathe and dress.” Harry said. “Apparently Blaise is free though.”

Max crawled over the arm of the settee and onto Blaise, who hadn’t moved from where he had been pushed earlier.

“Blaise…?” Max whined.

“No, I’m not free anymore.” Blaise stated.

“But I want sex.”

“Go and ask Draco.”

“No, don’t ask Draco, he’s busy with homework.” Draco replied in a drawl.

“Nasta! I’m being bullied by the other mates.”

Nasta chuckled even as he didn’t break his rhythm of scratches of quill against parchment.
“That’s too bad, Max; perhaps you should go and see if our quintuplets are ready for a nappy change or a bottle feed.”

Max sighed as if put upon, but he dutifully got to his feet and went into the bedroom.

“I almost feel sorry for him.” Blaise told them from where he was lounging on the settee.

“He’s just sexually frustrated; he’ll work it out in the shower.” Harry replied.

Draco snorted and Blaise laughed along with Nasta.

“As long as he cleans up after himself.” Draco replied, scrunching his nose in disgust.

“I’m sure he will, he is house trained after all.” Nasta explained, dipping his quill in his ink before going back to his paper work.

“None of the quintuplets are awake and they don’t need nappy changes.” Max reported, sinking into a chair.

“I’m going to take Braiden for a bath then.” Harry said as he stood up and put the empty bowl in the sink and unstrapped a messy Braiden, who had porridge all over his face. Harry had tried to get as much of it off with the spoon as he could, but some things could only be taken off with a soft cloth and water.

“Alright, love. Do you need a hand?” Blaise offered.

“No, no, I’ll be alright.”

Harry went into the bedroom and from there into the bathroom, leaving four of his mates in the living room to plot.
Aneirin came over at five that evening and Harry gave him a huge hug and asked him politely why he was there.

“Your mates want to spoil you, Harry, so I’m babysitting while they take you out.”

“This is my gift to you, Harry.” Nasta explained, giving him a kiss.

“My Mum and Dads’ will be over tomorrow morning too, they want to see their grandchildren.”

“Well they can come anytime, I’ve told them that.”

“They’ve been busy; Talia has a new fella that Dad doesn’t like.”

“Dad’s never like their Daughter’s boyfriends.” Aneirin explained with a wry smile.

“Poor Tegan, she’s going to have a hell of a time getting a boyfriend.”

“Don’t even joke about that, Harry.” Max told him. “She’s not having a boyfriend.”

“Girlfriend then.” Harry said cheekily.

“Girlfriend?” Max squeaked. “No! She’s not having one of those either!”

Harry chuckled and he allowed Draco to drag him into their bedroom to get ready; nothing excited Draco more than being allowed to dress Harry up how he wanted.

“Has Harry said if any of the quintuplets are Drackens yet?” Aneirin asked.
“Nasta shook his head. “If any of them are Drackens, then he’s keeping it very close to his chest.”

“My Mum didn’t tell my Dads’ that I was a Dracken until I was a year and a half old.” Max grinned. “She told them that Caesar was a Dracken after only three months, which in comparison wasn’t very long at all.”

“That’s a bit extreme, submissives usually say after a month or two.”

“She wasn’t comfortable telling them since my grandparents on all sides were hanging around and hoping to hear the news.”

“Ah, very understandable that she kept it to herself then.” Aneirin conceded as he picked up Farren and gave him a kiss. “Well Farren is getting to be such a big boy.”

“I know, he’s going to be the size of Braiden soon.” Max said proudly, even as he rocked Regan in his arms.

“Perhaps not the same size, but definitely the same weight.” Aneirin stated as he cuddled Farren tightly. “Oh it seems like I haven’t held them in ages.” He complained.

Blaise came out of the bedroom holding Calix, already dressed to kill in a very posh and expensive looking suit, complete with blazer and shiny shoes.

“Well you look very sophisticated, Blaise.”

“Thank you, Nasta picked the place and the dress code. Harry’s not very impressed.”

Nasta sighed. “I knew that he wouldn’t be, but hopefully the night makes up for it.”

“I’m sure it will and if it makes you feel better, I love where we’re going and Draco’s more excited than I have ever seen him. He loves any excuse to dress up rich and act like a snobby bastard.”

Max snorted and placed Regan back into his bassinet. Taking Nasta’s arm to go and get ready as Draco excitedly came out, Harry sullenly stomping behind him.

All of them were in black trousers, black shoes and black blazers with crisp white shirts, but they each had different coloured ties. Draco’s was a soft gunmetal grey, Blaise’s was a soft purple, Harry’s was deep green, Nasta’s was a silky, shimmering dark gold and Max’s was a dark, sapphire blue. Harry had noticed immediately that the ties matched their eye colours. Draco’s tie made his silver eyes darken to grey and Nasta’s tie brought out the gold in his eyes until he looked like Leolin. Harry also couldn’t help noticing that Nasta’s cheeks and chin were clean shaven for the occasion and he went to touch and kiss that smooth face while he had the chance, the hair would be back in a few hours, likely before they even came back from wherever they were going.

“Oh you all look so handsome. Hold on.” Aneirin picked up the camera on the side table and got them all to pose together and he snapped several pictures of them together. “You all look so grown up.”

“Dad, I’m almost forty.” Nasta dead panned. “Of course I’m grown up.”

“But look at you all together, you all look so adult and sophisticated, this moment has to be documented.” Aneirin stated.

Harry grinned for the camera before he kissed his babies goodbye.

“Mama!” Braiden cried as Harry turned away from him.

“Don’t worry, Braiden, I’ll be back soon.” Harry promised, kissing him again and hugging his little body tightly. “I love you, but you’ll be fine with granddad Aneirin. He’s going to look after you.”

“Of course I will, they’ll all be fine.” Aneirin swore.

“I don’t even know where we are going.” Harry complained as he was led out of their rooms and then out of the school and into Hogsmeade, from there Max grabbed Blaise and Draco’s elbows and Apparated them away, Harry was left to be escorted by Nasta, he did not get an answer from his mates as to where they were going, only secret smiles.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X
The arrived around the corner from a very large, very old, very posh building that was lit up brightly and as they walked closer and Nasta handed over five tickets to a man in a red suit, Harry realised that this was a very posh, very big event as he was led onto a red carpet and cameras and reporters went mad.

“Where the hell have you brought me?!” Harry hissed as he tried to hide himself behind Max, who, as his biggest, broadest mate, made a very good shield, but as he was surrounded on both sides by photographers and reporters, his attempt to hide failed.

“Just grin and bear this part, love, this is the only bad part of this night, I promise.” Nasta exclaimed. “This part of the night is more for Draco and Blaise anyway. Do it for them.”

Harry sucked it up and grinned forcedly as he waved lightly as he moved quickly down the red carpet and into the posh building. He breathed a sigh of relief and happily accepted the flute of champagne from the dishy waiter just inside the door. He went to take a sip before stopping himself and looking questioningly at Nasta.

“I can have a glass right?” He asked.

Nasta took his own glass from the waiter and gave him a kiss. “Yes love, but just the one.”

Harry grinned and sipped on his glass as Max, Draco and Blaise took their own. Harry looked around and saw more dishy waiters with serving trays of champagne flutes, some with hors d’oeuvres and posh little snacks that wouldn’t fill a fly.

“Can you tell me where we are now?” Harry pouted.

“No.” Draco told him with an apologetic kiss to the cheek. “Nasta won’t say, but I know exactly where we are, I used to come here every year with my parents.”

“My Mum went out with a guy that loved this place, he used to bring her and me until Mum got rid of him after three years.” Blaise explained as he sipped his champagne. “I loved coming here.”

“I’ve come here once, when Mum tried to culture me, Caesar and my sisters.”
“I take it, it didn’t work?” Harry grinned up at Max, who grinned down at him.

“No, Caesar and me were crawling around under the seats, Alayla screamed through the whole thing because Dad wouldn’t let her have a dummy, Talia made herself sick on the free ice cream and Juda fell asleep. Needless to say we didn’t come again.”

“You are going to behave tonight though aren’t you?” Draco asked almost panicked.

“Yes, yes. I’ll be the perfect gentleman.” Max grinned wickedly.

Draco actually looked worried, but Harry gave him a subtle hug and took a little snack that the young, very good looking, waiter offered him.

“Oh those are nice, what are they?” Harry asked the waiter, who was giving him wide, lustful eyes.

“Lobster and king prawn cakes.” The waiter told him huskily. “Have another.”

Harry picked out another of the ‘cakes’ and popped it into his mouth.

“Love, you have to try these!” Harry pushed one into Max’s mouth, who glared at the waiter as he sucked exaggeratedly on Harry’s fingers. “Do you think you could make them for me?”

“I’m sure I could, I’ll make them better than here.” Max promised, still looking heatedly at the waiter, who was checking out Harry’s bum in the tailored trousers.

Blaise possessively pulled Harry away from the waiter and hid him by putting Harry behind him, then turning to put his back to the waiter, but unfortunately the place was full of lusty, male waiters that didn’t know the meaning of the word ‘taken’ and thrived on being very flirty.

Harry thought it was all good fun as he knew that he was going home with his four lovers at the end of the night, so when Draco got some interest from a male waiter, Harry enjoyed teasing him and he offered the waiter a free night with his lover, to which Draco had furiously shot down.

“The first night is free, after that it’s ten Galleons a go!” Harry giggled as Draco dragged him back towards the other three.

“Is Harry offering himself to waiters for ten Galleons?” Blaise asked incredulously.

“No, he’s pimping me out for ten Galleons a go to the waiters.” Draco scowled.

“Don’t take these waiters seriously.” Nasta soothed. “They’ve been encouraged to flirt with all the guests, I believe they’re even told to do it. They don’t mean anything by it.”

“I don’t like it.” Max huffed.

“I do.” Harry grinned.

Max turned to him with dark eyes gone almost black, but kept blue by the colour of the tie. “You’re mine!” Max hissed at him.

“Yes, yes, of course I am, just as you are mine, but that doesn’t mean I can’t look.” Harry grinned as he eyed up another guest standing near them.

“Come on, Max; let’s go to the bathroom to calm you down.” Nasta sighed.

“I’m not leaving him alone with these sharks!” Max replied angrily.

“I’m sure no one will touch Harry while Blaise and Draco are watching him.”

“Of course they won’t.” Draco replied affronted.

Max was led away by Nasta and Harry beckoned another waiter over, this one looking like a world class male model with his curly blond hair and bright, baby blue eyes. He smiled a nice, white smile and offered Harry his tray of nibbles, Harry took one and pushed it into his mouth. He moaned and those baby blue eyes softened with laughter, but simultaneously darkened with lust.
“Oh I like those.”

“They’re ginger and lemongrass poached scallops.” The waiter told him with a surprisingly deep voice. It didn’t match the cherub look he had going on.

“I’ve never had scallops before. Blaise, try!” Harry almost ordered as he picked up another nibble and presented it to Blaise, who sucked it from his fingers.

“They are nice.” Blaise replied, pulling Harry into a possessive, claiming kiss. The waiter again paid no mind.

“I want to try all of these!” Harry declared. “What are the best ones?” Harry asked the waiter, batting his lashes and chuckling when the waiter stumbled over his tongue.

An older waiter came over and offered them more champagne.

“We shouldn’t, Nasta will do his nut.” Blaise said, even as Harry exchanged his empty flute for a full one.

“Thank you.” Harry said happily, giving his best smile to the waiters.

Another waiter replaced the other two before Harry could even turn to his mates and he offered them his tray with a grin. Harry grinned back at the dark skinned, dark haired, gorgeous waiter.

“Well hello, what are you here to tempt me with?” Harry smiled. “Besides your body that is.”

“Prosciutto and goat cheese parcels.” The waiter told him as if he were describing a lewd sex act.

“I’ll try anything once. I’ve never had goats cheese before either.” Harry said before he popped the little pastry into his mouth and considered the flavour as he chewed.

“Do you like them?” The waiter asked softly, lustily.
Harry swallowed. “Oh yes. Those two definitely go well together. Do you want to try, Draco?”

Harry didn’t wait for an answer but held the little, bite sized parcel up to Draco’s mouth, who slipped his lips over it and allowed Harry to place it on his tongue. Draco slipped his arms around Harry’s back and pulled him against him tight as he chewed and swallowed.

“Those are nice, but I’d rather eat you.” Draco’s voice had lowered, but not enough to stop the interested looking waiter from overhearing.

“You can do that when we get home.” Harry teased. “My supple body is all yours tonight.”

“Not to mention tasty.” Blaise grinned, bending slightly to nibble along Harry’s neck.

Harry made an involuntary sound and he blushed. “Not in public!” He cried wriggling away from Blaise.

“Would you like to try these?” A new waiter asked him hotly.

Harry grinned. “I love that all these hot men are offering me food on a silver plate.” He told Blaise and Draco. “What are these?” He asked the waiter.

“Smoked salmon rolls.” The light brown haired waiter offered with a sexy grin, complete with dimple in his cheek.

Harry tried one, then had to have another. “Oh I love those.”

“What are they, love?” Max asked, looking calm and happy once again as he joined them.

“Smoked salmon rolls.” Harry replied as he fed one to Nasta. “I really like them.”

Max took one and popped it into his mouth.
“I can make some for you when you want them.” Max said just before a voice spoke clearly over the crowd, telling them that the show was about to start and for them to take their seats.

Harry went to follow the mass crowd in through the double doors, but Nasta took his hand and led him up the marble staircase instead.

“We have the best seats in the house, Harry; we don’t have to sit with the peons.” Draco told him.

Harry rolled his eyes at Draco’s ‘superior than thou’ act, but he didn’t comment on it, as long as he knocked it off when they got back to their rooms he was fine with him acting lordly over the rest of the public.

They reached the top of the stairs and two male attendants met them at the top, Nasta handed over the tickets once more and they were happily led to a curtained off box with a table to seat six. Harry and Blaise, as the two shortest, were sat opposite one another, right up by the balcony of the box to look over into the crowd below, Nasta sat next to Harry and Draco sat next to Blaise, Max happily sat on the other side of Draco, sandwiching the blond in.

Harry excitably looked to the stage below and he knew that he was here to see a posh, cultural, sophisticated show, but he couldn’t help but tease his mates.

“So is this going to be a strip show?” He asked innocently. “It had better be male performers because otherwise I’m leaving.”

“It is not a strip show!” Draco told him scandalised. “This is the biggest performance for magical people in the world, Harry!”

“So there aren’t male performers?” Harry asked pouting.

“There are bound to be a few.” Blaise placated.

“Oooo.” Harry cooed in interest before looking back at the stage.

“Try to give the boy some culture and all he wants is a strip show.” Draco complained.
“I’ll give you a private strip show later, love.” Max winked.

Harry chuckled, feeling warm and bubbly. His chuckle came out as more of a tipsy giggle and Nasta looked at him suspiciously, but before he could say anything, the hall went dark and everything hushed.

It was then that Harry learned that he had been brought to the world’s only magical ballet. He was all set to be bored, to endure through this torture only for Draco and Blaise, who were both thoroughly enjoying themselves. He didn’t expect to enjoy it himself, but he was surprised to find that he did enjoy it, very much so and he became riveted to the show, unhappily grumbling when the intermission in the middle came about, though he perked up when a happily smiling, flirty waiter came into their box to offer them drinks and ice cream, which Harry took, though he avoided the champagne with Nasta’s eyes on him and he went for a lemonade instead. The show resumed shortly afterwards and when it was over Harry stood with his lovers and clapped hard for the dancers, it was almost nine when they got out of the building, happily dodging and avoiding the waiters, who were seeing everyone out safely. Harry was excitedly talking with Draco and Blaise about the performance and they were already planning on coming to next year’s show.

Max grabbed him and gave him a long kiss, before Apparating home, or at least Harry had thought that they were going home, but when he opened his eyes, they were opposite a very posh, fancy looking restaurant decked in tasteful Valentine’s decorations that were floating, which let Harry know that they were in a magical place.

“Oh, why didn’t you say we were coming to dinner afterwards? I wouldn’t have had so much ice cream.” Harry whined even as he cupped his flat belly.

“You’ll be fine; you don’t have to order a huge meal, just something light if you want to.” Max assured him as they walked into the fancy restaurant, which not only had a Maître’d to greet them, but a young, curvy, smiley, sparkly hostess in a skin tight red dress with a heart headband holding back her long, dark brown hair.

“Do you have a reservation?” The Maître’d, in his black and white tailed tux, asked them primly.

“Yes, table for five under Maddison-Delericey for nine O’clock.” Nasta answered clearly.

The Maître’d made a show of running a long, slim finger down the book on the stand and Harry wanted to laugh, but he held it in so that he wouldn’t draw attention to himself from the hushed, soft setting of the large, but very full, restaurant. In fact, from what he could see, every single table was occupied.

“Ah yes, table twenty-three, one of the more private tables, Audrey.” The Maître’d addressed the hostess in the skin tight, red dress, who set Harry’s teeth on edge as she eyed up Max a lot more intimately than she had any right to, managing to be more intrusive with that one look than any of the waiters in the ballet hall had been.

“If you would please follow me.” She had a nice, throaty voice and Harry automatically hated her as she tried to get as close to Max as she could to walk beside him in her daft, pencil thin heels that Harry was pleading with to just snap as she walked, perhaps breaking an ankle as well.

She made sure to brush Max’s broad shoulders as she seated him, not noticing the poisonous glare that Harry was giving her as her eyes were all for Max.

“That touch made my skin crawl.” Max shuddered as the hostess sauntered off on her matching red stilettos.

“Don’t worry, love; I’ll make sure she won’t be able to touch you again.” Harry promised, forced calmly, as he gnashed his teeth together in her direction.

“You can’t go around eating women, Harry, this is the second time that you’ve threatened to eat a woman for looking at me.” Max said.

“That was more than a look!” Harry hissed venomously.

“Wait, Harry’s done this before? When?” Blaise asked, looking amused.

“In the supermarket, I ran into some poor woman when getting, sugar wasn’t it, love?” Max asked, Harry nodded curtly. “She wouldn’t get that I was practically married, went on about me not wearing a ring and then when Harry came down the aisle with Braiden and Leolin she tried brushing him off!
Of course Harry threatened to go back and eat her once we had escaped. Personally I thought she looked a little stringy.”

Harry giggled and went to Max, who he had made sure that he was sat next to, to kiss him.

“This one looks like a bad meal too, Harry, she looks fake, I wouldn’t want you getting a stomach ache from ingesting silicone and Botox.”
That made Harry laugh and Blaise joined in happily.

“Not to mention the fabric, I don’t think that dress will come off easily, you’ll have to peel her first like an orange.” Draco said disgustedly as he watched her totter back on her heels, her hands filled with menus.

“Here we are boys, drinks menus, main menus and dessert menus.”

“You can bring these back later.” Harry told her firmly, roughly handing her back the dessert menus, not giving her the option to say no as he opened the drinks menu.

“Can we have a bottle of red wine?” Harry asked Nasta, who nodded, looking like he knew it was a bad idea, but indulging Harry none the less.

“I think white would be better.” Draco told him.

“I’m not fond of whites, I prefer reds.” Harry said.

“Why don’t you go for a nice rosé?” The hostess recommended, purring practically into Max’s ear.

“I don’t want a rosé!” Harry cut in fiercely. “I want a bottle of red wine.”

“We’ll take a bottle of red Bordeaux and a bottle of Sauvignon Blanc then, to keep the peace, but that’s it.” Nasta stressed. “We’ll all take a glass of water as well please.”

“Coming right up.” The hostess told them sweetly, but the look she gave to Harry was anything but friendly.

“Those wines go best with red meat.” Max said to break the silence.

“I was planning on venison anyway.” Draco answered as he looked through the menu.
“What’s venison?” Harry asked curiously, looking through the menu for what Draco had found.

“Deer.” Draco answered unconcerned.

“You could eat Bambi?” Harry demanded.

“What’s Bambi?” Draco asked back with a frown.

“He’s a fawn from a Muggle movie.” Nasta answered. “Harry, if Draco wants to eat deer meat, let him.”

“But it’s a baby.”

“Venison is from deer, Harry, not from fawns.” Max corrected. “Let Draco eat what he wants.”

Harry pouted, but Max kissed him and Harry just couldn’t stay upset. Instead he looked through the menu for something that he wanted.

“What’s veal? I don’t know what half of this stuff is.”

“Veal is calf meat.”

“A baby cow?” Harry asked.

“Or a bull.” Draco put in dispassionately. “I’m not fond of veal.”

“Are they seriously selling jellied eel here?” Harry almost gagged.

“They’re considered a delicacy.”
“Why, because no one want’s to eat it?”

“More than likely.” Blaise said as he pulled a face.

“Here are your drinks.” The hostess announced as she escorted the waiter over to them. Harry was very sure that most hostesses showed the patrons to the table and then left to greet other guests, he was sure that they didn’t hang around a certain table, or a certain man, in this case.

The waiter served them their drinks professionally and Harry thanked him softly, taking a sip of the dark red wine and he smiled.

“That’s a nice red wine.” He commented. “Try some, Max.”

Max took Harry’s glass and took a sip. “You have excellent taste, Harry; I’ll take a glass of it please.” He addressed the waiter.

“I’ll do it.” The hostess said hurriedly and snatched the bottle roughly, which toppled on the tray, pouring right over Harry’s shoulder and into his lap, staining his bright white shirt red.

The waiter hurriedly set the bottle upright again on his serving tray and he stopped the wine from pouring over Harry’s person, trying not to topple the bottle of white wine also on the tray, but the damage had already been done.

Harry didn’t know what to do as he stared at the stain, hearing diners from other tables laughing lightly at him and to his horror; he felt tears gather in his eyes.

He stood from the table and he walked right out of the restaurant and he didn’t look back, even when he heard his name being called. He sat on a snow covered bench a few feet away from the restaurant and he let his tears fall, ignoring the wet stain on his shirt, which made him shiver in the icy February wind.

Someone sat next to him and wrapped an arm around him. Harry turned into the familiar, comforting smell of Draco’s cologne and snuggled himself in, sniffling softly.

“Don’t cry, love. It’s alright.” Draco soothed, brushing his overlong hair from his face with gentle fingers.

“Draco’s right, mio amore. It’s not worth your tears.”
“I ruined everything.” Harry sniffled sadly.

“You didn’t, the hostess did, the stupid cow that she is, she’ll have a piece from the manager once Max and Nasta are through with her.”

“What are they doing?” Harry asked, perking up a bit in interest.

“Oh the usual loud fanfare for all the other diners to hear, we’re never eating here again, terrible service for such a highly rated establishment, they’ll send the restaurant the dry cleaning bill, they’ll let everyone they know how terrible a restaurant it really is, the whole third degree.”

Harry chuckled lightly and looked at his two mates, who were relieved to see the tears drying and the small smile on Harry’s face.

“I’m still hungry though.”

“We’re going to a better restaurant, I promise.” Nasta said as he crunched through the snow towards them, he looked angrier than Harry had ever seen him, except perhaps that time when he and Harry had overheard Dominic’s plans for his children.

“First we’re getting you another shirt before you freeze to death.” Max put in, also looking very angry.

“I’m sorry about ruining the night.”

“You didn’t, Harry, you didn’t ask to have a bottle of red wine poured over your head.” Nasta assured him, tugging him to his feet from the bench.

“I thought this was a fantastic restaurant, we had to make reservations a year in advance! It seems to me that the reviews for it are highly over rated.” Max scowled. “It made no mention of clingy, harpy women who have false impressions and a terrible tableside manner. Don’t worry, love, I set her straight, I’d rather be with you and celibate for the rest of my life than spend a minute with her in that ugly red dress.”
“You think you can be celibate for longer than a week?” Harry chuckled. “I think you have a very high opinion of yourself, Mister Maddison. Don’t forget, we can all hear you in the shower.”

That lightened the mood considerably as they all laughed at Max’s expense, who bent to scoop up a handful of snow, shaped it and then threw it at Harry, who ducked at the last moment.

“Seeker reflexes remember? You couldn’t hit me with several snowballs!” Harry laughed.

Max pouted, but Harry went to him and let himself be hugged tightly, he shivered though as a particularly strong gust of wind caught the wine stain on his shirt and Blaise immediately stripped off his jacket and firmly placed it over Harry’s shoulders.

“No arguing.” He cut in before Harry could say anything. “You’ve got a damp shirt, you need it more than I do at this moment and my jacket fits you better than anyone else’s, you’d trail all of the others in the snow.”

Harry pouted, but he couldn’t keep it up as a grin broke over his face as they went into the nearest wizard wear store and bought him another white shirt, Harry changed in the dressing room and then they were off to find another restaurant, hopefully one without an indecently dressed, clingy hostess.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Harry giggled with Blaise as they clung to one another as they walked down the snowy pavement. They were out in Muggle London, or at least Harry thought they were out in Muggle London and they were looking for a hotel, because all of them were very, very drunk.

They had found a small, out of the way restaurant and they had happily eaten their fill, but unwilling to upset Harry again tonight, Nasta had allowed them red and white wine again, but once the red had been emptied and Harry had pouted, he had ordered another one and another one and soon he had forgotten how many they had ordered and he shrugged it off, saying that this was a onetime thing only and not to get used to it.

They were all very giggly as they found a hotel to stay the night in, Max booked them in and they all crammed themselves into a lift, though Draco was very sceptical and when it started moving he almost had a panic attack. He didn’t trust Muggle made things.

Harry couldn’t stop laughing and as Nasta let them into the hotel room, with its one king sized bed, after arguing with the receptionist that yes they only wanted the one room, yes for all five of them, no they didn’t want two twin rooms and a queen sized room, yes they were all going to sleep in the one bed, and have sex on it, which had happily been supplied by Max, the heavily blushing woman had handed over the one key card and let them get to their room.

Harry face planted the bed and snuggled onto it, being joined by an increasingly horny Blaise who had stopped speaking English after his fourth large glass of wine.

“Je veux te baiser.” Blaise whispered hotly into his ear.

“Knock it off, Blaise!” Nasta grumbled.

“Va te faire foutre.” Blaise hissed at Nasta.

“What’s he saying?” Harry giggled, moaning lightly as Blaise nibbled around his ear murmuring ‘Je veux t’enculer.’

“What do you think he’s saying? I don’t speak French and I know what he’s saying to you.” Max grinned lopsidedly.

“He has a love of the word ‘fuck.’” Draco told him, yawning.

“Why did you have to be a sleepy drunk?” Harry whined.

“He could have been the ‘passes out after two glasses’ type.” Max laughed, crawling onto the bed, shoving Blaise off of him and attacking his mouth.

Blaise hissed deeply, but Draco caught him around the middle and kissed him. Blaise attention was immediately diverted.

Nasta crawled onto the bed and bit around Blaise’s throat, helping Draco keep him distracted as Max happily peeled Harry’s clothes from his body, Harry giggling all the way.

“You know, most men would be offended at having their love laugh in their face as they undressed them, but I know you Harry and you’re just a giggly drunk.” Max teased.

“You’ve said that before.” Harry grinned, right before he turned the tables on Max and used all his strength to roll their positions, pinning Max to the mattress. “You also said that I was a dominant drunk.”

“Hey, if you want to fuck me, love, then go right ahead, I won’t stop you.” Max encouraged.

“You’d let me?”

“As long as you’re gentle with me, sure. Can you be gentle in your state of drunkenness?”

“Maybe.” Harry giggled.

“I think that drunken giggle tells you no.” Nasta put in, his voice deepened by lust and want.

“I want to be a top!” Harry stated furiously.

“How about you top Max after I have?” Nasta compromised. “You can play with Draco and Blaise until I’m done.”

“I love how I’m being referred to like a piece of meat.” Max grinned. “I love being a piece of meat.”

“You’re my piece of arse!” Harry growled.

“Whatever you say, love.” Max agreed happily in the face of Harry’s aggression.

Nasta plucked Harry up easily and deposited him in front of a heavily snogging Draco and Blaise. Harry immediately joined in the kissing leaving Nasta to grin at Max whose eyes widened and his breath came hotter and heavier.

“Are you going to give me my present?” Max asked softly.

“I think you’re my present.” Nasta answered, a smirk etching itself on his face as he pushed Max down off of his elbows and flat on the bed.

Nasta kissed around Max’s neck, flinging the blue tie over the side of the bed, opening the shirt carefully as he kissed down Max’s huge, muscled chest. Nasta sat up and smirked at Max underneath him as he opened the leather belt and undid the smart trousers, exposing the navy boxers underneath. Nasta moved his hands back up Max’s chest and he let his fingers ghost over Max’s ribcage, bringing his breath in a shudder, he let his hands slip down that wide chest to the narrower waist to grip a hold of those gorgeous hips. He lowered his mouth to kiss Max’s belly button, before licking slowly downwards to the edge of his boxer shorts, Max making a small noise in his throat, which was almost completely drowned out by the loud, throaty moan from behind them. Nasta couldn’t not look at the three behind him and he was only slightly surprised to see Harry above both Draco and Blaise, who were rubbing against one another still fully clothed. Just how dominant did his little lover get on alcohol?

Max brought his attention back to himself by letting out a needy sigh and shifting under his hands. Nasta turned back to him with a smirk and he watched the weight of knowledge fill up those gorgeous dark blue eyes.

“I’m going to make you scream, Max.” Nasta promised with a loving look, which made Max’s blood run all the hotter.

“I’d like to see you try, Delericey.” Max laid down the challenge and Nasta’s smirk grew into something wild and feral.

“I won’t even have to try for it, caru.”

“Are you saying I’m easy?” Max demanded.

Nasta couldn’t help the small, drunken giggle that came out, he smiled apologetically at Max.

“No, I’m saying that I’m such an amazing lover that I won’t even need to try to get you to scream.”

“Draco! Draco please!” Harry moaned from behind them and Nasta once again looked over his shoulder to see Draco teasing both Blaise and Harry, the former with his mouth, the latter with his hands.

“Not such a dominant after all.” Nasta turned to Max with a raised eyebrow.
“Wait until it’s your turn, he’ll be the bossiest little thing you’ve ever had to try and satisfy.”

“He’ll have to work hard then, the bossiest little bottom I’ve ever had was you.” Nasta teased.

“Huh, I thought it was Draco.”

Nasta chuckled but pulled Max’s trousers from him in one clean jerk that left the larger man moaning.

“It’s most definitely you, Max.” Nasta said softly before claiming that mouth with his own. They all tasted heavily of wine, but it didn’t matter, they had all had far too much, he knew that. He just hoped that he could get a headache reliever before his Father noticed his hungover state.

Max tried to withstand the assault, but it was impossible, Nasta just completely destroyed all of his defences and left him unable to do anything other than feel and moan helplessly as he was prepared quickly and with an efficiency that came from years of practice.

“Fuck, I hate conjured lube!” Nasta hissed. “Why didn’t anyone think to bring a bottle with us?!”

“Because we thought that we’d end the night up in our own bed?” Draco slurred slightly from behind him, from where he was pleasuring Harry. Blaise was fast asleep next to them, still partially clothed.

“Less talking, more fucking!” Harry ordered, wrapping his legs tightly around Draco and using the hold to fuck himself onto Draco, he moaned at his own actions and let his head fall back.

“Hell, he is a bossy bottom.” Nasta cursed, turning back to Max and slipping himself into the bigger man.

“Told you!” Max breathed as he adjusted to the welcome intrusion. “Oh fuck, harder!”

“I can do harder.” Nasta grinned, moving slowly and smoothly, or as smoothly as he was able to manage that was, until Max’s muscles stopped clenching on him, then he moved deeper, then faster and once he had his rhythm, he thrusted harder.

Max closed his eyes as he was assaulted with pleasure, gripping the cheap wooden headboard in his large hands and tugging on it until it creaked ominously. Nasta, sensing the danger, slipped his hands from those narrow hips, back up the ribcage and all the way up those long, muscled arms until he forced Max’s fingers away from the headboard and laced them together with his own, pinning Max’s hands on either side of his head and he used the position to change his hard thrusts to a smooth roll, trying to battle the alcohol to make the movements smooth and less jerky.

Draco roared behind them and Harry screeched his release, an errant foot caught the back of Nasta’s thigh and he couldn’t stop the drunken giggle from raising from his throat as he pictured Harry’s body jerking so hard in orgasm that his feet kicked out.

“Chiudi il culo!” Blaise hissed from where he had taken refuge in one corner of the bed, curled up like a cat.

“Italian now, Blaise? Worked all of the French out of your system have you?” Nasta inquired as he forced his body to keep moving, just a little bit more.

“Assonnato.” Blaise yawned.

“You’re sleepy? Go to sleep then, Bello.” Nasta cooed, more than a bit strained as Max tried to divert his attention back to himself by wrapping those long, muscular legs around him and tugging.

“No, don’t go to sleep, stay awake with me.” Harry grinned and crawled to Blaise.

Draco knocked Harry off of the bed and dragged Blaise to his body instead, Blaise hissing curse words in Italian the whole way.

“I don’t think he want’s sex, Draco.” Nasta panted as he felt his orgasm build. Trying to have sex while they were all drunk was like trying to have sex in a room filled with several lively toddlers, his attention kept being diverted to the younger three, instead of staying with Max and it made him feel terrible.

“He does, he just doesn’t know it yet.” Draco growled.
“You pushed me off the bed!” Harry shouted.

Someone banged on the wall by Max’s head and it startled the large man into jerking from it, which put Nasta at an awkward angle as he pushed into Max, too drunk to stop his own body momentum. Max screamed, Nasta grunted and Harry giggled as he had found something entertaining under the bed. Blaise hissed and Draco snarled back at the no longer sleepy eighteen year old.

“Stop disturbing our sex!” Harry demanded of the wall.

“Be quiet, Harry.” Nasta hissed as he tried to find his trousers, and his wand, to cast a silencing charm. Why hadn’t he thought to do so before now? He could barely walk in a straight line, let alone think in one.

“Don’t…don’t you tell me to shut up!” Harry pouted. Loudly.

“Stuff your cock in his mouth, Blaise.” Max said softly from the pillows, trying to hang on to his afterglow of orgasm, but there was too much happening around him.

That made Blaise grin as he kicked away from Draco and went to pull Harry from the floor. Harry fell backwards and Draco pulled Blaise’s nearly boneless body back under his own, preparing the now moaning Blaise with conjured lube.

Nasta found his wand as Max grabbed Harry’s ankle and pulled him back onto the bed, Harry gave a cute little snarl that made Max giggle, but Harry went dominant on him once more and forcibly pressed their mouths together.

Draco pressed into Blaise at the same time that Harry pressed into Max, who was thankful that Nasta had taken him before, because he had been right, Harry was incapable of being gentle whilst drunk, though he did try bless him.

Nasta cast a silencing charm once he remembered how and then set to watching his four lovers as he stroked himself to hardness, he tried not to giggle at the hilarious sight of tiny Harry trying to top the massive Max, though Max tried to make it more comfortable by accommodating Harry as much as possible and holding him tightly as he tried to find a rhythm.

Draco and Blaise however were going at each other like only two previous best friends could, striving for ultimate pleasure together as Draco pushed into Blaise, who shoved himself back onto Draco harshly, grunting and growling like rutting animals. Blaise reached up to grip a handful of Draco’s silky, baby fine, white blond hair and tugged on it. Nasta thought that Draco would go ballistic, but he didn’t, he allowed Blaise to pull him down for a snog full of teeth and tongue as their fucking got faster and harsher.

Nasta shivered as he watched them, his body tightening and flushing hot, his orgasm building as Blaise threw his head back without a care and groaned his orgasm to the ceiling. Draco bit deeply into Blaise’s exposed neck until drops of blood welled up and he muffled his roar of release before riding out the waves of orgasm and collapsing onto Blaise’s heaving body.

His body feeling hot and achy, Nasta looked over to Harry and Max, to find that Harry had found a rhythm after all, with help from Max, whose head was now grinding into the pillow, a soft continuous noise coming from his opened mouth as Harry, like the very fast, quick little whippet that he was, kept to a pace that Nasta was sure that only Harry would be able to keep to.

Max grunted, writhed, then screamed, almost crushing Harry with his thick thighs, tightening them until it expelled all of the breath from Harry’s lungs in one huge rush that left Harry silently screaming his own orgasm.

Draco removed Harry from Max almost before the last throes of their orgasm left them, pushing Harry over onto Blaise, who was already being kissed by Nasta.

Draco took Harry’s previous position and gave a knowing smirk to Max, who looked up at the blond through darkened blue eyes.

“Do I get to top anyone?” He asked.

“No, you just lay on your back and let us do all the work.” Draco answered.

Max went to get up at those words, completely incensed, but Draco shoved him back down again and pinned him, slipping himself inside Max easily and moving his knees to pin Max’s thighs.

“No fair.” Max breathed softly, his eyes closing at the immediate pleasure.

“I think it’s very fair.” Draco smirked, an evil glint in his eyes that Max didn’t like.

“What are you planning to do, love?” He asked.

“Fuck you.” Draco replied candidly.

Max licked his lips at that, but moved to look over Draco’s shoulder when his left foot was squashed to the bed, only to see the sight of Nasta fucking Blaise.

Italian expletives that poured out of Blaise’s mouth as Nasta held him in place and gave him everything that he could now that the buzz of the alcohol was wearing off.

“Oh fuck that’s hot.” Draco groaned, a shiver taking over his shoulders and upper back.

Harry moaned softly in his sleep and Draco let out a breath, turning back to Max and jerking his hips harder against Max’s to get himself into his body as deeply as he could.

“I’m not going to last!” Max complained, trying to stave off his orgasm already. His body highly sensitised due to the amount of times that he had been taken in the last hour.

“You had better!” Draco warned even as he pushed himself harder and faster to try and match Nasta’s pace beside him.

Despite the warning, Max felt the coil of heat low in his belly tighten and then release and he screamed, clenching tightly around Draco, bringing the blond with him.

Nasta had a tight grip on Blaise’s cock, preventing the foul mouthed man from orgasming, even as he begged and tossed his head back and forth, almost crying as he pleaded for his release. Nasta denied him as he exercised steel control over his own body.

“Per favore, per favore!” Blaise begged, shifting his hips continuously, throwing his head back and to either side, every muscle in his body tensed in anticipation of an orgasm that was just on the crest, but wouldn’t come. “Ho bisogno di te!” Blaise almost cried.

Nasta let out a cruel chuckle as he denied Blaise’s pleads once more, watching as his lover sunk into a state of extreme pleasure and breathless whimpers, writhing needily on the rumpled bedspread.

Only when he felt his own orgasm hit its pinnacle did Nasta ease the pressure off of Blaise’s cock, stroking him instead of holding him back, and Blaise screamed, loudly and happily as he was finally able to cum after being denied so many times and for so long.

“Me next!” A sleepy Harry demanded as he held a thin arm out to Nasta, who smiled at him indulgently.

“I want to at least top someone.” Max said gruffly as he peeled his back from the sheets and moved to Blaise, leaving Nasta to put Harry in his previous place with Nasta above him.
Max kissed up Blaise’s neck, ignoring the soft sounds that Blaise was making in favour of slicking himself up for the first time tonight.

Nasta was meticulously preparing Harry, who was squirming and giggling, which seemed to be putting Nasta off.

“It tickles!” Harry complained as he squirmed against Nasta’s fingers, kneeing Draco’s chest, who had worn himself out and was trying to sleep.

“Keep still, Harry.” Draco ordered, turning so that his back was to Harry and Nasta, curling up on his throbbing abdomen, he had had too much vigorous sex and he thought that he may even have pulled a muscle somewhere.

Nasta found Harry’s prostate and immediately the giggles and squirms turned to moans and writhes. Nasta breathed a sigh of relief, no matter how collected and confident he was, it was a blow to his ego to have his lover laughing under him during sex.

Max was having a lot more luck with Blaise, who had dug his fingernails into his scalp because he had too little hair to grab. Max didn’t mind, Blaise was hot and tight and clenched around him beautifully as he pushed in and out of him smoothly. He lasted longer than he had when he was being penetrated and he did not deny Blaise when his orgasm approached, but he instead rode through it and brought him to a second orgasm which ripped his own from his body.

Max lay on Blaise’s heaving stomach and watched Nasta and Harry go at it, the latter had calmed down his laughter and was now whining and mewling in a way that tightened Max’s stomach muscles and made his cock twitch in interest, but he couldn’t go again, he just couldn’t…he was utterly spent.

Nasta was trying to keep his pace even and his thrusts smooth, but the press of sleep wouldn’t leave him be and he almost yawned during sex, which was bound to turn the entire day into a disaster. He lowered his head to watch himself move in and out of Harry instead, who mewed at him and gripped hold of his biceps tightly, his nails digging into his skin hard. The sting of pain helped him keep focus as he shook off Harry’s one hand, which went immediately to his shoulder, and he put all of his balance and weight into his other arm and used his free hand to stroke Harry, whose entire body tensed and those small legs pulled back into his chest, his neck arching in pleasure as his spine stiffened and it was all over for Harry, who wailed which then turned into a scream that almost tore his throat.

Nasta sucked in a deep breath and lowered himself down onto Harry gently, cuddling into him and holding him as he tried to get his breath back.

Max hauled Blaise up and pressed him beside Harry and Nasta before curling up behind him.

“I’m so tired I could sleep for a week.” He stated through a yawn. “All that sex can’t be good.”
“What are you saying?” Harry demanded. “Who are you and what did you do with my Max? The real Max would never complain about sex.”

“I didn’t mean it like that!” Max said, waving Harry’s comment away. “Sex is great, more so when I have your luscious body to sink into, but I’m so tired I can’t move.”

“Just go to sleep.” Nasta encouraged as he pulled the duvet up and over their bodies, rolling between Harry and Draco as he did so and turning to cuddle Draco tightly so that the blond didn’t get shoved off the end on the bed in the night.

Harry snuggled up to Nasta’s back, Max’s huge arm reaching across him to hold Nasta’s hip and the warm weight of Blaise right behind him. He was happy and he couldn’t remember a happier Valentine’s Day, even if he had had a bottle of red wine tipped over him, which reminded him, he had to go and find that hussy and set her straight about Max. Max was his, no one else’s. No one else, outside of this bed, could have him. Not for any reason.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Harry woke up to a pained moan and he groaned himself, snuggling himself into the warm nest that he had made himself in the bed. Which was smaller than he last remembered, unless Max had grown during the night, because all of them were so tightly pressed together that he felt like a sardine…a very small, squashed sardine.

He heard the pained noise again and blinked open his eyes. He hissed at the light coming through the cheap curtains and he blinked owlishly at them. Didn’t they have black out curtains?

Harry heard the sound of retching and that made him sit bolt upright despite the dizzying pain in his head and the violent lurch of his belly. He clambered over Max’s huge body and found no bed on the other side; instead he went crashing to the floor with its thin, floral print carpet and ugly green rug. Where the hell were they?

He crawled to the bathroom in misery to see that Blaise was being violently sick into the toilet. Harry crawled to him and went up onto his knees behind him, tugging the already vomit flecked hair from Blaise’s face and supporting his shivering body with his own. Blaise was cold to the touch, he had gone into shock.

Harry reached over and dragged the towel off of the rack, so very thankful to find it warm, it had been heated. He wrapped it around Blaise, who showed no sign of response or knowledge of what Harry did, but after a moment or two of dry heaving, his body sagged into the warm towel and into Harry’s arms.
“Are you alright, love?” Harry asked softly, frightened by this unresponsive Blaise.

Blaise nodded slowly, but he didn’t try to answer him verbally. Harry sat naked on the cold floor and cradled Blaise in the warm towel, hoping that Max or Nasta woke up soon and would know what to do because he felt sick himself, but he couldn’t ease his own roiling stomach and look after Blaise too.

Thankfully he didn’t have to wait long as Nasta’s inbuilt trouble sensor woke him up and he came into the bathroom to help them. He shoved Harry’s head down the toilet and rubbed vigorously at Blaise’s arms and chest to warm him up. Harry was sick only a few minutes later.

Nasta cleaned Blaise up a bit before taking him back to the bed and coming back to assist him by rubbing his back and wrapping him in the warm towel as he shivered on the cold floor.

“I’m never drinking again!” Harry sobbed miserably between rounds of dry heaving.

“Make sure that you stick to that, Harry. Every time you want a drink from this day onwards, remember this morning.” Nasta encouraged. He was thankfully not feeling sick himself, but he had a headache to end all headaches.

“I think I’m done.” Harry said pathetically.

Nasta smiled softly behind Harry’s head and shook his own head gently. He scooped Harry into his arms and carried him back to bed, letting him snuggle into the warmth. He had no idea what he was going to do with his mates, but until they got a headache reliever and a stomach settling elixir, they were going to be pretty useless to anyone and everyone.

Max woke with a groan and used both hands to press against his skull like he was trying to hold it together.

“What the fuck did we do last night?” He moaned.

“I only remember pieces.” Nasta admitted sourly.

“I remember next to nothing.” Max whined.

“I remember a lot.” Draco told them gruffly from the other side of a bed. “Bits are missing though. I remember Max got hit on by a woman in a red dress who tipped a bottle of wine over Harry’s head.”
“Some bimbo tipped wine over Harry?” Max asked incredulously. “I hope I snapped her fucking neck!”

“You gave her a piece of your mind while we left to find another restaurant after buying Harry a new shirt. After that it gets fuzzy, I’m sure we enjoyed the meal we had at the other restaurant, but I can’t seem to remember what I had to eat, or what anyone else had to eat, or how we got here, or even where here is.”

“We’re in some rundown Muggle hotel in London.” Blaise told them dryly, his voice soft and pained, his throat raw. “Draco almost pissed himself in the lift and we had an orgy right here in this bed until the early hours.”

“That was fun.” Harry croaked, peeking his dishevelled head out from under the duvet.

“How are you two feeling?” Nasta asked, curling a piece of hair around Blaise’s ear.

“Tired.” Blaise moaned.

“Achy and sleepy.” Harry answered.

“Let’s get home. I’m sure my Dad will have an earful to give us.” Nasta sighed.

Harry’s eyes widened and he dived out of the bed as he tried to get himself dressed, almost knocking himself out on the bedside table as he dry heaved blindly.

“Calm down, calm down, love.” Nasta chuckled as he scooped Harry up and held him. “My Father isn’t that frightening, though Max’s Father is, he’ll be there too.”

“No, it’s not that. My babies! I have to get back for my babies! Right now!” Harry demanded.

Nasta chuckled and let Harry down to scamper around the floor to get dressed as he calmly pulled his own clothes on and encouraged the other two to do so too before he dressed Blaise carefully himself, as he looked deathly pale.

He wasn’t looking forward to the lectures that he was about to get from his Father and his extended family, but he’d endure it. He had enjoyed his Valentine’s Day and night, what he could remember of it anyhow, and he wasn’t going to be bullied into feeling bad over a stupid decision to not keep an eye on what and how much he and his mates were drinking. It was over and done with and they were all paying for it in some way, there was no doubt over that. Though Blaise seemed to be suffering more than the rest of them, so Nasta ignored his whining and soft, croaky demands to be put down as he carried him through the hotel and out into the fresh air while Max checked them out of their room. He had enjoyed himself, but hell he could not wait to get back to their own rooms so they could rest a bit more.

Chapter End Notes

A/N: Valentine’s Day the Dracken way, they can’t even go out to dinner without something cropping up, though with five very hit men out and about, you can’t blame one for trying their luck, it might get them a broken neck, but they tried. Some of you readers need to understand that real life involves more for me than just writing for you, I have a full time night shift job and with Christmas coming up I’m busier than ever. I’m not completely well or healthy and I’ve had to move back in with my Mam, which is all very stressful, so I’m sorry and all that you can’t wait for more than five weeks for an update, but that’s life and I’m not going to run myself or my health into the ground for an internet story that I make no money off of and do purely for my own entertainment and enjoyment. So learn some patience and back off.

Thank you all for those of you who do have some patience and for reading and reviewing.

Chapter Sixty-Four – Hufflepuff Heights

The smell of alcohol left nowhere for them to hide and as they arrived back home, the only one grinning and giving them a secret thumbs-up was Richard. Behind Myron’s back obviously, because the very large man looked ready to explode.

It was Aneirin however who was staring at him like he had never seen him before, so deep was his shock, so disbelieving and disappointed. Nasta wanted to curl up and hide himself away from a gaze that he hardly ever saw directed at him, but instead he stood tall as he cradled Blaise, who had vomited once more, this time in Hogsmeade, as the Apparation disagreed with his tender belly.

“What is the meaning of this?” Myron spoke in an angry growl.

“Do you know how worried we’ve been?” Ashleigh told them tearfully. “You were expected back last night.”

“We were too drunk to Apparate.” Draco replied helpfully. “Not without splinching at any rate.” He added as he fell onto the settee and cradled his own head.

Blaise dry heaved into his own throat and Nasta moved him into a more comfortable position so that his belly wasn’t scrunched up. Blaise moaned softly and sobbed in misery as he clung to Nasta’s shoulders.

Harry tentatively let go of Max’s waist, took two steps forward and then plummeted to the floor. Max grabbed his hips and set him back on his feet, Harry blinked slowly as if he didn’t quite grasp what had happened, he made a soft, confused noise and peered blearily around at everyone, who were starting to blur into pairs.

“He’s going to pass out.” Myron informed dryly, just as Harry’s eyes rolled into his head.

Max caught the soft, floppy body before he hit the floor and cradled him, sniffing and licking at Harry’s bone pale face. All he could smell was alcohol and stale sex.

“He needs a stomach settling potion.” Max said softly as he moved to the kitchenette and got down his potion chest.

He pulled out five headache relievers and five stomach settling elixirs and handed the two potions to every one of his mates, keeping four, two for him and two for Harry. He saw to Harry first as Nasta coaxed an uncooperative Blaise into drinking them, but he was at a loss for what to do with the unconscious seventeen year old.

“You should be made to suffer the consequences of your binge like Muggles. How much did you drink?!” Aneirin shook his head sadly. “I suppose it wouldn’t interest you to know that Braiden cried almost all night for his ‘mama’. I kept telling him that Harry would be home soon, but as midnight came and went, then one O’clock and two and I knew then that you wouldn’t be home. What was I to tell that tiny six month old boy? That his parents, who had promised to come back, hadn’t?”

“Really Dad, you can’t possibly make me feel any worse than I already do, so stop with the guilt trip.” Nasta sighed softly.

“What possessed you to drink so much? I have spent my life teaching you about the dangers and detriments of alcohol and then you go out and not only let your submissive and subordinates get flat drunk, but you join them!”

“We were celebrating our very first Valentine’s Day together as a whole, as a real family, Dad. Forgive me for not ruining that celebration by exercising restraint on what myself and my lovers drank.”
“Well you made the papers this morning, perhaps that would interest you.” Myron said silkily soft, his black eyes glaring at them all as he took the folded newspaper from his back pocket and handed it over forcefully.

Nasta shook it out to the front page with Max over his shoulder and the glaring headline ‘Garnet Swan Under Fire’ caught his attention and then underneath that was a second, more detailed headline stating ‘Prestigious Garnet Swan Restaurant make enemies of the Saviour and the hottest, most talked about relationship of the year’ which made him sigh tiredly as he saw the picture of a tearful Harry with a wine stained shirt on the front cover. He wasn’t going to enjoy this article, he just knew it.

“Illustrious and world famous wizarding restaurant, The Garnet Swan, last night became the centre of an embarrassing and reputation destroying scene as five prominent young wizards enjoyed an evening at the Magical Musical Theatre for the yearly performance of the world’s only all magical ballet troupe before heading to The Garnet Swan for dinner reservations that have to be pre-booked up to eight months in advance for Valentine’s Day slots. Other patrons were excited to see Saviour, Harry James Potter, seventeen, enter the establishment, accompanied by his four lovers, Nasta Tabrien Delericey, thirty-eight, Maximilius Diadesen Maddison, thirty-two, Blaise Mariano Zabini, eighteen and Draco Malfoy, seventeen.

‘I have never met the young boy in person and to see him sitting just two tables away from me and my Husband was just a complete thrill’ says Florence Hightly. ‘They were all happy and laughing, talking about the ballet they had just seen and young Harry asked if his lovers would like some wine, which was then ordered. There was a tension between them however, as the young hostess wouldn’t leave their table, flirting quite shamelessly with one of Harry’s lovers. It’s not surprising that he got a bit upset with the lady.’

Other diners then went on to describe a scene ‘like something out of a written drama’ some patrons said, as the hostess, who has been named as Audrey Freeman, twenty-six, touched and flirted with the obviously uninterested man, who tried many times, unsuccessfully, to brush the woman off, then recommended a rosé wine, ‘a favourite of hers’ a colleague mentioned, to the young men, after they had clearly said that they wanted both red and white, not rosé. Freeman then went to fetch the wine herself, instead of allowing the waiters to do their job and serve the young men.

‘Their mood was drastically lowered, darker’ Kirk Williams, sixty-three, told us. ‘They were no longer the smiling, happy lovers they had been when they had arrived and young Mr Potter was most upset and down heartened.’

The next scene, that shocked other diners and has left The Garnet Swan’s reputation in tatters, was when Miss Audrey Freeman came back with the wine server and then proceeded to pour the bottle of expensive red wine over Mister Potter’s head which saw the young seventeen year old leaving the restaurant in tears, pictured above, his night now ruined and his lovers furious on his behalf.

‘It was just awful, disgraceful for such an expensive and highly rated establishment’ Rose Beverly, fifty-nine, said in an interview. ‘That young lady was rude, disrespectful, shameless and cruel to that poor boy, to one we owe so much! That boy did not deserve such treatment for merely dining with his loved ones. The Garnet Swan is a very expensive establishment, we as patrons, expect a certain level of service for our Galleons, this is unacceptable and I and my loved ones will be dining at The Gilted Crown from now on!’
Harry Potter and his loved ones could not be found for comment, assumedly they went back to their quarters at Hogwarts school of Witchcraft and Wizardry, which three of the five are still attending for their last year of school. The management team of The Garnet Swan confidently assured us that Miss Freeman had been dismissed from service and they have apologised sincerely to their guests and have sent along their apologies to Mister Harry Potter and his lovers for the poor level of service they received and have also offered to replace the shirt that one of their staff members ruined and have also expressed their wish to offer the young fivesome a free dining experience to take advantage of whenever they wish, their school schedule allowing, but all of that does not make up for the fact that the superior, world class restaurant has been left in a frankly embarrassing position and their untouched reputation has been left in shreds.”

Max breathed in deeply as he finished reading aloud the article.

“At least they didn’t follow us and take pictures of what we did in that small restaurant and that cheap, nasty hotel.” Draco said, feeling much better now that his belly had stopped rolling and his headache had been eased away by the potions.

Myron breathed deeply. “That’s not the point!” He snapped.

“What is the point? As you seem to want to make it incredibly loudly.” Harry asked from Max’s arms; where his glassy green eyes cracked open just a touch.

“Take these, Harry, you’ll feel much better.” Max encouraged, overseeing Harry drinking the two potions.

Harry struggled in Max’s arms and the large man set him on his feet. Harry walked right into his bedroom and he immediately stripped into a pair of soft, warm pyjamas before going to his babies. He scooped a sleeping Braiden into his arms and climbed the staircase to his quintuplets.

None of them were awake, but he stroked their soft little cheeks, gave them all a kiss, before carrying Braiden back down the stairs and into the living room, cooing softly to his baby.

“Braiden was…” Aneirin started.

“Don’t!” Nasta hissed angrily, his eyes pinned on his Father.

“Braiden was what?” Harry demanded, waking up a lot more than he had been previously. “He wasn’t sick was he?!”
“No, he missed you.” Nasta said softly.

“Aww.” Harry cooed, rubbing his nose against Braiden’s. “Did you miss me baby? I missed you too.”

“I fed the little quins, Braiden didn’t wake up.” Ashleigh told him.

“Leolin should have had two bottles.” Harry said worriedly.

“I fed him the first bottle.” Aneirin told him.

Harry smiled. “Thank you.”

Aneirin blew out a breath, he just couldn’t stay angry with Harry, his son however, him he could be angry with, he knew better than this, he had taught his son better, fortunately for Nasta, Braiden made a soft sound and opened his beautiful eyes as Harry sat down on the settee.

He grinned, so very happily when he caught sight of his Mummy and he lifted sleep heavy arms to get a hug, which Harry lovingly gave him, ignoring the baby drooling in his hair and over his neck.

“Hello, Braiden love.” Harry greeted softly, blocking out the room around him.

“Mama!”

“Good morning, sweetie. I missed you so much, but your Daddies thought it was a bad idea to Apparate while so intoxicated, truthfully I agree with them, but it’s alright, I’m here with you now.”

Harry just cuddled his little six month old baby and soaked up all the love and trust such a tiny person could have for their Mother. He pressed his lips to Braiden’s temple and kept his lips there as he hugged Braiden to himself.

“I love seeing you like this.” Max told him softly.
“Like what?” Harry answered back just as softly, most of his attention still on the baby in his arms.

“Just like that, in your own little world with one of the kids. It’s amazing.”

Harry smiled, but shook his head at Max.

“Has he had breakfast?” Harry asked the older adults in the room.

“No, not yet. Is he on solids yet?” Ashleigh asked.

Harry nodded. “Yes, he only has a bottle five times a day now and he has rice cereal twice a day. He’s getting such a big boy.”

“May I hold him?” Ashleigh asked.

Harry gave Braiden a kiss and handed him over with no fuss as he went to fix Braiden some breakfast.

“How is Leolin doing?” Myron asked, sitting down next to Draco when offered to by Max.

It made Harry feel warm that Myron was asking after Leolin, and not just Calix and Farren. His only blood grandchildren.

“I’m worried about him.” Harry admitted.

“Only because you are comparing him to the other babies, Harry. He’s going to seem different and even strange compared to them.” Nasta soothed.

“Didn’t you tell him about Faerie babies, Nasta? I gave you the books right from the Faerie courts.” Aneirin said tonelessly, still lividly angry with his son, but willing to put it off to a later date, perhaps when Harry and Braiden weren’t in the room.
“Of course I’ve told him, he’s even read a few of them himself, but it doesn’t seem to be sinking through his Dracken instincts. He keeps trying to feed Leolin increasing amounts of milk to join the other four, but he doesn’t want to know.”

“I just…he’s not growing. Surely he should at least be growing?” Harry bit his lip and frowned with stress and concern.

“He has grown, Harry; his back is now completely healed, he’s gained a few pounds and he’s lost his curled up newborn look.” Draco reminded.

“But he’s still so small, he’s tiny.”

“Only compared to his siblings.” Max told him, assisting Harry with Braiden’s breakfast, handing him the things that he needed to make the baby rice cereal.

“Is it okay for him to be so small though?” Harry asked, looking at Aneirin, a tiny bowl of rice cereal in his hands and a little weaning spoon at the ready for Braiden.

“It’s completely normal, Harry, I’m surprised he’s put on any weight, most Faerie babies don’t until they’re at least a few months old. There are books on this, Harry and one baby in one particular book still looked like he was a newborn at seven months, Leolin’s coming on brilliantly and I’m sure it’s down to your expert care.”

That put a smile on Harry’s face as he went to feed Braiden, who Max had taken off of his Mother and sat on his lap. Harry knelt on the floor in front of him and fed Braiden on Max’s lap, neither of them caring about the odd blobs of cereal landing on them, they were just glad that Braiden hadn’t yet learned to put his hand in the food and throw it, he was content to just sit and allow Harry to push the spoon into his mouth.

Nasta went to get the awakening quintuplets after laying Blaise down on the settee with orders not to move and for Draco to watch him, and then another day began, perhaps not how they would always start their day, as they weren’t always going to have hideous hangovers, but they easily fell into their familiar routine.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X
Monday morning, the sixteenth of February, saw Harry back in lessons, which he had grumbled about, after thoroughly enjoying his week off from lessons, but he was sent on his way regardless, being accompanied by Blaise and Draco until they broke apart, Harry to Charms, Draco and Blaise to Arithmancy.

Theodore Nott had been expelled, had had his wand snapped in half and was forbidden from buying a new one. There had been a huge article on the front page about the scummy little Slytherin who had attacked the Saviour. Draco hadn’t let him read it and from that alone Harry knew that it was a bad article with at least some misinformation or downright lies.

Astoria Greengrass had been cautioned and warned not to go near him, any of his lovers or their children and she had been firmly told that any more trouble and she would also be expelled and have her wand snapped. She glared at Harry as he sat with Draco and Blaise for lunch, but Harry happily ignored the little girl, talking more with Pansy Parkinson, who wasn’t exactly a bosom buddy, but Harry found that he could actually enjoy her company in small, evened doses.

After lunch Harry went back to Transfiguration to finish off the interrupted double period with Draco, while Blaise rushed off to Ancient Runes. Harry and Draco also met up with Hermione, who also had Transfiguration.

When the final bell rang Harry packed up his equipment and scowled at his filthy hands. Herbology really was dirty work and he spoke softly with Neville as they both went to the hose in the corner to wash their hands.

“Where are Draco and Blaise?” Neville asked, really so much more confident now than his younger years.

“In Defence, poor babies.” Harry grinned.

“What’s wrong with Defence? I thought it had picked up standard now that we have a permanent Professor who knows what he is on about now that the curse is lifted from the position.”

“Ah, but who is that permanent teacher, Nev? None of them have forgiven Professor Drios for that stunner to the back when I was pregnant.”

Neville made an ‘O’ of understanding and he nodded. “I suppose that must be difficult for them to deal with, stunners really can be dangerous and with how powerful Professor Drios is, I am surprised that you came out with the baby still.”

“I’m not!” Seamus Finnegan piped up as they made their way across the grounds to the castle. “No matter how powerful Professor Drios is, our Harry is even more powerful!”
“Cheers, Seamus.” Harry grinned. “Hey, do you guys want to come over later, or I could come to Gryffindor Tower, but it is more convenient to move you lot rather than six babies, I want to introduce you and the girls to the kids, I’ve already invited Hermione, who’s going to ask Ginny and Luna.”

“You sure your guys won’t mind?” Dean Thomas asked.

“Why would they?”

“Alright then, I’ve been dying to meet your kids.” Seamus said with a grin.

“They’ve really come on now.” Harry said with an answering grin.

“Not planning on anymore are you?” Neville asked as Harry went misty eyed.

“Hold up, you have six kids and none of them are Malfoy’s? Maybe he’s infertile.”

“No, I’m sure he’s very fertile; we just never seem to have sex together at the right time.” Harry grinned as his friends all pulled faces.

“Too much information, Harry.” Dean scowled.

“I had to listen to you and Seamus for two years, talking about women and breasts and other icky things that I don’t want to even name.” Harry pouted.

That set them all off laughing as Seamus wrapped an arm around Harry’s shoulders.

“That must have been what turned him off in the first place.” Neville pointed out.
“You know what, it probably was.” Harry grinned at his friends. “I’m blaming my harem of men solely on you two.” Harry indicated Seamus and Dean.

“How can you put the same amount of blame on me?” Dean asked. “I waited a full year after Seamus did to have sex for the first time. He was the one who started off the conversations about women by telling us about that summer between third and fourth year when he had that girl, oh what was her name, Sally? Or was it Sandy?”

“Don’t look at me, I don’t remember her name.” Seamus grumbled.

“Anyway, Seamus started it all off, so therefore he should be blamed more.”

“Blamed more for what?” Hermione asked as she joined them on the fourth floor.

“Nothing, Hermione.” They all said, sharing a grin with one another at what Hermione would say about their topic of conversation.

“You’re not planning on rule breaking are you?” She asked, eyeing them all suspiciously.

“She had Divination, she and Luna will meet us outside your rooms.” Hermione answered still looking at them through narrowed eyes suspiciously, a frown down turning her mouth.

“I can’t wait to show off my babies!” Harry said excitedly. “Oh, don’t mind Nasta or Max, I have no idea what they’ve done all day, so Nas might be working or they could be asleep now that I’m not there to help with the kids.”

“They won’t be having, you know what, will they?” Dean asked with a grimace.

“What sex? Don’t be stupid, with six kids it’s hard enough to find the time to cuddle, let alone have sex.” Harry waved away as they reached the seventh floor and found Ginny and Luna stood awkwardly outside the portrait of the empty classroom.
“This is your guardian portrait? Who’s supposed to be inside the picture?” Neville asked.

“No one.” Harry winked and took out his wand and touched the keyhole in the classroom door. The portrait swung open and Harry bounced inside to see Max napping on the settee topless and Nasta was nowhere in sight.

“Here we are, home sweet home.”

Hermione, Ginny and Luna all giggled at Max, whose gorgeously muscled upper body really was a sight to behold in all its naked glory, the wide expanse of his shoulder’s barely fit on the settee and his thick thighs left no room for the both of them to fit on the settee, one leg was bent over the side, foot resting on the floor.

“He’s so big.” Ginny giggled.

“Yeah, he is.” Harry winked with a cheeky grin.

“Mama!” Braiden called out, fighting to sit up in the travel cot as soon as he heard Harry’s voice. He managed to sit himself up by rolling onto his knees first and he immediately held his arms up to Harry. “Maa maa!” He stressed.

Harry picked him up and gave him a tight hug and a kiss.

“This is Braiden.” He introduced.

“Ah, I remember this one.” Dean said as he gingerly took a little hand and shook it gently.

“Harry, is that you?” Nasta called out, coming into the living room dressed in the dragonhide trousers that Draco had bought him for his birthday and a tight green tee-shirt, which brought out the green in his eyes.

“Yeah, I bought some friends to see the kids, they’ve already met Max.” Harry grinned, indicating the biggest kid of the family.

Nasta snorted. “He thinks he had it hard because I went to work for two hours this morning. One of the Welsh Greens, Meinir, got out of hand and tried to destroy her enclosure, and everyone in it.”

“Pregnant?” Harry guessed with a secret grin.

“Pregnant.” Nasta agreed with a smirk.

“You aren’t hurt are you?” Harry asked.

“No. But Max thinks he’s hard done by for being left on his own for two hours.”

Harry chuckled and went to get the quintuplets, who would be wanting a feed soon anyway, leaving Nasta with his friends.

“It’s nice to meet you.” Ginny grinned widely, looking suggestively to his hips and thighs, which she had had a fascination with ever since Harry had told her about Nasta’s special move during sex and exactly what it felt like to be on the receiving end of it. Nasta just nodded in reply, sinking back into his silent, aloof persona.

Once Harry had safely moved all five of the quintuplets into the living room he showed them off to his friends as Nasta went into the kitchenette to make up their bottles.

“Doesn’t say much does he?” Seamus whispered to Harry.

“Who Nasta? You should have been there right in the very beginning; I had trouble getting his name from him.”

“I think he’s just shy.” Hermione defended.

Harry snorted and almost keeled over with laughter at that. If it was one thing that Nasta wasn’t, it was shy.
“He’s not shy, he just likes the quiet.” Harry said grinning. “A lot of people misunderstand that about him, some people over the years have even thought that he was retarded or mute, he’s not, he just doesn’t like talking, he prefers observing everything. Though he has gotten better, especially with us.”

“Where are Draco and Blaise?” Neville asked, almost nervously, though it didn’t show on his face.

“Don’t worry about them, Nev, they won’t say a word to you anymore, they’ve really grown up, not to mention they don’t have the time to go bullying anyone. Besides they know what I think of them behaving in that way and they wouldn’t do it. As for where they are currently, they go to every single study session held by the Professors, then they’ll go to the library for a bit before they come home, they want to do the very best that they can in their exams so they won’t have to resit them in the summer.”

“They spend all day, every day studying?” Dean asked in horror.

Harry nodded. “They want good jobs to support our family. Nasta and Max have good jobs and I was left a lot of money by my parents and my godfather, but we can never have too much, especially not as we plan on having a lot of children.”

Harry cuddled Braiden in his lap, letting his son gum and bite at a teething ring with little plastic animals on it as his friends, most particularly Hermione and Ginny, fawned over the quintuplets.

“I know you had a little girl, where is she?” Ginny asked.

Harry looked at her strangely. “You can’t tell?” He demanded as he looked to his little girl, who he could see immediately was a girl and not a boy like the others.

“It is hard to tell, Harry, especially as they’re all wearing dresses.” Seamus pointed out.

“They’re nightdresses and it makes it easier to change them in the night instead of fighting with poppers, buttons and foot holes. Why aren’t they dressed?” Harry asked Nasta, who shrugged as he handed over the bottles to cool naturally.
“Ask Max.” Was the short, soft reply as he went back to the kitchenette and got out his paperwork.

Harry rolled his eyes and pointed out Tegan to the girls, who carefully picked her up and cuddled her.

“She looks very like that baby.” Neville said, pointing to Regan.

“They’re the closest to twins out of all of them.” Harry nodded. “I think they’re more fraternal twins than part of the other quins, they just happened to be born at the same time as the other three, but they have been mistaken for identical twins by the orderlies who gave them their Dragon Pox vaccine.”

“These two are Nasta’s yes? They look like him.” Hermione said.

“Leolin is Nasta’s too.” Harry pointed out the tiny baby, in his padded carrycot closest to Harry; the other four had been placed down on the quilt in the middle of the floor.

“Why is he so small?” Dean asked. “Is he alright?”

“He’s a Faerie.” Luna said softly as she went onto her hands and knees, lifting one hand to touch a small cheek.

“Come off it, Harry’s as human as the rest of us!” Seamus scoffed.

Harry shared a look with Hermione and he had to control his grin.

“Actually Luna is right. Leolin's a Faerie; it runs in Nasta’s bloodline.”

“Language.” Nasta snapped from the kitchenette table.
“So that thing about his skin?” Dean whispered after sending a look to Nasta.

“His underdeveloped wings.” Harry said. “He’s fine now though, completely fine.”

Braiden took that moment to sneeze and Harry sighed, picking up a soft cloth from the table and wiping his nose for him and the snot that had covered his face down to his chin.

“That’s disgusting!” Seamus shivered.

“That’s a baby.” Harry replied with a grin. “People just think they’re these little humans that just sleep all the time, that they can put them down and pick them up when they want to and they can use them as dress up dolls, they don’t realise exactly how much work it involves. They all eat, puke and shit more times a day than anyone you’ve ever known, their cries can pierce your eardrums, they can’t wipe themselves, can’t feed, change or bathe themselves, they can’t wipe their own noses, when the baby is finally asleep you have all the washing to do, all the cleaning because you can’t do it when the baby is awake. You can forget about any thoughts of a social life, sleep is a thing of the past and sex is a distant dream that we only get to indulge in on special occasions when Nasta’s Dad or Max’s parents take the kids for the night. I don’t think I’ve slept properly for a year because even when you’re pregnant the baby won’t let you sleep undisturbed.”

“Then you went and had five more.” Neville grinned. “That alone says it’s all worth it.”

“It’s most definitely worth it.” Harry smiled. “I wouldn’t give up this last year and a half for anything, and I mean anything, in the world.”

“Love you too.” Max said sleepily as he stretched his body as much as he could on the settee, watched by three giggly girls and three grudgingly impressed boys as Max’s muscles flexed enticingly under his smooth skin, that was getting steadily paler with the absence of the strong summer sunlight.

“We have company.” Harry informed softly.

“I know, I’ve been listening to you all for the last few minutes.”

Max hefted himself up with a groan and stretched again, this time his back muscles flexing as his spine cracked forcing him to let out a soft moan.
“Why aren’t any of the children dressed?” Harry asked. “You were supposed to have dressed them and washed their nightdresses ready for them to wear tonight.”

Max groaned and rubbed his face. “Nasta left me on my own.”

“Only for two hours.” Harry raised an unimpressed eyebrow.

“Braiden wouldn’t settle without you, Tegan decided to throw a fit when I tried to undress her so I thought it best to just leave her and then Calix decided to play up, then Leolin wanted attention, it’s hard to look after all six of them on your own!” Max defended.

Harry chuckled and kissed Max, who sighed unhappily.

“If you give me their nightdresses now I’ll wash them and dry them in front of the fire.” He said defeated and Harry chuckled again, having known that as soon as he had kissed Max, that the large man would offer to do the washing.

“Oh, I want to pick their outfits.” Ginny said. “Can I please?”

“Their clothes are in the large chest of drawers, Gin.” Harry told her. “One drawer per baby, Braiden’s is at the top, then Farren’s, Tegan’s, then Regan’s, Calix and Leolin’s is on the bottom. Don’t forget bodysuits and socks!”

“I’m so glad we got the magically expandable drawers, otherwise we would need a whole cabinet for each baby.” Max chuckled as he picked up Regan and pulled his nightdress off quickly and carefully as Harry did the same with Braiden.

Each baby was then nearly naked except for their nappies as Ginny came back with her arms full of clothes.

“You have some adorable outfits.” She gushed. “Your bed is amazing by the way.”
“You had better not have gone up there, Ginny!” Harry warned, not liking that someone, anyone, would go so close to his bed.

“No, I saw it from the lower level, but it looks awesome.”

Harry nodded at that and set to dressing his babies for the day, even if they’d have to be changed back into sleepwear in a few hours, Max taking the dirty nightdresses, bodysuits and socks to be hand washed.

His friends stayed for another hour, they talked about anything and everything, exams popped up and then Quidditch and Harry assured the Gryffindors that he would be playing in the match against Hufflepuff in March, in a little over two weeks’ time. He was greatly looking forward to it. He also assured them that he would do his best to play Ravenclaw in May as well and then the final in June, which would likely be Gryffindor versus Slytherin, as it usually was. Harry had missed the first Gryffindor versus Slytherin match which had been in November, when he had still been pregnant with the quintuplets; Blaise had had fun destroying the red and gold lions though. It had been a narrow victory for the Slytherins, who had won two hundred and ten to one hundred and eighty. Blaise’s first match as Captain since Urquhart had graduated.

Harry sighed as he said goodbye to his friends and went to sit on Nasta’s lap as Max hung the rung out clothes on the grate by the fire. Nasta’s arm slipped around his waist and held on as he finished his calculation before dropping his quill and giving him a kiss.

“Were you uncomfortable with them here?” Harry asked sadly.

Nasta shook his head. “No. I just have no idea what to say to school children.”

Harry laughed. “Me, Blaise and Draco are still in school too.”

“But you’re more mature because of the Dracken inheritance. Not to mention the six children.” Max pointed out as he walked around the table to make them some tea. “They were a bit immature, especially the younger girls. A guy can’t even sleep without giggling going on.”

“You were half naked.” Harry grinned.

“Only because Regan spit up on my shirt.” Max pouted as he handed out the tea cups.

Harry took a sip of the familiar sweet warmth of his honey tea and he sighed in happiness.
“I’ll tell you, this is the life. I don’t care how hard or stressful it gets, I meant it when I said that I wouldn’t change these last nineteen months for anything.”

Nasta nibbled his neck and squeezed his waist, but that’s all they had time for as Braiden called out for his ‘mama’ wanting some more attention.

Harry sighed and groaned as he got up to go and pick up a squalling Braiden to play with him and the three stuffed animals they kept at the bottom of his travel cot that Braiden enjoyed. He hadn’t been lying when he had said that the only time they got to have sex anymore was when the in-laws babysat.

The next few weeks turned into a nightmare as even more homework was piled on them as they came into March. Braiden turned seven months old; the quintuplets turned three months old and Harry started avoiding all meat. This sent him into a blind panic when he finally realised what he was doing and why and it took his mates several minutes to calm him down, thankful that they were in their private rooms and not in public.

“What the hell is the matter, Harry?” Blaise asked as Nasta finally managed to secure his teeth around the back of Harry’s neck, making his body go boneless as instinct took over and his Dracken released calming hormones into his blood as Nasta’s teeth sunk into the flesh at the back of his neck.

“I just realised, I don’t want meat.”

“So, don’t eat it.” Draco replied with a frown. “No one’s forcing you to eat it.”

“No, I don’t want any meat; I don’t even want it near me, that’s the sign of the fifth week of my heat cycle.”

That brought his mates up short.

“Are you sure?” Blaise asked softly.
Harry nodded. “I’ve been eating cereals, bread and rice all week and now I’ve realised that I don’t want any meat. I can’t be pregnant again, I can’t! What if it’s another set of quintuplets?!”

“Calm down, Harry, we’ll deal with it when we have to.” Nasta encouraged, helping him to slow his breathing. “There are still three more weeks of your cycle, then the heat period, do you know exactly what day your diet changed to include more cereals and grains and no meat?”

“I…I think it was last Tuesday.” Harry frowned. “I don’t know for sure, is it important?”

“We know you have eight week cycles.” Nasta told him. “You’re in your fifth week or thereabouts, knowing what day you went into your fifth week can help us pinpoint what day your heat period will hit, which will allow us to make preparations for the children to be away at that time.”

Harry nodded at the logic and he focused on breathing deeply and evenly, there was no guarantee that this would be a fertile heat, next to no Dracken had a fertile heat right after a dry spell, what were the chances that he’d be one of the few who did? So it was best to just calm himself down and not stress over it. His Dracken wouldn’t care if he wanted more babies or not, he would either have a dry heat or a fertile one, he’d have to deal with that when it came to it and until then, he’d carry on as normally as possible.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Sunday, March the eighth saw Harry waking up two hours early with pre-match nerves. He showered, dried and dressed himself in his Quidditch uniform before the first baby even stirred from sleep. He left the scarlet robe off for now.

He moved the sleeping babies one by one into the living room and tried not to think that he might have another one soon. Or another several, but he staved off that last thought viciously.

Harry fed the babies as they woke and eased them back to sleep, which was easier to do with the quintuplets than with Braiden, who refused to sleep and instead stayed awake with Harry to play with.

Harry kept himself focused on Braiden so that the nerves would ease off, they wouldn’t go completely until he was up in the air, but until then he could at least keep himself occupied with the extra time with Braiden.

Braiden excited Harry when they were playing on the floor together by getting onto his hands and knees, but he didn’t do anything other than bounce on his hands and knees making ‘ah, ah, ahhh’ noises, liking the way that his noises sounded as he bounced on his arms, before falling flat onto the padded duvet and giggling to himself.

Harry let out the breath that he hadn’t known he had been holding and he smiled softly and indulgently at his seven month old son who was rolling and squirming on the duvet in front of him.

Farren woke up and Harry changed him with an ease that came from changing about fifty nappies a day. Harry held Farren on his lap as he played with Braiden, who, at the moment, enjoyed throwing things. Not that they went very far, but sometimes they landed on Braiden’s leg or a foot, and sometimes, if a mate was sitting close by him, their legs.

Draco woke up first and he came to kiss him good morning, kissing Farren’s head and Braiden’s mouth as the little boy giggled on his belly.

“Do you want a cup of tea, Harry?”

“Please, Dray, if you don’t mind. I’m choking on nerves.”

“You’ll be completely fine, but for the sake of our sanity, please, no diving, no speeding, no stunts of any kind and no death defying tricks.”

“So I’ll just sit there in one spot, yes?” Harry asked with a grin.

“That’ll be for the best I think.” Draco nodded as he boiled the Muggle kettle for tea; he was getting so much more domesticated as the months passed.

Harry chuckled. “You just want Slytherin to win.”

“I don’t care about that any more, Harry, there are more important things now, like your health, so be careful.”

Harry nodded. “I will, but I can’t control the bludgers or the Beaters.”

Draco’s eyes flashed with both anger and worry, but he turned to fix the tea before Harry could call him on it. He let it go; all of his mates would be worried until the end of the match. He didn’t always get hurt in Quidditch matches, but everyone knew that Quidditch was a very dangerous game to play, so injuries were an almost certainty, for Seekers especially.

“Oh now who is this sexy man?” Max grinned, looking at Harry in his tight Quidditch leggings and vest.
“Come off it, Max.” Harry grinned.

“No I mean it, your arse looks fucking stunning in those skin tight leggings, sat there with the heels of your little feet pushing it up like an offering that I can’t resist, why don’t you wear them more often?”

“They’re my Quidditch ones.” Harry laughed.

“Then I’ll buy you a pair for everyday use.” Max nodded happily and sat behind Harry to pull him onto his lap.

“Ah ba!” Braiden frowned at Max as Harry was taken further away from him. “Mama, mama, maa maa!”

“Someone’s being a fussy boy.” Blaise said as he scooped Braiden up and kissed a chubby cheek.

“Mama! Mama! Mama!” Braiden chanted as he struggled in Blaise’s arms before he gave up and burst out crying; screaming his heart out and Harry was up and had Braiden in his arms, pacing the living room trying to shush him.

“What happened?” Nasta asked urgently, coming out of the bedroom, razor in hand, half shaved, his chin was bleeding down his neck.

“Braiden’s having a bit of separation anxiety. He doesn’t want to be away from Harry.” Blaise explained sadly as he watched Harry pace with their son, he went wide eyed when he looked over to Nasta and saw the blood.

“You’re bleeding, Nas.” Harry pointed out concernedly, even as he bumped Braiden to try and calm him.

“I heard Braiden scream and I lost focus for a moment and sliced my chin as I turned my head, it’s nothing.”
Draco went to the older man with a napkin and dabbed the cut gently, peering at it closely.

“It doesn’t seem too bad, just a nick.” He said concernedly even as he continued dabbing at the bleeding cut. “It’s not stopping, Max do you have anything for this?”

Max had gone immediately to his potions case as soon as he had seen the blood and he carefully threw a jar of paste at Draco, who unscrewed it, dipped his fingers into it and dabbed it on Nasta’s cut.

Nasta sucked in a breath and forced himself not to push Draco away as the paste stung and burnt.

Draco gave him a stern look and Nasta sighed, but he pulled Draco into a hug and kissed him regardless. He smiled at the love that he felt from these four men, the care they showed him just for a small shaving cut.

“Breakfast will be up in ten minutes guys!” Max called. “Harry, Braiden’s porridge is ready if he’s calm enough to eat it now.”

Harry nodded from where he was cradling a snuffling Braiden in his arms. Nasta went to finish shaving, this time without any more cuts and Max set out cups of tea and Blaise’s coffee, the only one he’d be able to have in Nasta’s presence, he’d have to sneak the all the other cups that he wanted.

Harry fed Braiden first, who was over his fit and was happily giggling and eating his spoons of porridge that Harry coaxed him to eat. When he was finished, Blaise tried to take Braiden away from Harry again, they waited with bated breath for the screaming to start again, but Braiden happily babbled to himself and tried to snatch Blaise’s hair and they all let out a breath and Harry turned to eat his own cooling breakfast.

At nine in the morning all six babies were bundled up in padded snow suits, hats, mittens, scarves, thick socks and wellies. Harry went for some last minute preparations with the team, leaving his four mates to fend for themselves against the female population of Hogwarts all clamouring to see the cute babies in their snow suits and the very gorgeous men holding them, of course seeing Draco Malfoy, the supposed epitome of cold, cool, calculating Pureblood, holding a three month old baby girl in a blinding white snowsuit with cute little teddies depicted on it might have been the clincher.

Harry, now dressed in the scarlet robes to match his socks, was warming up and running through tactics with Ginny, who he was positive that he was going to pass the Captaincy badge to after he had graduated, she thoroughly deserved it.
“Are you alright, Harry?” Demelza asked. “You look pale.”

“I feel a bit sick honestly.” He said, rubbing his belly. “Give me a moment.”

“I feel sick too, it’s normal right?” Pauley Hendix, their new permanent Keeper, said worriedly.

“Pre-match nerves are normal.” Ginny assured them all. “But Harry has been playing for seven years and he wasn’t this bad on his first match back in his first year. Are you alright?”

“I’m fine; I just…give me a minute.”

He went into the shower stalls and to the lone sink to splash some very cold water on his face. He didn’t know what was wrong, but he felt off. He had thought that these were just nerves, but he didn’t think that it was now; it was a different sort of feeling. He didn’t remember ever feeling like this during his last breeding cycle, but maybe it was because he’d had a dry spell and now he was going back into his cycle, he’d have to ask Nasta, but until then he’d have to suck it up.

“A bit.” Harry replied rubbing his belly.

“It’s not that illness that you had last year is it?” Dean asked.

“It might be. I’ll see Pomfrey soon, I’m sure the guys won’t let me do anything less once they hear that I’m feeling a bit odd.”

“Are you fit enough to play?”

“Sure. I’ll be fine. I’m just a bit queasy, it’s not like I’m throwing up.” Harry assured as he gathered his team around, smiled at them all before leading them out to the pitch.

The Hufflepuffs, in their canary yellow robes, were already in place, they were late, but Harry walked slowly and confidently, using the smirk that Draco was infamous for to intimidate his opponents.

Harry stood opposite the Hufflepuff Captain and Chaser, Zacharias Smith. Harry would not lose to this boy, he wouldn’t.

Harry was pleased to note that they hadn’t changed their Seeker, Summerby, who Harry was certain he could outfly, not that he was over confident, accidents and miracles happened, but he knew Summerby’s strengths and weaknesses and unless he had gotten in some serious practice since he had last played, then this match would go in Gryffindor’s favour.

“See something you like, Potter?” Smith smirked cockily. “Afraid that you’ve been so long out of the game, off having so many kids, that you won’t be able to beat us?”

Harry couldn’t help it. He laughed loud and hard and the smiles and smirks on the Hufflepuff teams faces slid away.

“I could beat you and your team in labour with decuplets. Don’t flatter yourself or your team, Smith. You’re not going to win here.”

“We’ll see about that!” Smith huffed, sounding like a wounded hippo as they were forced to shake hands.

Harry acted sportingly and offered his hand jovially, getting an approving nod from Madam Hooch, who scowled as Smith tried to break Harry’s fingers. Harry didn’t mind, he was wearing his spined Quidditch gloves, Smith couldn’t crush the steel spines enough to even get to his fingers.

“Mount your brooms.” Madam Hooch instructed, her whistle to her lips.

Harry straddled his broom and smirked wickedly at the Hufflepuffs across from him. He was still the only person in Hogwarts with a Firebolt; he’d be in the air before they could kick off from the floor.

Madam Hooch released the snitch and the bludgers, Harry didn’t take his eyes from the team in front of him, even as Summerby’s eyes tried to track the snitch restlessly. It was a fool’s errand, the snitch would be long gone by the time the game started and the mass of players kicked off.

“Take a long look, Summerby, it’s the only time you’ll see it today.” Harry smiled sweetly.

Ginny snorted off to his left and Harry chuckled. Madam Hooch threw the Quaffle into the air hard, blew her whistle hard and Harry was gone.

The wind through his hair, the height, the smell of the sharp air from this high up, it awakened him and he longed to fly with his wings instead.

Harry found his mates very quickly, his eyes just automatically slid to the four men with their laps full of babies. The nappy bag slung over Nasta’s shoulder was clearly visible from where he was and Harry saluted them with a wide grin, knowing that they could easily see him, before he darted off looking for the snitch, he had told Smith that the Hufflepuffs wouldn’t win and he’d meant it.

It took him five minutes to realise Hufflepuffs tactic and he snorted in disgust as he avoided another bludger. They were trying to incapacitate him; blocking him off, hitting every bludger they could at him to get him out of the game.

Harry let out a feral growl and rolled on his broom to avoid another bludger to the head…they were not relenting, not giving him any time to search for the snitch he realised as Summerby darted this way and that to find the snitch as Harry was forced to play ballerina in the air.

He was thankful to have such amazing Chasers though as Ginny, Dean and Demelza worked so well together that they were sixty points up in fifteen minutes, but it wasn’t enough, if Summerby found the snitch soon, then they would lose. He shot off; outstripping the bludger easily, but another one came flying at his head to replace it, he growled and dropped down several feet.

He weaved and then dived down to the ground below; he signalled time out to Madam Hooch, who blew her whistle with a sharp, shrill blast. Harry dodged the last bludger and landed under the Gryffindor bleachers.

“We need to free you up, Harry.” Ginny said as she landed.

Harry nodded. “I’m making myself feel sicker with all those rolls and loops, I can’t keep that up. I’m going to stay at game level and try to lead the bludgers into their own players. Jimmy, keep the bludgers away from Ginny, Dean and Demelza. Richie, try and keep them away from me.”

The two Beaters nodded at him.

“Pauley, you’re doing great, no scores at all, that’s impressive.”

“They’re focusing more on you, Capt.” Pauley grinned cheekily at him. “I’ve barely had a touch of the Quaffle yet.”

“What are their Chasers doing?” Harry frowned.
“Trying to block you off and cut you up so you’ll crash.” Ginny replied. “Pauley’s right, they’re focusing everything on you.”

“Oh, well in that case we’ll use a new tactic. Dean, Demelza, Ginny, you three keep doing your best, try and get over a hundred and fifty points and make them catching the snitch worthless. Pauley, use your head, your instincts and your manoeuvrability, do not concede any goals if it can at all be helped. We’ll beat them by default if I can’t shake the bludgers loose long enough to find the snitch. It’s not a solid plan and we’re relying a lot on chance here, guys, I will of course still try to get the snitch and avoid the bludgers long enough to catch it, but I don’t want to end up in the hospital wing during this match, the lovers would skin me alive and I won’t be able to play against Ravenclaw, so we’re giving our all in this match. We have two months before Ravenclaw, which leaves ample room for rest and recovery, so everything we have, guys. Let’s run these little canaries into the ground.”

“So you can have your decuplets in peace.” Ginny giggled.

Harry grinned back and winked.

“You’re not having decuplets are you?” Jimmy asked nervously.

“Of course not, would I be playing at all if there was even a hint of pregnancy? Not a chance in hell and that’s before the lovers had a say in it.”

“What are decuplets?” Pauley asked.

“Ten babies at once.” Harry said. “Thank god for that. I think I’d push my lovers off the Astronomy Tower one by one.”

“If it was me in your place it would have to be higher than the Astronomy Tower and the area below would have to have a pit of iron spikes and, just to be sure, fully grown Blast Ended Skrewts crawling around to devour the remains.” Ginny said forcefully.

“You know what to do then, Gin, keep your legs shut.” Harry winked and laughed as Ginny went red and tried to hit him.

“You cheeky snot, like you’re able to coach anyone on keeping their legs shut!”
“Ah, but I’m practically married, I’m allowed to spread my legs.”

“Maybe you two could have this conversation away from young ears.” Dean broke in, indicating the horrified faces of the little fourth year, Hendix and the equally pale faces of the fifth years.

“Ah, yes, sorry about that. Ginny and I get out of hand sometimes.” Harry cleared his throat embarrassedly and took a deep breath to focus himself once more.

“Are you ready to remount?” Madam Hooch crunched over snow to reach them.

“Yes, I think we are.” Harry replied, nodding to the woman, before turning back to his team. “We have a good chance at this, if they’ve changed their tactics, we will change accordingly, but if they keep to the same game plan, we’ll beat them on default points, a win is a win, no matter in what way.”

They restarted the game and his Chasers had taken his plan to heart, scoring goals past the poor Keeper in abandon, but the attacks on Harry had upped their ante too and he had no time to look for the snitch, but he was getting a lot of exercise, it was no wonder that his leg muscles were as toned as they were, well that and riding his mates like pogo sticks. Harry giggled to himself before a bludger almost taking off his face sobered him up sharpish.

‘Head in the game Harry! Focus!’ He thought to himself sternly.

“Another ten points to Gryffindor! These girls and guy are really going for it! They now lead Hufflepuff a hundred and twenty to absolutely zero! One must ask what Captain Zacharias Smith is thinking during this match, or if he’s even thinking at all!”

Harry grinned at that, but they weren’t out of the woods yet, if Summerby, who was zooming around like a blue arsed fly, caught the snitch now, then they would lose, they needed thirty more points just to break even and get a draw.

Richie came up beside him and smashed the bludger aimed at him back into the Hufflepuff Beater, giving Harry a few crucial moments to scan the pitch for a glint of gold. Nothing.

Harry was forced to move as a Hufflepuff Chaser tried to unseat him, illegally mind, but the whistle of Madam Hooch made Harry grin. She had seen it. Play stopped for a penalty, taken by their star Chaser Ginny, but she took her sweet time and Harry knew why as his eyes restlessly tracked the air for the snitch. He wasn’t allowed to move, but that didn’t mean that he couldn’t look.
Ginny scored bringing them up to one hundred and fifty to zero and Harry high fived Ginny as she passed, he hadn’t seen the snitch, but it was a good move on her part to dawdle, just long enough to give him time, but not long enough to give Hufflepuff a concession penalty for time wasting.

Harry zoomed off when play resumed and he stayed away from all yellow clad players and made sure to stay at odd angles from the Beaters. If the Hufflepuff team had clocked their tactic then they weren’t responding to it and if they hadn’t realised by now what they were doing, well that was just peachy.

Demelza got Gryffindor’s one hundred and sixtieth point and Harry grinned. He nodded to Pauley, who now knew that he had to maintain the gap as best as he possibly could. The young fourth year looked so determined that Harry had to smile in pride.

Harry kept away from the Beaters, avoided the bludgers like a pro and it was as he was laughing at Gryffindor’s one hundred and eightyieth goal that he saw it, a shimmer of gold, gone in an instant and Harry focused immediately, his smile gone, the seriousness and the need to catch the snitch blocking everything else out, the crowd, the commentator, the other players, even his own players, who were still scoring goals, there was nothing but him and that small golden ball as he speared after it with complete and utter concentration. A buzz of noise to his left saw him dipping down a few inches to avoid the bludger that was sent at him at the very last second, he zoomed wide around Smith, who had tried to cut him off from the path of the snitch, he ignored when Summerby joined him, he put on a spurt of speed and had to drop away again as a bludger almost took off his hand. He had meant it when he had said that he was not going to the hospital wing this match.

Avoiding another Hufflepuff player, who must have gotten in their own Seeker’s way of the snitch as well, Harry shot upwards when the snitch suddenly went upwards, it circled around the highest Ravenclaw bleachers, Harry following just behind it, avoiding yet another bludger sent his way. Harry mentally grinned when the snitch suddenly shot down again and Harry happily followed, dives were his speciality and he thrived on going straight down like a bullet. His hand closed around the snitch a foot from the ground, giving him plenty of time to pull out of the dive and scream his celebration with the Gryffindors, who had won three hundred and seventy points to absolutely nothing!

Zacharias looked so sour that Harry had to laugh. Harry would never have allowed that little snot to beat him and his team, especially with such an underhanded game play. Even despite their best efforts, Harry had still caught the snitch and he was unharmed to boot! He was very happy.

Harry met up with his red cheeked lovers and Blaise swung him around and kissed him, right there in the grounds of the castle with the entire student body floating about.

Harry laughed and kissed his mates happily before descending on his babies, kissing them and rubbing noses with them, listening to Braiden’s screeches of joy and seeing the gummy grins aimed at him by his quins.

“After party in the common room, Harry!” Ginny shouted as she rushed to him.
“I’ve had all the celebration I can take, Gin.”

“Are you still feeling sick?”

“What?” Nasta demanded immediately.

Harry glared at Ginny who grinned evilly back.

“Didn’t you know about Harry’s illness? He said something about decuplets.”

“Decuplets? Ten babies? But...Harry, you’re not pregnant are you?” Draco frowned.

“Of course not, you wouldn’t have been able to pay me to get on that broom if I had been pregnant. It’s something that I said to Smith before the match, that’s all.”

“What did you say?” Blaise asked interestedly.

“He said something about me being afraid to face Hufflepuff because I’d been out of the game for so long having so many babies that I knew I wouldn’t be able to beat them and I told him that I could beat their shitty team while in labour with decuplets.”

Draco snorted and Max laughed.

“That’s my fierce little lover.” The taller man grinned, ruffling Harry’s already windswept mess of hair.

“Though if any of you ever make me pregnant with decuplets then I’m going to take a leaf out of Ginny’s book and march you one by one off of the highest tower I can find onto a field of iron spikes and just to make sure that you’re all thoroughly dead, I’ll be sure to have a Manticore or two prowling around, okay?”
Nasta snorted softly in amusement. “Alright, Harry, but just so you know, no male submissive on record has ever had more than five in one go.”

“That’s not true.” Ginny frowned. “There was a male carrier in the papers just last month who had seven. He almost died and three of the seven babies didn’t make it, but he carried all seven to term.”

Harry looked to Nasta to see what he would say, because he couldn’t come out and tell Ginny, in such a public setting no less, that Harry was not a male carrier but they were all illegal creatures.

Thankfully he didn’t have to say anything as Hermione, Neville and Seamus converged on them, all grinning from ear to ear, and of course Dean wandered over in his scarlet robes, his grin a million watts.

“That was bloody fantastic!” Seamus exclaimed.

“Are you coming to the after party?” Neville asked Harry.

Harry shook his head. “I wasn’t feeling too well before the match and I’m not feeling any better after it, so I think I’m going to go lie down for a bit and maybe have some ginger or peppermint tea.”

“Oh, well if you feel better later, we’ll be celebrating this victory well into the night!” Seamus told him.

Harry grinned and savoured the euphoria while he could, the look on his mates’ pinched faces told him that he’d be paying a visit to the medi-witch and explaining why he hadn’t told them about his sickness before he had played his match against Hufflepuff. He wasn’t going to look forward to that talk, perhaps he should have gone to the after party after all.

Chapter End Notes

A/N: I have nothing against Hufflepuff; I just hate that little shit Smith. I hated him in the books and I hate him worse in fanfiction. So yeah, I had to do that, there was no stopping it and yes I know there is no Quidditch final at Hogwarts and that it’s on a points’ basis, but I wanted to do it this way instead.

I’m aiming to update again before Christmas, but if I don’t manage it, because things do pop up unfortunately, Merry Christmas to all of those who celebrate it and I hope that no matter who you are, where you are or what you believe in, that you are safe and happy this time of the year, because it is cold, it is dangerous and things do happen, so take care and thank you for reading and reviewing,

Chapter Sixty-Five - Choleric

Harry sat on the hospital bed and sighed unhappily as he was poked and prodded by Madam Pomfrey’s wand. So much for not ending up in the hospital wing after the match.

He’d had the whole, why didn’t you tell us you were sick talk, but as he had pointed out he hadn’t really realised that he was sick until he was in the locker room, he had thought it was just pre-match nerves, so thankfully he had been let off from the whole not telling his mates every detail of his body motions issue.

“From what I can tell it’s hormonal.” Madam Pomfrey told him and Harry let out a relieved breath that it wasn’t anything more serious. “Are you going into your breeding cycle, Harry?”

“I’m in the fifth week of it.” Harry agreed. “Only three weeks more before I go onto my heat period.”

“Alright then, your body is producing high levels of different hormones, which is making you feel nauseous, I suggest some light food, some ginger tea and some rest and you should feel better as soon as your hormone levels even out.”

“Okay, thank you, Madam Pomfrey.” Harry said happily as he scooted off of the bed and took hold of his baby Calix, who looked so adorable in his little padded snow suit.

“It’s my pleasure, Harry. Don’t forget, if you’re pregnant again, come to me and I’ll help you once
Harry nodded and he smiled, thanked her once again before taking Blaise’s hand and walking back to his rooms to rest up a bit, there was nothing really that could be done for hormonal issues, he’d have to wait it out as his body once again filled with hormones to make him fertile, though he hoped that it took longer than three weeks, he was still praying for a dry heat.

Once they got back to their rooms, Harry collapsed onto the settee and bent down to untie his Quidditch boots, Max beat him to it and treated him to a foot massage as well.

“Oh you are so well trained.” Harry teased as he lay back and let Max work his magic, allowing Blaise to take Calix from him to take off the snow suit now that they were back indoors.

Max chuckled. “I just like touching you, if you ever need a naked bum massage, please don’t hesitate to ask.”

Harry laughed and bumped Max’s chin with his bare toes, which were caught in Max’s mouth and sucked. Harry moaned.

“Oh don’t do that, I’m sick, do you know how horrible it is to be hard and sick?”

Max licked over the sole of his foot and Harry giggled as it tickled him and made him squirm, but Max held his ankle and licked over the sensitive side of his foot to the top and Harry went from giggling to moaning again.

“Nas! Make him stop! I’m hormonally ill!”

“Max.” Nasta warned from where he was taking the babies out of their snow suits with Blaise.

Max looked at him evilly and nibbled on his foot and Harry gasped. Draco wrapped arms around Max’s shoulders and dragged him away from Harry, or tried to, because Max still had hold of Harry’s ankle, so Harry ended up being dragged off the settee and onto the floor with a bump.

“Nasta!” Harry cried out.
“You salacious beast, leave the boy alone.” Nasta came and clipped Max upside the head, picked Harry up and settled him back down on the settee and tucked him up with a blanket.

“Harry should have a bath before he settles down.” Draco said as he looked to the still red cheeks and the visible grime and it made Harry feel like the blond could see the cooling, gelling sweat on his clothed back.

“Can you run him a bath please, Draco?” Nasta asked as he tried to undress a squalling Tegan, who really did hate being out of her clothes. “Oh please baby girl, just stay still and silent for a minute!” He pleaded with his daughter, who thrashed all the more.

Regan on the other hand was screaming and crying for Blaise, who was trying to re-dress the boy in warm clothing, but Regan was happy to be in just his bodysuit, no matter the weather, and he thrashed and squirmed every time Blaise tried to get the little jumper or trousers on him.

Harry just about pissed himself laughing as he watched his mates try to dress the two from the settee.

“Why don’t you try getting his head through first, Blaise?” He coached. “Nas, take her legs out first or you’ll be there all day.”

“If you think you can do it better come and do it! Otherwise shut up.” Blaise hissed frustrated as he tried to get Regan’s legs into his little trousers.

Harry chuckled and stood up, he pushed Blaise away and dressed a screaming Regan quickly, leaving his son to wriggle and writhe as he got used to the clothing covering him once more.

“There, that is how you dress him.”

Harry moved over and pushed Nasta away from Tegan, whose cries had picked up pitch and pace. He put her arms back into the snowsuit and she sniffled, thinking that she had won the battle, until Harry took out her legs and she started back up her screaming, but Harry sat her up and the suit slipped off easily, Harry merely pulling each of the sleeves in turn until her arms just fell out of the suit.

He dressed her as quickly as he could and presented Nasta with his dressed, sniffling daughter.

“That is how you handle the twin terrors. Next time listen to me because I know what I’m talking about.”
“Your bath is ready, Harry.” Draco called.

Harry happily went into the bathroom and he locked the door behind him with Draco still in the room, who looked at him strangely.

“I’ve missed bathing with you.” He smiled. “Join me?”

Draco grinned. “You know I won’t say no to such an offer.”

Harry grinned and went to Draco, they kissed and Harry happily allowed Draco to undress him from his tight, cold, dirty Quidditch uniform.

Draco helped him into the bath and Harry groaned at the feel of the warm water lapping at his cold body.

“I didn’t realise how cold I was.” He said softly.

Draco stripped himself, which admittedly made Harry feel hotter than the water had and he slipped into the water himself. Harry immediately went to him and wrapped arms around his waist.

“I love this bath.”

“It’s more like a swimming pool.” Draco smiled as he wrapped Harry up and softly rubbed his back with his hands.

“I still love it. I love it even more with a naked you in it.” Harry grinned.

Draco held Harry close and let the warm water relax and sooth them both. He lowered his hands to the water before pulling them back out and trickling the water over Harry’s narrow shoulders and down his back.

Harry moaned lightly, resting his head back on Draco’s chest as Draco continued to trail water over his back and shoulders, getting rid of the surface grime and sweat.

Harry giggled when Draco’s hands smoothed water over his sides, making him squirm as he was Draco chuckled at him before reaching for the body wash that he had put in reach when he had run the bath. He lathered a good handful of it up in his hands before pampering Harry by washing his aching back.

“Do you still feel sick?”

“No, I feel loved, comforted and cared for. I love you.”

Draco smirked as he nosed around Harry’s hairline, kissing his forehead as he continued to wash Harry’s back, shoulders and upper arms.

Draco went on to wash Harry’s front, making Harry whine at the loss of contact and support, before the blond sat him up on the side of the bath to do his lower back, abdomen, hips, legs and feet, Harry practically purring under his hands.

“You’re like a contented cat.” He laughed as he pulled Harry carefully back into the bath to wash the soap from him, dipping his head under and getting some shampoo onto his hands, scrubbing his scalp to clean his hair. “You need a haircut too.”

Harry shook his head. “I don’t. I like my hair.”

“You look as bad as you did in fourth year.”

“What was wrong with me in fourth year?” Harry asked with a glare.

“Your hair was very long in fourth year.” Draco replied diplomatically as he massaged his scalp, distracting Harry from the conversation.

“Oh that’s sooo good.” Harry moaned.

Draco slowly lowered Harry’s head into the water and washed off the shampoo before grabbing the conditioner.
“Must you use that as well?” Harry whined. “My hair’s already clean.”

“Do you want another head massage?” Draco smirked as Harry immediately brightened.

“Ooo, yes!”

Draco used his nimble fingers to smooth the conditioner into Harry’s hair, raising goosebumps up on Harry’s arms and neck as he massaged his scalp once more. He grabbed the wide toothed comb and pulled it through Harry’s hair, getting rid of the few knots and tangles before he ducked Harry’s head back under the water and he scrubbed out the conditioner.

“Are you feeling better?”

“Much.”

Harry took pleasure in returning the favour, even though Draco told him that he didn’t have to, even as he moaned under Harry’s fingers washing his back.

“Are you two done yet?” Max demanded as he banged on the bathroom door just as Harry finished doing Draco’s hair. “I’ve needed to piss for an hour and a half! What have you been doing in there for two hours?!”

Harry giggled as he let Draco pull him out of the water and wrap him in a towel.

“Don’t give me any shit about having sex either; I can smell that you haven’t been naughty!”

“We’ve been bathing!” Harry chuckled.

“For two hours?!” Max demanded. “Oh hurry up! My bladder is going to burst!”

Draco dried himself off, rubbed Harry dry, before unlocking the bathroom door and almost being bowled over by Max as he rushed in to relieve himself with a happy groan.
Harry laughed all the way to the wardrobe and he let Draco dress him warmly, but tastefully. They walked arm in arm into the living room to find Blaise in a very interesting game with Braiden. It looked like Blaise was mimicking Braiden, who was thoroughly enjoying the game as he was back on his hands and knees bouncing and making noises, Blaise copying him while Nasta laughed openly from the settee.

Harry went to his quins and he picked up Leolin, holding him close and trying to ignore his panic as he knew his baby weighed far too little and he brushed off the insane urge to force feed Leolin until he gained some weight. It was a ridiculous thought and it would damage his son, but it took a while for him to clear his head of such thoughts.

He sat next to Nasta as Draco sat by the coffee table, dragged his book satchel over to himself and took out his homework, chuckling as Blaise encouraged Braiden to move and speak by copying him, encouraging him to make new, more complex sounds so he could watch his Daddy Blaise copy him.

Max came back into the living room looking almost orgasmically happy and it made Harry laugh all over again.

“He was dancing almost as bad as Sanex at the meeting a few years ago when he got paralytic on whiskey shots.”

“I wasn’t that bad. Sanex’s dancing would have put shame to a scarecrow caught in a hurricane.”

“Oh yeah, it was hilarious.”

Max then did a boneless move with his body that looked like he was falling and trying to catch himself whilst simultaneously hopping on one foot and waving his limbs around.

Nasta started laughing at that and held his stomach with both hands.

“Please tell me Sanex doesn’t dance like that.” Draco pleaded.

“He really does.” Nasta said happily as he picked up Leolin from Harry’s arms and cwtched him tightly.

Blaise fell onto his belly and laughed at the stricken look on Draco’s face, Braiden copied him and their son giggled and shrieked.
“I wish I had a camcorder.”

“Oh please, there would be a few funny home videos on it, a few videos of the babies; the rest would be homemade porn.” Max scoffed.

“You object to that, why?” Harry asked seriously and Max stopped himself short and frowned.

“You don’t want to shoot a sex video do you?” Nasta asked.

“What’s a video? Who’s going to shoot who?” Draco asked confusedly, his blond eyebrows pulled into a thin line over his nose.

“A video is like a moving photograph, only it can last for as long as you film it for.” Harry explained. “So instead of the video looping around like the photograph, it carries on until you stop it. Or until it runs out of tape, but they hardly ever run out of tape anyway, I mean, who films something for longer than four hours?”

“We would if we filmed a heat period.”

Harry grinned wolfishly.

“We are not filming the heat cycle; imagine if Sanex or Caesar found it? Those two get into everything.” Nasta told them.

“We could ward it.” Harry suggested.

“We are not filming us having sex.” Nasta said stubbornly.

Harry pouted, but he sighed. “We don’t have a camcorder anyway.”

“We can pretend we’re on camera though.” Max grinned. “I’m up for anything; if you want to pretend we’re porn stars, filming a movie together, then we can do that.”

“Have I told you recently that I love you very much?” Harry grinned back.

“When did you get so kinky?” Blaise asked from the floor, where Braiden was chewing on the sleeve of his robe, biting at the cuff button with his four front teeth.

“What are you talking about? I’ve always been kinky.” Harry laughed to himself as he thought about the box that he had stowed away in the bedside cabinet. “Or do you not remember the skirt? Or the toys for that matter? Do I need to remind you?”

“You have more?” Draco asked, his voice striving for nonchalance, but it held a breathless quality to it.

Harry winked. “Much, much more.”

“I catalogued the entire contents of that box, they were mainly toys.” Max told him, as if he didn’t already know.

“I also looked in the box; the only clothing in it was the skirt and the matching panties.” Blaise informed him.

Harry grinned a secret grin. “Well if you don’t believe me, then maybe I should show you? We’re not doing anything for the rest of the day.”

His mates swallowed and Harry stood up and stretched, moving to the bedroom and dodging out of reach of Max as his biggest mate went to grab him. Harry ran to the bedroom and warded the door behind him. He laughed loudly so that they would hear him as he got the new box out and rummaged through it, wondering what he should wear for them. It was true that the first box had been nearly all toys, but this box was all fetish wear and indecently short and skimpy clothes.

He pulled out the blue skirt and the matching blue heels that were just his size, he’d have to practice with them a bit first, he hadn’t exactly made it a point to learn how to walk in heels before.

He stripped himself and pulled on the dark blue skirt, happy to note that it came with a matching pair of blue panties, just like his beloved red skirt had. He wanted to wear the collar, but it was only March and it wasn’t all that warm, he’d wait until it was warmer before wearing it, which left him the option of finding a blue tee-shirt or jumper, or wearing the white corset, which he was very sure he could change to match the skirt.

Harry fingered his wand and licked his lips, ignoring the pleading from the living room as he touched the skirt with a short jab and then the white corset, which dyed itself dark blue in seconds to perfectly match the skirt.

It had a tie cord back, but thankfully it also had a zip up front so he was able to get into it himself and adjust it himself. He picked up the heels and went into the bathroom to look in the mirror and he barely recognised himself as he stared into the reflective glass.

“Holy fuck.” He breathed as he fingered the skirt and corset.

He had to laugh, he really did, the dark shade of the blue really suited him, offsetting the darkness of his hair, he had thought that maybe the colour would clash with his eyes, but it didn’t, it made them seem darker, but didn’t clash at all.

Harry slipped carefully into the heels, the last thing that he wanted was a broken ankle, but thankfully the heel on them was quite short and chunky, easy and quite comfortable to walk in really as he practised walking in a line. It made him walk funny though, it gave his hips a natural sway that if he hadn’t been wearing heels, he’d have to consciously do to achieve.

He felt a small amount of nerves, but nowhere near the level of when he had first slipped into his red skirt, he knew his mates better now, he had been with them for longer and he knew how they would react.

He laughed manically as he walked slowly back into the bedroom. He’d be fine as long as he walked slowly.

“That does not sound good.” Someone next door said, he thought it might have been Draco, but he couldn’t tell through the wall.

“Please come out, Harry, we can talk about this, we’re rational adults.” Max pleaded.

“You want me to come out?” Harry said blandly.

“Yes, we can talk about this, you don’t have to dress up, we believe you. Please come out.”

“Okay.” Harry grinned as he unwarded the room and opened the door, the triumphant smile on Max’s handsome face faded; his eyes glued to Harry’s body, travelling down to rest and remain on his high heel clad feet. A shiver went through his large body and a hand almost subconsciously drifted to press against the front of his jeans.
Harry looked to his other mates, Blaise lying on the floor, his mouth parted and his eyes wide. Draco had snapped his best quill, ink staining his hand black as he stared unblinkingly at the corset and Nasta looked to be controlling the urge to devour him with his mouth, his strong tongue peeking out to wet his lips before his teeth bit into his bottom lip, tugging at it. Nasta had always had a mouth and teeth fetish.

Harry walked to Max, who was standing the closest to him, having been the one to hammer on the door and plead with him through it. He made sure the skirt brushed his hand and pressed the corset into his chest so that he could feel the bones going through it.

Max swallowed heavily and painfully as his hands rose to grip Harry’s waist tightly through the corset, almost like he just couldn’t help himself and he breathed out on a shudder, squeezing and rubbing the corset through his fingers.

One hand rose lightning fast to grip the back of his neck, fingers gripping his hair and Max pulled him into a dominating, lusty kiss that had Harry gasping and arching into as his mouth and tongue were taken over, he didn’t even have a chance to reciprocate as Max tried to suffocate him with his tongue, yanking on his hair until he cried out, not entirely from pain either as he held tightly to Max’s broad shoulders, reaching them easier with the added inches from the heels and he dug his nails into Max’s jumper.

More hands on him, caressing his bare legs and Harry looked down into the lust blown indigo eyes of Blaise, who had crawled to him over the floor and was now poking a tongue out and that tongue was licking his legs, trailing up and up until it reached the edge of the lacy panties that he had on under his skirt. Harry made a small, helpless sound as that tongue moved around to the front of his panties and the hard line of himself that was tucked under the skirt.

Harry’s mouth was seized in another of Max’s kisses and Harry couldn’t not close his eyes as his body was savaged by pleasure. A rock hard body pressed against his back and a mouth nipped at his neck and he opened his eyes to see Draco standing beside him, he could feel Nasta behind him.

“You’re so naughty.” Nasta hissed into his ear and it let Harry know that Nasta was not as composed as perhaps he could have been. His feral side had come out to play.

“What are you going to do about it?” Harry challenged and with a snarl, Nasta spun him around and looked at him through heavy eyes that were dark brown with just a hint of dark gold.

“You are my submissive. Mine!” Nasta said firmly.

Harry nodded. “Yes I am.”

Nasta blinked, seemingly thrown off by his acceptance as if perhaps he had been expecting Harry to deny it. He recovered quickly though and Harry saw a flash of teeth, just before he was arching in pleasure as Nasta bit into his neck, suckling at his skin to create a bruise.

“Oh! Oh, Nasta!” Harry moaned softly, his body quaking as he gripped his hands into Nasta’s hair tightly and pulled.

Blaise caressed his one leg, still licking at the front of him, Max clenched large hands around his waist, tongue flicking over the back of his neck and Draco nibbled an ear as Nasta plundered his mouth.

He couldn’t breathe, couldn’t see or hear anything past his mates, he could smell them, smell their arousal as they pressed and nudged themselves against him and then it was over. They all stopped and breathed out heavily, disappointedly and Harry found out why when he focused on his surroundings. All he could hear was a baby crying.

He dropped his head into his chest and he almost cried himself. He had been so close! Draco went and picked up Calix and checked him, frowning.

“It’s nowhere near time for his bottle and he’s not wet.” Draco told them, patting Calix’s dry nappy and then all thoughts of sex and naughtiness flew out of the window as Harry took Calix from Draco and checked him himself, sniffing at his skin and licking at his tears, trying to find something that would have made Calix cry.

Harry peeled the nappy from Calix and he sighed heavily at the redness on his bottom. He had a rash again.

“Max, please go and get his cream. The rash is back.”

“Of all the times for it to come back.” Max sighed as he went to get the Sudocrem cream.

Harry threw the nappy away and laid Calix on his belly, over his legs, making sure that his knees supported his head and neck and that there was no pressure on Calix’s bottom as he refrained from touching the redness, even though he wanted to. It would do no good.

Max brought the cream over and sat next to him, twisting open the tub and dipping his fingers inside, before spreading the cream over Calix’s bum gently. Calix cooed softly and it made Harry smile.

“I wish he didn’t have such sensitive skin.”
“You’d think it would be Leolin who would be more prone to nappy rash, not Calix.”

“Calix is a soft baby though.” Draco said. “His skin is almost as fair as mine and my Mother told me that I suffered terribly with nappy rash too.”

Calix was happy as soon as the ache was eased away by the local anaesthetic in the cream and he enjoyed very much being fussed over by all five of them and he showed it by moving his arms around and screeching happily, making them all laugh and pay attention to him.

“Mama.” Braiden called out from his travel cot, where Blaise had put him before crawling to Harry in his skirt.

Nasta went and took Braiden from the cot and brought him over to Harry, who hugged his oldest child tightly.

“I love you, Braiden.” Harry told him softly, kissing his little mouth.

Braiden giggled and Harry sat him next to him, holding him upright with one arm around his back, his other hand hovering over Calix on his legs.

“Who’s such a big boy, sitting up like an adult?” Max cooed to Braiden, who patted his own legs with a wide grin and a huffy giggle. “I think it’s you! I think it’s you!” Max wormed a finger into Braiden’s collar and tickled the juncture between his neck and shoulder, making Braiden squirm and laugh, cocking his head to one side to trap Max’s finger, drool running down his chin.

Harry could help but laugh at them both and dutifully got out a soft cloth to wipe Braiden’s chin and mouth, careful not to disturb Calix, whose bottom was getting some much needed air as the cream was slowly absorbed into his skin, fighting the rash and any infections.

“How you want to go and get changed, Harry?” Nasta asked him casually.

Harry chuckled deeply, evilly. “No I don’t, you can't get off that easily.”

As all four of his mates groaned, Harry practically cackled, Braiden joining in on his Mummy’s
Harry had teased his mates all day, going about his usual daily routine as he normally did, only today he was wearing a skirt, a corset and a pair of blue high heels, which were awkward to walk in, especially when he forgot that he was wearing them and twisted an ankle on them.

Their eyes followed him, they groaned when he bent over, they were riveted when he sat on the floor with his legs spread to play with a baby between his knees and they were transfixed when he went onto his knees at the coffee table to do some homework.

He could see they were achingly hard by the way they stretched their jeans or trouser fronts, by the almost subconscious way they adjusted and readjusted themselves throughout the day, how they pressed the heels of their palms to their bulges. It gave him a sexual thrill to know that he was the cause of their discomfort. That he was the cause of them being so hard and uncomfortable, it was a sadistic pleasure and Harry enjoyed it very much.

He ate in his skirt and corset, played and fed and changed his children in it, helped Max clean up the kitchen, cuddled with Draco and Blaise in it, did his homework in it and put his children to bed in it and when ten O’clock at night rolled around and the last feed had been done, the last nappy had been changed and all six babies were down for the night, Harry very happily allowed his mates to grope him, Draco’s hand went right into the lacy panties and squeezed tight around him, sending Harry to his knees.

“Oh Draco, you’re being naughty.” Max grinned, pulling Draco away from Harry and falling back onto the settee, pulling Draco over his knees on his back. “I think you need a taste of your own medicine.” Max said as he pushed his own hand down Draco’s trousers and squeezed him vice tight.

Draco’s back curved around Max’s knees and he moaned loudly, his eyes fluttering under the onslaught.

“Oh you like that do you, Draco?” Max purred deeply, hitting Draco hard and causing Draco to make that noise once more, his hips twitching in Max’s lap.

Harry sat and he watched, his teeth biting into his lip, breathing heavily as Max spanked Draco, who was getting increasingly aroused as his bum went from smooth, pale white to a harsh pink, until it finally went red, an achievement for Draco’s fair complexion.

“That’s enough.” Nasta heaved, his eyes dilated and his fists clenched, but he was serious. “Draco won’t be able to sit right for a week if you carry on. Enough, Max.”

“Or what?” Max growled deeply.

Nasta reacted to the challenge instinctively, knocking Max flying, Draco fell harmlessly to the floor. Harry was pulled behind Blaise and it was then that he realised that Max and Nasta were really fighting, not play fighting or foreplay fighting, but actually going at one another.

“Stop it! Stop it!” He shouted at them, trying to move to get in between them, but Blaise held him tightly, shielding him with his own body and then Draco was there, helping Blaise hold him in place, helping to shield him as Nasta threw Max clear across the room and stalked after him.

“Please stop.” Harry begged.

“They won’t stop until dominance is established once again, mio amore.” Blaise told him, petting his hair to try and soothe him.

“Why are they fighting?”

“Max challenged Nasta’s authority.” Draco explained.

“I was looking forward to tonight.” Harry whispered.

“All of us were, but Max spoilt it by challenging Nasta, probably because he was so into spanking Draco that he took leave of his sense.” Blaise explained and Draco flushed a light pink.

“Since when does Max have sense when something remotely sexual is near him?” Draco said back with a sniff.

Max fought back viciously, but once again Nasta was solid and strong and he beat Max back every time the larger man tried to pin him or incapacitate him. Harry begged them to stop, but neither could hear him as they immersed themselves in the fight for dominance that took precedent over everything else.

Harry gave up trying to stop them from fighting each other as the fight took a very violent turn and blood was spilt. He buried his head in Blaise’s chest and he sobbed, hoping that it was over soon. If he could have interjected then he would have and he’d have beaten the sense back into the both of them, but he couldn’t, no subordinate dominant or submissive or any other person, Dracken or otherwise, could interfere with a dominance battle, definitely not for the top place either.

It took what felt like hours before with a sickening crack, Nasta pinned Max’s arm awkwardly behind his back and sunk his teeth into his already bleeding neck where fangs had scraped but not taken hold.

The fight was over for Max and Nasta, but Harry turned from Blaise, his eyes spitting fire as he hit the both of them upside the head. It was his turn now and he’d damn well make them listen to him.

“What the fuck do you think you’re doing?!?” He screamed. “Look at what you’ve done!”

Harry indicated the damage they had done to themselves and the blood spattered, completely wrecked room. Harry kicked the remains of Braiden’s travel cot and he felt his Dracken take over in a burst of blood and rage.

“My baby was sleeping in this cot not an hour ago! Look at what you’ve done to our rooms, we live here! This is not a fighting arena!” He shouted, his voice becoming deeper and reverberating with the edge of a snarl as he fought off the desire to bite and tear into them both. “I told you a year ago that if you wanted to fight like barbarians to do it outside! Away from me and my babies! How dare you do this with our children in the next fucking room!”

Harry breathed deeply and snatched his arm away when Draco tried to hold him. He was shaking with adrenaline and suppressed rage and he couldn’t think right, he couldn’t stand to be here any longer.

“I’m going to bed. This room had better be perfect when I wake up, everything broken will be replaced and not so much as a fucking smudge! I don’t want any of you near me tonight.” He said deadly softly before turning and storming into the bedroom. He resisted the urge to slam the door shut. He was angry at them, but that was no reason to startle his babies awake and make them frightened and upset.

Harry breathed heavily and deeply, before warding the room to stop his mates from getting in. He knew logically that Draco and Blaise had had nothing to do with the fight and that really Max and Nasta couldn’t have helped it once the challenged was inadvertently issued, but he couldn’t get the image of the mangled cot from his mind, Braiden’s cot. The very same cot that his baby had been in an hour before the fight had started. He swallowed the urge to go back out into the living room and bite his way through their soft, tender stomachs. He couldn’t be near them right now, but he needed to be with his babies.

So his dominants could stay out in the wrecked room and fix it and he would calm himself down and spend the night reaffirming that his children were alive and well. Hopefully by tomorrow everything would be sorted and they could move on.

Harry unzipped the corset and let it fall to the floor, he slipped off the skirt and panties together and kicked off the heels, he stomped naked to the small dresser under the stairs that led up to their bed and he pulled out a pair of his own pyjamas for the first time since he’d been mated. He usually slept naked, but that was when he had four other men in the bed with him to keep him warm, or failing that he just wore one of Max’s shirts, but he didn’t want anything to do with them tonight, so he pulled out a pair of his own pyjamas and dressed angrily. He finished before moving over to the solid wooden cot beside the purple, almost square, settee and he touched Braiden’s sleeping head, smoothing the thick, black hair from his little face and caressing the tiny fist.

To think that Braiden might have been caught up in the middle of that fight, that any of his babies could have been put in harm’s way.

Harry was in full Dracken form, halfway to the living room door before he even realised it and he stopped himself, breathed deeply and used every ounce of will power he had left to retract his claws and fangs, the wings would not budge.

He breathed in deeply and forced himself away from the door, away from Braiden and instead he went up the stairs, climbing them all the way to the top, and he looked into the bassinets, where his five tiny babies lay sleeping. Harry touched and kissed them and he stood across from the bed, leaning on the balcony and glaring at the door that was ten feet below him. His hands formed fists and his nail beds itched to release his claws once more, but sucking in a huge breath, Harry held it for as long as he could before exhaling. He turned his back on the banister, on the door, and by extension his mates and he climbed into the huge bed, being mindful of his bulky wings which were tucked up to his spine, but would not retract, no matter how much he tried to get them to disappear under his skin. He burrowed under the duvet and rested his head on one of the six pillows at the top. Draco was the awkward one who had to have two pillows to rest his head on before he could sleep, the rest of them were fine with one.

Harry stubbornly pushed away that thought, forced all thoughts of his mates away and he stubbornly closed his eyes so that he wouldn’t see Max’s book on the bedside table in front of him, Blaise’s spare tie strewn over the top of it where he had discarded it days before. He didn’t want to think about them, he didn’t want to tempt himself into hurting them. He loved them, he did, but at this very moment he hated them, he could have killed them and he didn’t want to. He just hoped that come tomorrow he was calmer, otherwise he didn’t know what would happen or what he would do.
A/N: Well, this is the last update before Christmas, so I can happily say Merry Christmas to whomever celebrates it! I’ll be back in a few weeks, perhaps just after New Year.
I hope you’ve all enjoyed reading this story and that you’re all safe and happy, whether you celebrate Christmas or not.

Merry Christmas to all of you lovelies, I’ll be back in the new year. Love you all loads,

Harry determinedly pushed away that thought, forced all thoughts of his mates away and he stubbornly closed his eyes so that he wouldn’t see Max’s book on the bedside table in front of him, Blaise’s spare tie strewn over the top of it where he had discarded it days before. Chapter Sixty-Six – Accidents Happen

Blaise yawned once again, before standing up straight and stretching his back. He was very tired, but with Harry being so very unhappy and angry, plus the bedroom being solidly warded, he wasn’t likely to get much sleep tonight, even though he hadn’t done anything besides trying to keep Harry safe during the fight.

He sighed again and looked to Max and Nasta, who were very sad and upset with themselves, even though their instincts had demanded that they fight and there was really nothing that they could have done to prevent the fight, but they all knew they could have fought outside of the school in the grounds and not inside it with the school children, or in their living quarters, where their submissive and six young babies were.

They were cleaning the nearly destroyed living room, which was taking a lot of work, Braiden’s cot was going to have to be fully replaced as it was beyond repair, one settee was going to have to be replaced and with the shattered glass coffee table, which was irreparable, they didn’t know if the carpet should be ripped up and replaced too, though they would likely decide to replace it because it would take a long time to get the numerous blood stains out of it and just in case any glass fragments were embedded in it from the smashed coffee table. Harry really would never forgive them if a baby got cut on a shard of glass as a result of the fight.

“We’ll have to take a Portkey to Australia to get everything we need.” Nasta said softly. “Nowhere in Britain will be open at this time of night.”

“Apparation will be quicker.” Max replied.
“It’s too dangerous, Max. It’s very long distance and we’re all tired.” Nasta answered.

The two were treading around one another very carefully. They would have been fine if Harry hadn’t have reacted so very terribly to their fight. If only the cot hadn’t have been damaged everything would have been fine and he’d be in bed with Harry right now sleeping.

“We had best leave now then if we have any hope of getting this done by morning.” Draco said distantly. He blamed Max and Nasta for ruining their evening and causing Harry distress and upset.

Blaise didn’t blame either of them, not really. He had been a Dracken for longer, he had grown up knowing about the instincts and the random fights that could happen for the most random of reasons. He knew that it couldn’t have been helped once Max had issued the challenge to Nasta. Nasta had had to answer that challenge or lose his place as the top dominant of their mateship, his Dracken couldn’t not fight once the challenge had been issued to him, but they really could have gone about it better.

Blaise looked around at the ruined room, which was looking slightly better than it had a few hours ago and he wondered that even if they worked their fingers to the bone if they would finish it by Harry’s morning deadline. There was just so much to do.

“Come on, Blaise.” Max called to him and Blaise left the room and readied himself to face the Headmaster to get a Portkey to Australia and to explain exactly why they needed a Portkey to Australia at one in the morning in the first place. This was not going to be a fun visit.

-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------X

Harry woke up confused and unrested. It took all of two moments to realise what had woken him as he rolled over in the dark to scoop up Farren, his chunky baby.

He was confused for a moment as to why his bed was empty except for himself and then it all came flooding back to him and he swallowed a snarl. The anger had not abated in the slightest during his short time sleeping.

He padded down the stairs and unwarded the door automatically; he went into the living room to find it half cleaned and his mates missing. It was for the best really, he didn’t really want to see them, let alone talk to them or hear any begging or apologies, he was still too angry to hear such things at the moment.

Harry made up seven bottles and he carried them and Farren back into the bedroom and he recast the ward on the room before his mates came back. He wanted to be alone with his babies.

He sat on the purple settee and he fed Farren, who suckled strongly and quickly. It made Harry smile and think about something other than his anger at his lovers.
Doing the night feed on his own drained him, he thanked god that Braiden didn’t wake up and was happy to continue sleeping through the night, even if it did mean that he wasted a bottle, but even then doing all five quins was taxing and it was another hour and a half before he was curling back up in the bed and drifting off to sleep once more, praying silently that a baby didn’t need a change before six in the morning when they would all wake back up for another feed. Except for Leolin, who would actually wake up in just two hours for another feed, but he never ate much and Harry would probably forget that he had even been awake at four, but if he was forced to stay awake any longer by another baby needing his attention, then he would feel so much worse for it in the morning.

Draco rubbed his itchy eyes tiredly. They couldn’t find anything even remotely resembling the furniture that they had once had and Max was stressing about it, thinking that if everything wasn’t exactly the same that Harry wouldn’t forgive them.

They had found a carpet that was near enough the same colour, but it was softer, thicker, which Draco really didn’t think would upset Harry at all. He had picked out a wooden table with rounded edges, it looked good and it was practical too as Braiden was sure to be mobile sooner rather than later, and the fact that it wasn’t glass topped was sure to win Harry over after the last one had been destroyed.

They had bought two new settees as, even though they had only destroyed the one, Draco could not abide living anywhere that had mismatched furniture, so the remaining settee would be thrown out as well, even though there was nothing really wrong with it despite all of the times that they had had sex upon it.

It was the cot that was causing the most arguments, because they couldn’t find an adequate replacement that they all thought that Harry would like. Nasta wanted the most practical, Max wanted the most expensive, he himself wanted the best looking cot out of all the shops they had been to and none of them could compromise.

“Stop it!” Blaise cut into their heated debate. “Harry wouldn’t want the best looking cot or the most expensive. It is Braiden’s cot, Braiden is my son and I say we get a good looking cot, that is hard wearing, that’s completely safe and practical and not overly expensive. Harry already needlessly worries about money as it is without replacing our good value, hard wearing cot with something so obviously outlandish and tacky that he’ll start stressing over it. That’s not what he needs, I say that one.”

Blaise left no room for argument as he walked halfway down the aisle, picked up a box next to the display model of the travel cot that he liked and he took it straight to the cash register.

“What if Harry doesn’t like it?” Max fretted.
“It is nearly five in the goddamned morning, Max! If we don’t hurry up and get back it won’t bloody matter which one he likes because he’ll still tear us apart for not cleaning the living room! We still have to lay the carpet, get all the furniture in the right place and assemble this bloody cot before he gets up with the babies in just an hour.”

Blaise paid for the cot, took the blasted free giveaway the woman pushed on him, ignoring the arguments about that as well, and he stormed out of the shop, he moved down a deserted alley and turned to face the other three as they joined him. Nasta pulled out the Portkey and held it out to them and when they were all touching it, he whispered the password that activated it and sent them spiralling back to Hogsmeade.

They made it back to their rooms and they were all just so tired, but their job wasn’t done yet as Draco levitated all of the furniture and held it in the air as Max and Nasta ripped up their old carpet while Blaise tried to assemble the new cot in the tiny floor space of the kitchenette, which frustrated him to no end.

With the carpet cut to size and shape and laid down, Draco let the furniture down with a sigh and moved his neck and shoulders around to get rid of the tension. Holding a spell for that long when so tired was a challenge, but they had no time for rest as Max got rid of the old carpet and the odd settee and Nasta took the new suite out of his pocket and enlarged it. Draco enlarged the coffee table from his own pocket and then went to help Blaise who was cursing at the travel cot in the kitchenette.

At ten to six they had finished and Nasta urged Blaise and Draco to catch an hour on the new settees as they had lessons that day. Max came back into the room after disposing of the carpet and odd settee and slumped onto the rug in front of the fire. He lay down and Nasta lay down with him, cuddling together to keep warm as the two spare blankets they had that weren’t locked in the bedroom with Harry, were covering Blaise and Draco on the settees. All of them fell asleep quickly after their exhausting, emotional night.

Harry groaned as a baby crying woke him up, he rolled over, found his feet and then scooped up one of the quintuplets, he couldn’t tell which one through his gluey, squinty eyes, but he rocked them gently and soothingly, holding them to his chest as he slipped down the stairs on his bum. It wasn’t wise to walk down the stairs when he could barely open his eyes, let alone tell which baby he was carrying.

The baby stopped crying when placed on his chest and only grizzled a bit as a bottle wasn’t immediately placed into a pouted mouth, but Harry continued rocking and shushing gently regardless as he unwarded the room, walked out and ignored the lumps around the room that indicated his four sleeping mates were back.

He did however stop to scrunch his bare toes into the new carpet, which was a surprise, he hadn’t thought that the carpet had been damaged, but the feel of this carpet under his feet and between his toes had him thankful that it had been damaged; Braiden would love the feel of this carpet under his hands.

Harry boiled the kettle after putting a silencing bubble around it. He was angry with them yes, but he wasn’t sadistic enough to wake them up when they had gone through so much effort to please him. The carpet was lovely and if he could find the time today to roll around on it naked then he would do so.

Harry made up five bottles and he carried them and the baby that he was now awake enough to see was Calix, back into the bedroom. He did not ward the bedroom door again. He fed Calix, burped him and pulled off his nightdress and his nappy, letting his skin breathe and air out, which Calix was very happy about if his cooing and wet gurgling’s were any indication as he wiggled his limbs about on the bedspread and Harry went on to feed the next baby that woke up.

From there it was the regular routine of bathing his quintuplets, drying and dressing them for the day, having a lightning speed shower himself where he barely got his hair wet before declaring himself clean, bathing a hysterically screaming Braiden while still wet himself before drying them both off, dressing a calming Braiden for the day, dressing himself in his uniform before carrying them all out to the living room in their carrycots as Harry couldn’t be bothered to go up and down the stairs ten times to retrieve the bassinets for them to lay in.

He carried Braiden on his hip and settled him down into his highchair, strapped him in and warmed up the baby cereal that Max had made the day before and he patiently fed Braiden his breakfast, wiping his mouth and chin often, still thankful that Braiden didn’t want to put his hands into his breakfast yet.

He couldn’t help but smile as he watched his seven month old son eat food from a spoon. The pride he felt, the smugness and the excitble happiness that he felt as he watched Braiden gum the cereal off of the tiny weaning spoon, sometimes biting it with his minimal teeth, made him swell in ways that weren’t visible to the eye, soon Braiden would be crawling and then walking and Harry could hardly contain his tears at the thought of it.

He swiped at his eyes confused and irritated, wondering what the fuck was wrong with him and if it was just overflow emotions from last night or if it was because of the hormones pouring into his blood from his approaching heat cycle. He didn’t like it whatever the cause.

Harry cleaned up Braiden and set him on the carpet with a few of his toys. There was a new toy that Harry had never seen before and he frowned at it, casting all the detection spells that he knew at it, but he could find nothing malicious about it and he conceded that perhaps his mates had bought it to sweeten him up a bit more, they knew the best gift that they could give him was something for the babies…or chocolate, but he was likely to throw the chocolate in their faces right now, so a gift for Braiden seemed more reasonable.

Harry broke open the plastic and gave the large, coloured plastic block to Braiden along with the several chunky plastic pieces that were all in different shapes. The object of the toy was to get Braiden recognising the different shapes and putting them into the corresponding hole in the block.

Harry left Braiden bashing the block onto the new carpet, determined to either break it or crack it open like an egg.

He made himself a cup of honey tea and he started making breakfast for five. It didn’t mean he had forgiven them though. He just appreciated the new toy and the new carpet, he was still angry for what they had done, but he’d have to call Blaise and Draco for lessons soon and they were going to be running around as it was without making their own breakfasts, plus he was less angry with Draco and Blaise the longer he had to think about what had happened.

Harry stole a quick glance at Braiden and chuckled softly as his son had progressed to chewing and biting at the plastic shapes, turning it around in his hands, before bringing it back to his mouth to bite at it some more. He checked on the quintuplets, Leolin was sleeping soundly, no surprise there; Farren was sat in his carrycot, very content to just lie there and not do anything, again no surprise. Calix was sucking on his little toes having pulled off a sock, Tegan was dozing in and out of sleep, fighting every blink to keep her hazel eyes open and Regan was playing with the soft toys tied to the handle of the carrycot.

Harry smiled at his six babies softly as took another swallow of tea, finishing up the traditional English breakfast and plating everything. He ate his fill, cleaned his plate and then regrettfully moved to wake his sleeping mates. He had left it until the last possible minute that he could call them and he still felt guilty for waking them up…or perhaps because he had been the one to deny them a decent sleep in the first place.

He hunched on his heels and shook Blaise’s shoulder lightly, smiling as those sleepy indigo eyes opened to peer at him. Blaise sat up quickly and tried to fight the tiredness that he felt to get his brain working. Harry took note of the new settees and he realised that they matched the other furniture in the room and complimented the new carpet. He liked them.

“Harry?” Blaise croaked, before yawning.

“Your breakfast is on the table, plus a strong coffee, you need to eat now or you’ll be late.”

Blaise groaned, but nodded and dutifully stood up and stretched and Harry moved over to wake Draco, who swatted at him like a fly the first and second time that Harry shook him.

“Wake up, Draco.” Harry encouraged softly.

The blond’s silver eyes cracked open and his mouth scowled, but when his brain caught up to him, the scowl melted away and his eyes softened.

“Does this mean that you’re not angry anymore?” Was the first thing he asked.

Harry sighed. “I’m not angry with you or Blaise.” He conceded, as just looking at Draco’s hopeful, insecure face had robbed him of any anger he felt towards his first two mates. “Now get up or you won’t have time to eat and shower today.”

The threat of not being able to have a shower had Draco up quicker than anything else anyone could have said and he made his way over to the kitchenette table to eat.
“Oh I’ve missed a good English breakfast, nothing against Max’s cooking or Nasta’s healthy freakishness, but this will always be my favourite breakfast and no one can quite make it like you, Harry.” Draco told him.

Harry snorted at the shameless flattery, but he smiled nonetheless as he sat beside the semi-circle of carrycots holding the quins and beside Braiden, who was now bashing the little blocks into the carpet.

“Where did this toy come from?” He asked.

“It came free with the new cot we bought, something about purchases over a certain amount getting a free toy, Draco tried to throw it back at the poor woman saying that we didn’t need their charity, but I just took the toy and walked out.” Blaise explained.

Draco huffed. “If we had wanted a toy like that for our children we could have bought one for him ourselves!”

“It’s alright, I’m sure we have something like it back at Max’s, but Braiden seems happy enough.” Harry said as he put one of the shaped bits of plastic in Braiden’s hand. “Square.” He emphasised as he let Braiden feel and look at the shape.

“Ahhh.” Braiden told him.

Harry grinned and nodded. “That’s right, Braiden. Square. Can you find where the square goes?”

Harry held the big block out to Braiden, with the square shaped hole facing him. Braiden happily hit the block of plastic with the weapon he now had in his hands, but he did not try to push the piece in his hand into the block. He laughed very happily at the noise the two plastic pieces made when they were hit together though.

“Have you had a shower, Harry?” Blaise asked as he put his plate into the sink of soapy water.

“Huh? Oh, yeah, I had one after I bathed the quintuplets.”
“Has Braiden gotten any better at having a bath overnight?” Draco asked.

“Nope. Screamed and thrashed until the floor was soaking.”

“Nothing new there then.” Blaise snorted as he came and kissed Braiden’s mouth, who screeched and held his arms up to his Daddy and opened and closed his mouth cutely for another kiss. Blaise chuckled and happily kissed Braiden’s mouth again before distracting him with the triangle shaped piece of plastic before escaping to share a shower with Draco, lest they both be late for lessons.

Braiden looked from one hand to the other, each holding a different shape and Harry could practically see his baby’s brain trying to work everything out. Harry held Braiden’s wrist and brought his baby’s attention to the shape.

“Square.” He said slowly and clearly, before moving to hold Braiden’s other wrist and bringing his attention with it. “Triangle.”

“Ahhh. Ah ba.” Braiden repeated, looking first to his one hand and then his other.

“That’s right, Braiden! Square and triangle. The square goes in this hole, Braiden.” Harry encouraged, leading his baby’s hand to push the square into the square hole. The plastic block did a loud, jaunty musical tune that frightened Harry half to death as the square shape was pushed through it and it made Braiden squeal and wriggle his whole body in delight as he then tried to push the triangle through the square hole to make the same noise.

“What ‘appened?” Max groggily asked, sitting up from the rug and disturbing Nasta.

“Braiden’s new toy.” Harry replied shortly. “Your breakfast is on the table if you care to eat it.”

Max rolled to his knees and stretched with a groan, Nasta stretched on the floor before getting right to his feet.

“No Braiden, this is a triangle.” Harry ignored his older mates as he searched the block for the triangle hole and showing it to Braiden. “Triangle.”
“Ah ba.” Braiden repeated, hitting the block with the triangle piece. Harry took his wrist and slowly turned Braiden’s hand until the triangle piece was in line with the hole and he let Braiden slam it in. It made a different musical twinkle that had Braiden bouncing in joy.

Harry chuckled and found another shape for Braiden to grasp. “Circle.”

Braiden blinked at him adorably. “Gee ah.”

“That’s right, Braiden. Circle.”

Braiden clapped his hands together and then patted Harry’s hand as he gummed on the circle shape. Harry found the circle hole and held it out to Braiden, who tried to do it himself by carefully moving his hand before hitting the block.

Harry cheered when Braiden eventually got the circle piece in himself, letting Braiden know how proud Mummy was even as his baby danced to the tune the circle hole made.

Braiden snatched another piece from the floor himself and held it out to Harry, babbling to himself, but looking to Harry for an answer.

“Rectangle.” Harry said slowly and clearly. “It’s a rectangle, Braiden.”

“Ah ba ba.” Braiden told him seriously.

Harry clapped and Braiden grinned and clapped his own hands. “Well done, Braiden. Rectangle.”

Harry found the rectangle hole and let Braiden figure it out himself, twisting and turning his hand, trying to get the rectangle piece into the hole. When his baby finally managed it Harry was so happy and proud that he forgot for a crucial moment that he was very angry with the two at the table.

“He did it himself! All by himself!” He told them proudly. “Did you see?”

“We’re watching, Harry.” Nasta told him with a smile as he ate the unhealthy, greasy breakfast with not a murmur of complaint. They were both trying so hard.
“He’s getting to be such a big boy.” Max agreed.

Harry nodded and turned back to Braiden, who had snatched the last shape from the floor and was passing it from hand to hand, feeling it, before bringing it up to his mouth and gumming on it. He held it out to Harry, babbling, likely asking to be told what it was.

“This is a star, Braiden. Star.”

“Ah.”

“Clever boy! It is a star.”

Harry turned the block to its last hole and watched patiently as Braiden figured out the shape and popped it through the hole. Harry clapped with Braiden as they listened to the fifth and final tune the block had in its arsenal and Harry picked Braiden up and kissed and hugged him when it ended.

“You are Mummy’s clever boy!” Harry said softly.

“He… he likes the new toy then?” Max asked hesitantly.

Harry’s spine stiffened as he remembered then exactly why Braiden had a new toy and why Max was hesitant. He gave a glare to the both of them and nodded once before turning back to Braiden, sitting him back on the floor and twisting the bottom of the toy and pulling out the piece that kept the shapes in the toy, tipping the five pieces of plastic out, replacing the bottom and handing the block back to Braiden.

Draco came out, still knotting his Slytherin tie and he looked up once the tension of the room reached his awareness. Harry was playing happily with Braiden, but Max and Nasta looked so upset that Harry must have said or done something to remind them that they weren’t forgiven, not even with all the work they had done last night.

“Harry, it’s almost nine.” Draco hedged cautiously.

“I know, can you get my book bag please? It should be in the bedroom.”
“Of course.” Draco went back into the bedroom and came out with Harry’s satchel, before sitting on the settee to tie his shoe laces.

Blaise rushed out of the bedroom doing up his buttons, he went to the small closet they used to keep coats, jackets and shoes and dug out his own school shoes, slipped them on his feet and threw himself down next to Draco to tie his laces.

Draco got all of their jumpers and robes out for them and handed Harry his shoes. Harry reluctantly got them on and pulled on his jumper and tie. He kissed Braiden goodbye and every single quintuplet whether they were sleeping or not before handing Braiden’s play over to the two mates that he didn’t want to.

“If a single hair on their heads is out of place when I get back you don’t even want to know what I’ll do to you!” Harry threatened in a hiss as he shouldered his book satchel and left, leaving two very upset older dominants and a seven month old, who peered around at the sudden silence of the room and started crying hysterically when he couldn’t see his Mother.

Distance did make the heart grow fonder Harry realised, as through the course of the day he found himself missing Max and Nasta. He found himself wondering what they were doing at that precise moment, wondering if they missed him at all.

He didn’t tell Draco or Blaise, instead he confided it all to Hermione during his first lesson, Charms, and asked her opinion after he had told her everything and how he had felt last night and this morning about all that had happened and what his mates had done overnight.

“Well you have every right to be angry with them, Harry, but you need to let it go. No one was hurt, none of your children were hurt and I doubt very much that they would have even thought of fighting in the room if any baby had been present. Don’t let your instincts rule you, you know they love those babies dearly, you know they wouldn’t have fought in the same room as them.” Hermione told him as they both ducked Neville’s flying backpack, which had somehow turned from black to pale blue.

Harry swallowed. “I think that’s the only reason that I could leave this morning. Deep down I know that they would never hurt any of the babies, but just the thought of that destroyed cot, seeing how damaged it was. I had nightmares last night of seeing Braiden just as crushed inside the cot, which isn’t helping at all.”

“Push your other side back, Harry. You know in yourself that they didn’t mean to upset you, that they would never have hurt any of your babies. It’s all in the mind of your…Dracken.” Hermione whispered after first looking around at their laughing, chatting classmates.

Harry nodded and breathed in deeper and easier. He could forgive his mates, but he would never forget the incident and he would make sure to extract promises off of all of them, not just Max and Nasta, that this never happened again. No matter how old their children got to be.

Feeling lighter and less troubled, Harry finally joined the fun of the lesson and he chuckled and outright laughed as his fellow classmates botched up the charm so terribly that he couldn’t help but laugh at the consequences. He hoped that when he finally saw Max and Nasta again that the anger he had felt before didn’t come surging back, he loved them dearly; he didn’t want to hate them as well.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------

Harry didn’t go back to the rooms for lunch; instead he stayed with his friends and caught up more with them, hoping that it would stop the anger from resurfacing when he finally did go back to his rooms at the end of the day. He was feeling much better and he was in a much better mood, so he hoped it worked.

Herbology was his last lesson of the day and as it drew to a close Harry still wasn’t sure about returning to his rooms. He said goodbye to his friends as they headed to the Great Hall for dinner, he himself got all the way to the portrait guarding the rooms before changing his mind and he wandered off instead. He thought about going to Gryffindor Tower, but his feet instead led him to the stone gargoyle in front of Dumbledore’s office.

Harry smiled as he realised that he was still seeking advice and he said several passwords before gaining entrance to the Headmaster’s office and a familiar voice called for him to enter after he had knocked on the smooth, solid oak door.

Grinning, Harry peeked around the door and entered the room as he was bid.

“Harry my boy, a pleasure to see you. I was halfway down the staircase on my way to dinner, when I had the strangest feeling that I was needed back at my office. What can I help you with?”

“I didn’t mean to interrupt your dinner, Sir.”

“That is quite alright, Harry, I’m sure we can get dinner up here in no time at all.”

Harry sat down and basked in the familiar presence that had always steered him right, even if it was just in a vague direction so he could make all of the main decisions himself. He would be glad for any advice given to him.
“Now, what can I help you with, my boy?” Dumbledore asked after they had both been served by a house-elf.

“I… I don’t really know where to begin, Sir. Everything was fine one minute and then Max issued a challenge to Nasta.”

“Oh dear.”

Harry nodded. “I know that Nasta had to answer the challenge or lose his place as top dominant, but our rooms were nearly ruined.”

“I have heard all about this and I was wondering if I would be seeing you soon about it.”

Harry looked at the Headmaster confusedly.

“Your loved ones came seeking an international Portkey at one O’clock in the morning, naturally I asked them where and why they wanted such a thing at such a time and the whole story came out.”

“Why would they need an international Portkey?”

“I was led to believe that you told them to fix everything that had been broken by morning, they had to travel to a country that was still in daylight hours as everywhere in Britain and Europe was shut for the night and I myself have never heard of an all-night furniture store.”

“I didn’t even think.” Harry sighed and rubbed his head.

“Well, I know all about what happened from their point of view, why don’t you tell me your point of view and your feelings on the matter and we’ll go from there.”

“I don’t know what happened, one moment we were all happy, the next Nasta rushed at Max and started hitting him. Maybe it’s because I’m a submissive, but I didn’t know Max was challenging Nasta’s authority until Draco and Blaise told me that he was. I thought that we were all happy, why did they have to start fighting?"

“It was an instictual thing that left little room for thought. They didn’t mean to upset you, Harry, I’m sure.”

Harry nodded. “I know that. I think I would have been okay, or more okay with it, if Braiden’s cot hadn’t been destroyed.”

“Now this they did not tell me.” Dumbledore told him, his eyes taking on a glacial glint.

Harry rubbed his face with his hand before moving it to tug at his hair. “Braiden was in that cot just an hour before, peacefully sleeping. The state it was in, it was irreparable, it had to be completely replaced after they had finished fighting. I keep thinking about it, I had nightmares about Braiden still being in the cot when the fight started. Hermione told me that they wouldn’t have even started fighting if the babies had been in the room, but it was pure instict. I’ve fought with my babies around me when instict has taken over, I know they’re older, but what if it had been Blaise and Draco?”

“There is a big difference here, Harry. When you fought with instict, it was because your lovers and child had been insulted which enraged your Dracken so much that the insult could not be allowed to stand for a moment longer. Maximilius and Nasta however, were fighting for dominance, they are both ruled by instict, but they are not the same. Nasta had a few seconds to think before he decided to answer Max’s challenge instead of conceding dominance to him, moments which, if your children had been in the room, could have been used to order, or drag, Max out of the room. However because your children were not in the room, he let instict take over, fully knowing that Draco and Blaise would protect you.”

“So he really wouldn’t have allowed Braiden to be hurt?” Harry said in a soft voice.

“No. I do not believe that any one of you would ever allow any child to get hurt in such a way.”

Harry nodded and he felt so much better, Hermione and now Dumbledore reassuring him had him feeling more relaxed and calm.

“Do you feel better?”
“Yes, Sir, but I’m worried that as soon as I see them again, then the anger will come back.” Harry admitted.

“Can you think of the incident without anger?”

Harry thought back to what had happened, thought back to what he had seen and what his mates had done.

“There is anger there, but it’s not such a terrible anger anymore.”

“If you can control it when thinking back to the incident, then you can control it when seeing them again.” Dumbledore told him sagely and Harry smiled.

“Thank you, Professor. I’m sorry I interrupted your evening.”

“Nonsense, Harry, you know I enjoy your company.”

“I’ll be sure to come around and visit you again, Sir, I may even beat you at chess one of these days.”

Dumbledore laughed happily. “You are a good strategist, you just lack the patience, my boy.”

“That’s funny, Draco said the exact same thing.”

Harry grinned and waved goodbye to the Headmaster and he made his way back to the other side of the school and his private rooms. He calmed himself and tried not to work himself up. Everything would be fine.

He reached his rooms all too quickly and he tapped the portrait with his wand and he entered, he did not expect to see Aneirin cuddling Leolin in his arms, talking softly to Myron, who had Farren on his lap.

“A bit of a random visit.” Harry said with a grin, though he greeted them with a hug nonetheless, laughing as Richard pulled him onto his lap to tickle him.
“Nasta called me in mid-afternoon, I wasn’t free immediately so he called Myron, Ashleigh and Richard instead. I came as soon as I was able to.”

“What happened?” Harry asked, looking around and counting heads. One baby was missing. “Where is Braiden?”

“He’s sleeping, sweetheart.” Ashleigh assured him. “He’s fine, but he’s at a stage where he really doesn’t want to be apart from you. He’s suffering with some separation anxiety and as soon as you left this morning he started crying and he wouldn’t stop. He finally cried himself to sleep a while ago.”

Harry bit his lip and looked down at the carpet, upset and guilt creeping into him.

“It’s not your fault.” Myron told him with his deep, strong voice. Handing Farren over to Aneirin and taking Harry into his own arms, squeezing him until Harry expelled all the air in his lungs and had to laugh, breathless as he sucked the air back in.

Harry allowed himself to cuddle into Myron’s solid bulk and he sighed happily.

“Braiden needs to get used to being without you constantly around him. It sounds cruel, but it’s not. You’re his Mother and you are the most familiar to him, from your arms, to your voice, to your heartbeat. All of the children want you, but the longer you leave it, the worse it’ll be later on.”

“I don’t like him crying, I hate it.”

“All of us do, but it is for the best. You need to do your school work, you need to go to lessons, you need to go about your daily activities without having to carry Braiden, or any of the other babies, around with you all day.”

“I’d give it all up if it would stop him being so distressed. I’d drop out and stay here with him all day if it would help.”

“It wouldn’t.” Myron told him disapprovingly. “You need to finish your education, Harry, no arguments. You need to graduate, Braiden needs to learn that you’re not going to always be around “Independence? Myron, he’s seven months old!” Harry complained.

“Even babies can have their independence, their own little space and time to themselves. I’m betting that Braiden cries for you from the moment he wakes up, doesn’t he?”

Harry bit his lip at the truth of that and he nodded.

“I’m not telling you to ignore him, or leave him crying, but when he cries for you, have one of the others go and get him, let him get used to his Fathers as well. It’s hell to go through, especially with the first baby, but you’ll all come through it fine.”

“Are you sure?” Harry asked with a teasing smile. “Are you sure you didn’t mess up the first time?”

Myron smirked and fist bumped Harry’s chin lightly.

“When Max was Braiden’s age, maybe a little younger, he always knew who he liked the best.”

“Yeah, me!” Richard grinned. “Myron hated it. His perfect biological son, our only child at that time, cried endlessly for me.”

“It was only because you were the stay at home Dad.” Ashleigh complained, rolling her blue eyes.

“Even when Max was so young I was rolling around the floor with him.” Richard said happily. “I couldn’t leave him alone for a moment, every minute of the day that he was awake and not eating, which wasn’t really a lot looking back at it, I was playing with him.”

“Did you happen to knock his head a few times too?” Draco asked.

“Only the once, or maybe twice.” Richard shrugged unapologetically.
“How old were you?” Blaise asked with a grin.

“I was only sixteen when Max was born. I was young and even more foolish than I am now.”

“At least you finally admit it.” Myron grumbled.

Richard laughed. “Myron was twenty-one, he was always away working so Max barely had any time to see his biological Father, so it was a good thing that he had me.”

“Didn’t you have school work?” Draco asked confused.

“Of course, but I rushed through it, writing down anything just to hand in something so I wouldn’t get detention. I knew that I knew all the material being taught, I knew even then what I wanted to be when I graduated, so I knew what subjects I needed to excel in and I knew that when the exams rolled in I’d be fine. Why did I need to write endless essays which wasted my time when I could be helping to ease Ashleigh’s stress with the childcare? She was still in school too, only she did care about homework, so I threw mine out of the figurative window and offered myself up as Max’s primary carer.”

“Only when it suited him.” Myron told Harry lowly. “He wouldn’t even think to offer himself up for the night feeds.”

“You had to have some time to bond with Maxie.” Richard insisted with a cheeky grin.

Harry chuckled and tried to picture a sixteen year old Richard, a sixteen year old Ashleigh and a twenty-one year old Myron with a newborn Max. It was difficult, but the resulting image made him laugh.

“It would have been less stressful if we had taken the offered help from family.” Ashleigh said as she rocked Tegan in her arms.

Myron groaned and reclined back against the settee.
“I know, I was stupid, I was jealous and I was stubborn.”

“Not much has changed.” Richard grinned. Myron just gave him a look.

“So you’re pushing us to take as much help as you can give us, and you refused any sort of help at all?” Harry said.

“Myron was very stubborn.” Ashleigh put in. “He wouldn’t accept any money from family to help us out, because he saw it as himself failing to provide for us. He wouldn’t accept any offers from family members to babysit for a few hours so that we could get some rest, or to have a few hours to ourselves, as he saw it as a weakness.”

“I know I was being ridiculous and we could have done without it, but that really was what I thought at the time. I was a complete bastard, I know.”

“We know, we still loved you then and we still love you now, even if we did want to jam your head repeatedly in a window frame for being so uptight and stubborn at the time. We got through it fine and now we can coach these gorgeous additions to our family to not be so pigheaded and stupid and to accept the help when it’s offered. Though Harry has a very level head on his shoulders, so we have no worries of him being ruled over by one of his dominants, least of all our Max.” Richard jibed.

Harry scoffed. “Max is far too laid back to rule over anyone; I’m surprised that you were so shocked that he didn’t turn out to be top dominant.”

“He’s a big man. A big, strong, powerful man.” Myron boasted.

Harry scoffed again and he smiled. “He never uses his size or strength though. Nasta wrestles dragons as a day job; he’s fitter, stronger and faster.”

“We didn’t know that you had picked Nasta as your last dominant though.” Richard pointed out. “From what we knew, you were this absolutely stunning male submissive, with a heart of gold, a kind and sweet personality, who had taken Blaise Zabini and Draco Malfoy, two baby doms, as your first dominants and only needed a grounding mate. We had no idea you’d have such a fuck up with your bondings where you would end up with four dominants.”
“Language.” Myron chastised almost automatically.

Harry chuckled at the scowl on Richard’s face at the unfairness of being chastised when Myron himself had used foul language just a few minutes before.

“I wasn’t expecting that hiccup either, but I’m so glad it happened. I couldn’t imagine my life without any of them now, or any of the babies.”

“Does that mean that we’re forgiven?” Blaise asked, which made Harry wonder if Max and Nasta were hiding in the bedroom so they wouldn’t upset him.

“You and Draco were forgiven this morning.”

“But Max and Nasta aren’t.” Myron sighed holding him tighter and rubbing his belly with his hand.

Harry made a frustrated sound and rubbed at his forehead.

“I don’t know! I love them still, of course I do, but I hate them as well. How do you love someone so much and hate them at the same time?! Why couldn’t they have just gone outside to have their stupid little power struggle?”

“I don’t know what you’re feeling, Harry.” Ashleigh said softly. “Richard was never suicidal enough to challenge Myron, not even once, he submitted immediately and willingly and they haven’t had any dominance fights at all through our relationship, but surely you can forgive them?”

“Did they tell you the whole story? Did they tell you absolutely everything or did they omit to mention a few things to you too, like they did to Dumbledore?”

“Like what?” Aneirin asked with a frown.

“Like the fact that their actions led to our entire room being trashed.”

“Yes, they mentioned that, a bit hard not to mention the obvious when we can see that most of the stuff in this room is brand new, including the carpet.” Richard pointed out.

“Did they also happen to mention that Braiden’s cot was demolished? That the cot that my baby was sleeping in not an hour before their fight was so damaged that it had to be completely replaced as it was irreparable?” Harry hissed.

Myron breathed out sharply behind him and his arms tensed around his waist.

“No wonder you haven’t forgiven them.” Richard waved off happily as he finally understood.

“They didn’t say it was anything to do with a baby being involved.” Aneirin said.

“Funny how they keep forgetting to mention that.” Harry growled, folding his arms over his chest. “Where are they?”

“When you didn’t come back, they went looking for you, I think they meant to apologise.” Draco told him, not even looking up from his homework, his quill scratching away endlessly.

Harry scoffed and snuggled into Myron more. “I don’t want them to apologise!” He snapped.

“How long do you think you’ll stay angry with them?” Ashleigh asked hesitantly.

Harry glared at her. “How long would you be angry if your child had been put in such danger from your own mates?!”

“Only you know when the time will be right to forgive them, Harry.” Aneirin told him. “What they did has brought up your fierce protectiveness of your children and I would bet that currently you’re feeling very unforgiving towards them.”

Harry nodded sharply.

“But you also have not tried to attack them, kill them, or hide yourself or your children away from them and you happily left all six of them under Max and Nasta’s care today.”
Harry hesitated and he licked his lips, allowing himself to relax on Myron’s lap.

“I know deep down that they would never purposely hurt any of our children, but I’ve realised that we all have instincts and accidents do happen. How do I protect my babies from accidents that I don’t know are going to happen?”

“You don’t.” Myron told him rubbing the back of his neck soothingly. “Accidents are always going to happen, your children will get hurt, they’ll get cut and bruised, they’ll fall down the stairs, they’ll catch their heads on the edge of doors and if they’re anything like Max then they’ll fall out of a third storey window and cause you such panic and fear that you think you’re suffering multiple heart attacks at once, but you can’t do anything about it, Harry. Accidents happen and there’s not a single thing that you can do to prevent them.”

“Max fell out of a third storey window?” Harry asked quietly.

“He was six.” Richard said with a shiver. “Caesar was four and they were playing ball upstairs in a spare room. Max had thrown the ball too hard at Caesar and it had knocked him to the floor, he was crying so we rushed up to see what was wrong, just in time to see him throw the ball as hard as he could at an unprepared, off guard Max, who staggered backwards, tripped over his own foot and fell backwards out of the large, picturesque window…the window that we had foolishly left open and not warded to air out the top floor of the house.”

“Myron dived out after him.” Ashleigh said in a haunted voice. “I thought for sure that Max was dead.”

Myron shifted underneath Harry. “There was no need to worry. Max was hovering an inch off of the ground with his little face screwed up in concentration. I couldn’t let him go for days, much to his disgust and exasperation as all he wanted to do was play with his toys. It’s rather hard to play with your toys when you’re being clutched on your Father’s lap all day every day.”

“We even made him sleep in our bed.” Ashleigh laughed. “He was so put out.”

“I was too! Do you know how hard it was to go even four days without sex?” Richard pouted. “I still say he was young enough to not remember it.”

“I say he was old enough that it would have permanently scared him.” Myron countered dryly.
“So there’s nothing I can do?” Harry said sadly.

“You can explain the dangers to your children, but you can’t wrap them in cotton wool. Accidents happen, Harry and it’s a part of life that they do happen. There’s no stopping it.”

Harry sighed and nodded. “That doesn’t mean that I can’t make them suffer.” He said petulantly.

“By all means make them suffer.” Myron encouraged. “They should have known better than to fight in front of their submissive, just a room away from their children. They’ll never get any more like that.”

“What do you mean?” Harry asked.

“If your Dracken is angry at a mate, and I mean really angry, not just ticked off or from a petty argument, then you won’t go onto a breeding cycle.”

“Oh. Well it’s too late for that. I’m going onto a heat period in two weeks.”

“What?!”

“You’re going onto a heat period again, so soon after the quintuplets?” Myron asked him, incredibly shocked.

Harry nodded.

“Fuck, Harry, I knew you were fertile, I didn’t realise completely what that would mean.” Richard told him. “You could be pregnant again in two weeks.”

“I know.” Harry groused. “I’ve done little else other than worry and stress over it since I realised that I had started my breeding cycle.”

“How long have you known?” Ashleigh asked him, trying to hide her excitement.

“Really I’ve known since I started my cycle, but I’ve properly, consciously known since my fifth week.”

“How long are your cycles?” Aneirin asked him curiously.

“Eight weeks.”

“Ha!” Richard exclaimed with a grin and Harry looked to him strangely.

“I knew you were all randy buggers. Ashleigh’s heat was every three and a half months, every fourteen weeks. Every eight weeks! Ha! It’s no wonder you were walking funny when we first met you.”

“I was three months pregnant!” Harry countered incredulously. “Of course I was walking funny!”

“That or your cute little bottom was abused once too often.”

“Richard!” Myron snapped. “Stop being so crude and vulgar!”

“You know he can’t help himself, love.” Ashleigh giggled.

Myron snorted. “He should help himself. What a disgusting thing to say to Harry, our seventeen year old son!”

Harry was shocked. So shocked to be called a son. Not a son-in-law, but a son. Myron held him closer and Harry let himself go boneless, a huge grin on his face. He felt so happy and so loved and the best part was that he didn’t think that Myron realised exactly what he had said in his anger at Richard’s words. It somehow made it all the more meaningful and Harry snuggled into Myron’s bulk tighter, feeling so accepted and loved by the people around him.
“Of course we don’t mind babysitting, whoever you choose to look after the six.” Aneirin told him, smirking at the smile on his face. He hadn’t missed Myron’s admission either.

“Can’t you all look after them?” Harry asked. “I mean, you’re all grandparents together.”

“It’s usually always the submissive’s family who look after the children during heat periods.” Ashleigh said with a smile. “But I’m glad that you chose us.”

“Ashleigh!” Richard said shocked. He looked utterly horrified.

Harry mouthed for a bit, stiffening automatically. “Well I wouldn’t exactly want those despicable people looking after my own children now, would I?”

Ashleigh’s eyes widened and she covered her mouth with her hand. “I am so sorry, Harry! I didn’t mean it, I didn’t think. I forgot all about it.”

Harry smiled wryly. “I’m glad someone could forget about it.” He said softly, wistfully.

He slipped from Myron’s lap, took Tegan out of Ashleigh’s arms and went into the bedroom, just as he closed the bedroom door he heard Myron’s sharp reprimanding snap of ‘Ashleigh’ before he closed the door firmly and went to sit with Braiden, who had dried tear tracks on his face.

Harry held his own tears back by the skin of his teeth as he climbed the stairs to put Tegan into her bassinet before coming back down to get a warm, wet cloth to wash Braiden’s cheeks gently, passing over his little chin and his mouth to wipe away the drool. He went oh so gently over his eyes to remove the last of the tears from his face. He had cried all he was going to over the Dursleys. He had had it with them, he would see them in court, he would see them sentenced and then he was going to forget all about them, they would not rule his life, they would not ruin his life. Not anymore, they had done too much to him already and he had come through it and moved on. He had his own life now, he had four lovers to keep up with and six babies who depended on him entirely, he had no room left to think about the Dursleys anymore. The court case was coming up, it wouldn’t be long now and he would be free of them forever.
My January writing courses are all completed. I’m fine for another year. Some of you readers really need to get some patience though. Four weeks and two days since my last update. I’m sick of hearing how I don’t update quick enough or how it’s been ‘ages’ since my last update, some of you need to calm down and remember that I’m just a person that has a full time night job. That’s 36 and a half hours a week, not including eating, sleeping and bathing, which leaves me very little time to myself, all of my spare time is spent writing these days, I don’t have time to do anything I want to anymore and I begrudge being told that even though I’m sacrificing every spare moment for this story, for some of you it’s not enough, so find some consideration or you’ll find me just getting fed up and updates will be several months apart while I do the things I want to do and write occasionally. All I ask is that you treat me like a person, just because you don’t know me or have never met me doesn’t mean I don’t have thoughts, feelings and other life commitments that require time and attention, just think before you type something and ask yourself, would you really want to be spoken to like that and if you wouldn’t, delete it.

Anyway I’m off from work now for a week because it’s my birthday this Saturday, I can’t wait. I’m hoping to update again either Friday, or actually on my birthday, depends how the chapter comes out, but I want to catch up on some TV programmes I’ve been missing these past few months and catch up with the ton of books I got for Christmas as well, of course those of you on Facebook will find out first exactly when I’ll be updating and hopefully I can get you some sneak peeks of the next chapter too.

Chapter Sixty-Seven – Break Up

Harry couldn’t help himself as he carefully took Braiden out of his cot and he carried him up to the bed. He lay down and laid Braiden on his chest, shifting his son’s arms and legs and his head, making sure that his little ear wasn’t crushed in the process and he just lay there stroking the thick, black hair that Braiden had grown in just seven months.

He tried not to let everything get on top of him. The upcoming Dursley case, the exams, his anger at Max and Nasta, his impending heat and the possibility of falling pregnant once again. It was all becoming too much, he couldn’t handle the strain, he had been so good, accepting his inheritance with nary a whimper. Sure he had panicked a bit in the beginning, he had been terrified of Blaise when he had first encountered him in the forest, he had been horrified by the mate meetings, which had seemed a lot like an auction house to him at the time, but he had gotten over all of that. He had thought that now that he was mated that everything would be fine, but it wasn’t. He had hoped that everything would be smooth once he had all of his mates, but it was so hard. All of the children, being constantly pregnant. It was a constant uphill struggle, it was hard work and he couldn’t stand it for much longer. He could potentially be pregnant again in two weeks’ time; he had only just started uncovering his body again after the quintuplets had ruined any and all body shape that he had once had.

The scar he had been left with was getting fainter with the copious amount of salves and lotions that he applied, but the stretch marks stubbornly refused to leave, even with the pelvic floor exercises he was doing and the daily massages that he gave himself with vitamin E oil. It all seemed so hopeless.

Breathing in deeply to calm himself, Harry inhaled Braiden’s light, clean scent and reminded himself that there was next to nothing that he could do about his situation. Shy of leaving his mates and his children, there was nothing that he could do and he refused point blank, no matter what his mates did or could ever do to him, he would never leave his children, present, future or otherwise.

That made Harry wonder about his heat, he screamed, begged and pleaded for his mates to give him children, if he were to run away, would they find him when he called to them on a heat period? That would be some plan, run away with all his worldly possessions, leave them a note explaining everything and then two months later he leads them right to himself regardless. Not to mention that they woke up after the heats before him too, so he’d likely either wake up back where he had run from in the first place, or to his angry, accusing mates.

Braiden rolled on him and Harry startled and he had to dash to save him from rolling right off of his body, unfortunately it jarred the little boy awake and he blinked his beautiful indigo eyes, looking around himself groggily, until he spotted his Mummy and then he grinned and fisted his eyes to help wake himself up.

“Mama.”

“Hello, Braiden love. How are you feeling?”

“Ba ba.”

“Yes, I think you would be a bit uncomfortable, it smells like you need a nappy change.”

Harry sat up with a groan and he carried Braiden down to the changing table. He smiled as Braiden wriggled and giggled as Harry wiped his bum and thighs clean, before putting him in a fresh nappy and redressing him.

“Oh I love you so much. You are such a gorgeous little boy, simply the best baby in the world.”

Braiden giggled and Harry grinned back.

“Ta ah.”

“That’s a new word, Braiden, you’re so clever.”

Braiden looked at him, a finger in his mouth as he looked around, he used his drool covered finger to point at a toy that was partially hidden under the purple settee, Harry would never have seen it if Braiden hadn’t have pointed at it.

“Huh, what do we have here?” Harry crouched down and pulled out the brightly coloured plastic keys on a thick plastic ring.

Harry used a simple, wandless cleaning charm on the teething ring before he jingled them at Braiden who screeched and grabbed them, putting them straight into his mouth.

“You know, I haven’t seen these in months. They must have been under that settee for two or more months.”

Braiden selected the light green key and put it right into his mouth and gummed on it. Harry chuckled and settled Braiden down on the floor and he went to check on his quintuplets, the ones that were in the bedroom with him anyway.

Regan was fast asleep, so was Calix, but Tegan was awake and blinking languidly around herself.

“Hello baby girl.” Harry cooed, picking her up, checking her nappy to find her dry and he smiled as he realised that she was awake purely because she wanted to be, not because she needed something. He checked on Calix once more to make sure that he wasn’t wet and after happily realising that he wasn’t, he sat down with Tegan sat on his lap, slightly reclined as though she was getting better at holding her head up, she wasn’t as strong as Farren, who could support the weight of his own head comfortably, or Regan, who could support his own head for increasing amounts of time.

Braiden stopped his mouth inspection of the keys and looked at Tegan suspiciously as she was brought near him. He shook the ring of keys at her and Harry felt her startle. Harry chuckled and gripped Braiden’s wrist gently and maneuvered his hand to put the keys back into his mouth before Tegan could start crying. Harry scooted over to the little toy box that they had to keep everything reasonably clean and he got out a soft, foam ball for Tegan, who clenched her hands into the ball tightly and huffed to herself as it squished in her hands.

“Ba!” Braiden replied enthusiastically and Harry grinned.

“Well done, Braiden, a ball.”
Harry chuckled at Braiden’s happy look as he went back to his keys and Harry wondered where the shape sorter toy was, Braiden had loved it, but as he looked around the lower part of the bedroom, it seemed obvious that it must still be out in the living room.

He sighed; he didn’t want to go back out there. He had possibly overreacted to Ashleigh forgetting about his previous abuse, after all he encouraged everyone around him to forget that it had ever happened often enough, but truthfully, deep down, he hadn’t actually expected any of them to forget that he had come from such an unstable and detrimental household. Especially not the woman who claimed to love him, who was for all intents and purposes, his Mother-in-law. Well, one of them anyway, he had three to choose from, but Marianna Lychorinda was nearly always so very busy with whatever she did, Blaise was close lipped about what she was always so busy with, and Narcissa Malfoy had been very silent over the last few months as she took care of a heavily grieving Snape, his only Mother-in-law around was Ashleigh, who apparently saw him as a way to get babies, and nothing else.

Someone knocked gently on the door and opened it. Blaise came into the room and inched his way closer.

“You can come over, Blaise, I’m not angry with you.” Harry said softly.

“Myron sent Ashleigh home; he couldn’t believe what she said to you.”

Harry shrugged and tickled Braiden’s tummy, making the little boy scream in delight and made Harry smile.

“It doesn’t matter anymore, she made her views incredibly clear. I won’t make the mistake of letting myself become emotionally attached the next time.”

“I was afraid you’d say something like that.”

Blaise came and sat behind him, wrapping arms around him and Tegan and resting his chin on Harry’s shoulder, his mouth turned into Harry’s neck so he could breathe across the pale skin.

“Does she see me as a real person, Blaise? Honestly?” Harry asked insecurely.

“Honestly, mio amore? I don’t know.” Blaise whispered. “I don’t know her well enough to gauge her or her actions and you can’t ask Max, he’s biased, she is his Mother after all. Caesar and the girls will be the same, you need to find someone who’s known her for a long time, who isn’t biased in their opinion against her, only then can you understand who she really is.”
“And where do I find someone like that? I can’t exactly ask her for her address book and owl any friends she might have!”

Blaise sighed. “I don’t know what to tell you, Harry, you’ll just have to trust your heart.”

Harry looked down at Braiden and Tegan and his eyes blurred.

“My heart says that she sees me as a way to get babies back into her life, and nothing else.” Harry confided softly, tears falling down his cheeks. “I’m not a real person to her, Blaise. I’m not real.”

Blaise could say nothing to that, so he held Harry tightly and let him cry, cursing the hormones that were filling Harry’s body and making his moods unpredictable. He’d be sending a very angry message to Ashleigh when he had a spare minute; he hated it when Harry cried. He looked at Harry’s tear streaked face, the anguish and pain written across it and his heart almost stopped and his fists clenched as he cradled Harry. He wondered if Draco had any howler parchment handy.

Harry refused to come out of the bedroom when there were ‘outsiders’ in the living room so Draco stubbornly and coolly said goodbye to Myron, Richard and Aneirin. Only once they were gone did Harry tentatively step into the living room, one arm wrapped around Braiden, the other supporting Tegan.

He sat on the plush carpet and placed Braiden near him, holding Tegan still and placed the baby monitor next to him in case Regan or Calix woke up. Leolin was in his carrycot. Draco was rocking Farren slowly.

“Max and Nasta should be done with their school wide search soon.” Draco told him hesitantly.

Harry nodded. He didn’t even care about them anymore, or about what they had done. His talk with Dumbledore had helped hammer home that no one had been hurt and it had reassured him of what he had already known. Max and Nasta would never have fought with the babies in the same room, they just wouldn’t have. He now had something new to agonise over, Ashleigh and exactly how she saw him.

Why did his life have to go from one bad thing to another? Every time something good happened, it was ruined sometime later by something terrible happening. It felt endless.
“I…I think I need a cuddle.” Harry admitted, staring at the carpet.

Blaise took Tegan from him and Draco smoothly, elegantly hunched down and pulled Harry between his legs and into a tight, comforting hug, he kissed the jet black hair before resting his cheek on the top of Harry’s head.

Blaise mirrored Draco and held him from behind; resting his head on Harry’s back this time, right between his shoulder blades, his slender fingers stroking soft patterns onto the parts of Harry that he could reach.

They didn’t speak; they just held one another, listening to Braiden jingle his plastic keys as background noise. However hearing him babbling aloud, talking to himself, brought a smile to Harry’s face.

That was how Max and Nasta found them as they walked through the door.

“We couldn’t find him anywhere; I don’t know where else he’d…be.” Max seemingly told Draco and Blaise, but he finished after a pause when the three of them broke apart, showing Harry in the middle of the group hug.

Nasta let out a relieved sigh that moved his entire chest; he came to hunch down beside him and cupped his face between both hands. He rested their foreheads together and closed his eyes.

“You’re alright?” He asked softly.

Harry nodded.

“No cuts, no bruises, no injuries?”

“Well don’t you sniff and find out?” Harry asked just as softly.

“I didn’t think you’d want me anywhere near you.”

“I’m over that now; I’ve got something else to worry about.”
Nasta pulled him into a strong hug after hearing that and held him as if he was going to disappear. Large hands pressing into his body, a stubbled face rubbing against his own smooth cheek as Nasta tried to crush him, but simultaneously tried not to crush him in his arms.

“I’ve missed you.” Nasta whispered into his ear.

Harry smiled into Nasta’s shoulder.

“Come on! You’ve had your turn!” Max whined, pulling them both apart before picking Harry up and crushing him into his own hug. “I’ve missed only cooking for four. It’s not the same without you, love.”

Harry chuckled and wrapped arms and legs around Max. The big man pulled back just enough to see his face and Harry enjoyed seeing the look of love in those eyes, those gorgeous blue eyes that were glistening with unshed tears.

“So we’re good now, yes?” He asked uncertainly, he needed the verbal clarification.

Harry smiled at that and pulled Max back into a hug. “Yeah Max, we’re good.”

Harry never told Max or Nasta about what had happened while they were scouring the school for him, neither did Draco or Blaise, but it all came out anyway after Blaise and Draco sent a particularly vicious howler, with Draco’s very stroppy eagle owl Saracen, to Ashleigh two days later after carefully selecting just the right words to use in their howler.

Apparently it had been a shock to the three to receive a howler at the breakfast table and they hadn’t opened it in time. Richard thought that it was hilarious. Myron did not.

After igniting the newspaper, it had scorched Ashleigh, but not only that, it had frightened Saracen, who had landed on the chair behind Ashleigh to deliver the howler to her and the obstreperous owl had beaten her head with his strong wings and clipped her shoulder with a talon as he took flight in terror.

Nasta had punished both Draco and Blaise. Harry, who hadn’t known anything about the howler, was left to laugh and giggle at what his lovers had done for him and he made sure to undermine Nasta’s punishment, in secret, by kissing and groping them in thanks.

The two had had to explain why they had sent a howler in the first place and once told, Max did not believe them. He stormed home to confront his parents and left Nasta to deal with two very opinionated subordinates, who refused to believe that what they did was the wrong way to go about defending their submissive’s honour, and said submissive, who had a smile on his face for the first time in days after being quietly withdrawn and was laughing again after days of them not hearing that strong, happy laugh.

Nasta took Harry aside after he sent Draco and Blaise to do all of the baby washing, not brooking any arguments from the two, not even when they ‘explained’ that they had never done the washing before and would ruin all of the clothes, he coolly told them that now was the time to learn and that any ruined clothing would have to be replaced, by them, before the end of the day.

“Harry, is this why you’ve been so quiet lately?” Nasta asked as he settled Harry on the purple settee under the platform bed and sat next to him, positioning himself so that he was open and welcoming, but not overbearing, intimidating or demanding.

Harry sighed and tugged a hand carelessly through his hair. He nodded.

“I just…I can’t get what she said out of my head. How could she forget that I…that those people…I don’t understand how she could have forgotten!”

“Max will sort it out, Cariad.”

“Will he? She’s his Mother, Nasta; he’s not going to choose us over her.”

“I think that you are forgetting yourself that we are Drackens. Family is everything to a Dracken, Harry.”

“She is his family.” Harry pointed out confusedly.

“She’s his ‘old’ family if you will. As a Dracken matures, we separate from our parents, all species do it, humans do it, animals, everyone, it’s a part of growing up and becoming an adult and moving on with our own lives, but where humans will still crave and interact with their birth family, a Dracken feels no obligation to do so. It’s our more human emotions that tell us that we should still be in contact with them. The first sixteen years of life where we’ve lived as near enough humans, that colour our emotions. A Dracken will not recognise a parent like it does their mates and children. As we mature, the scents and focus shifts, when we find a submissive and have children, that’s it. If you and the kids stood at one end of a field and Myron, Richard and Ashleigh stood at the other and you put Max blindfolded in the middle in his Dracken form and told him to sniff out his family. It would be you and the kids that he’d go to. His sensory receptors would not register his own parents as being family, Harry. It’s only his more human emotions and the part of his brain that hold human thoughts and memories that allow us to still have that attachment to our birth families. In fact if Max was feral in the proverbial field then he would likely attack his parents for being so close to you and the kids, he’d see them as a threat to you.”

“Why?” Harry asked curiously.

“Because when Drackens were still more animal than anything else, they left their parents once they had matured and they never thought about them again. In reality if Father and son had met once again in life, they would likely try to kill one another for territory, or food, they wouldn’t recognise themselves as family. That trait has been watered down over the thousands of years, but it is a trait that has been passed down regardless. Do not ever think that Max would put his parents before you, or even his brother and sisters. They’re important to him, of course, it would kill him if he broke ties with them, but if it came down to a one or the other decision, it would be you every single time and he would feel not an ounce of regret for choosing you over them. His family would already know this, so they’re not about to alienate him or give him any ultimatums.”

“It’s sad to think that two of our children will do that when they’re sixteen.” Harry said quietly.

“Braiden and…?”

Harry chuckled at the eager face and he shoved Nasta’s shoulder. “You’re fishing!” He accused with a grin.

Nasta grinned back and pulled Harry close to his body and he fell sideways on the settee, pulling Harry with him.

“Can I help it that I’m dying to know which baby out of four is a Dracken? I’ve been insanely curious these past three months, we all have. You with your secrets, not telling us just to torture our poor minds!”

Harry chuckled and squeezed Nasta tightly.

“Can’t you guess?” Harry grinned, teasing just a little more.

Nasta snorted. “It’s impossible to guess correctly, it could be any one of them, as soon as the scent dissipates after birth, there’s no way to tell.”

“Just guess.” Harry pleaded, stressing and elongating the last word until he was almost hissing.

Nasta smiled and kissed him. “Max, of course, believes it’s Farren. The biggest baby, the strongest, the most developed. He has a point about that, as Dracken babies are more developed than most, you only have to look at Braiden to see that, but with all of them being so very premature, it’s difficult, not only have they had to catch up to where they should have been, some of them have had set backs, like Calix with his rashes and Tegan with her fever. There are too many factors to guess adequately, but if I had to put money on one, I would have to agree with Max and bet on Farren.”

“Who do Blaise and Draco think?” Harry asked curiously.

“Blaise believes it’s Regan, he thinks that he could be a dark horse in the running, he’s developing nicely, if not as fast as Farren, and he’s putting on weight and coming into himself. Draco however is undecided; he believes either Regan or Calix. He didn’t give his reasons why, he just said with that strange hint of certainty that comes from his Pureblood snobbery that it would be between them both.”

“No one think’s our little girl could be a Dracken? How very sexist.” Harry teased.

Nasta grinned and nibbled at him. “I would love it if either of my children were Drackens, but I have already had a Faerie baby, I’m not greedy, let Max have his thunder this time around, I will give you a Dracken child eventually.”

“Oh? Is that so Mister Delericey. How very presumptuous of you.” Harry said as he sat up on Nasta’s body.

Nasta tickled him and Harry shrieked at the unexpected action, which naturally meant that Draco and Blaise were just there beside them and Harry grinned at them widely from his perch straddling Nasta’s hips.

“Finished the baby washing have you?” He asked them curiously.

Nasta let his head fall back and he laughed.
“We heard you scream.” Blaise told him.

“Yes, Nasta and I are getting reacquainted with one another after our lengthy separation.”

“Lengthy separation? It was two days!” Draco replied incredulously.

“Tell me about it. Longest two days of my life.” Harry said.

Nasta sat up and held Harry tightly as he stood up.

“You two had better be done with the baby washing, Max will want the kitchenette to himself when he gets back.”

“I don’t think he’ll want to cook once he gets back.” Harry said softly. “Maybe I should cook dinner today, cooking will be the last thing on his mind when he comes home.”

“I doubt it. It’ll be the only thing on his mind when he gets back; you know cooking helps ground him and relax him.”

“What if he’s upset? I don’t want him to feel obligated to cook for all of us when he’s feeling miserable. Sometimes I feel like he thinks we use him as a personal chef and nothing else.”

“Don’t be stupid.” Draco told him with a scoff. “Max loves cooking almost as much as he loves sex. If you deprived him of cooking he’d feel like you’d cut off both of his hands. He’d feel useless.”

“In a roundabout way I think that Draco’s right.” Nasta put in slowly, obviously trying not to upset him. “Has Max ever given any indication that he feels like we treat him as a personal chef and not a lover?”

“No, but…”
“Then you’re projecting your thoughts onto him, Prezioso.” Blaise told him.

“I just don’t want to take him for granted; I don’t want to take any of you for granted. Not ever.”

“You don’t, love.” Draco assured him strongly. “Max is very happy to cook every meal, every single day for the rest of his life. Why deprive him of something that makes him so happy?”

“I think that I should cook, just for today, he’s not going to be happy when he comes home and I don’t want him stressing.”

“Go on then.” Nasta relented. “Just don’t come to me when Max is upset that you’ve cooked.”

“He won’t be.” Harry said with a grin. “He’s being very good and acting like he’s on thin ice, it’s like he expects me to explode or something.”

A soft wail over the monitor stopped all of them short and Harry wriggled until Nasta put him down. He went up the stairs and checked on Calix, who was red faced with his hands balled into fists.

“Oh Calix, why do you have to do this now? Can’t you wait until your Daddy is home?” Harry asked, sighing in defeat as he took the baby out of his bassinet, carefully carried him down the stairs and took him over to the changing table.

“I can change him if you’d like.” Nasta put in mildly.

Harry gave him a look as he unfastened Calix’s nappy. “Is this part of your ‘don’t upset Harry any more plan?’ none of you offer yourselves up to change them unless you’re certain it was a wee.”

Harry wiped Calix down thoroughly, applied the Sudocrem and left off his nappy while the cream absorbed. He pulled down the little nightdress and handed the sniffling baby to Nasta, who cradled him without touching his bottom.

“I just thought that you’d like some help.” Nasta shrugged as they headed out into the living room.
Harry shook his head and couldn’t help smiling. “You can be on babysitting duties then.”

Harry went into the kitchenette and sighed at the pile of washing there was still to do. “Did you two do anything?” He asked as he took over and quickly and viciously scrubbed the bodysuits, bibs, sleepsuits, socks, hats, scratch mitts and nightdresses. He wrung them out before rinsing them in plain warm water before wringing them out for the last time.

He hung them all over the safety grate in front of the fire and left them to dry as he cleaned up the kitchen, washed his hands to get the soap powder from them, before starting his preparations for a chicken dinner. It wasn’t Sunday, but he didn’t think any of them would complain. Besides the fact that Max was planning roast beef for the Sunday coming, not chicken, so both dinners would be different anyway.

Harry was almost finished when Max stormed into the room. He didn’t even acknowledge any of them before going right into the bedroom and viciously slamming the door closed behind him. Harry closed his eyes as several startled screams started, two from the other side of the shut bedroom door.

Harry swallowed and tried not to think what Max’s behaviour meant and he could only pray that right now he wasn’t packing all of his stuff into suitcases as he tried to calm a hysterical Leolin.

“What do we do?” Blaise asked hesitantly.

He looked unsure and Harry’s feelings mirrored his, what did they do in this sort of situation? Max was always so happy, so carefree, and seeing him upset and angry enough to slam doors when he knew that there were several babies in these rooms was something they had never had to deal with before, they were out of their element and it only affirmed that though they all got on most of the time, that they had children and a life together, they had only been together for a year, a very short amount of time really, Nasta hadn’t even been with them for a full year yet, not until April and it this little incident only went to show that they didn’t know absolutely everything about one another yet.

“I think from his actions that he wants to be alone.” Draco informed them.

“But Tegan and Farren are in there crying.” Harry bit his lip.

“He won’t leave them cry.” Nasta said surely.

“But he’s angry.”

“We don’t know that for sure.” Draco answered. “He might just be upset or he might just need some space or alone time. He wouldn’t have come back if he was angry with us.”
“How can you be so sure?” Harry insisted.

“Because it’s what I’d do if I was in his position.” Draco confided. “He’ll be fine, just leave him be. He won’t let the kids cry themselves sick, he just wouldn’t.”

Harry nodded and he took in a deep breath, ignoring his Dracken restlessly moving inside of him, demanding that he go and get his crying babies. Nasta was calming Braiden, Blaise had Regan and Draco had Calix and had taken Leolin from him before dinner could burn.

“I knew it was the right thing to do to make dinner.” Harry said softly. “I just had a feeling that I should.”

“Your instincts are very fine tuned.” Nasta complimented as he pulled faces at Braiden, who was calming down and giggling every other snuffle.

Harry dished up the food and put Max’s under a stasis charm to preserve it for whenever he wanted it, if he wanted it at all.

Harry was happy to realise that Farren and Tegan had stopped crying and he prayed that Max hadn’t just put a silencing spell on them, though he couldn’t believe that any of his mates would ever do such a thing.

Dinner was quiet; the atmosphere strained and uncomfortable as Max remained a no show. They couldn’t hear anything from the room next door and Harry hoped that Max was alright, but he was happy that he hadn’t come back out with a suitcase in hand.

They were just finishing when the bedroom door opened and Max came out, his face was red and blotchy and his eyes looked rubbed raw. There was no suitcase in his hand.

Harry let Max decide how they were to proceed, if he would accept them asking him about what was wrong and comforting him, or if he wanted to pretend that nothing was wrong and that nothing had happened.

“I’ve made you something to eat if you’re hungry.” Harry told him softly, neutrally, letting Max know that the ball was in his court, no matter what he wanted to do.

Max nodded and rubbed his eyes once again as he came and sat down, letting Harry serve him the preserved food.
“Thank you.” He croaked roughly.

Harry smiled and cleaned up the used dishes, kicking Blaise pointedly, who winced but he took the hint and he stopped staring, dragging the other two into light conversation.

Harry happily washed up, checking on his pudding in the oven and he waited until Max was done eating to serve them all dessert. It was only a Syrup sponge pudding, but it was freshly made and warm and Max, though quiet, was looking much better than he had when he had come home.

Harry washed up the bowls and spoons they had used for dessert as well as Max’s dinner plate, allowing the other four to relax and unwind. No one was talking to Max though, who was lost, very deeply in his own thoughts.

Shaking his head and making up his mind, Harry went and wormed his way onto Max’s lap and cuddled in tightly. He didn’t want to push Max into saying anything that he didn’t want to, but he also wanted Max to know that if he wanted to talk then they were all here to listen, no matter what was on his mind.

Max hesitated for a moment, as if startled by his sudden appearance on his lap, but after a moment he wrapped his arms around his waist and held him tightly. Harry had half been expecting to be shoved off, so being cuddled back was fine, even if Max wasn’t talking. Nasta suddenly spoke to him and Harry peered out from Max’s chest to look at him.

“Did you do your catch up homework, Harry?”

Harry scowled. “Most of it.”

“Don’t you think you’d best get on with it?”

“No.” Harry wriggled on Max’s lap and snuggled in tighter. “I’m warm and sleepy. I’ll do it tomorrow.”

Nasta sighed. “Alright, but don’t forget.”

Harry knew why Nasta had dropped the subject and he grinned into Max’s chest. “I won’t forget, promise.”

“Ah ma!” Braiden called sleepily from the floor and he held his arms out to Harry pouting.
“Oh Braiden, really, right now?” Harry sighed, even as he already moved from Max’s warm lap to pick him up.

Harry cradled Braiden as his son yawned adorably. Harry slipped back onto Max’s lap and the larger man held the both of them, seemingly better now than he was before because he was smiling at Braiden, who was fistng his little eyes and yawning again. He was tired and ready for bed.

Harry didn’t realise that he had fallen asleep himself until his back was pressed to something cold and his eyes cracked open. Max was above him with one eye closed in prayer that he didn’t wake up. He let out a sigh when he realised that Harry was awake.

“I didn’t mean to wake you. I’m sorry.”

Harry made an indiscernible grunting noise and yawned, trying to remember what had happened and where he was.

“’S okay.” He murmured as he yawned again.

“Go back to sleep, you’re too tired to be awake.” Max insisted.

“Hmm. Stay with me?” Harry asked, his brain still half asleep.

“Of course I will, just let me get out of my jeans.”

Harry looked down at himself and realised that he was already in his pyjamas, they were very warm, so either they had had a heating charm aimed at them, or one of his mates had put them on the grate by the fire for a while. It was the cold sheets that had woken him.

Max shimmied out of his jeans and Harry couldn’t help the lazy smile of appreciation that stretched his mouth as he saw Max in just his boxer shorts. It was a wonderful sight; one Harry really did appreciate very much.

“I love that look on your face. That possessive, lusty expression when you look at me.”

“You’re all mine.” Harry reminded. “I have a right to be possessive of such a gorgeous body. I get so very jealous when women try to take you from me.”
“They’ll never succeed, Harry. I am gay and I have been since I was a teenager, no matter how much I tried to get myself to like the female body in preparation for my meetings. Plus I love you, very, very much. I’d never leave you, least of all for some woman.” Max said sincerely. “And if for some reason I do ever leave you for a woman, please check me for spells and potions before getting upset and shredding all of my clothes.”

“They have no right to look at you like that, only I can.” Harry frowned, not being swayed into laughter by Max’s declaration.

Max chuckled then and slipped into the bed to spoon against him. It was quiet for a while in the bed and Harry was very content and just as he was drifting back to sleep, Max spoke.

“I’m so sorry about what my Mother said, she had no right.”

Harry stiffened right up before letting out a breath. “It’s alright.”

“It’s not though, is it? I can’t believe that not only did she forget, but she told you that she had forgotten. I’m so angry with her right now I don’t think I could even look at her.”

“Does…does she see me as a person, Max?” Harry couldn’t help asking. “Does she see me, or does she just see a way to get babies?”

Harry felt Max swallow behind him and heard the hard, nearly painful, noise. “I don’t know.” Was the quiet, almost sobbed answer. “I just don’t know.”

Chapter End Notes

A/N: It’s my birthday! I’m 23 today and as a present to me you can all leave a nice review, you know, seeing as I updated on my birthday for you and all. Ha! I’m not sure when the next update will be, I’m going to be busy now for the rest of the day and likely recovering tomorrow, so I’ll start chapter 68 around Monday then it depends on how much I can get done and how easy the chapter comes.

That’s it! I’m off to go and enjoy my birthday, have fun, because I’m most certainly going to!

Last Time

Max chuckled then and slipped into the bed to spoon against him. It was quiet for a while in the bed and Harry was very content and just as he was drifting back to sleep, Max spoke.

“I’m so sorry about what my Mother said, she had no right.”

Harry stiffened right up before letting out a breath. “It’s alright.”

“It’s not though, is it? I can’t believe that not only did she forget, but she told you that she had forgotten. I’m so angry with her right now I don’t think I could even look at her.”

“Does…does she see me as a person, Max?” Harry couldn’t help asking. “Does she see me, or does she just see a way to get babies?”

Harry felt Max swallow behind him and heard the hard, nearly painful, noise. “I don’t know.” Was the quiet, almost sobbed answer. “I just don’t know.”

Chapter Sixty-Eight – Stamina Exercise

Just five days before Harry was due to go onto his heat he had a letter from Myron, asking if he still wished for him to babysit the children for his heat period. Harry had gotten more and more stressed over the last two weeks, working himself into terrible states because everything was so wrong. Max wasn’t speaking to his Mother, Harry didn’t want to see or speak to her, Draco wanted to go and kill her, Nasta was silently seething and Blaise snarled and bared his teeth every time her name, or someone with the same name, was mentioned.
Max had calmed down over the last two weeks, until he could go a full day without getting lost in deep thought or breaking down in tears, those first few days had been harrowing for the rest of them, and seeing Max so damned unhappy and desolate was one of the reasons why they were so unforgiving towards Ashleigh, who had been silent, which was a blessing really, but that she hadn’t even tried to send an attempt at an apology, not even to Max, angered him immensely.

Everything now was getting on top of him until it felt like he was being buried alive. The entire spectacle with Ashleigh, Max’s palpable sorrow, everyone else’s nearly visible anger, the looming court case, the approaching exams, the mountain of homework that he had yet to do, the quintuplets second Dragon Pox vaccine was due next month, Aneirin had sent them an owl the week before to tell them that Sanex had gone down with the flu and that he was due to work the second half of Harry’s heat period. Then there was Narcissa and Lucius’ silent distance, Marianna’s absence, Remus’s indifference, and the biggest fear that he had, his heat was just a few days away, he didn’t want to be pregnant again, he couldn’t have another baby right now, he just couldn’t.

He had talked everything over with his lovers extensively, especially the approaching heat and what they were going to do and he was adamant that he wasn’t going to punish Richard and Myron for what Ashleigh had said and done, but his Dracken was so stressed and restless over letting Ashleigh near his children that he had lost control of his wings and he could not pull them back in, which meant that he couldn’t leave his rooms and he got more stressed as he missed lessons and became even more jittery because he was cooped up all day, every day.

Three days before his heat, Myron and Richard came to visit after Max had finally relented and owled them, begging for some help or advice on how to calm Harry down, though he had made sure to stipulate that Ashleigh was not to come near them. They flooed to the school as soon as they received the owl and they arrived at the boys’ rooms where they found Harry pacing and growling, Regan in his arms, his wings out and flared with his stress, tossing his head from side to side every other minute in agitation.

“I didn’t think he’d be this bad.” Richard said as he watched Harry pace restlessly.

“It’s been terrible for the last week and a half.” Max admitted sadly. “He doesn’t want her anywhere near the children.”

“He didn’t answer my letter, I take it that he’s going to put the full responsibility on Aneirin.” Myron said neutrally.

“That’s the thing, he doesn’t want to punish you or Dad either, but he’s adamant that he doesn’t want that woman near the kids. He’s so stressed that we can’t get him to fold his wings in, he’s missed a week of lessons and he’s too edgy to do anything other than pace, he’s not sleeping, he’s barely eating and we don’t know what to do anymore, we’ve tried everything.” Max stressed.

Myron snorted and in a moment he had his wings, claws, scales and fangs out and he strode to Harry and took Regan from him amid snarls and growls, feeling a brief pang that even after everything,
Harry had trusted him enough to not think of him as a threat to the child, otherwise he would never have caught Harry off guard and gotten the baby from him safely, before he handed the baby to a nearby Nasta.

He circled around Harry, darting in to try and grip Harry to turn him around, Harry fighting and trying to gouge at him all the way. Myron was bigger, stronger and more powerful however and he had lived as a Dracken for so much longer. He easily managed to circle Harry again, grip one of his biceps and he turned Harry around in his arms, Harry’s back to his chest. He gripped the tiny wrists strongly, but delicately, and he let his legs go from under him. He sat on the floor and he sat Harry on his lap, just holding him now, letting him thrash and growl and snarl and writhe.

It took an agonising forty minutes before Harry finally tired himself out and he slumped back in Myron’s hold, at which time Myron started gently petting and stroking Harry’s wings, Harry shivered at the soft, almost forbidden touch and it took just four minutes for his wings to droop which then allowed Harry to pull them back into his body.

Myron released the tiny wrists that he was holding, letting Nasta take a yawning Harry from his lap and he got up with a groan.

“T’m fifty-three; I can’t be doing this any longer.”

“You have another three hundred years of life left.” Richard said. “Please don’t tell me that you’re going stiff already, I can’t go three hundred years without the level of sex that I’ve come to expect!”

“You have no worries about that, your tight little arse is mine.” Myron growled, biting at Richard’s chin before lining up their mouths, taking extra care with his fangs, as his hands squeezed and dug into Richard's arse, taking care with his claws.

“Ewwww!” Max whined. “That’s gross, stop it!”

“Why? Because I don’t have any parents to act like that in front of me?”

Max sighed. “I didn’t mean it like that, Harry, you know I didn’t.”
Harry nodded. “I know, I’m sorry. I just…with everything coming up I don’t…I’m scared.” Harry admitted softly.

“Of what, love?” Nasta asked him softly.

“The heat for one, being pregnant again for another and…what if…what if the Dursleys get off? What if I go through all of the court cases and everything and they still get off.”

“They won’t.” Richard told him. “Harry, the judge and jury are going to stick them up against the wall, shoot them and then hammer the nails into their coffins and throw them into a deep, dark hole. They’re going to prison, Harry and they’re going for a long time.”

“But what if they don’t.” Harry fretted.

“They will, Harry.”

“But just say they don’t!” Harry insisted.

“Then I’ll go and kill them for you.” Myron cut in. “They won’t get away with what they did to you, Harry. I won’t let them.”

“We won’t let them.” Richard added with a glare to his lover. “I have full confidence in our case, Harry, they won’t get away with it. Child abuse is a very serious crime, with the evidence we have, they will not walk free, though if you want to be sure, I’ll come and talk to you after your heat is over, we’ll condemn them even further.”

Harry nodded. “Okay. I don’t want them to get away.”

“They won’t, so calm down and stop stressing over everything. Now, what do you want to do about the children in three days’ time?”

“I’m sorry, but I don’t want Ashleigh near them.” Harry said softly, ignoring Max’s angry hiss at her name. “But if you and Richard want to look after them, you can.”
“How do you propose we do that when Ashleigh lives with us, Harry? We’re not throwing her out of her own home and likewise we do not want to be here listening to you having sex for a week, not to mention that you could very well use this room and we don’t want to watch you having sex either.”

“How do you propose we do that when Ashleigh lives with us, Harry? We’re not throwing her out of her own home and likewise we do not want to be here listening to you having sex for a week, not to mention that you could very well use this room and we don’t want to watch you having sex either.”

“Speak for yourself.” Richard snorted. Myron clipped him over the back of the head sharply.

“You don’t have to.” Harry answered, grinning at Richard’s childish pout. “Aneirin is back in work, so he’ll be gone for half of the week that I’m on heat, he offered, quite happily, to cancel, but Alexander owled me. I think he just knew that something was wrong. He’s offered to look after them, he says that he’d be more than overjoyed to have them while I’m on my heat period.”

“Have you taken my Father up on his offer?” Myron asked quietly, keeping his feelings of hurt and failure to himself.

“I’m leaning more towards it, I don’t want Aneirin to have to rearrange his work schedule because of me and I don’t want Ashleigh near them, but I don’t want you to kick her out of your house for any length of time because it’s not fair to make you choose between your mate and your grandchildren. So Alexander is looking to be the most sensible option. That way, if you wanted to, you could go and see the kids at Alexander’s. I’d feel much better about this whole thing if I knew that you were checking up on my babies, not that I don’t trust Alexander, but he is out of practice of having any baby overnight, let alone for a week plus, I don’t think he knows what he’s taking on with these six.”

Myron snorted. “My sisters, Aurelia and Lydia, are submissive Drakens, Harry. Ashleigh was right when she said that the children usually go to the submissive’s family for heat periods. My Mother and Father have been kept on their toes over the years, Aurelia has seven children and you remember Shae? Aurelia is her Mother and Shae has fourteen children now and my Father sometimes has them when she goes on her heat as well. Lydia has five children and is pregnant again. My Father is always kept on his toes.”

Harry smiled and then laughed. “It’s a good idea to hand the kids over to Alexander then.”

Myron nodded. “Of course Richard and I will go and spend time with our Grandchildren if you wish it of us, we wouldn’t miss it, but I wanted you to know that Ashleigh has been thoroughly punished, I don’t think keeping her from the kids is going to help.”

“I don’t want her near them.” Harry growled, his Dracken surging and sending out pheromones that let the dominants around him know that he was not happy.

Myron nodded. “It is entirely up to you of course, you’re their Mother and we’ll respect your decisions regarding them, but she is very upset with herself for what she said.”

“It wasn’t just what she said, Dad, it’s that she actually forgot what Harry had gone through. How could she forget something like that when Dad is working so hard on Harry’s case at home? It doesn’t make any sense!”

“She won’t answer that question when we ask her.” Richard sighed sadly. “We don’t know why she forgot or even how she did. It is strange.”

“She doesn’t see me as a person, she doesn’t think I’m real.” Harry told them. “She sees me as a way to get babies, a means to an end, nothing more. That’s how she forgot, if she could get babies around herself without me, then she wouldn’t give a fuck about me.”

“Do you truly think that?” Myron asked, shocked and unsettled that Harry would truly think that and he was worried that maybe, just maybe, Harry could be right.

Harry nodded. “It’s true.” He said firmly. “She has no interest in me, every single question is always about the babies and never about me.”

“That’s not true, she’s always asking you how you are.” Richard pointed out.

“Only ever when I was pregnant.”

“That…that can’t be true. It can’t be!” Richard said, but his tone belied his uncertainty.

“It is.” Harry moved to pick up Braiden and pulled out a foam mat to change him on.

It was silent as Harry changed and then redressed Braiden and rolled him over, off of the mat and onto his belly, he thrust the wet nappy and used wipes at Max, who took them silently and put them in the bin.
Harry slid the foam mat back under the settee and he lay down on his belly next to Braiden, slipping a hand under him and lifting him gently, to urge him onto his hands and knees.

“Come on, love, you want to crawl, you want to be mobile.” Harry insisted.

Braiden bounced on his hands making soft noises and drooling excessively.

“I think he’s cutting another tooth.” Harry sighed as he got a cloth out of his pocket and wiped the drool away.

Braiden giggled and Harry gave him a gentle, but forceful shove to the bottom to encourage him to move. Braiden found it hilarious.

“No, it’s not funny, you want to crawl.”

Braiden went to reach out for Harry’s face, but moving his hand made him unstable and he fell to the floor laughing. Harry let out a sigh.

“He’ll crawl when he’s ready, Harry.” Nasta insisted as he rocked a fussy Tegan.

“Just wait until he learns the word ‘no’.” Richard grinned. “It was Caesar’s favourite word.”

“That’s because it was your favourite word.” Myron huffed.

“Oh no, my favourite word was always and will always be ‘yes, yes, YES!’” Richard laughed as he moaned exaggeratedly. Myron went red faced and went to swat at Richard again who ducked out of the way laughing.

Harry chuckled. “Really? Your favourite word is yes? Funny, mine has always been a tie between more and harder.”

Richard almost choked on his laughter and he doubled over.
“Harry!” Myron scolded.

“What? Is it my fault that I don’t have a mate who can satisfy me? I have four of them, you’d think that I’d be worn out before them, but no.”

“Harry!” Max said shocked.

“Don’t look at me like that! You need to go to a gym, your stamina is falling and you’re failing me.”

That did it for Richard, who collapsed onto the settee and held his stomach with one hand and his throat with the other. He started laughing so hard that he just made a wheezing sound. Myron was of course by his side trying to ease him through his breathing, but Richard just waved him away, still wheezing.

“Is he alright?” Harry asked concernedly, he hadn’t meant to hurt Richard through laughter.

“He’s fine. He would have accepted my help if he was in any danger, he knows not to take a chance on things like this.” Myron answered, still hovering over Richard like a worried Mother. Not that Harry blamed him in the least.

Richard drew in a deep, gasping breath like a drowning man breaking the surface of the water and he let out a stream of chuckles.

“It wasn’t that funny.” Max pouted.

Richard nodded his head, wiping away tears. “I love that kid!” He said breathlessly, cheerfully pointing at Harry. “I haven’t laughed like that in ages. I needed that laugh.”

“Well I think it’s time we took our leave.” Myron said firmly, helping Richard to his feet. “We were worried when you didn’t responded to the owl that we sent, but now that the issue of childcare is sorted, I really don’t think mixing you and Richard together is a good idea, you’re both as bad as one another, thank Merlin that Caesar isn’t here as well or I’d roll over in defeat.”
Harry chuckled. “I bet that doesn’t happen too often.”

“Watch your cheek.”

“I can’t, it’s impossible to look at your own cheeks. The one’s on your face at least.”

Richard started laughing again at that and Myron scowled, picking his lover up and carrying him out of the room to Harry’s jaunty wave. He chuckled before lying down and trying to get Braiden to crawl again once the portrait door had closed.

A heavy weight on his back had him gasping and turning as much as he could to see Nasta sat on top of him, giving him a look.

“What?” He asked.

“So we can’t satisfy you, can we? We get worn out before you, do we? I think we need to take care of our submissive more, Max. Who knows when the last time he was truly satisfied with our love making was.”

Max cottoned on very quickly and he gave a feral grin. “I’m sure some more practice in the art can help boost my stamina.”

“I was only joking, of course you satisfy me.”

“Ah ah, no back tracking now.” Nasta admonished lightly. “We need to thoroughly satisfy you to teach you not to spread such nasty lies.”

“I’m going onto a heat period in three days, can’t you teach me then?” Harry asked as he tried fruitlessly to get out from underneath Nasta.

Nasta put more weight on him and nibbled an ear. “No, I think you need a nice, long, hard lesson right this minute. It won’t wait for three days, will it, Max?”

Max shook his head, a predatory grin on his face as he started moving babies into bassinets. It gave Harry one last life line to use.

“The kids.” Harry complained, but with Nasta sucking and nibbling on him, his concentration was rapidly declining.

“I think it’s time for the kids to take a nap.” Max grinned. “Ninety minutes of peace.”

“Well, from the kids at least, but Harry’s going to be screaming his lungs raw.”

“Big words from a man who can’t satisfy me.” Harry hissed, deciding to play the game, it was easier than fighting, plus he hadn’t had a real chance to unwind in ages. It could turn out to be exactly what he needed. What they all needed.

Nasta snarled and shoved against him. Max hauled Braiden away and settled him down for a nap in his travel cot before stealing him from Nasta and carrying him to the bedroom.

“You’re a barbarian.” Harry complained.

“Don’t I know it.” Max growled before biting at his neck hard enough to make him gasp and to leave a mark.

They didn’t go up to the bed, where Farren and Calix were sleeping in their bassinets, instead Max fell to the clean patch of floor boxed in by the settee, catching himself on his one hand, the other holding Harry tightly to his body, before letting him fall the short distance to the floor and kissing him ferociously.

Nasta joined them, Harry was happy to note him place a baby monitor near them, before he warded the area they were in so that the two boys sleeping upstairs weren’t disturbed.

Max shifted up his body until their groins touched and Harry’s face was smothered in Max’s shirt. Harry smiled as he wormed fingers under that shirt and twisted the already erect nipples. Max let out a part groan, part gasp of pleasure pain and sunk his teeth into his neck; Harry let out his own gasp of pleasure pain and he arched his back. Max chuckled darkly and sucked on his own bite mark, Harry’s body moved restlessly at the pleasure that mixed with just a hint of pain and he partly sobbed, partly moaned at the feel of it.

Nasta shoved Max out of the way and added his own bite mark, tearing the front of his shirt as he did so, ripping it from his body to uncover more flesh to mark. The entire thing just aroused Harry more, for reasons he couldn’t comprehend or understand. He just loved it.
Max pulled off Harry’s jeans and socks, leaving him in black boxers before moving his hands to his own shirt. Harry watched that muscled upper body appear as Max slid the fabric from strong shoulders and he licked his lips in anticipation. Nasta chuckled from beside him; he had been watching Harry’s face, enjoying his expression as Max undressed himself.

That chuckle took Harry’s attention back to his oldest lover and it was then that Nasta took off his own shirt, watching Harry’s face with a cocky smirk.

“You enjoy that too much.” Harry insisted.

“I can’t help that I love your pure reaction to me undressing.” Nasta answered.

Nasta grinned back before falling on his mouth and biting at it, his teeth and mouth fetish coming through clearly.

Harry used his legs to search for Max and he wrapped his legs tightly around his waist, tugging the huge man into him, knocking him into Nasta, who accidently bit him too hard, which introduced blood into their kiss and excited the Dracken on a primal level.

Nasta pulled back and run his thumb under Harry’s lip, taking a smear of blood with it.

“I’m sorry.” He said gutturally.

Harry grinned, licking his own blood away from his lip. “That’s alright; it makes things more…interesting.” He purred.

Nasta licked the blood from his thumb and grinned before Max bent down to kiss Harry, licking at the blood on his lips.

“When did we get into blood play?” He asked deeply.

“When Nasta bit my lip hard enough to break it.” Harry told him.

Max grunted, before once again settling his hips over Harry’s, Harry noticed that Max had also removed his jeans just before his sight was blocked by Max’s chest.

“You’re too tall for this!” He complained, even as he moved his mouth to suck on a nipple lightly.

Max breathed in deeply and sharply. “I’d say that I’m exactly the right height for this.”

Harry grinned but continued sucking at Max’s nipple still, flicking it with the tip of his tongue before swiping it with his entire tongue, just to get a different reaction from Max.

“Oh, you’ll pay for that.” Max hissed.

“Says you.”

Max ripped Harry’s boxers at the seams and threw the ripped fabric aside, leaving Harry naked, aroused and smirking. He wasn’t smirking for long as Max sucked marks all the way down from his neck, to his chest and down to his thigh, while Nasta started using the tip of his tongue to trace light, arousing lines over his sensitive inner forearm, moving down to his fingers and sucking each one individually.

“Don’t bite off my fingers, I need those.” Harry panted, letting his head fall to the side to watch Nasta, who rolled his eyes up to look at him while he sucked. Harry moaned. “Oh that’s so fucking hot.”

Harry’s attention was forced from Nasta and aimed at the ceiling instead when Max licked the highest crease of his thigh, forcing his legs wider and moving his mouth down to a place that Harry had never in his wildest dreams thought could bring him such pleasure, but he had since learnt differently and he was happy to have found that new level of pleasure.

Harry had expected Max to lick him, to tease him, but he did no such thing, instead he just pushed his tongue right into Harry’s body and the unexpected action had Harry yelling out, reaching for Max’s hair with his free hand, his other hand was out to the side and held tight by Nasta, who was sucking his wrist.

Nasta pinned his hand to the carpet and nipped little marks up his arm to his elbow as Max forced his tongue in deeper and Harry’s entire body tensed, jerking out of his control as he gave himself over to the pleasure completely.

Harry had no idea how long the two tortured him for, he lost all sense of time as he writhed and squirmed on the carpet, under their talented tongues, teasing teeth, questing fingers and utter determination and will to pleasure him.
It seemed like hours before Max pulled away from him, breathing deeply and raggedly, he summoned a bottle of lubricant from the depths of their bedroom and only just caught it, cursing as he almost dropped it twice as he tried to open it in his hurry. The lid popping off pulled tight at Harry’s gut, he knew what that sound preceded and his mind had come toassociate it with sex and pleasure.

He quivered in anticipation and moaned in delight as he felt that cool gel being applied to his burning skin, then Nasta was there, shoving Max out of the way, taking the lubricant from him and with an easy flick of his wand, he had Max tied up and bound tightly.

Nasta smirked darkly and he chuckled deeply. “Like I’d let you have Harry first.” He murmured. “I’m not in a sharing mood.”

“Nasta!” Max growled, squirming furiously in the tight bonds, made of what looked like conjured scarves.

“This is your punishment for challenging me the other week. I don’t like being challenged.” Nasta replied simply as he coated his fingers slowly in the lube and moved his hand down, letting his gelled fingertips brush Harry’s thigh as he went.

Nasta slipped his fingers inside him slowly, gently and Harry’s muscles tensed, his spine arching out of his control as he let out a long, deep moan as his insides were touched, rubbed and lubricated for something else that tightened his belly.

“Nas’a!” Harry moaned brokenly.

Nasta chuckled and removed his fingers, slipping something else, a lot bigger and a lot thicker than his fingers, inside of him and Harry’s hands balled into fists, his breath catching in his throat.

Nasta sunk himself fully into Harry and stilled for a moment, waiting for Harry’s body to unclench, for his hands to relax and to reach out to him. Only then did he pull himself out, he held himself, just inside Harry’s body for a tenuous moment, before pushing back in.

As Harry loosened up and the lubricant spread deeper inside, Nasta’s movements became smoother and quicker, he fell into a familiar rhythm of pleasure and desire. When he felt secure in his rhythm, he started rolling his hips, it took only a short moment for Harry’s body to understand what was happening and his little lover screamed and it made Nasta smirk as he breathed harshly through his own movements. He knew he could keep this up all night, but they didn’t have all night unfortunately and he wasn’t sadistic enough to let Max watch them together, tied up, but not have a chance to relieve himself.

Shifting himself minimally once again, Nasta ensured that he was hitting Harry’s prostate head on and he made sure his thrusts stroked all the way inside, hitting that little gland and moving up further
Harry did not last long and Nasta let go of his pride and he let himself orgasm with Harry. He had forever to prove that he could last all night long if he chose to, unfortunately the timing today wouldn’t allow it.

He rolled off of Harry and released Max from his bonds before he curled up to catch his breath and recover from his mind blowing orgasm.

Harry’s eyes opened when hands touched his hips, pulling him slightly lower on the carpet. Harry had expected to see Nasta, but he wasn’t at all upset to see Max hovering over him, solidly erect and leaking against his own belly, it made things low inside him tighten and that made him moan as his pleasured body felt abused.

Max didn’t even make any farce of stretching him, Harry was glad as the feel of Max just shoving right into him threw his head back and made him clench so tightly around his biggest lover.

He knew from the pace and desperation of Max’s thrusts that he wouldn’t last long and he clenched his body randomly and strongly around Max, loving the moans and groans that he pulled from Max’s throat.

Max lost himself in the pleasure and he was a bit too rough with him, especially after he had just had an explosive orgasm, but thankfully Nasta noticed and placed a hand at Max’s lower back, reminding him that he wasn’t fucking a blow up doll, but an actual person.

Max’s pace evened out and slowed down and brought Harry back into the moment, his body curving around Max’s as their orgasm approached.

Max went first, he was just too wound up to hold himself back, but Harry didn’t last much longer as he screamed loudly and dug short nails into Max’s shoulders as his entire body clenched in orgasm.

Max rolled sideways away from him so that he didn’t collapse on top of him and they all calmed down together.

“Oh, I can’t move.” Harry whined.

“We don’t have to.” Max told him breathlessly.

Determined to prove him wrong, a cry from upstairs started slowly and sleepily before rapidly turning hysterical and being joined by a second cry.

“I think now we do.” Nasta sighed.

“Those are both your kids up there, go and get them.” Harry nudged Max insistently.
Max groaned, but he dutifully rolled to his knees and carefully stood up, he breathed and calmed himself as he took the stairs, the babies cries getting louder and louder the close he got to them.

“It’s Calix. He’s woken Farren up too.” Max called down to the floor as he scooped the both of them up before carefully coming back down the stairs, holding onto one thrashing baby and one still baby, measuring every step until he finally reached the bottom.

Harry’s afterglow had worn away quickly under the concern for his screaming child. He held his arms out for Calix and took the baby and hushed him, feeling his forehead, cheek and neck.

“He doesn’t feel fevered.” Harry murmured, turning him over onto his belly and lifting his nightdress, undoing his nappy and pulling it away. He hissed at the red, raw rash that had taken over Calix’s bottom.

Nasta sighed. “I’ll go and get the cream.”

“Why does he suffer so badly with this?” Max asked furiously, using his free hand to tug at his own hair while he rocked Farren in his other arm to calm him down after his brother had rudely disturbed his nap.

“Some babies just do.” Harry said sadly. “We’re going to have to up the watch on him again, every half an hour without fail and let his skin breathe for at least three hours a day.”

Max nodded as Nasta came back with the tub of Sudocrem, handing it to Harry.

“Braiden never suffered like this.” Harry sniffed as he covered Calix’s bum with the cream, leaving him on his belly to let the cream absorb into his skin.

“Braiden’s a Dracken, Harry.”

“He’s a baby!” Harry hissed.

Nasta sighed. “Drackens are more resilient than humans, Harry, they won’t catch as many infections or sicknesses.”
“That doesn’t mean that they can’t!” Harry said stubbornly as he lay down to nuzzle Calix’s face, wiping away the slowing tears. “I hate seeing him like this! Why won’t it just go away?”

“He has very sensitive skin.” Max sighed softly. “He must get it from you; Merlin knows my skin’s like old, dried out leather.”

That made Harry smile and he let out a soft chuckle that was part sob.

“He’ll be fine, love. He won’t be in nappies forever.”

“Don’t most babies start toilet training at around two years?” Harry said confused. “That’s a long time, Max.”

“It’ll fly by as soon as we’re away from the school and have a consistent daily routine. Very soon, we’ll miss this place.”

Harry snorted. “It’s a school.”

“You have also said it was like your second home.” Nasta cut in softly.

“Oh don’t turn this into a therapy session, Nasta!” Harry complained. “You know I don’t feel like that now, Max’s home is my home now. My only home. I have no need for a second home anymore.”

Max grinned. “See, the boy lays claim to what is mine, we’ll make a good submissive out of him yet.”

Harry grinned and elbowed Max. “Go and make up some bottles, it’s almost time for the evening feed and Draco and Blaise will be back soon.”

“Yes dear.” Max sighed sadly, as if put upon and moved into the living room with a muted grin.
Harry rolled his eyes and followed him. “Seriously, what did I do to get you as a mate?”

“Snogged me on a rock out by the lake when you were advertising for a mate.” Max answered happily.

“I snogged you?” Harry demanded. “My memory happens to be a little different about that!”

“Do you regret it?” Max asked as evenly as he could, trying to hide his insecurity.

Harry looked at him stunned before narrowing his eyes. “Of course I don’t. I love you and that isn’t a word that I have ever used lightly. The fuck up that was my own bonding was the best thing that ever happened in those bloody meetings. I have no idea what I would have done if I had had to choose between you and Nasta.” He shivered at the thought. “I’m so glad that I didn’t have to choose between you both.”

“So it was always between me and Nasta?” Max asked, visibly perkier than he had been before.

Harry snorted. “Of course it was between you and Nasta, he was the strong, silent dragon tamer, which just got my blood going, especially with all those fantasies I used to have of him taming me, seeing as I’m part dragon. Then there was you, the incredibly tall, very broad, absolutely handsome potion’s master who promised to cook for me every single day of my life. I think my Dracken was too close to the surface during those meetings now that I think about it, I used to have fantasies about you too, you were just so tall and broad, I used to dream about you completely covering me and pinning me down, you had no need to tie me up, you could easily incapacitate me with your own body. I never had those fantasies about anyone else, so when I woke up off of that heat and found out that I had mated to you too, I just knew that it would be Nasta I would pick as a grounding mate. I always knew it, it just took me a while to realise it. Plus your biscuits were to die for.”

Max just laughed as he boiled the kettle and set up six bottles and five mugs, making sure to keep Farren away from the boiling kettle, just in case.

Assured that Max felt better, Harry lay Calix on the carpet and checked on Tegan, Regan and Braiden. They were all asleep and showed no signs of stirring. He moved to check on Leolin, not really expecting him to be awake, Leolin still slept for at least eighteen hours a day, but Harry had a huge surprise when he found soft gold eyes open and peering up at him drowsily and slightly suspiciously. Harry smiled widely and picked him up, hoping that maybe this meant that Leolin was moving on from his eat, sleep, shit stage of life and was moving onto his eat, sleep, shit, awake for a little while at a time stage. Harry would just love that, he wanted to spend more time with Leolin, but he was always asleep. It was hard.
“Hello gorgeous baby boy!” Harry cooed happily.

“Is he awake?” Nasta asked surprised.

Harry turned him carefully and showed Nasta the blinking golden eyes. It was always a conscious act to remember to support Leolin's neck. Even at three months old, he could not take even a little bit of the weight of his own head and he flung his arms out in surprise if his head was dipped suddenly.

Nasta came over and kissed Leolin's puckered mouth and nuzzled his cheek.

“Be careful!” Harry snapped. “Your stubble is irritating on the skin and Leolin's skin is more delicate than anyone else’s.”

Nasta smiled and obediently moved his stubbled cheek away from Leolin's face, he instead went nose to nose with him, giving his youngest son all the eye contact he could possibly want.

He took the tiny hands in his own and bounced them lightly. “You need to start growing. You’re worrying your Mother, Leolin and we all know that that isn’t good for him.”

“Oh ha ha.” Harry pouted, but he couldn’t help smiling at the scene Nasta made with Leolin, who was still so small, so tiny and had yet to gain another pound.

Nasta took Leolin from Harry, holding him up under his arms, keeping his head steady, before cuddling him into his shoulder.

“You want to come and sit with Daddy don’t you?” He cooed as he moved to the settee and sat down, his eyes tracking every inch of Leolin's face, slipping back to those eyes often and just smiling and stroking Leolin's tiny arm.

Harry shook his head and he accepted the mug of honey tea that Max handed him and he sat on the floor by the coffee table and he stroked Calix’s back.

“You don’t think he’s too cold do you?” Harry asked suddenly as he felt the heat leaving Calix’s legs. “I know it’s March, but it’s still cold.”
“His skin needs to air out, love or he could get an infection.” Max told him, settling down on the settee behind him with a groan and rubbing Farren’s back as the baby made a soft, startled noise at being moved suddenly downwards.

“We have a choice between him getting an infection or leaving him cold on the living room floor.”

“He’ll be fine, Caru.” Nasta assured him. “Once the cream has absorbed enough we will wrap him in a blanket to help warm him back up.”

“Okay. I hope he’s alright though.”

“Mama?” Braiden called out from his cot.

Max snorted. “He heard your voice.”

Harry moved to get up, but Max pressed the top of his head. “Remember, one of us has to go and get him or he’ll cry every single time you’re out of the room and when you have lessons seven hours a day for five days a week, that’s not convenient.”

Harry sighed and slumped back down letting Max get up to go and get Braiden. Harry was distracted however by the portrait opening to the sounds of a hushed argument as Draco and Blaise came back.

“You’re out of Dracken form, Prezioso.” Blaise said happily, having seen him first and coming to kiss him, holding him tightly. “You smell of semen.”

Harry’s grin widened and he chuckled. “Yeah, it’s Myron’s fault.”

“Why was Myron touching you in such a way?” Draco hissed possessively.

“Not in that way!” Harry defended, blushing. Myron would probably rip him apart at the seams, or probably accidentally crush him, if they tried, not that they ever would, but if they did…Harry shivered.
“Myron came over when we reached the end of our tether, he got Harry out of Dracken form, but certain comments were made and Max and I couldn’t let them stand.” Nasta explained as he brushed Leolin’s hair gently.

Max chuckled darkly and Harry squirmed uncomfortably, busying himself with reattaching Calix’s nappy, pulling down his night dress and wrapping him tightly in a thick blanket, cuddling him to his chest.

“They were flirting?” Blaise asked incredulously as he took Braiden from Max.

Max snorted. “Of course not. My Dad Richard was here too, of course with him everything spirals down to sex. Harry made certain comments about the four of us not being able to satisfy him, Nasta and I had to prove that we could in fact satisfy him and leave him a quivering mass on the floor.”

“I was not a quivering mass on the floor.” Harry refuted.

“You had sex while we were in lessons?” Blaise said softly.

“At least I’m not in Dracken form anymore. That’s good right?” Harry grinned.

Draco shook his head. “I think we should get to have sex now.”

Harry frowned. “I’m not a doll you can line up and use in turn.”

Draco rolled his eyes. “I didn’t mean it like that.”

“Then go and have sex with Blaise if you both want sex so much. I’m so not in the mood.” Harry huffed as he drained the rest of his tea and put the mug on the coffee table, before using both arms to snuggle Calix.

“He’s moody because his heats approaching.” Max said.

“You shut up!” Harry snapped.
“Yes dear.” He replied subserviently.

That one comment took all the anger and frustration from him and quirked his lips up into a smile. He chuckled.

“Sweetheart, do me a favour and get me another cup of tea please.”

“What ever my darling wants.” Max put on a fake, high voice and Harry laughed as Max flounced into the kitchenette to re-boil the kettle. Watching such a large, physical man flounce was so hilarious that none of them could help laughing at him, even Max was laughing at himself.

Max put the scoops of baby powder into the six bottles and poured in the boiling water, before making everyone a fresh cup of tea and serving them all.

“Thank you, love.” Harry said, pulling him down for a kiss.

Max pulled back and winked at him before going to finish the bottles and bringing them over to cool naturally.

Harry snuggled Calix tighter as he was pulled up onto Max’s lap, being manipulated into the arm and side of Max’s body that wasn’t cuddling Farren as Draco and Blaise slipped off their shoes, ties and settled down to relax with their teas, even if Blaise took one look into his mug and scowled at its contents.

“It might as well be.” Blaise muttered.

Nasta sighed heavily. “Fine, go and have a coffee.”

Blaise’s head snapped up, his eyes slightly wide. “I’ve already had one mug today; you said I wasn’t allowed more than one a day because of the health detriments.”
“Don’t look a gift horse in the mouth.” Nasta answered. “And don’t expect it every day either!” He added quickly as Blaise put Braiden onto the settee next to Draco and rushed to the kitchenette to tip away the hated tea to make himself a much loved coffee.

Harry stood up and sat next to Nasta and snuggled into him, leaning over to kiss his cheek before slipping under his arm and resting his head on the fleshy area of his chest, just before it met his shoulder, near his armpit, settling Calix on both of their laps, making sure not to disturb Leolin, who was fast asleep once again.

Blaise was grinning from ear to ear as he placed his coffee carefully on the table, watching it impatiently as it cooled to the temperature that he liked it at.

“Blaise, Blaise, the mug is not edible.” Max reminded as he grinned. “The way you’re looking at that coffee, it’s like you want to swallow it whole.”

“I’m torn.” Blaise answered, not taking his eyes from it. “I want to just gulp it down in case Nas changes his mind, but I also want to sip it, savour it because it’s such a rare treat.”

“I’m not going to take it off you, feel free to sip away.” Nasta said, wrapping his arm around Harry tighter.

“You should have sex during the day more often.” Blaise insisted. “If it gets me a coffee I’ll even gladly volunteer.”

Harry giggled lightly as Nasta snorted, rolling his eyes before cuddling Harry, Leolin and Calix tighter in his arms.

“Mama?” Braiden called out.

“What, love?” Harry asked back.

“Gee ma.”

“No, you stay over there by Daddy Draco and Daddy Blaise.”
“Mama mama ma!”

“I can’t ignore him.” Harry said firmly as he wormed away from Nasta, put Calix in his arms and went to Braiden. “I don’t care if he depends on me, or cries if I’m out of the room. I can’t just sit there and ignore him as he calls out to me, I won’t.”

Harry left no room for argument as he cuddled Braiden, who clenched his hands tight into Harry’s shirt. Harry sat back on the floor by his cup of tea and he sat Braiden in his lap, who was now quiet and content to bounce on Harry’s lap, cooing and babbling. Harry held him more securely and let him carry on as he basked in his family, looking around at all of his children, all of his lovers and he felt happy, content and he reached over and handed Braiden the shape sorter. His son screeched in delight and started playing with his current favourite toy and Harry was very happy to play with him, the play increased when Draco slipped to the floor and joined in, helping to teach Braiden his shapes, even if he was far too young to actually grasp much, it never hurt to start early.

Chapter End Notes

A/N: This is going to be the last quick update, I am back in work now tomorrow, so updates will be coming slower again, but these last couple of chapters have been a nice treat yes? And a Scaled Bits chapter thrown in for good measure too. Thank you all for the birthday wishes, I had a brilliant day, I’ve now got a mountain of chocolate and I’m up a Ravenclaw and a Slytherin Quidditch jumper which are official Harry Potter garments, made by the same mill that made all of the film uniforms for the actors and are really comfy.

Okay, some people just aren’t getting the whole Ashleigh thing, so those of you on my Facebook page will recognise this elaboration, though reading chapter 26 of the Scaled Bits will help immensely, but if you still need some help, this is a cut and paste right from Facebook.

‘Okay, I'm going to have to explain because some readers are just not getting the whole Ashleigh thing or 'why Harry overreacted so much about it' Seriously? If you were as hideously as abused as Harry and you confided to people you loved and trusted with what happened, for the very first time I might add, and then they turned around and forgot what you had gone through even with daily reminders in the form of one of the people you live with actively working on the case, how the hell would you feel?

Also Harry's feelings on the matter, meaning him thinking she only sees him as way to get babies, apparently 'came out of the blue' well I'm sorry to the reader who said that but you obviously weren't reading closely enough because I have been building up to this plot line for a year! Not even weeks or months but a year! Dropping little hints throughout the story, just little odd comments or actions from her that didn't reveal too much, but hinted at what she actually thought.

I hate Ashleigh, I have always hated her and I did consider killing her off with Theodric so she would never have appeared in the fic, like Lowri, but because I added in Nasta, it was too convenient to have both of their Mothers dead, so I kept Ashleigh with the full idea that I would use her purely to show what happens to submissives who lose children and can't move on. It was subtle and well hidden, but if you have read closely enough you would have found that things don't add up, little actions and the things she says are odd and strange. There is a reason that Amelle does not want Ashleigh near her children, there is a reason other female submissives will not allow her near their children and it has everything to do with the instincts that Harry suppresses. She is not a danger to the children in any way, but that's not all the instincts are warning about.

I have been planning and hinting at this since Ashleigh was first introduced! I have been building this up from the beginning and I will see it through to the end I have planned regardless. That is all I will say on the matter.’

So I hope that helps you to understand, if it still doesn’t, go and read the Scaled Bits, if that doesn’t help, then message me and I’ll try and help you.

Right, we’re on to another fun vote! This is for the Dracken baby among the quintuplets. Vote for ONE baby only. So either Farren, Tegan, Regan or Calix and remember that this is for fun and your vote will not affect the outcome of the Dracken, because that was chosen before anything else, even before I named them.

Chapter Sixty-Nine – An Insatiable Ache and a Visit

Harry refused to let his children go any earlier than absolutely necessary and on the very morning that his heat was due, he still didn’t want to say goodbye, even though they were all packed up with every possible essential and nearly every toy and item of clothing they had.

They had flooed over to Alexander’s home early that morning and Harry couldn’t help the tears as he hunched over Leolin, refusing to let him go, even as Nasta knelt in front of him and tried to coax him into letting go of the baby that he clutched so desperately.

“Harry, he has to stay here, love. He can’t come with us. When you go onto heat, we will not be able to look after him. He needs to stay here, where he will be safe and loved.”

“I can’t, he needs me!” Harry stressed.

Nasta shuffled closer to him and gripped his waist, getting Harry to make eye contact.
“Harry, Leolin will die if you bring him back with us. He cannot survive a day without someone looking after him and we won’t be able to.”

“I know.” Harry said softly. “I don’t want to leave him though, why did I have to start my breeding cycle again? I don’t want to be pregnant.”

“I know you don’t, love. I know you didn’t want to start a breeding cycle, but you have and you could slip into your heat at any moment, we should have done this yesterday, just in case, but we have left it to the absolute last moment. Please hand Leolin to Alexander and we can go and relax in our rooms, I’ll get Max to make you those fruit tarts that you’ve become fond of and I’ll try and massage your back to ease your stress, okay?”

Harry nodded and he sniffled, kissing Leolin gently and handing him off to a patient, understanding Alexander, feeling like the majority of his heart went with him and his other five babies. He felt bereft, knowing that he would be going home without them, knowing that he was passing their care to someone else while he had continuous sex for six to ten days. He felt sick and guilty.

Nasta stood up and pulled Harry into a hug as his small shoulders shook from his sobs. Nasta scooped him up and nodded his head towards the fireplace, giving the others a hint to get moving. He carried Harry through the floo and he made good on his promises, giving Max a look and sending the big man into the kitchenette to make the fruit tarts that Harry liked, even if he did only eat the fruit from inside the tarts and left the pasty cases for one of them to eat.

He laid Harry gently on the rug, stoked the fire to get it burning once more and rubbed his hands together, using the friction to warm them before slipping them under Harry’s jumper and just rubbing light patterns onto his back to relax him and let his body get used to his touch to comfort him.

Blaise went about cleaning their rooms, cleaning their bedroom and making sure anything they could possibly hurt themselves on was removed from anywhere they could potentially have sex. Draco wasn’t bothered with doing the ‘menial tasks of a house elf” and instead he sat by Harry’s head with a brush and gently pulled it through the tangles, flinching every time the brush caught one of the numerous snags, itching to tug the brush through the hair to remove them, but wanting to just relax Harry with the soothing motions of hair brushing, massaging his scalp at the same time.

Harry felt so loved and so pampered, he loved his mates, he did, but he wanted his children. Nothing and no one came before his six children and he wanted them back, he wanted them home. He was surprised his Dracken was so calm with them being missing, especially Leolin, as his Faerie baby smelt strange and he would always smell strange to him due to his Faerie inheritance, and he did not like Leolin being out of his sight, or somewhere that he couldn’t see him or reach him if he cried, where he couldn’t check on him at will. He hated it, but the quietness of his Dracken helped relax him, helped soothe him, if his Dracken could put up with it, then so could he.

It would seem longer to his children than it would to him after all. For all he would remember, he would have a few hours of patchy sex and he would wake up six or ten days later feeling like his body had been beaten with a club for a week. He wouldn’t remember right away what had happened when the red haze took over him, he would only remember later on, but his babies would feel every single moment that he wasn’t there with them. Braiden would be especially upset and he wondered how Alexander and Kimberly would deal with him. He had absolutely stressed that he wouldn’t Harry’s heat hit him at early evening this time, one moment he was stood in the kitchenette peeling an orange for a snack, the next moment he was throbbingly hard and so hot that he wriggled in his light clothing. He abandoned his orange and slipped his sleeping shorts and boxer-briefs down together, rubbing his hands over his tingling skin and gasping softly at the hyper sensitive sensation. He gripped the hem of his tee-shirt and tugged it off, rubbing his chest and moaning lightly.

“Harry?” Draco asked.

Harry turned at the sound and Draco swallowed as he saw those wide open, lust blown, emerald green eyes pinned on him. It was only a moment later that the sweet, fertile scent of Harry’s calling pheromones reached him and his mind was just gone, his wings burst from his back, taking his shirt with it, his claws came out and ripped off his lounge trousers, and his fangs appeared as he leapt over the settee and pinned Harry to the counter trying to suffocate him with his tongue as he pushed himself at Harry, trying to penetrate him, but the angle was all wrong.

Draco bent down and hooked Harry’s thighs on his elbows, lifting him up and onto the counter before pushing himself into Harry and starting a fast, brutal pace that had Harry screaming. Hands were all over him, too many hands, too many mouths, not enough space, not enough room. He wailed.

Draco shivered as Harry tightened further and further around him and his orgasm was milked from him under the wave of demand from Harry for his seed. Almost before all of his seed was released into Harry, he was pulled backwards and replaced by Max, who pulled Harry away from the counter and sprawled him over the table instead, allowing for more room for the larger man to move.

Harry squeaked and then moaned as Max pushed into him and set up a harsh pace and rhythm that would bring him to orgasm the fastest, Harry’s heat clouded his own mind and tightened his gut, playing with his nerves and his mind until he arched his back in orgasm, screaming and clawing at Max, leaving bloody lines behind. The blood excited them all and Max’s own claws dug into Harry’s hips, leaving his mark for all to see.

Max rode through his orgasm and pushed so hard into him, Harry believed he was trying to come out through his stomach or spine, he screamed for his mates and they were all there, touching and licking him, sucking skin into their mouths and biting, rolling his eyes up into his head as the whitewash of pleasure blinded him, such an early orgasm after his last had his toes curling, his spine bowing and him screaming for his mates to hear.
Max took a breather over the top of him, letting his fluid get as far into him as possible, before someone shoved him away and had he been in his right mind, Harry would have laughed as Max fell over a chair leg and disappeared from his view onto the floor.

As it was, he wailed as he was left empty and alone and three soothing rumbles calmed him, he wasn’t alone, just not being filled, which was fixed easily when Blaise run soft, elegant hands up his legs, over his thighs and to his waist. Harry blinked at the sudden movement and found himself looking at the table top, bent over it as Blaise pushed into him from the new angle.

Harry’s neck arched all the way back, his spine curving with the pleasure of Blaise’s entry thrust and he made a soft noise of pleasure. The table shuddered and Harry’s eyes opened to see that Nasta had most likely thrown or slammed Draco down onto the table and was wrapping the blond’s legs around his own hips as he pushed forward into him. The sound Draco let out brought an answering moan from Harry.

An incredibly hard shove from behind made Harry’s mind flash to Max and he peered over his shoulder confusedly. Blaise was still inside of him, but Max had come up behind him and entered Blaise, taking control of the pace and force and Max was always forceful.

Dropping his head to the table, Harry shifted himself over just a couple of inches, ignoring the two annoyed growls from his dominants behind him. A harsh thrust had his head bowing back and him forgetting what he was doing, until he looked down again at the blond beauty between his straining arms, he bent down and tried to suffocate Draco with his tongue, coaxing his tongue to play and large, muscled arms wrapped around his shoulders and pulled him down to get a better angle.

Harry couldn’t help the quivers of pleasure that threatened to rip his mouth from Draco’s in a scream as his internal muscles gripped hold of Blaise tightly as his gut tightened and tightened until he jerked his mouth from Draco’s and yelled his orgasm to the top of the table, every muscle dancing, writhing as another orgasm took over his body, milking Blaise of his seed until they both collapsed and Harry curled up to recover.

Someone grabbed an arm and pulled until he was sat in someone’s lap, their large hands positioning him and themselves until with a gasp and more writhing; Harry was seated on their cock entirely, clutched on their lap.

He peered up at beautiful hazel-gold eyes and wrapped his arms automatically around Nasta’s neck, wrapping his legs tight around his waist, and the chair he was sat in, and he started a soft, smooth rocking motion. It was fine for the beginning, but Nasta’s instincts soon Overpowered his brain and it wasn’t nearly enough.

He stood up suddenly and put Harry’s back to the table top, his legs still wrapped around his waist and started a punishing, bruising pace that started Harry screaming endlessly.

His hands scrambled to find something to grab, but there was nothing there, nothing to hold, nothing to grab and he shrieked as Nasta seriously tried to come out of his throat. It felt like Nasta was lodged in his chest and the sensation threw his head back, the pain as it cracked against the table top not stopping the next scream of absolute pleasure as his body danced for Nasta.

Nasta bent over him and Harry lifted heavy, sluggish limbs to grip both fists into Nasta’s hair, tugging on him, wailing and screaming as Nasta’s rhythm quickened, but his fluidity fell apart under the onslaught of instinct and pheromones.

Harry’s back arched sharply and another orgasm was wrung from his tired aching body as Nasta filled him, falling on top of him gently, but heavily.
The five of them took a small breather, Harry hoped that it would give him time to catch his breath and calm his racing heart, but all too soon his limbs were being moved and pinned down and Blaise was pushing back into him, Draco slipping large hands under his shoulders and lifting him up and against Blaise’s chest, shoving them both down until Harry was laying on top of Blaise and Draco pushed in beside him, Harry’s breath caught in his throat and he arched back into Draco, even as Blaise rocked forward into him. Harry shook his head and screamed, ignoring Nasta crawling all over Max, pushing into the bigger man while biting at his neck and shoulder, but Max’s hand squeezed around his own and it helped ground Harry in the moment, helped him feel close to all four of his lovers and it made him moan loudly, squirming in his skin on top of Blaise. He wrapped a leg around Nasta’s thigh, not caring that he was impeding his movements or Max’s pleasure, he just wanted to touch all of them and as his gut tightened and his nerves tingled he felt connected to all of them and he screamed his orgasm even as his eyes rolled into the back of his head, his one hand clenched around his lover’s chest and his leg kicked out at Nasta.

Harry came down from his high curled up on Blaise’s chest, Draco pressing against them both heavily, Max was lying against him and Blaise, and Nasta was on top of him, all of them were breathing deeply and heavily and Harry enjoyed the short respite from the heat induced sex before his pheromones would pick up again and send them back into a frenzy. He already wanted to sleep for a week and it had only been a few hours or so, he couldn’t put up with a week plus of this, but he knew he would, he knew he’d have very little choice in the matter, but he knew that no matter what he would survive this and his mates would be right there with him. He’d be fine, no matter how he felt at the moment.

Harry woke up feeling awful. He groaned deeply in the back of his throat and consciously held back the distressed whine that would have brought his mates running from wherever they were.

He didn’t feel as bad as he had done in the past and certainly not as bad as he had when he had had a heat period when pregnant with Braiden, but it wasn’t really about which one was worse, he felt terrible here and now and that’s what mattered and he groaned again.

He rolled over and found the edge of the bed, using it to get himself sitting up by swinging his legs over the side of it. He stood up when he felt able to, but his legs were like liquid, he knees wouldn’t lock and his lower back felt like it had been cleaved in two.

He padded naked down the stairs and made his way straight into the bathroom to relieve his swollen bladder, which Harry was sure was causing most of the discomfort in his abdomen.

He washed his hands once he was done before padding out into the bedroom and going to the chest of drawers to get a pair of Blaise’s pyjama bottoms, he needed something loose but would still stay on his body without tying the drawstrings tight, which was sure to make sitting down uncomfortable.

He padded out into the living room and smiled at Max and Draco, who were lounging around, not doing much of anything. Harry wondered if they were as sore as he was, Nasta had been on a personal vendetta to make sure absolutely none of them were able to walk once the heat period was over.
“Blaise and Nas gone hunting?” He asked as Draco pulled him into the circle of his arms, throwing a leg up so that Harry was lying on his belly, on Draco’s chest, between his legs. A large hand pressed gently against his back and rubbed softly and Harry groaned as it helped to ease the pain in his lower back.

“Yeah, they should be back soon.” Max’s voice was rough, rough. Almost like he had swallowed sandpaper which had now lined his throat.

“I feel vile.” Harry complained. “I hope it’s another decade before I have to do that again.”

Harry felt Draco shift and he looked at the big blond, who sighed and looked at him with guarded silver eyes.

“Harry, that heat period wasn’t fertile. It was a dry heat. It’s only been seven days since you went onto heat, six days for the actual heat, this is the seventh.”

Harry felt like all of the air had been knocked out of him. He drew in a calming breath as the full weight of the situation sunk into him.

“I’m going to have another heat period in two months.”

“Well, technically in one month, three weeks and six days, but yes you will. Today is classed as the first day of your new breeding cycle.” Max croaked out.

“Fucking brilliant.” Harry groaned, letting out a sigh and resting against Draco, he’d deal with it when it came, but he really didn’t know what was worse at the moment, an endless string of dry heats where he and his mates fucked for six days bimonthly, or being pregnant once again with a possible set of multiples.

Harry was interrupted from his inner thoughts when the portrait door opened signalling his mates’ return, then the smell of fresh meat and blood hit him and he sat up and stared at the dead and skinned animal that Nasta was carrying. A small sound slipped out of his throat, part demanding growl, part subservient whine and Nasta smiled at him, flashing a deadly looking fang at him as he dumped the body on the floor for Harry’s inspection.

Harry didn’t bother inspecting it, anything that his mates brought back for him was good enough for him, he already knew it wasn’t poisoned or off, his mates would never do that to him, so he instead took his claws to the tender meat, carving out a bite sized cube to eat as his mates watched him take his fill.

The blood was still hot, so it was a recent kill, but Harry hated that it started cooling so quickly and he ate faster, chewing less and swallowing bigger chunks. Nasta sat behind him and spread his legs to put on either side of his body, hands falling to his hips as his chest framed Harry’s back. He rested his chin on Harry’s shoulder and turned to nuzzle at his cheek.

“Slow down, Cariad, or you’ll choke.” He coached softly, his cheek was almost completely clean shaven, he must have shaved only just before he went hunting to be this smooth, it wouldn’t last another hour.

“The blood goes cold.” Harry said back just as softly.

“Eat the meat and if you want blood afterwards, you can take it directly from me, my blood is very hot.”

Harry moaned slightly at the thought of sinking his fangs into Nasta’s arm to take blood straight from the vein. He ate slower, hating the blood which came with his food, which had once been hot and was now merely warm.

Once he had had his fill, he didn’t even feel like taking blood anymore, he just wanted to sleep so he curled up in Nasta’s lap, letting Draco and Max eat their fill of the prey that Nasta and Blaise had caught as Nasta stood up and away from the partially eaten carcass to cradle him on the settee with Blaise, the both of them had already eaten their fill and were content to curl up with Harry, who once all of his needs had been met, started getting a niggle in his brain about something. He kept pushing it away, but it was getting louder and more insistent and as soon as the niggle became a thought, his eyes widened and he sat up suddenly, almost catching Blaise’s jaw with his shoulder.

“My babies.” He gasped out, looking around the room quickly, as if hoping to find them hidden away in some corner.

Nasta sat up and held his shoulders lightly. “They’re safe, Harry, they’re with Alexander remember?”

Harry calmed down and deflated slightly as he remembered where they were as soon as Nasta told him. His brain supplied the memory of the morning that he had dropped them off and he sighed in relief.

“I hope they’re alright, we need to go and get them.”
“Tomorrow, love. You need more rest and it’s coming up to eight at night, they’ll all be asleep anyway and I’d hate to disturb them with a travel through the floo.”

Harry swallowed and nodded. “Okay, but first thing tomorrow we’ll go and get them.”

“Right after breakfast, I promise.” Nasta assured him. “I want our children back as much as you do, but we need to recover some more and I don’t particularly want to eat an animal in front of the children, so after breakfast is ideal.”

Harry couldn’t argue with that logic, even if he didn’t like it, so he nodded and settled down. Watching indulgently as Draco and Max play fought over bits of meat, or at least Harry thought they were play fighting. He cocked his head and watched more intently. It was like it was a real fight, but it wasn’t, Max certainly wasn’t using his whole body or strength to fight and Draco barely moved as he batted Max away.

“Are they fighting or not fighting?”

“They’re fighting, Caru, but a fight over food is common ground when there are two or more dominants. Max pulls rank, but Draco won’t settle for second best, so they slap at each other a bit, but you know Max, he’s a true feeder, he likes feeding us all, so he’s not fighting too hard to keep Draco away from the best parts of the meat. He’s letting Draco have it, but telling him at the same time that he still pulls rank and that it’s only because he’s letting Draco have it that he’s getting the prime parts of the animal that you left.”

“That’s sweet.” Harry smiled, Max flashing him a grin, which showed fang before scowling as he slapped at Draco’s hand again as he took the chunk of meat that Max had just carved out from his hand.

Blaise let out a soft breath and Harry turned to him, only to find him fast asleep. He grinned before wriggling down to lie beside him, cuddling in. Nasta rubbed both of their shoulders, kissing each of them on the cheek, before leaving them to sleep.

“Hunting took a lot out of him, he caught the first animal, our own meal, but after that he was fucked.” Nasta said as he pulled down the blanket from the back of the settee and threw it over them.

Harry hummed and with his very full belly, the scents of his mates still ingrained in his mind and the warmth from Blaise and the blanket, it all worked together to pull him off to sleep to recover a little more before tomorrow. He couldn’t wait to see his children again.

Harry was so happy to be surrounded by his babies once more, he was sat on the settee, Calix and Leolin in his arms, Braiden sat leaning against his one side, Farren was propped up on the other, Tegan was on his lap, her head supported by his knees and Regan was sat tummy to tummy with him, resting against him as Harry reclined back to make sure Regan didn’t topple backwards onto Tegan.

He was being laughed and cooed at by everyone, had already had a hundred photos taken of him, but he didn’t care as his babies were nearly all awake, the exceptions being Regan and Leolin, and they were all grinning and huffing at him and he felt so happy, though he was saddened to see how big they had gotten while he had been away.

He had sniffed each and every one of them deeply, searching for injuries, illness, bruises and scents. So many scents had been on them, Alexander and Kimberly, Richard and Myron, Aneirin, Marianna’s scent was in there faintly. Then there was also Talia, Alayla and Julinda, other scents that were slighter and fainter of people he had only met once, like Cassander and Alaric, Cepheus and Nicodemus, Julius and his lovely Wife Claire, who he remembered because she had helped him and had been the one to tell him that he was pregnant with the quintuplets, but the one scent he was searching for was missing. He smiled happily and cuddled his children tighter. Ashleigh had not touched or been near them while he was away.

“You’ve been hogging them for an hour!” Blaise whined as he came and snatched Tegan from his lap, sitting next to Farren and nuzzling her gently.

The next moment half the babies were gone and his mates were all sniffing, kissing, nuzzling and holding their children, leaving Harry with Calix and Braiden.

“How were they?” Harry asked Alexander.

“They were as good as gold, Harry. Braiden had some problems being away from you, but he broke on the third day.” Alexander assured him with a smile. “Your little five are getting bigger and stronger by the day, though Aneirin had to assure me that nothing was wrong with little Leo. I’ve never had to look after a Faerie baby before, it’s worrying if you don’t know what’s going on, but he’s easy to care for once you know what you’re doing.”

“She never came to see them did she?” Harry asked, unable to keep back the snarl or the question, even though he knew she hadn’t been near them or touched his children, that didn’t mean she hadn’t been here or tried to be here.

“No.” Myron assured him. He looked tired and ragged, but otherwise happy. “She did try and see them on the very first day, but I threatened to lock her in the attic if she tried it again.”

“I blocked her from the floo in any case.” Alexander told him. “As soon as I heard what she had done I made sure she couldn’t get into this house without me knowing, I won’t have any daughter, or son, in-law acting that way towards my family.”

Harry caught the added son in-law and bit his lip, wondering what he had done to get in Alexander’s bad books, thinking that maybe the whole thing with Ashleigh was getting to Alexander and that it was his fault. Myron was his youngest son after all, of course that would make him protective towards him; maybe he shouldn’t have asked the man to babysit after all. He swallowed and looked at Braiden; he wondered who he’d ask in two months’ time when he went onto another heat period.

“Mama.” Braiden cooed, patting his face.

Harry couldn’t help but smile as he threw an arm around Braiden and pulled him in close to his side, kissing the top of his head and the wild jet black hair that was silky and shiny. It hadn’t been brushed yet today; Draco was sure to notice soon and take over, getting Braiden’s hair just perfect.

“Stop with the miserable look, Harry, Granddad isn’t talking about you.” Talia assured him. “Of course he’s not; he loves you more than us sometimes! Uncle Alexus’ boyfriend walked out on him the other day.”

“What?” Max demanded. “Sean just upped and left Uncle Alexus?”

“Yes, Lex has been heartbroken since.” Kimberly sighed unhappily. “He’s sleeping in his old bedroom, he can’t stay in the house that he shared with Sean, he says there are too many memories and bad feelings.”

“Did he say why Sean left him? They’ve been together for forty years!” Max snapped, pacing angrily.

Alexander came and sat by Harry, wrapping him in a hug and pressing a kiss to his temple.

“I’d never hate you, Harry.” Alexander whispered to him, ignoring the other conversation. “You’re a wonderful, lovely boy and I’m thankful every day that you choose my Maxie for a mate, he really lucked out. But it seems my sons and daughters aren’t fairing too well. Myron is having problems with his mate, my Alexus has been left for another man by his life partner and my sweet Lydia is having arguments with her Husband Adam and all of this is overshadowed by my Mother’s declining health.”

Harry blinked. “You’re Mother is still alive?” Harry asked shocked, then he realised how it had sounded and clapped a hand over his mouth.

Alexander chuckled and squeezed his shoulder, Braiden happily sat between them looking at them both in turn and gurgling, drooling excessively.

“I’m her youngest son, I have two younger sisters, but my Mother is two hundred and thirty-six, she has been unwell for a while and her health is rapidly declining, I fear she won’t last much longer.”

“What’s your Mother’s name?” Harry asked curiously.

“Evelyn.” Alexander said softly. “My Father’s name was Angelo, he died several years ago. They were both Drackens. Half of my children were named after them both in some way, but unfortunately my little Aya died at just a year old. Twenty-four children and three of them are dead already. Aya died when she went to the hospital with a serious chest infection, she caught Dragon Pox from another patient and there was nothing they could do. My Rosella died next, she was eighteen and always so opinionated, she went out to South America to explore other countries, she never came back alive and my son Benedict was put to death by the Counsel, he was forty-six.”

“You’re a very strong man and Kimberly is a strong woman, I wouldn’t know what I’d do if I lost a child. It was bad enough almost losing Calix and Leolin at birth.”

“You’d carry on, Harry. It’s all you can do when you already have a family depending on you. You work through the pain and the loss, you grieve in private where none of the children can see you fall apart because that’s not what they need from you at that moment, they need support and comfort and you can’t give into your own desires to break down with them, you have to be strong for them.”
Harry smiled. “I hope that if a time comes when I’m in the same situation, and I pray that I never am, but if I do, I hope that I can be as strong as you are.”

“You’ll have endless amounts of support if ever it came to happen, Harry. It’s always harder on the younger children, but it was my quintuplets and Myron who were hit the worst, they were younger, Myron more so as he had a sister that he never knew as she died two years before he was born and my quintuplets were only eight months old. Kimberly and I never had the option to break down, we had such a large family and they depended solely on us, we’re sure that Aya’s death directly resulted in Kimberly’s ability to conceive, it took a year and a half after Aya’s death before she had another heat period and thirteen months of dry heats before she conceived our very last child, our miracle baby, Myron. It’s been fifty-four years since Kimberly’s last heat period and we’re sure at this point that she won’t have any more, so we’ll have to surround ourselves with our grandchildren and great-grandchildren.”

Harry smiled as Alexander rested a hand on Braiden’s head.

“I’m sorry I won’t be giving you any more great-grandchildren just yet.” Harry said. “I didn’t have a fertile heat.”

Alexander nodded. “I knew as soon as you came through the floo this morning. It wasn’t long enough for a fertile heat, but that’s alright, Harry, no matter how long it takes, I’m very happy with the six that you’ve given me so far. They’re wonderful children.”

Harry beamed at the praise and he cuddled Calix and Braiden tightly. He loved his children and knew they were the best babies in the world, but hearing others saying the same made him all warm and prideful inside.

“Look at you, you little peacock.” Richard teased, easing himself down by Harry’s legs.

Harry grinned. “Of course I am. People are praising my pride and joys.”

Richard wiggled one of Calix’s legs and kissed the bottom of a tiny foot. “My little Grandchildren are always a source of pride and joy. They’re going to rule the world one day.”

Harry snorted. “If you teach any of my children any stereotypical ‘bad guy’ quotes or actions I’ll string you up by your ankles.”
“Aww, not even sitting in a swivelly chair stroking a butt ugly cat?” Richard pouted.

“You give my children any animal or even put it in their heads, you’re dead.” Harry threatened.

“I wouldn’t. Julinda took in a stray cat when she was four, that beast scrambled hell out of near newborn Alayla. Myron almost killed it before Max rescued it and took it to an animal centre.”

“He would have been what, eight?” Harry asked.

Richard nodded. “He was a right humanitarian before he turned sixteen and started killing animals for food.”

“He was a vegetarian?” Harry asked, a grin taking over his face.

“Not as such, but he never liked eating much meat, red meats were the hardest to feed him, he could cook and eat a chicken by the time he was fourteen, but mention that we were having steak for dinner and he let his Mother take over. That lasted only until he was sixteen, but he truly got into meat cooking at eighteen, no idea what changed his mind.”

“Talia pointed out that I’d have a submissive to feed who would want meat in the first phase of their breeding cycle, so I started learning how to cook meat, never intending to like it.” Max shrugged. “I always try what I cook to test it and as I ate more of it, I just never stopped eating it and eventually I started to enjoy it. Now you couldn’t keep a nice steak away from me.”

“I wonder if any of our children will be vegetarian.” Harry frowned thoughtfully looking at Braiden.

“I want to try him on textured foods next, maybe rice puddings and biscuits to teach him to chew.”

“I can do the rice pudding, but for the biscuits we might be better off buying rusks or baby biscotti.”
Harry nodded and snuggled Braiden. “Would you like that, Braiden? Some rice pudding and biscuits to nibble on to help your teething.”

Braiden cooed at him and Harry grinned.

“I’m sure that baby understands you.” Alexander laughed. “You have a very tight, special bond.”

“I hope it’ll last longer than his babyhood though, right through his entire life, no matter what.”

“I have no doubts that it will.”

Max squeezed himself between Harry and Blaise, causing Blaise to growl unhappily as he had to shift right up against the arm of the seat. Harry thanked god that there was space on the settee for four of them, even if it was a tight fit with Braiden sat on the settee himself.

“I’m so tired.” Max groaned.

“As long as you got in first.” Alexander scowled at his Grandson. “You need to practice getting in there, I need more Great-Grandchildren from my Grandchildren. I swear all of you are so lazy, I had twenty-four children.”

“Granddad, I’ve given you six Great-Grandchildren in a year!” Max gaped.

Alexander huffed. “It’s not enough, get on with making babies.”

“You have thirty-six Grandchildren, Father.” Myron reminded as he wandered over. “And twenty-four Great-Grandchildren, you have enough for now.”

“I’ll never have enough.” Alexander waved him away. “Tell Caesar’s Wife that I want to see that new bump of hers, has he got her under control yet?”

“He hasn’t, but Harry has.” Richard laughed. “Caesar wrote to us the other day, her pregnancy is going well. She’s just starting to get morning sickness; I don’t envy her getting it this early on, she’s “only a month gone.”

“And how is Eleonora?”

“Fine, she’s eight months old now and apparently she’s started bouncing around the floor.”

Draco scoffed. “Braiden’s been doing that for the past month.” He boasted.

“He’s also a Dracken and Nora isn’t.” Nasta reminded him. “He’ll be crawling before her, I can guarantee it.”

Harry slid to the floor, using Richard as a crash mat, pulling Braiden with him and handing a still sleeping Calix to Alexander.

He set Braiden on his hands and knees and tapped his bottom; Braiden started giggling immediately and bounced on his hands.

“It’s so cute when he does that!” Alayla cooed.

“He wants to crawl.” Harry insisted. “You want to crawl, Braiden.”

But his baby still didn’t want to move; he went as far as to sit back on his feet and happily looked around him curiously.

“He’s a very curious boy.” Kimberly praised happily. “He wanted to know what was in every single cupboard the fifth morning that he was here as I was making him his baby porridge. He’ll be a very bright boy.”

Harry couldn’t help it as he swelled again at the praise, unable to keep the grin off of his face. Nasta chuckled at him and Harry grinned wider.

“I can’t help it!” He insisted as Richard started teasing him. “My Dracken is very close to the forefront and I’m very happy to have people praising my children.”
Draco yawned and Blaise followed his lead. Harry couldn’t have stopped the long, lingering yawn that almost unhinged his jaw if he had wanted to.

“I think it’s home and to bed for you three.” Nasta said sternly. “A small nap won’t kill you.”

Harry nodded and the five of them said goodbye to the Maddison family and bundled up their children and their things and they headed home.

Blaise went to curl up on the settee, Draco dropped where he stood, onto the rug in front of the fire and Harry checked all of his babies were alright before kissing Nasta and Max, who were on baby duty and he headed into the bedroom so that he could grab a long nap in their bed. He startled and almost screamed when he shut the door and turned around to find someone sitting on the purple settee. Though he quickly and thankfully recognised the familiar face of Amelle and Eleonora, who was on her lap with a stuffed toy.

“Amelle? Why are you here, is everything alright?” Harry asked as he pressed a hand to his rapidly beating chest.

“Are your mates here?” She asked softly.

Harry nodded. “Blaise and Draco are taking a nap and Max and Nasta are on baby duty.” He said as he sat down beside her and took the beautiful baby girl from her and giving her chubby cheek a soft kiss, holding her gently.

“I…I needed someone to talk to. Caesar has been driving me mad, he was bad with Eleonora, but he’s so much worse since I’ve been…”

“Less of a bitch?” Harry questioned with a grin after the pause stretched on.

Amelle gave him a wan smile. “Yes. I’m only a month pregnant, Harry and he won’t even let me get out of bed by myself. I just needed to get away, I’m still at odds with his family, my family will be the first place he looks and you were the only other person I could think to come to.”

“So you haven’t told him where you’ve gone?”

Amelle shook her head. “He wouldn’t have let me come, especially not through the floo and not by Harry nodded. “That’s understandable.”

“So you won’t tell?”

Harry shook his head. “Of course not. If you want to hide out here until he hunts you down that’s fine.”

Amelle gave him a bashful smile, her hands playing restlessly in her lap.

“Hold on, I’ll go get us a cup of tea.”

“How can you get two without them knowing that I’m here?”

“Please.” Harry grinned. “Watch the master.”

Harry handed Eleonora back to Amelle and he went back out into the living room, leaving the door open a crack.

“Harry, I thought you were going to sleep? Are you okay, can’t you sleep?” Max asked softly, careful not to wake Blaise or Draco.

“I’m fine; I want a cup of tea though.” Harry replied. “I’m so wound up from seeing the kids that I can’t sleep, so I want some relaxing tea.”

Harry went into the kitchenette and filled the kettle, setting it to boil.

“I can make it for you if you want.” Max offered.

“That’s alright. I won’t take long.” Harry gave a fake yawn.
He poured two cups of tea and got a plate of biscuits before heading back into the bedroom.

“Why do you need two cups?” Nasta asked with an indulgent smile and a raised eyebrow, like Harry had done something particularly quirky or cute.

“In case I need another one after I finish the first one and still can’t sleep.” Harry replied as if it was obvious. “I don’t want to get back into bed, all warm and cosy, only to have to get back out again for another cup of tea.”

Max snorted. “Alright, but if you get biscuit crumbs in that bed I’ll kill you, I absolutely hate crumbs between the sheets.”

“I’ll be careful.” Harry said as he slipped into the bedroom and kicked the door closed. He gave Amelle a grin and she had a grudgingly impressed look on her face.

Harry set up a wandless silencing charm and handed Amelle a cup of tea and offered her the biscuits, which she nibbled on.

“That was impressive.” She mumbled.

“You just have to know how to play them, Amelle. Surely Caesar has to work sometimes?”

She nodded. “Yes but he comes and checks in on me every hour. It really is becoming too much now. I have about six more months of this, I can’t take even another week of his behaviour, Harry. I had to get away, just for a while.”

“If I wasn’t in school still I’d offer a weekend holiday away, submissives only.” Harry grinned. “Though I don’t think even I could get away with that.” He murmured ruefully.

“You just had a heat period didn’t you?” Amelle asked curiously.

Harry scowled. “Unfertile. It lasted six days.”
“I’ve heard that sometimes happens with the very fertile submissives, if they have a large clutch so close together, their next heat is usually unfertile, I’ll guarantee your next heat will be fertile, how long are your cycles?”

“Bimonthly.” Harry frowned distastefully.

“Really? Wow, we’ll be pregnant together again.” She grinned.

Harry chuckled. “Yeah, and once again you’ll give birth before me.”

“I might not if you have another five.”

Harry’s face fell. “Don’t even go there. I couldn’t have another five that was the worst I have ever been and almost losing two of them because of how under developed they were, I wouldn’t wish that on anyone.”

“I’m sorry; I didn’t mean to bring it up.”

Harry nodded. “That’s alright, I know you didn’t, but it’s still a very sensitive subject and with my Dracken being so close to the surface.”

“You’re right, I shouldn’t have brought it up, but did you hear about Alexus and Sean?”

Harry nodded, letting the subject be changed happily. “I don’t think I met Alexus personally, though I know he and Sean were at Alexander’s birthday last year, it’s terrible, forty years they’ve been together.”

“That’s not all though, Lydia’s having trouble even though she’s pregnant and Myron and Richard are having trouble with Ashleigh, I told you she was strange.”

Harry smiled sadly. “I wanted so badly to believe the best of her.”
“Some people just don’t deserve that, Harry; some people don’t deserve people to believe in them because they don’t believe in themselves.”

Harry bit his lip. “I feel so stupid, Amelle. I trusted her, I fought for her when you kept Nora from her and this is how she treats me after everything?”

“What did she do, Harry? I don’t think Caesar knows it all, but he is upset.”

“There have been little comments that made my Dracken peek up…”

“I know what you mean.” Amelle cut in. “It started when I was pregnant, she was just so interested in the pregnancy, but it was easier on me because I live outside of Britain, it’s harder to get an international Portkey or floo access for such a long distance, but whenever I saw her, she was always more interested in the pregnancy than in me personally. I thought it was because Nora would be her first grandchild, but it still put me on edge.”

Harry nodded. “Both of my pregnancies she was like it, but when I mentioned the selective reduction, it was then when I started perking up. She was more concerned with me terminating a child than she was if I lived or not afterwards, but it was when she actually forgot about…well you know what my childhood was like don’t you?”

Amelle nodded. “Caesar told me little parts, but I don’t know the full extent, but she forgot about that? That’s not something you ever forget about a person.”

“It was then that a year’s worth of hints and clues and suppressed instincts worked together and I saw the bigger picture, she didn’t actually see me as a person, but as a way to give her babies. I felt sick and I feel a fool to have ignored my instincts when they were right all along.”

“Those instincts are there for a reason, Harry.” Amelle told him softly.

“I know, but those same instincts told me to keep my children away from Remus too, but I know he would never, ever hurt them.”

“Are you sure about that? Can you say with any certainty that an accident won’t happen and he’ll hurt one of them?”
Harry shook his head. “He wouldn’t, Amelle. He’s a lovely, kind man.”

“Lovely men have accidents, Harry.”

“I know, but if that was the case then I wouldn’t let anyone near them, you can’t go through life isolating them away from everyone. It just doesn’t work like that; sometimes you just have to take a chance.”

“But what if they get hurt?” Amelle asked in a small voice.

“Then you pick them up, dust them off and set them back on their feet, it’s all we can do. They need to get a few colds and infections, a few bumped heads and scraped knees, Amelle; don’t you remember your first scraped knee?”

Amelle thought long and hard, her mouth puckering and a little wrinkle appearing between her eyebrows. “The earliest I remember was when I was five, it wasn’t a scraped knee, but I was at a play park just around the corner from my house, it was a regular family outing. My Mother and Father would sit on a bench while I and my brothers would run wild. I was on the monkey bars and my hand slipped, I landed on my bottom, but I banged my elbow hard and had a graze and a small cut, my Mother tried smothering me, talking about diseases and infections, my Dad just licked the cut and graze to close them up, turned me around and told me to get back on the monkey bars. The pain was gone before the tears had even dried on my cheeks.”

Amelle smiled at the memory and Harry smiled too, slightly sadly that he didn’t have any normal incidents like that, he had never been taken to the play park and his first injury that he could remember was a slapped hand and he couldn’t have been any older than three.

“You need to remember that memory, Amelle, remember how your Mother’s actions made you feel compared to your Father’s, think of Eleonora in your place, having fun in that park on those monkey bars, she needs that fun, Amelle, she needs to interact with other people, other children. She needs to scrape her knees a few times and every bug or cold she gets will only strengthen her immune system. She’s going to be fine and your new baby will be just as fine.”

“I still hope I have a little girl.”

“You need another little girl.” Harry teased lightly. “There are too many men and boys in this family, it doesn’t need us adding to it.”

Amelle chuckled. “That’s true enough. I have been getting better you know. I was even looking for a small job, just a few hours a week, but time to give Caesar time with Nora alone, without me hanging over them, but then I got pregnant and he said there was no way I was leaving the house.”

“You shouldn’t put up with that; I say get a job regardless, if he doesn’t like it then tough. He can’t control you like this, just like you can’t control him, you’ve been doing better, he should reward that with space, trust and privacy and he should absolutely not treat you like a prisoner regardless. That’s not right and it’s not fair.”

“I knew you would understand.” Amelle smiled widely. “I don’t want to be far away from Eleonora, but there was a nice little café in the town where we live. I would serve a few people, wipe down some tables and then go back home again. A little space and time outside of the house, it would have been fine.”

“You shouldn’t stand for it, I completely agree, if you need help wrangling him, I’ll happily do it, I’m not pregnant and I have two months to get him into touch before the next heat period.”

Amelle giggled. “You can’t wrestle Caesar, Harry, he’s a dominant.”

“I used to wrestle with Blaise all the time when it was just the two of us.” Harry said fondly. “It stopped as soon as I was pregnant, then I got pregnant again right after and I guess we’re too busy to do it now.”

“You should do it if it makes you both happy; he doesn’t need to be the one to initiate it, does he?”

Harry grinned. “I guess not.” He laughed happily before they both heard Draco yelling and the unmistakable sound of Caesar’s voice shouting, before Myron’s voice joined in.

“Oh well, it was only a matter of time and I couldn’t hide forever.” Amelle smiled. “I liked our talk though, Harry, we should do it more often.”

Harry nodded and stood up and strode out into the living room.
“What is all this noise, why are you shouting around my babies?” Harry demanded sternly, picking Farren up and cuddling him.

“Amelle and Nora have gone missing; I need Max to help me find her.” Caesar said, speaking far too fast, completely panicked.

Harry rolled his eyes. “You worry too much.”

“Harry, Amelle going missing is very serious, especially with Nora too.” Max told him. “Where was she last?”

“At home, I went to work and I checked in on her and she wasn’t there, I’ve been everywhere and I can’t find her, I need your help, please.”

“Was there any sign of a struggle?” Nasta asked.

“Well…no, but…”

“Then how do you know she didn’t just go to the shops or the park or to a library?” Nasta asked with a frown.

“I told her to stay in!”

“Wait, you told her to stay in?” Max asked. “Why would you do that, that’s not taking care of her, is she unwell?”

“No, but she’s pregnant…”

“That’s no excuse.” Draco glared holding his chest and stomach area, Harry deduced that Caesar had landed on him when he had flooed in, he made a note to massage Draco’s front for him later.

“If I wanted to go anywhere when pregnant I would.” Harry said. “Besides you don’t need to go all psycho or anything, Amelle’s here and I assure you she has Eleonora with her.”
“She’s here?” Max and Caesar said together and Harry couldn’t help but smile at them.

Amelle stepped out of the bedroom and even though she was inch taller than him, she still stood behind him when Caesar rushed to her and Harry shoved him backwards.

“There are going to be some ground rules set down, Caesar, you can’t treat Amelle like a prisoner, no matter your reasoning’s or motivations, it’s not right.” Harry said sternly. “She’s pregnant, so what? It’s not like she’s ill or dying or disabled, she’s fine and she’ll still be fine if you leave her alone for longer than an hour.”

“Why didn’t you tell me, Amelle?” Caesar asked.

“You weren’t listening, Caesar. I’m a month pregnant; I don’t want to know what you’re going to be like in six months’ time. I can’t take this anymore, your behaviour is stifling me, so I’m putting my foot down. It stops today, I will be taking that café job and you are going to give me the space that I’ve earned, I don’t want to move back in with my parents, but I will if you carry on.”

Caesar looked shell shocked and Myron clipped him behind the ear, muttering about his stupid children before excusing himself and flooing away, saying that he didn’t want to be involved, but that if he heard another word about Caesar treating Amelle as he had then he’d go over his knee.

“I…I promise, just, let’s go home okay. I’ve been out of my mind with worry.”

“Just calm down, Caesar.” Max coached his baby brother, wrapping an arm around him. “She’s your mate and your Wife, the Mother to your children, she deserves respect just for putting up with you, fuck knows no one else would.”

Caesar gave a wry smile and Harry hugged Amelle and Eleonora hard. “Don’t be strangers alright, you can come any time.”

Max kissed Nora and then much to her surprise, he kissed Amelle’s cheek.

“Harry’s right, every time you go home it’s like you’ve dropped off the planet but for a few owls, don’t be strangers to family.” He told her, chucking Nora under the chin to hear her gurgled giggles.
They said their goodbyes before heading to Alexander’s to say goodbye to him, apparently Caesar had panicked him too.

Harry sat on the settee with Farren and sighed, his tiredness from before hitting him like a ten ton weight.

“Are you ready to actually go to bed now or are you hiding any more fugitives in your bedroom?” Nasta teased him with a smirk.

Harry snorted. “She just wanted to talk and get away from Caesar for a little while, I was hardly going to deny her the chance to offload the heavy weight on her chest. She wanted someone to tell her that it was alright for her to have a job and that it wasn’t alright for Caesar to lock her up and check on her every hour like a prison guard.”

“I’ll have words with him about that.” Max shook his head, coming to hug Harry and give him a sweet kiss. “The only reason I would lock you up and I mean the only reason, would be to have my wicked way with you in the bedroom. I’d keep you as a pleasure slave, you’ll be unable to leave my bed, you’ll be supplied with absolutely everything you needed and I would have my fill of your luscious body every night when I got home from work.”

“What fantasy land are you living in?” Blaise snorted. “You have four of us to live with.”

“You’d be right on the bed next to Harry.” Max leered. “And so would Draco, Nasta would have to be locked in a dungeon.”

“You can’t lock Nasta in a dungeon just to have unlimited sex with me, Draco and Blaise.” Harry grinned.

“Why not?”

“You just can’t. Besides Draco and Blaise would have something to say about being kept as your pleasure slaves.”

“Damn right I will.” Draco grumbled. “I am no one’s pleasure slave.”
“Oh please, Draco; it’s only a mental fantasy.”

“Not even then.” Draco replied snobbily. Harry chuckled.

“Hold on, does that mean you wouldn’t mind being my pleasure slave?” Max asked, realising what he had said.

Harry winked. “Give me unlimited access to my babies and you can have all the fantasy slave sex that you want, but I want to be fed, by hand.”

Nasta chuckled and ruffled his hair. “I think it would be the other way around. We’ll be Harry’s pleasure slaves, at his beck and call twenty-four hours a day, feeding and bathing him, being roped into sex whenever he pleases.”

“As if you’d begrudge me sex.” Harry laughed. “Roped into it my arse. You’d love every minute.”

Nasta grinned and nodded. “No doubt I would, but I refuse to wear a thong.”

“I wouldn’t dream of making you wear a thong, you’ll wear nothing when around me and a sheer robe when not around me.”

All of them laughed and Draco shook his head. “This is insane; we’re talking about enslaving one another.”

“It’s alright, it’s only fantasy, Draco, there is nothing wrong with fantasising about it as long as you don’t actually do it. I wouldn’t really dream of enslaving you all, though when I’ve given you all a billion babies and my tight, firm body is completely and utterly ruined, saggy and scar ridden, I want a special fantasy recreated on my birthday.”

Blaise smiled and bent to kiss him. “I’m sure we could manage that.” He whispered against his mouth.

Harry smiled and hugged Blaise one armed, but Farren was getting fussy, even though it wasn’t time for a feed.
“I wonder if he’s been thrown out of sorts by the week away from us.”

“He’s just a growing boy, he needs more food.”

“I’m dreading when he’s weaned; I can see his food ending up halfway across his face.”

“That’s my boy!” Max replied proudly and Harry shook his head, even with the smile on his lips.

“Do me a favour and go and pick a few things up for me from your place, I left them there thinking that we wouldn’t want or need them, but now we do.”

“Alright, what do you need?”

Harry wrote down a little list on a piece of scrap parchment and Max went to floo to his house after kissing them all goodbye. Harry felt so lucky to have so many mates who loved him so much and unconditionally too. It was just as well, because he loved them all just as much and just as unconditionally, he couldn’t see himself without any of them anymore, no matter what he had thought or believed in the very beginning, he had quickly changed his mind and he was so very, very happy with his choices and the dynamics of his forged family and his children. He couldn’t imagine life without all six of his children, again no matter what he had thought in the beginning.

He could not give up any of them now and if he had had to have a selective reduction he would not be able to name which children he would have preferred to be ‘taken’, he shivered and cuddled Farren tighter, just the thought that he might not have the baby in his arms to hold made him feel sick, but it was worse if he allowed himself to linger on what had gone on in that bedroom, when he almost never had Calix and Leolin to lose in the first place. He felt cold.

Blaise wrapped an arm around him and pressed a kiss to the corner of his mouth.

“You’re shivering, Prezioso, are you well?”

Harry nodded. “Yeah, I’m fine, just thinking.”

“If those thoughts make you shiver so, then cast them away, Bello.” Blaise encouraged and Harry smiled, wishing that it was that simple to forget that two of his children hadn’t been breathing at birth.

Chapter End Notes

A/N: Sorry about the rather rubbish heat scene, but it’s all I could get out at this time and knowing I have to write another one in a couple of chapters is making me dread when it comes up, though I hope you’ve enjoyed the rest of the chapter.

Chapter 6 of Damaged Bodies should be out next, but I’m not sure when, but I’ll see what I can do before work tomorrow.

Last Time

He could not give up any of them now and if he had had to have a selective reduction he would not be able to name which children he would have preferred to be ‘taken’, he shivered and cuddled Farren tighter, just the thought that he might not have the baby in his arms to hold made him feel sick, but it was worse if he allowed himself to linger on what had gone on in that bedroom, when he almost never had Calix and Leolin to lose in the first place. He felt cold.

Blaise wrapped an arm around him and pressed a kiss to the corner of his mouth.

“You’re shivering, Prezioso, are you well?”

Harry nodded. “Yeah, I’m fine, just thinking.”

“If those thoughts make you shiver so, then cast them away, Bello.” Blaise encouraged and Harry smiled, wishing that it was that simple to forget that two of his children hadn’t been breathing at birth.

Chapter Seventy – April

April arrived and Harry snorted at every childish attempt to catch him out with an April Fools joke. All day he had had students come up to him telling him shit to get him to react, but he couldn’t even laugh at them, because exempting his friends and a few others, all everyone seemed to be focusing on was telling him that Voldemort was back from the dead, one or all of his lovers had left him, one of his children was in the hospital or that they had seen one of his lovers kissing someone else.

By the time the last bell rang at five, Harry was so very glad that the day was over, as he rushed out of Defence Against the Dark Arts and legged it all the way back to his rooms. He made it back first, even though Draco had had Charms and was closer, though Blaise had had Transfiguration, so he should have been the last back.

He tapped the portrait door and shut it closed, sighing in relief as he went and hid himself in Max’s side.

“What happened?” Nasta asked, bending over the settee and pulling him out of Max’s side.

Harry sighed. “I can’t believe how immature the brats of this school are.”
“April Fools?” Max queried.

Harry nodded. “If I hear that again today then I’m going to blow a hole through a wall. Hey Harry, I just saw your biggest lover kissing a Hufflepuff! Hey Potter, one of your children is in hospital. Draco’s doing this with another Slytherin; Blaise is in the boys’ bathroom with a sixth year Ravenclaw.”

Nasta kissed him to stem his words. “Ignore them, love. You know we’d never do anything like that to you, to each other or to our family and if anything had happened to the children, you would have been the first person to know, one of us would have come to get you or sent a message with a teacher.”

Harry nodded. “I know, but it’s been constant, all day! I can’t wait until I graduate and I never have to see any of those bastards again.”

Max grinned and pulled his chin into a kiss before moving to make some tea. Harry turned to grin at Braiden, who was sat in a baby walker in the middle of the room, the seat raised up high enough so that his feet didn’t touch the floor, but his son seemed very happy to be sat up on his own where he could see the whole room and everyone in it.

“Are you enjoying yourself, love?” He questioned hunching down in front of the walker, bouncing Braiden’s little hands on the tray, where a dummy lay forgotten and Braiden’s favourite teething ring was resting.

“He’s loved that walker, I’m so glad that you asked me to go and get it.” Max answered. “We’ve had fun all day, I’ve been pushing him around in it, he loves it.”

Harry grinned and pushed Braiden back before pulling him forward again. Braiden actually threw his arms up and screeched and giggled hysterically.

Harry couldn’t help but chuckle at him as he did it again. Max slipped down onto the floor and pushed Harry aside.

“You’re not doing it properly.” Max told him, gripping the walker before pushing Braiden far faster than Harry would have dared and he was shocked, but he breathed deeply and clenched his fists to control his instincts to attack Max, listening instead as Braiden shrieked in happiness, just laughing and laughing as he was zoomed around the room.
Nasta shook his head and handed Harry a mug of tea, pulling him to sit on the settee.

“It’s alright, love. It looks dangerous and I had words with Max when he first did it, but Braiden adores it and I’ve checked and he’s not being hurt and Max isn’t really going that fast after you watch them for a while and Max makes sure not to take any fast or sharp turns.”

“Of course I don’t, I love this boy, I would never want to hurt him.” Max said as he shuffled past them on his knees making car noises, Braiden screaming in joy.

Blaise and Draco came in together and stopped short, just watching as Max pushed and pulled Braiden around the room.

“What are you doing?” Draco asked at the same time Blaise hissed and unsheathed his claws.

Nasta leapt to intercept him and held him on his lap, on the floor and took a fistful of his hair, biting the back of his neck calmingly.

It was the first time Harry had gotten to see another mate calmed down in that way and it made him smile. He knew the same sensation of liquid relief that made Blaise go boneless in Nasta’s arms before he was hauled up and sat on the settee next to him as Max carried on his game with Braiden.

“Listen to his happiness.” Nasta whispered to Blaise. “Actually see him. It’s not too fast or sharp, he’s fine, he loves it.”

“Where are the quintuplets?” Harry asked after a quick look showed that all of the bassinets empty.

“Napping in the bedroom, Max’s game was too loud and Braiden’s screeches kept waking them up and they were getting grumpy.”

Harry went into the bedroom with Draco, who went to the bathroom to shower and change out of his uniform. Harry checked on his children and smiled at their peacefully sleeping faces. He could stare at them all day if he chose to, unfortunately having four mates, an older, more active child and school work to do, it was nearly impossible to catch moments like this where there was next to nothing for him to do and he could indulge himself and watch them sleep for a few minutes.

Damp arms circled him and he leant back onto Draco.
“That was a very quick shower for you.” Harry murmured, soaking in Draco’s quiet presence.

“Hmm…I knew you were out here and that we’d be alone for a few minutes.”

Harry chuckled and turned to face Draco, looking up into his face and admiring the splay of muscles under his hands. Draco still had the most defined chest of all his mates and he loved running his fingers, and his tongue, into the sharp dips and curves of his solid muscles.

Every single one of his mates had very different bodies, but the one thing they had in common was that they weren’t very hairy, Blaise was the hairiest and he had only a controlled patch on his chest, no matter how much he thought that Nasta might be the hairiest because of his stubble problem, he had next to no hair on his chest or back. Draco was the smoothest, his very fine, white blond hairs were barely visible on his arms and legs, let alone anywhere else, but he was still the only man he knew who styled his pubic hair.

“I can’t wait for this school year to be over and I can stop worrying so much.” Harry sighed.

“Two months, love, just two months, keep thinking about that. We have exams at the end of next month and then we don’t have anything to do or worry about until our graduation and it’ll be so worth it when we graduate with honours.”

Harry chuckled and kissed Draco’s pectoral. “I love you, Draco.”

“I love you too, but it’s going to be worth it just to prove to everyone who were so sure that we would fail wrong. I want to rub their faces in it until they don’t have noses left, but I doubt Nasta would let me.”

“I’m sure he’d turn a blind eye to that, love. He’s been turning a lot of blind eyes to us lately.”

“He’s getting more accepting of us and our habits, I mean, who would have thought he’d willingly offer Blaise coffee? I was as stunned as Blaise.”

Harry laughed. “I know, but we’re all really still new to this, we’ve been together for a little over a year. That’s not really a long time to get to know one another, especially when most of our time is taken up by our six children.”
“We have a long time to get to know the stupid stuff like favourite colours, but we have the important stuff down already, like favourite foods, birthdays, family, we’ve focused on what’s important, everything else can come later, but just for you to know, my favourite colour is teal.”

Harry grinned. “I don’t think I have a favourite colour, but the colour of my children’s eyes comes very close. I hate admitting favouritism, but Braiden’s eyes and Leolin’s are stunning.”

“There’s nothing wrong with admitting you like their eye colour.” Draco told him with a snort of amusement. “It’s not like you’re admitting that you love them more.”

“I guess not, but still, it feels wrong to me to even admit favouring their eyes over their siblings.”

Draco kissed him and Harry sunk into that kiss, wrapping his arms around Draco’s shoulders.

“I was wondering where you two had gone too.” Nasta’s voice cut through their kiss. “It’s about time for a feed; the little ones will be hungry.”

Harry looked over the bassinet and sighed as he found Calix awake and looking at him steadily through jet black eyes.

“I swear this one needs bells or a beeper.” He said as he picked Calix up gently. “You do, don’t you?”

Harry dug a single finger into Calix’s belly and wiggled it, eliciting joyous laughter from his three month old son.

“Come on my little gummy baby, let’s get you a bottle.” He said as he moved them into the living room.

“Are you calling him names after you yelled at me for doing the same?” Max demanded.

“You wouldn’t stop calling him a fruit! That’s offensive.”
“And calling him gummy isn’t?”

“He is gummy.”

“He might be a fruit.”

“I am not having this argument with you!” Harry said simply as he boiled the kettle to make up six bottles.

“Are we going to the Dracken meeting this year, it’ll interrupt revision.” Blaise said worriedly as he looked at something which Harry believed must have been the invitation to the meeting, it must have come after they had left that morning.

“It’ll only be one night.” Harry soothed as he made up the bottles and waited for them to cool down. "One night isn’t going to do much, we could even go later and come back earlier if you’d like, or you don’t have to go at all.”

“My Mother would curse me if I don’t show my face.” Blaise sighed. “But I want to revise.”

“You and Draco have been revising for a month.”

“I have another month’s worth of revision to get through.”

“If you’re not prepared enough to miss one night, then you should have started earlier.” Draco cut in carrying Leolin and Regan.

Blaise glared at him.

“Calm it down.” Nasta coached them, coming out with Tegan and Farren.

Nasta put Farren down on the settee and he just lounged there, slightly reclined onto the cushion, calm and cool as you please and it made Harry chuckle. Farren was now getting rounder and he looked like a chubby ball. He loved his food and Harry was sure that he’d be on Braiden’s weaning food soon enough, he just wasn’t getting enough from the milk, he was up to six and a half ounces of milk and still he pouted his mouth for more.

Harry tested each bottle and then passed them out when their temperatures were safe; they were a bit warm, but it wasn’t hot enough to be uncomfortable or blister their mouths.

He stroked Calix’s cheek with the bottle teat and his head immediately moved to get it into his mouth and he suckled strongly.

“Someone get Farren, he won’t like being left out of a feed.” Harry said as he fed Calix.

Max hauled himself up on the settee with Farren from the floor. “How are you, my son!?” He said with a wide grin. “You are definitely my son.”

Harry snorted. “Oh he’s yours alright.” Harry winked.

Max frowned and looked at Farren consideringly. “Well he does look like me and he does have a body build like mine…”

“Don’t forget he eats like you.” Blaise chuckled.

“That wasn’t what I meant.” Harry gave a secret smile. “Farren’s our second Dracken baby.”

There was silence as Harry grinned, finishing feeding Calix.

“You’re serious, you’re not joking?” Max asked.

“Very serious, Farren’s our Dracken baby from the quintuplets, Calix, Regan and Tegan all smelt funny though, sort of tingly, bitter, like a thunder storm or an electrical storm.”

“Magic, they’re magical, love. We have two Dracken’s, a Faerie, two wizards and a little witch.”

Harry grinned as his lovers celebrated as they burped the babies and put them down on the rug for tummy time and Harry hugged them all as Max wouldn’t stop his boasting.

“I have to go tell my Dads, can I go and tell them please? I want to rub Caesar’s face in this!”

Harry laughed. “Go ahead, love, tell them all. I decided this morning that I was going to tell you, but I forgot with my bad mood over the stupid children of this school!”

“You got that too did you? I’d hoped they left you alone.” Draco snorted. “I almost punched the face in of that stupid second year. Little runt that he was, who does he think he is, does he not know who I am?”

Harry shook his head. “Same old Draco. Please try not to threaten anyone with your Dad okay; I’d like to keep on his good side, your Mother invited me to afternoon tea and she said that Lucius would be there.”

“When is this, I haven’t had an owl.” Draco frowned.

“It was addressed to me only, so I think only I’m invited.”

“Why wouldn’t they invite me?”

“Why are you arguing, you hate afternoon tea.”

“That’s not the point! I’m their son, they should have invited me! I would have gone if they’d only asked.”

“Wonderful! They did invite you, but I knew you’d back out, but now you have no reason to.” Harry grinned.

Draco’s face fell and he tried to do just that by going back on what he said and by saying Harry tricked him so it didn’t count.

“No, you’ve said you’ll go now, didn’t he, Nas?” Harry grinned turning to Nasta, who raised an amused eyebrow.

“That certainly seemed to be what he said, yes. I’m afraid you’ll just have to go to afternoon tea, Draco.”

Max near enough cackled at Draco as he finished ‘praising’ Farren for being a Dracken.

“You do know that it wasn’t his choice to be a Dracken, don’t you?” Blaise asked.

“You’re just jealous.” Max teased.

“Why would I be? My son is a Dracken also and he was the first born.”

“There’s a trend there, the first born baby so far has always been a Dracken.” Draco pointed out.

“I’m very sure that has nothing to do with it.” Nasta pointed out.

“Plus two clutches, one of which was a certain singleton birth, that’s not conclusive.” Harry added.

“You’re just upset that none of your babies were Drackens.” Max teased Nasta.

“I have a Faerie and none of you can ever have one of those, hell I’m surprised to have a Faerie for a son. I’m content with that and I’m happy that Farren is a Dracken, he’s as much my son as yours and I’m proud of him and Braiden, just like I’m proud of Leolin for being a Faerie, Calix and Regan for being wizards and Tegan for being a witch, as you should too.”

“Well of course I am, but still, he’s a little Dracken.”

“Go and tell your family.” Nasta sighed exasperatedly.

Max chuckled and left them to go and tell his Dads the good news. Harry just shook his head and got onto the floor with his children.

“We have to get the cots assembled soon; they’ll all be rolling, though I want Leolin beside me for longer, he stays in his bassinet. Braiden was three months when he started rolling.”

Nasta nodded. “I’ll get on it after dinner.” He said. “I’m sure they’re in the nursery.”

“They are.” Blaise nodded. “I helped Max put them in there when they started getting in the way.”

Braiden made a small noise and Harry turned to him, feeling aghast as he realised that no one had fed Braiden. He was still in his walker and he looked close to tears.

Harry pulled him out slowly, watching his legs on the tray, no matter how much he wanted to just rip him out and cradle him, Braiden’s safety was more important than anything else.

“Who has his bottle?” Harry demanded as he rubbed Braiden’s back and bounced him lightly.

Blaise pulled a face, scooted forward and picked up a full bottle from where Max had been sat.

“I think telling him that his son was a Dracken distracted him.” Blaise said as he handed the bottle over and Harry offered it to Braiden, who latched on and sucked.

“I’ll be tearing him a new one when he gets back.” Harry hissed as he cuddled Braiden and let him suckle.

No one tried to get him to think differently, they just watched him feeding Braiden before burping him and going to get him a rusk to nibble on as a treat. It brought the smile back to Braiden’s little face and he bounced in Harry’s arms with his rusk.

“He’s adorable.” Harry grinned in pride. He had never been a prideful person until he’d had children.

“They all are.” Draco agreed, coming to kiss him and kiss Braiden’s cheek, grimacing slightly as his lips hit some drool and a patch of rusk mush.
“Harry!” Blaise called out sharply.

Harry looked to him, then to where he was staring to see Regan reaching for one of Braiden’s toys, he stretched as far as he could and when he couldn’t reach it, he pulled back into himself before pushing himself forward to get closer. He didn’t exactly crawl, he was more wiggling to move, but he was moving and when he reached out again, his fingers caught the toy and he was able to drag it closer to himself and into his mouth.

Harry was just stunned, he didn’t think he could move or say anything as he watched Regan suck on the toy he had worked to get.

“Dear Merlin.” Draco whispered.

“He…I don’t know what that was but he moved!” Harry said excitedly.

Harry sat on the floor and pulled Regan into his lap with Braiden and kissed his head of black hair.

“Two achievements in one day, we found out Farren was a Dracken and Regan is mobile.”

“It’s a good idea to get the cots out and put together then.” Harry told them. “If he can move forward, he can move sideways.”

“He’s moving before Braiden, Braiden rolls sideways, but he hasn’t gone forward yet.” Blaise said.

“He will when he’s ready.” Harry smiled kissing Braiden’s black hair. “There’s no rush, the sooner he’s mobile, the sooner he’ll start getting lost and hurt. I’m not looking forward to the first time he bumps his head.”

“I don’t think any of us are, but you know he needs to get a few bumped heads and grazed knees, don’t you?”

Harry nodded. “Yes, I know.” He answered slowly. “I’m not going to like it though.”
“Do you want tea, Harry?” Draco asked.

Harry looked over his shoulder consideringly. “Yeah, go on then.”

Harry got Braiden and Regan sitting up, he made sure to support Regan, because he wasn’t yet used to sitting up for too long and let them move as they saw fit, keeping his arm tensed around Regan, just in case, you could never be too careful.

Max came home grumpy and Harry sighed. How could he shout at him now for forgetting Braiden’s bottle when he was already looking miserable?

“What happened?” Nasta asked.

“She demanded she came to see Farren, demanded it from me!” Max hissed. “Like it was her fucking right to see him now because he was a Dracken, she didn’t even ask after Calix once she heard he wasn’t a Dracken. I don’t know what’s gotten into her lately, but Dad’s taking her to a mind specialist. It’ll have to be done in secret, he’s a Dracken too and specialises in Dracken cases, but there are rumours that the poachers are watching his house.”

“That’s too dangerous.” Nasta cut in furiously. “They could put us all in danger!”

“It’s only a rumour and Dad thinks it’s because he wouldn’t mate with that one submissive in Gothenburg. Her Father didn’t like it as he had all these plans for his daughter being with the high earning Healer.”

“Can we take that risk?” Harry asked, looking at his children and remembering the story of what happened to the babies that poachers thought were Drackens. He held Regan and Braiden tighter.

“Dad’s going to use Polyjuice potion for it, he doesn’t want to hurt the family any more than anyone else, he knows we can’t be too careful, I promise I won’t let them do anything to hurt us or the kids, but we have to try.”

Harry nodded. “He’s right, I don’t like it, but as long as they can promise to be as safe as possible, we have to try and see what happens, to see what triggered her to act like this and be this way and to find out if her therapy before went deep enough to get rid of it, or if it only buried the hurt for a few years before slowly building back up.”
They all took a moment to silently reflect on that before a little giggle broke through them and Harry chuckled and kissed Braiden’s head as he bounced where he was sat.

“You missed Regan being mobile for the first time.” Harry broke to Max gently.

“You mean Braiden?” Max said with a frown.

Harry shook his head. “Regan was on his tummy and he wanted a toy, so he sort of wiggled his way closer until he could reach out and grab it.”

“He’s three months old; Braiden is almost eight months old and he can’t do it yet.”

“I don’t think it’s because he can’t do it, I think it’s because he doesn’t want to just yet. He likes being on his stomach and on his hands and knees, he just doesn’t want to crawl or move, Regan really wanted that toy.”

“I can’t believe I missed it.” Max looked so upset that Harry held a hand out to him and pulled him down for a kiss when he moved over to him.

“Don’t worry, love, all of them will be mobile soon enough and then you can get as much exercise as you need running after them.”

Max huffed and sat behind him, framing his body with his legs and ruffling both Regan’s and Braiden’s hair.

“I caught the moment in a photograph, if it’s developed properly, it should show the whole moment.”

Harry grinned. “You’re the best, Nasta! You know that right, love.”

“Of course.” He smirked back.

Everyone but Harry and Nasta rolled their eyes. Harry just shook his head and laughed.
“I’m going to get dinner on.” Max announced, but he didn’t move right away, instead he kissed at the back of Harry’s neck for a few minutes until he let out a breath of air on a moan. He smiled, kissed his neck once again, before hefting himself to his feet and heading into the kitchenette.

Harry stayed on the floor and played with his children, laying Regan back on the floor, not wanting to injure his spine by keeping him sat upright for so long when his muscles couldn’t take the pressure.

Braiden happily giggled, four of his quins smiled widely as he messed around with them, but Leolin was fast asleep again, it was a bit perturbing, but he was very used to it by now.

“Dinners up, lovers!” Max called happily an hour later.

Nasta and Harry stayed and settled Braiden into his walker; the four quins went into their carrycots before joining the other three at the table to eat.

“So what are we doing for the meeting?”

“We’re going, it’ll depend on how much homework or revision you have if we only go for a few hours or for a little longer, but we can’t go for long because of the kids, we can’t disrupt their sleep too much and it might upset them to be around so many new people and in a new place to boot.”

Harry nodded. “I thought about that too, Braiden’s so clingy, he may not like it much.”

“We’ll see how he deals with it on the day, love,” Max assured him. “If he doesn’t like it and we can’t settle him, we’ll come right home. I don’t like the idea of forcing him to stay anywhere that makes him that upset.”

“So it’s agreed, we go for a few hours if there are no problems. I don’t really want to be there for too long either.” Harry said with a smile. “Those of you who want to stay longer can, but I’ll come home with the kids happily enough, being social with people I don’t even know was never my thing.”

“Before that though we have Regan, Tegan, Farren and Calix’s second Dragon Pox vaccine.” Draco reminded them. “And Braiden’s third.”
Harry paled. “The vaccine they need all together is next month?” He whispered “I really, really don’t want them all done together. They don’t stop crying.”

“Then it’s better to have them all crying on the same day than having four crying one day and one crying all day the next.” Nasta said. “They need this vaccine.”

“I know that.” Harry put in firmly. “I just hate that they line up to have the vaccine together.”

“I’ll make the appointment tomorrow morning.” Draco said easily. No one offered to do it instead as they all knew about Draco’s thing with the vaccines and that he had to make absolutely sure that they were booked in. It wasn’t that he didn’t trust anyone else to do it, he just didn’t trust the receptionist to put it down properly and he always demanded to see the appointment book where no one else would.

After dinner and everything had been washed up, Nasta and Blaise went to set up the cots as Harry fed the children their last feed before rocking them and soothing them into sleep.

“All done.” Blaise said softly. “We’ve moved Braiden into the nursery and the four quintuplets are in a line where he used to sleep under the platform and Leolin’s bassinet is still upstairs, we took the other four down and dismantled them.”

“Thank you.” Harry said softly as he cuddled Tegan gently as she slept.

“Do you want them in bed?” Nasta asked, stashing a screwdriver into the side drawer.

Harry nodded and stood up. “Yeah, they need their sleep.”

They all took a baby, Blaise taking two, and Harry settled Tegan into the soft yellow cot, he had been adamant that each cot be a different colour. Tegan had yellow, Calix had pine, Farren had red and Regan had green. Leolin’s would be pale blue when he was old enough to use it and Braiden’s was white.

“You did a good job.” Harry praised.
“They are all secure, we tried them out.”

“Aww, did you put Blaise to bed in each cot?” Max teased.

Blaise rolled his eyes. “You want to be careful or I’ll roll you out of bed in the middle of the night.”

Max chuckled and bent into the cot to kiss Farren’s cheek. The cot was on the highest setting because they couldn’t stand or sit up on their own, but it would stop them rolling out.

“I’m not looking forward to when these are lower down and I have to bend in half just to kiss them.”

“If you lean too far on those cots, they’ll tip.” Nasta warned.

“I know that, I’m not stupid.”

“Not often at least.” Draco smirked.

“Oi!”

Harry chuckled. “Come on, let’s go and snuggle on the settee and leave this lot sleep.”

“Have you got all three monitors switched on?” Blaise asked.

“Yes.” Harry nodded. “This one’s on Braiden, this one’s on Leolin and this one’s on these four.”

Blaise nodded and the five of them settled on the same settee, Max sprawled across the whole thing, Nasta sat at his feet with Blaise on his lap, Draco was sat reclined onto Nasta, on Max’s lap and Harry snuggled up on Max’s chest.

“This reminds me of that time where we all crushed Max having sex.” Harry chuckled.
“That hurt.”

“That was fun.” Blaise grinned.

“We should do that again.” Harry suggested with a wink.

“We need to find a way to do that without crushing my chest.” Max grumbled.

Harry laughed. “Deal, but until then, move your arm, it’s starting to get painful.”

Max extracted his arm with a groan and Harry settled more firmly.

“I love this time of night when we have nothing to do but snuggle.”

“I know, but we really should be revising.” Draco complained.

“I’m too tired to do anything.” Harry replied.

“We’ll leave the revision for tonight.” Nasta told them. “We’ll get the ten o’clock feed out of the way and we’ll have an early night tonight.”

Everyone agreed and they settled into peaceful silence, just light breathing and the slightly faster, more tinny breathing through the three, colour coded baby monitors.

Harry loved nights like this where they chose not to do anything but lie together bonding with one another. They had a busy couple of months coming up, what with the needed injections, the Dracken meeting and the exams, but Harry was sure they could get through it, they’d already been through so much and whatever the future threw at them, they could take it easily.

They had a busy couple of months coming up, what with the needed injections, the Dracken meeting and the exams, but Harry was sure they could get through it, they’d already been through so much and whatever the future threw at them, they could take it easily.

April had been a very boring, wet month apart from those few baby milestones and the afternoon tea with the Malfoys and Harry was glad to see the back of it. He’d be even happier to see the back of the school year completely and he was thankful that the end of the academic year wasn’t too far off.
The biggest let down of the last few weeks was Ashleigh refusing to see the mind Healer, claiming that she didn’t need to see another one and that there was nothing wrong with her. Myron was now threatening to drag her there, but as she smarmily pointed out, even if he did, he couldn’t make her talk to the mind Healer.

Harry’s heat was approaching yet again, but it was something not talked about, they had too much to deal with at the moment without any of them stressing over the heat period too, so Harry wasn’t causing added stress by worrying about it. The children would go to Alexander and Kimberly once more, no one needed to say it, they knew he’d go onto his heat soon and with the family as they were, there was not much else they could do.

The last Quidditch match of the season was coming up, the final between Gryffindor and Slytherin, who had narrowly scraped past Ravenclaw to claim second place after the appalling performance both teams put up, not that Harry blamed Blaise for being so distracted, but they had both sworn to give one another their best game in two weeks’ time. The game had been moved to the Sunday by Dumbledore ‘for ease of seventh year study sessions’ but it had been because the Dracken meeting was on the Saturday and they needed the time to finish off their homework, do some revision, eat and then prepare for the meeting.

Leolin was coming on in fits and starts as well, he was awake for longer, not much longer, but it was still an improvement. He had put on a pound in weight and he had grown an inch and a quarter and he had finally increased his milk intake by half an ounce. Harry was so proud of him that he had sent an owl to Aneirin boasting about it.

His heat had hit him on the second of May, in the early morning; he didn’t remember much of his heat, only that it had started in the bathroom as he had been brushing his teeth. He woke up six days later in bed. He had had another unfertile heat and he could hardly keep the grin from his face at the news that he wasn’t pregnant for at least another two months.

The Dursley trial had been back pedalled, yet again, due to the defendants ‘not being ready or prepared for court’ Harry thought this was a blessing really, as he had so much that he had to do now, so if they could hold it off until June or July, he’d be so much happier, though he made a mental reminder to dig out the damning photos that he had buried at the bottom of his trunk, for Richard and his team. He didn’t want this trial coming around so soon, though he was sure that every day and night in a cell was only adding to his ‘family’s’ misery. Limited food would make Vernon miserable, limited food, limited TV and no computer games would make Dudley miserable and no cleaning supplies, no house and no flowery dresses would make Petunia miserable.

The day of the Dracken meeting finally arrived and it was a rush just to get their most urgent homework assignments done because they wouldn’t have much time to do it on Sunday either, but Harry was feeling the stress and the strain, two days off sounded like heaven to him, especially if he got to have a little bit of fun along the way.

“Ma ma.”

Harry looked down with a smile to Braiden, who had shuffled over to him and flopped on to his thigh.
“Hello, Braiden love. What do you want, hmm?”

Braiden just giggled and reached out for him.

“Do you want a cuddle or one of Daddy Nasta’s cwtches?” He asked with a grin as he picked up his now heavy baby. He was nineteen pounds and twenty-seven inches, he was growing fast.

Harry cuddled Braiden tightly, swaying with him to hear him laugh before putting him back down and going back to his Charms homework. He regretted that he couldn’t play with his children or lavish them with the attention that they needed and deserved at the moment, but just two weeks and the exams would begin and then two more weeks before they were all over and he could spend every moment of every day with his five sons and his lone daughter.

Braiden didn’t seem to mind as he clumsily crawled off to a distant toy. Harry watched him proudly for a moment with a smile, before he went back to his homework, rushing through it just to get it done, what was the point in homework this close to exams anyway? If they didn’t know any of this by now then they were fucking screwed, but he did it anyway and then when he was done, he dragged his Herbology essay over and he started that.

He did look down when Braiden crawled back to him with his favourite toy at the moment, sitting between his legs and bashing the little aeroplane about. Harry pulled him backwards to sit more firmly between his legs and he started writing again, keeping an ear out for Leolin waking up or for any of his other children, who were being entertained by Max.

“I’m done!” He declared three hours later, just as two in the afternoon approached.

“Did you do it properly?” Nasta asked from his own paperwork, which had gotten backed up over the last few weeks as well.

“I don’t care, it’s done.” Harry said, shoving all his books and homework into his bag and kicking it under the table, he walked over to Braiden and picked him up, turning him around and raining kisses over his little face.

“Do you want to play, Braiden? Mummy has said bye-bye to homework for the weekend!”

“Bye-bye!” Braiden repeated enthusiastically.

Harry looked at him shocked before grinning and looking around him. “I wasn’t the only one to hear that, was I?” He asked.

They shook their heads and Blaise abandoned his homework to come over and kiss Braiden’s cheek.

“He’s growing day by day and we’re missing it because of school.” Blaise hissed.

“A month, love, just one month and it'll all be over.” Nasta soothed.

“He’ll be ten months old then, he could be walking.”

“Don’t stress about it, he’s only just learnt how to crawl.” Max added.

“He could go straight from crawling to walking in a matter of weeks.”

“We won’t miss it, even if we aren’t there in person, I’m sure Nasta or Max will record it for us, won’t you?” Harry turned to them.

“Of course we will, we wouldn’t want you missing something so important and life changing, as soon as he’s on his feet, I’m teaching him how to kick a ball.” Max declared.

Harry laughed. “One thing at a time, love, though rolling a ball to him might be fine; do we have any balls here?”

Blaise snorted and Harry gave him a dirty look, Blaise giving him the innocent look that didn’t wash with him anymore.

“I don’t think we have, I don’t even think there are any at Max’s, though he had so much stuff for Christmas I might have missed it.”

“I don’t remember him unwrapping one, we’ll have to get him one. A nice, big bright one.”
"Mama!"

"Yes Braiden, but look, Daddy’s here too. Can you say Daddy?"

"Dada."

Harry grinned at the look on Blaise’s face. Braiden had said Dada before, but never to Blaise and never like he recognised him, this time he did both.

"Say bye-bye, Daddy, you have to do your homework." Harry coached, waving to Blaise.

"Bye-bye, Dada!" Braiden said as he clenched his fingers into his palm repeatedly at Blaise.

"Oh god he’s so cute!" Harry gushed, cuddling Braiden tightly.

"Watch out, Braiden, I think you’ve got a fan girl already!" Max laughed.

"You shut your mouth!" Harry demanded.

"Oh come on, I can’t still be in the dog house after one mistake."

"It was a huge mistake, how dare you fall asleep without feeding Regan! That’s twice!"

"I’m sorry I rushed off without feeding Braiden, but Regan wasn’t crying for food, love, he was fast asleep. I wasn’t going to wake him up when he didn’t want it."

Harry huffed and sat on the floor, pulling the remains of Braiden’s block stack towards him and putting Braiden in front of it, watching him build the tower with the biggest brick on the bottom, all the way to the fifth and littlest brick, before his beloved aeroplane went through it and moved on to attack a teddy bear.
“He’s getting a little boisterous, isn’t he?” He said worriedly.

“Knocking over a few blocks isn’t boisterous.” Nasta refuted. “Of course he’s going to knock them down, he’s learning what happens when he does it, he needs to know if they fall down every time he knocks into them and he’ll keep doing it until he’s sure.”

Harry nodded his understanding as he scooted over and snatched Calix from Max and blew a raspberry on his neck. Calix screeched in absolute delight. “Baba!” He cried out.

“Oh I’m loving today.” Max grinned as he kissed Calix.

“Ba ya!”

Braiden crawled over and looked at Calix through indigo eyes. “Mam be.”

“Gee na.” Calix answered.

“Are they actually having a conversation?” Draco asked, picking his head up from his Potions essay.

“I think they are.” Max answered.

“Braiden?” Harry called out and when Braiden looked at him, he indicated to Calix. “This is your baby brother Calix.”

“Baba Ca.”

“Oh, we have the most intelligent babies in the world!” Harry gloated.

Nasta was grinning indulgently at him like he was precious, but Harry didn’t care, nothing could bring him down today, not even the thought of the Dracken meeting later on.
Harry realised that he may have spoken too soon earlier as he slipped into his new dress robes. These ones weren’t as tight as he wasn’t pregnant and had no baby bump to show off, but they were tailored to show off his body shape to the max, what he had left of it anyway.

Braiden was wearing his own little dress robes, but the quintuplets were wearing just plain, sleepsuits. Harry had adamantly refused to dress them up when all he wanted to do was put them to bed.

Leolin was in the baby carrier, which was strapped around Nasta. Harry trusted him to protect their vulnerable son and not accidentally have him squashed against his chest by the crowd.

Harry had Braiden sat on his hip, his wiggly nine month old curious about his new clothes. Max had Farren hefted over one shoulder as the four month old was nearly the same length and weight as Braiden. Blaise was cradling Regan and Tegan and Draco was rocking a fussy Calix. Harry wasn’t sure what he’d do when he had more children, they didn’t have enough arms to carry them all.

“If this destroys their routine I’m going to kill the Elders.”

Nasta smiled at him. “Done deal. Are we ready?”

Harry nodded and hoisted Braiden higher on his hip, holding his chubby thigh.

“We know.” Blaise whined, touching the Portkey with his thumb with both arms full, Nasta had a hand on his shoulder just in case.

At half five the Portkey sent out a pulse and a few moments later it activated. Harry landed heavily and groaned as his knees hit the floor. Max hauled him up and dusted him off.

Braiden was looking around himself curiously. The man who was standing at the podium was very interested in them and the family. Harry glared at him.

“I…I…go ahead please.” He quaked out.

Nasta took Harry’s hand and smirked at him. “Now now, Cariad, don’t make the poor event workers wet themselves in fear.”

“He shouldn’t be looking at my babies like they’re in petri dishes.”

Max snorted. “I hope to Merlin I don’t look like him when I’m looking in petri dishes.”

“No, I imagine you look a lot sexier doing it.” Harry grinned as he entered the familiar room full of chatting, laughing people.

The armed guards were back, in force this time as Harry noticed that there were unmated dominants around. They were standing on guard at the bar area and every few feet around the walls and by pillars.

The crèche area had four more guards than last year, but the laughing, screaming children inside made him smile. There was a small, cordon off area just for very young babies, he didn’t think a single baby in that tiny crèche area was over two, the youngest had to have been two or three months being held by her Mother as she was dipped in and out of the little, shallow ball pit, it reminded Harry that Braiden had had a ball pit for Christmas, he’d have to dig it out and set it up for him, but first he wondered if Braiden would like it in the crèche area with the other babies.

He kept him with him for the moment, not confident enough to leave him just yet; it would be a huge milestone for him to leave Braiden in the crèche. Instead he followed Max, who was dodging people and avoiding small talk, Farren still over his shoulder.

“There you are! I was beginning to wonder if you were coming!”

Harry grinned at Alexander. “Would I give up the chance to show off my children?”

Alexander laughed and patted Harry’s back before chucking Braiden under the chin.

“And how is my gorgeous Grandson?” He asked. “Is he crawling yet?”

Harry nodded. “Yes, he started the other week, he’s a bit awkward and clumsy, but otherwise mobile.”

“That’s wonderful. How about the other five?”
“Leolin’s awake for longer he’s gained some weight and length and he’s eating more, Regan can move himself to get to the toys he wants, it’s not quite crawling, more belly flopping, but he can move. Tegan’s cut her first tooth, Farren’s on weaning food and little Calix said his first words.”

Harry nodded with a grin.

“How are your exams coming on?” Myron asked, he looked tired and stressed and strained, but he smiled nonetheless when he heard about his grandchildren’s developments.

Harry scowled. “I came here to get away from revision and homework, but I’m confident I’ll do well, not excellent, but then I don’t care much past passing.”

“Max had better be doing his share of childcare.”

“Oh he is, Max and Nasta have taken over, Max more so because Nas still has paperwork, but still, you can’t keep me away from them for long.” He grinned.

“Here you are! Oh give me my grandson; I’ve missed him so much.”

Harry grinned at Marianna, who took Braiden from him and kissed him so ferociously that she left lipstick smears on his cheeks and chin. He laughed happily enough though and clenched dribble covered hands in her perfectly coiffured hair, not that Marianna cared, she just extracted his little fingers expertly and held him a bit lower.

“Blaise used to love hair too; it just used to fascinate him. Where are you, Blaise?” She asked, looking around for him.

“I’m here, Mother.” He cut in smoothly, coming to stand beside her.

“Oh you boys are doing a wonderful job; I can’t believe how big they all are! Look at this gorgeous Princess.”

She took Tegan from Blaise and hugged her gently. Tegan grinned at her with her lone front tooth.

“She’s cut a tooth? Oh were there as many problems as Braiden’s?”

“No, she was surprisingly mellow about it.”

“Well of course she was! She’s a woman; she has a higher threshold for pain.”

Harry shook his head and chuckled. He’d missed Marianna terribly.

“Hi Harry, Blaise, Draco.”

Harry smiled at Sanex and hugged him tightly.

“Where’s my hello?” Max asked with a pout.

“You look like you can squash me; you don’t get a hello when I’m flirting with these three babies.”

Nasta smacked his brother sharply. “You even try and flirt with them and I’ll break your jaw. And don’t call them babies.”

“They’re less than half my age!”

“That mean’s your old, nothing else.” Harry grinned.

“Cheeky little baby.”
“Stop teasing the lads, Sanex.” Aneirin chastised as he suddenly loomed over his son, an inch or so in their heights, but when Sanex was cowering it looked like Aneirin was that much taller.

“Hi Aneirin.”

“Hello, Harry, now what’s this about Leolin’s development? I got your owl just this morning.”

Harry nodded. “He has grown and he’s gained weight and he’s taking an extra half an ounce of milk. He stays awake for longer too, but not too much longer. I’m still proud of him though.”

Aneirin placed a hand gently on Leolin’s head and rubbed his thumb softly over his black hair.

“That’s wonderful news, he’s started growing faster than average Faerie babies, most don’t start until at least seven months. I’m very proud of him, of all of them and of you too.”

Harry grinned at that and puffed up slightly, he liked knowing that he had done a good job with his children and his Dracken liked it too.

Within ten minutes the only one of them still holding a baby was Nasta, who refused to allow Leolin out of his baby sling, especially not when he was sleeping. Max was trying to pull him towards the bar without getting Nasta’s attention, Blaise was talking in rapid French to his Mother and Draco was slowly slipping away, looking at his pocket watch. Harry remembered then that he’d invited his parents at the afternoon tea session.

“Draco, what time will your parents be here?” He asked.

“Lucius and Narcissa are coming?” Marianna interrupted. “Oh it’s been too long since I last spoke to Narcissa.”

“They should be arriving in fifteen minutes.” Draco told her.

“You should wait at the entrance for them, so they don’t get too overwhelmed by the armed guards.”

“We’ll come with you.” Max offered, pulling Harry more firmly, who reached his hands out for his children.

“We’ve got them, Harry and we won’t let anyone take them.” Myron assured, bumping Calix higher onto his shoulder gently.

Max won his tug of war battle, he was just too strong for Harry to withstand and Harry frowned as his children were lost to the crowd. He took a deep breath and calmed himself. This was another test; he trusted Nasta and Blaise to look after their babies.

Max went dead ahead until he couldn’t see his family anymore, then dragged both Harry and Draco towards the bar.

“What are you doing?” Draco asked with a raised eyebrow.

“Getting a drink, I’ve been dying for one since we arrived.” Max answered as they finally made it to the very large bar.

“Maximilius!” A man behind the bar grinned widely.

“Steffan, how’ve you been?” Max asked.

“Great! Ruby’s pregnant again, though I’m not fond of all these gem names for my children.” Steffan pulled a face. “I know it’s a family tradition and all, but I have six children now.”

“Ha! Snap, I have six as well.”

“What? The last time I saw you, you were unmated! How’d you get six? Who’d you end up with after? It wasn’t Gretchen was it?”

Max pulled a face. “Fuck off was it!” Max pulled Harry into his side and kissed his head. “This gorgeous young man is the Mother to my children.”

“And now I’m envious of you.” Steffan laughed. “It’s nice to meet you…?”
“Harry.” He answered softly.

“So the stud that is Max finally gets picked and settles down, it’s about time you old man and you got a real star by the looks of it.”

“Yeah, yeah I did.” Max smiled and hugged Harry tighter.

“Come on, you can catch up later, my parents will be here at any minute!” Draco interrupted with a snap.

“And who is this?” Steffan asked with a teasing grin.

“Harry needed four mates, so I got landed in a family of five.” Max revealed happily.

“Five of you and six kids? No wonder I’ve barely heard from you! You must be kept busy.”

Max nodded. “I wouldn’t change it for the world.”

“So how many kids are yours?”

“All of them, but biologically I’ve got two boys, Farren and Calix.”

“So who else did you land yourself with, or rather who has your submissive landed you with.”

“This blond beauty here.” Max answered pointing at Draco, who scowled. “Blaise Zabini and you’ll never guess the last.”

“Who? Come on tell me, I’ve been out of the loop for so long, what with Ruby being pregnant every single fucking year.”

“Nasta Delericey.”
“Ha! I always knew there was something between the two of you! There were bets going on about who would cave for a fuck first, you or him.”

“We were just friends.”

“There’s nothing wrong with being friends with benefits. I bet you get more than enough sex now though.”

Max rolled his eyes. “So what’s your newest lot called? The last we spoke you had Diamond and Sapphire.”

“Diamond is seven now, she’s over in the crèche with Sapphie, Amber, Jade and Jasper. I’m hoping for another boy, because four daughters is more than enough for me, but Ruby wants to call our next boy Jett, I mean, come on! I know it’s tradition but every male in their family is either Jett, Mica or Jasper, I want my kids to have an identity, I’ve tried to give them proper first names and gemstone middle names, but Ruby won’t have it.”

“What if you have another girl?”

“Don’t jinx it!” Steffan grumbled. “If we have another girl she’ll be ‘blessed’ with the name Opal. I tell you, I wouldn’t have fought half as hard for Ruby if I’d known her family name tradition was gemstones.”

“Do most Dracken families have naming traditions?” Harry asked with a frown.

Max nodded. “Yeah, my family is warriors and rulers, Aneirin’s great grandfather refused to carry his family name tradition on after they were kicked from the Faerie loop, so that broke their line, but most families do have traditions and whatnot, some choose not to follow them on, I rather like my family’s tradition and I’m glad that you decided to carry it on with my sons.”

Harry smiled.

“Well you’re practically unlimited in your options, how many rulers, kings and warriors have there been worldwide? I’m limited to gemstones and every name has been reused several times in her family, she’s Ruby the eleventh, I’ve got a Diamond the eighth, a Sapphire the sixth and a Jasper the fourteenth. They have no identity or special name as Ruby won’t give them middle names, she says it ‘spoils’ the gemstone names.”

“That’s horrible; she should at least ask you.” Harry said. “I asked if you liked the names before making them official didn’t I?”

Max nodded. “Yeah, I love the names you picked out for all of our children.”

“Alright, rub it in.” Steffan laughed. “So what are your other kids’ names?”

“My oldest is Braiden Blaise Enzo Zabini.” Harry answered with a smile.

“Obviously Blaise Zabini’s child.”

Harry nodded. “I had quintuplets then…”

“Quintup…five kids at once? Fuck me, no wonder I haven’t heard from you, Maxie! I’m rushed off my feet when Ruby’s had a singleton birth every year since we mated. Though at least you get a nice long break now.”

Harry licked his lips and averted his gaze and Steffan’s eyes widened.

“No. Never. You’re back on your heat periods after quintuplets? How old are they?”

“Braiden’s nine months, the quintuplets, Farren, Tegan, Regan, Calix and Leolin, are four months.” Max answered.

“I’ve had two heat periods since.”

“That’s insane! You must be wicked fertile.” Steffan said.
“I don’t mean to interrupt.” Draco said in a tone that implied that he not only meant to interrupt, but that he wanted to do it rudely too. “But I am supposed to be meeting my parents when they arrive.”

“Alright, Draco we’re going. Give us five champagnes please, Steffan.” Max said with a smile and accepted the flutes easily, handing one to Harry and two to Draco, keeping two for himself.

“Nasta won’t like this.” Harry warned as they said goodbye to Steffan and moved to the entrance to find Lucius and Narcissa.

“Why five?” Draco asked.

“Your parents like champagne don’t they?” Max answered Draco before turning to Harry. “I don’t care if Nas likes it or not, a couple flutes of champagne aren’t going to down me.”

“They might down me.” Harry mumbled as he took a sip of the bubbly liquid and grimaced. “Next time get me a sparkling grape juice, it tastes better than this.”

Max rolled his eyes. “Oh, I can see platinum blonde heads; it must be your parents.”

Max led them over to the overwhelmed Malfoy’s, who were trying their best to look like they weren’t overwhelmed and that they fit in just fine.

“Mother, Father.” Draco greeted with a smile as he handed them a glass of champagne each and kissed his Mother’s cheek.

“These halls are spectacular, Draco darling.”

Draco smiled as Max handed him one of the flutes in his hand. “It’s lovely to meet you again, Mister and Mrs Malfoy.”

“Oh darling, please, Narcissa and Lucius is fine.” Narcissa said with a smile as Max took her hand and kissed it.
Lucius gave Harry’s hand a shake and then Max’s, but he hugged Draco, despite being in public and it put a real smile on Draco’s face.

“Harry sweetheart, how are you? Are you pregnant again?” Narcissa asked, hugging him.

Harry shook his head. “No, it was unfertile.”

“I bet you’re happy about that?”

Harry nodded. “Yes, it means another heat period in two months, but at least I can get the exams out of the way first.”

“Don’t say that too loud, love, no Dracken should know your cycle outside of family.” Max coached.

Harry nodded understandingly and he started drifting off to the side. He didn’t realise that he was doing it until Max pulled him back with a frown.

Harry excused himself to the Malfoys and drifted quickly off to the direction that he had been heading in before. Max excused himself and followed him worriedly. They ended up near the crèche.

“Don’t you get enough with our own babies?” Max teased catching up with him.

“I’m looking for Marisa, Natalie and Kayla.” Harry said.

“Those little girls who turned your hair into an abomination? Harry, that was a year ago, how do you remember that?”

Harry shrugged. “I just do.”

Max chuckled and threw an arm around him, more because the armed guard who was closest to them was looking at them sternly, his grip on the deadly weapon he held tightening.
“We’re bonded alright, fella? Leave us alone!” Max snapped when the guard sidled closer.

The guard just narrowed his eyes. “Just doing my job.”

“Well do it properly. We have six babies under a year old, we don’t need any more.”

“Why are you here then?” The guard demanded.

“Nothing says that we can’t be here.” Max stood up tall and threw an arm in front of Harry protectively as a gun tip subtly came to stomach height.

“Barty, what are you doing?” A large, older Dracken stomped over and knocked the raised gun back down with his hand. “You never unsling your gun unless you have need to use it! Are you trying to cause a scene or mass panic, idiot boy?!"

“They’re lingering around the crèche, Elder.” Barty replied, putting an inflection of mistrust and tension on the words.

“That’s Maximilius Maddison, Myron Maddison’s boy, you shoot him and you’re as good as shooting yourself you idiot boy.”

“Elder Kirrian.” Max nodded respectfully.

“How you doing, boy? Who’s your little one, your sub? Myron told me that you’d mated.”

“Yes, I’d like you to meet my mate, Harry Potter. Harry, this is Elder Henry Kirrian.”

“Nice to meet you.” Harry replied softly.

“Harry Potter? As in, the Harry Potter?” Barty asked with wide eyes.
Harry smirked at him and flashed his lightning bolt for a second before smoothing his fringe back down. He hated showing off his scar, but when it got him the reaction of Barty, the whole fish gaping, wide eyes thing, especially after being threatened, he could show it for a second.

“So not only did you try and shoot a Maddison, you tried to shoot a submissive too. A submissive who happens to be Harry Potter no less.” Elder Kirrian snorted. “Idiot boy. Go behind the bar.”

“But, Elder…!”

“Behind the bar now, boy!”

Barty loped off with a sour face as going behind the bar was obviously a punishment. Barty was replaced immediately by another man, younger than the Elder, but older than Barty.

“Are we going to have a problem here, Yassen?”

“No, Elder.” Yassen answered.

“Good, you watch over these boys, you hear me, boy? I want my crèche team sharp; I need you to be able to identify a threat from a thrice damned non-threat! I want all threats terminated, even if it’s your own fucking Mother, you hearing me, boy?”

“Yes, Elder.”

“Good, now where is your Father, Maximilius. I wish to speak to him.”

“Would you like for me to take you, Elder?” Max asked respectfully.

“Did I ask you to take me like some senile fool, boy?! I asked where he was, now you have fingers, point, boy.”

Max pressed his lips together to keep from laughing and he pointed in the direction of where they’d left the family and the Elder turned and left.
“I love that man.” Max chuckled and hugged Harry to him tightly.

“I can see why.” Harry grinned.

“Come on, you’re not going to drink that, let’s get you a grape juice.”

Harry walked with Max back to the bar, Steffan was busy this time, so the trip to the bar was quick. They moved on and Max introduced him to some of his friends and people that he knew. Though as soon as they saw Gertrude and Gretchen they rushed away like guilty children, the news floating around the hall was that Gertrude had held back Gretchen’s mate meeting, apparently waiting for more ‘prime’ men to turn up. Harry still remembered Gertrude’s words the first time he’d met her and he wasn’t going to let her take his mates.

“Why, hello there, gorgeous.”

Harry stopped and looked up at the tall, muscled dominant, a small sniff was all it took for him to realise that he was unmated and was leaking his scent all over the place to let everyone know that he was unmated.

“I haven’t see you around here before, are you just coming into your inheritance? I bet your parents held back your meeting, you’re just too gorgeous to let loose though. There are some very desperate, dangerous dominants about tonight.”

“Like you, you mean?” Harry sneered. “Don’t flatter yourself, I’m not interested.”

The dominant blinked and looked at himself, as if to say, you’re not interested in this? Harry snorted.

“Oh now you are vain.”

“I’m the best unmated dominant around; you won’t find anyone better than me.”

Harry laughed out loud. “Oh I bet I could and I wouldn’t even need to search that hard.”
“You’re a very beautiful submissive, I bet you’ve had a lot of offers tonight, but only I can make it worth your while.”

Harry rolled his eyes at the blatant topic change and the unsubtle come on.

“Look, I’m not interested, okay. I’m happily mated and I have six children.”

“There’s no need to lie, gorgeous, anyone looking at you can see you’re too young to be mated and definitely haven’t had six children, not with that luscious body.”

“That ‘luscious body’ is mine.” Max cut in, slipping out of the crowd and glaring at the dominant.

“Go away, Maddison, I’m busy talking to someone a little out of your league, why would he want you when he can have me?”

Harry laughed then and pulled Max down into a kiss that was anything other than innocent and chaste.

“This is my dominant mate, he is definitely so much better than you and I’d choose him over you every single time.”

“This is my submissive mate, Daighton, he chose me out of hundreds of others, you must have been there for the meeting, unless you fucked off to the New Zealand meeting before he had finished his own meeting, but you missed out and I have him now, you don’t deserve to lick his cute, iddy biddy feet. So fuck off!”

Harry and Max slipped away from the stunned dominant, laughing and giggling; they stopped to get more drinks from Steffan, who was disgruntled because Amber, his third daughter, had squashed green playdough into Diamond’s hair and his oldest daughter had thrown a tantrum to end all tantrums.

Max downed several more flutes of champagne while Harry stuck to sparkling grape juice and after ducking away from another flirty unmated dominant, they had almost run into Gretchen, whose eyes had widened at seeing Max and had tried to make a beeline for him, Harry tugged him down and they weaved away giggling like little girls.
“Maximilius?”

Max stood up straight, the grin and childish giggling turned into a polite smile, the perfect gentleman in an instant.

“I…yes, can I help you?” Max asked the pretty woman in the blue dress.

“You don’t remember me?” She asked, sounding offended at the very thought.

“Umm…no.” He said, a frown taking over the handsome smile that had been there previously.

Max frowned and pulled the face that Harry knew meant he was actually thinking about it and hard.

“Sorry, I don’t remember anyone of that name. Where did we meet?”

The woman, Rebecca, looked so offended that Harry wondered if they were in danger of being attacked.

“At Hogwarts.”

Harry’s mind immediately shot to the story that Dumbledore had told him about the Ravenclaw that had rejected several young men and his hand touched Max’s elbow gently as his whole body stiffened. He wondered if Max and Nasta had been two of those young men rejected.

“I remember now.” Max said almost breathlessly, he sounded winded and Harry’s heart ached for the young Max as it became apparent that yes, Max was one of the rejected men.

“So…I…I was a fool back then, but my mate died last year, I’m looking for a new one, if…if you’re still interested.” Rebecca tried flirtatiously.
“No I’m not.” Max bit out.

Rebecca blinked. “I know I turned you away, but you were only young, we were both young and I am sorry, if you’d prefer we could go on dates first, like humans do.”

“No.” Max said strongly. “I don’t want to go on dates; I don’t want to be your mate. You had that chance, I don’t give second ones.”

“Look, you know it wasn’t anything personal, it was your wings.”

“Yeah, I believe you called them scrawny and stubby.” Max hissed.

“They were.” Rebecca sniffed. “But they’re not anymore, everyone knows that you still hold the record wingspan, you’re unmatched and unbeaten still. Can I see them?”

“No.” Max growled. “Again you had your chance to do more than just look at them, but you gave that up.”

“They didn’t look like they do now!” Rebecca said stubbornly. “I’m your only chance of a mate, everyone knows that submissives don’t want anyone over twenty-five, thirty is the absolute maximum, you’re what, thirty-two now? I am too, we can be happy together.”

“How many kids did you get?” Max asked then.

“I’ve only got three. Three girls. A fifteen year old, a ten year old and a six year old. They’re no trouble, all the hard parts are over and I’m ready for more if you want them.” Rebecca said desperately.

“Those three girls should be your main focus, not throwing all your attention into finding another mate, are any of your girls Drackens?”

Rebecca shook her head. “No, my mate was weak, he couldn’t give me a Dracken, but you could, I know you could! Please, Max.”

“You haven’t been around lately have you?”

“I…no, I live in Australia with my girls. You’d like it there.” Rebecca insisted.

“I like it here.”

“We could come back and live here then! We could be happy, Max, I know it!” She tried, moving to grip his dress robes tightly.

Max pulled her off and grimaced. She had caught his skin and Harry slipped under Max’s arm and stood in front of him, glaring at the woman who had hurt him.

“Who are you?” She asked. “Is he one of your cousins, Max? You know, I have a daughter about your age, she’s lovely, her name’s Coral.”

“Rebecca, this is my submissive mate, Harry, who is eighteen this summer. Harry, one of the submissive’s who rejected me, the very first one actually.”

“Ma…mate?” She breathed pained. “No. No, you can’t have a mate! I was planning…I was counting on you not having a mate!”

“Well I do have a mate. I mated last year; apparently there are still submissives out there that’ll have a thirty-one year old dominant, just because you wouldn’t have picked anyone over a specific age doesn’t mean that you should paint everyone with the same brush.” Max snapped dispassionately. “Harry’s oldest mate is thirty-eight now and we’re all very happy with one another.”

“But…but…”

“Sorry, but he’s mine.” Harry smiled viciously. “You missed out, he’s lovely, kind, funny, strong, intelligent, protective and he’s a fabulous cook. His wings are gorgeous and absolutely huge, the feeling of being wrapped in his arms and those wings is unmatched. You missed out on a hell of a mate and lover, Max is big all over if you get my meaning.” Harry grinned with a wink. “It’s been a year and we already have six children, two are Drackens and one is very special. You hurt him terribly when he was younger, but I’m glad that you did, because if you hadn’t then he wouldn’t be mine now and he is mine, all mine, so back off before I make you.”

Max wrapped his arms around his chest now and Harry grinned at the woman in front of them. How dare she try to guilt Max into a mateship just because she liked the finished product? She should have seen the potential in him from the beginning and taken a chance on him, but she hadn’t, she had been too vain and prideful to realise that at sixteen Max hadn’t finished growing by half. She couldn’t have him now just because he was different to how he was back then, just because he was an amazing man who had grown up and filled out and apparently held a record for the largest wingspan.

He felt stupid for not connecting Dumbledore’s story to Max earlier on, he felt stupid for at least not asking them before now. Max and Nasta would have been there, at Silvermoss’ meeting, and they would have remembered who the story was about, but it just hadn’t clicked. He had had no idea that the young sixteen year old in the story had been Max, he hadn’t realised that Max held a record for the largest wingspan.

“Goodbye, Miss Silvermoss.” Max said firmly and he tugged Harry along through the crowd and he chuckled. “You showed her exactly who was boss, love.”

“You never told me that you held a record for the longest wingspan.”

“I didn’t think it mattered to you.”

“It doesn’t, but knowing that you have such an achievement makes me proud, you shouldn’t hide that.”

Max chuckled. “Don’t mention it around my Dad; I took the record from him when I was twenty-three and I don’t think he’s forgiven me yet.”

Harry chuckled. “You know that means Farren will take it from you.”

Max’s face sobered and when they got back to the family he took Farren from Richard and held him in front of his face.

“What are you doing?” Richard asked with a laugh.
“Is he bigger than I was at his age?” Max asked.

“I…just about I think, why?”

“No! I will not have a son bigger than I am! It’ll be a travesty!”

“Now you know why I was disgruntled.” Myron huffed. “Though I’m glad that you stopped growing at six, eight.”

Max pouted as he looked up those tiny two inches to his Father’s eyes.

“What brought this on, Maxie?” Alexander asked.

“He met the girl who rejected him when he was sixteen.”

“That bitch from your first ever meeting?” Richard asked. “Where is she? I owe her a punch to the face.”

“Please tell me she didn’t bring all your feelings of inadequacy back, you are not a sixteen year old boy any longer, Maximilius and you have four mates and six children, you have nothing to feel inadequate over.” Myron told him.

“No, she wanted to mate with me and for me to take on her three kids.”

“Excuse me?” Myron asked shocked.

“Yeah, her mate died last year, so she’s looking for a new one.”

“Why you after everything that she said to you back then?” Nasta asked.

“You were there?” Harry asked.
Nasta nodded. “Max and I became friends over her. He was only just sixteen, his first ever meeting, but I was twenty-two and had had several meetings before. I took him away from her when she started on him and rejected him, I tried to help him, but he left before my message could sink in fully.”

“It did help.” Max smiled. “But it took months before I stopped trying to kill myself with weight training and weight gain diets.”

“She wasn’t worth it.” Harry snorted. “If that’s what she looks like at thirty-two, imagine when she’s sixty-two? It would be like waking up to a horror film every morning.”

Max laughed along with Richard, and Alexander and hugged him tightly.

“I’m glad I never chose her, or rather that she never chose me. You’re perfect, Harry and I’ll never regret choosing you.”

“Glad to hear that. Now tell me, why is it at every meeting I’ve come to, someone has tried to get you to be their mate?”

“I’m just that desirable.” Max grinned, striking a pose.

Harry laughed. “You are, I’m not denying that, but why don’t they know that you’re mated with children?”

Max shrugged. “Some people don’t want to believe it. It’s happened before, one submissive tried to kill the submissive of the dominant that she loved, ‘so they could be together’ do you remember that?”

“That was horrific.” Aneirin pulled a face. “Disgraceful and horrific.”

“Wasn’t that Charlotte?” Sanex asked with a strained face, obviously forcing the memory up.
Max bobbed his head. “Charlotte was a lovely submissive, a bit like you, Harry, only just less so, because no one can be as perfect as you are, but her first mate was called Barron. Strange name for a kid, but his parents were weird too, there was another submissive called Tina, she had always crushed on Barron, even before they came into their inheritances, but as soon as Barron met Charlotte, he was in love. Charlotte chose him just four months before Tina had her own inheritance, along with another dominant Sampson. Sampson was wicked protective of both of them, he really lucked out as Barron was a really pretty boy, we all thought that he would be a submissive, but he turned out a dominant in the end, a very small, slender dominant, but he was drop dead gorgeous, I’ll give him that. Tina was so jealous that she would rant and rave whenever they met up because Barron still tried to be a good friend and stay in contact, even though Sampson hated it.”

“So Tina attacked Charlotte?” Harry asked.

“She damn near killed her before Sampson tore Tina’s head off. Charlotte wasn’t a fighter, she was raised like a prim and proper young lady and her first reaction was to call to her dominants for help, the second was to curl up on the floor to try and protect herself and the baby she was carrying.”

“She was pregnant?” Harry asked horrified.

“Yeah, and Tina was so far gone that she tried to dig the baby out of her.” Myron’s face showed exactly what he thought of that. “I was one of the one’s that tried to drag Tina off of Charlotte, I got a claw to the gut for my efforts, perforated my damned intestines.”

“He still has the scar.” Richard smiled.

“Others tried to get her off, but most were trying to be careful with her, she was still a woman, still a submissive, and it wasn’t until Sampson seized her head and threw her into a pillar that that fight stopped, but a new one broke out when Sampson ordered Barron to get Charlotte to the Healers and he turned on Tina. That was a harder fight to break up, he was determined to kill her and he did. Most of the damage done to Charlotte was to her stomach and head, so he gutted her and then tore her head from her body and then he stood tall before the Elders and he asked them to judge him. He got off and rushed to his lovers.”

“How was Charlotte?”

“She survived, but she had permanent scarring and she lost the baby. They don’t come to the meetings anymore.”
“That’s hideous.” Harry pulled a face.

“I was only young then.” Max said. “I had to have been, what, fourteen?”

Myron nodded and ruffled his hair. “I liked you better at fourteen, very sweet and agreeable and you came up to my waist.”

Max laughed and bumped his shoulder into his Dad’s. “Wait until you’re the other side of two hundred and you start shrinking, I’ll be taller than you then.”

“You wish, boy!” Myron snapped. “You’ll never be taller than me.”

“I’m sure you’ve cursed me to stay this height.” Max laughed.

“I wouldn’t put it past him.” Richard added, before he flinched and a hand went to his throat. He curled over and Harry was shocked to see his face rapidly turn purple.

“He’s choking!” Harry exclaimed in shock.

Myron uncurled Richard’s body forcibly with his own and two thick fingers forced his clenched jaws open, tugged his head back by his hair and he emptied a bottle down his throat. Most of it was spat back out over his chin, but Richard swallowed a good amount first and Myron rubbed his back firmly and harshly, keeping his body straight and forced upright.

“That…that’s the worst I’ve ever seen you.” Max said in a small, worried voice. Harry had never heard Max sound like that before.

“It’s the stress, he’s always been worse with stress.” Myron answered. “Don’t look so worried, Max; your Dad will be fine.”

Harry bit his lip, it sounded to him like Myron was trying to convince himself more than anyone else. He looked at Richard and saw the stress and strain on his face, which was red and flushed, the veins in his neck puffed up and visible through his skin, the scar tissue looked inflamed and tight. Richard looked worse than Harry had ever seen him and his mind slipped down that dark and dangerous road of what would happen if one day, Myron wasn’t there to help Richard through an episode like this one.

Chapter End Notes

A/N: We are now rapidly approaching the end of the school year, thank god for that because I don’t think anyone can take much more of the high pressure school year. Next chapter will follow on from this one, but be ready for more drama as the next plot twist is revealed. It’s going to be explosive and I can’t wait to reveal it to you all. It has been titled Betrayal, just to tease you all a bit.

Thank you all for reading and reviewing,

StarLight Massacre. X
A/N: Dedicated to my Facebookers, who put up with so much from me and so many of my whining’s and ranting’s about everything when I’m having a bad day, this chapter is for all of you, to say thanks, and to make up for all the teasing excerpts I give you that drive you all insane. I’m not sorry about those, but I’ll say thank you for putting up with it and with me and I hope you can forgive me for this chapter.

Last Time

Harry bit his lip, it sounded to him like Myron was trying to convince himself more than anyone else. He looked at Richard and saw the stress and strain on his face, which was red and flushed, the veins in his neck puffed up and visible through his skin, the scar tissue looked inflamed and tight. Richard looked worse than Harry had ever seen him and his mind slipped down that dark and dangerous road of what would happen if one day, Myron wasn’t there to help Richard through an episode like this one.

Chapter Seventy-Two – Betrayal

Harry was practically dragged to meet Marisa’s mother, Janine, who was pregnant and standing with her Husband and mate, Rory if he remembered correctly, who was pressed almost completely against her side.

“Mummy look!” Marisa exclaimed.

“Who is this, darling?” She asked, giving Harry a dark look that softened when she clocked Braiden on his hip.

“He helped me with my beads and I put beads in his hair last year.” Marisa exclaimed.

Janine’s eyes widened in recognition as Harry smiled at her.

“Oh I hardly recognised you without them!” She laughed. “This would be the contents of that little bump of yours?"

Harry smiled with a nod and handed Braiden over to her happily and picked Marisa up when she demanded it.

“Oh we can swap.” Janine laughed. “She’s a little terror; I wish she was this little one’s age again.”

“Braiden’s just learnt to crawl and he’s already showing signs of wanting to be on his feet, I’ll happily swap all of mine for Marisa. I don’t think I’ve slept properly for over a year.”

“All of yours? But, do you not only have the one?” Janine shared a look with her Husband who was looking at him critically.

“No, I have six.”

“But last year you didn’t have any and you were only a few months pregnant.”

Harry nodded. “I had Braiden in August and I fell pregnant immediately afterwards in a freak accident when Braiden was only four days old. I had quintuplets that were born at the end of December.”

“Oh you poor man!” Janine laid a soft hand on his shoulder. “You have a nine month old and five, four month old children and you’re still in school aren’t you? My word, how do you get anything done?!”

Harry smiled. “The benefit of having four dominants to help out, though I admit it’s a struggle for all of us. So if you’d like to collect the other five, I’d happily swap you for this little wonder.” Harry brushed Marisa’s nose with his index finger and she giggled in delight.

“That’s alright; I’d rather have two Marisa’s than look after six under one year olds.” Rory told him, he looked astonished.

“Did you have any daughters? I know it’s difficult for all males to have little girls. You did have an all-male group didn’t you?”
“Yes, I have all male mates and yes, we have one daughter and five sons, she’s the third oldest and we believe she’s a fraternal twin with one of her brothers, they look like mirror images of one another and her brother was clutching her thumb as I birthed them.”

“Oh, she sounds adorable, but five sons, my word, your mates must be proud.”

“I dare say they’d be proud if I birthed a three headed octopus with no eyes. Our lives revolve around the children now and it does make it difficult, but I wouldn’t have it any other way.”

“Ma ma?” Braiden called out curiously, his indigo eyes searching him out and a grin taking over his face as he spotted him. “Mama!”

“Ooo, look, Mummy! The baby’s talking!” Marisa exclaimed excitedly. “Will my new brother or sister talk to me?”

“Not for a while, Marisa Princess.” Rory told her, the gooey look on his face that most doting Father’s got when their ‘Princesses’ did something suitably adorable or pride worthy.

“Newborn babies don’t do very much of anything.” Janine explained. “We have to be very careful of the new baby for a long while and baby won’t be talking for at least five or six months.”

“Months?” Marisa cried. “That’s forever!”

Harry chuckled. “I’m glad it’s not, these last few months have been terribly difficult, but they’ve flown by, I look at all six of them and I can remember clearly what they were like at birth and I can’t help but wonder what happened and where the time has gone.”

Janine nodded understandably. “I know what you mean, it seems…seems like only yesterday when I had my little Marisa and I’ve blinked and suddenly she’s this wonderful, gorgeous five year old girl.” The woman sniffed and Harry had the same horrified look on his face that Rory did as she started tearing up.

“I…come on, love, it’s alright. It wasn’t actually as short as a blink; we have photos of her growing up.”
“I know, but I’m pregnant again now and we’re having our second child, what if this baby grows up as fast as our Marisa?”

“I’m sure the baby won’t be able to help it.” Rory explained, at a complete loss as to what to actually do or say to his mate.

Harry put Marisa down when she squirmed and then she darted off as soon as her little sandaled feet hit the floor. Harry blinked and felt a thrill of fear for her running around on her own.

“She’ll be fine.” Rory said understanding the look on his face. “My family have a trust policy, we have always had it, we won’t let our submissives ruin our children, so we teach them to let the children go. So far Marisa has been absolutely fine, she’s probably seen one of her friends is all.”

Harry nodded. “I won’t let myself act like some of the submissives I’ve seen and I believe the Maddison’s at least follow the same sort of policy…”

“You’re mated to a Maddison?” Rory asked his eyes widening.

“I…yes. Max, Maximilius, he was my third mate.”

“Oh dear Merlin.”

“It’s alright, he won’t do anything.” Harry frowned.

“No, it’s not that. It’s just…no one gets on Myron Maddison’s bad side. No one. And everyone knows that the best and fastest way to get on his bad side is to hurt or upset one of his family, mates of children and siblings included.”

“Well you haven’t upset me, so it’s fine.”

Rory nodded. “The Maddisons are very highly respected Drackens, what they went through…” Rory trailed off shaking his head. “Alexander helped reform the mating rites to make it safer for both dominants and submissives to come together in the same room without deaths and Myron helped reform the Submissive Protection Act in nineteen-eighty-seven, the Elders were considering asking Alexander to become part of the Counsel, but he refused. He wants to spend every moment he can get with his family, not be pulled away by Counsel business.”

“Oh, I think this little one needs a change.” Janine cut in sniffing Braiden delicately. “Do you want me to take him?”

“Oh no, of course not, I wouldn’t subject you to that in your condition.” Harry chuckled taking Braiden from her carefully.

“The changing rooms are just outside the doors, next to the bathrooms.” Rory told him as Harry looked around for the changing rooms that Nasta had mentioned were here.

“They need sign posts or something.” Harry muttered as he thanked them both politely and wandered off with an uncomfortably squirming, stinky Braiden.

Harry found everything that he could have possibly needed in the changing rooms, located in between the male and female toilets, there were piles of different kinds of nappies, from disposable to cloth, wipes, talc, medicated creams, potions and even spare briefs for children who had gotten a little overexcited and had an accident. He understood now why Nasta had insisted that it was not necessary to bring a nappy bag with them at all.

“There we go, all clean and fresh.” Harry exclaimed as he pulled up Braiden’s smart trousers and smoothed down his dress robes.

Braiden giggled at him and Harry couldn’t help smiling at him as he cuddled him into the crook of his arm, cleaning up the changing station that he had used before heading back out into the corridor to rejoin the meeting halls.

“You think you’re so special!”

Harry turned around curiously, not actually expecting to be the one that comment was aimed at, but he saw Rebecca Silvermoss chug back a glass of white wine and teeter towards him on her too high “Excuse me?” He asked, turning his body away from her slightly to shield Braiden more.

“Max was supposed to be my mate! That’s supposed to be my child!” She slurred looking at Braiden with a gleam in her glassy, unfocused eyes.

Harry took in a deep inhale and looked around, out here was nearly deserted, though there was a guard watching them closely. Harry stepped back a bit, more towards the guard.

“You’re not having my child.” Harry said loudly and the guard pushed immediately off from the wall, his gun coming out from under his open blazer as he approached them.

Rebecca had shoved him hard in the chest and tried to snatch Braiden quicker than Harry would have thought she would be able to and he panicked, sending off a distress call as he felt Braiden leaving his arms. He lashed out from where he had fallen on the floor and he caught her knee with his foot as he lurched up to snatch Braiden back into his own arms and the guard was suddenly upon them, expertly separating them off from one another and pinning Silvermoss to the wall with his gun pressed tight over her throat.

Braiden was crying hysterically and Harry curled over him, supporting and comforting him, sniffing him desperately for any injuries he might have gained, clutching him tightly before the familiar scents of his mates were surrounding him. Large hands touched his back, more tried to lift his face and he let them manoeuvre him until they could see his face, into his stricken eyes.

“She tried to snatch Braiden from me.” Harry told them as he refused to let Braiden be parted from his arms. “She said that Max was hers and that Braiden was hers and she tried to take him. She almost got him from me!”

Myron stood up to his formidable height of six foot ten inches and Harry almost cowered back from the look in his black eyes as he turned to Rebecca Silvermoss and stood so close to her that they had to have been touching. Harry could hear soft hissing and harsh whispering, but he couldn’t make any words out, but he trusted Myron to look after them, no matter what, or from who.

“Where are the other children?” He asked as he realised the only baby around them was Braiden; even Leolin had gone from the sling on Nasta’s front.
“With Marianna, Narcissa, Lucius and Max’s sisters.” Nasta informed him as he sat on the floor and pulled Harry onto his lap. “You don’t bring your children to the battlefield; you leave them safe with family.”

Harry nodded and he breathed deeply to calm his Dracken down, it helped that his mates were all calm around him, sooth ing him and bringing him back from the edge of irrational behaviour.

“Do you want to go home?” Blaise asked him softly, but his hands were clenched in anger, his nails biting into the palms of his hands to keep himself grounded.

Harry shook his head. “No. I’m fine. I won’t let her ruin a once a year meeting, though I swear right now if she tries for Braiden, or any of my children again, she’s dead.”

Nasta stood up with Harry in his arms before placing him gently on the ground.

“Do you want her removed from the meeting halls, Harry sweet one?”

Harry looked over at the familiar voice of Elder Quintalus Trintus and he smiled at the kindly man who had been his grounding rock during his meetings, who had taught him and looked after him. He had liked Elder Trintus and he had missed the man.

He shook his head. “That’s alright, Elder, she can stay as long as she knows that the next time she goes for my child, she’ll lose her life and quite possibly her eyes and head too.”

The group of seven or so Elders nodded easily, as if Harry hadn’t just threatened to blind and behead someone, and Harry went to Elder Trintus happily and allowed the man to coo over Braiden, though he couldn’t bear to let him out of his arms. He was holding him so tightly that Braiden could barely squirm, let alone move, but he would rather that than have him snatched and gone from him.

Harry caught up with Elder Trintus, he met Elder Midate and got to know Elder Kirrian better, Max stood like a silent shadow protector at his back, his body stiff with tension as if expecting an imminent attack. The Elders seemed to approve of Max and his actions if their proud looks were any indication.

After a while Harry said his goodbyes to the Elders and he moved back into the meeting halls, where everyone was looking at him, oh they tried not to, tried to do it inconspicuously and subtly, but Harry still caught the glances and the not so subtle stares.
“Harry.”

Harry blinked at the large man suddenly in front of him, not as tall or broad as Max, Nasta or even Draco, but an inch or so taller than Blaise, but still, he was impressive and handsome. Something flashed in his mind and he grinned widely, moving to carefully hug the man in front of him, who he recognised from the familiar facial scarring.

“Arsenio. I haven’t seen you in ages, how have you been?” He asked happily.

He was still tall, about six foot three, but he had more grey hair than the last time that Harry had seen him at his own mate meetings what seemed like forever ago. He was still handsome, despite the claw marks going down the one side of his cheek and he was still as well dressed as he had been in his mate meetings.

The man nodded curtly. “I have been well. Are you alright? I recognised your distress call from your meetings, but the guards wouldn’t let anyone but your family and the Elders through.”

Harry huffed. “Some widowed hussy thought that she could get with my mate and snatch my child, she almost got him away from me so I sent out the call, but I got him back.”

“He is very cute.” Arsenio complimented.

Harry smiled happily at that.

“Is the ‘widowed hussy’ still alive?”

Harry nodded. “Yes. If she tries for him again though I won’t be so lenient.”

“Most wouldn’t have been lenient in the first place; you truly are different from every other submissive in every way.”

“I’m taking that as a compliment.” Harry teased with a smile.
Arsenio smiled back and inclined his head. “It was meant as one.”

Harry caught up with Arsenio for the next hour, much to Max’s annoyance, though he didn’t show it, but Harry could feel it in the way his body pressed against him.

Arsenio was still unmated and at forty-six, he now expected to remain unmated for life, Harry cheered him up and told him that not every submissive was the same and that someday, one submissive just perfect for him would pop up and he’d be happy that he had waited and hadn’t mated to anyone just for the sake of it. That had made the weary man smile and Harry felt happy enough to leave Arsenio and let Max steer him towards the bar.

“I need another drink after that; do you want a grape juice?”

Harry shrugged. “Do they have just fruit juice? I don’t think my stomach could handle anything sparkling right about now. It’s so tight and knotted that anything bubbly is going to make me sick.”

“Of course they do.” Max smiled at him. “What juice did you want?”

Harry shrugged again. “Any, I don’t mind as long as it’s not sparkling.”

“Hey, I heard what happened, everyone’s talking about it.” Steffan greeted with a worried look.

“It was Silvermoss, do you remember her?”

Steffan’s face screwed up. “I think so. Arrogant bitch, got rid of everyone over the age of twenty and rejected you because of your tiny wings.”

Max grinned. “Yeah, I’m so glad that she did too, I wouldn’t have had my gorgeous Harry otherwise. Imagine missing out on this?” Max pulled Harry into his body and kissed him before turning back to Steffan with a grin. “Oh wait, you did.”

Steffan grinned. “Good thing too or you’d still be without a mate.”
Harry snorted and bounced Braiden higher. “Can I get an apple juice please? Non-sparkling.”

“Sure thing, sweetie and who is this cute little guy?”

“This is our firstborn son. Braiden.”

“Zabini’s kid yeah?”

Harry nodded, accepted his chilled apple juice and wandered off towards where he had last seen the family. He found them before he reached where they had been before and he snuggled into Draco’s side, sipping his apple juice.

“Are you alright, Harry?” Draco asked.

Harry sighed. “Yes, I’m just tired and everyone staring at me and talking about me doesn’t help.”

“Where’s Max?” Alexander cut in.

“Over by the bar talking to his friend Steffan. I’m sure Myron will be able to see him.”

“What makes you say that?” Richard asked, his voice was almost gone, but he managed a whispered croak.

“They have to be the tallest people in the room, all they have to do is look around and they’ll spot one another because everyone else is head and shoulders shorter than them.”

Myron snorted and gave a smirk. He looked around and he nodded.

“I see him; I see the top of his head by the bar.”

“See? I told you. When you’re near seven feet, no one else can compare, you must be head, shoulders and half your chest taller than everyone else.”

Myron gave him a sly grin and Harry’s smile faded as he was grabbed and hoisted up on those shoulders with Braiden, who screeched in absolute joy.

“How does it feel to be over seven feet?” Myron asked him, holding him securely.

“Disorientating, how do you manage this all the time? It’s horrible being up here.”

“Braiden likes it.” Myron told him, listening to the happy coos and screeches.

“Yes he does. I could do without it though. Oh! I really can see Max.” He giggled.

Myron snorted and slipped him down into his arms, kissed his temple, kissed Braiden’s cheek and set him back on the floor, all without spilling his apple juice.

“You’ve done that before.”

“Of course I have. I had five very active, very boisterous children who loved climbing all over Daddy and being up high. Caesar loved it, he hated being shorter than Max, whenever we went for walks, he had to be up taller than Max, I’d usually have Caesar and one of the girls on a shoulder each and Richard would have another of the girls. When he was older, and taller, Max would carry one of his sisters around to copy us, do you remember that phase?”

Richard nodded with a happy, reminiscent grin.

“We couldn’t help climbing on you, Daddy.” Alayla smiled.

“I know, love. But having a clump of my hair yanked out because you and your sister started fighting on my shoulders is not the most pleasurable of experiences.”

Richard choked out a laugh. “I remember that!” He gasped out.
“Stop talking until your voice comes back, Richard.”

Richard frowned, but he remained silent, he did sidle up to Myron and lean against him though and Harry smiled as almost unconsciously, Myron’s arm wrapped around him and held him tighter even as he carried on his conversation with his Father.

He hoped that nothing else happened to their family, he couldn’t stand to have them broken up or destroyed, it was bad enough with Max’s attitude towards his own Mother, though Harry would admit, out loud too, that he wasn’t happy with her himself. Especially as she had outright refused the help of a mind Healer, without seeing the Healer once, it just dragged up all his stubbornness and anger with her and he firmed himself not to let her near his babies until she got help, until she got herself sorted out. He would be happy to include her in his life and his children’s lives, but only once he was sure that she was in her right mind and not a moment before.

- Harry collapsed onto the bed with a sigh and he spread his body over it. Blaise fell next to him and shoved him over.

“That was a horrible night, I blame you!” Blaise hissed at Max.

“I can’t help it if I’m irresistible!” Max laughed.

“He couldn’t have known Mossy would have gotten even more pissed drunk on white wine and tried to attack him.” Harry grinned; using his new nickname for Rebecca Silvermoss, who had thoroughly disgraced herself at this year’s meeting and likely wouldn’t be invited for next year’s meeting.

“She didn’t attack me, she sort of fell short.” Max giggled.

Harry laughed with him, remembering her screaming and shouting like a lunatic, approaching Max intent on hitting him, only to slip on her high heels and end up at his feet.
“Women fall at my feet!” Max declared, spinning around and falling on the bed.

“As long as you don’t expect us to.” Draco muttered, shedding his dress robes.

“You’ve had far too much to drink.” Nasta shook his head, giving Max’s bum a playful swat.

“If you want to make anything of it, you’ve gotta spank me harder than that.”

Harry chuckled and slipped out of his dress robes.

“Oh, never mind, I have a sex slave stripping in front of me.” Max chuckled, putting his chin on his folded hands to watch him.

“Sex slave?” Harry snorted. “You’re my slave, lover boy.”

“Do you wish for me to strip, Master?”

Harry shook his head with a laugh and he tossed his robes to the side, throwing his uncomfortable, formal trousers after them.

“Oh now that’s a better view.” Max said as he dragged Harry towards him by an ankle.

“Hey!” Harry called out, laughing as he found himself being covered by Max and having his neck bitten and sucked.

“Alright, alright, pack it in. Harry and Blaise have a big day tomorrow, they need their sleep.” Nasta told them, breaking them up.

Harry chuckled and snuggled into Draco and Blaise, leaving Nasta to wrestle a drunken Max from his clothes and tuck him in.
“I guess I’m on the night feeds then.” Nasta rolled his eyes. “Stay in that bed and get to sleep, Max.” He ordered as Max tried to get out from under the duvet.

“I’m not tired.” He whined.

“Yes you are, you just don’t know that you are.”

“How is that even possible?”

“Sleep now or you’ll be on the settee with a sleeping potion.”

“Fine.” Max huffed.

“I’ve never seen him like this.” Harry chuckled.

“It’s what he’s like on champagne. It makes him act different than when he’s drunk on wine and he’s different again when he’s had too much beer.” Nasta shook his head. “You’re not twenty anymore, Max, you have to stop doing this.”

“You…you’re not my Mother.” Max declared sleepily.

“Thank Merlin for small mercies, now just get to sleep.” Nasta answered.

“Are you coming to join us, Nas?” Harry asked as he realised that Nasta wasn’t getting into the bed.

“I’m going to check on everything, check the kids and then come to bed, I’ll be ten minutes.” Nasta said softly.

Harry nodded and snuggled back into the warm pile of bodies. He was fast asleep before Nasta came back almost exactly ten minutes later to strip out of his clothes and slip into the bed with the rest of them.
Harry woke up early the next morning and didn’t know why until he heard loud retching in the bathroom. He looked in the bed, to find Draco and Blaise cuddled together, but Max and Nasta were missing.

He groaned and checked on Leolin in his bassinet beside the bed. He was still sleeping soundly.

Harry padded down the stairs carefully and into the bathroom to find Nasta comforting Max, whose head was buried down the toilet.

“Is he okay?” Harry asked sleepily, rubbing his eyes to try and wake himself up a bit more.

“It’s early, love, go back to bed. Max’ll be fine, his body is just reminding him why it’s a bad idea to drink so much in one night.” Nasta told him very softly, telling Harry that Max probably had a banging headache from the violent vomiting and the onset of a very bad hangover.

Harry shook his head and came to kneel beside them, patting Max’s naked, sweaty shoulder.

“I can’t sleep now, it’s too early to be awake, but too late to get any decent amount of sleep, I’ll end up feeling worse for any more sleep.” He explained quietly.

“Go and get some tea then, Max could certainly use a cup to soothe his stomach.”

Harry nodded and he went out into the kitchenette, sending a short wave of magic to the fire to set it going, it was freezing this early in the morning even if it was almost summer.

He boiled the kettle and poured three cups of tea, he carried two into the bathroom, to find Max leaning fully against Nasta, looking pathetic, tired and unwell.

“You brought this on yourself.” Nasta told him as Max groaned weakly. “Thank you, Harry. Here, drink this, Harry made you tea.”

“Thank you, Harry.” Max replied, sounding terrible.

“That’s alright, you get better in time for the match, you hear me, Blaise and I will never forgive you if you miss our last ever game. The last one at Hogwarts at least.” Harry grinned.

“Wouldn’t miss it for the world.” Max answered before he gulped the tea down.

Harry went to the bedroom and checked on his children, picking up Regan as his eyes were the only pair open, before checking on Braiden in his new room, who was also just waking up.

Harry carried them both out into the living room and placed them on the carpet with a pile of toys as he made Braiden and Farren baby cereal for breakfast and got the others’ bottles set up ready. He kept a stern eye on the two over on the rug; Braiden was showing off his crawling skills to Regan, who was on his belly, pushing up with his arms to look around himself curiously and with more than a little interest.

Harry made breakfast, only some eggs and toast, he didn’t have the time to mess about with doing a big, fancy breakfast as well as feeding Braiden and Farren and doing four bottle feeds on top of that. He put a warming spell on the plates and made up four bottles, letting them cool down as he went to check on the four babies left in the bedroom, Farren, Calix and Tegan were awake and gurgling to one another, or to themselves, he wasn’t entirely sure as he moved them into the living room, before climbing the stairs in the bedroom to the huge platform above and checking on Leolin who was still fast asleep in his bassinet, but Draco was stirring on the bed.

“Breakfast is ready when you are, Draco.” He said quietly as he picked Leolin up, he got a soft grunt of acknowledgement back so he carried Leolin carefully down the stairs.

Harry placed him into the bassinet in the living room and spared a look for his children, hauling Braiden back with his brothers and sister when he went out of the circle of safe space that he had set out for his children, Braiden was disgruntled, but his head was level with all manner of table corners while he was crawling and Harry couldn’t take that chance.

He boiled the kettle again to make more tea before he put Farren into Braiden’s highchair, because they only had one at the moment, and he fed the very happy boy his smooth cereal.

Harry had noticed that Farren opened his mouth very wide for the spoon, as if he didn’t want to waste a single spoonful of food, where Braiden barely opened his mouth at all and Harry had to manipulate the spoon into his mouth, getting most of his food onto his cheeks and chin in the process.

Harry fed Farren happily, Braiden not so happily, before Calix started grizzling for his own breakfast.

“Two minutes, love!” Harry called out as he scraped Braiden’s bowl for a last spoonful. “Come on baby.” He pleaded, trying to get the spoon through barely opened lips. “Just a little wider Braiden baby, please.”
Harry forced the spoon into Braiden’s mouth, letting him nibble on it and swallow the cereal, before using the spoon to wipe his face; he fed him the last bit as Calix started full out crying.

“Allright, Calix love!” Harry said as he used a cloth to wipe Braiden’s face and hauled him from the highchair and settled him back on the floor.

Harry scooped up Calix and rocked him gently. He tested the bottle against his forearm and then, relieved at the warm temperature, he shoved it into Calix’s wailing mouth.

Draco came out perfectly showered and dressed, but he looked uncomfortable.

“What’s the matter?” Harry asked curiously.

“I need a piss, but Max has his head buried down the toilet and every time Nasta tries to move him, he starts vomiting again.” Draco grumbled.

“Ah. Can you hold it or should I remove Max’s head for you and give him a bucket?”

“I can hold it for a little longer; I have more self-control than that, but I did drink a lot last night.”

“If he’s not out after you’ve eaten, I’ll drag him out. He’s been in there for over two hours. Is Blaise awake yet?”

“He’s getting there.”

Harry nodded and finished feeding Calix, burped him and settled him back on the floor before hefting up Regan and shoving a bottle in his mouth. Tegan was next and then Harry tried to wake up Leolin for his feed, but he wasn’t having any of it, so he left him and ate his own breakfast as Blaise came out, partially dressed in his Quidditch uniform, his gorgeous legs were encased in greyish-silver leggings, his muscled chest covered by the same colour vest.

“You need to get ready, Harry.” Blaise told him.
Harry snapped out of his daze and groaned. “I know, give me a minute!”

Harry scoffed down the last of his breakfast and he almost broke the plate by throwing it into the sink and of course Leolin took that moment to wake up crying.

Harry sighed and picked him up carefully, holding him tightly as he held the teat of the bottle out to him and watched as he latched on.

“When do you have to take him to meet the stupid Faeries?” Draco asked.

“Don’t call them stupid, Draco, Leolin’s a Faerie too. But it’ll definitely be after graduation, I can’t even think at the minute, let alone plan a trip to the Faerie city. I want to be settled and secure first, until then, there’s not a chance, no matter how many demanding letters they send to Aneirin and Nasta.”

“Who’s sending me letters?” Nasta asked as he supported Max into the kitchen gently.

Max inhaled once, then dived back towards the bathroom. Harry rolled his eyes as he finished feeding Leolin, burped him and settled him on a little beanbag, so he wasn’t flat on his back, but was upright somewhat and still fully supported.

“Eat your breakfast, Nas, I’ll go and see to him.” Harry sighed.

Harry went into the bathroom and found Max lying flat on the floor, he checked him over and bright blue eyes blinked open at him.

“Oh, you are conscious then.”

Max just groaned. “Don’t sound so upset about it.”

“You did bring this on yourself. You drank a hell of a lot last night.” Harry replied. “How are you feeling?”

“The world is spinning.” Max laid his head against the tile floor and sighed. “The floor is cold and so “Please tell me you can shake this off before the match.” Harry begged. “You still sound drunk.”

“I think I might be.” Max groaned. “Go and get me one of those potions that stops it.”

“I don’t think Nasta will let you.”

“I don’t care, I want one.” Max groaned pathetically. “I’ll be able to watch the match fine if I have one as well.”

Harry sighed. “Okay, give me a minute. Don’t go anywhere.”

Harry chuckled as he looked at Max spread out on the floor by the toilet, wearing only his loose boxer shorts, pressing as much skin against the cool tile as possible. Max wasn’t going anywhere without help for a while. Not without a potion at the very least.

He went back into the living room to find his three mates scoffing their breakfasts, watching the time and watching the babies, who still needed their baths and dressing for the day.

“Is Max alright?” Nasta asked as he came into the kitchenette and pulled down the first aid kit, though it was more like a large jewellery chest.

“He wants a sobriety potion. He’s going to get hell for doing this on our big day!” Harry huffed, mock angrily as he found the little vial labelled as a sobriety potion, grabbed it, put the first aid kit back before stomping back to the bathroom.

He grinned as he found Max curled up around the toilet.

“I got it and I think I managed to convince Nasta that I was angry with you, so it should be fine. Come here.”

Max crawled to his knees and sat up slowly, looking very pale and sweaty at the movement, no matter how small and slow. Harry unstoppered the vial and brushed Max’s hair with his fingers as he swallowed the contents of the little bottle down in one go.

Potions were very potent stuff and fast acting, Max looked visibly better within minutes, but the difference between injected potions and orally taken potions was dramatic. Orally taken potions took a few minutes to work, injected potions, as they went directly into the bloodstream, acted in seconds.

“Oh I feel renewed!” Max exclaimed happily, stretching his aching body and rubbing his face.

“You had better be, the kids still need to be bathed and dressed, I’m not ready and Blaise is still eating breakfast, we’re going to be so late!”

Harry stripped quickly and hopped into the shower, ignoring Max, who was washing his face in the sink to wake up a bit more and to refresh himself. Harry washed as quickly as he could and when he got out, Draco and Nasta were bathing the kids while Max dressed the washed and dried babies. He grabbed a towel and rubbed himself dry quickly, wincing as Braiden started screaming as soon as the water touched his bum.

“He’s going to have this bath over one day; I think we should start putting him in the big bath.” Nasta sighed as he tried to hold Braiden still, while Draco washed him with a soft cloth.

“I’m sure I saw bath seats in that store we went too.” Max replied. “We can get him one of those now that he can sit up properly. Maybe some toys would help calm him down a little so he’s not such a monster in the water.”

“If it’ll help, I don’t care what you do.” Harry replied as he threw the towel into the hamper and walked naked into the bedroom.

Blaise was just finishing off getting into his Quidditch uniform, though he dropped his armguard to the floor when he saw Harry.

“Don’t even think about it. We don’t have time.” Harry warned him as he dug out his pale yellow leggings and dragged them on to his still slightly damp legs, forgoing underwear. Blaise’s leggings and vest were a greyish-silver, overlaid with emerald green robes, it was a stunning contrast.

He bent over the dresser to find the rest of his uniform and Blaise pinched his bum, making him jump and almost hit his head.
“Hey! I’m trying to get dressed here, Blaise!”

“I can’t help it, you’re so gorgeous.”

Harry snorted and pulled on his skin tight, pale yellow Quidditch vest, before dragging on his bright red socks with the two bright yellow stripes at the top.

“You look stunning like that. I swear I get hard every time I see you in those damnable uniforms.” Max told them, coming out of the bathroom carrying Regan and Calix, who were dressed up warmly in jumpers, but they had forgone the snowsuits, what with it being May this time around.

“Maybe if you’re good we’ll all wear our Quidditch uniforms for you, Draco still has his.” Blaise winked.

“We’ll treat you and Nasta on the night before our graduation.” Harry chuckled, catching on as he slipped his bright red robes on over his vest and leggings before fishing out his shin and arm guards and strapped them into place before stepping into his knee high flat boots and lacing them up tightly. He found his steel boned gloves that protected his fingers from breaking and tucked them into the waistband of his leggings and picked up his gorgeous son, Calix.

“Are we ready?” Nasta asked as he slipped the strap of the fully packed nappy bag over his shoulders.

Harry nodded as he got Calix and Leolin into his arms, making sure they had everything they could possibly need and that no baby had been left behind.

“Right, let’s go rally the team and remember, Blaise, you can’t forbid them from involving me in the game.”

Blaise gave him a dark look that said that he had planned to do just that.

“I mean it; I want your best game, not a handicap.” Harry said sternly as they made their way down to the Great Hall. “I won’t go easy on you and I don’t want you to go easy on e either.”
Harry went to the Gryffindor table with Nasta, while Blaise and Draco headed for the Slytherin table with Max, who was in a deep debate with Draco over the strengths and weaknesses of both teams and who he believed would win based on what he had seen so far. Personally Harry thought he was trying to avoid Nasta as much as possible.

“Hey Harry, how are you feeling?” Ginny asked in her own uniform and finishing off a hearty breakfast.

“Fit and ready to destroy Slytherin once again. Gryffindor are winners in points, all we need to do is get this match won and we’ll get the Quidditch cup. Slytherin are goners.”

Ginny snorted and grinned at him. “Of course they are. Your lover is the Captain.”

“Hey, Blaise is bringing his best game, don’t you think for one minute that just because we love one another and share a bed and a child that we’ve automatically won this match, he’s going to give us his all.”

“If any of his team hurt you, they’re dead.” Ginny said seriously. “He wants to win, but he won’t have you hurt, even I can see that.”

Harry rolled his eyes and took a last drink of pumpkin juice, shifting Calix as he cooed softly, lashing a foot out at Leolin.

“Calix, don’t do that, love.” Harry said softly as he handed Leolin off to Nasta, who slipped him into the sling that he was wearing.

“Can I hold him? Is this one Nasta’s?” Ginny asked as Harry handed him over.

“No, Max’s. Leolin, Regan and Tegan are Nasta’s.”

“Oh, I’m sorry, I can never keep them straight, I knew Leolin was Nasta’s though, Faerie baby right?”
Harry grinned and nodded. “Yeah, Faerie baby with his gorgeous Gryffindor gold eyes.”

“I bet they look stunning, he hasn’t ever been awake to show me those eyes yet.”

“You’ll get plenty of time yet to see them, he needs a lot of sleep. I don’t want to do anything to disrupt his development, he’s started earlier than most Faerie babies, I want to keep it that way.”

Ginny nodded understandingly. “Hermione’s been filling me in, she borrowed some books on Faeries from the library and I think you gave her some, she’s been overloading herself with Faerie information because she doesn’t want to research the other thing in case someone asks her why or digs deeper into it, so she’s waiting for graduation and a trip to Flourish and Blotts.”

“Who told you about that?” Nasta asked suspiciously.

“My Mum let it slip, she didn’t realise I didn’t know, she thought it was only Ron and Bill, but your secret is safe with me, don’t worry and I’ll even forgive you for not cluing me in, I can understand why and Hermione and I have been having little conversations, it’s fun to make up code words for it, we’ve been calling it your Charlie for the last week. But she does want as many books as she can get on the matter.”

Harry snorted. “She’ll need more than Flourish and Blotts. The amount of information on that subject is very limited.”

“What are you talking about, Harry?” Seamus asked.

“What rates of Muggleborns have a born squib ancestor.” Ginny replied quickly and easily. “Hermione was interested, but she can’t find anything on it.”

“Well, all of them do.” Seamus replied confused. “You can’t have a Muggleborn without a magical ancestor.”

“I think what Hermione wants to know is how far back her magical ancestor was, so she’s looking for the average amount of generations the Muggleborn’s squib ancestor was before their birth to see if there is a pattern so she can apply it to her own family.” Nasta explained easily, as if that was truly what they were talking about before Seamus joined them.
Harry squeezed his thigh and smiled at his quick thinking. He loved that he had smart, quick thinking mates; they could protect him and his babies better.

When it was time for the teams to move out to prepare, Harry gave a kiss to Leolin and to Calix before he handed the latter over to Nasta with a kiss, taking the brooms he had been carrying in lieu of a baby and walking to the Slytherin table, he kissed Tegan, Farren, Regan and then Braiden, before kissing Max, Draco and Blaise, handing the latter his broom.

“He’s done something to your broomstick!” One of the Chasers of Slytherin burst out.

“The one in my leggings maybe.” Blaise shot back scathingly.

“You wish I had.” Harry grinned. “Give me a kiss for luck.”

“I would, but I think I need it more.” Blaise told him seriously.

Harry smiled and kissed Blaise. “For luck.” He said sweetly as they broke apart. “Now I have to go and prep my team to pummel you into the ground. Have fun.”

Max’s laughter followed him as he walked to meet the rest of his team at the doors, shouldering his Firebolt happily. He loved flying and he was so happy to be able to take part in this match, it had been touch and go with his heat periods, but he was unpregnant and not due another heat period for at least another month and a half. He’d be out of school by the time he went on his next one and that had made Draco very, very happy indeed.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Harry next saw Blaise on the pitch, he had given a riveting speech and loved how his team trusted in him and rallied around him, he hadn’t had a single comment about him going easy on Blaise because they were lovers. His team knew him better than that, though Blaise’s face told him that his teammates weren’t as convinced and had given him a right going over about it.

He and Blaise shook hands, though far from the usual pre-match, break the opponent’s fingers grasp, Harry didn’t want to let go of Blaise’s hand for an entirely different reason, and when Blaise pulled him into a kiss, the crowds went wild.
“I think that must be a new thing, I don’t think any Captains have ever kissed before a match in the History of Hogwarts.” Harry smiled.

“We’re not like other Captains.” Blaise winked back.

“Is this proof that the outcome of this game is already decided? With that kiss between legendary Captain and Seeker Harry Potter, who has led his team into victory a record of nine games since his appointment of Captaincy in his sixth year, after a very successful seven years on the Gryffindor team and his lover Blaise Zabini, who took over Captaincy of Slytherin this year after the position was declined by Harry Potter’s other lover, Draco Malfoy.” The commentator, a Ravenclaw seventh year, announced far too seriously.

“Well that was long winded and unnecessary.” Blaise snorted. “You had better bring your best game, Potter.”

“You’re damn right I will, Zabini, but I do plan on making this my tenth win of my Captaincy career, so you had better have brought better than your best to the pitch.”

“Mount your brooms.” Madam Hooch told them.

Harry threw his leg over his Firebolt, watching Blaise do the same, only with his Nimbus two thousand and one.

“On my whistle. Three. Two. One.” A sharp blast of the whistle and Harry kicked off from the hard floor, first as always, and he forgot everything else. He forgot that he was playing against Blaise, forgot the crowd and the commentator, nothing matter but the feel of the wind in his hair and the snitch.

It was a good game, despite what the commentator called ‘boring’ seemingly because Harry wasn’t being battered by Bludgers. Gryffindor were fifty points up on Slytherin, who only had ten points to their sixty, but their Chasers were trying, Blaise especially, who had scored Slytherin’s only goal.

Harry kept an eye on the young Seeker they had replaced Draco with this year, she was good apparently, but she hadn’t been in Draco’s league, let alone in Harry’s. She wasn’t doing much of anything, but her eyes were alert and watchful. Harry kept his eye on her as he drifted around the pitch lazily, waiting for the snitch to make its first appearance of the match.

Despite his warning to Blaise, not a single Bludger came his way, though that didn’t mean they were safe from the Slytherin Beaters, who were aiming instead at their Chasers and their Keeper, of course the commentator picked up on this and started pointing it out.

Harry flew up to Blaise and punched his shoulder.

“Hey! You said no holding back!”

“I’m not going to let them hit Bludgers at you!” Blaise said angrily, swiping the sweat from his forehead.

“Chances are they wouldn’t hit me anyway!”

“I’m never going to take that chance! I love you, you’re my lover, the Mother to my one and only child, I never want anything to hurt you; it’s just a game, Harry. It’s not worth a night in the hospital wing.”

“If I had a Beaters bat I’d clonk you on the head with it, then you’d see the hospital wing in a better light.”

“Harry, I’m sorry, but I’m not risking them hitting you. People die from Bludgers if they’re hit wrong.”

“I’ll hit you wrong! What would you do if I refused to seek the snitch?!”

“Hold up the Quidditch cup.” Blaise said stonily. “If you throw the game, your team will never forgive you, if I throw the game, I won’t give a shit what they think.”

Harry gave him the look he deserved and flew off and signalled time out to Madam Hooch, ignoring that he had been talking in the middle of the pitch for three minutes while the game was still going on.

He landed angrily and waited for his team to land around him.

“What’s the matter, Harry?” Ginny asked. “What was with the domestic?”

“He’s told his Beaters that he’ll curse them if they aim for me.” He spat out furiously.
“That’s good though, isn’t it?” Hendix asked innocently.

“No it’s not good!” Harry snapped. “I told him to treat this like any other match!”

“Harry, he’s not going to. Of course he’s not.” Ginny told him gently. “It hasn’t been said, but what would you do if Jimmy and Ritchie hit Blaise with a Bludger and he fell thirty feet to the floor?”

Harry’s fists clenched automatically and his face pulled into a snarl.

“Exactly!” Ginny said, smacking him. “He doesn’t want to feel like you just did, he doesn’t want you to get hurt. I know you can avoid them, but not always. Leave it and let’s crush him anyway, if you don’t get the snitch, I don’t know if we’ll win, the Beaters are leaving you alone, but they aren’t leaving us alone, Jimmy and Ritchie are doing well, but it only takes one hit, Harry and our front technique will fail and we’ll lose. It’ll be the same if Paulie gets hit, that’ll be it, game over. Blaise is too good a Chaser and without a Keeper…just get the snitch, please.”

Harry sighed and calmed down somewhat. He nodded.

“Yeah, I think I can get the snitch, I have no idea what the Slytherin Seeker’s name is, but she doesn’t seem very good. She’ll be good in a few years, but not this match, and not against me.”

Harry signalled that he was ready to get back in the air to Madam Hooch and he had a group huddle with his team, before getting on his broom and getting back in the air.

The Slytherin team took to the air as well and Harry took a deep breath, sent a smile to Blaise, got a smile back and the game was on. Neither of them sent Bludgers at each other, but Blaise getting hit by a Bludger didn’t affect the game as much, they had two other Chasers, maybe not as good, but still two other goal scorers on the pitch, the Gryffindor Beaters were aiming for the Slytherin Seeker, which would mean that Slytherin would have next to no chance at winning the game if one of his Beaters hit her.

Harry couldn’t help smiling as he saw the formidable forms of Max and Nasta in the crowd, the platinum blond head of Draco next to them, six babies surrounding them.

Harry dove back into the game, ignoring the commentator screaming about the ‘injustice’ of having two lovers as Captains for opposite teams. Harry rolled his eyes at the dramatics. Quidditch die hards always annoyed him, though it had been funny with Oliver, though he knew now that telling a young kid to ‘get the snitch or die trying’ was more than a bit harsh, especially as it was an interschool match and not even a league game or world cup.
Another hour into the game and the commentator had moved on to exclaiming that Harry was purposefully not seeking the snitch to give the Slytherin Seeker a chance, which was just untrue, he hadn’t seen the snitch once all match, though he was proud that Blaise had gotten two more goals, and equally proud that Hendix had stopped twice as many as he hadn’t been able to save. He was a very good Keeper, maybe in a few years he could even be as good as Oliver, who was now a permanent, first team Keeper for Puddlemere United having moved up from the reserved team.

Gryffindor led seventy to thirty and the Slytherin players were getting dirty, despite Blaise intervening and giving them a shout out about it. They had promised one another a good, clean game.

Harry wasn’t going to give them a chance though, he flew up high until everyone were little specks, though the magical megaphone allowed him to hear the commentator claim that he was going up high so that he could claim that he hadn’t seen the snitch if it popped up, which wasn’t true as Harry had a feeling that the snitch was hiding up here as he hadn’t spotted it once down at game level and he had long since learnt to trust his Seeker’s instincts.

He was right and Harry grinned as the chase started. He loved this part of a match, the high speed, hairpin turn chase after the nimble, winged, golden ball. He followed it, twisting and turning through the air, then the snitch went down, straight down and Harry followed it, all the way back down to game level, down further, the concentration was effortless for him, he was breathless from the plunge straight down with the wind forced through his hair and he sucked in as much air as he could into his protesting lungs and as the grass came up, the snitch zipped off to the left and Harry followed it as if he were as small as the snitch himself. His knees did scrape heavily on the ground though, he had left it a bit late to pull up from the sheer dive, but any earlier and he could have gone in the wrong direction and he would have had to double back on himself, if he hadn’t lost the snitch completely that was.

“Harry Potter’s Wronski Feint has failed to engage the clever Slytherin Seeker into crashing into the hard, unyielding ground. What tactic will Captain Harry Potter come up with next after this recent tactical failure?”

That made Harry smile ferociously. The Slytherin Seeker wasn’t giving chase, she, and everyone else, thought that he had been Feinting, as he did in nearly every match that he played in because he just loved diving, but that was against good Seekers who knew how to play the game, this young girl couldn’t even see the snitch dancing in front of his fingertips, she wasn’t good enough to play, not yet.

Harry urged his broom on faster, quicker, twisting and turning after the snitch, going back up to game level, weaving through players and flying balls after the snitch and only then did the Slytherin Seeker realise that perhaps he wasn’t Feinting at all and she turned to give chase, only for Harry to pull sharply upwards after the ball and swipe it from the air. He held it up screaming and yelling and the sharp blast of Madam Hooch’s whistle ended the game and Harry was converged upon by his teammates.

Noise and sound came back to him in a rush and he couldn’t stop grinning, he felt renewed, reenergised and so very, very happy. When he was handed the Quidditch cup by a smiling Dumbledore, Harry flew it around the pitch, holding it up over the Gryffindor stands and laughing happily. Today had been amazing, to make up for the horrors that awaited him further down the line and the upsets of yesterday, today at least, had been incredible.
Harry actually went to the after party this time, being almost forced to go by Max and Nasta, who told him that it would be his last chance and that he deserved to go and celebrate his tenth win as Captain and his final ever win as Captain. He enjoyed it immensely and he had a great time with his friends, his team and his housemates.

He and Neville had taken two second years, three first years and a third year to the kitchens and told them that it was a Gryffindor tradition for them to know where the kitchens were and how to get into them and that when they were seventh years they had to pass on the tradition to the younger years too, but not all of them, just in case the secret got out and the kitchens were reinforced with a different portrait.

Laden down with baskets of snacks, drinks and cakes, they headed back to the party to feed everyone and the party was set to last well into the night, seeing as they had the Head Girl at their party and the Prefects couldn’t say anything like Percy had in their third year.

Harry didn’t stay all night, he stayed for a few hours before saying his goodbyes, claiming saucily that he wanted to carry on his own party with his lovers, before turning to his friends and telling them he missed his children. He hugged them and said goodbye, before walking happily through the school to the other side of the seventh floor and his own personal rooms.

He took out his wand and tapped the keyhole of the door in the portrait of the empty classroom and he slipped it back into its holster as he pushed open the door and walked into the happy, calmness that was his personal rooms.

Max was cooking and had his back to him, but the other three and the kids were missing.

“Hi Max, where is everyone?”

Max startled and turned to look at him. Harry was aghast to see that Max had a bruise forming on the side of his mouth, which was slightly bloody. Harry gasped and rushed to him.

“What happened?” He asked, utterly horrified.

Max sighed. “I riled Blaise and Draco up too much about the credibility of their Quidditch team, Blaise finally hit me one and stormed off to have sex with Nasta and Draco to make himself feel better. I wasn’t allowed to follow, so I’m making dinner instead to distract me from what I’m missing.”

“What did you say to him?”
“A lot of things that I shouldn’t have, but I didn’t realise that I was actually upsetting him until he hit me, I thought it was all in good fun, but you know me, I always manage to shove my foot in my mouth.”

“Did you apologise?”

“Several times, but he seemed to think that it was just because I wanted to be included in the makeup sex. I’m not that sex mad, I was sorry I had upset him more than anything, but he didn’t believe me.”

“I believe you.” Harry smiled and hugged him. “You never mean to hurt anyone, you’re a big softie. No matter how angry they are, they shouldn’t use sex as a weapon. That’s wrong.”

Max smiled at him and hugged him gratefully.

“Where are the kids?”

“They’re down for the night. Leolin’s due a feed in an hour, but the others have been put to bed for the next three hours at least.”

Harry nodded. “Is dinner alright to cook itself for a while?”

“Yeah, I was just standing over it because I had nothing else to do.” Max admitted bitterly.

“Come and cuddle then.” Harry offered, moving to lay on the rug by the roaring fire. It was May, so it was slightly too hot by the fire, which is what Harry wanted.

Max came and laid next to him and they cuddled together, just talking, before it got almost too hot to bear and Harry started stripping off his Quidditch robes, Max joined him in shedding his long sleeved shirt and jeans.

“Leave your socks on.” Max requested with a naughty grin.
Harry grinned. “You like the socks far too much.”

“I like the leggings and the vest too, but I won’t give up an opportunity to see your gorgeous, sweaty skin.”

Harry stripped naked, leaving on only his bright red socks with their two yellow stripes around the top. Max was naked too and they happily cuddled, sweating profusely in front of the fire, rubbing together. It wasn’t about sex, mostly wasn’t about sex anyway, but more about the bond and connection they had from skin to skin contact, laughing and cuddling, rolling around as much as they could on the rug, which was more than a bit arousing.

“What in the name of Merlin are you doing out here? I can hear you laughing from the bedroom.” Draco had come out and he looked around the room for Max as he spoke. He found them just as he finished his sentence and his mouth dropped open.

“What is he doing, Draco?” Blaise asked.

“Having sex with Harry.” Draco replied.

Nasta and Blaise just appeared and looked at them, they were all fully dressed and Harry knew what he and Max looked like, he had counted on it, as he smiled innocently at them.

“When did you get back?” Nasta asked.

Harry made a show of looking at the clock on the mantel piece.

“About an hour and a half ago. I left one party and had another one with Max, seeing as you three weren’t here to join us.”

“I thought you would have spent longer at your victory party.”

Harry shook his head. “I missed my lovers and I missed my children. I wanted to come home.”
“And then Max convinced you to have sex.” Blaise deadpanned. He looked angry.

“No, I convinced him to have sex with me.” Harry corrected. “I wanted victory sex.”

“He told you what he said, did he?”

“Actually he did and you should have all known that Max wouldn’t have meant any harm, he thought that he was teasing, if you didn’t like it, then you should have told him way before you got angry enough to hit him, which I sincerely hope was not in front of my children, or it’ll be my turn to be angry. Now kiss and make up and let’s eat, I’m still hungry.”

“After what?” Nasta asked confusedly.

Harry grinned. “I snuck into the kitchens to get snacks and cakes for the party. I passed on the legacy of Moony, Padfoot and Prongs to the younger years, so hopefully, even after graduation, future generations of Gryffindors can enjoy victory with sweets and pastries too.”

Nasta just shook his head and came to them; giving Max a kiss after Harry rebuffed his advance with a pointed glare. Draco did the same and then Blaise, who also apologised for hitting him.

“Wonderful! Now dinner yes? Exercise makes me hungry and I’ve had a lot of it today.”

“Are you going to get dressed?” Draco asked with a slight hint of trepidation.

Harry grinned and pulled on his leggings, but only his leggings. Max groaned and tugged on himself through his boxers and Blaise thunked his head on the table.

“Who knew that leggings could be as bad as that horrible skirt?” Draco sighed, closing his eyes and breathing deeply.

Harry just laughed and sat down as Nasta helped Max dish up dinner. He ate happily and heartily and the conversation, though quiet and studded with silence as they ate, stayed well away from Quidditch. Harry knew that Blaise didn’t mind, and that they all knew that he was excited to have won, but he wasn’t insensitive enough to rub Blaise’s face in his loss, he’d had his victory party and that was enough for him. He didn’t need to talk about it endlessly or to relive the entire game, he was just happy to know that he had won and now he was back with what was important, his lovers and his children.

The next morning Harry dragged himself out of bed to get ready for lessons, he hated that the weekend had gone so quickly and that he was now back in lessons for another five days. He calmed himself, two more weeks and the exams would start, it would be over soon and he’d never have to do it ever again.

He scoffed his breakfast, ignoring Draco’s horrified look, just so that he’d have time to play with his children for half an hour at least before he had to rush around getting ready.

He built a tower of blocks with Braiden, helped Regan figure out the shape sorter puzzle that had once been Braiden’s favourite toy, clapped at Calix as he bashed a little toy truck about laughing, stopped Tegan from putting a corner of a cushion in her mouth and bounced Farren on his knee. All the while Leolin slept happily on his beanbag.

The morning was alive with the sounds of baby screeches, laughter and cooing, the sounds of flashy, musical toys and Harry loved it. He laughed right along with his children and joined in their games where he could, grinning over his shoulder now and then at one of the others when they laughed at something particularly funny that a baby had done.

“They’re growing up so fast, it’s almost unreal.” Max shook his head as he carefully stepped around toys and babies alike, the ease of such an action proving how often he had had to do it.

“I know, Braiden’s almost a full year old. Just three more months and we’ll be having our very first birthday party for our child. It doesn’t seem like a year.”

“I know what you mean.” Max nodded.

“It’s strange that he’s almost a year old.” Blaise said softly. “It doesn’t feel like he should be that old. The time has rushed past and it’s like we’ve completely missed it.”

“We haven’t.” Nasta assured. “It’s seemed so fast because we’ve got very full schedules and no time to actually step back and breathe for a while, to just look around and see what’s in front of us, that makes it seem like the time has gone all the quicker. It’ll be better once we’re out of this school.”

Harry sighed. “It’ll be Christmas again soon, then the quintuplets first birthday. How do we handle five one year olds, on their birthday, all together?"

“Throw in a year and four month old and we have a disaster waiting to happen.” Draco groaned.

“Plus any more children we could have by Christmas.” Harry’s eyes widened and he pressed a hand self-consciously to his belly, which was still slightly rounded, but was steadily firming up and slimming down.

“It’s going to be worse at their fifth birthday party. Five, five year olds all running around, smearing cake everywhere, shouting, screaming…it’s going to be a nightmare.”

“Please stop speaking.” Harry begged. “Let’s take it one birthday at a time. I can’t think about my little babies being five years old, not yet.”

The welcome distraction came in the form of three owls bearing letters. Nasta collected them, shooed the owls away to the Owlery and snorted at the one letter, throwing it directly into the fire.

“Faerie court?” Harry asked.

Nasta just grunted in affirmation as he handed a letter to Max, who tore it open.

Max handed the grainy photo around and Harry grinned at the little white mound that made up a baby.

“Caesar says that Amelle told him to write ‘I’m still holding out for a girl’ for you, Harry.” Max informed, his eyes tracking the letter until the end, where he folded it up and put in on the counter, Harry tucked the scan photo into a frame on the mantel piece. He made a mental note to dig out his photo album later, after lessons, to put it in safe.

“This letter’s for you, Harry.” Nasta said, handing the last letter to him, after checking it extensively with his wand first, making sure there were no hidden curses or potions inside.
Harry opened it and checked the name at the bottom, but he needn’t have bothered as the first line ‘Dear Harry cub’ would have clued him in to who it was instead. He smiled.

“It’s from Remus. I haven’t heard from him in ages, it has to have been at least five months, not since the quintuplets were born, I’ve just been so busy, I hope he’s okay.” Harry frowned at the thought that Remus might be hurt or ill.

“I’m sure he’s fine and has just been busy as well, Dumbledore would have said something if Remus was hurt or unwell.” Nasta said, doing that thing he did where it made you think he’d read your mind.

Harry nodded, his smile coming back, which slipped from his face the further into the letter he read. He was shocked at the contents of the letter and by the end, he didn’t know if he should be livid angry or upset and crying.

He threw the letter at Nasta, who caught it automatically on a reflex and stared at him in confusion.

“Tell me what he means!” He demanded of Nasta, who blinked at his demand and his behaviour towards one of his only remaining family members. Harry’s shock was fading away to settle into anger. Anger had always come easily to him, ever since his fifth year.

“Dear Harry cub, it’s been a long time since we last spoke, too long, and for that I’m sorry, but things here have been pretty hectic. Nymphadora and I have moved into a house together, out in the quiet countryside. It’s beautiful, Harry; I’ll show you around when you have time for a visit.

This may come as a bit of a shock to you, but Dora and I got married in February, it was a quiet affair, not many guests, just Dora’s family and a few others, I knew you were swamped and busy with your school work and your family, so I didn’t invite you, I hope you’re alright with that. Dora and I are planning to renew our vows in a year next summer, hopefully by then you will be able to come.

I’ve been so happy these last few months, Harry, I’m glad I gave Dora a chance, she’s really brought out the best in me and I couldn’t be happier to have her with me now. I’ve gotten a small, part time job in the town, they’re all Muggles so they shouldn’t look too deeply into why I take every full moon off from work, if they do notice a pattern, I can always claim I’m wiccan, I’m wearing a pentagram just as a precaution as I need this job, it’s not much, but we need everything we can get now.

Which brings me to my last point; Dora and I rushed the wedding mostly because she fell accidentally pregnant over the summer, August 20th, and gave birth to a beautiful baby boy last month, on the 18th, who we named Teddy, after Dora’s Father. I’m so proud to be a Father; I really am, even though I worry so much for Teddy and Dora being landed with a werewolf as a family member. He’s doing great and I was hoping that you’d be his Godfather, I can’t think of anyone else I’d rather ask than you, I hope this summer you’ll be able to come and see him, all the best, Remus.”

There was silence from all of them as Nasta finished reading the letter out loud; the noise and shrieks from the children fell into the background as Harry felt a tight squeeze in his throat and the corners of his eyes burned. He staved the tears of betrayal off viciously.

“What does he mean?” He asked again, biting out the words, hoping that someone made more sense of the letter than he had.

“I…how could he have gone off, gotten married and had a child without telling you?” Blaise asked softly. “He didn’t tell you did he?”

Harry shook his head, his body clenching to keep control of himself.

“This is the first that I’m hearing about it. I knew he liked Tonks, I knew she liked him, the last I heard they’d started a tentative relationship and Remus had promised to invite me to the wedding, though he said it would be a long way off! Now the next I hear they’ve gone and gotten married quickly, without even telling me let alone inviting me or giving me a chance to accept or decline the invitation for myself and they’ve had a baby!” Harry’s voice shook under the strain of his anger and the light headedness he felt at this sudden news.

“This…we don’t need this right now.” Draco bit out sharply.

“He does see me as family doesn’t he?” Harry asked softly, unsurely. “I mean, he’s the only one I have left, I know we’re not related by blood or any official titles, but I saw him as family and I thought he did too. You don’t go and get married and not tell your family because you thought they were busy, you don’t get someone pregnant and not tell your family! You don’t have a baby and not tell your family!” Harry lost the battle with his body and the first hot, scalding tears washed over his cheeks. He swiped them away roughly and angrily and backed away from Max who tried to hug him. “Don’t. If you hug me now I’m not going to be able to leave this room, we have class in twenty minutes.”

“You’re not going.” Nasta told him firmly. “You’re staying here with me, you’ve had a huge shock and I’ll tell Dumbledore myself why.”

Harry looked up at that. “Dumbledore. Remus tells him everything, I wonder if he knew. I won’t be able to handle it if he knew and he didn’t tell me either.”

Harry quivered and Nasta pulled him into a hug, even as Harry tried to fight him off.

“You’re in shock, Harry.” Nasta told him, holding him tighter. “Just breathe and try to calm down.”

“Calm down? How the hell can I do that, Nasta?! He didn’t tell me he was getting married, he didn’t tell me he was expecting a baby and now he tells me, via a letter, that he’s married with a two week old son and he just expects me to be okay about everything!”

“I know it’s difficult, love, but try. Please.”

Harry sucked in deep, ragged breaths and tried to calm his weak, rapid heartbeat. He swallowed and tried to think past the shock, tried to understand, but he couldn’t. He just felt a complete sense of betrayal by one he loved so much and it sent him quivering again.

Nasta held him tighter and rubbed his back and arms to warm him up after a touch to his skin revealed that it was cold and clammy.

Max waved a muted, greyish-white potion in front of him and coaxed him into drinking the mild calming draught, he needed it and as his body stopped quivering and started warming up again, he realised exactly how much this had affected him and how badly.

“I just don’t understand, how could he have done this to me? He knows I hate secrets and surprises, how can he just spring this on me in a letter?” Harry said, the potion forcing calm over him, when he knew he was angry inside. It was a very strange feeling.

“It’ll be alright, you’ve had a bad shock, but once it settles, we’ll ask him exactly why he thought this would be a good idea, why he believed that keeping this from you would be a good idea, I thought he had a modicum of intelligence, but it seems to me that he doesn’t.”

“He was probably just excited.” Max sighed, then gulped as several glares were sent his way and he backtracked quickly. “Not that that’s any excuse, of course not, he should have told you, he should have, it was wrong of him to do this and I won’t condone it.”

“Draco, Blaise, you need to go to lessons or you’ll be late, don’t worry about chasing down Harry’s Professors, I’ll sort that out.” Nasta said softly, brushing Harry’s hair gently. “Harry, would you like to go back to bed?”
Harry shook his head. “I want to ask him what he was thinking! You don’t keep this from family! Maybe he really doesn’t see me as family anymore, now that he’s got Tonks and his baby he doesn’t need me to be his family. He’s got a proper one of his own now.”

“I’m sure that’s not true, love. We’ll get to the bottom of this; just put it from your mind.” Nasta winced as soon as he said it.

Harry glared at him, as Nasta knew that he would.

“How am I supposed to put this out of my mind? He’s married with a child! Just five months I haven’t seen him, she was pregnant when they were at the house when I had the quintuplets.”

“They might not have known then.” Max tried weakly.

“She would have been four months pregnant! What sort of person doesn’t know they’re four months pregnant?!” Harry demanded.

Draco pulled him into a hug and kissed him.

“We’ll sort it out, don’t worry about a thing, we have to go to lessons, but we’ll be back for lunch.” He assured him.

Harry sighed. “Thank you, Draco. I love you.”

Draco kissed him softly and lingeringly before Blaise took over; letting Harry get one gasp of air, before kissing it right back out of him. Harry couldn’t help but smile at that, which is what they had wanted.

“Thank you. I love you both. Be careful and don’t stress over the exams, you’ll be fine, me on the other hand, have no chance, I’ve missed so many lessons this school year.”

“You’ll be just fine. You are intelligent so stop putting yourself down, just calm down, get some more sleep and let Nasta sort this; it’s what he’s our top dominant for.”

Harry managed a small smile as Max muscled and man handled him onto the settee. Forcing a cup of honey tea into his hands and smoothing a blanket over his lap.

“We can’t take any chances with shock, even psychological shock can cause complications, even though it’s rare, I won’t risk it. So we’ll warm you up, keep you calm and wait on you hand and foot.”

“I like the sound of that.” Harry grinned easily.

“You just want a bunch of gorgeous man slaves to do your bidding.”

“That too.” Harry grinned. “If you could go out and find me some gorgeous man slaves, that would be brilliant.”

“Oi, cheeky.” Max mock scowled. “You’re lucky you’re so adorable or I’d have to throw you over my knees and spank that cute bottom of yours.”

Harry rolled his eyes. “I’m not cute, no part of me is cute, stop saying it is, I’m a grown man damn it.”

Max just grinned at him and Nasta settled beside him, holding him wrapped in his blanket.

“I’m alright, the potion is working perfectly. I’m very calm.” Harry explained.

“We will sort this out, love. I promise.”

“Why is our family so dysfunctional?” He asked. “Everyone seems to be working towards completely destroying us.”

“They’ll never succeed.”
“It’s our own family trying to destroy everything! Think about it, Max, your Mother, now Remus, the dominants at the meeting, hell the submissives at the meeting tried to get you away from us.”

“They’d never succeed.” Max replied firmly.

“That’s not the point; it’s that they’d do it in the first place. She tried to snatch our child! How can I ever let them run free in the meetings if every submissive who wants you is going to try and hurt them or take them?!” Harry demanded. “They don’t respect us, they won’t stop because they don’t want to and threats alone aren’t enough.”

“Are you regretting not making an example of Rebecca Silvermoss and killing her to warn off everyone else?” Nasta asked him softly.

“I think I am.” Harry said sadly. “That’s a terrible thing to say about someone, wishing them dead, wishing that you had killed them just to make a point, but it would have worked. Just like when Blaise killed that dominant who watched us having sex made a point to the other dominants. Words don’t do anything with Drackens, actions make them think twice. No one would have dared touch our children again if I’d killed her when she almost snatched Braiden.”

“Don’t worry, love, they’ll all know soon enough.”

“What do you have planned?” Harry asked Nasta curiously, his eyebrows lowering.

“I don’t like surprises.” Harry pouted.

“You’ll like this one.” Max assured him.

“You’re in on this too?” Harry asked.

Max nodded with a grin. “I found out accidentally when I came home earlier than expected and caught Nasta in the act, I’ve been in on it since then. Blaise and Draco don’t know about it either, it’s a surprise for them too.”

Harry narrowed his eyes in suspicion. “Just what are you planning?”

“You’ll have to wait and see, but you will like it.”

“How can you be so sure?”

“We just can, love, I promise and everyone in the wizarding world will then know we’re together.”

“It’s already been in the papers and some Drackens still don’t know.”

“It’s only been in the British papers, love, not all Drackens that go to that meeting are British or live in Britain. You saw Demetrius there, he’s Greek and he lives in Greece, he wouldn’t have read any of that shit in the papers. Steffan is Scandinavian; he was born in Norway and now lives on the border between Norway and Sweden with his family, he wouldn’t have read anything in the papers about you or us, so not everyone will know, but after this, they will.”

“I don’t think I like the sound of that.”

“You will, you won’t have to wait too long either. We’re almost done.” Nasta assured him.

Harry rolled his eyes. “I hate secrets and surprises, can’t you just tell me? We can all surprise Draco and Blaise then.”

“No. It’s your surprise.” Nasta said stubbornly. “Now drink some tea and we’ll see about sorting this out with Remus.”

“I’ll sort things out with my Mother too. I’m so angry with her, but I didn’t realise how much it was destroying the family. I’ve never seen my Dad Richard have an episode as bad as he did the day before yesterday at the meeting, if it really is stress and strain doing that, then I’ll do all I can to help him, even if it means talking to my Mother when I don’t want to.” Max said, before adding quickly and sternly. “But the kids aren’t going near her. Not yet, she hasn’t got that right.”
“I can’t believe she refused to see the mind Healer.”

“I’ll get on that too, she loves all of us. I’ll owl Caesar and get the girls onto her. She can’t ignore us, even if she thinks she can ignore my Dads’. If she’d just agree to get help, then I’m sure I’d stop being so angry with her, but I can’t let it go, I can’t have my Mother treat my mate like that! I won’t stand for it.”

Harry pulled him into a kiss. “Thank you, Max. It means a lot to me that it’s me that you stand up for, especially against your Mother. I don’t like her attitude, but I never wanted to break up your family, but it does feel good to have you with me and not just ignoring the issue.”

“I wouldn’t have ignored it, even if he had.” Nasta insisted.

Max smiled. “It’s her doing all the breaking up, Harry. It’s not us, it’s not you, it’s her. I never would have ignored this behaviour, not from anyone, especially not one of my own family members, not towards you, not towards our children, not towards the other mates. No way. I won’t stand for it.”

Harry smiled and cuddled into Max. He wanted all of this gone and sorted out. He was calm now, he could think. He’d ask Remus exactly what he was thinking by not telling him about the wedding and the baby, okay so he was busy, but Remus was family and he found it easy to keep up with Amelle and her pregnancy along with Eleonora’s progress, how difficult would it have been to keep up with Tonks’ pregnancy and Remus’s new son, Teddy?

He just wished Remus that had bothered to tell him, he felt so betrayed and hurt that he had been sending every scan photo he could to Remus and to Molly and his mates’ families and that he had kept up with them all, only to find out that Remus had not only hidden a wedding, but a pregnancy and a baby too. It hurt and Harry clutched his mug of honey tea tightly, letting his mates look after their children, letting them look after him as he sat there and stewed over the hurt he felt from Remus.

Chapter End Notes

A/N: This chapter is for the one year anniversary of this fic being ripped down from Fanfiction, exactly one year ago today. Those who were with me before it was torn down would remember clearly what I’m talking about, those who were on Facebook will remember my distress and upset from that time, those who have recently found this fic or joined under a year ago, you will not remember this horrible time, but fanfiction could have destroyed everything by tearing down this fic and I could have stopped writing this amazing story that I love so much, I’m glad I got over it and I’m so happy to see my old readers back and new ones who have joined since and I’m glad I got over the hurt to re-post this fic back up on this site, I would have regretted it if I hadn’t, so thank you to all my Facebookers who kept my head up and got me to start writing again and posting the story back onto Fanfiction.

For the Facebookers who say this excerpt on my page;

‘Draco gasped and bent double as the woman caught his stomach with her claws, he choked back a scream and twitched. She had used her venom, he needed Nasta. He stumbled back away from her as she tried for his face, before she suddenly dived to the floor, it confused him and before he could so much as draw in a breath, she had sliced the front of his trousers and the blinding agony of it forced him to vomit, his eyes rolling into his head. A roar had him looking up to see Blaise and for the first time he was relieved to see his best friend, standing over him protectively.

Draco swallowed his pride and let out a distress call for Nasta. They needed help; this woman was insane, he never would have believed it of one of the people he trusted so much. He felt sick and the agony running through his body had him convulsing. He gripped himself through his trousers, only to find shredded skin and lumps attached to strings of flesh and the shock of it sent him convulsing again, he knew what he was touching, but he didn’t want to believe it, his mind didn’t want to make sense of it, he couldn’t…this wasn’t how it was supposed to be, this wasn’t supposed to happen. His breath shuddered out, he felt cold and listless, he tried to breathe, but it was painful and his one hand pressed against his lower chest, just above his stomach, where another wound was. He wondered idly if this was it, if he was going to die from this and the thought caused him such distress he let out another call, he’d never had to use it before today, never knew how it would work or what it would sound like or how he would manage to get the call out, but now he did know, he knew that it just came when he was feeling such distress, it was almost an automatic reaction and he wished he’d never had to use it.

Blaise went flying over him, feet catching on his body and Draco saw the gouge in his chest, almost identical to his own, if she went for Blaise’s genitals as well, she was trying to do the same to all of them and he had played into her trap by calling Nasta here. He felt sick, so sick.

“Draco, Blaise?!”

Draco knew that voice, Nasta had arrived. The snarling he heard clued him into Nasta’s rage and knowing that Nasta loved him and Blaise enough to be so angry and upset about this warmed some of the chill of the shock away. What would he tell Harry? How could he tell Harry that he was now ruined?

A head went rolling past him and Draco startled, trying to writhe away, but the pain was too great, he thought for a moment that it was Nasta’s head, fully believed that the insane woman had killed him outright, but the head that rested a little away from him was female, was the head of his attacker and Blaise’s attacker, and the hands that suddenly touched him were Nasta’s. A bloody arm was shoved under him and he sucked deeply, aware that Nasta had dragged Blaise over and he was feeding him blood from his other arm. They were both going to survive, he was going to live, but at what cost, he thought as his hand pressed tighter to his ruined genitals.’
HAPPY BELATED APRIL FOOLS! Yes, it wasn’t real; I was just teasing you to make a point. Lay off on the Draco baby issue or I WILL make this excerpt a reality. I hope this has let you see exactly how sick of the issue I am. To those who have never pestered me or demanded anything of me, thank you and I’m sorry for this evil joke. I hope you can all forgive me for it.

All the best lovelies, I hope you have enjoyed this anniversary chapter,

StarLight Massacre. X
Chapter Seventy-Three – Calming Down and Carrying On

Nasta wouldn’t let him floo over to Grimmauld Place in search of Remus, he pointed out that Remus had told them that he had moved into a house in the countryside with Tonks and hadn’t said where it was located.

That put an even bigger damper on Harry’s already low spirits. For the first time taking care of his children seemed more like a chore than anything else with his mind so far away and he hated feeling that way, so he removed himself from them as well, nursing his hurt in the lower half of their bedroom.

His head was a mess, his heart was worse and reasons and explanations raced each other around his brain, why had Remus done this to him? He knew he should have written to Remus more as well, but surely a marriage, a pregnancy and then the birth of a baby was more interesting than the height of teenage schooling, the listed amount of homework he had to do or him going on and on in pages about the amount of stress he was feeling. He just didn’t understand why he hadn’t been told.

Growling softly to himself he tried to keep his Dracken under control, which wanted the hurt to intensify, wanted him so hurt that he turned irrational so it could take over and eliminate the threat. He didn’t want that to happen no matter how hurt or angry he became with Remus.

“Harry, are you alright, love?” Max asked, creeping around him like he’d attack him if he approached too suddenly.

Harry could only sigh. “I’m fine, Max; I just can’t understand it and I don’t think I will until I hear his reasons for doing this to me. How could he just keep this from me and then spring it on me all at once? What was he expecting me to do?”

“Nasta’s written him back, he should be getting the owl in a few days, depending on where he lives now, we’ll get to the bottom of this, love, I promise.”

“I hope so, I’ve really missed him. Everything’s been so hectic, especially with the exams coming up and the amount of homework we have, it’s not like I excluded him, Max. I haven’t had time to breathe let alone owl anyone about nonsensical things. Right after I last saw him I had more than enough on my hands with Braiden and newborn quins, I was terrified for Leolin and his wings, terrified he’d get an infection, I was barely sleeping, I don’t think any of us were for those first two months and now with the exams are coming up…”

“It’s alright, love, you’re not to blame, so stop trying to justify yourself, you don’t need too, not to us and you have to stop trying to blame this on yourself, it is not your fault.”

“But why did he keep this from me? Doesn’t he trust me?”

Max sighed. “Only he can answer that, Harry, all anyone else can do is speculate about it.”

“I know, I just don’t understand.”

“Why don’t you go and talk to Dumbledore?” Max suggested lightly.

Harry nodded with a sigh and kissed Max gently. “I think I will, you’ll be here when I get back though, won’t you?”

Max nodded with a smile. “Of course. I’m not going anywhere.”

Harry nodded at that and trekked out into the living room. Picking up the letter and a few other things on his way out.

“I’m going to go and see Dumbledore a minute, Nas, I won’t be long.”
“Don’t work yourself up. We’re going to sort this for you.”

Harry nodded and went for the door, feeling torn as Braiden called out for him as he tried to leave. He would usually have just taken Braiden with him, but he was going to have a pretty upsetting conversation and he didn’t want to shout or upset Braiden at all, so he kissed him goodbye and carried on to the Headmaster’s office without him.

After guessing the right password, Harry climbed the winding staircase, too jittery and impatient to wait for it to take him to the top and he knocked on the solid wooden door.

“Come in.” Was the soft, gentle reply.

Harry entered and smiled at one of his most favourite people.

“Harry dear boy, how have you been? What brings you to my humble abode?”

Harry couldn’t help but chuckle, no matter how weakly.

“I just… I don’t know how to start, Sir.”

“Well, why don’t you sit down and tell me what this is about first and we’ll go from there.”

Harry did as he was bid and he fell into his nervous habit of running his hand through his short, messy hair, making it even messier.

Albus immediately looked concerned. “Is he alright? I haven’t heard that he is unwell.”

“Oh, he’s fine as far as I know.”
“Then you wish to see him? You have taken a lot of school time off this year, Harry, I understand, of course, but can it not wait until the weekend? I’m sure you understand that your education is important. I cannot condone another day off of lessons, though I’m sure you have a good reason for missing your lessons today.”

Harry was suitably shamed, he hadn’t wanted to miss lessons today, but Nasta had insisted.

“‘It’s not that I want to see him, Sir, I do, but that’s not it. Did you know that he was married?’”

Dumbledore blinked pale blue eyes and looked suitably shocked.

“No, no I did not. I knew he had moved out of Grimmauld Place and into a home with Nymphadora; he sent me a short letter explaining where he would be. When did this happen?”

February. He proposed in January and they rushed the wedding in time for the following month. I didn’t get an invite.”

“Neither did I. I had no knowledge of this, Harry, is this what has upset you so much?”

“Not really. Him moving into a house with Tonks and marrying her, I could have forgiven that, but she got pregnant in August and they now have a two week old son that they’ve named Teddy. They’ve named me his Godfather.”

Harry handed the letter over to the Headmaster and he could see the fury on Dumbledore’s face as he read the letter and he had to swallow against it to keep himself in his seat.

“He has also neglected to mention this to me.”

“I…I know he’s entitled to his own life and maybe I should have gotten in touch with him first, but he’s moved house, gotten married and had a baby since I last saw him after the quintuplets were born, that was just five months ago, only twenty weeks, she was pregnant when he came to see me at Christmas, pregnant when he came to see the quintuplets after they were born and out of the hospital. I just don’t understand why he didn’t tell me before everything happened, even if I couldn’t have gone to the wedding I would have at least congratulated them.”
“I will have words with him and find out what is going on, everything does seem to have moved very quickly.”

“I wanted to go and see what was happening, but he didn’t say where he’d moved too, Nasta’s owled him back, but we don’t know how long a reply will take.”

Dumbledore nodded in understanding. “I can understand how this would have affected you, Harry and at such a stressful time in your life, you may have the rest of today off, but tomorrow I expect you to be back in lessons.”

“I wanted to go in today, Sir, I honestly did, but Nasta wouldn’t let me. He’s too overprotective sometimes.”

Dumbledore nodded once again. “Was this all you wanted to see me about?”

Harry smiled. “The bad stuff yes, but Calix is babbling more than ever, he’s started babbling ‘mama’ a lot more too, my heart swells every time I hear it.” He handed over the photos of the children he had taken for the man. “Draco’s Mother wanted a photo of them all dressed up formally so she could show them off to her friends. So we dressed them up properly, it took most of the day to do, but we got there in the end, we’re giving a copy of them to all family members.”

“Thank you, Harry, these are lovely.”

Harry left feeling happier and like a weight had gone from his chest. He arrived back to his rooms and dived into his family, happily taking the weight off of Nasta so he could do some of his paperwork, he only had a little bit left, which probably meant he’d get an owl sooner rather than later with a bunch more paperwork for him to do.

Harry kissed him hard. He really did appreciate that Nasta gave up his love of actually handling the dragons for paperwork, just to ease their childcare stresses. It wouldn’t be for much longer anyway. As soon as school was over and they had graduated and had left, Max and Nasta could go back to the jobs that they loved so very much.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Harry was back on edge a few days later and Remus remained silent, Nasta reminded him that if the owl took a few days to get to Remus, it would take a few days to get back too, but Harry wondered if Remus would answer him at all or if he would be too busy, he remembered having a newborn
Braiden and even with five of them looking after him it was hard to find free time. The first child was always the worst as they had all questioned absolutely everything they did in handling and caring for him.

Harry shoved the bad feelings away and took up his mantel as lover and Mother, he couldn’t keep doing this, his children and mates had to come first and everything and everyone else had to come second to them. His children didn’t stop needing milk because he was upset and his lovers didn’t stop needing his support just because he was having a bad day. He had to just work through it and keep working through it until it was over or just gone.

Richard had sent him a letter personally about meeting up over the weekend to talk about his past for the trial, which was inching ever closer, and though he knew it had to be done, he just didn’t want to do it.

He sighed and he reminded himself to take those photos out from where he’d buried them long ago in the bottom of his trunk. He was not going to be happy to look them over again, after his neighbour had died he’d sworn to himself that he’d never look at them ever again. He’d never expected for any of this to be dragged up or for the Dursleys to face a court over what they’d done to him, not after the neighbour who had taken half of the photos had died. Those photos were going to really help Richard though and anything that helped Richard and stopped him from being so stressed and causing another episode like the one at the Dracken meeting could only be a good thing.

He dutifully made a reminder of the meeting with Richard on the calendar though, the one that Draco had bought so they had some semblance of order in their lives. He groaned as he caught sight of Draco’s neat handwriting on the square for the coming Saturday, which reminded him that they had to get the kids vaccinated for Dragon Pox.

Harry scrubbed his face and went to the bedroom and got an armful of washing, dumping them in the sink filled with hot water and washing powder as Blaise played with the kids that were awake.

He scrubbed out his frustrations and wrung out the sleepsuits, bodysuits, stained bibs, socks and blankets before hanging them to dry over the grate protecting the kids from the fire.

“Is the washing all done?” Nasta asked him, stepping around a mobile Braiden with an armful of toys to dump into a cardboard box he had pulled out for their toys, despite them having a toy box in the bedroom, which was actually full now that he thought about it.

“Yeah, it just has to dry; do you need a hand with the toys?”

“I think I’ve got it.” Nasta answered, letting the toys tumble into the box.

“Max, do you need a hand with dinner or with the potion?”

“Don’t let him near any potions!” Blaise burst out. “We have babies in the room and I actually want to live.”
Harry turned and glared at him even as Max laughed.

“Nah, I’m good, go and relax for a bit.” Max answered, stirring the cauldron on the top of the oven.

Harry went into the bedroom and found Draco in the bed. He had a headache and they had found out the hard way that they were out of headache relievers, so Max was quickly making more, all the while Draco suffered.

“How are you?” He asked barely above a whisper as he checked on Leolin in the bassinet. He was sleeping peacefully.

“My head feels like it’s being repeatedly hit with a Beater’s bat.” Draco moaned.

“This will teach us to check on our stocks of potions before we desperately need them.” Harry moved onto the bed and cuddled in to him, stroking his head and his sweaty blond hair.

Draco groaned pathetically.

“It’ll be alright, Max is almost done.” Harry soothed him gently, holding his broad shoulders tighter.

“Tell him to hurry up.”

“You know better than I do that potions can’t be rushed, if anything goes wrong he could cause harm to you or poison you or it’ll go arse up and he’ll have to start all over again.”

“I know, but this is the worst headache I’ve ever had and I don’t have any potions to help me.”

Harry shushed him and held him as his hand massaged his left temple; the right side of Draco’s head was buried in his chest.

“It’s going to be fine, very soon your headache will be gone and you’ll be back to your normal self.”
“Are the others laughing at me?” He asked insecurely.

“Are they...of course they’re not!” Harry said as quietly as he could while still bringing across his surprise and horror that he could ask such a thing without knowing the answer already. “Draco, we love you, why would any of us laugh about you being in pain? Blaise is playing with the kids, trying to keep them busy, Nasta is trying to clean up the floor space a bit and Max is making a potion for you while also making dinner. None of us are laughing because you’re in pain.”

Draco nodded and something in his shoulders and upper back relaxed and Harry shook his head, kissing Draco’s head.

“Silly man, of course none of us are laughing behind your back, I’m very upset that you’re in pain and hurting. I love you and they do too. No more doubting, us or yourself. None of us want to see you in pain.”

Draco squeezed him tightly for a moment, before pulling him in more securely and they both settled down waiting for the potion. They fell asleep quickly, only for an hour though before Max woke them up with the much needed potion.

Draco necked it back as soon as he was partially upright and it took a minute before his entire body melted in relief.

“Oh that feels so much better.” He said softly, falling back onto the bed.

“Really I would have wanted you to eat something first, but given the situation I think it’ll be alright as long as you eat soon, that said, dinner’s up in five.” Max grinned.

Draco nodded and got out of the bed. Harry stretched and got a lecherous grin from Max before he crawled onto the bed and nipped at his neck with his teeth.

Harry chuckled. “Max! Stop it, I have to get up.”

“No, I’m going to keep you here and completely ravish you and keep you barefoot and pregnant for the rest of our lives.”
Harry laughed at him and shook his head. “Don’t you dare, I don’t want to be barefoot and pregnant all the time, just some of the time.”

“I can compromise to that as long as all the babies are mine! Mwhaha.”

Harry laughed helplessly at Max’s fake evil laugh and pushed him off.

“You’re so funny, Max. I love you.”

“I know, I’m amazing, now let’s go eat before dinner burns and I have to start all over again.” Max grinned, scooping him up and carrying him down the stairs as Harry held on for dear life.

“Fuck, please don’t drop me.”

“I’m not going to drop you.” Max told him seriously. “I wouldn’t dream of dropping you and my Dracken doesn’t like the idea either.”

“Good.”

Max carried him into the living room and put him down onto Draco’s lap before going to the kitchenette to serve dinner. Harry snuggled on Draco’s lap, kissing the corner of his mouth.

“I see you’re feeling better.” Blaise came and sat next to them, Calix on his lap.

“Good.”

Draco nodded. “That was a terrible headache.”

“It looked like it; you were really pale, I’m glad you’re feeling better.” Blaise kissed Draco and Harry smiled at them both.

“Mama.” Calix called out and Harry fell on him, kissing his cheeks and cuddling him.
“My little boy is growing up!” He said proudly to the others. “He knows me!”

Blaise snorted. “Of course he knows you. They all do and they all prefer you to the rest of us.”

“Oh that’s not true.” Harry huffed. “They just know that I carried them for however many months, they have known me for longer.”

Draco chuckled and kissed his neck, flicking his tongue out to taste him.

“Come on lovebirds, foods up and those kids should be down for the night already, Blaise you’re slacking mate.”

“Five out of six isn’t bad!” Blaise called back. “And I’ll have you know that it’s your son who’s refusing to go down to sleep. He wants his Mummy.”

“Like Father like son, I want his Mummy as well.” Max said wiggling his eyebrows suggestively.

Harry rolled his eyes and sighed. “Come on, Calix, let’s get you to bed, love, you’ll be grumpy tomorrow otherwise.”

Harry put him in the empty travel cot, Harry loved them as they just popped up with next to no assembling required and they could be folded down just as easily and now only Leolin could use the bassinets, they needed a lot of handy travel cots.

Harry sat between Blaise and Nasta and ate his dinner happily, letting the conversation float over his head, he didn’t feel the need to contribute, Draco and Max were talking potions, Nasta was reading through Blaise’s Transfiguration essay and was talking through it with Blaise.

Harry finished first and he set the kettle to boiling for tea, but was muscled away quickly by Max before he could start doing the dirty dishes.

“That’s my job.” The large man told him, pushing him gently into the living room.

Harry rolled his eyes, but he didn’t argue.
“Harry, did you finish your Charms questions?” Nasta asked sternly.

“Yes, Blaise helped me.” Harry said with a smile.

“We did them this afternoon.” Blaise confirmed.

“Do any of you have homework left?”

All three of them replied in the negative. “It’s just revision now, which is optional.”

“If I do anymore revision then my brain is going to fall out of my ear.” Harry scowled.

“Let’s take a night off then.” Nasta suggested with a smile.

“I have an idea for what we can do with a night off.” Max grinned at them from the sink.

“If you want sex, you can happily have my body. I’m so stressed I need some relief.” Harry smiled before anyone else could say anything.

Max stopped and turned around with soapy hands. “Really? You mean it?”

Harry nodded. “I’ve been in the mood for it for the past week, since the meeting really, but with everything that’s going on, it just took over and it got pushed to the side. I’m sorry for that, but I do want sex from all of you.”

“You know I love hearing you say that. It’s my favourite sentence from you, ‘I want sex.’”

“And there’s me thinking it might have been ‘I love you’ or even ‘here is the child that I bore and birthed for you’” Harry teased with a grin.

“That too.” Max chuckled.
“Do the dishes first, I want this place clean for tomorrow and I want the kids fed and in bed before anything, then we can do whatever we want.”

“Yes sir!” Max saluted him and went back to the washing up with gusto.

Harry laughed, but happily mucked in and cleaned their living space up, Draco opted to do the feeds, because he was getting more domesticated, but he wasn’t at the point of offering to do physical labour yet. Not if there were any other options.

It took merely an hour for them to be done and for the feeds to be well under way, Harry went to get their tiny Leolin, who was fast asleep but wouldn’t be for much longer because he needed his bottle, all of the other babies had missed a feed at one point in their lives, but Harry was sure he’d turn maniacal if Leolin missed just one feed. He already drank so little for his age, Faerie blood be damned, if he missed a whole feed Harry just knew that it would upset him and probably panic him as the very thought tightened something in his chest.

“Done!” Max cried out as he straightened the cushions on the settees and stood with his arms out in a spotlessly clean living room.

“You know, I think I should bribe you all to clean with sex more often, this place hasn’t been this clean since we moved back in.” Harry chuckled, letting Blaise pick him up.

Draco, who was concentrating on carefully feeding Leolin, looked up for just a moment as he considered the question.

“Just Leolin and Braiden, the others are all in their cots, Calix doesn’t want to sleep though. He was sat up and awake when I bedded Tegan down.”

Harry sighed. “I hope he’s not sick.”

“He was grizzling a bit, I think he might be cutting his first tooth.” Draco replied.
Blaise put him down when he wiggled and Harry went into the bedroom to see four sleeping children and Calix pouting at him through the bars of his cot.

“What’s the matter, little guy?” He asked, picking him up and cradling him, moving to the rocking chair and sitting in it, pushing off gently with his feet, like he used to when they were very young and were screaming for milk at all hours of the early morning.

“Are you not feeling very well?” He asked softly, laying a hand over Calix’s forehead. “Hmm…well you don’t have a temperature, love, are you just being stubborn? Come here and have a cuddle until you fall asleep then. I’ll look after you.”

Harry closed his eyes and hummed gently, Calix resting on his chest, Harry’s arms wrapped around him securely as he rocked gently back and forth, his fingers playing along Calix’s back and through his hair.

He heard steps coming through the bedroom, but he didn’t stop his humming or rocking and he didn’t open his eyes, he didn’t want to calm Calix down, getting to the point of sleep and then ruin it by breaking the rhythm, so he ignored it, it was likely only Draco or Nasta putting a fed Leolin to bed.

He didn’t know how long he did this for, Calix had long since stopped playing with the hair at the nape of his own neck, his chubby hands going still, his soft laughs, coos and puffs of air against the skin of his upper chest had gone steady and slow and his little body had gone still.

Harry stopped rocking slowly, easing out of it, he stopped his humming and checked on Calix, opening his eyes to see his sweet sleeping face. He breathed in relief and stood up to put him in his own personal pine cot.

He turned to see his four mates sat on the purple settee watching him, he frowned.

“How long have you been there and why are you sat there?”

“Watching you being a good Mother is an amazing turn on.” Max assured him. “Watching you settle him down in maternal bliss makes me hard for you.”

“Everything makes you hard. Watching me sleep makes you hard.” Harry snorted.

“You’re very sexy when you sleep.” Max purred coming to stand against him and pressing the hard length of his muscled body against him.
Harry snorted and trailed his hand down Max’s body.

“Well then, why don’t you wear me out enough for me to sleep and then you can watch me all you like.” Harry smiled; dipping his voice lower and watching Max’s blue eyes go almost navy blue in desire.

“I think I can manage that.” Max said, his own voice gone deeper, picking Harry up and carrying him up the stairs, the others followed, happily and as Harry was dumped onto the bed, Blaise slithered on and covered him before Max could, but the bigger man didn’t care as he just flumped onto Blaise’s back and covered the both of them instead, nipping and biting at Blaise’s neck.

Draco crawled onto the bed and Nasta stripped off his shirt before joining them, Harry grinned at the appearance of Nasta’s belly, it was going soft with the absence of the hard, physical work he did at the reserve, but Harry didn’t care. He sat up, one hand on Blaise’s shoulder, the other hand around Nasta’s back, pulling his belly to his lips so that he could lick and kiss that gorgeous expanse of skin, moving parts into his mouth to suck hard or bite softly at the flesh between his teeth.

Nasta’s hands moved through his hair, tugging on him, moving through to cradle the back of his head before moving further down to tickle his neck before spreading over his shoulders and down his arms. Harry shuddered at the feeling it caused.

“I love it when you do that.” He told Nasta shakily.

“I know.” Nasta replied with that damnable smirk.

Harry chuckled and moved his mouth lower, to Nasta’s waistline and he played his tongue under the rim of it until he broke off with a moan as someone, probably Blaise from the feel of the lips on his shoulder, sucked at his skin.

“Mark me.” He demanded. “Where everyone will be able to see.”

All four of his mates groaned at that and they fell back onto the bed and Harry ended up with two bites on either side of his neck, very high up, very visible. Nasta’s was very high, almost on his jaw, just under his ear, Blaise’s was lower, on the meat of his neck, Draco’s was more on the front of his neck, as Max’s bite took up most of the one side of his neck because he opened his mouth wide to give him a love bite.

“Oh, you had better hope that those last the rest of the week.” Harry moaned.
“Hold on, let me make sure.” Blaise said breathlessly, moving his mouth back over his mark and sucking on it harder, making Harry writhe and wriggle on the bed.

“Oh, that feels so good.” He muttered, holding onto Blaise.

“There.” Blaise was even more breathless, but he looked at his purpling mark happily and proudly.

“I think I’m done for foreplay.” Max groaned, tugging on himself. “I’m about to disgrace myself. It’s been too long.”

“You and Harry had sex last week.” Nasta pointed out.

Harry and Max shared a guilty look. “Actually, Max was feeling left out and hurt by what you did, so we cuddled by the fire and it got too hot, so we got naked. It just looked like we had had sex.” Harry exclaimed.

“So you didn’t…”

“Nope.” Harry said shaking his head. “So be careful with me, I’ve been left out.”

“Me too.” Max added.

“You’re not going to have a cock shoved into you. Or several cocks.”

“Four, thank you, I don’t want to think of seven men taking you.” Draco put in with a scowly face.

Harry chuckled and wrapped his legs around Draco’s hips and rolled his groin into Draco’s.

“Don’t worry; every cock that has ever been inside my body or I’ll ever let inside my body is in this bed. Or under it.”
“Under it?” Draco questioned.

“The toys. They’ve been inside me as well.” Harry couldn’t help squirming as he remembered that and Blaise chuckled darkly at the reminder of that day.

“Toys don’t count.” Max groaned.

“I’ll remind you of that then the next time I play with them. You won’t be invited to join in."

“That’s hardly fair!” Max pouted.

Harry chuckled and rolled his hips again; pressing the length of himself against Draco’s solid six pack. It felt amazing so he did it again; throwing his head back at the sharp, sudden flare of pleasure it gave him when the head of himself caught on a ridge of muscle.

“Oh that’s gorgeous, do it again.” Max said, moving the both of them to press against the other.

Harry laughed breathlessly. “Keep that up and I’m going to disgrace myself and then go and fall asleep.”

“The hell you are.” Max answered, nosing around his neck and throat.

Blaise pulled him back and sucked and nibbled around the back of his neck and Harry moaned softly. They broke off into rough pairs, Blaise and Harry, Nasta with Draco and Max.

Seeing the regal blond between the two larger, more muscled men made Harry grin as he watched them as Blaise licked and sucked all down his neck and shoulders.

When Max started preparing Draco, Blaise’s fingers found Harry and it was then that Harry knew that Blaise was watching the other three too.

When Max moved to two fingers, so did Blaise and Harry moaned a lot louder than Draco did, who merely grunted. Harry shivered and gasped as Blaise’s hand slipped further around his stomach, pulling him flush against his own body and holding him there, holding him on his fingers.

Max sent them a look and that look, as well as the grin that stole over his face, let Harry know that Max knew what Blaise was doing and he quickly removed his two fingers and replaced them with three and Blaise did the same.
Harry’s hips bucked into thin air and his head went back to rest on Blaise’s shoulder, his first mate then went and sucked on his exposed Adam’s apple, which earned him a small, pleasured whimper.

Blaise used his shoulder to send Harry flying onto the mattress of the bed and Harry’s hands snapped out to catch himself just in time, before his face hit the bedspread. He looked to the other three, to find them watching him and Blaise, Draco was still sat up on his knees, so it seemed that he and Blaise were breaking away now as those fingers slipped out of his body and were replaced by something else that made the white heat building in his belly grow into a tight ball that was begging to be released.

“Oh Blaise, I love you!” Harry burst out as Blaise slid inside him fully and completely in just one deep, smooth slide.

Max chuckled deeply at his declaration of love, watching him through dark, lusty blue eyes. Harry sent the same look back at him through dark green eyes, watching him with his mouth partly open.

“I want to shove my cock into that little mouth of yours.” Max told him, even as he stabbed into Draco with three fingers, Nasta holding the blond as he groaned and jumped between them.

Harry didn’t remember much of what Max, Nasta and Draco did together after that as Blaise set a harsh, punishing pace that he could hardly keep up with, it was taking all of his energy and thought process to push himself back on Blaise, his head hanging between his arms, his eyes closed as he moaned and gasped breathily.

“Fuck! FUCK!”

Harry looked up at that, forcing his eyes open to see both Max and Nasta pushing into Draco, who was swearing and cursing through gritted teeth between them.

That was all Harry got to see before a harsh jab to his prostate had him screaming his orgasm, arms giving out on him, his hands left to scrabble to find something to grab onto. His one hand went around a fistful of duvet, his other hand found a large, thick ankle and his nails dug in as hard as he could manage.

He felt Blaise release inside of him almost like a second sensory overload and he moaned as he squirmed at the feeling. He rested and breathed harshly, listening to Draco nearly screaming between Max and Nasta, but he couldn’t lift his head up to watch.

A touch to his hip sometime after Draco had fallen silent had his eyes blinking open and he looked over his shoulder, down his own body, to see bright, dark blue eyes looking back at him, Max was crouched over his body with a predatory grin on his face and Harry could only grin back, rolling over onto his back and spreading himself open for Max, who growled. This was going to be a very, very fun night.
Harry woke up with a groan and rolled his tired and faintly beaten body from the bed, heading to where he heard noise, trailing fingers across the wall to help balance him as his eyes wouldn’t open just yet.

He scooped a child into his arms and carried on to the kitchenette, taking the noise with him which made his head pound in time to his heartbeat, like his lower back, which was also throbbing.

Harry filled the kettle before settled the squirming baby back in his arms more securely as the wriggly one tried to get away.

Harry cracked his bleary eyes open and secured the baby under his one arm so he could set up the bottle to stop the noise; from the weight alone he could tell he had Farren. Of course it was Farren.

“Calm down, love, I can’t make it any faster.” He croaked. He needed tea. Or whiskey. Something.

Harry got the bottle made up, tested it after having used a cooling charm on it first, before shoving it into Farren’s mouth. He couldn’t be bothered to stand, so he went and sat down on the settee instead as he fed his second son.

Last night had gone a long way to alleviating some of the stress that he felt and had been collecting over the last few weeks. Now if only he could get a headache reliever or a mild painkiller for his head and back he’d be absolutely fine and ready to take on another day of school.

Quicker than he would have liked Farren finished guzzling his milk and Harry sat him on the side of his thigh, patting his back firmly, waiting for the wind to come out one way or another. He wasn’t looking forward to today, he just knew it would be a bad day and the upcoming Dragon Pox vaccinations for all the children except Leolin and then the day after that he had the lunch date with Richard were all weighing heavily on him.

It was Thursday, but it felt like the week couldn’t be over quick enough, he just wanted to sleep for a week, but as he held Farren, sitting him on his lap facing him, his chunky legs on either side of his lap as his son babbled and fist his hair in chubby little hands, Harry could only smile at him.

“I love you so much, Farren. You and your brothers and your sister. Please grow up well and strong and kind. Your Daddy Max calls you a bruiser, but every time he does I just picture a skin headed yob with tattoos and piercings everywhere and I don’t want you to turn out that way and I don’t want you in and out of jail either, petty offences or not, so you’re going to be a Mummy’s boy from now on, okay?”

Farren giggled wetly at him, spitting with his tiny tongue and Harry’s smile widened.
“That’s right sweetheart, you’re a Mummy’s boy now.”

“Muma.” Farren cooed softly.

Harry blinked and swallowed, before pride swelled within him and he danced around the room with Farren in happiness. He must have shouted out, because Draco was suddenly there beside him wearing absolutely nothing.

“What is it? What’s wrong?” He asked breathlessly.

“Farren said his first word!” Harry told him proudly, watching with a smirk as Draco’s shoulders deflated as his protective urges drained away.

“Let me guess, he said mama, right?”

“ Nope!”

Draco’s face pulled into a frown. “What did he say then? I’ve got a bet with Blaise and Max that all the children will say mama as their first word.”

“He said muma.”

Draco suddenly grinned and kissed Farren’s soft cheek.

“You didn’t stipulate that it had to be exactly mama did you? Just some form of Mum?”

Draco nodded as he made his way to the kettle and tested it with the bend of his index finger before making tea.

“I take it Nasta didn’t approve of you betting on the kids?”
“No, I don’t.” Said man scowled as he carried a writhing Tegan carefully. She let out a grizzle and then another, before she started wailing and then full outright crying.

Harry sighed and Draco couldn’t fix the bottle quickly enough to save Harry’s skull from splitting open.

“One of you do me a favour; get me a headache reliever please.”

“No, I asked for it for no damn reason, yes I have a headache, Draco!” He snapped.

“Harry.” Nasta growled warningly as he fed Tegan.

Harry blew out an agitated breath. “I’m sorry, I’m just in a lot of pain, my lower back is killing too, but the headache is worse.”

“Do you regret last night?” Draco asked with one perfect blond eyebrow raised as he handed over the headache potion and a cup of honey tea.

Harry got a dopey look on his face as he thought to the previous night.

“No, of course I don’t. It’s just a coincidence that I woke up with a headache and its put me in a bad mood. I’m sorry I snapped.”

“That’s alright. I’ve had worse.”

“You shouldn’t have to put up with it from us though.”

“Hey, I had a headache yesterday, remember, if you feel even half of the pain that I felt yesterday then it can justify some snapping, I could have torn all your noisy heads off one by one yesterday.”
Nasta chuckled as he readjusted Tegan in his arms, their only daughter did not stop moving when she was being fed, she wiggled and shifted and they had to shift and readjust their holds with her.

“Oh! Nas, Farren said his first word! He said muma.” Harry said proudly.

“Bring him here and hold him out for me.” Nasta said with a grin and Harry did as he was asked watching with his own grin as Nasta kissed Farren and told him how proud he was of him. His Dracken cooed in delight within him, Nasta was the perfect top dominant, they had chosen perfectly, Nasta was a perfect Father to all of their children.

Just fifteen minutes later and their rooms were a hive of activity as the rest of the students slept all abed still.

Everyone knew now about Farren’s first word, none more proud than Max, who had stolen Farren from him and replaced him with Regan. Harry wondered what Max was coaching their son about as he spoke to him softly and seriously in the corner, but as he fed Regan, whose little hands cupped the top of the bottle as he was fed, his mind wandered to how amazing his children were.

He blinked and looked around him; he found Nasta and walked over to him, making sure none of the others were around.

“Nas? Is it possible to go onto a heat period early?” He asked seriously.

Nasta blinked in surprise. “No, Harry. Your breeding cycle is established at puberty, just before your inheritance happens, it never changes.”

“A very rare happening, Harry, I assure you. I doubt we could do it again if we tried. Conceptions like that happen very, very rarely and with the weather in this country being so sporadic and often mild, we don’t usually see optimum conception temperatures here. It was a fluke, love. Is there a reason for all of this?”

“I…I’m not sure, but my Dracken is keeping a running commentary inside my head about how we have such amazing children, how you were such a perfect choice of mate and how brilliant a top dominant and Father you are…it’s just strange.”
Nasta grinned at him and Harry pouted. Nasta chuckled and pulled him into a hug.

“It’s nothing to worry about; you’re just feeling reflective upon your life and your choices. Though there is no greater honour than for a submissive Dracken to come to the realisation that they chose their mate perfectly or to be called a perfect Father and top dominant by said submissive. I’m going to be happy all week now.”

Harry laughed and cuddled in closer, taking care not to dislodge Regan’s bottle from his little mouth.

“So it’s nothing to worry about and it doesn’t mean that I’m going onto an early heat.”

“No love, you’re fine and nothing can alter your breeding cycle, it’s something unique to you and no one else. It’s not going to change; it’ll always be two months between heat periods for you.”

Harry nodded. “Maybe it’s why I had such a headache though, with my Dracken harping on in my ear about things I already knew a long time ago.”

Nasta’s smile widened until it went almost from ear to ear, as Harry had known it would, he was kissed breathless before Max called them all for breakfast and their day took them on separate paths. Harry hated that he had to spend so much time away from his lovers and his children five days a week, but Dumbledore was right, he couldn’t afford to miss any more lessons, not so close to the exams, no matter how stressed it made him feel to be separated from them all for so long.

Chapter End Notes

A/N: There’s not a lot to say this time around really. Lycanthrope Factory will be updated next I think, I’m almost done with my new Hobbit fic and that’ll be posted in full when I’m done, I’m thinking 15-20 chapters, I’ll know more when I’m done with it and that’s about it, except for the Remus issue, which a lot of you don’t seem to understand.

Remus was out of the country and unable to be contacted through owls when Harry went through his mate meetings and then fell pregnant, Harry couldn’t have contacted him if he tried. Dumbledore was the one to tell Remus about the pregnancy and the mate situation when he got back into the country, because if you remember, which most of you seem not to, Harry was in his nest when Remus got back into the country. You know, all feral and Dracken, not in his right mind, tried to gut Blaise because he didn’t recognize him? As soon as Harry was able, he filled Remus in about everything and Remus understood that he wasn’t able to contact him.

Remus not telling Harry about the move, the engagement, the wedding, the pregnancy or the birth is not Harry’s fault, he is not overreacting, I mean hell he’d just had Braiden snatched from his arms, he’s stressed, he’s overwhelmed, then he finds that Remus, a man he thought he could trust, has gotten married, has had a baby, without telling him. Of course he’s going to be upset and he’s not overreacting. To those of you who did understand and knew that Harry was nesting when Remus came back into the story line, thank you.

Right, that’s it until the next time; I hope you enjoyed reading lovelies,

Nasta’s smile widened until it went almost from ear to ear, as Harry had known it would, he was kissed breathless before Max called them all for breakfast and their day took them on separate paths. Chapter Seventy-Four – Vaccinations and Heart-to-Heart

Saturday morning came all too quickly and Harry wanted to take a bat or even a bar of iron to every single book and piece of homework that dared to cross his path. He had been given so much homework in the last two days that he was sure he’d never be able to finish it before the end of next year, let alone by graduation when it was in fact due in next week. It was impossible.

Blaise was acting like a man possessed and all of them had learned to avoid him very quickly as he was in one of those moods, but with one mate down, the rest of them shared more childcare and Draco, who was also in a bad mood, lost it very quickly and he and Blaise had a massive argument in their living room, which devolved incredibly fast into a physical fight as they were dominant Drackens. Of course Harry got involved and the result of the fight broke half of their furniture, two of Harry’s fingers and Blaise’s left arm.

Harry was just glad that the kids had been taken outside in the sun for a bit by Max and Nasta to give them time and privacy to revise in peace, not that it worked out that way. This was seriously not what they had had in mind and Nasta had screamed bloody murder at all three of them when he had come home to find the place demolished, though that had soon ended when he had noticed that Blaise was cradling his arm to his chest and Harry was desperately trying not to cry over his obviously broken fingers. The punishments he had been threatening had vanished as he rushed them straight to the hospital wing and into the care of the stern, but kindly matron.

Madam Pomfrey had taken one look at them and had shaken her head in exasperated disapproval.

“You aren’t the first to have a fight this close to the exams; you won’t be the last either.” She had told them as she fussed around them. “It’s the same every year.”
Harry had been healed in a snap, but Blaise’s arm had taken a while longer to fix. Max and Draco had cleaned up the room by the time that Nasta had escorted them back from the hospital wing and no more was said about that morning.

Harry gulped his honey tea down, before making himself another one. It was very, very early and his racing mind wouldn’t let him sleep. He regretted his fight with Draco and Blaise, but he had felt so angry and frustrated that he just hadn’t been able to help jumping in when they had started to fight in front of him.

He looked to his fingers, perfectly fine and mobile again, but he remembered them sticking out oddly, bleeding and bruised, and being unable to move them. He sighed. It had been ridiculous, how could he have resorted to fist fighting like a common brute? With his own mates no less, in their rooms where they raised their tiny children.

He sighed and gulped another cup of tea in mere minutes. He’d need a wee every hour for the next two days if he carried on.

He pulled some homework towards him, even if it was the last thing in the world that he wanted to do after yesterday, but it had to be done. He considered taking a leaf out of Richard’s book and writing anything down just so he wouldn’t get detention for not handing in set homework, but Nasta wouldn’t let him.

He snorted and decided to screw it, he scribbled rubbish that only just made sense and he didn’t care. Richard had had the right idea. At this point of the school year, it was revision that counted, not homework, he didn’t care what Nasta said now, their life had been stripped down to homework, revision, lessons and childcare, the only exceptions had been the sex and the fight they had recently had, the only two blips in a month of a heavy work load of consistent and constant childcare and schoolwork.

They were all frustrated and stressed and there was nothing that any of them could do about it, not until the exams were well and truly over. Blaise and Draco were only getting worse the closer the final exams came and Harry just could not deal with this high stress situation any more, he’d be reduced to tearing out his hair soon, it was already getting hard to keep control of himself. His fingernails itched and ached to release his claws, his gums were inflamed as his fangs tried to come out and he couldn’t keep his back still with the heavy weight of his wings, which moved under his skin constantly, reminding him every moment of the day that they could rip out of his back in a spray of blood at a moment’s notice and there’d be nothing that he could do about it once that happened, he and his family would be exposed, he’d put them all in danger, he’d completely ruin their lives, he needed to get more control of himself.

Finished with one piece of homework, he moved onto the next, speeding through it as he just didn’t care. Nasta could tear it up in front of him for all he cared now. His weekend was completely booked and the next weekend was just before the exams, which started a week Monday, he just didn’t care anymore.

“You’re up early.” Blaise said tiredly, emerging from the bedroom on wobbly, still asleep legs and going to the kitchenette.
Harry nodded. “I couldn’t sleep.”

“Me either.” Blaise sighed as he made a coffee for himself from his secret stash of coffee grounds he hid in an empty food tin, Nasta knew about it, of course he did, but he didn’t let on to Blaise that he knew about it, leaving Blaise to think that he was being sneaky when he really wasn’t. Harry smiled softly to himself, but broke off when Blaise brought him a fresh cup of honey tea over.

Blaise sat next to him and threw an arm over his shoulder and kissed him.

“I’m sorry about yesterday. I love you and I never meant to hurt you, not at all, mio amore. How are your fingers?”

“Fine, how’s your arm?”

“Stiff, but Madam Pomfrey said that it’ll be that way for a few days. Are you actually doing homework?”

“Not properly, I don’t have the time. The kids have their injections today, I’ve got the lunch date with Richard tomorrow, when am I supposed to actually sit down and do it all? I’d rather just put any old shit down and focus on getting as much revision as I can get done at this point.”

Blaise nodded as he got his own homework out and started where he had left off yesterday.

“You be careful.” Harry said with a nudge and a grin. “We don’t want that homework taking over your mind again; you might pin me down and fuck me.”

Blaise chuckled. “You wish that I would.”

“So what if I do?” Harry grinned naughtily.

Blaise snorted and pushed him gently, before pulling him into a passionate kiss with a large hand on the back of his neck, their mouths moving against one another, lips parted and pressed firmly together, their tongues licking and twining at one another’s continuously as Harry shifted and moved to straddle Blaise’s lap, their kiss never breaking for longer than it took to take in a quick breath, their lips still pressed together and their tongues dancing.

“Not interrupting?”

The two of them broke apart huffing and panting to see Nasta cradling Farren in his arms as he moved to boil the kettle and make a bottle for him.

“No, we’re apologising for yesterday and making up.” Harry told him as he calmed himself down.

The older man nodded approvingly and set up the bottle, all the while Farren wailed in his arms.

“Yesterday should never have happened.” Nasta said eventually as he put the bottle teat into Farren’s mouth after shaking it vigorously.

“No, it shouldn’t have. But it did.” Blaise answered. “We can’t change that.”

“I was so angry with the three of you, but when I saw that you were hurt…I was so afraid. Three of my four mates had attacked one another and two of them were hurt. Do you have any idea what that did to me?” Nasta asked in a small, soft voice. “I wanted to punish all three of you, I was so angry I could have, but seeing you injured terrified me and I had to get you help as soon as possible. I was so conflicted between fear and anger. I know we’ve all been under pressure, we’ve all been feeling the strain, but I thought we were better than this. I never would have believed you three capable of attacking one another as soon as my back was turned. I wouldn’t have left yesterday if I’d have had even a hint that this might have happened. You attacked one another!”

Harry bowed his head and bit his lip. He hadn’t thought how it might have looked or felt to Max and Nasta as they came home after a fun afternoon in the shade of a tree with the kids to find their rooms wrecked and three bruised, bleeding young men in the middle of the carnage, two of them with broken bones.

“I’m sorry.” Harry said quietly and sincerely as he slipped onto his own chair once again.

“No, sorry isn’t enough, Harry, you have to promise me that this will never happen again. Never.”
“I promise. I have no idea what came over me. I was just so angry and so frustrated; I wanted everything to just go away.”

“I didn’t even see Harry join in.” Blaise admitted. “It was just me and Draco. He started on me and I just leapt at him, so I take full responsibility for starting the physical fight if you want someone to punish for that.”

“I think you’ve punished yourself enough.” Nasta sighed. “But you have to stop acting like children or animals. I know you’re young and have limited control, but you can’t behave like this when we have children about.”

“Trust me, I know. They didn’t even come to mind.” Harry said. “I think it was only because you had removed them from the rooms that I even considered joining the fight instead of tearing them a new one over actually fighting in the rooms. If the kids had been here, I would have done the same as I did the last time a fight broke out in these rooms I think. Thankfully no travel cots were demolished this time.”

“I’m sorry too.” Blaise said. “It should never have gotten that bad, but I reached breaking point when Draco started on me, I just couldn’t stop myself.”

“I hope it’s all out of your systems now, we’ll be in public later today.”

“We’re not going to start brawling in public!” Blaise hissed, offended at the very suggestion. “No matter what I’m still a Pureblood and I was raised a Pureblood!”

Harry snorted. “Don’t start quoting blood supremacy now, Blaise, I might have to chop your hands off.”

Blaise snorted and pulled him into a hug.

“I never would with you, Bello. I’m officially classed as a creature now anyway, as is Draco; we can hardly slate you for not being Pureblooded when we’re now considered half breeds.”

Draco walked into the living room just in time to hear that last and he huffed, completely affronted. Harry chuckled.
“Don’t worry, love; we’re all the same, all half breeds.” Harry said. Blaise snorted at the look on Draco’s face.

“Call me a half breed again, Potter and see what happens to you.”

Harry grinned. “What are you going to do?” He teased. “Nasta is stood right there.”

Draco sent a glare to said man as he stumbled to the kettle to make tea. Nasta finished feeding Farren and burped him, sitting him on his hip as he came over to the table that Harry and Blaise were sat at.

He sat down himself with Farren on his lap, facing towards the table. Harry was instantly distracted as he leant over the table and started pulling faces and letting Farren hold his fingers as he wiggled them and babbled to him.

Max’s chuckle was the only thing to bring him out of the game, cutting over Farren’s loud, happy giggling.

He had both Calix and Braiden in his arms and Harry smiled at him. Holding his arms out for Braiden as he went to get Calix a bottle. Draco had Braiden’s smooth cereal already in the little bowl and was heating it with his wand carefully and checking it every few seconds to make sure it was warm enough, but not too hot for Braiden’s little mouth.

When it was ready he levitated it over, which made Farren and Braiden screech in laughter and made Harry shake his head as he grabbed the bowl from the air and fed Braiden on his lap, letting Blaise take the spoon now and then to feed their son a mouthful between paragraphs in his essay.

“You are a gorgeous boy.” Blaise cooed to Braiden lovingly. “You are my precious baby boy and I love you.”

Harry chuckled and pushed the spoon into Braiden’s mouth, of course he still didn’t open his mouth wide enough, so most of the smooth goo ended up on his chin, but he laughed as Blaise pulled a face at him, which made Harry smile widely. This is what he wanted mornings to be like, not them all being so stressed that the children had to be taken away from them and they ended up breaking into physical fights at each other’s throats, this is what mornings should be like and he’d strive for it to always be like this in future. After the exams were over that was, all bets were off before they were over and done with.
The hospital was noisy and busy today and Harry hated it as he sat with Max and Nasta in the paediatrics ward of Saint Mungos, the disinfectant smell tickling his nose and throat aggravatingly. Again Draco and Blaise stayed home with Leolin, hoping that the two or so hours extra of almost complete peace to do their homework and revision would keep them in their good moods from that morning. Harry hoped that they didn’t have another fist fight while they were alone again and he wasn’t there to jump in and try to stop them, though he hadn’t done much to stop them and after his fingers had been broken he had jumped right into the fight, furious that he’d had two of his bones broken by his own feuding mates.

People were staring at them and whispering about them, one person had even tried to take a photo of them sat in the waiting room before Max had shouted out, loud enough for everyone to hear him, that they were in a damned hospital and to have some respect for others. The orderlies had rushed the shocked, blinking woman away quickly, chastising her that photography was prohibited in all parts of the hospital. Harry was sat between his mates, Braiden and Farren on his lap, Nasta held Tegan and Regan and Max was pretending to eat a hysterically laughing Calix.

The wait always made him feel nervous and he couldn’t stop his knee from jumping under Braiden, but it just made his two sons giggle at the movement, at least they could be happy and not nervous about what was to come, but he was sure they’d learn soon enough, he had very intelligent children after all.

“It’ll be alright, love.” Nasta assured him.

“I hate seeing them in pain, seeing Braiden after his vaccinations alone was bad, seeing four of them screaming themselves hoarse was worse, now all five of them are going to be at it all afternoon.” Harry said softly, squeezing the two boys on his lap and putting his head down between theirs so he could kiss each one in turn.

“It has to be done.” Max said softly, pulling his head in for a kiss.

“I know that, it doesn’t mean that I have to like it though.”

“I’m going to the bathroom a moment, where’s the nappy bag? I believe Regan needs an urgent nappy change before they declare this hospital a hazardous area.” Nasta said suddenly, pulling a face.

Max handed over the nappy bag laughing and Nasta handed over Tegan.

“If we’re not here when you get back, we’ll be in the Healer’s office, so just come on in, okay?”
Harry said, chuckling.

“Of course.” Nasta answered with a nod before setting off to the bathroom around the corner.

“It really will be alright. Just think of the headache Draco alone would give you if we didn’t get them vaccinated. It’ll be worse than all of us screaming together after a Dragon Pox vaccination.”

Harry laughed and bumped his shoulder against Max’s.

“I love you, but you’re so daft some times.” Harry said with a smile to take the bite out of his words.

“I know. I can’t help it. It’s the way I was brought up; my Dad Richard was a very, very big influence on me.”

“A very bad influence if you ask Myron.” Harry chuckled.

Max’s grin widened. “He loves the mayhem really. He always hated it when the house was too quiet; it gave him too much time to think about the bad stuff.”

Harry’s smile turned sad. “Have you spoken to him lately?”

“Yesterday. He’s fine, he asked if you’re still meeting Richard tomorrow and I said of course you are, you were asleep and I didn’t want to wake you up, you are still going aren’t you?”

“Of course.” Harry said with a nod. “I need to get it over and done with, Max. I want that part of my life to finally close. I haven’t had a flashback in a while, but I…I haven’t said anything about it as I didn’t want anyone to fuss, but I get…nightmares about them, I don’t know why this is all coming up now, but it is and I’m remembering more and more the longer I think about it.”

“That’s usually how it works.” Nasta said as he sat back down with a happily gurgling Regan. “The safer you feel, love, the more the bad stuff comes out. It’s actually a good thing, it means you feel safe with us and feel able to now deal with the bad memories you suppressed early on.”
Harry sighed. “I wish the nightmares weren’t so bad though.”

“Is that why you’re always awake so early lately?” Max asked concernedly.

“Sometimes, not this morning though, this morning it was the fight with Blaise and Draco, I felt like scum for hurting the both of them so violently and I just couldn’t sleep.”

Nasta sighed and threw his spare arm around him. “You’re not scum, love. I do wish that the three of you hadn’t fought so viciously and violently, but the stress and tension of the last month has been building steadily and surely, it was bound to blow over some when, I just hope that we’re done with the fighting. I don’t like knowing that you can be reduced to fist fighting when I’m not there to intervene, or that you’re so angry, upset or completely frustrated enough to trade blows, it means I’m not doing my job as top dominant properly if you feel that way.”

“You’re an amazing top dominant, love.” Harry assured.

“Of course you are, I wouldn’t want your job.” Max said.

“You wouldn’t survive being the top dom.” Harry chuckled. “You wouldn’t be able to handle me in one of my moods, let alone Blaise in the mood he’s in at the moment.”

Max grinned. “I’m glad I don’t have to. He’s an absolute horror at the moment.”

Nasta rolled his eyes, but he was saved from answering as an orderly came out and called for them to come into the Healer’s office. Harry stood up and licked his lips.

“Come on, love, it’ll be fine.” Nasta encouraged as Max walked on ahead. Harry blew out a breath and walked down the corridor.

“Good morning, how are you all today?” Healer Nasser asked, looking at them from over his clipboard as they walked into the paediatric Healer’s office.

“Fine.” Harry answered as he sat Braiden onto the bed; the sides were high and made of a soft mesh to stop the infant patients from rolling or falling off while the Healer worked.
“Five Dragon Pox vaccines today, yes? One at a nine month dosage and four at a four month dosage, is that correct?” He asked, reading off of the clipboard as he checked the sealed bottles of vaccine on the desk and lined them up, a sealed needle lying innocently next to each one.

“Yes, Healer.”

“Right, I can see you want this over with as quickly as possible, but if you’re agreeable, we need their heights and weights and a general check-up for their medical records.”

Harry sighed and nodded. “Can we do that first, before they’re all screaming?”

“Of course, Mister Potter.” The Healer nodded.

He took out his wand from the pocket of his lime green overcoat and took measurements of each baby quickly and easily.

“They’re not exposed to much magic are they?” He asked approvingly.

“No, we try to keep all magic away from them and only use it on them directly in emergencies, but still very sparingly, the school itself is filled with so much magic, so we try to live without magic as much as possible.”

The Healer nodded. “That’s good and very mature and responsible of you. You don’t know how many parents come in here with children that are almost permanently damaged by magical overload because they either refuse to live without magic or don’t know they have to. I don’t care how young the couple is, there is no excuse for such negligence. If you can be bothered to have a baby, you need to be bothered to learn how to care for them properly.”

Harry smiled as one by one the babies were measured and weighed and checked over, and then came the hard part. The actual vaccinations.

Braiden was up first and Harry held him still as Max pulled faces at him to keep him as distracted as possible. Healer Nasser held his arm still as he slid the loaded needle under his skin gently, he pushed the plunger down and emptied the syringe and then drew the needle out quickly and only then did Braiden draw in a large breath and he started screaming as loudly and as hysterically as he could, scarcely taking another breath before exhaling it, crying as quickly as his little lungs could
Harry put Farren down for his injection as he picked up Braiden and shushed him to no effect, bouncing him and trying to calm him down as a smear of potion was put over the vaccination site by an efficient Healer Nasser and a tiny little dot of a colourful plaster with little moving snitches on it.

Nasta put Regan down on the bed behind Farren and held the older baby still as his own vaccination was administered and Harry found himself with another crying baby in his arms, one on either side of his neck, pulling at his hair, making wet trails all the way down his neck and to his chest.

Regan went next and Nasta cuddled him as he cried hysterically and Max put Tegan down and held Calix for his injection, before handing the screaming boy over to Nasta before he held Tegan for her injection and at long last it was all over and done with, all five of them screaming and crying, leaving an apologetic looking Healer who smiled softly at them.

“I am sorry about that; at least you won’t have to get them all done together anymore. The highest number of babies under three I’ve ever had to do at once before was four; I don’t envy any of you lads.” Healer Nasser said with a smile before he gave a rue chuckle “You know because of you, I’ve never been busier with vaccination appointments, making babies cry has become a daily occurrence for me.”

“Do I apologise for that?” Harry asked jokingly.

“Absolutely not, trust me when I say that I’ve never been happier to be busy. When…when you’ve heard a child screaming and dying from Dragon Pox, you never forget and I know you think it’s bad with them crying now, but it’s nothing to what they’re like when they’re dangerously fevered, so very sick and dying from Dragon Pox. I’m so grateful to you for manning up and bringing all of your children for the vaccinations, even if you hate the publicity and the media, in this case, it’s been a gift. So many children are being vaccinated, it’s tripled in the last few months alone, we saw an increase immediately after your firstborn had his first vaccine, but when you kept coming back and even bringing your younger four for their vaccinations, that’s when the appointment cards took off. Parents are finally bringing in their children, adults who were never vaccinated are booking appointments and I want to thank you personally for that, all of you. Hopefully we’ll see the number of Dragon Pox cases declining over the next decade and I hope to never encounter another child with such a disease.”

“What…” Harry stopped and licked his lips. “I know this will be a hard question for you to answer, but what was the youngest patient you’ve ever had with Dragon Pox?”

Healer Nasser smiled sadly, his grey eyes shadowed with grief and pain. “The youngest I’ve had was a little girl and I’ll never forget her for as long as I live, she was five months old and she didn’t stop crying until the very end. She held on for three days, as bad as it sounds, I prayed for her to meet her end quicker, but she lingered and fought and there was nothing that we could do to help her, we had to watch her die slowly and painfully, fevered beyond belief, she felt like a naked flame to the touch. It’s nothing I would ever wish on an adult, but on a child.” The Healer shook his head and swallowed painfully. “No, I am so grateful that you have spurred people to vaccinate their children too, there’s no excuse. Dragon Pox is a vile disease and once you already have it, there’s nothing that we can do to help, that should be enough to get parents off their backsides and get them to vaccinate their children, but people never think it’ll happen to them, they brush aside all the warnings and statistics in favour of burying their heads in the sand, but when it does happen to them or their families they look to us to help, but the only defence against Dragon Pox is vaccinating everyone before they get it, otherwise there is nothing else we can do but try to make their passing easier and more comfortable.”

Harry held his crying children tighter and breathed in deeply. He nodded his head to the Healer decisively.

“We’ll see you in four months for Braiden’s next dose, Healer Nasser.” He said strongly and he couldn’t help smiling back as the Healer’s face broke into a soft smile at his declared words.

“I’ll see you in four months, Mister Potter.”

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Harry spent the next four hours having tears and snot rubbed into his shoulders and neck as he tried to calm down five screaming babies in the bedroom.

Calix, as his smallest, and though he hated to admit it, his weakest child after Leolin, cried himself to sleep quickly, followed by Regan and then Tegan, but Braiden and Farren were still going strong and Harry didn’t know what else he could possibly do for them.

He collapsed onto the bed and pulled Farren into one side of himself and Braiden into the other, snuggling them and letting them clutch and tug at him as they wailed, screamed, cried and then finally they tapered off into exhausted grizzlies and whines.

He felt drained and completely wrung out as an hour and a half later the room was quiet and Farren and Braiden slept fitfully on either side of him. He eased out from between them, before carrying them both down the stairs carefully and placed Farren into his cot, before going into the nursery and putting Braiden into his own cot.

He turned on the two baby monitors, the one in the nursery and the one on the side table behind the four cots in the bottom part of the bedroom. He carried the two, colour coded, monitors into the living room and he collapsed onto the settee.

Max pulled him into his side and Draco handed him a cup of tea a few minutes later.

“How are they?” Blaise asked softly.
“All sleeping for now, hopefully they’ll sleep for a while and wake up feeling better, but at least that’s over with for now, Braiden doesn’t need another one for four months, the four quintuplets don’t need one for five months.”

“It’ll all be worth it once they’re completely vaccinated.” Draco told him.

Harry nodded strongly. “Yes, yes it will. Completely worth it, no child of mine will ever have Dragon Pox. Speaking of which, Nas, when can we vaccinate Leolin?”

Nasta shook his head. “Not for a while, Harry, the vaccinations will only end up killing him, they’re too strong for his body to handle, it would probably end up giving him Dragon Pox instead of doing its job in preventing him from getting it.”

“What if he gets Dragon Pox before he’s old enough and strong enough to get vaccinated?” Harry asked something which had been playing on his mind for a while now with a crumpled frown.

Nasta came and sat on his other side and held his hands gently, playing with them for a moment as he gathered his thoughts, before looking up at him with a sad look in his eyes.

“If he gets Dragon Pox, love, then we’ll just have to make him as comfortable as we can. This is the danger of us having Faerie babies, Harry, you know four in ten Faerie babies don’t even make it to their first year and out of the remaining six, only one or two of them will even reach adulthood. Their immune systems are next to non-existent while they are children, any bugs, viruses or diseases floating around and he will get it and it’s highly likely that it’ll kill him. His body won’t be able to fight them off.”

“But what can we do?!” Harry asked desperate and teary.

“Nothing, Harry.” Nasta told him sadly. “There’s nothing that we can do.”

The next morning Harry was a bit despondent as he looked at the large, deep bruises on his children’s arms. Apart from the hysterical crying afterwards and the knowledge that the vaccines hurt his tiny babies, it was the bruises that the vaccinations left behind that he hated the most.

He refused to let Leolin go as he cradled him gently in his arms, talking to him softly and encouraging him to talk or at the very least babble, but Leolin just laid there in his arms, looking at him through the deep, bright gold coloured eyes that Harry adored.

Harry traced the sharp nose, the tiny lips and the thin face. He hated that Leolin wasn’t chubby like all of the others, but Nasta had coached him to give it time, Leolin was still in the premature stage of his life as he had been born three months early and a lot of his body’s healing and growing had gone into his underdeveloped wings in that first month of life, which had set him back by a lot. He would remain in the premature stage for at least another two months and then Harry hoped that he would start to gain some much needed weight and height, it was disconcerting to hold a baby the same size as premature month old baby when you knew that he was actually four months old and putting him next to the other quintuplets was worse.

“He’s not going anywhere.” Nasta told him softly, sitting next to him and putting an arm around his shoulder.

“I know that, I just…” Harry trailed off, not sure what he felt or what his reasoning for holding onto Leolin so tightly was.

“I didn’t mean that he’s going to get up and leave or one of us will take him away from you, I mean that he’s not going anywhere. We’re not going to let him leave us, Harry.” Nasta told him sternly and surely and Harry swallowed hard.

“How do we control that?” Harry asked softly.

“We don’t. We can’t control what’s going to happen, so we don’t control it, but we have faith and we have intelligence. We’re not going to be stupid like other parents of Faerie children, we’re going to look after him properly, love, because to do any less would be to put the blame at our feet for his death and I can’t allow that to happen. If one of us is sick, we take no chances, even if it’s just a sniffle or a feeling of general unwellness, tell someone else to tend to him, even in the middle of the night, we do not handle him as what is just a sniffle to us, could be a full blown, fatal fever to him. If one of the kids gets sick, like Tegan was, we need to remove him from them, we take no chances with his health or his life and if we can manage that, then I’m sure we can get him safely to adulthood where his immune system will become impenetrable.”

Nasta pressed a kiss to Leolin’s soft head and then he moved to kiss Harry.

“I can’t bear the thought of losing him.”
“I know, love, but imagine being a Faerie, having a Faerie lover and only being able to have Faerie babies. Imagine their fear as they try to raise their children, any one of them they can lose at any moment. It’s hard for Faeries to conceive, it’s why they were so sceptical that we had had a Faerie baby, I’m only a fifth generation carrier of the gene and you’re nothing, no Faerie genes at all, only dragon genes as they call it. Faerie couples have trouble conceiving, Harry; you can imagine their surprise and doubt that we had had a Faerie child when their own can’t have one easily.”

“We’ll show them.” Harry said as he looked lovingly to Leolin’s little face, that was drooping with sleepiness. Though he was awake for longer these days, Leolin still spent most of his time sleeping.

Harry didn’t worry or begrudge him of that, sleep was the best thing for Leolin, it helped him develop and grow, and though his social skills were being battered by the constant sleep and his communication skills were non-existent, Harry tried to calm down about it. Leolin would learn in his own time and as soon as he had a spare moment, he’d tear through those books that Aneirin had given them from the Faerie libraries and learn all he could, for now though, the only books he needed to go near were Transfiguration and Herbology.

Harry was nervous as he sat opposite Richard in the small restaurant. He had a small glass of wine in his hand that he was sipping on. Nasta would have thrown a fit, but Richard said that it was alright and it would help calm him down and he swore not to tell Nasta with a wink.

They had ordered a light lunch, but Harry’s eyes kept slipping to the leather bound notebook by Richard’s hand all throughout the meal, licking his lips and biting it harshly in slight fear and nervousness as he picked at his food.

“Just calm down, Harry, this is a formal chat, I know, I am here in a business capacity, but you are still my youngest son, my youngest child, and I want to help you.”

Harry sighed and he reached a hand out to grip his glass and he took a gulp of the sweet red wine within. He breathed deeply, let it out and took another gulp.

“Okay. I’m ready. What do you need?”

“Okay Harry, any time you feel uncomfortable, you just say and we’ll take a break.”
Harry nodded his understanding and prepared himself, mentally and physically as he settled himself in the chair as if expecting a physical blow.

“My team and I have been asking everyone who has even had a slight contact with you about what they remember, thus includes neighbours, teachers, everyone we could track down. Your old teachers all said that you were a bright, happy little boy, but one teacher was of a profound interest to us. A Mister Payne.”

Harry smiled in remembrance. “He always looked out for me on the playground; I always stuck close to him when he was on playground duty.”

“He remembers the bright smiles and the happy little boy, but he also noticed the sad eyes behind the smile. He said it was like you were wearing a mask, at such a young age too. He told my work partner that your cousin liked singling you out, alienating you from the other students so that you were always alone.”

Harry nodded. “Dudley had a knack for doing that. He intimidated a lot of the other students because he was bigger and heavier than them and he had them too frightened to even speak to me.”

“We’ve noticed that about him as we’ve spoken to other children around the area. Particularly a Mark Evans, who seemed terrified to even hear Dudley’s name mentioned. It’s all painted a picture of a terrible, evil little boy who happily enjoyed bullying other children and neighbourhood animals too. One elderly woman insists that she saw him stone her cat to death with his hoodlum friends.”

“He liked bragging about what he did. A single cat isn’t the only animal in that neighbourhood that he killed purposefully.”

“I dare say it isn’t. We have a picture painted of him of a terrible, vile young man, but the defence will likely claim him misunderstood or insist we offer proof of his wrong deeds. We have statements and witnesses, so I’m happy to tell you that your cousin will be looking at a prison sentence, but it might only be three years.”

“That’ll be more than torture for him.”

Richard smiled. “Now, your Aunt and Uncle are currently looking at fifteen years each, we’re trying to push that up as much as possible, so we need more information, more damning evidence. The pictures of the bedroom that was yours and the cupboard they kept you in are what have given us those fifteen years apiece, but those bastards deserve worse, so…tell me about any injuries that you sustained, Harry. Anything that you remember will help. You don’t have any Muggle medical records after you lost your parents, so that alone is damning, but if you had any broken bones that weren’t seen by a professional, any deep cuts that needed stitches that you never had.”

“I…I dug these out for you.” Harry said as he hesitantly pushed over an old, tattered envelope of photographs.

Richard looked surprised, but he opened up the envelope, slightly wary of what he was about to see, and he pulled out a large pile of old photographs. He had to use all of his professional decorum not to leap over the table and pull Harry into a hug, or to go and beat the bastards who were being kept in the holding cells to death.

He flipped through each picture of Harry’s beaten, bloody and scarred body, some from when he was very young. They were hideous to look at and he swallowed painfully.

“Who took these photos of you, Harry?” He asked through a dry mouth.

“Hermione and Ron took the ones where I’m older, I took some myself, but when I was really little it was the neighbour next door, I believe she died a long while ago. She promised to get me help, to get me out of there. She took the photos for evidence, but…but she died before anything could be done. A brain aneurism, completely out of the blue one evening, there was no warning, no helping her, she was just gone.”

Richard put the photos down and took Harry’s hands in his own. “You’re being very brave, Harry. This will take their sentence up by a lot, actual physical evidence of the horrors that you sustained is going to convince the jury more, I’m glad your inheritance wiped these scars and marks from your body…” Richard stopped and hesitated.

“But from a professional’s point of view you’d have rathered they still be there.” Harry said with a smile, understanding Richard’s mind set.

“If you weren’t my little baby boy, then yes, but as you are, absolutely not, but these…these are like gold to us, Harry. I can’t tell you how pleased I am that we have these photographs.”

Harry smiled softly. “I thought you’d need them. I always keep them buried in the bottom of my trunk, especially after the neighbour died. None of the others have seen them, I don’t want them too.”
“These are all horrific, where did you get them?”

Harry took several of the photos that clearly showed scars and he lined them up. “These are all magical, the one on the bend of my elbow there is from the Basilisk fang going through my arm in second year, the gouges on my shoulder here are from the dragon in the tri-wizard tournament in my fourth year. The funny looking scar on my leg is from an Acromantula from the same year and the same tournament. Those scars are from when Voldemort possessed me the year after the dragon and the giant spider, there was broken glass on the floor and he made me roll and writhe in it before I destroyed him. I didn’t actually feel those over the splitting pain in my skull, but the damage was still done whether I felt it or not at the time.”

“There are a lot more scars that aren’t magical, tell me about those.”

Harry licked his lips and he went to one of the oldest photographs. “I remember this one clearly, it’s the first time I ever got hit, I was eight, I fell on a rake.” Harry said as he showed the picture of the little circular scars on his back, near to his left side.

“What sort of hit was it?” Richard asked as he put a number on the back of the photo and made a notation in his notebook. “Was it a slap, a punch, a push?”

“A backhand.” Harry said softly. “It was too powerful and I fell onto a rake in the garden.”

“Just to clarify, you did not receive any medical attention for that wound, did you? Not even a Tetanus vaccine from falling on a dirty rake?”

Harry shook his head. “No. They never took me to see a doctor, sometimes if it was really bad, Aunt Petunia would throw a couple of bandages at me and push me into the bathroom to clean up, but that was only in rare circumstances and I had to clean the bathroom afterwards.”

Richard swallowed and took a sip of his wine, which he had hidden a few drops of calming draught inside. He had known that he would need it, but hearing that Harry had gone through such horrors, he wanted to hurt someone, he felt so angry, so pained for Harry and his shattered childhood.

He squeezed his hand into a tight fist under the table so that Harry couldn’t see it, he swore he wouldn’t tell Myron about these details until after the Dursley family had been sentenced and locked up and even then, not without a hell of a lot of calming draught, alcohol or sex, maybe all three, to help calm him down, but he shook those thoughts off, thinking of sex with Myron often led him to have a dopey grin on his face and in this circumstance, that would be a disaster. He didn’t want Harry to think that he was laughing at him or making fun of him. So he instead schooled his face as he was so used to doing in his profession and he urged Harry to drink his wine, which also had a few drops of calming draught in it.

“Did you ever have any broken bones?”

Harry sighed. “That’s a harder question to answer, even if it sounds pretty straightforward. I was a kid; I didn’t know the difference between a break, a fracture, a dislocation or just a deep bruise. It was all just pain and hurt to me.”

“Do you have a better clarification now?” Richard asked patiently, understanding perfectly that this was hard for Harry to talk about.

“I’m sure I broke my arm once, Dudley pulled it back too far and I heard a crack, but I was really young and I can’t be sure. It’s one of the only times that Aunt Petunia bandaged me up herself, she tied it very tightly and told me that if I touched it or took it off then I wouldn’t get breakfast.”

“Was…was food often used as a punishment?” Richard asked softly, hesitating only slightly. He was too close to Harry not to be affected by what he was hearing, he would have been affected by it if he didn’t know Harry personally, maybe he should have taken his partner up on the offer of doing the interview, but he had known that Harry wouldn’t talk to a stranger about this and he wouldn’t abandon Harry to struggle through these horrors on his own.

“Yes, it was threatened at least twice a day on average.”

“How often was the threat actually carried out?”

Harry shrugged. “It differed from week to week, but I missed at least two or three meals every week and when I was fed, it was just a piece of bread and a plastic beaker of water.”

“That’s all? You never had anything different?”

Harry shrugged. “I was sometimes allowed to finish what Dudley left or didn’t want if I hadn’t done anything they considered bad that day, but as he got older, he ate everything and there was never anything left.”
“You mentioned before that you would eat grass?” Richard reminded gently.

Harry blushed and ducked his head. “Yeah. When it first started happening, I was always so hungry that when I was sent into the garden to weed or just to be out of their way I took to eating the grass and drinking the water from the hose, which often made me sick, so I had to stop that, but the grass was okay once I got over the strange taste and texture, but it never kept me full for long, no matter how much of it I ate.”

“When did this start, Harry, how old were you?”

“About seven I think.”

“What is the longest period of time they kept you without food? This is a very serious question, Harry, so I need you to think carefully.” Richard stressed.

“When I was younger it was a couple of days if I was locked in my cupboard, I guess they just forgot about me, but when I was older, it was a week sometimes before I got anything. When I started Hogwarts, particularly after my second year and the cat flap was installed in the bedroom door, I got small, regular meals, once a day, something small, a bowl of soup, bread, maybe a bruised apple or an overripe pear.”

“As a teenager you’d only get a piece of fruit for an entire day?”

Harry shrugged and nodded.

“We’re you locked in your room all the time?”

Harry nodded again. “All day every day, all night, every night.”

“This is a very invasive question, Harry, I know, but what about when you needed the bathroom.”

“I was allowed to use it at around midday, if my Aunt remembered to let me out.”
“If she didn’t remember?”

Harry blushed but shrugged it off. “I’d have to hold myself.”

“What is the longest time you’ve gone without the use of a bathroom, Harry?”

“Three days and I was only let out because I hammered hell out of the door. I got punished for that.”

Richard focused on writing that down and not doing or showing anything else. He breathed deeply and pushed it out through his nose, trying desperately to calm himself. Maybe he should have put more than a few drops of the Calming Draught into the wine glasses.

He went back to the pictures that Harry had brought and he pulled out one that showed a horrific bruise that covered Harry’s stomach and the right side of his hip and side. Harry was very young in the photo. He scanned the other photos and he deduced that it was a photo that looked to show Harry at his youngest.

“How old are you in this one, Harry?” He asked, pushing the picture towards Harry so he could see it.

“Six.” Harry answered, which was honestly a lot older than Richard had thought that he was, it seemed the effects of Harry’s abuse and mistreatment had been much more apparent before he had started Hogwarts. “Dudley had gotten a new cricket bat for his birthday and he tested it out on me. The woman next door that I told you about, she saw the bruises as I was thrown into the garden as punishment for ruining Dudley’s birthday by crying and I was trying to tend to my own wounds and she took that photo, that’s when she got involved in everything. She never confronted the Dursleys though, she said she was going to save up the evidence and go straight to the police, but I think she was more afraid than she let on, it took years of collecting photos and evidence and all the while I was being beaten, starved and attacked. As she baked cookies and watched her favourite afternoon TV shows, I was right next door terrified, hungry and praying for a glimpse of hope and when she died she still hadn’t gone to the police, so with her death, my hopes went also and I resigned myself to being in that house until I was either old enough to leave, they threw me out, or I died.”

Richard breathed deeply and his heart ached for Harry. He couldn’t think of what he must have felt, to have salvation so close at hand, only for it to never quite go that last inch, then to have it ripped away so completely and firmly. He steeled his iron resolve; these beasts were not going to get away with what they had done to Harry, to his little son. He’d push and push and fight every single moment to have them locked up forever. He’d accept absolutely nothing less than that.
They slowly went through all the photos that Harry had brought with him, ordering more wine, though he made sure it wasn’t too much, and by the end Richard wanted to grind his teeth in anger and frustration, how in the name of Merlin could anyone not notice these bruises and scars on a child’s body? He failed to believe that only one person in fifteen years had noticed the bruises, the scarring, the obvious malnutrition and neglect that had surrounded Harry. It wasn’t possible!

“Right, Harry, you’ve done amazing and I know that you’re tired and fed up and want this to be over already, we’re almost done, I promise. You’ve been so brave and have given us a lot to work with, I’m confident that we can get them on a higher charge now thanks to this evidence. I’m so proud of you.”

Harry puffed up slightly at that, his Dracken particularly liked the praise that was given to him. Richard smiled indulgently at him as he noticed and he chuckled, ruffling Harry’s already messy hair. Harry had run his hand through it so many times that Richard had wondered several times if it was going to stay stuck up like he had used a heavy duty hair styling potion.

“You’re a good boy. I love you very much and have never been happier to have you as my youngest son. Now, this is going to be hard for you sweet one, but these next few questions are going to be about sexual abuse.”

“I’ve never been raped.” Harry burst out immediately. “I wouldn’t have been able to have children otherwise.”

Richard smiled sadly. “I know that, love, but sexual abuse covers a lot more than just outright rape, it’s a very wide, broad spectrum. I know it’s hard and difficult, but did anyone ever touch you where you didn’t want them too?”

Harry shook his head furiously. “They thought that I was dirty and contagious, they didn’t hit me often, like I said. They wouldn’t willingly touch me unless I had done something really bad; or rather what they thought was really bad.”

Richard was so angry at that, that they had made Harry feel so dirty that he couldn’t be touched, that he deserved it because he was a naughty child. Harry had quoted the term ‘born bad’ several times and it made him clench his hand so tightly that he almost drew blood, but he was so relieved to hear that none of them had ever sexually abused him, so very, very glad that that particular horror was spared from Harry, even if nothing else had been.

“Has anyone else ever touched you against your wishes?”
“Only Nott, but I doubt that he counts after what I did to him for it, there was no one else. I wasn’t in any after school activities, my teachers were always nice and when I got to Hogwarts I was always with Ron and Hermione. I wasn’t sexually active before Blaise and I didn’t really think about it before him either. I never wanted to touch anyone sexually and I hope that they never wanted to with me either. Blaise was my first for many things and I was terrified, he was so kind and gentle with me, I think if it had been near enough anyone else, then I wouldn’t have been able to do it without the heat cycle and that was something that I really wanted to do. I was determined to ‘keep my mind’ during that first time, I’m glad it was Blaise.”

Richard chuckled and smiled. “Right, I think we’ve covered everything and I’ve taken up enough of your time. Max’ll be having kittens if I don’t get you home in time for dinner, but thank you, Harry. You’ve done a lot for me today, but most of all, you’ve done a lot for yourself and I’ve never been prouder of you.”

Harry smiled at that as Richard packed up his notebook, the photos, his pens and pencils, all into a stylish briefcase. They both stood and Richard wrapped an arm around him and led him out of the restaurant, paying the bill on the way out, much to Harry’s protest, but he was shut down by Richard telling him that sons didn’t pay for meals with their family and if Richard held him a little bit tighter and closer than usual on the walk out, Harry didn’t mention it or begrudge him that small level of comfort.

Harry couldn’t believe that it was almost dinner time though, they’d been talking in the restaurant for five and a half hours and Harry was feeling drained and tired, a familiar feeling lately, but he was glad that he had done it and it was all over with now, he just missed his children and his mates and he wanted to get home.

Richard took him to a less crowded area and slipped down a deserted alleyway, he took hold of Harry’s arm, pulled him into a tight bear hug and twisted on the spot.

Harry landed heavily and Richard pulled him up and held him tighter as he got his bearings and his legs back under him.

He breathed deeply and Richard set them off walking down Hogsmeade and through the gates to Hogwarts. They chatted quietly together, normal conversation this time, mostly about the children, but Harry asked after Myron, Caesar, Amelle and Eleonora and the three girls, Julinda, Talia and Alayla. He did not ask about Ashleigh and Richard noticed, even if he didn’t say anything about it or call Harry up on it, he decided then and there to up his ante on his Wife and he made sure to make a mental reminder to tell Myron about it. They had to do something or they would end up alienating their children, all of them, and his heart wouldn’t be able to handle the pain of it. He loved Ashleigh, he truly did, but he loved his children more and he was old enough, and he had enough control of himself, to ignore his Dracken side, who insisted that his submissive was more important. He knew that Ashleigh was the one in the wrong, that Ashleigh was the one who needed help. He refused to choose between his mate and his children, but if Ashleigh didn’t step up and kept refusing their help, then he’d have no choice, he refused to lose a single one of his children over this, whether it was Max, Caesar, one of their sweet girls, or Harry. They were all his children and he refused to see them unhappy and he refused to alienate them when he knew that Ashleigh was the one who needed to sort herself out. It wasn’t right and it wasn’t fair.
They reached Harry’s rooms and went inside to complete chaos. The room was a mess, nearly every child was crying or screaming bar Braiden, who had tear tracks on his face, but he was crawling slowly through the mess and debris, getting very close to a table full of half empty mugs of tea, three of the four mates were trying to calm down the kids and Max was trying to cook while also feeding Leolin.

“What in Merlin’s name has happened here?!” Harry demanded as he rushed to scoop Braiden up as the nine month old sat up and pulled on a dangling piece of fabric, a discarded school tie, which pulled three half full mugs towards his face.

Richard just laughed. “It looks like they’ve missed a Mother’s touch.”

“Max and Nasta are used to looking after them for seven or eight hours a day, I’ve been gone for a maximum of six. I’ll reiterate, what happened?”

“Blaise happened.” Draco huffed. “He’s possessed, I swear it.”

Blaise scowled and turned away, trying to calm Farren.

“He’s not possessed; he’s just trying to do his school work.” Harry defended. “That doesn’t explain why this place is a tip and why every child is upset and crying.”

Blaise sighed. “I lost my temper with Max and shouted at him, it startled the children.”

Harry stopped and took a deep, calming breath; he let it out and took a step towards Blaise.

“Are you telling me that you shouted in front of my babies loud enough to frighten them to tears?” Harry demanded softly.

“Oh hell, he’s doing that quiet shouting, that soft, I’m going to kill you tone, you better run, Blaise.” Richard told him seriously. “Myron uses that tone too, right before he ties me to the bed and leaves me there all alone for the day.”

That made Harry chuckle and though he didn’t see it, Richard winked to the four men over Harry’s head with a grin.

“Right, this is my cue to leave you to the domestics, I’ll see you lads later. Max, your Dad wants to hear from you soon, Caesar wants to talk to you and would it kill you to write to your sisters every once in a while? All I get is nag, nag, nag, Max hasn’t written to me in a month, Max is being distant, Max is losing touch with us, please, for all the love you hold for me, save your poor Dad and write to those harpies!”

Max laughed loudly and Harry chuckled, he started taking his children from his mates and settling them all on the settee, he kept Braiden with him, as he was more mobile than the others, but he put him down when all of them were settled on the settee.

Max saw Richard out and Harry started entertaining his children with a puppet show with two teddies he had scrounged from the mess on the floor.

“I’m not doing this to entertain you lot too, I want this room clean. Now.” He said as he looked over and saw his mates watching him as well.

That set them off as Max went to finish dinner and clean up the kitchen and lay the table and the other three went around the living room, cleaning everything up, even Draco, which Harry felt accomplished over and a little bit of pride was thrown in there too. He snorted, he was proud of his lover because he was cleaning, he was going soft.

Braiden snatched a dancing teddy from him and a fuzzy leg went right into his mouth. Harry laughed and picked up another teddy and carried on the pantomime, Calix giggling hysterically and the sound made Harry giggle too, which turned into deep laughter as Calix laughed so hard that he lost his balance and fell forward.

That made all of them laugh as Harry pushed him back up and kissed his cheeks, his little face flushed a bright red, his gummy grin on display, his little tongue visible through his open mouth.

“Can someone get a picture of him please?” Harry asked, unwilling to look away from Calix, giving him serious eye contact and grinning back at his dainty son.

“Already done.” Max told him as he lightly gripped Calix’s red apple cheek between a finger and thumb. “You are gorgeous and your laugh is infectious.” He told him as he jiggled the full cheek so very gently, which got a screech of absolute delight.

Harry chuckled and kissed all of the kids.
“Have they all been fed?”

“Leolin was the last.” Nasta nodded.

“Then these little ones should be in bed.” Harry said as he picked up Calix and gave him a kiss, carrying him into the bedroom to settle him in his cot.

Once the babies were all in bed, Harry sat down at the kitchen table and he was served dinner by Max. He kissed him in thanks and tucked in. It didn’t take them long to devour dinner and when they were all settled on the settee with tea, Max had joined them after washing up; they all looked at him expectantly.

“Oh no. No, I am not speaking about this.” He said quickly. “Absolutely not.”

“There’s no shame in it, Harry.” Nasta said calmly.

“That’s fine for you to sit there and say! You weren’t the one that this happened to!” Harry burst out, upset. “The things those people did to me, what they said, Richard almost lost it in the middle of a crowded restaurant, how do you think you lot will react?”

“How long are they looking at now?” Max asked softly.

“Richard said between thirty and thirty-five years. Dudley’s looking at five.” Harry sighed.

Max’s face hardened and it was only then that Harry realised that Max had grown up with Richard’s cases and likely knew how bad it was if they were looking at thirty-five years apiece prison time.

“Leave it.” Harry sighed tiredly.

“It must have been horrific if they’re looking at that amount of time, Harry, that’s on the low end of murder with intent.” Max said.

“It was bad, you knew that before.”
“Not this bad! What the hell did they do to you?” Max asked angrily before his face fell and he went stark white. “They didn’t touch you did they? No…please tell me that they never touched you like that. I’ll KILL THEM!”

“Max! Keep your voice down or you’ll wake the kids. They never.” Harry interrupted, shaking his head for emphasis. “They never did anything like that, no one has, only Nott and look what he got! No, they thought that I was dirty and contagious, they never would have touched me like that.”

“You’re not dirty or contagious.” Draco told him softly, sitting next to him and pulling him into a hug.

“I know that now, but back then I didn’t, I thought that I was filthy and unworthy of the touch of other people, but I was never sexually abused. Never. I consider that worth a bit of emotional turmoil.”

Nasta sighed and threw his arms around both Harry and Draco; he kissed the back of Harry’s head.

“We love you and if you want to tell us one day, we’ll always take the time to listen, but otherwise, push it from your mind, it’s over now, you don’t have to speak about it again, not until you’re in court, but Richard will be right beside you for that.”

Harry smiled sadly and a little wistfully. “I’m feeling raw and open at the moment. Richard grilled me for every minute detail and I did my best to answer fully and honestly, it hurt. It hurt me to talk about it, all of it, in exact, gruelling detail; I can’t do that again, not yet.”

“Oh come here.” Max pulled him into a bone crushing hug and Harry laughed. “It’ll be alright, those monsters will be in prison soon and you’ll never have to worry about them hurting you again.”

“I didn’t think I had to worry about it now, not with my own personal bodyguards on duty all day every day, you four won’t let anyone hurt me, will you?”

“Of course not.” Blaise said immediately. “Anyone who tries to hurt you will be on the wrong end of my wand.”
“That better be your wood wand and not your trouser wand.” Max joked.

It took just a moment before Harry got the joke and he laughed loudly.

“I won’t let my mates’ spear anyone with their wands, those wands are mine!” Harry insisted possessively.

“Is that so? I don’t see your name on them!” Max challenged.

“Get me a quill and a pot of ink, in your favourite colour, and I can rectify that, I’ve never done tattoos before, but I’m sure it’ll look alright.”

Max went quiet. “Absolutely not!” He said. “You take a quill to mini Max and I’ll break your neck.”

“Mini Max?” Draco grinned. “Undercutting yourself a bit aren’t you, Max?”

“If you say so, my love.” Max grinned and then winked with a laugh as Draco went pink.

Draco huffed and crossed his arms. Blaise kissed his cheek and laughed.

“Don’t pout, Draco, it’s unbecoming.” He said, before ducking out of the way as Draco aimed an open handed slap at him.

“Don’t start.” Nasta said seriously.

Harry shook his head and leant back against the settee, closing his eyes. Today had been completely draining and he wasn’t lying when he said he was feeling raw. Only one week now and the exams were going to be upon them. He couldn’t wait until they were fucking over.
A/N: We celebrate today, two whole years of consistent, dedicated work and research for The Rise of the Drackens. This day, exactly two years ago, was when the first chapter for this fic was written and posted on Fanfiction and Adultfanfiction and since that day, I have not stopped with this fic.
Everything is meticulously planned, all information is written down, I’ve created family trees, new characters and people, good and bad, new species of creatures, taken, changed and embellished old species of creatures. Every plot line is measured and weighed and acted upon with forethought of all consequences. This fic and every single chapter is planned to within an inch of its life and I can happily say that I regret nothing about it because of that. Research and planning are the key to the success of this fic, plus the amazing, supportive fan base provided by each and every single one of you readers and reviewers.
This fic has had its low points these past two years, it has been ripped apart by minimal flamers, who are happily ripped apart back, it’s been taken down, thus forcing me to change the fic on Fanfiction to include no MA rated material lest it be taken down again and myself permanently banned from the site, it’s been copied and plagiarised numerous times, all resulting in the offending authors being reported and their stolen attempts removed, because I do not tolerate plagiarisers of any kind, but when it’s my own fic, it’s personal and I will fight for what is mine and trust me when I say this fic is wholly and completely mine and anyone who tries to take that from me will be reported and removed quickly and efficiently.
But counter to that, it has had its high points too, the two translations into Spanish and French, every single review milestone has been excitedly and happily celebrated, we are now up to 9,500 reviews, which is absolutely amazing and still stuns me to this day and every other milestone to come will incite just as much excitement as the previous, I’ll never get bored or tired of hearing your thoughts and views of this story and every plot twist and chapter within it that I dedicate hours upon hours of my free time to give you. Unfortunately I doubt we’ll be seeing a third year of Rise of the Drackens, at least not one where I’ll be actively updating it, as this fic is drawing to a close now, but I will be carrying on through their lives in fits and bursts in the Scaled Bits, as it will be more a collection of scenes jumping around rather than a follow on, chaptered story like this one, but I will be showing life after this fic ends.
So I would like you all to join me in celebrating two whole years of hard work, dedication, research, family, love, lust, babies and, of course, Drackens, with me, with this chapter. I hope you have enjoyed it and I’d like you all to know that I have enjoyed writing every single chapter, every miniscule detail, I have a thing for details as you likely have noticed by now, every minute I’ve put into this fic has been truly worth it and I’m so very glad I’ve had you lot to share it with, to share in my hard work and the joy that this brings, all the emotions, good and bad, everything, thank you from the bottom of my heart, everything you readers do is greatly appreciated and I wouldn’t have gotten anywhere with this fic without all of you being there with me. Thank you.

Whether you have been here with me for the entire two years this fic has been posted, or for two days, thank you for your continued support and I hope that when I’m finally done with this fic you can all call it a story that you have loved right from the very beginning all the way through to the absolute end,

Chapter Seventy-Five – Nastily Exhausting Wizarding Tests

Richard sighed as he dragged himself up the stairs of his home and he slipped into his study. He was bone tired and he felt drained from the several hours that he had spent with Harry. Speaking of which, he looked around the room at his current ‘active’ case. Pictures of Harry and the Dursleys stared back at him from the walls, pictures of Harry’s ‘bedroom’ were everywhere and he sighed again, moving around his desk to put his briefcase down, ignoring the three other desks and tables where documents and handwritten notes were lined up neatly and ready for the court case.
He was as prepared as he could be, but talking to Harry had really, really helped, no matter how they both felt now afterwards and the photos were a serious boost to their evidence cache.

He took them from his briefcase and he closed his eyes. He swallowed tightly and put them down. He couldn’t look at them again today, he’d sort through them later, but he had done too much already today. He turned and left his study, hunting down Myron, who thankfully didn’t work weekends.

“I was expecting you back an hour or so ago.” Myron said, looking up from his paperwork on the desk of his own study as Richard opened the door and walked inside.

Richard didn’t answer but he approached his lover and pushed Myron back from the desk on his expensive swivel chair and he crawled into his lap, sitting astride his legs, still saying nothing, just holding onto his lover and tucking himself into him like they were teenagers still.

“That bad?” Myron asked softly, rubbing his back gently.

“Worse.” Richard forced out, his voice strained with pain and the unshed tears that he refused to let fall. “It was worse than worse, My. I have no idea how he came out of that hellhole as the wonderful person that we know today. He should be a bitter boy who is locked up and afraid of his own shadow, but he’s not.”

“He’s a very strong young man.”

“That’s not it. His strength of character, to come through what he has and still be able to interact normally with others, to react normally and to force away his own emotions and thoughts to do what he knows is right.”

“Tell me.” Myron said softly, encouragingly.

Richard shook his head. “I don’t think I can, several hours of listening to him lay out some of the most horrific details possible. That it happened to our boy, our boy, Myron! I almost lost control several times in the restaurant and that was with the help of a calming draught too. That poor boy, I could cry for the innocence that he lost, for what he had to survive through in that house. He never deserved that…no child deserves that.”

“Did you find out if he was…violated?”
Richard shook his head. “He wasn’t, thank Merlin! Harry said that they thought that he was contagious, so they never touched him more than necessary and never like that.”

“We can take a small mercy in that, if nothing else.”

“Did you have any more luck with Ashleigh?”

“I really think we have to let the kids handle her, if she still doesn’t see sense from them, then we’ll know that she is no longer our Ashleigh and I will order her to seek medical help, I don’t want to, but she’s not the woman I fought so hard for anymore, Richard, she’s changed, different. We see Harry as ours, why can’t she?”

“I know what you mean, but I’m worried, I know that Harry isn’t of our blood or bodies, but we still see him as our son, we see him as ours, Myron and he’s younger than all of our children. Does Ashleigh still see our babies as hers, or have they been bumped off with the flood of grandchildren too?”

Myron actually considered it and that alone proved exactly how little they thought of their submissive mate at the moment and proved that Richard wasn’t alone in his fears for their children.

“She wasn’t avoiding them like she was Harry, I don’t know why he seems to be setting her on edge when he did everything that Amelle didn’t. Everything that she wanted he gave to her, she should have been so thankful and grateful to him. Not a lot of submissives would have been as kind or as thoughtful, he pushed aside his own instincts to give her what she wanted the most, something we as dominants should have condemned, but we didn’t, because he had made our submissive happy.”

“I think it’s wonderful that he handed his newborns over so trustingly, it proves if nothing else how much Harry thinks of our Max, how much he trusts him, to listen to him against his own instincts to hand our Ashleigh his baby.”

Myron smiled at that thought, that Harry trusted his oldest son so much; it made him so glad that Maximilius had found someone so perfect for him. Other submissives might not have been so tolerant of his sense of humour, or his childish ways, and would have sought a way to put a stop to it and that Harry not only accepted that part of Max, but actively encouraged and joined in sometimes made Max so happy, and that was all Myron could ask for as a Father.
“We’ll sort this mess out, Richard, I swear it. Ashleigh must be taken to hand before she pulls apart our family further and the monsters that hurt Harry so much will never be free to hurt him again, even if the court case falls through and I have to exact my own justice for a second time.”

“I don’t want you dead or in Azkaban, Myron.” Richard said softly, looking at Myron imploringly. “The justice system works, you need to trust in that, trust in me, those people are not getting away with what they did, no jury on Earth will rule them not guilty after all the evidence that I have. They won’t get away with it.”

“Then there’s no need to worry.” Myron insisted. “If they face life imprisonment, I won’t have need to track them down and kill them for daring to touch our youngest.”

“With the pictures that Harry gave me today, they are definitely facing thirty years or more, depending on the judge, and I’m aiming to get Mister Justice Brais, he’s well known for being extremely hard on child related crimes.”

Richard shook his head. “Nothing for you to worry about, they’re evidence.”

“What do they show?” Myron asked softly, too softly. Richard swallowed nervously and he wondered if he told what those pictures showed; would Myron go to the holding cells and just outright kill the Dursleys before he could stop him?

“Scars.” He said softly, deciding that Myron wouldn’t let it drop if he didn’t tell him. “Harry took photos of the injuries and scars that those monsters left on his body before his inheritance wiped them away.”

“Who took the photos? Why didn’t they come forward and report it?!” Myron hissed enraged.

Richard sighed. “There was a woman next door to Harry who took most of the photos from when he was a child, she kept telling him that they needed more evidence before they could go to the police, but Harry worked out, even at that young age, that she was too cowardly to act and that they would never have enough evidence for that woman to take him to the police and report it, she died a few years after they started. Aneurism. Harry snuck in and got the photos before anyone found them and he kept them hidden in his…in his cupboard.” Richard swallowed painfully.
“What about the other photos, are there more after that point?”

Richard nodded. “Harry took most of them himself, but when he went to Hogwarts he got Hermione and the Weasley boy to carry on taking the photos of just his back.”

“And they didn’t report it, not even to a teacher?”

“They were kids, Myron, just like Harry.”

“They weren’t being abused!”

“Harry didn’t tell them that he was being abused!” Richard refuted, trying to get it into his Husband’s thick skull. “He told them that his cousin did all the damage; he said it was just a sort of sibling rivalry, that they fought, but because his cousin was bigger and heavier, Harry lost most of the time. He told them that the photos were just so he could see the back of his body, nothing more. They never understood or realised what was happening.”

“Max said that the girl had no knowledge of the abuse.”

“In a way she didn’t. Children don’t see a scar or a mark and automatically think child abuse like an adult might, they would have believed sibling fighting and accidents over an adult striking him, children don’t understand, not even book smart children like Hermione. Harry said she still has no idea what’s happening with his family. That’ll change though this summer, when she goes home, the press is going to be all over this. A well off, suburban, Surrey family all arrested and facing court over child abuse and neglect? It’ll be like a human swarm.”

“Harry is our priority.” Myron said strongly. “We protect him first and foremost.”

“Obviously.” Richard said, rolling his eyes as he shifted on Myron’s lap. “I just want to make everything better for him, My. I can’t stand to see him suffer so much. It hurts me, it hurt so badly to see his face as he was speaking, to watch the painful emotions twist over his face, to see him hurting and so uncomfortable in speaking about these things, I’d take it from him if I could.”

Myron held him tighter, closer at that and Richard sighed, letting his body relax against that larger chest. Myron may not have been the spry, young twenty-one year old that had first caught his eye in those meetings, but for a man in his fifties, he wasn’t bad at all.
Many men by now, even Drakens, had gotten comfortable and lazy, eating too much and not doing enough exercise, but Myron took everything in moderation and he took being the family’s protector seriously, very seriously.

He was a bit softer than he had been back then, but Richard didn’t mind in the least. Myron was still fit and healthy, still able to chase the kids down if needed, still able to climb a tree after an errant niece or nephew at family get togethers, he was still strong enough to make him feel safe and secure when he was wrapped in those large arms, even more so in those impenetrable wings, and he was definitely still able to fuck him into a babbling mess. What more did he need from his dominant mate and Husband?

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------

The last week before the exams hit was the worst week of Harry’s life. Every single little thing annoyed and frustrated him; the teachers had given up on setting homework for the seventh years after the first round of hysterics and breakdowns, expertly dealt with by Madam Pomfrey, and instead gave them revision work, which was just as hard and challenging, just as annoying and frustrating as the homework, but at least they didn’t have to hand it in at the end or face detention if they didn’t actually do it.

Hermione was just as possessed as Blaise, and Draco wasn’t any better than them and the three of them were driving him mad. He understood the need for a good job and that his mates were being driven by instincts as well as their competitive streaks and their need to prove themselves as the best, but this was too much, never before had he had the urge to just smother them in their sleep and he didn’t like the urge.

Calix finally cut his first tooth, followed by Tegan’s second tooth, Braiden cut two more and the three of them were so unhappy and pained that it took most of Harry’s attention, despite Nasta trying to get him to revise as much as possible as he tried to deal with three miserable, grizzling, teething kids.

“Harry, go and do your revision worksheets.” Nasta told him firmly for the seventh time in an hour.

“Calix is…”

“I don’t care. Go and revise, now.”

Harry could do nothing but listen to his top dominant, but he made his feelings very, very clear by glaring at Nasta, trying to burn a hole through his head, as he left the bedroom. Nasta sighed wearily and picked Calix up, who was trying to relieve the pain in his gums by chewing on his foot and toes, one little sock clenched in one hand balled up in pain, his cheeks flushed a dark red like he had been smacked on each cheek.
Nasta scratched at the irritating scruff on his chin, the hairs itching as they grew back in and he sat on the purple settee with Calix in his arms, trying to sooth him. He’d only just managed to settle his only daughter down and now his little son was off and he’d bet that as soon as he calmed Calix down, Braiden would start again. It was endless.

He hated ordering any of the others around, particularly Harry, the subordinate dominants needed a bit of ordering around and keeping in line and reminding that he was the top dominant and not them, but with Harry it just felt wrong and it made him feel terrible. Harry was mostly amicable and passive when he chose to be, even with his temper he was more mature than most, so ordering him to be even more so felt like abuse in whatever small way, or maybe he only felt that way because the court case that was taking up half of Harry’s mind these days was looming ever closer. Either way, he hated it, but sometimes it was necessary, Harry needed to keep up with his revision work. It was important, Harry needed to graduate and even if a crisis hit them, he needed to do that revision, so they had three teething babies, it could wait, he could handle it. He’d have to handle it.

Applying more of the seemingly useless teething gel to Calix’s gums, particularly around the little spot of white that was the emerging tooth, Nasta rocked him as he sniffled, a little hand clenching so tight around the sock Nasta would have been worried about his tiny nails breaking the skin had it not been there. To think that Calix was so agitated and pained that he would squeeze his hand so tightly as to break the skin on his palm had his arm muscles bulging with the effort it took not to hug delicate Calix half to death.

“It’s alright, Calix; it’s just a tooth, Baban, calm down.” He soothed softly, even knowing that it wasn’t going to work, knowing that to Calix it wasn’t ‘just a tooth’ and that for the child in his arms that tooth was a red hot agony.

His premonition had been wrong though; he hadn’t even finished soothing Calix before Braiden was blinking open indigo eyes, a wail caught in his throat as he sniffled.

Nasta scooped him up too and held them in either arm. He just hoped that Tegan didn’t wake up now as well, or any other baby for that matter, because he would loath to call Harry in here to help him after ordering him away. He cursed Max, who had chosen today of all days to go and confront his Mother with his brother and three sisters.

“It’s all right boys, it’s okay. Daddy is here, I’ll look after you.” He soothed, but of course that wasn’t enough, something had to go wrong and it did as he heard sudden shouting from next door.

He didn’t want to, but he had to put the two boys down and go and see what his subordinates and submissive were doing, he hated leaving his sons though, as they started screaming as soon as he put them down and stopped soothing them.

Nasta was not impressed to find Draco and Blaise shouting at one another, Harry looking tearful between them, a hand up to both of their chests to hold them apart. He could well imagine that this is how the other fight had started, the one where Blaise had ended up with a broken arm and Harry with two broken fingers. He stormed to them and ripped them apart violently, holding back the urge to throw them into opposite walls.
“What is the matter with you both?!” He hissed. “Do you hear that crying? That’s the sound of Calix and Braiden screaming in agony because I had to leave them to come and see to you two because you can’t act like adults for two fucking minutes!”

None of them said anything, Nasta rarely swore and he rarely looked so angry and when his fangs popped out of his gum line, that is when they knew that they had crossed a line.

“Harry, go and boil the kettle please.” He said as calmly as he could, trying to suppress the hint of a growl in his voice, it wasn’t Harry that he was angry at and he wanted to show that in whatever small way that he could in this situation, Harry hadn’t been involved as far as he could tell.

He shoved both of his subordinates onto their knees and twisted a hand into their hair at the back of their heads and yanked it until they were looking up at him with gritted teeth.

“You will tell me what set you off this time and I swear to Merlin, if it’s not a good enough reason I’ll force you into separate rooms to study.”

Neither of them answered and he was going to put some weight of an order into the question when Harry answered from where he was setting up bottles.

“They were questioning one another and Blaise didn’t believe that he’d gotten an answer wrong and accused Draco of misleading him so that he would get a better score in the exams.” Harry said softly.

Nasta couldn’t believe that that was what this was all about and he snarled, yanking their hair further aside and he sunk his fangs first into Draco and bit down, before biting into Blaise and remaining there. As the instigator of the argument, Blaise needed a harsher punishment.

Nasta left the wounds bleeding for five minutes as he lectured them on how to behave, how to react and exactly what not to do in their rooms, around their submissive with their children present before he licked at Draco’s wounds, bit into his own arm and let Draco drink. He left Blaise’s wounds bleeding for a further five minutes before letting him drink his blood to heal himself and he let go of them and walked back into the bedroom to help Harry with the feedings. He couldn’t take much more of this behaviour, he couldn’t wait until the exams were over and done with and they were out of this damned, cursed school.

This had been the worst week, no, the worst month that he had ever had to live through, it was no wonder the number of older dominants killing younger dominants was so high, if those younger dominants were still in school then he completely understood now why they did what they did. These subordinates were driving him insane, but he was strong enough to not kill them for such things, he loved them far too much, but they were seriously trying his patience.

The exams hit them with the force of gravity, tugging them down, flat to the ground and pinning them in place as exhaustion covered them like a familiar blanket that held no warmth or comfort.

Harry, Draco and Blaise were all frustrated and agitated, Max and Nasta were tired, grouchy and short tempered. Leolin had developed colic, Calix’s tooth had come through only to give way to severe nappy rash, Braiden and Tegan had calmed down, but Farren cut all four front teeth together and that alone was worse than anything else they could have faced.

Max hoisted Regan over his shoulder as the little boy giggled and squirmed, the only child who was being well behaved and was actually happy at the moment.

Max put him down on the carpet in a mass of toys and the little boy squealed in delight, doing his little worm wriggling act to reach the nearest one. He was hopeful that any day now that he would start moving properly, the brand new camcorder that Harry had begged for was on standby on the side table, ready to be picked up and used the moment that a baby did so much as squirm differently.

Nasta came in with a grouchy Farren and a crying Leolin and Max held his arms out for the Faerie baby, putting him over his knees and rubbing his little tummy with just two fingers, following the line of the large intestine to help relieve the tiny little boy of his discomfort and pain while Nasta took a frozen teething ring out of the cold storage and handed it to Farren to gnaw on.

“How is he?” Max asked, not stopping his massage of Leolin’s belly.

“Miserable.” Nasta answered tiredly. “Why did he have to cut four teeth at the same time?”

“He’s awkward.” Max smiled, even if it was tired and weak.

Nasta snorted as he came and collapsed next to Max with a teary Farren clenching his jaws tight around the frozen ring, whining around it, grizzling even as the cold soothed his inflamed gums and the clenching eased the pain of his emerging teeth.

“Just three more hours and our boys will be home.” Max sighed. “They’re on break at the moment.”

Nasta nodded. “Hopefully cramming in some last minute revision.”
“I’m surprised that Harry isn’t here.”

“I told him not to come, I told him to get something to eat and to revise while he could.”

“I’m still surprised that he isn’t here.” Max chuckled.

Nasta chuckled himself as he bounced Farren as he chewed on his warming and softening teether. Nasta had had the smarts and the foresight to put a new one into the cold cupboard ready for when this one lost its hard and cold effects.

“The children are our responsibility at the moment, Max, leave the boys to their exams, we have to try and stop them worrying about anything else.”

“Easier said than done with Harry, the kids are always on his mind, always his first priority, as it should be really, but he actually told me yesterday that he’d rather flunk school to stay here with the kids. I told him not to be so stupid and urged him onto his revision, but I swear he was serious. He would seriously risk not graduating just to be here.”

Nasta sighed. “I know, he said something similar earlier in the year to me, but I won’t let him fail his magical education. He’s in his exams right now, so we can be thankful that even if he feels like he’d rather be here, he’s actually going to graduate.”

“If he passes his exams that is.” Max pointed out. “He’s been writing down anything for his homework for the last month just to get it over and done with, who’s to say he’s not doing the same with his exams?”

Nasta shook his head. “No. He knows how important these exams are and he doesn’t want to repeat his seventh year, he’s going to pass. I told him to do his best. He’s not completely thick, I’m sure he’ll be fine.”

Max laughed at that. “Not completely thick.” He quoted back with a grin.

“You know what I meant.” Nasta waved off, though they were both grinning.
“Oh, only nine more days of this and then these exams are all over and our lives can really begin.”

“You need to go back to your home before we need to go there, the dust needs to be gone, the house needs to be aired out and those cots need to be set up.”

Max nodded his understanding and then grimaced as Leolin filled a nappy with a small sound of wind passing.

“Poor little boy, I hope you feel better for that now.” Max said as he slipped carefully to the floor and slipped a changing mat out from under the settee, pulling the nappy bag over and set to changing Leolin, who did actually seem better than he had before or at least not as pained.

“Watch Regan, he’s wiggling too close to the table.” Nasta warned.

Max stopped in mid change and hoisted Regan back from the table one handed and placed him back into the mess of soft toys before finishing off changing Leolin and sighing when he was done.

He settled the little Faerie baby onto his special beanbag before going to dispose of the nappy, washing his hands and then boiling the kettle.

“Do you want tea, Nas, or a smoothie?”

“Smoothie please.” Nasta replied as he tried to keep Farren happy, even as his blue-green eyes teared up again.

Max pulled the jug of the freshly made smoothie from the cold cupboard. Nasta made an entire jug fresh every morning and this one was mainly kiwi and apple, with a bit of pineapple and some lime juice squeezed into it, so it was a lumpy, dull green and very thick. Max wouldn’t have drunk it purely for that reason alone.

Regardless of his preference Max poured a glass of the thick, green smoothie and put the jug back into the cold cupboard, taking the glass over and handing it to Nasta, kissing his oldest son as he did so, kissing away the silent tears.

“Don’t cry, sweetheart. You have your Daddies here, that should be more than enough for you to be happy; nasty Mummy is away doing mean exams as punishment for being no fun.”
Nasta snorted. “Harry will eat you alive if he hears you saying that to any of them.”

“Muma?” Farren looked around and blinked his sea coloured eyes as he didn’t immediately see Harry. He started crying in earnest when Harry didn’t magically appear to his call and he called out several times again, crying harder. “Muma!”

Max groaned and took Farren from Nasta and hefted him over one large shoulder.

“Come on, buddy. No crying or you’ll have to have a spoon of castor oil.”

Coincidentally this made Farren cry harder, without knowing what castor oil was, which amused Max, but made Nasta’s scowl deepen.

“Don’t punish him with food or Harry really will kill you.”

“Castor oil isn’t food; it’s more like engine oil.” Max refuted.

“It’s edible and it’s administered orally, I doubt Harry will care how it tastes once he hears.”

Max rolled his eyes but dutifully didn’t mention it again as he shushed Farren and got him a new teether out of the cold cupboard to bite on.

“Is he still not better?” Draco asked, coming in and slipping his shoes and tie off immediately. He looked drained and exhausted, his pale face pinched with lack of sleep, stress and overwork.

Max shook his head as he walked around the room with Farren, who was crying on his shoulder and around the frozen teether he was gumming furiously between grizzlies.

Draco collapsed onto the settee with a groan and when Nasta pulled him into his body and let him rest against his chest, Draco didn’t complain or kick up a fuss, which made Nasta grin to Max, who rolled his eyes yet again.

“How did the exam go?” Nasta hedged cautiously, aware that if Draco didn’t think that he had done well, then he could throw a tantrum, not as bad as Blaise would if he thought he hadn’t done well, but still bad for a seventeen year old man.

“Alright I believe, but no one really knows.” He said, but he took his question paper from his pocket and scoured it critically. “There were a few questions that I had to embellish with an educated guess, but other than that, I’d say I got an EE at the least, if not an O.”

“The practical?”

“Perfect.” Draco said with a cocky smirk. “Nothing less than I expected, my wand work is nearly always flawless and Transfiguration is one of my better subjects.”

“Did you see Harry or Blaise?”

Draco nodded. “Harry was antsy, like he just wanted to get up and leave and Blaise is shitting himself.”

Max groaned. “He seriously needs to calm himself down or he’s going to have a stroke.”

“It probably doesn’t help that he is the very last person to be called up.” Nasta sighed. “I offered for him to be Delricey-Zabini for the two exam weeks, so he’d go sooner, but he saw it as a weakness and declined.”

“He’ll be fine.” Max said as he carried on pacing with Farren. “As soon as he’s out of that exam, he’ll be fine.”

“Unless he thinks he’s done poorly.” Draco voiced the main problem of the situation.

Nasta squeezed him and kissed his forehead. “Let’s not make problems where there may not be one.”

Harry dashed into the room like a whirlwind and all but threw his stuff away from him before biting out quick hello’s and scooping Regan up, turning him to pepper his little face with kisses.
“Did your exam go okay?” Nasta asked.

“I’ve only just escaped from there; please don’t make me talk about it so soon.” Harry groaned theatrically. “I want an hour, or seven, to reconnect with my babies.”

“You’ve only been gone for five hours.” Max laughed.

“It feels like so much longer.” Harry sighed as he shifted with Regan up to the beanbag Leolin was on, his eyes only half opened and observing everyone around him sluggishly.

“Muma!” Farren called out miserably from Max’s shoulder and Max handed him over with a sigh, partly relieved to be rid of him, which made him feel terrible, but also left him with a feeling of inadequacy that he couldn’t calm his own son like Harry could.

“Oh come here, big boy. How are those four little teeth coming?” Harry asked softly, but Farren gripped onto Harry and buried his head in Harry’s robes and cried onto him.

“He’s been in pain all day.” Nasta sighed. “He’s gone through three teethers and that gel is useless.”

“Oh sweetheart, come here to Mummy.” Harry said as he let Regan go when he wiggled to go back to his toys and he cuddled his second oldest child tightly, letting Farren clutch at and cry on him.

It took just five minutes of Harry soothing and calming him for Farren to fall asleep in his arms and Harry held the five month old gently as he hummed under his breath, his other hand brushing the darkening hair from Leolin’s closed eyes. He was certain now that the thin, pale, almost colourless hair that he had been born with would eventually turn black.

Harry smiled as he groomed Leolin’s hair and hummed to Farren clutched on his chest. A flash had him turning a glare onto Nasta, who held his hands up with a grin.

“It was too adorable to pass up, it’ll be one for the albums though.” Nasta defended.

Harry rolled his eyes, but he stood up carefully and went to go and put Farren into his cot, hoping that he would sleep for a long while as his teeth grew in.

A look in at Tegan and Calix had Harry snatching up his remaining son and storming into the living “Will the idiot who left Calix in his cot without supervision please go and clean up the mess he has made before I strangle you.” He growled, his Dracken pulling to the forefront of his mind.

Harry pulled the changing mat out from under the settee and dragged out a pack of baby wipes to try and clean Calix up a bit before bathing him. He wondered who’s bright idea it really was to leave Calix alone in his cot with no nappy on as Nasta rushed to go and clean the mess that had been made. Harry was just thankful that there was no mess on Calix’s hands, he would have killed one of them had he touched anything or put it in his mouth. It didn’t stop him from using a wipe on his hands and every single dainty digit though.

“One of you go and run him a bath please.” Harry said, calming down a bit. No one knew that this was going to happen, but it was a huge oversight to leave a five month old bare and in a cot with no supervision. It had been a mistake, but hopefully they could learn from this and have it never happen again.

“I thought it would help his nappy rash to sleep with nothing on.” Max admitted softly.

Harry sighed. “It has helped.” He said as he touched the rash, which was fading. “But finding him sitting in his own filth is playing on my mind a little. Give me a minute.”

“He’s going to be fine as soon as Daddy Draco gives him a good, long scrub in the big bath.” Draco said as he came and picked Calix up from the mat, kissing a cheek and carrying him off to the bathroom.

“Braiden’s awake.” Nasta said as he bought the cot sheets and linens out to be washed. “Max, go and buy a new mattress please, that one won’t come clean, not even with spells.”

Max nodded and went to get the old one to get rid of it and he went to buy a new one. They really did not need this stress on top of everything else. This was the wrong week for something like this to happen.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------

Of course things only got worse in the second week of the exams, when everyone’s stress was already sky high, by the arrival of an owl the morning of the Charms theory exam and the Defence Against the Dark Arts theory and practical exams. An owl bearing a letter from one Remus Lupin.

“Seriously?” Blaise exploded over breakfast. “We hear nothing for weeks and he chooses now, now of all times, to answer?!”

“Calm down, Blaise.” Nasta soothed, trying to keep his subordinate in line and to calm him down, this level of stress was not good for anyone and the babies were picking up on it, they had been quiet all morning.

Nasta hid his own anger underneath a tightly gripped steel mask. His anger mattered to no one; it would help nothing, so he wouldn’t show it. He needed to think more for Harry right now, who had gone bone pale.

“Harry, we don’t have to open this now.” Nasta said carefully. “We can leave it until after the exams.”

Harry just shook his head. “I’ll never be able to concentrate on them if I don’t read it.”

“It’s going to ruin your concentration either way.” Max growled as he spooned itty bitty lumpy porridge into Braiden’s waiting mouth.

Harry frowned and conceded to that silently as he took the letter from Nasta and opened it, glowering at Draco, who was trying to look over his shoulder.

Harry ignored that his hands were shaking as he took the parchment from the envelope and he read it with his heart in his throat. His one hand clenched in the parchment and his heart felt like it was going to beat out of his chest.

“What did he say?” Blaise asked as the silence stretched on.

“He’s blaming me.” Harry answered softly, feeling disconnected from everything, his head was staticky and the roaring between his ears deafened him.

“He’s what?” Draco demanded as he snatched the letter from him and read it through quickly. “I can’t believe that man, who the fuck does he think he is?!”
“It’s fine, Draco.” Harry said defeatedly.

“Fine? This is not fine! Look at what he wrote!” Draco burst out, handing the letter to Nasta, who was holding his anger back by the skin of his teeth.

After he read it, he didn’t think he could be any more controlled than he already was and he was quivering in his skin, his anger trying to force the change into his Dracken side.

“I’m going to throttle him.” He hissed, his voice mottled and distorted with the bass growl of his Dracken.

“He doesn’t outright say it’s my fault.” Harry tried to defend weakly.

“No, but the way he’s worded it makes you think that it’s your fault, you said it yourself. He’s blaming you!”

“I can’t think of this right now.” Harry said. “If he wants to blame me, then fine, let him. I’ll sort it out after the exams, but right now, I have to focus on my Charms exam.”

“Harry.” Blaise tried softly.

Harry shook his head. “No. He’s made his feelings very clear, I’ll sort it out after school’s ended, but until then, I don’t want to hear any more about it.”

Harry picked up Regan and cuddled him, but despite his own request of no one talking about it, he couldn’t get the letter from his mind. Nasta was right, even though Remus hadn’t outright said that it was his fault, the way the letter was worded made Harry automatically think that it was his fault. He didn’t know if that was purposeful or accidental, but he would find out. Remus was his last link to his parents and to Sirius, he had come to care for the werewolf and no matter what the man thought or did, Harry wouldn’t give up that link or stop caring for him so easily.

The letter played on his mind all day and during his theory Charms exam he had caught his mind wandering several times to Remus and the letter, resulting in him barely finishing the paper before the time limit was up. During the break he tried to eat a bit, tried to forget the letter, but he couldn’t and Draco and Blaise bickering beside him didn’t help, but he reached his limit when Hermione joined them, bickering over questions they had already answered and had no hope of changing. Did it really matter how long all of their answers were? Did it matter if they had forgotten to mention something? The exam was over; there was nothing else they could do about it even if they had forgotten the most crucial part of the answer!

He got up and left. He didn’t even think they had noticed him leave, he didn’t care. He went outside into the grounds for some air, enjoying the peace and the sun on his skin and he found his legs automatically taking him to Hagrid’s hut.

On the off chance that he might be there, Harry knocked on the door. Fang started barking inside, loud and deep, from the other side of the door.

“Ge’ back you dozy dog.” Hagrid said before he yanked open the front door. “’Arry! Good te see yeh, come in, come in.”

Harry couldn’t help but smile as he entered the familiar and comforting hut and sat in one of the huge chairs that absolutely drowned him, it would have drowned Max and Myron too which said a lot as they were the tallest people that Harry knew outside of Hagrid, who was a half giant. He scratched Fang behind the ear happily as the boarhound came and put his huge head in his lap. It took him way back to his younger school years, when things were simpler, when he didn’t have a family and severely elevated blood pressure, he still wouldn’t change anything though, except perhaps fast forwarding the exams.

“How have you been, Hagrid?” Harry asked as the half giant rushed around setting up tea and a plate of rock cakes that Harry wasn’t going to touch.

“Great, Harry! Do yeh have time to come an’ see what I got for my next class?”

“I have my Defence exam soon, Hagrid, but maybe once they’re over?”

“Course.” Hagrid said with a grin and Harry was reminded harshly why he had gotten on so well with Hagrid in the first place. The man was just too friendly and jovial to think anything bad around him. “I’ve bin meaning to ask yeh, how are those kids o’ yours?”

“They’re great, Hagrid, they really are, I could talk for days to you about them and not get tired of it.” Harry said with a grin. “Once the exams are over I’ll bring them to meet you, but no baby dragons. Or Blast-ended Skrewts.”

Hagrid waved a large hand at him. “Course not, that’s for when they’re a bit older. You are still sending them to Hogwarts aye?”
Harry nodded happily, ignoring the slight hint of panic that thinking of his children going to school brought up, but he shook it off, it wouldn’t be for over ten years yet. He had time.

“Leolin won’t be. As a Faerie he’ll have private tutors from the Faerie city, but my other five will.”

“I still can’t believe you ‘ad a Faerie folk.”

Harry smiled. “Believe me, Hagrid, everyone is surprised. The Faerie court in particular. They send at least two letters a week now asking to meet him, but Nasta and I have made up our minds, we won’t take him until after we’ve graduated and left the school, we don’t have the time to be messing about.”

“Good on yeh, those blasted, demanding Faeries should be the least of yeh worries!”

Harry laughed at that and nodded. “Yeah, they should be, but as I said, they’re sending us letters every other day now so we can’t really forget about them, they really want to see Leolin. I think it’s because they want to verify that he is actually a Faerie, but Aneirin told Nasta, who then told me, that some of the Court wanted Leolin for themselves. If that’s what this is about then they’ll have to pry him from my dead body because I’d kill myself before I sacrificed him to those stuck up Faeries. He’s my child and they can’t have him.”

“How dare they!” Hagrid roared in outrage on his behalf and Harry felt so much better that Hagrid was so loyal to their friendship. If only he could keep his mouth shut when he was drunk maybe he would feel more comfortable telling Hagrid about his species status.

“I just wish that the Faeries were the only thing that I had to worry about.” Harry sighed, the letter popping back into his mind with all the talk of the letters from the Faerie Court.

“What do yeh mean, ‘Arry?”

“It’s Remus, he’s just…I don’t know, but I haven’t heard from him in months, then out of the blue he tells me he’s moved house, married Tonks and had a baby. I owled him back asking him why he didn’t tell me sooner and the letter I got back this morning just avoided it completely and made me feel like it was my fault.”
“He did not!” Hagrid said.

Harry nodded. “So my head’s all over the place now and I can’t really think about much else, which is bad timing really with the exams.”

“Remus always ‘ad problems with self-confidence, even as a lad, though he got better with his band of mischief makers, but after they died, he only got worse.” Hagrid snorted. “It’s no excuse, but maybe he just didn’t think you’d be interested in his life.”

Harry thought about that and rubbed his head. “Maybe, I’ll have to talk to him and find out, but with the exams, it’ll have to wait until after graduation.”

Harry said goodbye when the start of the exams approached, he would already have to reassure Draco and Blaise that he was fine and explain where he had been and why he had left them without saying anything, but he didn’t care, he couldn’t stop thinking about what Hagrid had said. Even after everything that they had been through, would Remus still think himself so unimportant to him that he wouldn’t want to bother him with what he was doing with his life?

He needed to get to the bottom of this, he and Remus needed to sit down and talk this out honestly, otherwise he was going to lose his only remaining link to his parents, his second mentor after Dumbledore, one of his best friends, one of his only confidents, a sort of Uncle to him, a real Uncle unlike Vernon, and it hurt to think about breaking ties with him, he couldn’t bear the thought of losing Remus too. Something had to be done and soon.

Chapter End Notes

A/N: Okay, to everyone out there who is calling me all the names under the sun for ‘finishing the story so suddenly and leaving so many threads untied’ you obviously didn’t read what I wrote properly. I said we are coming to the end, not that I’m ending it immediately. There are still twenty or so chapters left, though this is subject to change because I can’t see into the future.

To everyone who is demanding Draco have a child right this minute, just stop, you’re being ridiculous. It’s a complete lottery as to who Father’s the children, I was never in a million years going to give them all a child in alphabetical order and then keep cycling around them in order. You’ll have to wait and if it takes him twenty years to have a biological child, that’s how long it’ll take, it’s not going to come around any sooner the more you whinge about it, so just stop.
Florence: The main fic will never catch up to the Scaled Bits future chapters because I’m not taking the main fic that far, so there’s no point stopping yourself from reading them because it’s not actually a spoiler for anything.

I hope you have all enjoyed reading; next fic will probably be their graduation,

Chapter Seventy-Six – Freedom

The end of the exams for the majority of the student body was celebrated so vivaciously that even the teachers were laughing. Harry rushed to find Draco and Blaise in the crowd of celebrating seventh years, most of whom had just finished their last exam of the year, History of Magic.

Harry found Blaise first and he threw himself into his lover’s arms, hugging him and laughing. Blaise yanked him up fully and Harry wrapped arms and legs around him, holding on tight as Blaise kissed his neck. Blaise had always had a thing for his neck.

“I can’t believe it’s over.” Harry said into Blaise’s shoulder. “It’s completely over!”

“We’re free.” Blaise chuckled.

“Thank Merlin for that.” Draco’s voice came from behind them and Harry turned to latch onto him, hugging him just as tight.
“Let’s go back to our rooms and share the love.” Harry grinned.

“If you want to share the love then we have to rope someone in to babysit.” Blaise said with a grin and an eyebrow wiggle.

Harry laughed as the Hall started dispersing and they followed the crowd. They met Max in the Entrance Hall, he was very easy to spot being head, shoulders and half of his chest taller than everyone else, and Harry hugged him tightly.

“Why are you down here?” Harry asked.

“It’s a gorgeous day and being in that room all the time is driving me and Nasta insane, so we packed up a picnic and took the kids out by the tree down by the lake for some fresh air. I left Nas and the kids there to claim our spot, we’ve been turfing away students for the past hour.”

Harry chuckled and they made their way out into the sun and down to the lake where Nasta was watching critically over five squirming babies and little Leolin, who looked incredibly disgruntled to be outside.

“Mama!” Braiden called out and started crawling towards him slowly, coming off the blanket and onto the grass.

Max stopped him from running to him. “Let him get stronger by at least crawling a bit, love. Walk to him and meet him halfway.”

There was a group of fourth and fifth year girls and they were cooing and giggling at Braiden as he made small noises as he crawled slow inches across the grass.

Harry hunched down in front of him and let Braiden come to him, let him pull himself up using his leg, holding his hands up, still making his small noises. Harry chuckled and picked him up, kissing him gently and carrying him back to the blanket.

He kissed Nasta passionately, ignoring the screeches from the girls sitting by a crop of rocks opposite them and their shady tree. Some people could be so immature.

“Have they got their sun cream on?” Harry asked.
Nasta just gave him a look and smirked. “Of course they do, I’d hardly forget that.”

“Oh yeah, that’s right. Sanex forgot your sun cream didn’t he and you got your little mole.”

Nasta rolled his eyes. “Yes, but really both of us were to blame, I should have remembered too.”

“But you were only…how old were you?” Harry asked.

“Eight.”

“Oh then there’s no excuse, you should have remembered.” Harry said.

Nasta grabbed him and pulled him into his lap and tickled him as Harry wriggled and tried to fight him off as he laughed hysterically and uncontrollably.

Nasta stopped tickling him, kissed him and then let him go. They were all smiling. It felt like a huge weight had been pulled off of their backs and it felt good. Really good.

They spent a good few hours down by the lake, letting their children feel the texture of the grass, stopping Farren from eating fistfuls that he had ripped up and even taking them to splash the water down by the lake. They headed back to their rooms carrying a worn out group of babies a few hours later.

“I can’t believe that Braiden will be a year old in just two months.” Blaise shook his head as he cradled his son lovingly.

“I don’t want to think about it.” Harry pulled a face.

“We have to plan his party though.” Blaise said with a frown. “Who we’re going to invite, what to serve…”

“He’s going to be a year old.” Harry interrupted. “He’s not going to be eating canapés and inviting all of his friends around.”

Blaise sighed wearily, but he gave up; recognising that Harry wasn’t in the mood to talk about it just yet and he really didn’t want to ruin the good mood the ending of their exams had put them in.

They had next to nothing to do when they got back to their rooms, Nasta and Max had kept everything tidy, there was nothing school related to do except wait for the graduation ceremony, the babies were all sleeping due to their tiring afternoon outside and the absence of the stress was so sudden it left Harry feeling light headed.

“This…this is boring.” He laughed as he turned from his place on the settee to look at his lovers, all spread throughout the room.

“Don’t knock a bit of peace and quiet.” Nasta cautioned him. “Remember this time yesterday?”

Harry grimaced. “I’d rather not.” He answered as he thought back to the revision cramming he had been doing for History of Magic with Regan screaming in his ear.

Blaise had been yelling in French as he tried to break their coffee table by repeatedly hitting it with a book that looked more like a paving slab, and was about as heavy as one too, as Nasta shouted back at him in French, probably trying to calm him down, but Harry didn’t know as he didn’t speak French.

Draco had been just as angry as he threw a full bottle of ink at Blaise, yelling at him to shut the fuck up already, which had then turned Nasta on him as quick as a flash about his vile language in front of the babies, had Blaise shouting even louder in French as he tugged at the sleeve of his shirt which had black ink spattered all over it and had had Max shouting at him for the ink stain on the carpet.

Harry had wanted to kill all four of them as he had slammed his hands over his ears and shook his head to try and blot out the noise they were making. It had been a very high stressed environment and the change, just from yesterday to today, was incredible.

“I’m so glad it’s over, though I think I got the second part of question eighteen wrong.” Draco said, frowning slightly as he thought back.

“Please, please for all the love you hold for me, do not mention anything exam related.” Harry said seriously. “You can’t change it and thinking about it and discussing it only upsets and angers both you and Blaise to the point of shouting and screaming at one another and it gets on my nerves, so don’t. You couldn’t change it even if you had wanted too.”

“Harry’s right.” Nasta said. “Enjoy the freedom you have now and use it to relax and catch up on some sleep. There’s nothing to do now but enjoy the next month until your graduation in July.”
“That can’t come around quick enough, it really can’t.” Harry said seriously.

The next morning Max once again left the school to go and talk some sense into his Mother with the full backing of his brother and sisters, who knew and fully supported what he was going to say and do. Their first talk hadn’t done much, as it seemed their Mother didn’t take their threats to cut ties with her seriously. Today they were going to show her exactly how serious they were.

Max and Nasta had spent the majority of yesterday, while the younger three were in their final exams, meticulously copying Max’s official birth certificate, which they had requested from the Ministry archives. The copy was so good that Max had had to make absolutely sure that he had the right one when picking them up.

He was going to take his Mother’s name from his ‘official’ birth certificate and file it at the Ministry again, changing it, claiming himself Motherless. He had had the thought to originally change it to his other Dad Richard, putting him down as his official Mother, but he didn’t want to cause fights between his Dads and his Mother or cause any feelings of resentment. This should be enough on its own, to declare yourself legally Motherless was one of the most serious ways of severing ties completely with a family member, it should be enough to be the wakeup call that his Mother needed.

It was a very drastic move, a desperate one, but he wanted his Mother back…no, that wasn’t entirely right, she hadn’t left, she was still his Mother, still the woman who had carried, birthed and loved him throughout his life, but he wanted her to accept all of him, mates and children and all. He didn’t like knowing that she saw his submissive as a baby factory or his children as substitutes for his lost brother Theodric and all the children after that his Mother had been unable to have.

In fact, it grated on him, he hated it and if he hated it, his Dracken was worse. At the very least he wanted to know why. Why did she see Harry only as a way to get babies? Why did she see his children, her grandchildren, as her own? It wasn’t right and until she could answer those questions to a level that he expected, she would not be allowed near his family again.

Caesar had instilled the same rule, not that their Mother had gotten to see much of Eleonora in the first place, but with Harry continuously helping and supporting Amelle, with Caesar behind her one hundred percent, she was allowing more and more contact and she had recently gone up a level to unsupervised contact. She had taken the initiative herself and she had invited Myron and Richard over for the afternoon to babysit Eleonora while she and Caesar had gone for a simple meal for a few hours after a routine check-up scan of their new child. Everything was going fine according to Caesar’s last letter.

That she hadn’t been invited or involved in this, rather momentous milestone, had hurt Ashleigh terribly, but it was hammering home exactly the point that they wanted to make, the more she resisted, the more she was going to miss.

Apparating from Hogsmeade to his childhood home, Max grinned as he hugged his Dad tightly, letting himself be comforted for a moment by those huge, strong arms before he turned and lifted his other Dad right off his feet in a back breaking hug. His Dad hated that he was only six foot two to Max’s six foot eight; it meant that Max could just pick him up like a teddy bear and haul him around, despite being the younger and he’d been able to do it since his early teens.
“Put me down you oaf!” Richard cried out. “Myron, control your beast of a son.”

“Maximilius, you know your Dad doesn’t like you to pick him up.” Myron said deeply, despite the amusement in his black eyes.

“But it’s so fun and so easy; you want to put more weight on, Dad.” Max teased.

“You’re not too big to go over my knee!” Richard threatened.

Max laughed. “I think I am. You wouldn’t even be able to manoeuvre me over your knee anymore, let alone take the weight of me on it; actually my weight would probably pop your knees out of joint.”

“He might not be able to, but I can.” Myron answered, raising a single eyebrow. “One word from him and I won’t hesitate to take you over my knee.”

Max pouted. “You’re no fun, Dad!”

“On the contrary, I think he’s very fun.” Richard grinned as he went and kissed his husband’s cheek.

“Don’t I even get a hello, Maxie?”

Max turned to see his Mother sat at the table on the opposite end of the large living room. She was pouring over several photo albums that he recognised as being from his and his siblings childhood.

“Hello, Ashleigh.” He answered stiffly.

His Mother reared back like he had struck her hard, her blue eyes going wide and her mouth going soft. Her hand went to her heart and pressed against it and she ducked her head away as her eyes filled with tears.

Max ached to rush her and wrap her in his arms and tell her that he was sorry and that he didn’t mean it, but he firmed himself, helped along by his Dracken gnashing its teeth at the thought of comforting the one who was hurting his submissive mate. This had to be done and he was the oldest, he couldn’t leave this painful job to his younger siblings. He had to lead them by example.

“Maximilius, no matter your feelings on the matter, she is still your Mother and you will give her the respect that entitles.” Myron growled, his huge hands clenched into fists at the sight of his submissive mate hurt and in tears. He tried to stay calm and remind himself that this was his child, but his Dracken didn’t care, he saw a dominant male upsetting his submissive and nothing more.

“She’s not going to be for much longer, that’s why I’m here.”

“What do you mean?” His Mother asked from the table, standing up quickly. “I’ll always be your Mum, Max. I love you, I always will!”

“It’s a shame then that I can’t say the same.” Max answered coldly as he took his birth certificate out of his inside pocket.

“Is that...?” Richard began.

“It’s my official birth certificate; I took it from the Ministry’s records yesterday.”

“For what purpose?” Myron asked softly, already having an idea of why from what Max had said before and he hoped desperately that he was wrong. Surely things hadn’t gotten as bad as that?

Max swallowed and he unfolded it. It wasn’t his real birth certificate, but the symbolism was real and to his parents, all three of them, it was all very real as they didn’t know that this document was faked.

“To do what I’ve been threatening to do since all of this started. You didn’t believe that I’d cut my ties to you, but for Harry, for my family, I’d do anything, even render myself officially Motherless.”

“You can’t!” Ashleigh cried out and she flew at him, slipping her arms around his chest and clutching at him, fisting his shirt in her hands.

“I’m sorry that it came to this, but I can’t have you hurting Harry or my children. I told you last week that I’d cut ties with you and you all but laughed in my face. You still haven’t apologised to Harry, you haven’t tried to make amends, so I no longer want you in my life. Harry means the world to me and if you can’t even try to get better for my happiness, then I don’t see the point in you being in my life. My family is what is important in all of this, Harry and the kids, Nasta, Blaise and Draco too. They are my family now and you’re continuing to hurt them and I can no longer stand for it.”

“Max, can we talk about this?” Richard said desperately. “Talk it through together, all of us?”

Max shook his head as he took out an ink eraser from his pocket. His Mother actually screamed as he took it out, acting more like it was a knife or a wand than a simple tool to erase even the most permanent of inks.

“I have been talking this through and it’s gotten us nowhere, I’m done talking. Talking isn’t working and the longer this goes on, the more it affects my family and I can’t allow that to continue.”

“Have you thought this through, Maximilius?” Myron asked seriously.

“This isn’t being done on a whim, Dad. I’ve been thinking on it for at least a few months now, I’ve been clinging to the hope that she’ll change her mind, that she’ll seek help, but she hasn’t, so now this is the end. I don’t know what else I can do, I’ve tried my all and it just hasn’t worked.”

“So you’re giving up?”

Max nodded his head simply. “I can’t keep putting so much thought and energy into this, my family needs me. I can’t keep putting them second best just because she wants to continue acting like a stubborn, spoilt brat. The stress of the exams has made me realise what’s really important and though you may not like it, you have to respect me for that. My family come first, they always have and they always will, you taught me that yourselves. This is me putting my family first.” Max said seriously as he indicated the small, harmless seeming eraser.

“Please, Max, please don’t, please!” His Mother begged and Max’s knees threatened to go from under him as his Mother slid to the floor and huddled around his knees, sobbing.

He sat down on the settee and he used his quivering knee to rest his fake birth certificate on and he poised the eraser.

“No, please, please don’t, please! I love you, you’re my son! I can’t lose another son, please!” She Max firmed himself and he started rubbing on her name and signature, erasing it from his birth certificate, the symbolism of the act, even if the document was a fake, almost crushed his heart as his Mother sat and watched him do it, not once offering to seek help, not once offering to apologise to Harry. That alone told Max how far this had come, it made him realise that he should have addressed this sooner, or even noticed it sooner. He had not once realised before it was pointed out to him that his Mother didn’t care for Harry as a person or that she saw his children only as extensions of those that she couldn’t have herself.

When her name was completely gone, he felt tired and drained. Empty. He wanted a shoulder to cry on, but he was over four hundred miles from Nasta, Draco, Blaise and Harry and the distance felt crushing as he couldn’t break down here, he couldn’t undo everything that he had set out to do that morning. He couldn’t show any weakness or how much this was truly affecting him.

“How could you?” His Mother, Ashleigh, said quietly. “How could you have sat there and undid thirty-two years of love and care so easily? As if nothing mattered.”

“You don’t matter to me anymore.” He lied. “You stopped mattering to me as soon as you made Harry feel like nothing more than a machine to pop out more babies for you to fawn over. I stopped caring when you refused to get help, when you refused to even apologise to him…”

“I did apologise! I sent him an owl…”

“Don’t lie to me!” Max roared, standing up angrily. “I LIVE with him! Every single morning I hoped to see an owl from you, but you never once sent one! Every single morning I waited anxiously, collected the mail every single morning hoping that I could hand Harry a letter of apology from you, so I wouldn’t have to make sad excuses for its absence, so I wouldn’t feel the overwhelming shame of having you for a Mother! But that’s over now. I don’t need to worry any more as I am officially Motherless. I don’t have to care or worry about you any longer, I no longer have to make up lies to excuse your behaviour and I no longer have to feel ashamed of you, because you’re no longer anything to do with me or my family.”

“Is that truly how you felt?” Richard asked, feeling like someone had just punched a hole through his chest.

Max nodded jerkily. “Expect Caesar later, as soon as the time zones catch up, he’s planning on doing the same.”
“I…I’m going to lose all of my sons?” Ashleigh asked breathlessly.

“Open your eyes!” Max shouted at her. “You’re going to lose us all!”

“All of you are planning to do this?” Myron asked, shocked.

Max nodded again. “We’ve all been in constant contact for months, but after last week, that’s when it all went downhill and I shared my plans with them to take her off of my birth certificate. Caesar understood immediately and he has agreed to do the same. The girls took a bit more persuading, but they came around in the end. The girls want to wait and see what you do and how you react to this first, if you do nothing yet again by the end of this week, all of us will be Motherless. You’ll lose us all and to me, that’s just fine.”

His Mother slumped bonelessly onto the floor and hunched herself over. Her shoulders shook with her unsuppressed sobs and Max ached to go to her, to tell her than it wasn’t real, that they weren’t using their official birth certificates, but he took in a deep breath of air and reminded himself that this was all for her own good. She needed to realise that they were serious about this.

“You brought this on yourself.” He told her sternly. “There’s no use crying about it now that I’ve done it, now that I’ve made good on my promise. I told you last week that I was going to do it, it was your own fault that you didn’t believe me and didn’t heed our warnings, now you risk losing every child that you have ever had through your own selfishness and stubbornness!”

“Please, Max.” She crawled to him and held him around his knees. “Please, we can forget about this, just let me put my name back on your certificate, please.”

“Why? What purpose would it have? I’m not going to have you in my life whether your name is on it or not, but this way, at least I can tell people that I have no Mother, this way at least I can stop being so ashamed of you!”

He tucked the certificate back in his pocket and turned to his Dads’, both of whom looked very unsettled and deeply shocked.

“I hadn’t wanted to do this in front of you.” He lied smoothly. “I wanted to take her aside and do it privately, but what’s done is done. I want you to know that the love I have for you both has not been affected by today or by what she has done, you are still my Dads’ and you always will be, though I have to say that I’ve lost some respect for you both from this whole ordeal, but I will be seeing you again and my children will always call you both Granddad. Know too that you are always welcome at our home whenever you want to visit, Harry’s breeding cycle is half way through and I’d like for you both to be there for support when he nests, if he catches on this heat of course, but I want you to be there to greet the new additions to the family when they come.”

Max was silent, everyone was silent except for Ashleigh, who was nearly choking on her sobbed gasps on the floor, until Myron stepped forward and kissed his forehead, letting his lips linger on his son’s skin, feeling the short hair under the palm of his hand as he pulled Max’s head to his mouth before he pulled back slightly so that his breath whispered across Max’s forehead.

“I’m not happy about this, but you’ve done what you think is best and I respect the hell out of you for it. I can see how painful this was for you to do, even if you did try and hide it. I want you to know that I will sort this out, I’ll sort out my submissive and I hope that once that has been done, you’ll be open to changing the status of your birth certificate once again.”

Max nodded. “That’s all I want, Dad. I hate that it has come to this, but that’s what it comes down to, it has come down to this and until such a time where things change, this is my final decision.”

Myron nodded and broke apart from Max and clapped a huge hand on Max’s equally huge shoulder.

“I’ll do everything in my power to change this, I will not have my family broken apart by this, I will not risk losing all of my children over this, no…I won’t risk losing a single child over this. I love you all deeply and dearly, one way or another, I will sort this.”

Max smiled and rested against his Father for a moment, before he stood back. “I’ll see you later; I’ve got to get the certificate back to the Ministry today, but now that the exams are over, we have nothing to do but lounge around, so if you have a spare few hours, don’t hesitate to come visit us, you should see how much Farren has grown! He’s so much like me it’s amazing! Braiden’s almost ready to take his first steps, we think it’ll be any day now and Tegan is so hilarious, you have to come and spend an afternoon with them, they’ve changed so much and they miss their favourite Granddads, Aneirin and Lucius are sticklers, they need a couple of fun Granddads.”

Richard smiled wanly at that, but he was too upset to do much else, his throat was tightening to the point of pain and he was having difficulty breathing, how had it come to this? How had it become this bad? They had partially lost their baby Maximilius, how long would it take for him to completely sever ties with all of them because of Ashleigh? It had to end; he would not lose any of his precious babies for anyone, not even his own mates.

Max took his leave after Richard gave him an automatic hug, his mind a million miles away, he would sort this out, he shared a look with Myron and he saw the look in those black eyes that he loved. They’d sort it out together, they couldn’t lose their children.

Max chose to use the floo this time, he didn’t want to walk from Hogsmeade back to his rooms in the state that he was in, he walled himself up tight until he was in private, he held himself strong and tight. He went through the floo because he wanted to get back as soon as possible; he went through the floo because he needed to break down in the comforting arms of his beloved mates as soon as possible.

Harry laughed as he rolled around with Farren. Draco had gone to catch up with a few of his friends that had been neglected during the year thanks to the kids and the exams, though Draco snorted when Harry had worded it in such a way and told him that it was hardly neglect and that he had chosen to ignore them in favour of doing more important things. The blond had then called him an emotional Gryffindor and left, leaving Harry to watch him go, before laughing and going back to rocking with Leolin.

Blaise had gone for a lie down, the exams had taken a lot out of him and the stress he had been feeling took a little longer to disperse than Harry’s immediate relief. Nasta explained that it was because Blaise’s stress had gone deep down inside of him that it had rooted into his everyday emotions and he needed a little longer to recover from their effects.

Max had gone to see his parents once again, they all knew what he planned to do and Harry wasn’t exactly happy with it, but he accepted and supported Max in whatever decision he made concerning his Mother.

Nasta was finishing the last bout of paperwork he had received over a month ago now, leaving Harry to do what he had sorely missed doing during the two weeks of exams. Playing with his children.

Braiden was now crawling strongly, if not exactly straight as he tended to veer off to his right no matter what direction he was going in, Regan had gotten smoother at his wriggling and had learnt to use his legs more, Calix was pulling himself across the floor using only his arms, in short, slow jerks of movement, his legs folded together under him, which looked rather comical at times, Farren was still content to watch everything and not move all that much and Tegan was still demanding to have everything she wanted brought to her by pointing at it and screaming.

They had all changed and developed so much from the tiny, wrinkled newborns that had been less than a year ago, even Leolin, and he was so proud of them and now that school was over and done with he was about ready for another clutch, though he did hope he didn’t get pregnant again right after he gave birth like he had done with the quintuplets, he’d have to make sure no lecherous mates were near him on a hot day as he dismantled his nest. He grinned to himself and cackled as he rolled Farren over yet again, his second oldest child screeching with giggles.

It was nice to see that Farren wasn’t letting his erupting teeth bother him. He had grown in four together and now another two were popping in as Braiden cut yet another tooth too. Harry was almost glad that Leolin wouldn’t be teething for another few years and that Regan seemed wholly content with milk and the occasional bowl of fruit puree and his teeth had yet to show signs of coming in.
Harry sighed and sat Farren back in the cardboard box filled with soft toys. Every one of his children were in their own cardboard box filled with toys and they were having the time of their lives, safely and unable to crawl off and into danger, it was one of his better ideas, though naturally Leolin was on his beanbag and not in a box as he couldn’t sit up on his own yet.

“What are you thinking?” Nasta asked from the kitchen table.

“That this was one of my better ideas.” He grinned, indicating the boxes, before his smile slipped around the edges a bit. “I am worried for Max though. He’s doing an incredibly painful thing, even if it’s not actually real, it’s going to feel real to all of them.”

Nasta nodded. “I’m thinking the same thing. We need to be on hand to support him when he comes back, which is why I won’t go into work today, even though it was offered.”

“He’s going to be a wreck when he comes back isn’t he?” Harry said softly.

Nasta nodded. “Yes, he is, but it was his choice and his decision and we can hope that this is the wakeup call that Ashleigh needs to spur her into action.”

“You never know, miracles can happen.” Harry snorted. Nasta chuckled with him.

“We can hope, for Max’s sake if nothing else, that this is exactly what she needs to seek help or failing that, that it’s the wakeup call that Myron needs to order her to seek help, but as he pointed out, he can order her to do it, but that won’t make things any better, she has to want to get better in order to actually get better, so let’s just hope that her children rendering themselves Motherless will get her to pull her stubborn head from her arse.”

Harry laughed and nodded. “Yes, I want her to get better too, purely for Max’s sake. I loved her once, but after everything, it’s going to take a lot to get our relationship back to what it once was, if it ever will get back to that point, that is.”

“Harry!” Blaise’s voice hissed from the bedroom doorway and Harry almost snapped his neck to look over to him, only stop as he realised why he had been hissed at so urgently.

Braiden was using the settee that his box of toys was resting against to pull himself up to his feet. He was standing up for the first time and he seemed so incredibly pleased with himself as he showed no signs of moving or sitting back down from where he was stood, leaning heavily on the seat of the settee, looking at the room from his new perspective and new vantage point.

Nasta, concerned with the stunned silence from his two younger mates, came around the settee from the kitchenette to see what they were looking at and he grinned proudly.

“I was wondering how long it would be before he at least tried standing.” Nasta said proudly as he picked up the new camcorder and started recording Braiden standing. He had spent the week it had come reading all the instructions and manuals, Harry was more content to push each button to see what it did, no instructions needed. Nasta just shook his head at him and told him that he’d break it if he wasn’t careful.

“I can’t believe it.” Harry said, feeling himself get weepy, he shoved the urge aside viciously.

“Ten months old and standing, I’ve never felt more pride than this before.” Blaise said as he stood and watched.

“I can’t believe I could have missed it.” Harry said upset.

“It’s okay.” Nasta soothed. “We didn’t miss it and we’re watching him right now. He’s a bit bowlegged though, isn’t he?”

“Are babies supposed to be bowlegged?” Harry fretted. “Maybe we should take him to a paediatrician just in case.”

“Why don’t we ask someone first, before rushing him off to the hospital.” Blaise said calmly.

Nasta nodded. “Blaise is right, a Healer might not be needed, we should ask someone first, then if it’s needed we’ll get him checked out.”

“I’ll check in those baby development books we were given, there might be something about it in them.” Harry said.

When Braiden pushed off from the settee and sat down on his nappy covered bottom with a flump, clapping little hands together at his actions, Harry went and cuddled him, telling him how proud he was of him, Blaise at his shoulder, the both of them forgetting all about Nasta filming them as they kissed one another passionately, sharing a look of pride and love before turning back to Braiden and praising him some more, peppering his face with kisses as he giggled and babbled. Their little boy was standing and very soon he would be walking, their children were all growing at an alarming rate and as Braiden’s first year birthday approached, a stone of dread sunk into Harry’s stomach. He didn’t want his children growing up quite as fast as they were, he wanted them to slow down, he didn’t want them to not need him so soon.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Narcissa Malfoy sighed and shooed the house elf away. Severus had yet again declined to eat breakfast and she was very worried about him.

She smiled softly at the photo of all her grandchildren lined up on a settee and dressed up smartly. Draco had sent her a whole envelope full of photos, but the one with all of the children on the settee together, some of the little boys in waistcoats and bowties, the others in smart dress robes and her lone granddaughter Tegan in an absolutely wonderful white silk dress with pink accents, little tights, a beautiful little headband and lace had to be her favourite and she had framed it and put in right in the centre of the mantel piece in her favourite sitting room where she and her friends took tea on most afternoons.

Draco sent her letters almost twice weekly now updating her and Lucius on the development of the six children and she, as a Mother herself, could tell just from these letters that he loved them very much, despite none of them truly being his own, which Lucius pointed out at least once a week when she gushed over them. She made sure to reprimand him of such sayings and reminded him that Draco wouldn’t take kindly to him saying such things and her Husband would stop for all of a week before he said it again.

She could understand the need for a blood Heir to the Malfoy name, Lucius had been an only child and so had Draco, they were the last of the Malfoy name and it had to carry on through Draco or die out, a thought which made Lucius almost physically ill, but she reminded him that six children were more than enough to be getting on with for now and that Draco was sure to get a blood child at some point as Drackens never stopped breeding. They bred until they physically couldn’t any longer and in that time they could have a very large number of children to look after, which was going to be stressful enough and she made sure to remind Lucius that their Draco was young yet and she urged her Husband to give Draco until he was twenty-five, like their original contract with Astoria Greengrass had laid out. They had not expected to be young grandparents, indeed they had never expected their Draco to be a young Father, but he had been only sixteen when Harry had birthed Braiden and seventeen when he had birthed the other five. He was coming up to his eighteenth birthday now and young Harry had had an almost six month break from pregnancy now, that was very short after a multiple birth for a Dracken. From the books that Draco had given her, written by actual Drackens, Harry could go for as long as several years before his body repaired itself enough for another period of heat, but somehow, she didn’t know how, but she just had a gut feeling that Harry wouldn’t wait as long as ‘normal’ Drackens would to get pregnant once again. She hoped that the next pregnancy contained at least one of Draco’s blood children, but failing that she wanted another little girl, Tegan looked lonely in the photographs, the lone dress in a group of little suits and bowties.

She was oddly pleased about the idea of Harry getting pregnant again sooner than expected, not just for blood grandchildren, she honestly didn’t mind that Draco was calling her a grandmother to all six children, unlike Lucius, who didn’t refer to himself as a grandfather and probably wouldn’t until he was a ‘real’ grandfather. She was rather annoyed with her Husband for it, but there was only so much chastisement she could give out in a day without feeling like a Mother to her own Husband.

Picking up the photo in its polished silver frame, she took it to Severus’ room, up on the family wing so they could be close by, just in case. She wasn’t worried that Severus would outright take his own life, but she was worried that he would inadvertently take his own life, especially if he kept refusing food; this was the second day that he had gone without eating a thing. Lucius could usually goad him into eating something, but the past two days had been bad ones and they didn’t know how to break him from his daydreaming.

She knocked on his door purely to announce her presence, as Severus never gave or declined permission for them to enter. She opened the door and came in jovially, smiling, though he took no notice of her. At least he was out of bed today; sat in the chair he had put facing out of the window, though he was still in his pyjamas, not even a dressing gown or slippers adorning him.

“Good morning, Severus, how are you feeling today? I brought a photo for you to see. It’s of Draco’s children.”

The look that Severus gave her could have wilted flowers, but it was the same look he always gave her when she came and disturbed him from his thoughts. Narcissa didn’t let it bother her anymore.

“Here, have a look. They’re coming on so well now.” Narcissa said happily, pride lacing her voice.

“How is Potter?” Severus asked, his voice quiet and strained with disuse.

Narcissa smiled happily, this was definitely an improvement and she was delighted that he was interacting with her for a change instead of ignoring her and carrying on his daydreaming.

“Oh he’s fine. The boys have just finished their exams. Draco informed me that Blaise has been insufferable lately, but I believe he just wants to do his best. I coached Draco to be patient and to leave him be, Marianna instilled a heavy, studious ethic into Blaise, he has always wanted to do well and I loved that it rubbed off on Draco when they had their little play dates as children, so I am unsurprised to hear of how seriously he is taking the final exams.”

“I asked about Potter.” Severus snapped.

Narcissa sighed and resettled herself. She was better with the idea of having Harry Potter, a Halfblood, in her family line, especially after the birth of grandchildren, Draco’s obvious love for the boy and a year and a half to get used to the idea, but something deep inside of her still rubbed at the thought. She believed it was her Mother’s teachings from when she was a small child, she had made sure to instil those beliefs in Draco too, Lucius more so than herself, but it seems that either their only son hadn’t listened overly much to their teachings on blood supremacy, or the Dracken inheritance had overruled every lesson on blood heritage that they had ever given him.

“He’s fine, Severus, I haven’t seen him, but Draco informs me that he’s handling the pressure very well and that he cares more for his children than his studies. I suppose it’s nothing that we can’t expect from a Halfblood raised by vile Muggles, but at least Draco and Blaise are doing well and from what Draco has told me that the older two are very highly paid. The one is a senior Dragon Handler, though it is highly paid, it’s more commoner work, but Draco has said that the oldest one enjoys it, but the one, Maddison, he’s a Potions Master, Severus, I’m sure the both of you would enjoy one another’s company.” Narcissa said with a smile.

Severus had a strange smile on his face, like he was caught in memory.

“All submissive Drackens are more focused on their children.” Severus informed her. “It’s how it should be. The dominant mates provide, which is why Blaise has always strived to do well to get the best job that he can, and the submissives keep track of the children, it’s nothing to do with his upbringing or his blood status, or do you forget that you are talking to a Halfblood?”

Narcissa blinked. It was easy to forget that Severus was a Halfblood. He and Lucius had been friends for so long that she often forgot that he wasn’t a Pureblood, but it never really mattered, she could make an exception for Severus.

“If you can make an exception for me, when I am nothing to you, then you can find it in yourself to make an exception for Harry; at least his Mother was a witch, unlike my Muggle Father.” He said stonily, giving the impression that he had read her thoughts. “Draco is deeply in love and to hate Harry is to hate a part of Draco, to hate Harry is to hate the man that Draco loves with all of himself. You risk alienating your only son if you carry on, his Dracken instincts will always have him choosing his mate over you and Lucius. You are nothing to his Dracken, just people his human side knows and if you push him, you’ll lose him. You can’t win out against his mates and children.”

“Draco said that Maximilius is estranging himself from his own Mother.”

“Why?” Severus asked interestedly.

“Something about her only seeing Harry as a means to get children about her and as of last week, she refused to apologise still, so Maximilius was planning to take her from his birth certificate.”
“Hardly surprising.” Severus grunted. “Drackens have turned on their own Mothers for less, though it is usually the Fathers that cause the trouble and having dominant sons near dominant Fathers is always going to be a stressful time, though naturally it depends on the personality of both involved.”

Narcissa was shocked and unsettled. To think that her own darling son would turn on her if she didn’t show Potter love and affection was unnerving.

“I would watch what you say to Draco and tell Lucius the same. If you complain or whine to Draco about Potter, you’re as good as shutting the proverbial door between you. He will never choose you over his mate and children, to think differently is to become ignorant. Drackens are not merely humans with wings, Narcissa.”

Narcissa bristled at being called ignorant and her spine automatically straightened as she watched Severus critically. He was slumped in the chair, tired and worn out, rail thin and sickly looking. Somehow she knew that he would never get over this and she settled herself down again. The thought of losing a dear friend hurt, to watch said dear friend wither away before her eyes was insurmountably more painful.

The loss of Regulus had torn Severus apart, but the not knowing had kept him alive. Bitter, lonely and full of anger and resentment, but alive. Finding Regulus’ body had been a blessing and a curse. Severus now knew exactly what had happened to his submissive and why, he could put to rest the ‘was my mate pregnant’ fears and could put his mind at ease with all the painful scenarios that had filled it, but without the determination that Regulus’ sudden and mysterious death had brought, Severus didn’t want to carry on his life any longer.

He had done everything that he had sworn he would do. He had sworn to find out what had happened to Regulus and he had and he had sworn to a dead Lily Potter that he would look out for Potter in her absence and he had. Potter was a grown man now, a Dracken to boot and he had four very powerful young men as his bonded mates, including her own son. He was a part of a very large, very protective and very powerful and influential family. He was well protected and well looked after, there was nothing that Severus had to live for now and Narcissa understood that on a logical, unfeeling level, but the friend in her who had known Severus for years, had cared for him for years, would not be so easily silenced, she would fight for his life, even if he wouldn’t fight for it himself. The friend in her could do no less.

Max had only been gone for merely an hour when he flooed back into their rooms, landing on his feet but falling immediately to his knees and his face just crumbled. One moment, strong and slightly arrogant, the next he was the picture of abject misery as he covered his face with both large hands and sobbed.

Harry knew right then that the meeting had not gone well and he’d had to carry out his threat of making himself ‘Motherless’ even if it was a fake document.

Blaise was closest to him and he reached him first and Max threw his huge arms around him and crushed him into a hug, those massive, powerful shoulders shaking with the force of his sobs and Harry’s heart broke for him. His Dracken snarled inside of him, they should go and get revenge for their mate; they should kill the one who had hurt their mate so badly.

Harry suppressed this instinct, but when Max’s sobs became audible; loud, wracking sobs that he couldn’t hold back or control, Harry’s patience and control was sorely tested.

Max let out a sound that made Harry’s spine straighten, his wings vibrating against the bone and it took him a few minutes before he realised that Max was letting out a distress call. It was the first time that he’d ever heard it and he felt the reactions it caused in his body and mind. Nothing else mattered but getting to Max and taking that noise away from him. Nothing.

Blaise held him tighter, even though it was Max enveloping him and clinging on for dear life.
Nasta’s Dracken side was forced out of him, despite his steel control, as soon as he felt the vibrations of the distress call. It was an automatic reaction and he went to Max and held him as he cried and yelled out his distress call.

It took ten minutes before Draco came through the door, panting, panicked and pink cheeked and he came to their little huddle and joined them.

“What happened?” He asked.

“He had to go through with his plan.” Harry said softly from where he was buried under Max’s arm, letting his biggest mate crush him. Nothing mattered but making Max better.

Draco threw his arms over Harry’s head and around Max’s shoulder and around Blaise’ back on the other side. Nasta was behind Max holding him from behind, but he had blocked off their floo network before he had, just in case anyone decided to join them, after all Max’s parents could feel his distress call and it would probably be driving them crazy.

It took endless minutes for Max to calm down, almost half an hour before he stopped sobbing so uncontrollably that he couldn’t hear their whispered words and almost half an hour before he stopped keening like a frightened child or a wounded animal. Half an hour in which he tore at all of their hearts as he completely broke down in their arms before calming and quieting down and kneeling empty in their arms, unable to cry anymore.

They spent the next hour piecing him back together and building him back up with kind words and actions, endless comfort and unconditional love. Harry took over the kitchen, which he was quite happy about, though the circumstances were upsetting. Blaise stayed cuddled up with Max and showed him the recording of Braiden standing, which helped a lot as the feelings of pride were immense at seeing their little son standing on his bow legs for the first time and the little extra bit on the end where Nasta had filmed Blaise and Harry kissing and cuddling over Braiden did more to make Max’s mood improve.

Draco did the one thing that made him feel better when he was upset and took a brush to the slight curls that Max had on his head. It had been a while since his last haircut and his hair was getting longer and as it got longer, the curls started to grow in. It was cute.

Nasta handed Braiden to Max and their oldest child gurgled and giggled as Max bounced him on his lap, encouraging him onto his legs by standing him up, even as Draco carried on brushing his hair and Blaise cuddled against his side.

Harry handed out tea, sneaking Blaise a cup of coffee, just because he knew it would make Max smile, it did, he actually chuckled as he let Braiden grip hold of and squeeze his bottom lip, tugging on it in curiosity.

“Don’t let him do that, he’ll hurt you.” Harry scolded as he carefully took Braiden’s clenching fingers from Max’s lip, being careful of his nails. “They’re a little long; I think he needs to have them cut again.”

“I’ve got it.” Max said deeply in his emotion roughed voice as he sat Braiden down before he brought a tiny hand up to his mouth and started nibbling on the tiny nails.

Braiden giggled hysterically. “Da! Da!” He cried out, his little body wriggling and writhing as he giggled as each nail was bitten and picked at until they were short and smooth again.

“Oh I love this little boy.” Max said as he finished and pulled Braiden into a hug.

“Dapda.” Farren cooed from the floor.

They all stopped and looked at Farren as he frowned up at Max, a stuffed teddy still in his arms.

“I think he heard you and has a touch of jealousy.” Draco chuckled as he walked around the settee and hefted Farren out of his box and sat him between Max and Blaise, before going back around to play with Max’s curls.

Farren gurgled as he bashed his teddy about, leaning himself onto Max’s side.

“I think the babies know that you’re upset.” Harry said as he came and kissed Max’s cheek.

“Mama!” Braiden called out, reaching for him over Max’s head.
“Ah, but they still love you the most.” Max grinned, tilting his head back and getting his prominent Adam’s apple poked curiously for his trouble.

“Naturally.” Harry grinned as he picked Braiden up and set him on his hip. “I’m always going to be the best and their favourite.”

That made all of his lovers laugh, which half of his children joined in on, which made them all laugh more.

“I think it’s about lunch time, do you want to try blended potatoes, carrots and pork today, Braiden?” Harry asked as he sat him in his high chair and dug in the cupboard of little labelled jars that Max had made up.

Braiden bashed the tray of his high chair and gurgled happily, calling out for Harry as he bashed louder.

“It’s no wonder we’ve been suffering systematic headaches for this last week.” Blaise said as he grimaced at the noise.

“Aw, Braiden, your Daddy doesn’t like your music.”

“That’s not music.” Draco complained, insulted at the very notion that the racket they were hearing was music.

“Of course it is.” Harry said. “It’s Braiden’s very own music, made by his own hands. You should be proud.”

Draco snorted. “Fine, you stay here and listen to his music and be proud over it, I’m going to check on Leolin.”

Harry rolled his eyes before turning his attention back to Braiden, sitting down in front of him and loading up a tiny spoon with the contents of the jar and started the process of giving Braiden lunch, avoiding the hands that had so recently decided they wanted to grab the spoon and throw it every time it came towards him, regardless of the blended food the spoon was full of.
Severus let himself gone boneless when the door closed behind Narcissa at last. He still held the photograph of the six children that Potter had had and he couldn’t stop himself from imagining them as his own and Regulus’ children. The thought made something deep inside him ache.

He knew this was his ending, he had nothing left tying him to this world except a grown godson in Blaise and a self-taken on ward in Potter, who was also grown. Neither of them needed him anymore and with the questions answered about Regulus, he could go in peace.

He had no beautiful children like the six that Potter had, no child that needed him or depended on him, no child to carry on his genes, no mate to help raise said child, no one to grow old with. He was only thirty-eight years old, he had another three hundred or so more years to live yet and the thought drained him.

His stubborn will to find out what had happened to his beloved Regulus had been the only thing keeping him going, through every day; every painfully boring lesson where he wished desperately that he was somewhere else.

His dreams at night had him aching to abuse his own profession and consume over dosages on the Dreamless Sleep potion, just so he wouldn’t see Regulus’ happy, upturned face at night, a toddler in his arms who looked just like his beloved mate. His envision of the daughter that they should never have lost. Their daughter who should be twenty years old but instead had not a physical speck in this world for anyone to remember her by.

Severus had laid Regulus to rest a week after he had been found, outside of the incredibly strong preservation spells that the lake in the underground cave had had, Regulus had started decomposing rapidly and he couldn’t bear the thought to see the perfectly preserved body of his beloved mate turn to so much mush and rotted flesh in his arms.

Lucius and Narcissa had been a huge help to him, Albus visited at least twice a week as well as the letters he received from Draco and Blaise, and even the two letters he had gotten from Potter. They were all trying to help him, but he had no reason for living besides to merely be living.

What did he have to live for now? No mate, no children. The entire focus of a Dracken was to breed and procreate; he had failed at that when he had failed his submissive mate on so many occasions.

Severus looked at each grinning or sharply focused face of the six beautiful children that Potter had given to his dominants, though Lucius was always quick to correct his Wife by saying that none of them were Draco’s, he knew exactly what Draco would think of each and every child, he knew that his Dracken would see all of them as an extension of his submissive mate, which naturally made the children ‘his’ as well.

From Narcissa he knew they were all doing well and even though Potter had a court case coming up for the Muggles who had hurt him in his childhood, he was very well supported and he was being watched for signs of depression or signs that he wasn’t coping with the situation, so far neither had been forthcoming.

Severus forced himself to stand, even though he was hunched over and almost crippled by grief, he managed to shuffle himself back to his bed and he lay down with a sigh of relief.
There was nothing in the world that he wouldn’t give to have Regulus back, but full resurrection was impossible and the cheap imitations would only be an insult to Regulus’ memory. There was no way around it, Regulus was gone and he was never coming back. Putting it so bluntly in his mind had a stab of agony tearing through him so shockingly that he curled over his own chest as much as possible and tiredly rubbed over his breastbone.

His Dracken was rebelling. They both hated the thought of their mate being dead and gone with no children to carry on their genes, but though he wished that his only daughter had never died, he wished more that Regulus was here with him and that thought ate away at him, deteriorating his condition further, plaguing his mind with guilt and self-loathing.

He rested on the bed, the photograph still in his hand and he looked at the five little boys and the lone little girl. That little girl could have been his own and his heart clenched agonisingly yet again. He should have protected Regulus better, he should have kept him closer to him, then maybe their little girl would still be here and maybe, just maybe, Regulus would still be here too.

He felt so much guilt, so much pain, why hadn’t he followed Regulus that day? Why had he let his mate leave the house, go through the front door and out into the world on his own, just because of some petty argument that he couldn’t even remember. He should have done more, been more for his submissive and he should have gone after Regulus instead of sitting at home and sulking about the argument they had had that in hindsight didn’t matter at all to him.

He felt sick and lost. His thoughts run a continuous loop around his failure as a dominant mate, how he had lost his mate and daughter, how he had let it happen and he eventually curled up further, his loss and bereavement laying heavily on his mind as he stared at the picture of the six beautiful children. They could have been his; he could have had a picture just like this on his office desk, or on his sitting room wall.

He felt his eyes burning with supressed tears and he slammed his emotions back into check. He had cried all he was going to over this and he wouldn’t allow any more to be shed, he would not drown Regulus’ memory in tears. He had cried more than enough.

It took endless hours for his mind to flit from thought to thought, to memory and back before the nightmares started. He hadn’t realised that he had fallen asleep until he was throwing himself into wakefulness with a gasp caught in his throat.

He sat up as quickly as he could in his deteriorated state and relearnt how to breathe. This had become familiar to him, these dreams and nightmares that beleaguered his sleep and wouldn’t leave him be. It had been weeks since he last had the energy to brew potions and Lucius would immediately recognise and confiscate the Dreamless Sleep potion like he was a child that needed to be told what he could and couldn’t do or put into his own body.

Severus lifted the photograph in its frame of silver and watched one of the little boys kick his legs happily as another brought a hand to his mouth to gum on three fingers. He had dreamed that the six of them had died. A heinous thing for him to dream of another’s children, but it was only a dream, one that he couldn’t shake.

His heart had long since calmed when he laid himself back down in his guest bed at Malfoy Manor. He felt weak and shaky and he realised that it had been some time since he had last ate. He didn’t particularly mind, if he was absorbed with a brewing project he often went without eating for a few days too.

His body was weak and almost useless now, he could barely sit up through sheer willpower alone and he didn’t think he could get himself from his bed, so he closed his eyes and thought of Regulus.
How much he longed to join his mate, how much he wanted to see him again, to see his smile and hear his laugh, to hold him in his arms once again, feeling his body shake with the throes of passion as his mate drew blood from him, trying to keep from screaming. Regulus hated screaming and Severus was always extra arrogant after he had made Regulus scream for him.

His breathing becoming increasingly ragged and stilted, Severus, on some level, knew what was happening, but he refused to call out for a house-elf. He just continued lying on the bed, thinking of the mate and child that he had lost, one thanks to the Dark Lord and the other thanks to Potter senior.

He let what was going to happen, happen. He wouldn’t outright take his own life, but if it happened on its own, he wasn’t going to stop it. He had had enough of this life and he wished to go to the next to be reunited with Regulus, even if there was no next great adventure after death, at least he would be in the same state as Regulus and they would be buried side by side.

Still holding the picture frame, Severus took several more stilted breaths before his breathing regulated and evened out as he slipped back into sleep, his overtaxed mind and body too exhausted and stressed to stay active for any longer, the nightmares didn’t come back, he didn’t dream and Severus did not wake up ever again.

Chapter End Notes

A/N: So we’re leaving it here. You’ve had a quick update, it’s a long chapter too, so make the most of it lovelies and let me know what you think.

Additional A/N: I’m afraid to say that the next update from any of my fics will be a long time in coming, I had to have my beloved cat Suki put down yesterday after thirteen years together and you wouldn’t even be having this update if I hadn’t finished it the day before she died. I ask for patience and respect in this hard time for me and my family, you may think she was just a cat or what not, but to me she was so much more, so please be respectful.

Thank you for all your support and thanks for reading and reviewing, I truly do appreciate it,

Chapter Seventy-Seven – June

Two days after the exams had finished for Harry and his mates, the fifth of June, was an eagerly anticipated day for a special reason and Harry woke up extra early just to move the sleeping children to the living room and to start making a special breakfast.

Nasta joined him not half an hour later and pulled a box of wrapped presents from under the sink, where he had stashed them because if there was one place that Draco would not go in without being told, it was the cupboard where they kept the cleaning products.

He laid them out on the kitchen table before boiling the kettle to make tea and baby bottles.

Draco’s birthday had fallen on the perfect day, the Friday after the exams had finished for the three of them, though there were still some people doing exams from different electives, but none of that mattered because they weren’t one of them. If he remembered correctly it was Muggle Studies today and it had been Care of Magical Creatures yesterday.

“Is he still asleep?” Harry asked Max as the larger man slipped out of the bedroom.
Max nodded as he yawned, his jaw cracking with how wide it forced his mouth. He scrubbed a hand over his face to wake himself up a bit before finally feeling a little better about being awake so early.

“Yeah, he’s fast asleep; I gave Blaise a pinch on my way out, so he is awake.”

“And likely not happy with your wake up technique.” Harry said dryly.

“I hope I get treated like this for my thirty-third.”

“Of course you will, but it’s my eighteenth first.” Harry grinned.

“You come of age in the Muggle world and can legally drink alcohol, oh wait; you’ve been doing that in the wizarding world for a year already.”

Harry snorted and shook his head before picking up Regan and settling the five month old in his arms. He checked in Regan’s mouth for signs of erupting teeth, but there were none, so he carried him over to Nasta to collect a bottle to feed him.

Blaise stumbled out of the bedroom, half asleep on his feet and groaning.

“Here, have some coffee.” Nasta told him, handing him a cup of his most favourite Italian roast coffee.

“I’m still dreaming.” Blaise said roughly.

“You often dream of Nasta handing you coffee?” Max teased.

“He’s usually naked when he does it.” Blaise replied before he gulped the coffee like it was cool water and not boiling hot.

“You can have me hand you coffee naked on your birthday.” Nasta told him, pulling Blaise’s head to his lips so he could press a kiss to him. “And you can have Max massaging your feet, Draco fanning you with palm leaf as Harry spoons coffee flavoured liqueur into your waiting mouth and anything else you can dream up, but can we please concentrate on Draco for today?”
They all nodded, put in high spirits by Nasta’s fantasy scene, but when they heard Draco stirring, before they were ready, things turned rushed as Max took over breakfast to finish it off while Harry and Nasta tried to get the feeds out of the way as Blaise laid the table around Draco’s gifts.

It didn’t help that several owls turned up together with cards and gifts, Calix decided he wanted to wet a nappy and Tegan became frustrated and unhappy with the lack of attention that she was getting and started crying.

Blaise took Calix as the more serious matter and changed him carefully, making sure the powder covered all of his bottom so no wet or dampness was left behind to start a rash, by which time Harry had finished feeding Leolin and was distracting Tegan with a soft doll, making it dance in front of her.

Nasta unloaded the owls of their burdens and dispatched them easily enough and Max had just finished serving the table breakfast when Draco came out, still in his pyjama bottoms, dishevelled and confused as to where they’d all gone…or perhaps what all the damn noise was.

“Happy birthday, Draco!” Harry called out as the others called out some semblance of the same, they hadn’t had time to decide on what to say or when, so it was a jumble of birthday greetings, but Draco’s mouth split wide with a smirk that was almost an actual smile.

“You performing baboons are loud.” Draco said, still smirking. “If you had slowed down a bit and stopped making so much noise, I’d still be asleep and you’d have had more time.”

Harry huffed. “I think we made good time, besides it was the baby baboons making all the noise, not us.”

Draco picked up Braiden, who had crawled to him and was now sat at his feet and pulling on his pyjama leg.

“Good morning, love.” He greeted the ten month old boy happily.

Braiden babbled and burbled a bit, before Nasta took him from Draco and steered the blond to the table for breakfast. Four of the quintuplets were put in bouncers, Leolin was back on his little beanbag and Braiden went into his baby walker, this time with the seat low enough for him to pull himself about the floor with his feet.

Harry kept an eye on him as the five of them ate breakfast, though he did notice that Draco was eyeing up his gifts and that he was eating quicker than he normally did.
“There’s no rush.” Harry teased. “We’re not going to take them off you if you don’t finish your breakfast within ten minutes.”

“I know, but I’ve always loved receiving gifts.” Draco smirked.

“You’re spoilt is why.” Blaise nudged him with his shoulder.

“And you’re not?” Draco teased back, in too high spirits to mind all of the ribbing.

“I’ll have you know that I lived a very balanced life.” Blaise sniffed.

“A balanced life in the lap of luxury.” Draco countered, finishing the last bite of his toast.

Nasta, concerned about the effect the current conversation would have on Harry, changed the subject without it looking like he had as he handed Draco a wrapped present and took his empty plate away, thus distracting all of them from the previous conversation.

They watched Draco opening his various gifts and cards, getting kisses for their presents and when he was done and Nasta had cleaned all of the ripped paper and envelopes up, Harry shyly handed Draco another card.

“This is a special one.” Harry said softly as Draco looked at him in puzzlement, as Harry had already given him a card and a present.

The puzzlement faded when Draco pulled out the card, which really was a folded piece of card that had been hand painted by Harry, who wasn’t the best of artists, but when he opened it, he understood. Inside the card, on both sides, was a collection of six handprints, his children’s handprints, around the message ‘Happy Birthday Daddy Draco’ in the middle.

“This must have taken you forever.” Draco said to distract from how touched he was that Harry had thought to do this for him.

“Not really, I got some paint, got a sponge, painted their hands and pressed them to the card. It took longer to clean the paint from under their nails!” Harry laughed. “I won’t be doing that again in a hurry.”
Draco traced the minute print that had Leolin's name written in elegant cursive under it.

“This isn’t your handwriting.” Draco told him surely.

“No, it’s mine.” Nasta said with a smile. “I helped Harry with the prints and the handwriting, but the idea was all Harry’s.”

“Thank you, love.” Draco said, pulling him into a kiss.

The day passed quickly and easily, they focused more around Draco, but naturally their main focus was on the children, who didn’t care that it was their Daddy Draco’s birthday, they just wanted all of their needs met and all of the attention, but Draco didn’t mind sharing the limelight.

They had an almost constant stream of visitors to wish Draco a happy birthday, Pansy Parkinson, Daphne Greengrass, even Crabbe and Goyle, though Draco hadn’t spoken to either of them in months, not since Harry had almost been raped by Theodore Nott and Draco had learnt that Crabbe and Goyle had slept through his shouts just feet away from him.

Narcissa and Lucius had sent an owl with a card, a letter and several gifts, but they remained a no show and told Draco that they’d see him when he got out of school, but Draco didn’t seem to care, he told them that unfortunately as his birthday fell in the school months that his parents often didn’t come and that in his younger years he had been doing exams on his birthday even.

Blaise nodded and said the same, his birthday fell in the school year too so he was used to just getting an owl from his Mother and various step-fathers.

Harry didn’t want to bring down the mood, so he didn’t tell his mates that even though his birthday fell in the summer holidays that he had often been ignored, or sometimes even worked harder on his birthdays, at least they had people who cared for them and loved them.

Harry went to play with Calix and Regan then, to hide his bad mood with praise for his little sons as he watched them play and learn with their toys, he didn’t however fool the ever observant Nasta Tabrien Delericey, who came to sit beside him, Braiden in arms biting at a stuffed doll.

“Are you alright?”

Harry looked at him and smiled a small, strained smile and he nodded.

“Of course, why wouldn’t I be?” He asked airily.
“You don’t have to pretend, Harry, not with me. What happened? What was said to upset you?”

Harry blew out a breath and smiled as Blaise looked over; he clapped enthusiastically as Calix slotted a plastic triangle through the triangle shaped hole to make a chirpy, jingly tune.

He looked back at Nasta when Blaise looked away, his attention caught by Tegan. He licked his lips and checked where everyone else was, Nasta could keep something quiet. The other three, not so much.

“It was the talk about where everyone’s birthday landed.” He confided.

“Yours is the only birthday to land in the summer holidays.” Nasta said neutrally. “Normally an extra reason for a child to celebrate, but not so much you. What did they do to you on your birthdays?”

“Nothing.” Harry answered.

Nasta just gave him a look that plainly said he didn’t believe him and Harry blew out a harsh breath.

“Really, they didn’t do anything and that was the problem. They ignored my birthday as thoroughly as they ignored me when they had company around. Sometimes they would give me a longer list of chores to do, but often I was completely ignored and my birthday passed with no acknowledgement at all. I had a selfish thought is all, when Blaise and Draco were complaining of not being home for their birthdays or their parents not coming to see them, I just thought, at least you have people who care, people who love you and that’s not fair of me to say or to think, it’s not their fault that the Dursleys were how they were with me.”

Nasta pulled him into a hug and kissed his head.

“It’s not selfish to think this way, Harry. You have every right to feel human emotions and yes, to you Draco and Blaise will seem very spoilt and ungrateful, but they’ve never been without that love and support, so like most people in that situation, they take it for granted and to someone like you, who has never had that sort of love and support, it comes across very strongly to you, you see it differently because you’ve never had that love to take for granted in the first place. They don’t realise that they are digging a knife into you with their words, needless to say I don’t think they think of anyone else when they get into a pissing debate with one another. I’ve never known anyone to argue as much as those two do, it’s like they look for things to argue about.”
Harry snorted in laughter and rested against Nasta.

“I just don’t want to be a downer on anyone, especially not on Draco’s birthday of all days, but it just hit me that I never actually had a reason to celebrate my birth before I came to Hogwarts. I was just another year older, it was another year less on my countdown to my eighteenth birthday when I could just get out of their house and leave and forget everything that had ever happened to me there, even though I never...”

Harry fell silent and Nasta remained silent with him as the three little boys played and giggled in front of them, Calix and Braiden having one of their daily conversations that only they were privy to, but when it seemed like Harry had actually stopped talking and wasn’t just gathering his thoughts, Nasta pressed him.

“You were going to say something, what was it?”

Harry shook his head lightly, his messy hair still bouncing around his head; he had allowed Draco to brush it for an hour straight, so it was extra light and fluffy today.

“You can tell me, Harry. I love you and I won’t think anything different about you, it’s those people who are to blame and they will be punished.”

“It’s those people that I’m worried about.” Harry said.

Nasta reared back like he had been punched and the flash of anger was so sudden and severe that Harry’s heart missed a beat.

“Why in the world are you worried about those beasts?!” He hissed.

“Who’s worried about what?” Max asked with a frown.

Harry looked over at him and gritted his teeth, the other three had taken notice of them and had realised that not all was as it seemed and they had come over to join them.

arm tightly.

“No. You tell me why you’re worried about them, after everything they’ve done to you.”

“You’re talking about those people, aren’t you?” Blaise asked quietly.

Harry found it maddening that his mates couldn’t even say their names, or even their last name, it was like the Voldemort thing, he wasn’t afraid to say Voldemort and neither was he afraid to say Dursley.

“What brought this on? Are you having another flashback attack?” Draco asked and Harry was angry to see him so concerned and worried, this was Draco’s day, Draco’s birthday, they shouldn’t be doing this now.

“No and it’s nothing to worry about, Nasta and I were just having a conversation that he made too loud.” Harry explained, his eyes glaring holes into Nasta’s.

Draco sat down on the settee adjacent to where Harry and Nasta were sat on the floor and looked at him.

“It’s my birthday and it is my wish that you tell me of this conversation.”

Max snorted. “Aren’t you a regal bastard? Well Harry, his birthday Prince has commanded it; you might as well tell us what’s going on.”

Harry snarled and glared at Nasta for putting him in this position and he turned to his three other mates.

“I was just saying that my birthday fell in the summer holidays.”

“I would have loved my birthday to fall in the summer holidays, but my guess is that you would have rathered it fell on a school day.” Max said, his blue eyes staring into him.
Harry’s hand went through his hair and he tugged on it harshly.

“I spent an hour fixing that hair!” Draco cried indignantly and Harry had to smile as he tried to fix the damage that he had done.

“I would have rathered it fell on a day in the school year; at least here I had my friends.” Harry said softly.

“You have us now.” Blaise told him.

Harry nodded. “I know, but before Hogwarts my birthday was never anything special. I had no family, no friends; it was just another day of the week.”

“You said something of the like last year, near your seventeenth birthday.” Max said thoughtfully.

“He did?” Blaise frowned.

Nasta nodded. “The day that you and Draco decided to argue over books and who was the better author, you went upstairs to argue and Harry, Max and I stayed in the kitchen, he said the same then.”

“Why are you worried about those people? What’s the link between birthdays and them besides how they treated you before?” Max asked.

“I was telling Nasta that every year my birthday was just a countdown until I could leave them.” Harry confided.

“Carry on.” Draco said when Harry stopped.

Harry huffed and gritted his teeth. “I’m worried for them because I’m more worried about you.”

“That makes no sense at all.” Blaise informed him.
Harry growled and waved his hands in frustration, he didn’t want to spell it out for them, he didn’t want to actually have to say it out loud. “I’m worried that you’re going to go and hurt them and I’ll lose you all!”

“Why would you think that?” Nasta asked.

“Because what I was going to add on was that I never actually thought that I’d get out of that house.”

“As soon as you were eighteen you would have been a legal adult, you would have been able to just get up and go.” Max said confusedly.

“Exactly.” Harry said quietly. “When I was younger I never…I never actually thought that I’d live to see my eighteenth birthday. That’s what I meant. Every year everything got worse, everything got harder, by the time that I was nine, just getting through the year was so hard that half the time I just wanted to give in and die in my sleep so that I wouldn’t have to face the next day and the torment it would bring.”

“You wanted to die?!?!” Draco asked, his expression showing his astonishment.

“My life has never been easy. I thought everything would be better when I got to Hogwarts, but it did and it didn’t. For the first time in my life I had friends, I was happy, but then the events at the end of the year had me facing sudden death and then I get sent back to the Dursleys and everything was ten times worse, every subsequent year has been worse than the last as I’ve gotten older.”

“I hope that doesn’t apply to now.” Blaise put in quietly.

Harry smiled. “You know that it doesn’t. Having you four in my life is the best thing that has ever happened to me and I’m not just saying that or exaggerating anything, you and the kids are the best thing to ever, ever, happen to me. Most people have a favourite memory, their happiest memory, one that they’ll never forget as long as they live, a day at the beach, a certain birthday or Christmas where everything was just utterly perfect, even you four have a special memory that you hold above the rest, don’t you?”

Max thought about it and he smiled. “Definitely when I got my Potion’s Mastery. When I got that letter by that ridiculously fluffy owl telling me that I had passed all of my exams and that all those hours of studying and the endless days and nights of revision for those examinations had paid off, I “Mine is a bittersweet memory.” Blaise said softly. “It was when I had finally learnt enough Italian on my own to write a letter to my Father’s parents, my paternal grandparents. I was so proud of myself for having learnt it by myself, for sticking to it and battling through all the frustration and anger at forcing myself to learn a third language so young. I had barely a grasp on English back then and most of what I knew was thanks to play dates with Draco throughout the years. I wrote that letter in my best handwriting, I was so proud. They never replied, so I wrote them another letter. A week later that letter came back unopened, they’d put a block up to prevent any more of the letters I sent getting through to them.”

“How old were you?” Nasta asked.

Blaise shrugged. “I was eight. I didn’t get a proper grasp of English until I was about thirteen, but by then everyone at Hogwarts knew me as a silent shadow. They never realised that I was silent because though I knew what they were saying, I didn’t know enough English to reply to them and I didn’t want to embarrass myself by botching up the language. They thought I was an arrogant sod who thought that he was better than them and they stopped trying to speak to me.”

“Mine was getting the O.W.L. results last year.” Draco said with an embarrassed smile. “I was terrified of what the letter contained, worried that I might have failed everything, but when I saw that I’d gotten all O’s, that had to have been the proudest moment of my life. My biggest achievement to date and I hope to replace that with my N.E.W.T. results this year.”

Everyone looked expectantly to Nasta and he chuckled. “I have so many memories and I hope to remember them all. I could easily say that my best memory is the moment I grasped enough of a language to speak it fluently, of which I know so many that the memory would be repeated several times over. It could be the moment I spoke my first sentence in my second ever learnt language, which was German when I was four. I could say that it was exploring each and every new country I was taken too, or even running hand in hand with my brother and sister across some field or beach or through a busy market place, but I think, upon reflection, the one that I’ll always remember above the others would be when I heard my Mother’s voice for the first time. My grandparents on my Mum’s side were Drackens and they had six children, one of whom was very interested in Muggle things. My Uncle Rhodri mixed a Muggle Dictaphone with a spell and he caught my Mother’s voice on it, exactly as it was. She was pregnant with me at the time and the clip features a whining Angharad and a squalling Sanex before my Dad took them off for a bath before bed, but my Uncle Rhodri was asking my Mother about me and hearing her speak of me, still in her belly, the love that she had for me even then, how she spoke about me, not knowing if I was even a boy or a girl. She called me baby Nest, because I was always nestled against her spine, she said that no matter what she did to dislodge me, I always squirmed back to her spine and that nickname helped my Dad name me after…after I was born and she died. It’s the only time that I have ever heard her voice and that is a memory I will forever treasure, knowing without a doubt that she loved me before my birth and knowing that she would have loved me after birth if she had lived.”

have to say that it’s the best moment of my entire life.”
There was silence after that before Harry moved to hug Nasta, who covered his eyes with one hand to hide his tears.

Max pulled that hand away and kissed each eye gently, catching those glittering tears on his lips.

“You don’t have to hide your tears, not from us.” Blaise told him.

“I think about her every day.” Nasta said. “Especially as I see the kids, my Aunt Megan told me that my Mother had always wanted to be a mother, and a grandmother, she wanted to be surrounded by children, but she died before she even got to see me, let alone the six beautiful children that I would have given her as grandchildren. She died too soon.”

“My Father did too, at least your Mother died in childbirth, my Father was killed by my own Mother in a fight over me, how do you think that made me feel growing up? To know that my Father’s family blamed me for his death because it was a fight about me, a baby just a few weeks old and that that was the reason they wouldn’t see or speak to me, because them blamed me for his sudden and early death.”

“They’re idiots.” Draco said as he hugged Blaise. “They don’t deserve to know you. They don’t deserve to see the amazing man that you have become.”

Harry said nothing. He had lost both of his parents, he had no grandparents and the only family he did have had abused and neglected him so badly that they were facing thirty years in prison for it. The only memory of his parents he had was of them dying in a struggling attempt to save his life, but then he didn’t need to say it, everyone already knew his story because it was public property, people in the wizarding world had known his story before he had even known how to walk and talk.

“We got a little off track.” He said instead with a smile as he rested against Nasta, whose arms came around him to hold him against his chest. “As I said, my memory like that, the one that I’ll cherish forever, was just after I chose Nasta and I knew that I was pregnant and that I didn’t need any more mates, when all of us became a real family together. You four are the reason that I wake up every morning happy, the reason that I smile and laugh, you’re the reason that I love instead of hate and the reason I can forgive the Dursleys, after everything they’ve done to me, is because I have you four to stand beside me. I have you now and I have my whole life, my future, ahead of me, why should I care what happened in the past? Those people don’t matter to me anymore, the four of you do. You are the reason that I live and carry on living, you’re the reason that I love going to bed just to lie beside you all, to wake up beside you every morning. Nothing else matters to me, not even the Dursleys and what they did, as long as I have you four and our six children with me, how can it? How can anything compare or come close to what you four do for me and give to me? I don’t even care if that makes me pathetic and sad, if it does then so be it, I’m a loser and I’ll shout it from the bloody Astronomy Tower myself and I still don’t care, I love all of you and getting the four of you and falling in love with you is my most cherished memory. The only thing that I have to hold onto is the memories of you four and everything that you’ve done for me and outside of that, I have the paled Quidditch victories, the broken friendships and the dead family members that I used to use to try and make a Patronus with. I have no other treasured memories, no family event or holiday that I’ll remember because I never had any of those before I had you, everything good in my life has come only after I already had the four of you in my life.”

Nasta’s arm clenched tight around him and Harry felt other hands and mouths touch him, holding him, kissing him, but he felt that swell of love and he savoured it. He had his four mates and his six children, nothing else mattered to him anymore, not even the Dursleys.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

They vowed to stay silent about what they had said as they got on with Draco’s birthday, Harry even subjected himself to another hour long grooming session by Draco after he messed up his hair yet again, this time it wasn’t really his fault as Farren had decided to take two huge fistful’s of Harry’s hair between drool covered, biscuit sticky fingers and had yanked and tugged and pulled, doing his best to give Harry two bald patches as he grimaced and howled in pain, trying to detach the five month old baby from his head.

Draco soothed his scalp with a soft bristled brush as Harry pouted and grumbled under his breath about vindictive babies.

“He’s not being vindictive.” Blaise laughed. “He was just curious. All babies are curious of hair and you happen to have not only a lot of it, but it’s stranger than most.”

“Thanks for that, that makes me feel so much better.”

Draco laughed as he carefully took the knots out of Harry’s hair, untangling them carefully and gently.

“It does have a life of its own; it’s a bit like your hair is a separate living entity.”

Harry huffed and ignored the both of them as he instead listened to Max humming some song in the kitchen as he made them dinner. He wouldn’t tell them what he was making, but Draco had guessed that it was Chasseur chicken, one of his favourite meals.

Harry had spent the afternoon baking a cake for him, after Max had finished cleaning up from lunch Harry had started and the finished cake was decorated in pale green icing with little silver balls.
Draco loved it and had already taken a photograph of it. Harry refused to allow him to take a piece.

“Mama?”

They all stopped what they were doing to look at Braiden, who had called out.

“What’s the matter, love?” Harry asked him.

Braiden brought a finger to his mouth and stuck it inside his dribbling mouth, before he turned and pointed at Leolin, whose golden eyes were opened and blinking, observing the room and the people in it with his scrunched up, suspicious frown that he almost always wore when he was awake.

“You’re such a good boy, Braiden, such a good older brother to tell me that Leolin was awake.”

Harry peeled himself away from Draco and his brush, kissed Braiden and praised him some more before he went to scoop Leolin from his beanbag, he had had more than enough hair grooming for one day, there was only so much that he could take, even for a birthday wish and he had reached his limit, if Draco wanted to play hairdresser any longer then he’d have to wrestle Blaise into it or drag a baby between his thighs and hold them down as he clawed a brush through their hair.

Harry sat on the settee with Leolin in his lap and he made sure to get eye contact and a lot of smiling in at Leolin while he was awake, he still spent the majority of the day sleeping, though not as much as he once did and at five months old, he was only just starting to come out of the newborn phase of spending every day eating or sleeping. Harry was glad that Leolin was developing well, but as he looked at Regan dashing around the floor on hands and knees, the same age as Leolin, from the same pregnancy and the same sac, he couldn’t help the streak of worry that gripped him.

Nasta came out of their bedroom and laughed as he bent to pick up the speeding Regan and hefted the disgruntled baby over his shoulder.

“Where are you going to in such a hurry? Oh I see what’s happening, Mummy has gone to tend to Leolin, so Daddy Draco is looking for another victim for his dreaded brush!”

“Oh ha ha.” Draco scathéd.

They all shared a laugh at his expense, though he couldn’t keep the annoyed look on his face and it melted into a smile. He shook his head and put the brush away.
Nasta put Regan back in the middle of the room, where Tegan was trying her best to gnaw a thick finger from her doll and Calix was bashing about a soft teddy.

He came and sat by Harry and smoothed the soft, fluffy bits of downy hair that Leolin was growing on his head. It was going steadily darker by the day now and growing in thicker and more substantial too.

“We have to go to the Faerie courts soon; we’ve ignored them more than enough. It’ll go from a simple snub to all out offense soon and they’ll be very aggrieved.”

“Let them.” Harry said. “They snubbed your family for over a hundred years.”

Nasta smiled. “There are those who genuinely want to see them though, Dain and Kailen, Warren too. They were all family friends.”

“More than family friends if what your Dad was saying about what he was finding out about the family lines is true.”

Nasta grimaced. He hadn’t taken the thought that he might be related to Dain or Kailen very well, but Aneirin had been finding more and more evidence that Trefor Delericey had had a very elaborate and planned affair with the both of them and even more evidence that not one of his children had come from his Husband, which might actually explain why all of his children had had Trefor’s maiden name of Delericey and not his Husband’s name of Costas.

It had been correctly assumed at the time that Trefor was being abused by his Husband, but wrongly assumed that he had gotten his last revenge on the man by changing his children’s names to his ‘maiden’ name of Delericey; none of them had ever once thought that not one of those children had been his Husband’s by blood, so now it seemed that the Delericeys were carried on through either Dain or Kailen and that they shouldn’t even be Delericeys anymore…if they came from Dain, they should have been named Talarin and if they came from Kailen, then they should have been named Aldaren. Nasta had taken that news hard too.

“We’ll go soon.” Harry promised. “I just don’t want anything to happen to Leolin, you know he hates travelling.”

Nasta sighed and kissed Leolin's forehead.

“I know, I just want to get it over and done with. Dad is going to contact Dain and Kailen soon and confront them on what he’s found out, I want to have had the visit and gotten it over and done with.
before then, I don’t want to see them.”

“Nasta…”

“No. They knew, all these years they knew the truth! They didn’t once approach us, we’re their several times great-grandchildren, me and Sanex, my Dad and my Uncle Idris and my Aunt Nerys. My granddad Hywel, my great-grandad Dai, we’re all related to one of them and they know which one and they know that we’re alive! They’ve done nothing."

It was the most vindictive that Harry had ever seen Nasta. Usually so cool and calm and collected, his burning anger at the two Valkyries was not abating, no matter what any of them said, as soon as Nasta had read that letter, he had been set to hate them and hate them he was doing.

“How would you feel?” Nasta had challenged him when Harry had tried to ease him down a bit. “To find out after all these years that you have a great-grandfather in the world who knew you existed, who knew exactly where you were and what you were to him and he still did nothing? When he didn’t even give you a chance?”

Harry had stopped trying to get Nasta to give them a chance after that, he would have been angry too, he would have hated to find that he had another living relative in the world that knew of him and where he was and they had left him to rot with the Dursleys without so much as an introduction.

“I know, love, let Aneirin deal with them, I’m just saying; don’t let your anger cloud your judgement.” Harry explained softly. “Hopefully we won’t even see them when we go to the Faerie city, it’s a big place, enormous even according to Aneirin and the books, what are the chances that they’ll be there?”

Nasta had snorted harshly. “They both sit on the Faerie court; they’ll be there when we take in Leolin.”

Harry scowled. “You don’t have to go if you don’t want too, I’ll go with Aneirin.”

“I am not a coward.” Nasta said bitingly. “I’ll go even though I don’t want to just to rub their faces in Leolin. If they ignored us because we were humans and Drackens and not Faeries, I’ll parade Leolin in front of them and then deny them the chance to know the amazing boy that he is.”
“And if they have a perfectly good reason to have broken ties with your family?” Draco asked, handing them both cups of tea.

Nasta sneered and swallowed a gulp of the tea. “I doubt they will.”

“But if they do?”

“Then I’ll hear what they have to say and if I deem it good enough, then we can try and build on that, but I’ll never trust them, if they loved Trefor so much, why did they let him and his children die? If they were any sort of lovers or dominants they would never have allowed them all to die!”

“You need to remember that they aren’t Drackens, love, they’re different to us, have different instincts, maybe the situation was out of their hands?” Harry suggested. “Maybe they weren’t there or couldn’t help? If I was out for a walk with the kids and I was killed and the kids with me, I’d never want any of you to think that it was your fault.”

“Don’t say things like that!” Blaise snapped. “I don’t want you saying things like that about yourself or the kids.”

“It’s a completely hypothetical situation, Blaise, I swear.” Harry soothed.

“I still don’t like it.”

Harry rolled his eyes and shifted Leolin on his lap when his little Faerie baby grunted.

“You are such an unhappy baby.” He sighed as he passed Leolin over to Nasta when he silently asked for him.

“You think he’s unhappy?” Draco asked.

“He’s always frowning and scowling at everyone and grunting. If I didn’t know any better I’d say he was yours.”
“What’s that supposed to mean?” Draco demanded.

Harry chuckled. “That you are overly fond of scowling.”

“I am not always scowling!” Draco said with a scowl, making all of them laugh at him. “It’s my birthday, you shouldn’t be harassing me.”

Harry laughed but went to kiss Draco. “We’re only teasing, love. Leolin probably just doesn’t understand what’s going on around him, that’s all, you scowl because it makes you look handsome.”

“You think so?” Draco asked, his folded arms loosening and a considering look come over his face.

That sent them laughing again and Draco huffed and went to go put the kettle on to make even more tea, making sure not to hit Max, who was laughing in the kitchenette, still making dinner.

“Don’t fill up on tea, dinner’s up in half an hour.” Max warned as he dragged Draco into his arms for a hug, kissing the fluffy blond hair.

“Don’t you mess my hair up!” He said angrily.

Max took it in his stride and kissed down his neck and over his cheek instead, ending at his mouth, which he peppered with kisses until the click of the kettle broke them apart.

“Why do you taste of peppermint?” Max asked, licking his lips.

“He’s been stuffing the peppermint toads that I bought him for his birthday.” Harry chuckled.

Nasta’s head snapped around like a shot.

“How many have you eaten?” He demanded.
“Only three.” Draco insisted, a haughty look on his face.

“How many did you buy him?” Nasta asked Harry who smiled innocently.

“About twenty, but his Mother bought him another ten. They are one of his favourites.”

Nasta’s eyes narrowed on Draco whose own eyes narrowed right back. “Don’t even think of taking them off me like I’m some little child.”

“I wasn’t even thinking of it.”

“What are you thinking then?”

“I’m wondering if you have actually only eaten three or if it’s more.”

Draco shifted from one foot to the other, a nervous habit that they knew well and one he did unconsciously when he wasn’t exactly telling the truth.

“I knew it!” Nasta said. “How many have you really had?”

“I didn’t know how many I was eating!” Draco pleaded.

“How many?”

“Seven, but it is my birthday, I can be let of this once, can’t I?”

Nasta blew out a breath. “As long as you eat all of your dinner I can’t see the harm.”

“I can still have my birthday cake too?”
Nasta smiled at the cheek of it. “I wouldn’t dream of rendering all of Harry’s efforts to waste, so yes you can, but take more care with your treats in future, you’ll make yourself sugar sick.”

Draco came to kiss Nasta then, who realised for himself what Max had meant as he pushed his tongue into Draco’s mouth which tasted strongly and sharply of peppermint.

Draco sat and sipped on his tea, waiting for dinner, his hand slipped into a box beside him and pulled out another peppermint toad, even as Nasta watched, but Draco truly did seem unaware of what he was doing as he was completely glued and enthralled by the book that he himself had given him for his birthday.

“Draco!” He said sharply and the blond started and looked up at him with a frown.

“What?”

Nasta nodded to his hand and Draco looked at it and then blinked at it, as if he hadn’t known it was in his hand. He dropped the toad back into the box and licked the powdered sugar from his fingers.

“He packed the box back up and slid it under the table.

“I didn’t know I was doing that.” He said.

“I know you didn’t, I was watching you. How can you not know you’re picking something up to eat it?”

“I…I don’t know. I’ve always done it. I always snack on sweets when I’m reading. I become so engrossed in the book that I just…I just do it.”

Nasta blew out a breath. “Then in future I’m going to have to give you a limited supply of sweets when you’re reading, though I am glad that you’re enjoying the book I got for you.”

Draco smiled then. “Of course, I hadn’t even realised that Penelope Vance had brought out another book series, I was so engrossed with her other one that I never noticed.”

“And you have the audacity to call Hermione a bookworm.” Harry grinned.
“She is a bookworm, Harry, I caught her reading the Library index in our second year! The index catalogue! It’s not even a proper book.”

Harry laughed and went to kiss Draco, distracting him from his book as Harry clambered onto his lap and kissed him deeply.

“Have I ever told you that I love the taste of sweets?” Harry said as they broke apart, only to have his head pulled back into a deep kiss.

“Break it up boys, dinner’s up!” Max called, interrupting their snogging session.

Harry grinned to Draco, shifted his weight heavily onto Draco’s lap, or rather a certain part of Draco’s lap that had been very happy with the kissing and Harry’s position atop of him, before getting up and going to eat.

Draco growled as he tugged at himself through his trousers and repositioned himself before going to sit down with as much dignity as he could muster while fully hard.

“You’re evil.” He hissed at Harry, who laughed joyously.

They ate the meal amid light chatter and sly looks. Harry’s foot went to Draco’s lap, as it had for their first year anniversary in the restaurant in Hogsmeade, but when he pushed Harry’s foot from his lap, Blaise’s hand would replace it and when he smacked Blaise’s hand away, Harry’s foot would be back. It was a wonder he managed to eat anything between them and by the time he got through his slice of delicious cake, he was sweating lightly and quivering with the need to just release.

He excused himself to the bathroom, listening to Harry and Blaise laughing behind him and Nasta telling them off, but he didn’t mind, not too much at least. He’d had a brilliant eighteenth birthday and tonight, it was only going to get better, he’d make absolutely sure of that, he was going to pay both Harry and Blaise back in kind for their antics at dinner. He’d enjoy that too.

Chapter End Notes

A/N: Thank you so much to the patient readers who have not once complained about my small break from this story, to those who demanded I come back to write for it immediately and hassled me and left nasty, demanding reviews, it’s been seven weeks, get over yourselves, you’re not going to ‘die’ if I don’t update ‘right this minute’ grow up and read something else until such a time I feel ready to update it again. Those on my Facebook know that I initially took this small break for bereavement, which turned into more when I started a new ficlet, which I have wanted to focus on, but have been unable to through the demands and pressures of this story, so I’m letting all of you know now, that I will not be updating for The Rise of the Drackens again until The Tribulation of the Blue Moon, my new fic, is completed. It’s only going to be approximately ten chapters long, of which I have already posted six, it won’t be much longer, so be patient and let me work on what I want to work on. I do not want to come to resent this fic like I have two of my others.

Thank you to everyone who has read and reviewed and waited patiently for this chapter,

Chapter Seventy-Eight – The Graduation, the Home and the City

- July hit them and so did their graduation ceremony, Harry was dressed up in his finest robes displaying the proud Gryffindor lion. They were seated alphabetically, so Harry was between Sally-Ann Perks and Lisa Turpin, both of whom kept touching his legs and talking to him, he suspected they were trying to flirt with him, but he wasn’t the least bit interested, as they should well know by now.

He checked the adults on the other side of the Quidditch pitch and saw his mates and their families, along with the Weasleys, minus Ginny who had exams, Narcissa and Lucius, who had had Calix dumped onto his lap, he looked incredibly uncomfortable and he was holding Calix gingerly and was trying to pass him to his Wife, who was ignoring him, talking to Marianna who was expertly bouncing Braiden on her knee as she held a conversation, even as he watched she and Narcissa giggled together.

He smiled and clapped politely with everyone else as another student collected a diploma after having all her achievements to date read out. Hermione’s list had been the longest so far and Harry didn’t think that would be changing any time soon, Dumbledore had even honoured her contribution to her own house elf group S.P.E.W.

The graduation ceremony took nearly all day starting from nine in the morning, just after breakfast; Draco got to go up first out of them and Harry laughed as he heard Max yelling out his congratulations amid the polite smattering of clapping from everyone else.

It was then a boring wait for his own name to be called as they went through the Ns and then the P’s until Dumbledore said those magic words that had everyone sitting up straighter and straining their hearing.

“Harry James Potter, Gryffindor, Seeker for the Gryffindor Quidditch team for seven years, Captain of the Gryffindor Quidditch team for two years. Eight OWL results, Tri-wizard champion, Defence Alliance instructor and receiver of a special award for services to the school and an order of Merlin: first class for services to the wizarding world.”

Harry walked up to raucous clapping and screeches from the crowd, both adults and students alike, but he still heard Max yelling at him, he was glad that Dumbledore had left off the Boy-Who-Lived title and The Chosen One, or god forbid he had put in the defeater of Voldemort. He would have died from the embarrassment of it, but as it was he couldn’t keep the grin from his face.

Harry smiled at Dumbledore as he collected his sheet of parchment that proved that he had attended Hogwarts and had successfully graduated.

“Well done, Harry, I’ll be sad to see you leave.”

“You can come around to visit us any time you like, Sir and I mean that, I would love to carry on our chats over tea as the kids play about our feet.”

Dumbledore chuckled and nodded. “I look forward to it, my boy; I very much look forward to it.”

Harry walked down the stairs again, waved to his mates, the Weasleys and everyone else who was there to see him, Draco and Blaise graduate as he retook his seat and then sat studying his diploma, with all of his achievements and what they were listed down the paper, as soon as his N.E.W.T exam papers were graded his diploma would automatically update and would then list any and all of his achievements through the years until he died. It was a very clever piece of magic.

Blaise happened to be the very last person up so when he left the stage amid claps and cheers, and Max’s yelling, Dumbledore said goodbye to them for the last time as students of Hogwarts and then welcomed them all to the school grounds as adults. Harry threw his pointed hat into the air with the rest of his year group and then he rushed off to go and find his family.

He found Myron easily, at nearly seven foot tall, he was very easy to spot and Harry darted his way between bodies and reuniting people to bowl right into him, holding him around the middle and resting his chin on that strong chest as he grinned up at him.

“I’m so proud of you.” Myron said gruffly, ruffling his hair.
“It brought a tear to my eyes.” Richard said, actually brushing away real tears.

“I can’t believe that I’ve finally graduated.” Harry said with a wide grin.

“Congratulations, Harry.”

Harry turned and smiled at Lucius Malfoy, who held Calix out to him.

“No, he’s with you this afternoon.” Harry teased. “You need to learn how to look after a baby, you might be getting a real grandchild soon, I have a heat period in a week.”

“I have had him all morning.” Lucius tried to be dignified, but it was difficult when he was wearing a partly pleading expression.

“Another hour won’t do any harm. He likes you.” Harry said, cooing over Calix, who was sleeping in Lucius’ arms.

“I forget which one this is.” Lucius told him. “I know he’s Calix, but other than that…”

“Calix Bowen Black, Max’s second son.”

“So this is the little Black heir?”

Harry nodded. “I promise you’ll have a Malfoy heir soon, or at least a baby of Malfoy blood, Draco’s just not assertive enough.” He chuckled.

Lucius looked offended at the mere notion of that.
“I assure you that my son is not at fault for this!”

“Oh and I suppose I am? Draco was happier to have sex with Blaise than with me when I conceived the quintuplets and Blaise happened to be the lucky sperm for Braiden, I’m sorry about that, though if Draco had gotten that first baby Blaise wouldn’t have a blood child either, do you think he or Marianna would be making this much fuss over it? I may have six children, Mister Malfoy, but I’ve only had two pregnancies, Draco will get a blood child and a lot of them too if everything progresses as it has done previously, but I will not shoulder the blame nor will I allow you to bully Draco just because I haven’t given him a Malfoy heir yet, it’ll happen, in time, you just need to be patient and let it happen as it happens. Are you really in that much of a rush to be on babysitting duty? I would have thought you’d want to wait as long as possible before we left your grandchild with you, for you to bathe and feed and change every few hours, but if you’re that desperate for it I’ll talk to the others and see if we can’t get you the kids for a few days a month.”

Harry left the stunned man where he was rooted to the spot and he went to greet Marianna and Aneirin, hugging them tightly, asking after them and their health and cooing to his oldest and his youngest sons, Braiden was alert and awake, grinning at everyone. Leolin was fast asleep in Aneirin’s arms tucked up in a little blue and white blanket that had been knitted for Braiden when he was a newborn but still fit around Leolin’s tiny, tiny body at six months old.

He took Braiden from Marianna when his eleven month old reached out for him and he kissed that little mouth gently, smiling widely as Braiden giggled happily, but that’s when things went downhill as a flash almost blinded him and he had his wand in hand and aimed in a split second, his body turned to the side to better protect Braiden, only for another flash to go off, making him see coloured spots.

Someone’s back was in front of him then and the trailing edges of blond hair identified Lucius Malfoy.

“What is the meaning of this?” He asked silkily with a hint of steel beneath. “Is it customary for the Daily Prophet to take photos of students upon their graduation? Is this a new custom that I have yet to hear about?”

“He’s Harry Potter, there’s gold to be made…”

“I don’t believe I appreciate having my son-in-law exploited for a mere pouch of gold.” Lucius cut in scathingly. “Is it the nature of the Daily Prophet to take photos of children without the parent’s permission now as well? I had not heard that that law had changed either. I believe that it is time for you to take your leave and if a single photograph of my son-in-law or his children appears in the papers, you will be hearing from my lawyer.”

The photographer stalked off sullenly, unhappily and Lucius turned back to Harry, ignoring the rest of the family, even Draco, who was staring at him, shocked.
“Thank you.” Harry said softly.

“It was my pleasure, it is always my pleasure to cut down others, but if you would please take Calix from me now, I’ve lost the feeling in both elbows and my right shoulder. It has been a very long time since I’ve had to hold a baby, least of all for such an extended period of time.”

Harry laughed as he shifted Braiden onto his hip and accepted a still sleeping Calix into the crook of his arm.

“I think my little Princes’ are in need of a nap, it’s been a long day.” Harry said as he noticed that Leolin was still fast asleep despite the drama and that Regan was fast asleep too.

“We’re all packed up, we can go home if you’d like.” Max offered. “Unless you’d rather wait for the school to dismiss officially to take one last train ride home.”

Harry smiled and shook his head. “I’d like to go home, I’ve had more than enough train rides home and I certainly won’t miss a nine and a half hour train ride with six babies in tow.”

Draco and Blaise agreed, they too said they’d had more than enough train rides to the school and home from the school to last them a lifetime, so the babies were all accounted for and Nasta and Max went with Richard, Aneirin and Myron to get the luggage.

Harry handed Calix and Braiden off to Blaise and Draco as he went to see the Weasleys, he and Ron had been civil to one another, but they would never be friends again, there was so much water under the bridge now that it was forming its own ocean.

“Harry dear, how are you? I saw that photographer hassling you. I was about to go and give him a piece of my mind when he left.” Mrs Weasley patted his cheek gently and Harry smiled at her.

“Lucius got rid of him for me, we’re going to go now, the kids are shattered and are in need of a good nap, none of us want to ride the train back with grouchy kids and over nine hours is too long a ride for them.”

“Okay dear, you take care and congratulations on graduating.”
'Thank you, Mrs Weasley.'

"Call me Molly, dear, you’re a graduated man now."

Harry laughed. “Okay, thank you, Molly.”

“Don’t be a stranger either, you hear me? I want an owl at least twice a week.”

Harry smiled widely as he gave her a long, tight hug. He slapped hands with the twins, promising to come and see their joke shop and to bring along his children as well as his lovers too, before he gave a solid handshake to Mister Weasley, accepting his congratulations and he and Ron shared a nod before he rushed back to his family and got himself and his children ready to Apparate.

“How does it feel to be a man?” Aneirin asked.

“No different to yesterday, or this morning, or last week really. I think I’ve been a man for a while.”

Max snorted and bumped him with a suitcase. “You’ve always been more mature than Draco and Blaise.”

“Pardon me?!” Draco burst out glaring at Max.

“Well he is, you and Blaise argue over absolutely everything, from books, to authors, to exams, revision, any excuse for an argument and you’re both all over it, you need to sort that stuff out. Harry never behaves like that, you’re fathers’ now, you can’t behave like temperamental boys.”

Draco scowled, but he held Calix tighter, obviously biting back what he really wanted to say, but a quick look at his Mother stopped him, whatever he wanted to say, he wouldn’t say it in front of her, which meant that it was probably a cuss word or even an actual curse.

“Come on, let’s get home and get settled in, have we got everything?” Nasta asked.

“We made sure to pack everything and we used that spell to locate anything that we might have forgotten, we’ve got everything.” Harry said with a smile. “I can’t believe we’re actually moving out of those rooms.”

“Good riddance.” Draco said. “They were so small, it was fine with just us and Braiden, with the quintuplets too it was an acquired talent of stepping over babies without injuring them.”

They all laughed at that, fondly, or not so fondly in some cases, remembering stepping over several babies to reach a settee or to go to the bathroom.

“It was like an exercise programme.” Max grinned. “It's like that game I used to play with my brother and sisters when we were younger where we weren’t allowed to step on the carpet because it was lava, we used to jump from chair to table, we used to make stepping stones with cushions, only instead of lava, all babies are landmines, you’re not allowed to step on the landmines.”

Harry laughed and shook his head. “Landmines are explosives.” He told Draco, who looked at Max like he’d lost his head. “If you stand on them they blow up.”

“Are we going or not?” Blaise asked, looking around at the students and their parents suspiciously. “I don’t like the look that girl is giving you.”

They all turned to see Sally-Ann Perks blush and look away quickly.

“She was trying to flirt with me during the ceremony.” Harry replied disgustedly. “Or at least I think that was her attempt at flirting, she might have just had something in her eye.”

“Don’t be so scathing, Harry.” Hermione chastised.

Harry turned and hugged her tightly as her parents looked on nervously. Harry would have thought they’d have gotten used to having a witch in the family by now, it had been seven years after all.

“It feels good to be graduated. I never thought I’d get here, not with…”

“I know.” Hermione answered. “His end was a bit anti-climactic though, wasn’t it?”
Harry snorted hard. “For you maybe, you trying being possessed and having a man screaming and flailing in your mind as you burn him to death.”

Hermione held him tighter. “There isn’t anything that I wouldn’t do for you. I would have followed you anywhere if you had needed it.”

“I know.” Harry said, wrapping his arms around her further. “It’s not needed though, he’s gone, he’s dead and this time, he can’t come back.”

“I can’t believe he used Horcruxes…seven of them no less.”

“He’s gone, Hermione, I burnt all of those soul fragments, I burnt him.”

“He still has followers out there.” Hermione said directly into his ear.

“The Aurors are hunting them down; they were way more interested in my list of names after Voldemort’s body was found in the Ministry. They won’t get away with what they did.”

“Why did Lucius Malfoy get away? Donations to charity?”

Harry stiffened before relaxing. “No, he was questioned with Veritaserum and it emerged that Voldemort was blackmailing him with the lives of his Wife and son, apparently it’s old Pureblood stuff and he could do absolutely anything he deemed necessary to ensure that Draco, as his only blood Heir to his family name, survived, even using the Unforgivables and torturing Muggles. That law really needs to be changed.”

Hermione nodded. “I agree, people can’t get away with murder and torture just for the sake of one child.”

“Well Lucius got off on Draco’s name, so I can’t really complain about that, he’s been a little…prickly I suppose would be the word, but he doesn’t seem to want to stake me through the eyes in my sleep.”
“Voldemort has no chance of winning now, Harry; he’s dead, only the insane fanatical followers are going to be after you, like the Lestranges.”

“Rodolphus and Rabastan are still eluding Ministry capture then?”

“There hasn’t been a single sighting.” Hermione said nervously. “You take care of yourself, Harry, be careful and don’t take any unnecessary risks.”

“You know I will be careful. I’m a Mum now, Hermione, I’m over the recklessness of the past, I have something to live for now, people I care about enough that they will always come before myself.”

“Do we have something to be worried about?” Max teased.

Harry broke away from Hermione to see that they had gathered a crowd around them, watching as they hugged for fifteen minutes whispering into one another’s ears.

Harry laughed. “I’d make a joke right now if I didn’t think it would earn me four petulant lovers and a room of stony silence. You know you have nothing to worry about, we were having a conversation.”

“Wrapped in each other’s arms?” Draco demanded.

Hermione shrugged. “We’ve had conversations like this throughout our friendship.”

“Oh? Even when you abandoned him for a year?” Draco stabbed in cruelly.

“Draco!” Harry snapped, giving him a poisonous look. “We’re over that, you know we’re over that, why bring it up? You know we didn’t speak in those several months, you know the problems it caused and how hurt I was. No one stood by me back then, not you, not the Ministry, not even Ron and Hermione. I was alone and isolated until Blaise chased me down in the forest!”

“Careful, Harry.” Nasta warned with a look and Harry took a deep breath and smiled, giving Hermione another lingering hug, saying his goodbyes to her, before going to hug Blaise tightly.
“Did I ever thank you for choosing me?” Harry asked.

“Several times, Prezioso.” Blaise murmured gently.

“Though I could have done without all the neck squeezing, people thought you were abusing me of all things. Harry Potter, Boy Saviour in physically abusive relationship! It made me want to go tearing chunks out of people.”

“I was just helping you out.” Blaise insisted. “You wouldn’t let me do anything back then, you wouldn’t even let me provide or care for you. Do you have any idea how frustrating that is for a dominant Dracken?” He asked quietly.

Harry shook his head with a grin. “No, because I’m not one, but I wanted you to understand that I value my independence, I was never going to be a ‘yes dear, right away dear’ type of person and you seriously chose wrong if that’s what you wanted.”

Blaise laughed and kissed him. “Never.”

“Ma Da!” Braiden called out and Harry picked him up and brought him between him and Blaise, who wrapped his arms back around Harry, sandwiching Braiden between them.

“He’s looking more and more like you every day.” Blaise said, nuzzling a baby soft, chubby cheek. “My hair, my colour eyes, but everything else is like you.”

“He definitely has your chin.” Harry said. “Mine isn’t that strong or sharp.”

“But everything else is yours.” Blaise said. “He’s stopped looking like a clone of me and has started looking like a clone of you.”

Harry shook his head and smiled, kissing Braiden before setting him on the floor on his little feet, which were in a tiny pair of trainers, he stood up holding Braiden’s hands and let him see the world from an upright position. Blaise stood back a little and held his arms out, encouraging Braiden to toddle to him, but though he was so much better at standing now, he still hadn’t taken his first steps. Braiden was very happy to bounce between Harry’s hands, not the slightest bit interested in taking a single step forward and Harry sighed.

“Don’t you want to walk to Daddy Blaise?” Harry asked.

Braiden tipped his head back to look at him and grinned with a mouthful of little teeth that were coming through fast now that he was just a few weeks from his first birthday. The time had gone so fast.

“Are you ready, Harry?” Nasta asked.

Harry nodded as he pulled Braiden back into his arms. “Yes, let’s go home.”

They bundled the children up again, made sure they had everything and everyone and Harry looked at the majestic castle for the last time before he Apparated away to Max’s home, his home.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Settling in was easy, they had been here before, they knew where everything was and it just felt like coming home after a really long time away. It was an amazing feeling.

Harry collapsed onto a settee with a groan, Braiden in his lap as everyone settled around him. Max had been back yesterday and had cleaned everything and opened all the windows to let in a breeze and the house smelt clean and fresh and Max had even set up a play area for the babies in the middle of the room so that they had somewhere to go as soon as they got home, the sleeping babies were put into one of the three travel cots that Max had set up, they were still small enough at six months to fit two into one cot for a nap, but the awake babies were put in the play area and of course Tegan immediately took over, stopping Farren from playing properly as she snatched every toy that he picked up from his hands.

“She is so controlling.” Harry huffed as he separated them both and handed Farren one of his favourite toys, only for Tegan to crawl clumsily over and snatch it right back off of him.

“No, Tegan!” Harry said firmly. “That’s naughty and you shouldn’t snatch from your brothers.”

Harry carefully took the toy from her and handed it back to a scowling Farren, who turned his back on Tegan and started playing by himself. Harry laughed and stroked Farren’s back before handing Tegan her favourite toy, but she flung it away and started crying.

“You are so spoilt.” He told her as he lifted her out of the play area and cradled her as she cried on him.

“They’re just more advanced than regular babies.” Marianna said with an adoring smile. “They’re learning and developing so quickly and they have these huge personalities squashed into tiny little bodies, Tegan obviously wants to rule the roost, but Farren is not prepared to let that happen.”

“She needs to learn to stop being so spoilt and learn to share.” Harry said with a frown as he patted her back soothingly, listening to her cries trail off into hiccups.

“I’ve noticed that she’s only like this when Regan’s not with her.” Nasta said musingly, sharing what he had observed in the last few months. “If Regan’s there she’s so absorbed with him that she doesn’t take any notice of the others, but when he’s not there, it’s like she’s forced to take notice of them and she doesn’t like it.”

Harry rolled his eyes. “Like I said, spoilt.”

He put her down into her own travel cot and tucked her in, stroking a soft, chubby cheek until her little mouth puckered into a yawn; she fell asleep easily as he eased her to sleep.

“See, she was overtired.”

“Does Farren need a nap too?” Myron asked.

Harry checked on his second oldest child and shook his head.

“No, he’s fine. He’s turning out to not need as many naps as the others, he can stay awake for longer and doesn’t ever get grouchy, he’s so laid back.”

“He takes after me.” Max said loudly and proudly.
“I know, it seems the only thing that he took from me is the slight tint of green in his eyes.” Harry said as he sat back on the settee and pulled Braiden onto his lap. “Even then they’re more blue than green, more teal coloured.”

“Our eye colour mixed into his eyes is adorable.” Max assured. “We make good looking sons.”

“We’d make good looking daughters too.” Harry grinned. “When are you going to give me some little girls to fuss over?”

“What about the daughter I gave you?” Nasta asked with a raised eyebrow.

“She acts more like a son than Calix, Braiden and Leolin put together. I think if I put her in a little blue shirt and a pair of dungarees no one would know that she and Regan are not identical twin boys.” Harry laughed.

“You certainly will NOT put my only daughter in dungarees!” Draco hissed. “How dare you even joke of such a thing!”

Harry laughed harder. “I wasn’t joking, Draco. If I’m taking them out to the park when they’re older or into the garden then I won’t have her in pretty little white dresses and expensive sandals, I want her to be able to run around and get dirty with her brothers, a little girl she may be, but I won’t have her treated any differently where my sons are allowed to run around and roll in the mud, but she has to sit prim and proper in a little wicker chair sipping tea and making idle small talk. Let her grow up and have fun first, then once she is actually a woman she can start acting like a little lady…if she wants too that is! She may not even be the slightest bit interested.”

“Well said!” Richard said with a smile, Harry hadn’t seen him grin or laugh like himself since the problems with Ashleigh had popped up, she hadn’t done anything but lie in bed since Max had taken her from his birth certificate and since Caesar had done the same she had become despondent, the girls had yet to go through with the threat and they were instead urging their Mother to seek help, Talia was rapidly losing patience according to Max and she was in the process of making a false certificate to take her Mother’s name from it. Harry wanted her to get better so badly, but she was not being cooperative, she wasn’t helping herself and they could only do so much in terms of helping her, she needed to want to help herself too or nothing was ever going to work.

Max left the room with a smile and he came back ten minutes later with a tray of tea cups and a plate of biscuits.
“You make the perfect housewife.” Blaise teased, giving him a kiss in exchange for the mug of coffee.

Max laughed and nipped at Blaise’s nose. “You’re lucky you’re so cute or you’d be over my knee.”

Blaise snorted and shoved him away. “Don’t flatter yourself; you couldn’t get me over your knee.”

“Don’t tempt me.” Max grinned naughtily.

“Will you behave yourself?” Myron demanded. “You have guests.”

“I’m aware of that, Dad, if you weren’t here I wouldn’t have threatened to do it, I would have just done it.” Max answered with that naughty grin widening on his face.

Harry laughed and Braiden joined in with him, which made a wave of warm pride and love flood through him.

“Daddy Max is very silly isn’t he, Braiden?”

“Dada maba!” Braiden echoed adorably as he clapped tiny hands together.

“I found the balls you wanted for him. They were under the stairs.” Max said, holding a finger up as he remembered something and he rushed out of the room.

Harry frowned as he tried to remember what balls he had been talking about before Max brought back the inflatable ball pit and blew it up with magic, stoppered it and then upended the two huge bags of plastic balls into it that Braiden had gotten for Christmas.

“Come here my son, let’s see you in this pit and see what you make of it.” Max clapped his hands together and took Braiden from Harry’s lap, settling him into the inflatable pit and settling him securely on the floor, surrounded by plastic balls.

Braiden’s eyes were wide and he kicked his legs and flapped his arms, his eyes filling with tears as he knocked the balls flying, which startled him more and he started crying in earnest.

Harry plucked him out and comforted him as Braiden clutched at him before he calmed and sniffled on his lap.

“I think that was a little too sudden.” Harry said.

Max nodded and handed Braiden a yellow plastic ball, which Braiden held with his whole hand and stared at. He sniffled again as his tears dried up and Harry grinned when the yellow ball was held between both hands and went right into the dribbling mouth and his son tried to bite on it, but it was far too big to fit in his mouth and he just ended up slobbering all over the ball instead, licking at it with a little wet, pink tongue.

Max however had put Farren in the ball pit and he seemed to be enjoying it a lot more than Braiden had, or at least he wasn’t crying hysterically. He was just sitting in amidst the balls, acting like he did when he was propped up between several cushions. Max was offering him different coloured balls, but when Farren finally slapped a green ball from Max’s hand he laughed and sat back, getting the message that Farren was perfectly happy to just be sitting in the balls observing everything and not playing with them.

“I wish he’d play more.” Blaise sighed. “Especially when I see him actually playing with something and then someone takes what he has from him, like Tegan did.”

“I don’t think he’s interested in anything that he can’t actually eat.” Max said with a small smile. “Watch.”

He picked up a biscuit from the plate, which Harry had only just noticed had a few rusks on the side, and handed it to Farren, whose whole face lit up as he started gurgling, grasping the rusk in a little hand and sucking on the biscuit happily.

“See! My boy is only happy when he’s eating.”

They all laughed, but a high beeping sounded, interrupting them and Aneirin broke off his conversation with Lucius and Myron to touch a button on his watch. He cursed softly.

“I’m going to have to leave you lads to settle in, I’m being summoned by my secretary. Work is always calling.” He sighed.
Nasta hugged him and Aneirin kissed his forehead, he went around the kids, kissing and hugging, shook hands with everyone and then hugged Harry.

“I’ll owl you later in the week and I’ll come over when I can.” He promised as he made sure he had everything before twisting on the spot.

“I think it’s time I got going too.” Marianna said, checking the time. “Josiah is taking me to dinner and I can’t help but take an hour or two to get ready.”

“I think you’re missing another hour in there, Mother.” Blaise teased.

“Oh hush you, a woman has to look her best for a date, don’t they, Harry?”

Harry tore his face away from Braiden and blinked. “Um, I don’t actually know. I can’t say I’ve ever been a woman or even gone on a date with one.”

That made everyone laugh as Marianna gave him a fake smack to the shoulder and kissed his cheek.

“You have dressed like one though.” Blaise whispered into his ear as he came to sit next to him.

“That was different.” Harry smiled. “If I like wearing a skirt or a dress with high heels now and then to rile up my lovers, there’s nothing wrong with that, it’s when I start wearing the muck on my face, keeping half the house in a handbag and spells the hair off my legs when you have to check my boxers to make sure I haven’t accidentally blasted my balls off with a severing hex.”

Blaise laughed so much and so hard at that along with Harry that everyone stared at them and despite being asked to repeat the joke several times, they were laughing so hard that they couldn’t breathe, Braiden giggling between them.

“Come on, what’s so funny?” Max asked curiously. “I like a good laugh.”

Harry shook his head, calming down a bit, at least until he caught sight of Blaise and then he burst out laughing again.
“Well I think it’s time to leave these hyenas to their fun, it was lovely seeing you again, Narcissa. We must have tea sometime soon.”

“Of course.” Narcissa agreed graciously as she stood and smoothed down her skirt. She gave that little kiss to each cheek that women were fond of doing before Marianna left and Narcissa hugged Draco as she and Lucius planned to leave, Lucius wrapping up his conversation about politics with Myron.

Harry sat with a smile on his face and Myron stood with Richard.

“We’ll leave you boys be, but we’ll be back soon to see you.” Richard said with a wink.

“I thought you needed to…”

“Oh now that would take me back to the early years.” Richard chuckled.

“Not now, Myron!” Richard snapped.

Harry’s smile fell; it was the first time that he’d ever seen Richard being stern with Myron and not the other way around. It made him think that perhaps things at their home were even more difficult that he had originally thought.

“You don’t have to go.” Harry offered. “Max has a spare room if you’d like to stay the night even.”

“Oh now that would take me back to the early years.” Richard chuckled.

“Don’t offer my spare room to them!” Max replied scandalised. “I’m not going to wash the sheets my Dads’ have been…intimate on!”

That set Harry off laughing yet again and the tears came beyond his control as he tried his all just to control his breathing as he sucked in a deep rattling breath only to lose it laughing again.

Max huffed and crossed his arms and turned his head away. “Well I’m not!” He scowled.
Myron chuckled and punched Max gently on the shoulder. “We’re not staying, though it was nice of you to ask, Harry. We’ll leave you to settle in, but maybe in a few weeks we’ll take you up on that offer.”

Max looked horrified and Harry slowed his breathing right down before he had a heart attack and he hugged Myron and Richard goodbye before they turned to leave, he hefted Braiden back on his lap as Blaise handed the little boy his yellow ball that had slipped from his hands.

“So what were you laughing at?” Draco asked once Myron and Richard had left, leaving them on their own to settle in.

“Blaise reminded me that I liked wearing women’s clothes.” Harry said wiping the tears from his eyes and draining the last of his honey tea.

“And that made you laugh why?” Max asked. “If you’d had the idea to wear more, Blaise wouldn’t have been laughing with you.”

“Harry told me that there was nothing wrong with wearing women’s clothing to wind us up, but when he starts wearing make-up, carting around a handbag and charming off his body hair that we have to check to make sure that he hadn’t accidentally cursed his balls off.”

Max snorted, Nasta rolled his eyes and Draco huffed. Harry giggled and Blaise grinned.

“Just us for the joke, love, but just so we’re clear, if that ever does happen, I want it on record that I wish to go to Saint Mungos to have that rectified.” Harry told him and they laughed together and Braiden giggled between them, clapping little hands, once again dropping the yellow ball, which Blaise dutifully bent to pick back up to hand to him.

“Who wants more tea?” Max asked happily.

“You just want to spend the day in your kitchen.” Harry teased.

Max groaned in pleasure. “Don’t tempt me.”
“I think you could get hard from being in that kitchen for too long.” Blaise said.

“He can when Nasta’s in there too.” Draco added with a smirk.

Said men blushed and Harry laughed, slipping to the floor and letting Braiden lean over the ball pit and pat at them, picking up balls and dropping them and clapping his hands, letting him and Farren interact together.

“We’ve all had a long, exciting day; I think it’s best if we catch an early night.” Nasta said.

Max huffed. “Your version of an early night is a boring one. My early nights often…”

“Leave us tired, grouchy the next morning and in my case with a backache.” Harry finished with a grin.

“I was going to say mutually satisfied.” Max pouted.

Harry laughed and beckoned Max over to kiss him. “Where is my tea?” He asked with a smile.

“I’ll happily go and get you one, my kitchen is all lonely and cold through disuse, I have to change that. There’s nothing worse about a house than a cold, dingy kitchen. A kitchen should always be the heart of the house!”

Harry watched Draco roll his eyes behind Max and he stifled a giggle, happily focusing on Braiden instead, who bent all the way over the side of the ball pit and Harry happily rolled him all the way over and sat him in with the balls, Braiden laughing happily, much more at ease with the pit and all the balls after they were introduced slowly and he and Farren started playing together. He loved watching his babies play together, they were growing so fast now that he wanted a spell to slow them down a little, but he knew that that wouldn’t be fair.

He sighed. “When must we visit the Faerie city?” He asked unhappily.

Nasta grunted and pulled a face, like he always did these days when Faeries were so much as mentioned.
“Next week some when, it might be best to get it done before your heat period. They’re expecting us so we don’t have to book an appointment.” He grumbled.

“Do you want me to go on my own?” Harry asked. “I don’t mind, honestly.”

Nasta’s whole body quivered and he made a soft snarling noise.

“The Dracken won’t let me, huh?”

Nasta shook his head. “No. It’s a terrible idea letting you go anywhere alone and with one of the babies too, no, I’m going with you, but I hate those fucking Faeries.”

“Our son is a Faerie!” Harry reminded forcefully.

“Not the Faeries collectively!” Nasta amended. “Those two specific Faeries.”

Harry made an ‘O’ of understanding and nodded as he played with Braiden and Farren, pushing a few balls around with his finger.

“Will they try to take him from us?” Harry asked again, as he had several times since the Faeries had expressed interest in him.

“I’ll kill them if they try.” Nasta swore and then he grinned, showing sharp fangs. “It would be my pleasure to.”

Harry clutched Leolin tightly, his little blue and white blanket wrapped around his teeny body securely, but he couldn’t help but be slightly awed at the Faerie city as he walked with Nasta through the streets from the edge of the city, where the specialised Portkey had left them.

When he had been told city, he hadn’t actually thought city, as stupid as it sounded. He had thought maybe the court halls that Aneirin had visited, the library he had mentioned and a few other official buildings grouped together, but this was an actual city, completely hidden by magic, but it was huge, complete with residential houses as well as shops and business buildings.

The pathways were paved with granite of all things and the roads were tightly packed dirt. Nasta had told him that they didn’t have cars here.

“Why do they have roads if they don’t have cars?” He asked with a frown.

Nasta had shrugged, but they found out why when they found horses pulling carriages further down. Harry snorted incredulously.

“Seriously, they have horses and carts still?” He sniggered and Nasta chuckled, pulling him into the side of his body as they got strange looks from the regal looking Faeries.

“They all remind me of Draco.” Harry hissed quietly and Nasta grinned.

“We have to try and tug the silver spoon from his mouth.”

“And the bejewelled sceptre from his arse.” Harry muttered.

“He has gotten better.” Nasta allowed with a small smile.

“He has, but he has a long way to go before he stops using a saucer with his tea cups and crossing his hands in his lap as he’s waiting for dinner.”

Nasta laughed, but cut off when they were approached by one of the Faeries.

“Dragons do not belong here!” He snapped hostilely.

Nasta stepped in front of Harry and Leolin smoothly.

“Says who?” He demanded. “You? And who are you? Are you Sindri, head of the court? I think not!”
The Faerie sneered at them, but he moved off and Nasta ground his teeth together. “Fucking Unseelie.” He spat.

“That’s the horrible Faeries?” Harry said.

Nasta chuckled. “They’re not horrible, but they’re more like dominant Drackens, they’re more often than not Valkyries, who are the warriors of the Faeries, the defenders, the protectors, they don’t like us being here anymore than we’d like a bunch of Ministry officials walking into our yearly meetings. They’re suspicious of us.”

“They should mind their own business!” Harry huffed as he checked Leolin over critically and tugged the corner of the blanket to cover his little chin.

“Is he alright?”

Harry nodded. “He’s fine for now, but he’ll want a feed soon though, I’d rather feed him before the meeting rather than during it.”

Nasta nodded and they walked leisurely around the city, making their way slowly to the large, sandy coloured building that dominated the skyline like Gringotts bank did with every other building in Diagon Alley.

When Leolin woke up, little fists flailing as he cried for a bottle, they stopped on a bench and Nasta pulled a little bottle from the nappy bag that he was carrying over his shoulder. Harry sat right up against Nasta, whose arm was firmly around him, his other arm acting as a shield to Leolin. They had talked about this non-stop for the last week and Nasta had told him that he’d bring Leolin alone if Harry didn’t let him act as a human shield for them both.

He hated it, naturally, but as he had been told numerous times, a dominant Dracken’s main purpose after giving seed for babies was to die in place of their children or submissive, better if it was in place of both. If Harry heard that one more time then he was going to start frothing at the mouth.

Leolin was drinking more, but he was very slow going, which meant that he didn’t drink as much as a little guzzler like Farren would, but Harry counted it as a success than Leolin was drinking at all and that he had actually increased his milk intake since his birth, even if it was only by a few extra ounces per feed.

Harry hefted the tiny baby over his shoulder and patted his little back, now a dab hand at avoiding the miniscule wings and the small stubs that were his flexible wing joints. It took them a further five minutes to get Leolin to bring up his wind and Harry let himself be led around by Nasta’s arm around his back, following the subtle twitches in his mate’s muscles, following him almost hip to hip.
as he kept his eyes on Leolin's golden ones, but he stopped dead when Leolin smiled up at him with a toothless mouth for the first time.

“Nas! Nasta he smiled! He smiled at me!” Harry hissed as he tried to get Nasta to understand as quickly as possible while still keeping his eyes on Leolin.

“He what? It’s too soon.”

“He smiled at me!” Harry snarled furiously, glaring at Nasta, before looking back at Leolin and smiling widely at him.

Nasta poked his head over his shoulder and looked down at Leolin, who frowned and squirmed, making a soft noise.

“Are you sure you got all of his wind up?” Nasta asked.

“Of course I did! He smiled at me damn it!”

Nasta chuckled. “Okay, if you say that he smiled then he smiled. I can’t wait for him to do it again so I can see; I’ve been waiting for something other than a frown or a scowl for six months, that’s forever in Dad years.”

Harry laughed at that. “Dad years? You just made that up.”

“No, it’s something my Dad always used to say.” Nasta answered with a smile.

“Delericey?”

A Faerie with thick black hair and bright gold eyes rushed up to them.

“I was expecting your Father to be with, you must be Nasta and Harry. I am Warren.”
Nasta stopped shielding Harry then and he relaxed a bit, just enough to shake hands with Warren.

“My Father told me to look out for you.”

“I’ve been waiting for you for the last three moon turns.”

“Moon turns?” Harry said. “Months?”

“The Faeries don’t measure time like we do, Cariad.” Nasta explained quietly. “They usually measure time with the equinoxes and then by full moons. They don’t count the hours of the day, but by the phases of the sun and I don’t think they know what minutes or seconds are.”

“Is this the little one that’s causing all the fuss?” Warren asked, waiting for Harry to remove the blanket a bit to show Leolin’s slowly blinking eyes and his little frown. “He’s beautiful. He looks like Trefor’s second son, Neifion.”

“You knew him?” Harry asked surprised.

“Yes…well, we need to get going.” Nasta said coldly, steering Harry away from Warren who had nodded to Harry’s question.

“Bye, Warren!” Harry called out before turning to Nasta. “How long do Faeries live?”

“Longer than Drackens. I think the average is six hundred years.”

“Six hundred!” Harry gasped.

“On average, some have reached seven hundred.”

“That…that’s insane!”
Nasta pulled him into a hug as they walked and squeezed his shoulder before they stopped and looked up at the court building. It looked ancient, worn smooth by time and one of the steps was broken and it was actually crumbling like ash into a little pile of something that looked like beige dust.

“Well, let’s get this over with. I want to rub their snotty noses in him and then leave.”

“Please keep calm.” Harry begged. “I know you’ve had a few…surprises this last week or two, but don’t let it get in the way of what’s best for Leolin.”

“I’d never let anything get in the way of what’s best for Leolin, not even myself, never doubt that,
Harry.”

“I don’t doubt it, love, that’s why I trust you implicitly as my top dominant, you always put everyone before yourself, sometimes I really don’t like you doing that, but when it comes to the kids…”

Nasta smiled and sucked in a deep breath. “Come on then, let’s get this done and see what these Faeries have to say.”

They climbed the gritty, sandy feeling steps, avoiding the crumbling step and Nasta opened the ancient door that swung easily on its well-oiled hinges despite how old they looked.

Harry stepped into the halls and frowned at the polished stone that was everywhere. The Faeries had a love of granite it seemed. Nasta led him forward to the polished wood reception desk, their shoes echoing on the floor and the Faerie sat behind the desk sneered at them with every step they took.

“Dragons do not belong here.” He told them. “The courts are closed.”

“We would see the court now.” Nasta sneered right back.

“Do you have an appointment?” He asked snottily.

“We’ve had an open invitation to come here for four months.” Nasta replied as politely as he could, breathing in deeply to calm himself.
“The court doesn’t speak to dragons.”

“We are here by invitation of Sindri himself.” Nasta hissed, trying to keep his calm as best as he could. “We would see the court now or it’ll be on your head.”

“The court does not speak to dragons!” The Faerie sneered right back at them, repeating his previous comment as if he thought they merely didn’t understand what he was saying.

“Then go and ask them yourself.” Nasta hissed. “We’re not leaving until we have had this meeting.”

“You’ll be laughed right out of the court room and I shall laugh too as you are dragged past this desk by the Valkyrie guards on your way out.”

“Fine, whatever, I don’t care what you find your turn-ons from; just let us go and see the court.” Nasta waved away, thoroughly annoyed now.

The Faerie stuck his nose in the air arrogantly and wrote something down in a thick book.

“Go down the left hall and turn right, then right again and finally left and wait until you are called in.”

“Thank you for your help.” Harry said, slightly sarcastically as he and Nasta moved away from the desk and followed the directions to a square room with a few benches outside of a wooden door.

Harry sat down with a sigh and rested Leolin on his knees, smiling at his youngest child, kissing little fingers and little hands, Leolin made soft little noises, but not anything anyone could call close to a laugh.

“I can’t wait until he starts laughing.” Nasta said, as if he had read his mind.

“Me either, though Farren still hasn’t laughed and Tegan’s more like to scream than laugh.”

“She is a very frustrating little lady.” Nasta admitted. “Maybe she needs a woman’s touch?”
“She needs to stop being so spoilt and her every baby whim indulged! It’s not helping. Draco is particularly bad.” Harry said with a smile.

“I think he’s just dreaming of all that gorgeous, thick black hair that she’ll have when she’s older and is trying to keep her on side so that he can brush it to his heart’s content.” Nasta chuckled.

Harry laughed with him. “As long as she doesn’t take my hair, or really if none of the children take my hair, I think he’ll be happy.”

“There’s bound to be one baby with your hair, the odds against it are too high with how many babies we can potentially have. I like your hair anyway.” Nasta told him, bending down to bury his face in his hair, nuzzling it. “I’d love for a child to have your wonderful hair; it would look so adorable on a child.”

Harry laughed. “Don’t tell Draco that, he’ll kill you in your sleep for saying such a thing, after all, we can’t have a child in dungarees either. The shame of it!”

Nasta shook his head. “I’m glad you’d let our girls run around in the mud like our boys, I don’t want them all prissy and made up like dolls or little ladies, as you said, that can easily come later, when they are actually grown women, but for now, I don’t care if they run around the garden in jeans and a baseball cap or dive into a pile of mud completely naked, as long as they’re having fun.”

Harry nodded. “I swore that I would treat my girls and boys the same. I won’t have them segregated or treated any differently and I mean it, if one of my girls does not want to wear dresses, I won’t force her, if Tegan wants to wear jeans and a baggy tee-shirt for the rest of her life, I don’t care. Are we going to give them pocket money?” He asked suddenly, curiously.

Nasta laughed in surprise. “They’re not even a year old.”

“But will we give them money when they’re older? I never had pocket money, but Dudley always had pocket money and everything he wanted on top too.”

“I’m sure we can work something out, but I’m sure a few Sickles a week aren’t going to hurt, as long as they don’t spend all of it on sweets. I mean that seriously.”
Harry nodded. “I was thinking more for the clothes they want, or books, magazines…everything I wanted but could never have when I was little. It wasn’t sweets I would have bought with any money I had. I wanted proper food; I would have killed for a crunchy green apple or a real sandwich, not just a slice of unbuttered bread and a piece of cheese. But outside of food I would have bought a toy or two, books, clothes that actually fit me and that I wanted to wear, a pair of trainers without holes. I just want them to have everything that I never got to have.”

Nasta sat next to him and wrapped an arm around him. “You’re away from them now, Caru, they can’t hurt you anymore, no one can hurt you anymore.”

“I know and between Richard and his team and the jury, I won’t be seeing them again either after the trial, I just…it’s bringing up so many memories, Nas! I hate the memories, I hate the nightmares.”

“You’re getting nightmares again?”

Harry sighed and nodded, not seeing the point in hiding it. “I usually get up and splash some water on my face before getting back into bed, but sometimes the memories are too harsh and I need to have a cup of tea to calm myself down before I can fall back to sleep again.”

“Have you had any more flashbacks?”

Harry shook his head empathetically. “No. I rarely think about it when I’m awake and it helps that I’m just so busy with the kids as well, but this last week, with the trial getting closer and Leolin’s meeting with the court, it’s just…I guess I’m just nervous.”

“You know they won’t see or hurt you again, even if they do get off, which they won’t.”

Harry nodded. “I know that, but…my nightmares don’t seem to realise that.” He admitted. “I’m sometimes a little boy again, six, eight, ten, it differs, but they’re always hurting me, shouting, yelling, hitting, the one I had recently frightened me. I was about four and I was slowly starving to death, I could see my ribs and my belly was back against my spine, I was so hungry in the dream that I could still feel the sensation of it when I woke up.”

“I thought you said that they started starving you when you were seven, not four?”

“They didn’t, it was just a nightmare.” Harry said sadly. “Nightmares rarely make sense, but I…I don’t know why these nightmares are coming up now!”

“Are you worried about the court trial?” Nasta asked.

Harry shrugged. “A bit I guess. I’ve only ever been in court once, when I was fifteen and it was when the Ministry was trying to expel me for repelling the Dementors that were sent after me. That was just a witch hunt, this is going to be a Muggle court and I have to watch what I say without it seeming like I’m withholding anything, I just know that I’m going to mess it up somehow.”

“You won’t, Harry, I promise. Richard will be right there with you, right next to you and he’ll be doing most of the speaking anyway.”

“I’m still worried about it, I don’t know why I’m so worried and nervous, I just am.”

Nasta hugged him and kissed his cheek. “Everything is going to be fine, we’ll get through today, we’ll get through your heat, we’ll get through the trial. Everything is going to be fine, Harry, because I won’t let it be anything else. I promise.”

Harry smiled gratefully at Nasta, but he sighed and tickled Leolin’s little belly, watching him squirm on his knees. He couldn’t help but think that something was going to go wrong and as a haughty looking Faerie with red hair and the Faerie gold eyes that made him look like his whole head was on fire came to tell them that the court was ready for their audience, Harry’s heart started beating faster and his breath came shorter, he didn’t want the Faeries anywhere near his little boy and he couldn’t explain why.

Chapter End Notes

A/N: With the completion of The Tribulation of the Blue Moon, I can now happily come back to the Rise of the Drackens, I hope you have all enjoyed this chapter, I’ll go into more detail about the actual Faerie city in the next chapter, but I wanted to get Nasta and Harry into the meeting as soon as possible, which will now carry on in the next chapter.

So, I hope you’ve all enjoyed this chapter and I’ll see you soon,

StarLight Massacre. X
A/N: A happy belated birthday to Emma, one of the Facebookers, I'm sorry it's a few days late lovelie.

Last Time

Harry smiled gratefully at Nasta, but he sighed and tickled Leolin’s little belly, watching him squirm on his knees. He couldn’t help but think that something was going to go wrong and as a haughty looking Faerie with red hair and the Faerie gold eyes that made him look like his whole head was on fire came to tell them that the court was ready for their audience, Harry’s heart started beating faster and his breath came shorter, he didn’t want the Faeries anywhere near his little boy and he couldn’t explain why.

Chapter Seventy-Nine – Audience

Harry controlled himself as he walked with Nasta through the wooden door and approached the slim and slender table with nine Faeries sat behind it, five males and four females. He tried to breathe deeply and calmly, but his mind automatically flashed to the summer before his fifth year, just after his fifteenth birthday, when he was forced before the whole Wizengamot to defend himself against a witch hunt set against him before he’d even walked into the courtroom, just so they could discredit his name for daring to tell the truth about Voldemort and Cedric.

Nasta’s hand pressed against his lower back and Harry breathed easier, at least he had support this time, he had Nasta to walk with him, to stand with him and to protect him if these Faeries should foolishly attempt to hurt Leolin, not that he’d let them, he’d be the first to tear out eyeballs if they so much as said a bad word against his little son.

Harry let Nasta greet the court in the strange pattern they had, Harry would think it easier to just go along the table and greet everyone in order, but no, the Faeries did everything differently, just so the head of the court, who was sat in the centre of the table, was greeted last, so Nasta started with the Faerie on the left end of the table, then greeted the Faerie on the right end and then swung back to the left of the table and carried on going left to right.

One Faerie, a female, stood and approached them carefully, showing her hands, but her eyes were all for the bundle in Harry’s arms, a soft waver in her laughter lined mouth.
“Narilla.” Nasta greeted calmly with a small, polite bow.

Harry relaxed only slightly then, Aneirin had told them who would be friendly and who might be hostile, who had been hostile towards him and the idea of Leolin being born to Drackens and those who had wanted to take Leolin away. Narilla had been the one who seemed more concerned about Leolin’s health rather than taking him from the unfit ‘dragons.’

He pulled the blanket from Leolin’s face; his golden eyes peered up into Harry’s before flitting across to rest on Narilla, who was approaching him. He was frowning deeply.

“Oh such a face from one so little.” She laughed as she drank him in. “He is six moons old now?”

Harry nodded silently as he pulled the blanket from Leolin’s body and handed it to Nasta, who folded it up and slotted it into the nappy bag that he was carrying unashamedly.

Leolin was wearing a nappy and soft linen trousers, but he wasn’t wearing a shirt or a vest, which is why he had been wrapped in a blanket in July.

“Oh he’s such a little sweetheart.” Narilla sighed, thin fingers ghosting over a sharp cheek that had yet to gain baby fat.

“Check the baby for glamours.” One man sniffed his nose crinkling like he had smelled something foul and rotten. “I don’t believe these dragons could create one of our kind.”

“Oh hush, Alston!” Narilla chided sternly, her gold eyes hot with anger. “If the blood is in the lines it can come up anywhere, even somewhere unexpected, if the gods will it so.”

“The Delericeys were nulled and voided!”

“Not anymore.” One man said with a glare.

“One Faerie does not change their status, Dain!” Alston spat.

“Yes it does.” The ancient looking Faerie in the centre of the table said softly and slowly. “I have given this a lot of thought and if the gods had cursed the Delericey line as null, this little one wouldn’t have been born to it, so the gods have seen fit to lift the curse and bless the Delericeys with the life blood of the Faeries once more.”

“They’re dragons!”

“We heard you the first time, Alston.” A very young, good looking Faerie answered. His hair was a shock of soft looking golden curls that almost completely matched the bright gold of his eyes. Harry smiled a naughty smile and tried to ignore the blush rising on his cheeks as he thought of Draco with gold eyes, if the Faerie’s hair had been straight and his eyes silver instead of gold, Harry might have easily imagined Draco behind that table. They had the same angular face.

“Then why is no one listening?!” Alston hissed.

“Because you don’t have a valid point.” The Faerie, Dain, pointed out with a snarl.

“You and Kailen should not be a part of this court meeting; you are too close to the situation.” A woman with dark, unfriendly eyes glared at him.

“I am a member of this court regardless of the situation, Siusan!” Dain bit out harshly.

“You will obviously vote to accept this babe of dragons due to the past, not the present situation!” Another woman burst out angrily.

“That babe of dragons is a Faerie.” The curly gold haired Faerie said boredly. “Regardless of past situations, that is the present, he is a Faerie and I will not vote to outcast one of our own based merely on parentage.”

“No one asked for your opinion, Eitri!” Alston snarled.

“Oh? I thought that was the reason that we were all here?” The previously silent male closest to Dain put in softly.

“They fight like children with an ice cream.” Harry whispered to Nasta, who shot an amused look down to him before turning back to the table of fighting Faeries. It was rather amusing.

“Enough!” One woman shouted. “They should not be allowed to keep such a vulnerable babe, I would accept him, Sindri, I gladly would and I’d raise him as my own!”

Harry hissed and covered Leolin’s body with his arms and Nasta slipped in front of him, his stance loose and ready to attack.

“You touch him and I’ll kill you.” He swore deeply.

“You see!” Alston stood up to point furiously at Nasta. “No culture! They’re mindless beasts!
They’re an outlawed creature for a reason!”

“I agree with, Alston, we cannot leave a defenceless Faerie babe with such beasts. They could get him killed, or even kill him themselves.”

Harry’s hands clenched, his instincts battling with his rational mind, he wanted to kill her for daring to say that he was a threat to his own baby, but his logical half knew that they were riling them up on purpose, to show their very worst qualities to the court and Harry touched Nasta’s back, rubbing a thumb into the tense muscles of his lower back, easing out the tension.

“They’re doing this purposefully.” Harry stood on his toes to whisper as close to Nasta’s ear as he could while the court fought once more over the outburst. “They’re riling us up to show only our bad side, we need to stay calm.”

Nasta breathed in deeply and let it out slowly, he slipped an arm around Harry’s back and stepped back to stand beside him, placing a hand on Leolin’s head and running a thumb over those sharp features. Leolin was still awake, but he was getting tired as he yawned with a minute mouth.

“Narilla, come away from them, they’re dangerous and unpredictable!” Alston said angrily.

Narilla, who was standing off to the side a little away from them, puffed up with fury and Harry could almost see her beautifully muted dress ruffling with her indignation.
“You dare presume to order me around?” She demanded her face a hard mask of perpetual anger. “I am three hundred years your senior! I was presiding over this court before you had full function of your wings and was still suckling at your Mother’s milk in swaddling clothes!”

“I…I meant no offence.” Alston replied, completely cowed and contrite from the vision of the enraged woman before him.

“You meant every offence and I will not stand for it!” Narilla answered, turning her back on Alston and coming back to touch Leolin again. “Your Father said that you had named him Leolin?”

Harry nodded silently. He felt as thick as a crate of bricks just nodding all the time like a toy dog, but he was so nervous and he was more afraid that he’d actually stutter and make even more of a fool out of himself that he just couldn’t speak. It seemed safer to just stay silent and let Nasta talk, not that Nasta was much of a talker either and he was nearly as silent as he was. He didn’t know if that was a good thing or not, but the Faeries seemed to like talking.

“Dragon name.” Alston muttered under his breath, just loud enough for them to hear, but he was coming across as petulant now and Harry shook his head sadly. He’d never understand how some people were so pathetic as to make fun of someone’s name, particularly one of a six month old infant.

“I know there were some problems with him being born too early, have his wings covered over yet?” Narilla took his attention once more, not even paying the slightest bit of notice to Alston any longer.

Harry carefully, and a bit nervously, pulled Leolin to rest carefully and securely over his shoulder, a move he had done a thousand times, but never with nine critically staring Faeries watching him, just waiting for him to slip up and make a mistake so that they could jump all over it like a dog with a bone.

Leolin’s tiny little wings were just starting to get a faint blush of pale colour to them, which made them seem healthier and more substantial than when they had been raw and weeping, Harry gladly welcomed the change, even if the wings had yet to so much as twitch.

“I assume he’s had no sicknesses or infections from having the open sores on his back? Not many premature Faeries survive. It’s less than one percent, maybe one premature baby in every one hundred, and I’m sure that one only survives now and then through pure luck.”

“He’s been fine.” Harry answered softly, thinking about what he wanted to say before opening his mouth. Draco would have been so proud. “No infections, no sickness, nothing but a bit of discomfort from having the sores, he used to wriggle on his back a little, like the newly growing skin was itchy, but he never cried over it and he never lost any sleep or missed any feeds.”

“Oh he’s a strong one.” Narilla complimented. “May I hold him?”

Harry pulled away from her immediately and raised an arm to curl around Leolin’s back, his hand protecting his head.

“Harry, I think it would be best if you let Narilla hold our son.” Nasta coaxed gently and carefully, aware that if he sounded too demanding that Harry would likely take a swipe at him.

Harry breathed deeply and he had to force himself to lower his arms and they shook as he handed Leolin over to the female Faerie.

He snatched himself back before he could lunge forward and take Leolin right back off of her. It didn’t feel right to be handing his son over to anyone, but he was soothed by Nasta, who held him and touched him, murmuring softly, encouragingly, in his ear, and by Narilla, who held Leolin expertly and gently, not putting pressure on his little wings, but still holding him securely and that she praised him, Leolin and Nasta over how well he’d come on and it all helped settle his Dracken side back away from the edge where the smallest little thing would push him to attack.

“Bring him over, quickly, Narilla.” Alston encouraged.

Narilla glared at Alston as Harry lunged forward, only to be held back by Nasta, who moved to block Narilla from the table.

“You will learn very soon, Alston, that I can cause you a lot of pain and embarrassment, now you will stop ordering me around like a witless animal. I am not your Mother, your lover, your sister or thankfully any other relation of yours, so you have absolutely no right to order your Elder’s around like you own them and if your Mother allows you to speak to her this way then I would be very surprised and disappointed in Sulana! I wonder how she’d react if I told her how you were conducting yourself today, at court too, no less.”

“Please do carry on.” The curly, golden haired Eitri said to Alston with a devastatingly handsome smile. “I believe we’d all enjoy watching the lovely Narilla rip you to pieces, after she’s handed little Leolin back to his rightful parents that is.”

“There will be no fighting in this meeting hall with a babe present.” The Faerie in the centre of the table, the one Harry was realising was the head of the court, Sindri, said harshly in his slow, tired voice.

Nasta gently petted Harry and loosened his arm around his waist now that they knew that Narilla wasn’t going anywhere with Leolin, but Harry was so very anxious to get his son back into his arms.

“We are here to meet Leolin for the first time.” The Faerie, Dain said into the echoing hall. “We are here to accept him into our city, not to decide if he should be ripped from his natural parents or if he deserves to be here or not. He is a Faerie, he has as much right to be here as any of us and we have no right to take him from his parents.”

“I would be a better Mother to him…”

“You have lost every babe you have ever tried to raise!” The nearly silent Faerie, Kailen, burst out angrily. “If there was a reason to take Leolin from his natural parents you would be the very last person given charge of him, Donella! Leolin is healthy, he is happy and he is still alive despite being born early, so Harry, Nasta and their other lovers are obviously raising him right and we have no need to intervene, Leolin is in no danger where he is and taking him from his natural parents for no reason is diabolical.”

“I agree with, Kailen.” Eitri spoke up immediately. “I won’t vote to have a babe be taken from his natural parents just because Alston is a prick and Donella wants him for herself.”

“You’re a babe yourself!” Alston snarled at him.

Eitri raised a golden eyebrow and gave a small dry chuckle. “Hardly, Alston. We all know why you hate the Dracken species, how is your daughter these days and your two grandchildren? Or is it three now, do you even know?”

Alston snarled and his hands clenched tightly.

“That is enough in front of the little babe!” Narilla demanded. “The little one is already getting uncomfortable with all of this overt aggression floating around. Here, Harry sweet one, I think he needs his Mother back.”

Harry happily accepted Leolin back and he couldn’t help but clutch at him tightly, bending his head to sniff at him deeply. Nasta reached under his elbow and touched the top of Leolin’s head, rubbing his black hair through two fingers and a thumb.

“It would be criminal to remove him from your care.” Narilla said softly as she watched them with their little Faerie baby. “I won’t have it, Sindri.”

Sindri nodded slowly. “This meeting is not for the removal of Leolin from the care of anyone.” He said clearly. “We are here to greet him, a lost Faerie babe, back into our city. We will give him and his parents everything they need to raise him safely.”

“Thank you.” Harry said softly.

Sindri nodded. “May I hold him?”

Harry licked his lips and took a deep breath, stepping forward without Nasta prompting him; he knew how important this moment was.

Harry bent easily over the very slim table and he laid Leolin in those aged arms and he watched as Sindri seemed to absorb the presence of Leolin, smiling softly as Leolin almost glared up at him.

“It is always nice to see a new Unseelie.” Sindri said softly.

“Leolin’s an Unseelie? How do you know?” Harry asked curiously as he tried to see some sort of mark or something that Sindri could see that he hadn’t noticed before.

“It’s his look, sweet one.” Narilla told him. “Unseelie babies are always scowling so much. Seelie babies are usually more docile, like Eitri.”

“He smiled at me.” Harry frowned.

Eitri laughed softly. “Unseelie can still smile and laugh and joke and they can be as kind as much as the next person, but they are more likely to be scowling and frowning if they’re left to think too much, it is their default expression if you will.”
Eitri stood then and came to stand at Sindri’s shoulder and Harry watched as Leolin’s little pout deepened to a full out scowl. Eitri laughed and bumped two slim fingers under Leolin’s chin very gently.

“Oh he is most definitely an Unseelie.”

“Can you tell is he’s a Fae or a Valkyrie?” Harry asked curiously.

Eitri looked at him with those gold eyes, long curls of the same golden hair falling down his face which allowed Harry to compare them critically and he found that it was very much the same shade of gold as his eyes.

“No. It’s impossible to tell yet, but most Unseelie are Valkyries too. It’s been a very long time since we’ve had an Unseelie Fae born.”

“Is it a problem for you if he’s a Fae or a Valkyrie?” An evil eyed female asked him. She had been silent up until now, sat stiffly between Dain and Kailen, like her chair had a spike on the seat but she saw it as too improper to stand to remove it, and Harry didn’t believe she was one of the ones on their side, not with the look in her eyes, so he answered her loaded question carefully, thinking hard about every word that he said, he couldn’t mess this meeting up, for Leolin’s sake if no one else’s.

“Of course not, I just wanted to know.” Harry answered carefully. “He’s my son, if there is anything I need to know then I want to know about it, I wouldn’t care either way if he turned out as a Fae or a Valkyrie and I don’t mind that he’s an Unseelie, I still love him. Nothing is going to change that.”

“Zuzana was asking because most parents of a Fae sell them.” Eitri told him blandly, his handsome smiles gone to be replaced by a blank stare that couldn’t entirely hide the pain in his big, wide eyes.

Harry reared back like he’d been hit and Nasta pressed a supporting hand to his back.

“It is not as clear cut as that.” Kailen told them. “They do sell them, but under the guise of a marriage bond, usually for a large dowry and the chance to make powerful new friends.”

“That’s hideous.” Nasta answered and Harry didn’t need to turn around to know that he was pulling that pinched face that he did when something truly disgusted him.
“Eitri got himself out of a marriage selling, didn’t you, Eitri?” Alston hissed dangerously and Harry realised that that was what the blank, almost pained look was about…someone had tried to sell Eitri, likely before he was even an adult. “He was going to go for a record price I hear, what with his odd colouring and pale beauty. His Uncle sat on this table before him, but he died suddenly half way through drawing up the marriage contract.”

“A very strange and sudden passing.” Eitri replied, lowering his head in what was clearly false grief. “Though I was very pleased to have been chosen to sit at this table after his death, I was expecting Lanika or Hirum to take the empty seat, though we all know that Alston wanted his son Eldon in my place. What other reason would he have for bringing this up?”

“Eldon is older and wiser than you!” Alston insisted. “A mere babe like you should not have been given such a prestigious position in the first place and in light of your obvious involvement with your Uncle’s passing…”

“Be very careful now, Alston.” Siusan told him, placing a calming hand on his arm. “The perpetrators for Culan’s death have already been charged and sentenced, they wanted Eitri for themselves and Culan refused them and their price so they killed him to try and bargain for Eitri once more with his new guardian, how could any of us have known that Eitri would petition to be his own guardian upon his Uncle’s death? So I am sure young Eitri had nothing to do with such a travesty, such involvement would mean his curly, golden head.”

“Of course I wasn’t a part of that horrendous scheme, I was just a young babe, wasn’t I, Alston?” Eitri said mildly, a sweet smile on his pouty lips. “I couldn’t possibly have been involved.”

“Suisan is correct.” Sindri said slowly as he cuddled with Leolin. “The perpetrators for Culan’s death were found and tried and executed justly, bringing up such a matter is very embarrassing for this court in front of visitors.”

“I think it’s very informative.” Nasta denied. “To know that most Faeries sell Fae babes to the highest bidder for gold and power is very interesting. If Leolin were to take a Faerie as a lover much later in his life, can we expect that his chosen partner might try to sell any Fae grandchildren that we might receive? I believe these are things that we need to know so that we might prepare accordingly and know to look for it in order to put a stop to it.”

“You arrogant beast!” Donella burst out suddenly and harshly. “To think that you actually believe that your babe would even be given a second glance by true Faeries. That you dare to think that he would actually manage to get a Faerie lover for this hypothetical situation to even arise! Imagine if they had a dragon babe! No Faerie would risk such embarrassment. It’s laughable, inconceivable…”
“Faerie or not, he will never have a true place here!” She ranted dramatically, pointing a long finger at Leolin, who was slowly drifting off to sleep in Sindri’s arms.

“You say another bad word against my son and I promise you will regret it.” Harry said angrily, his fists clenching tightly.

“Are you threatening me beast?!”

“Yes.” Harry confirmed. “If you say anything about my son, if you so much as breathe on him, I’ll break your neck faster than it takes you to fart in the morning.”

“You vile, uncouth beast! They should never have been allowed into this city!” Donella complained to Sindri.

“You would have him thrown from the city for laying claim to his own son and threatening violence if he’s harmed?” Eitri asked with a laugh. “Donella, forgive me for saying, but you are clearly missing the point. Far from being an uncouth beast, he is saying, very clearly, that if anyone here harms Leolin that he’ll react in kind, such a thing should be praised, not admonished.”

“I agree with Eitri.” Narilla said proudly.

“I also agree with Eitri.” Sindri said, cutting off the ranting and raving that was brewing up. “Here, Harry, take your Leolin back. Thank you for letting me hold him. It has been too long since I have last held a Faerie babe, too few are being born and less are surviving.” He said sadly.

Harry accepted Leolin back and held him tightly, smiling as Leolin cracked open his eyes as he was shifted so much and his little son gave him a small twitch of his lips that could have been a smile before he closed his eyes and settled himself down again.

Nasta’s arms wrapped around his waist and supported his arms holding Leolin. Harry felt Nasta breathe on the back of his head, making his hair flutter and he took a deep breath, feeling more relaxed about this whole meeting. A certain few were making it tense and were making him angry, but others, like Narilla and Eitri were making it all better, Sindri seemed nice enough and though he knew Nasta didn’t want to be near them, Dain and Kailen were being nice too.

“Thank you for bringing him in to see us.” Sindri told them. “I would be happy to see him again in less…inimical conditions. Perhaps when he is a little older.”
Harry nodded his head and smiled. “Of course.”

“If there is ever anything you need, I insist that you come to us for it.” Narilla told him softly.

Harry felt Nasta nod above him. “We will likely take you up on that offer often. We were very surprised to have had a Faerie babe too, but we have had him and all we want is to do what’s best for him.”

“Then you would be best handing him over now.” Suisan told them. “I would raise him better…”

“The gods took all four of your babes from you while they were still in the womb.” Dain spat at her. “You were not meant to have babes in arms.”

“That is despicable of you to say, Dain!” Donella hissed.

“It is nothing that is not true. If anyone here would have that little boy it would be Narilla. No one else! Not that Leolin needs to be taken from Harry and Nasta, that would be truly despicable.”

“We are not here to remove Leolin from his natural parents.” Sindri reminded them firmly, sounding even more tired and exasperated. “We were here to meet and greet him, now we have do so. Nasta, Harry, if there was nothing else, you may leave.”

“Thank you again.” Harry said softly as Nasta gently moved and coaxed Harry to walk in front of him, so that if anyone attacked their back, they’d hit Nasta first.

They made it back out into the corridor safely and Harry let out a breath that he hadn’t realised he’d been holding when the door shut behind them to the shouting and yelling of the Faeries from within.

“That went well.” He said to Nasta with a grin. Nasta snorted and gave him a kiss.

“I love you so much.”
“I love you more.” Harry said with a smile. “Come on, let’s get home.”

Blaise pulled Tegan back between his legs more securely and kept one arm around her as he tugged Calix back by his waistband, the little boy giggling uproariously.

“They’re getting more of a handful every day!” Blaise complained.

“They’re growing every day.” Max informed him as he hunched down behind him to wrap him in a hug, kissing the back of his neck.

“I know that, but seriously, Harry has a heat period in a few days, we could have even more babies.”

“We could.” Max agreed easily.

“Doesn’t it all seem a little…much?” Draco asked carefully.

“It does at times.” Max said mildly, sitting back more comfortably and pulling Blaise into his lap. “But we don’t have any way to control how many children we have, it’s going to be tough, but this is what we’re made for, the whole point of Drackens is to procreate, it’s so finely in tuned to our instincts that the thought of not mating and not having children drives most Drackens insane and they have to be executed.”

“I just hope we don’t get another five.” Blaise smiled. “I love the quintuplets, all five of them and that I love Braiden goes without saying, but another five? I think I really would go for a vasectomy.”

“I think triplets next would be the limit.” Max nodded.

“One would be the limit!” Draco put in, marking the page in his book and putting it down so that he could take a sip of tea and carry on the conversation without seeming rude.

“We need to allow for more than one I think.” Blaise answered. “There are four of us. I think Max has it right, I’d be happy with triplets as a maximum for this next heat.”

“It seems too soon.” Draco sighed.

“You weren’t born to this life; you weren’t raised with this as the normal.” Blaise pointed out. “Nasta, Max and I were told from very young ages what we were and we have spent the rest of our lives making decisions according to our futures. We knew that we’d have a submissive mate, we knew there was a possibility of other dominants, but we all knew for certain that we’d have a lot of children and we’ve been mentally preparing for that for years, in my case it’s been ten years, my Mother told me when I was eight what I was and what my future was going to be and yes, I admit I was a bit resentful at first, having my life dictated in such a way, but it is what it is. I did my absolute best in school when some others goofed off or put off homework and revision because I wanted a high paying job, I knew that I’d need it to support my future family and the high number of children that I’d likely have, so I spent my teenaged years preparing for it when others were focused on inconsequential things.”

“I’ve had twenty-five years to get used to the idea.” Max shrugged. “I was told very young because I was like Farren, a big, boisterous boy. I was very strong and I was rough with my sisters and with Caesar too, so I was told what I was young to help me understand that I had to be careful, Nasta was told young too, in light of his Mother’s death, Aneirin sat him down and told Nasta, as his only Dracken child, what he was to help him understand. But you and Harry...you were thrust into this life with no warning, which rarely happens, but still, you should have both had breakdowns by now, but you’re both so strong and stubborn and determined. You had no time to prepare for this, no time to get used to the idea of so many children where Nasta, Blaise and I have grown up knowing that this was normal and we’ve prepared accordingly, you and Harry never, so it will be more difficult for you, naturally, just remember though, that you’re not alone. You will never be alone and we’ll always be here for you and yes, sometimes you all drive me up the wall and I say things because I need to vent out a few frustrations, but I still love the lot of you and if you need help with anything then I’ll do my damned best to help you, but the number of children we have, it’s just something that we can’t control. Dracken numbers are falling, Dracken pairings are having less and less Dracken babies and more human babies, it is unfortunately creating something of a baby boom, if we don’t start picking up numbers somewhere, we’re going to die out.”

“I believe it’s because I’m so far out of my comfort zone.” Draco admitted after taking another sip of his tea to consider his words. “I am an only child. My Father was an only child; my Mother was one of only three girls. We have six children under a year old already and more to come. I suppose all I want is for everything to slow down, so that we can enjoy the children that we already have for a little longer before more come along.”

“A wish shared by nearly every Dracken family in the world I suppose.” Max nodded understandingly. “We all want to enjoy them more, adding another dozen while our first ones are still so young seems almost criminal, but we aren’t humans, Draco. We are going to live for a very long time and Harry will be fertile for less than half of that time, we will get to enjoy our children, but unfortunately this is how it is and nothing can change it, there isn’t a potion, spell or any sort of birth control that can be used while Harry is in heat, trust me when I say that it’s all be tried and tested before, there are even some Drackens who are working on trying to create a Dracken specific birth control, but until the unlikely event that they succeed, you need to realise that this is our lives. We were chosen to be Drackens, if we couldn’t handle it, we wouldn’t have been chosen, so pull up some of your inner strength, we can do this and we are going to damn well enjoy it too.”

Draco shook his head with a long suffering sigh before he rushed to put his teacup down and pick Braiden up, who had crawled to the settee that he was sat on and lifted his arms to be picked up. Draco sat him on his lap and used his fingers to comb through the silky black strands of hair that Braiden was growing as their first born son snuggled in and his eyes started dropping.

“I think someone needs a long nap.” Blaise chuckled.

“He woke up too early this morning. I told you that he’d be knackered by the afternoon.” Max grinned. “This will teach you, Braiden, stay asleep longer in the mornings and you won’t have to have a nap!”

“I wonder how Harry and Nasta are getting on at court with Leolin.”

“I bet they fucking hate it.” Max said happily. “Nasta’s been in a right foul mood for the last week or two.”

“I heard him snap at you this morning, are you alright?” Blaise asked.

Max scoffed. “Nas can snap at me all he likes, he knows I’ll just snap back, which is probably why he chose me to snap at in the first place. I won’t take it to heart like the rest of you.”

“He still shouldn’t say such things to you.” Draco said with a frown.

“He was worried and nervous about going to the court, he needed a safe outlet for it, I more than understand. You heard Aneirin, some of the court wanted to take Leolin away from us, now Nasta has had to take Harry and Leolin into such a hostile place to meet the very people who want Leolin away from us. He’s scared and he doesn’t want to admit it out loud, but if anything at all happens to Harry or Leolin at those courts then he’s never going to forgive himself.”

“Is that why he was lecturing Harry about letting him be a human shield at breakfast?” Blaise asked.
“He’s been doing that for the last week too.” Draco pointed out.

“How would you feel in his shoes?” Max challenged. “It’s not easy being the top dominant, it’s not easy holding us all together and making sure that there is minimal stress and no tension between any of us. The position of top dominant is hard and it’s a heavy weight to bear, one that can never be put down for even a moment’s rest, yet Nasta has not once complained or whined about it. He loves us and he would endure anything and everything if it meant keeping us all safe. His instincts are screaming at him for walking Harry and Leolin into a hostile situation that he may not be able to adequately control, he’s been a quivering wreck inside these past few weeks, so if a bit of snapping here or there helps him keep control, then I’ll paint the damn target sign on my forehead for him, because trust me, I know Nasta, I’ve known him for years and if he loses his temper, he fucking loses it big. At the moment, all he’s doing is venting some of his fear and frustration, he’s not angry with any of us, he’s angry at the situation he’s been forced into, but you need to understand that he has to get rid of his tension safely and in a way that isn’t detrimental to us as a family, so he snaps and he vents and that’s okay, because I never want to see Nasta truly lose his control, never.”

“I’ve never seen him lose his temper before.” Blaise said consideringly.

“No you haven’t, because he hasn’t lost control once since you’ve known him. He has little wobbles and temper tantrums, but he has never fully lost his temper, not truly and if you saw him in a fit of rage, you’d be as scared and as respectful as I am towards him. He has a hell of a lot of control and he uses that control every day to make us a better family together. Honestly, I don’t think we would have made it this far without one of us being killed if he wasn’t here with us.”

“You think so?” Draco asked quietly.

“Draco, my love, I’m almost certain of it.” Max replied with a grimace.

Harry took the time to enjoy the Faerie city now that the court meeting was over; at least it was for now. It truly was beautiful, picturesque, a bit like Hogsmeade, only this was a city and not a small village.

The city centre was a collection of buildings, mostly food shops and other small buildings, Harry saw a jewellers, a butchers and a leather shop from where he stood just outside the courts, but Nasta wanted to just leave and get away from the Faeries, but there was only one entrance and one exit to the city and it was on the other side of the city, so they had a lot of walking to do and a lot of hostile and some not so hostile Faeries to pass through. One Fae was so happy to see Leolin that he practically gushed as his Valkyrie stood behind him, arms folded and a serious frown on his face, but Harry remembered what Eitri had told them, it was their default expression, so Harry didn’t take it to heart as he showed Leolin off to the Fae. He was so excited to see a Faerie baby that he just didn’t care that he and Nasta were Drackens.

“We need to leave, Ezrah, your Mother is waiting.” The Valkyrie said quietly, carefully.

“Just a moment more, please.” The Fae, Ezrah, begged.

His mate nodded his head and Ezrah smiled so wonderfully that Harry knew that his mate would do anything to see it, that the stern and frowning Valkyrie would do absolutely anything to see Ezrah smile and to make him happy.

“I’ve been told that he’s a little Unseelie.” Harry told Ezrah carefully; aware that Leolin’s face was blank and slack now that he was sleeping.

Ezrah laughed. “I bet he’s all scowly, isn’t he?”

Harry nodded. “He smiled earlier today, but that was the first time he’s ever done it. Every other moment that he’s awake he’s always scowling at everyone and everything around him, especially at his brothers and sister.”

“You have more Faerie babes?” The Valkyrie asked shocked.

“Lathen! That’s so rude.” Ezrah chastised. “I’m so sorry about him, I can’t take him anywhere.”

“It’s alright.” Harry smiled. “Leolin is our only Faerie babe so far, we have two Dracken sons, two wizards and a witch.”

Harry watched them closely to see their reaction to him raising Leolin with Dracken siblings, wondering if that would be an issue too, but Ezrah just got a strange look on his face.

“You’re so lucky to have so many babes. I…Lathen and I have been trying for the last half century and we beg the gods every mom and eve to bless us with babes, but it seems that I was never meant “Leolin is the first Faerie babe I’ve seen in this last decade, I know Eudel had a daughter fourteen moon turns ago, but no one has so much as seen a peek of her. He won’t speak of her and his mate hasn’t been seen since either. They’re so secretive that it’s taken all the joy out of being parents and the rest of us can’t even celebrate her birth properly.”

“That’s not fair to say.” Lathen told Ezrah sternly. “They’ve lost three boys and a girl already. Niobe is their longest surviving babe, they just want to protect her.”

“That doesn’t mean that they can’t bring her out into the fresh air!” Ezrah said back. “Locking her away is just going to do more damage! This little boy seems just fine to me and he is an even younger babe than Niobe!”

“Leolin likes being outside.” Harry said as the two men glared at one another in silence. “He always seems more aware of everything when we sit him outside than if he’s stuck inside.”

“You see!” Ezrah pointed at Harry. “He understands and he isn’t even a Faerie.”

“We are late for our visit with your Mother.” Lathen said quietly, recognising that he had lost the fight, but in typical male fashion, he wouldn’t admit it out loud.

Ezrah huffed but turned to coo some more at Leolin.

“Thank you for letting me see him, I’d almost forgotten what babes look like in this city. I do hope we’ll see each other again and then when we do, that you have Leolin with you still. I shall give messages of health to the gods for him.”

“Thank you.” Nasta said a bit gruffly. Harry looked at him and saw that he was not holding things together as well as he had thought, it was time that they left this city and the stress of it behind. Nasta had endured enough and every added minute here was adding to his stress and very soon he would crack. They needed to get back home and away from here so that Nasta would relax and unwind.

“Thank you, Ezrah.” Harry nodded. “I’m sure that Leolin and I will be seeing you again soon, the court wishes to see Leolin again when he’s a little older, I’ll keep an eye out for you.”

The smile that Ezrah gave him made Harry smile back, feeling happier as Nasta led him away, towards the exit to the city and Lathen herded Ezrah in the opposite direction, presumably towards his Mother who was waiting for them.

Harry cuddled Leolin back into the crook of his arm and covered him over before he slipped his arm through Nasta’s and rested against him, letting Nasta’s arm slip around his back and hold him tightly as they hurried to the exit of the city, passing more horses pulling carriages, past Valkyries standing on guard, actual swords on their hips, past a pair of matching stables that were adjacent to one another, before they went past another guard house and then through the absolutely huge double gates that led into and out of the city.

Nasta only breathed easy when they passed these gates with no issue and he took out the Portkey, holding on tight to Harry, making sure that he and Leolin both had a hand touching the Portkey before activating it and Nasta’s knees buckled when they arrived in the back garden of Max’s home to better take Harry’s weight onto his own body as he knew that Harry couldn’t land properly.

They got their bearings back before Nasta led him into the house through the back door, into the kitchen, where Max waved at them happily and put the kettle on before coming to hug them both tightly, giving them each a big kiss.

“Everything go alright?” He murmured as he held them both in his large, strong arms. “We weren’t expecting you to be gone for so long.”

“It was better than I thought it would be. None of my nightmares came true.” Harry said with a smile.

“They didn’t want Leolin away from us then?” Blaise asked as he wandered in from the living room, Calix thrown over a shoulder.

“Some of them did.” Nasta grumbled as he took Leolin from Harry as Harry took Calix from Blaise and peppered his face with kisses.

“He’s been a pain all day.” Blaise told him. “He’s been trying to get into everything and now he’s refusing to go to bed.”

That made Harry smile and he cuddled Calix tightly as his little boy babbled sweetly at him, happy to see him again.

“Have you been exploring, Calix? Who’s a growing boy?!” Harry cooed.

“You two have been gone nearly all day, I bet you’re starving, I was just getting dinner prepped for when you got back.” Max said happily. “Did you have any Faerie food?”
“They had the same food as us.” Harry said with a roll of his eyes. “There was a butchers, a bakers, I even saw a Delicatessen’s. But no, we were at the court for most of the day, we haven’t eaten since breakfast.”

Max’s grin grew wider. “I’ve got a feast prepared for you both, I even made dessert, it’s probably not as good as your desserts, Harry, but I’m still good at them.”

“I know you are.” Harry said as he pulled Max’s head down for another kiss, they broke apart when Harry’s stomach growled loudly. “I did say I was hungry.” He defended with a grin.

“That’s exactly what I like to hear from my men.” Max grinned right back.

“You’re a dope sometimes, you know that right?” Harry asked.

Max nodded. “I’ve been hearing that all my life, love. I think it finally sunk in about five years ago.”

“I thought I heard you back.” Draco said as he came into the kitchen with a teacup in hand.

Harry gasped. “Draco! Where is your saucer? Is the world ending?” He turned to ask Nasta, who tried to suppress his smile.

Draco put his teacup down and dragged Harry into a hug.

“Harry, where is your lack of fashion sense? You’re wearing an outfit that actually matches! Oh wait, I dressed you this morning.” Draco replied and Harry laughed and pulled Draco into a deep kiss.

“I love you.” Harry said with a smile. “Saucer fetish and all.”

Draco rolled his eyes. “I can deal with your lack of fashion sense unless you’re going out, then I insist that you let me dress you.”
“I prefer you to undress me, but whatever makes you happy, love.”

That made Max laugh loudly as he made them all tea, slipping Blaise a coffee as Nasta was distracted by Calix, who was crawling around his feet, babbling.

The look Nasta gave them both let them know that they hadn’t got away with it, but he didn’t say anything and he accepted his own cup of green tea from Max, reminding Harry of his thought the other day that Nasta had eyes in the back and sides of his head. He always seemed to know what was going on, who was where, what everyone was feeling and when they were doing something that they shouldn’t be, he was the perfect top dominant.

“Tell us all about it, are they going to try for Leolin?” Draco asked as he took the tiny baby from Nasta and cradled him gently. “They’ll have to pry him from my dead hands if they want him.” He swore as he sat at the table.

“Where are the others?” Harry asked as he picked Calix up and sat him on his lap.

“All in bed sleeping.” Blaise told him.

“Even Farren?” Harry asked surprised. Farren didn’t nap and he didn’t go to bed easily.

Max nodded. “We tired him out; we found out that he really, really likes doing roly polys. We’ve been doing it for the last four hours, over and over again; I could do with a nap myself after that!”

Harry smiled and he made a mental note to play with Farren tomorrow.

“So what happened?” Draco prompted.

“It was horrible, I could feel myself losing control the more they demanded Leolin be away from us.” Harry told them.

“So they did want Leolin away from us?” Blaise asked as Draco’s arms tightened around Leolin.

“Four of them did, one because he hated Drackens, one because she didn’t want any baby to survive where hers hadn’t and two because they wanted Leolin for themselves.”

“So it was a minority?”

“It wouldn’t matter if the majority of them wanted Leolin from us, Sindri is the head of the court, he could have stopped it with an immediate appeal where several independent Faeries would then decide along with him what would have happened, but he was adamant that Leolin be left with us.” Nasta said.

“I liked Sindri.” Harry smiled.

“Did you see Dain and Kailen?” Max asked them carefully.

Nasta snarled under his breath but Harry sighed.

“Yes, we did. They were on the court, but we didn’t get to speak to them properly. We saw Warren though.”

“What’s he like?”

Harry frowned consideringly. “He seemed very interested in Aneirin and why he wasn’t with us.”

“It was none of his business!” Nasta hissed.

Harry patted his shoulder and gave his stubbly cheek a kiss. “I know, love, but he was very interested in where your Dad was, shouldn’t he have known that it would have made us look weak if we’d taken him with us?”

Nasta grunted and Harry gave it up, Nasta seriously didn’t want to be talking about this and mentioning Warren and his interest in Aneirin was not making things any better and neither was talking about Dain and Kailen.

“So that’s it now?” Blaise asked hopefully.
Harry shook his head. “They want us to take him back in a few months, I think they’re surprised that he’s still alive, they said that most premature Faerie babies don’t survive, in fact, didn’t Narilla say that only one survived once in a blue moon and only then due to luck?”

Nasta nodded as he looked to Leolin over the rim of his cup. “Yeah, we’ve done a brilliant job with him; I’m not sure if he has latent Dracken blood helping him or if it truly is just luck, but I’m hoping it’s something a little more substantial than mere luck.”

Harry nodded as he drained the last of his honey tea. “Luck can run out, if it’s in his blood from us, then he’ll have that for life.”

“Then let’s hope it’s his blood, you are both Dracken’s after all, even if Nasta did give him Faerie blood, there has to be some hint of Dracken in him.” Max nodded as he bustled happily around his kitchen.

“I’m going to put these two to bed, then maybe a bit later on we can forget all about this hideous day.” Harry said with a wink.

“Does that mean what I think it does?” Max asked happily.

“It means that I think we need to re-christen your wonderfully big bed.” Harry grinned.

Max whooped with joy and Harry shook his head as he picked Leolin up from Draco and carried him and a drowsy Calix up to the second floor. He tucked Leolin into his bassinet in their bedroom before taking Calix next door and tucking him into his cot.

He made sure the others were still sleeping, tucking them in, giving them soft kisses before he made sure the baby monitor was switched on still before he left the bedroom, shutting the door quietly behind him.

He took in a deep breath and smiled. It had been a serious rollercoaster of emotions and thoughts today, he’d spent several hours with Nasta and Leolin in the Faerie city, he was emotionally drained and he wasn’t feeling much better physically, but hopefully he’d feel better after he ate some of Max’s amazing cooking and then he’d snuggle up with his mates for an hour or two while they just relaxed together, before they came up to bed for the night, then the real fun could start, he needed a bit of practice before his heat period hit them, he had a feeling that very soon he’d have a couple more newborn babies to look after.

He didn’t much care, he wanted more children, though perhaps not another set of quintuplets anytime soon, or ever for that matter, but he was worried about what his mates felt about adding to their number of children. He warred between bringing it up or keeping quiet and as he rejoined them in the kitchen. Max was just serving up dinner for them all and he decided to keep quiet, Nasta wasn’t in the best of moods and he had already had his control tested beyond his limitations today, it could easily wait for another day or two, or even until after his heat period, he’d hate to hear that they didn’t want any more children only for him to have a heat period and end up pregnant, it would hurt him deeply, but could he trust that they’d tell him the truth if they knew that he was already pregnant? He sighed loudly.

“Something on your mind?” Draco asked him with a frown.

He smiled a bit wanly. “Just thinking about the meeting with the Faeries, they want to see Leolin again in a few months, but I don’t think travelling with him every couple of months is going to help him get any stronger. If we keep travelling with him, the bigger the risk of him coming into contact with germs and getting a bug or a fever. I just don’t think it’s in his best interests, despite the court wanting to see him.”

“I was just thinking the same thing but I didn’t know how to voice it.” Nasta said quietly. “They’ll want to see him often to make sure that we’re caring for him properly, but on the other hand taking him out that often around other people, as Harry said, it puts him more at risk.”

“Can’t the court come to us?” Harry asked.

Nasta looked like he’d smacked him.

“You can’t demand that the court comes to us when we’re the outsiders.” Nasta told him.

“Why not? If they want to see my baby so damned often then they can come here to see him! I will not put Leolin at risk when he’s already so delicate and vulnerable, he’s up against the odds already, taking him out amongst other people who could be carrying absolutely anything is not going to help!”

“You really do want to demand that the court members come here.” Nasta said breathlessly, like Harry’s words had been a physical force that had knocked the breath from his lungs.

“Well…maybe not demand, but can’t we negotiate this? I understand the importance of getting back into the Faerie community, of how important it’ll be for Leolin, but damn it what’s the fucking point of going through all this if he gets sick from all the travelling and dies anyway?” Harry forced himself to say. “He’s too delicate! So you tell those fucking Faeries that they can come here to see him, or send whoever they want to come and see him, well except for Donella, Alston, Siusan or Zuzana, those fuckers can stay away, but Leolin has to be our only priority in this.”

Draco nodded. “I agree with Harry, regardless of how rude it is, Leolin is ours and we need to protect our baby more than we need him to be in the Faerie community. As painful as it is to think about, it’ll all be for naught if the travelling makes him sick and we lose him before he even understands what being a Faerie means.”

“Surely they can’t expect us to travel with Leolin so much?” Blaise put in. “They know exactly how dangerous it is, why would they want us to do it more often?”

“It’s up to you though, Nasta, you’re our top dominant, it’s your call.” Harry said. “I know how important it is, but I won’t have Leolin affected in such a way. I won’t see him sick.”

Nasta chewed and swallowed on his mouthful of food, thinking hard and considering, everyone was quiet for a while as they all ate, letting Nasta have the time and space that he needed to think.

They were just finishing up dessert when a little wail came over one of the monitors. Harry stuffed a spoonful of trifle into his mouth, but Nasta waved him back down and walked past, having already finished his dinner and his dessert.

Nasta went up to Leolin and cradled him, moving over to the bed and throwing a mat onto it before changing his wet nappy, kissing his soft little belly gently.

He sighed and dressed Leolin in a cotton sleepsuit, watching his soft gold eyes blinking slowly, until they stayed closed and Leolin’s breathing eased out in sleep.

Nasta sat on the bed and cradled Leolin some more, thinking hard about his mates concerns, weighing everything up; they couldn’t afford to make enemies of the Faeries, not when Leolin was one. The Faeries had the power to destroy them, they could sell him and his family out to the Ministry and get them executed and take Leolin as their prize. Braiden and Farren would be kept in custody and then executed when they were older and Calix, Regan and Tegan would be extradited from their birth country as blood carriers. It would drag all of their families into it too, his Father would be killed, leaving Sanex alone. Marianna would be executed and over half of Max’s family would be executed, leaving just a few of the Maddisons from such a huge, powerful and influential family. The Faeries could destroy them, but his mates concerns were very real and very valid, all this travelling would expose Leolin to germs and bacteria that could make him very sick and with his nearly non-existent immune system, it would likely kill him.

Nasta breathed deeply and he gave Leolin a lingering kiss and put him back into his bassinet, covering him over with a light, summer blanket. There were times when he absolutely hated being the top dominant, there were times when he didn’t want to be the one to make all of these hard, life altering decisions, he didn’t like being in this position, but he knew what he had to do, even if he didn’t like it. He knew, for Leolin and his family, that he had to do it. It was the only real choice that they had.

Chapter End Notes

A/N: Not a lot to say, just that I hope you’ve enjoyed this chapter as much as the rest, I hope you’ve enjoyed the Faerie courts, I’ve posted a map of the Faerie city up on my Facebook page if you wanted to have a look at the layout of the city, for those of you asking, the court case with the Dursleys is coming up soon, have some patience, if you check real cases you’ll see that they never go straight to a trial either, there are sometimes years between someone first getting convicted and going to trial, so a bit of patience, it is coming and I haven’t forgotten.

Well, I’ll see you all for the next update soon lovelies, until then you can happily join me on Facebook if you wish, my page name is StarLight Mass, as Facebook wouldn’t allow me to use Massacre, they must have thought I had evil intentions, but I hope you’ve all enjoyed this chapter,

Chapter Notes

Last Time

Nasta breathed deeply and he gave Leolin a lingering kiss and put him back into his bassinet, covering him over with a light, summer blanket. There were times when he absolutely hated being the top dominant, there were times when he didn’t want to be the one to make all of these hard, life altering decisions, he didn’t like being in this position, but he knew what he had to do, even if he didn’t like it. He knew, for Leolin and his family, that he had to do it. It was the only real choice that they had.

Chapter Eighty – Into the Fire

Harry had prematurely said goodbye to his children it seemed. His heat period was due sometime today, so that morning had seen Alexander and Kimberly taking temporary custody of their six babies to prepare for it, but as they all finished a late dinner thirteen hours later in a tense silence, there wasn’t so much as a sign of his heat period hitting him.

“Do you feel anything?” Blaise asked him.

Harry shook his head as he pushed his plate away. “Nothing, but then it usually just hits me out of the blue. I might feel a small twinge or a rush of heat just before, but it’s literally just seconds before it hits.”

Max sniffed him deeply as he walked past and Harry gave him a small, half-hearted glare.

“There’s no change in your pheromones either.”

“It’ll happen when it happens.” Nasta told them patiently as he stood to help Max with the dishes.

“I need the bathroom, be right back.” Harry murmured as he rushed to the downstairs bathroom and took a moment to just breathe.
He used the bathroom, washed his hands and then splashed his face with cold water. He sucked in a deep breath and headed back out and went to the living room. He missed his children dreadfully. He missed Braiden babbling, Calix giggling, he missed Leolin’s little scowls, he wondered if Tegan was playing nicely, if Regan had eaten a whole portion of baby food today and he hoped that Farren hadn’t isolated himself from his siblings as he always did. He just missed them and he wrapped his arms around himself and swayed lightly as he ached to cradle them.

Blaise brought him a cup of hot, honey tea and sat right next to him, giving him some much needed comfort as Blaise took some liquid comfort of his own in the form of a strong coffee.

“Does Nas know that you have that?” Harry teased.

Blaise nodded his head as he took a pleasurable sip. “He knows. He’s trying to keep everyone’s stress down, so he’s allowed me a coffee. He stopped Max from having a shot of Firewhiskey though. He told him that he needed a clear head for the heat period and that dominants had hurt their submissive through being drunk on a heat period before, we’re all feeling the tension, Firewhiskey won’t help anyone.”

Harry smiled. He liked hearing that his mates were as stressed about this as he was.

“It’s too quiet.” Harry sighed.

“It’s unnerving.” Draco agreed as he came in to sit on Harry’s other side with a cup of white tea. “I keep wanting to go and search for them, to check on them.”

Harry nodded. “Exactly, it’s not right, we should be enjoying a rare day off, but I just want them back, it’s weird.”

“Enjoy it while it lasts.” Max said as he came in and sat on the adjacent settee, his own tea in hand.

Nasta followed him in, with green tea, and sat next to him.

“What’s wrong?” He asked softly, looking at their faces critically.
“I miss the babies.” Harry said with a wry smile. “I just want them back.”

Nasta nodded understandingly. “I just went to make up their bottles, Max had to stop me and remind me that they weren’t here. It does take some getting used to.”

“What the hell do we do for the rest of the night? I don’t think I’ve been able to have a whole day where I can actually hear myself think for more than an hour.”

“We could get some practice in.” Max suggested with a grin.

Harry gave him an unimpressed look. “If you’re offering yourself up, go right ahead and bend over, but I’m going to be sore enough after this without adding to it early.”

Max just grinned wider, put his tea down and slipped from the settee and bent over in front of Harry, his arse in the air and chest pressed to the floor.

Harry almost choked on his tea as he rushed to put the cup down before he dropped it.

“Oh holy hell.” He gasped. “I wasn’t serious!” He said weakly.

“I am.” Max said and Harry could hear the grin on his lips.

“If Max wants it, give it to him.” Blaise said with a grin, slapping Harry’s shoulder.

“This wasn’t how I saw us spending the evening.”

“You have to admit, it will take away the empty space that our children should occupy and it will take away the tense wait for the heat period to start.” Max explained as he wiggled his bum to get their attention back to it.

Harry smiled and slid to his knees behind Max, he couldn’t deny that he was excited by the offering, he was and they could likely smell that.
“This could be just what your Dracken needs to push him over into his heat.” Blaise told him as he slipped onto Draco’s lap and turned to kiss him harshly.

“If I take Max. Nas, why doesn’t he take you?” Harry said softly.

Nasta smiled and kissed him, then went to Blaise and Draco and broke them apart to kiss them both, before he laid himself on the floor and slipped himself under Max to kiss him.

“I love taking you, you’re so strong and silent, I love pulling sounds of pleasure from you, even if they’re just small gasps or sharp, indrawn breaths. I love being the one to support you as you fall to pieces in my arms.” Max groaned as he nosed around Nasta’s neck.

Nasta smiled at him and Harry peeked over Max’s shoulder and pressed right against his back to get a kiss.

Draco made a soft sound and the three of them turned to look at them both, to find them both completely bare and Blaise was already pushed deep into Draco.

“You two are always so impatient, you just strip off and get right to the fucking, didn’t anyone ever teach you about foreplay and the benefits to going slow?” Max asked.

Blaise grunted and slipped an arm around Draco’s waist to hold him tighter, shifting to get a better angle.

“I think they’re too busy to answer, but right now I want to get right to the fucking too.” Harry grinned.

“I think we need to show Harry about foreplay first, since he’s so eager to just jam himself into anything.” Nasta told Max, who rolled over and grabbed Harry and before he knew what was happening, Harry found himself naked and pinned to the floor on his back with two tongues licking at his body.

“I don’t…”

“We know, love, you don’t want to be penetrated before your heat, but nothing says that we can’t get you warmed up.” Nasta said as he nuzzled against Harry’s thigh.
“I’m plenty warm already.” Harry grinned.

“Time to get you a little warmer then.” Max growled as he kissed a path to Harry’s little nipple and took it into his mouth, flicking it with the tip of his tongue.

Harry sucked in a deep breath as Nasta moved his mouth very close to the apex of his thigh, poking out his tongue just enough for Harry to feel it dragging across his skin, leaving a little wet line behind that reacted with every one of Nasta’s exhales.

Draco grunted and Blaise screamed from somewhere to Harry’s left and he tried to look over, but unfortunately Max’s huge body was in the way of his view.

His attention was grabbed when Nasta’s mouth slid over his cock and swallowed around him. He made a soft, desperate sound and his hand found the top of Nasta’s head and he gripped at it hard, twisting that black hair and tugging on it as Nasta moved like it wasn’t even there, pulling his head back before swallowing him down yet again.

Max took advantage of his open mouth and kissed him hard, even as a finger pressed against his entrance and slid inside his body. He didn’t care now, he wanted this, he wanted them, he didn’t care how fucking sore it made him after his heat period and he begged for them.

“No, no. We set this up and we’re going to do this right.” Max informed him as he moved away from him and went to Nasta, who was still stretching him out, apparently for no fucking reason at all.

“Ready for when your heat hits you.” He said with a smirk as he read the question in the glare that Harry sent him. “I don’t want anyone to tear you.”

“I hate you so much right now, what if my heat doesn’t hit until midnight? Are you going to leave me like this until midnight?” He demanded.

Nasta chuckled. “No, Caru. I thought the idea was for you to give Max what he wants and he wants you to be inside him. You give him what he wants, so he can give it to me.”

Harry rolled to his knees and got a moment to look around only to see Blaise was going at Draco yet again. He grinned, but he moved behind Max and kissed his lower back, wrapping his arms around Max’s waist as Max shifted and moved to drag Nasta under him.

Harry let Max and Nasta start first, letting them get into a rhythm as he watched Blaise and Draco go at it against the settee. When Max picked up his tempo and seemed to have forgotten everything except Nasta, who was lying on his back and digging his fingernails into Max’s shoulders making soft sounds of pleasure, Harry pressed against his back as hard as he could and disrupted them, grinning as they both groaned and started complaining.

“I want a turn too.” He said with a smirk. “I’m not waiting either.”

Harry slowly pushed into Max, his biggest mate dropping his head to Nasta’s chest with a sharp groan, clenching tight around Harry and leaning further onto his elbows, burying his face into Nasta’s neck.

“Oh Harry, please.” Max groaned.

Nasta gave him an evil grin and he bucked his hips up just as Harry pushed into Max. Their large mate threw his head back and yelled out.

“Yes! Fuck yes, do that again.” Max demanded.

Harry shared a grin with Nasta and they both repeated their moves and Max shouted out even louder.

“Are you killing him?” Draco asked, more than a little breathless.

“No, not really. I think he’s dying from pleasure more than anything.” Harry laughed as he pushed himself into Max, his hands slipping over Max’s sweaty, muscled back.

Max shook his head and a low snarl came from between his lips as he gripped a hold of Nasta’s hips and shoved himself forward, Harry slipped and bumped his chin on Max’s back.

“Fuck! Warn a guy next time.” Harry complained as he moved back and dug his fingers into Max’s hips, gripping him tighter so he wasn’t dislodged again.

“Keep up, Harry!” Max bitched right back.

Harry laughed and picked up the tempo, chasing his orgasm now as he started breathing harder and shorter, Nasta started grunting; moving his hips faster and Max fell down onto his elbows, being hit on both sides as he growled under his breath.

“Love you, Nasta. Love you, Harry.” He grunted out right before he threw his head back and yelled out his orgasm.

His clenching pulled Harry right over with him and when he could actually see again he rolled off of Max and curled up beside him and Nasta, who were snuggling together. He tried to control his jumping muscles, but he was content and feeling lazy at the moment, so he stopped and let his muscles jump and quiver as much as they liked as he lay on the floor relearning how to breathe normally.

“You two, you come over here.” Harry called out to Blaise and Draco.

“I can’t move.” Draco complained weakly.

“Why don’t you come over here?” Blaise demanded.

“There are three of us over here, we outnumber you.” Harry informed them.

“I’m tired now.” Max told them as he flumped his entire, considerable, weight onto Nasta, who grunted, but didn’t say anything else as he wrapped his arms around Max’s shoulders lovingly.

Draco groaned, but he started shifting, moving to get his knees under his body as he moved slowly over to where Harry, Max and Nasta were lying.

Harry felt a small ball of heat, which he had taken as his afterglow, get bigger and start moving around his entire body. His eyes widened and he chuckled a bit.

“You four need to wrap up your afterglows and shake off your lethargies, I’m going to need you over here in about five seconds.”

“What do you mean?” Nasta asked.

“I’ve got that feeling; I think my heat period is imminent.”
“Are you sure?” Blaise asked as he pushed himself up onto his elbows.

Harry didn’t have time to answer as his heat slammed into him before spreading outwards and hitting his mates, who were up and gone in a flash. Draco, being the closest to him at the time, surged inside him and Harry urged him on, digging claws and fangs into him, his wings cushioning his body as his sense of sight was blurred down to a lot of colour that he instinctively recognised as his mates, he knew the blue and black was Max, the black and purple was Blaise and beyond them both the black and gold was Nasta. He knew the mate inside him was Draco from the blue and silver colour of him.

He never remembered much, his instincts took over, but he knew that he was screaming and whining and begging for his mates to give him their seed so that he could give them babies.

They all fell on one another, but as soon as one mate finished with him, another always took his place, sometimes two of them did together and he didn’t care as he threw out an arm and shoved the coffee table away from his head, annoyed by it being so close to him.

Someone swallowed down his cock and he screamed again, the haze of his heat pulling at him as he tried to remember where he was, but all that mattered was his mates and he called out for them, feeling the sound reverberate through his throat as he sunk claws into blue and black. Max.

Fangs sunk into his neck and he cried out, his body quivering as he orgasmed, someone bit at his nipple while someone else sucked on one of his balls. He writhed and mewed and then black and gold was rolling him up and over and a cock that he really wanted slid into him as he nuzzled into his mate’s neck, licking at the fresh sweat from his skin and nibbling on his neck while his fingers tugged lightly at jet black, mussed up hair.

Another cock pushed into him and fangs sunk into his neck from behind and his back arched, he screamed out and convulsed as another orgasm hit him. He felt weak and shaky from all of his orgasms; he and his lovers took a small breather, the sweat cooling on their bodies as they rested for just a moment. He sucked in deep breaths, laying as still as he could to conserve energy and to minimise any aches that he might have had.

Five minutes later he rolled onto his side and whined for a second or two when the fire in his body became unbearable, that’s all it took for black and purple to pull him up and slide him onto his cock, his head fell back in automatic response as his back arched, he felt so good and he made a soft, happy sound to let his mates know that they were making him happy.

They rumbled back to him and his breath caught in his throat as he clenched tightly around his mate, making him growl and thrust faster into him, he caught his prostate and he screamed again, sinking claws right back into his shoulders before dropping his head and taking in a mouthful of blood to sustain himself. To give himself just a little boost of much needed energy.

As soon as his mate was done he was pulled off and he was carried somewhere, he didn’t know where or why, just that he was now on something very soft. He whined loudly and angrily, he just wanted to be filled, he didn’t care about soft. His mate complied and he was left gasping and he latched onto his mate tightly as others joined them, hands and mouths touching him and one another.

He screamed and dug his claws and fangs into them, begging and whining and bucking into them, even as they got in each other’s way and put knees and elbows where they shouldn’t, he still didn’t care as his eyes rolled into the back of his head with the force of his next orgasm. Everything else from that moment was a complete and utter blur of colours, bodies, cocks, sex, blow jobs and orgasms with a hell of a lot of tongues shoved into every inch of his body and fingers digging and pulling as he bucked, writhed screamed and begged for them. He was lost to his heat, lost to himself, he didn’t remember much more after that.

Harry woke up suddenly and so acutely that he was momentarily confused as to what was happening, what had happened and what had woken him up.

A muscle twitched in his lower belly and his eyes widened as he dashed for the en suite bathroom to relieve himself. He had to groan at how fucking good it felt to release his swollen bladder.

He finished up and cleaned himself off, before realising that he seriously needed to clean up, he was covered in blood, dried semen, saliva and god knows what else that made his skin feel tight and itchy, odd patches of things he didn’t even want to name pulled on his skin as he moved. It was strange; usually his mates cleaned him up before he even thought of waking up.

He jumped into the shower and grimaced as he tried to wash his hair, but it was matted and glued together with so much semen that he couldn’t even run his fingers through it.

When he was finally done with scrubbing his body and picking off flaky patches of semen and washing off stale sweat, he couldn’t believe how much was on his body; he’d never had to clean himself up after a heat period before, it was a serious eye opener.

He went downstairs on shaky legs, gripping the banister tightly as his stomach tried to eat itself with how hungry he was. He went into the kitchen to find all four of his mates slouched over the table with mugs of coffee and cups of tea in their hands. That was odd too, usually by the time that he woke up they had been awake for a day or two already and they were almost completely fine. What was going on?

“How are you all holding up?” Harry asked through a screamed raw throat.

Nasta sat up suddenly and looked at him as if trying to determine if he was actually there or if he was some sort of apparition before rushing up from his seat and helping Harry to a chair, urging him to sit down and checking him over, sniffing him deeply, despite how painful it looked for him to be moving and even standing up.

“The hell you doing up?” Max grunted from where he was slumped over the table top, looking half dead.

“What do you mean?” Harry asked as Draco made him a cup of tea and passed him a vial of pain reliever.
“We all woke up an hour ago; usually you sleep for a full day or two after us.” Blaise pointed out.

Harry frowned. “No wonder I feel so damned awful.”

“We don’t usually leave you in your own filth.” Nasta assured him, looking a little uncertain and almost worried about Harry’s reaction to the state of himself when he had woken up. “We come down here just to get a cup of tea and a pain reliever and then we take care of you, the bed and the house and fix any damage done during the heat.”

Harry smiled, feeling his dry lips crack as they pulled. “It’s fine, Nas, you always take amazing care of me and I always knew logically that you’d have to relieve yourselves and wake yourselves up a bit first. I was sleeping, unconscious almost, I didn’t know what sort of state I was in and I assure you I didn’t mind cleaning myself up for a change.”

“Why are you awake so early?” Draco asked.

Harry shrugged. “I woke up how I usually do, suddenly and with the overwhelming need to take a piss before my bladder explodes and takes half my insides with it.”

Max chuckled tiredly. “Well we can bump up our schedules a bit; we can get the kids back later today and not tomorrow.”

“How long was my heat?” Harry asked with a frown.

All of his mates shrugged together.

“No idea, we’ll ask Alexander later, but for now, we need to fix everything up before we bring the kids home.” Blaise answered.

“I need four more of these first.” Harry said with a grin as he waved his empty cup in the air.

Nasta chuckled and took his wand from his sleeve and made the kettle boil again.
“You’re two feet from it.” Harry smiled with a shake of his head.

“I’m not getting up if I don’t have to, not in this condition.” He answered. “We don’t have the kids around to worry about at the moment; I’m taking the opportunity to use my magic as much as I can before they come back.”

“We need to get you a man cave so you can use your magic as much as you like without hurting the development of any of the kids.”

Nasta frowned consideringly. “That’s actually a good idea. We all need somewhere to blow off a little steam now and then without damaging the development of the kids. I’d never forgive myself if I was the one to damage their core so much that they can’t access their own magic later in life.”

Harry arched his back and grimaced as it cracked several times.

“Oh I needed that.”

Harry drank two more cups of tea and he went for another wee before he actually helped his mates with the cleaning up, grabbing his wand on the way down to the living room.

They had had fun, but Harry was finding so many lingering aches and pains that Nasta forced him to take it easy. It was mid-afternoon when they finally dressed and prepared themselves to face people again. Harry wanted his sweet little babies back and he wanted to know how they’d been and if they’d done anything new. He’d be devastated if they had, but he still wanted to know that they’d been growing and developing in the time that he’d been forced away from them.

They flooed over to Alexander’s and Harry found another couple of pulled muscles that he hadn’t realised he had as he landed hard on his knees before falling forward and face planting the rug.

“Oh ow!” He moaned pathetically as he allowed Draco to pull him up to his feet. He ignored his blond lover’s smirk.

He found Myron in the second living room, looking at him with a frown, Farren in his arms. He seemed to be trying to get Farren to take a nap as there were little bodies on the living room floor covered over with blankets.
“Are you awake early or have you come late to pick the kids up?” Myron rumbled as he shifted Farren to just one arm. His second oldest boy was so big that only Max out of the five of them could do that now and still make Farren look small.

“Why is he awake early, Dad?” Max asked as he came to give him a hug.

“Muma.” Farren called out.

Myron sighed. “He heard your voice.” He said wearily as he sat him up, only for Farren to reach out and babble at him some more.

“Did you miss me, Farren? I missed you so much.”
“He really doesn’t like naps.” Myron grumbled.

Harry smiled at that. “No, he doesn’t.”

“I thought I heard you boys, what on Earth are you doing here?” Kimberly asked as she patted them all before giving them each a kiss to the cheek. “You must have had a ten day cycle; I don’t believe that you would have left the little darlings here for three extra days.”

“He felt threatened, Mother.” Myron explained. “He woke up as soon as his heat was over.”

“Then you had a fertile heat and that could well have helped you wake up earlier than usual. You may be pregnant and if you felt threatened that could have made you feel even more threatened if you’d just conceived a new clutch.”

“They won’t know if he’s pregnant for a few weeks yet, Mother.” Myron said exasperatedly. “You know yourself, a fertile heat is just the first step, there are other factors too.”

“So I might not be pregnant?” Harry asked.

“No.” Nasta told him as he slipped an arm around him and bent to kiss Farren’s cheek. “You need a fertile heat to get pregnant, but just because you have one doesn’t mean that you’re automatically pregnant.”

“With how fertile he is I’d say it’s a sure bet.” Richard said as he wandered into the room. “Glad to see you boys again, I’ve missed you all.”

“I missed you too, Dad.” Max grinned as he hugged Richard so tightly that he pulled his shorter, more slender Father from the ground.

“Alright you mutant offspring of mine, I love you too, but I feel like a baby rabbit whose been shoved into the clenching arms of a toddler.”

Max gave Richard a kiss before releasing him. Richard rubbed at his rib cage and gave Max a mock glare, even as Max was grinning widely.
“How are you, Harry?"

“How are you, Harry?

“Sore, tired, I ache and I’m hungry again.” Harry said with a smile. “But I just want my babies back.”

“How are you, Harry?”

“My babies back.”

“Understandable.” Richard said as he pressed a kiss to Harry’s head. “But damn they’ve gotten such a handful! They’re into absolutely everything, we couldn’t even turn our backs for a minute to have a conversation without one of us spotting another baby trying to pull the stuffing out of a cushion or trying to yank a drawer out or trying to climb the bookcase. I’m thankful there are five of you to watch over them.”

Harry laughed as he snuggled Farren, who still wasn’t taking his nap.

“They are all very curious.” Myron nodded in agreement. “Braiden wanted to climb up everything, even the curtains, we had to pin them up out of his reach. I don’t know what you’re feeding Calix these days, but I’ve never seen a baby move so fast. It took us ten minutes to catch him the other day and Regan started cruising the furniture.”

Harry gasped and rocked backwards. “Regan stood up?”

“Regan stood up?”

“He…hasn’t done that before? Myron asked carefully.

Harry shook his head, trying to control the disappointment growing within him for having missed Regan standing up for the first time.

“He’s only six and a half months old, he shouldn’t be standing yet.” Blaise denied.

“It was less standing and more pulling himself up and then hanging onto the seat of the settee. He didn’t like his feet being flat on the floor. I took photos, I’ll show you when they’re developed.”

“Thank you.” Harry nodded in gratitude. If he hadn’t seen the moment in person, at least someone had thought of him enough to capture it in a picture.
“Where’s Granddad?” Max asked with a frown.

“He’s had to pop over to see Alexus.” Kimberly fretted.

“Uncle Alexus has moved out again? I thought he was living back here?”

“He doesn’t want to live with his parents.” Kimberly said. “He’s in a small home in Kent.”

“Is…is he any better?” Max asked, already knowing the answer.

“No sweetheart. He still misses Sean.”

“Did you find out why Sean left him?”

“Lex is still adamant that it’s another man, but no one has actually heard anything from Sean, we can’t find him.”

“Have you heard from Caesar?” Max asked instead.

“He sent an owl just the other day.” Myron nodded. “Amelle and the baby are fine, Nora has started standing and he’s fine too.”

“She’s four months pregnant now, isn’t she?” Draco questioned.

Harry nodded. “Yes. She has three more months to go. Has she found out if she’s having a boy or a girl yet?”

“No, the baby’s legs are still folded together.” Richard told them.

“I hope she gets her second little girl, I don’t know what would happen if she had a boy, it could undo all of the progress that she’s made so far.”
“Has she told you why she doesn’t want a boy?” Myron asked with a look that said he didn’t know and if he didn’t know, then Caesar didn’t know.

“I do, she told me just after the quintuplets were born and then once again when she was a month pregnant and she came to me for a talk, she reaffirmed that she was still feeling the same. It’s not my story to tell however.”

“If it’s something that can help us to help her…” Myron started before Harry cut him off.

“It’s not. Nothing and no one can help her with this, she just needs time to understand and to come to her own realisations, she’s been doing so well, better than any of us could have thought, but she still has lingering pains and only time can help her come to terms with them.”

“Is this about her first mate and the baby she lost, was that baby a boy?” Myron asked shrewdly.

Harry sighed and dragged a hand through his hair. “Yes, he was a boy, a month from being born when those poachers made her miscarry as she watched her mate being overpowered and killed in front of her. She naturally has lingering pain over that experience and it won’t go away in just a few years. She might never be ready for a baby boy, but if she gets used to little girls, with the right mind set she might even miss having a little boy.”

“What if she has a boy before she’s ready, do you think she’d harm him?” Max asked.

Harry laughed. “Don’t be ridiculous. She’d never harm one of her children, that I fully believe, but it would hurt her to look after him and it might negatively affect her mental health and back track on the progress that she’s already made, or she could surprise us all and look after him amazingly well and finally put the baby that she tragically lost to rest. I just don’t know.”

There was silence, but it was interrupted before anyone could say anything else by the floo flaring up and Alexander stepped out a moment later. His worried, lined face broke into a wide grin as he spotted them and he immediately pulled Harry into a big hug.

“How are you, dear one?” He asked.
“You just walked past me to greet my mate!” Max said in mock offence. “I’m your grandson!”

“I have a hundred grandsons; I only have a handful of sons-in-law and only one of those I actually like at the moment.” Alexander said back as he kissed Harry’s head, before he went and hugged Max tightly, pulling his head down to give him a kiss. “How are you, Maxie? You’re a little early for a ten day heat.”

“We figured out that Harry was feeling a little threatened from the meeting with the Faeries.” Nasta explained. “So he woke up as soon as his heat period wore off barely an hour after we ourselves had woken up.”

“What did they say?” Alexander demanded. “Did they threaten my little Leolin? Tell me if they did and I’ll kill the lot of them and burn their ridiculous, not so secret slum to the ground.”

Harry smiled. “They didn’t threaten him, but it is likely subconscious on my part, a few of them did want to take Leolin away from us as they didn’t think that Drackens could raise a Faerie baby correctly.”

“Arrogant fluff thinkers.” Alexander snorted. “I’d love to sink my claws into them.”

“You and me both.” Nasta grumbled.

“How is Alexus?” Myron asked, changing the subject quickly.

Alexander’s face went tight again. “Still being a stubborn arse. Your drama loving brother is convinced that his life is ending and I don’t know what to do to make this better for him.”

“Find Sean, truss him up and offer him up to Alexus on a skewer?” Harry suggested with a shrug. “It would make me feel better.”

Alexander smiled and ruffled his hair. “I knew there was a reason that you were my favourite.”

Harry smiled and bounced Farren a little as he wriggled. He sat him up when he started whining and looked like he was going to start crying.
“You really don’t like naps, do you?” Harry said with a smile, kissing Farren’s chubby cheek and inhaling the scent that was his second born son. It was comforting and settled him right down.

“Give me my boy.” Max said as he held his arms out.

Harry kissed Farren again gently. “Go to Daddy baby.” He said as he handed Farren over to Max, who squeezed him gently and kissed him wetly.

“Max! He doesn’t want your dribble all over him.”

“Why not? He dribbles all over me.” Max grinned.

Harry rolled his eyes and moved to stand by Blaise, covering his yawn with his hand.

“Cutie! How are you?”

Harry looked over his shoulder at the doorway to see one of Max’s identical Uncles; he was either Cepheus or Nicodemus, but they both had blond hair and jet black eyes and were completely indistinguishable from one another. They didn’t even have any visible freckles or birthmarks like Fred and George did to tell them apart.

“You don’t remember me, do you?” He pouted.

“Knock it off, Nico.” Myron grumbled, glaring at his older brother.

“Nico…Nicodemus. I know who you are, but I’ve heard that name somewhere be…” Harry trailed off as he frowned and then he turned around fully and glared at him. “You’re the bastard who wouldn’t stop pinching my bum at my meetings and you tried to grope me through my boxer shorts!”

Nicodemus threw his head back laughing, Alexander joined him, but Myron and Max looked equally unimpressed with Nicodemus.

Max threw an arm around Harry’s neck, put another one around his waist and pulled him up into his arms and gave him a possessive kiss.

“Alright, Max, I know he’s yours, calm down. I wouldn’t sink so low as to steal my own Nephew’s mate.”

“Like you could.” Harry huffed.

“You saying this isn’t a body to die for?” Nicodemus demanded as he indicated the general area of his torso and groin.

Harry laughed and twisted onto the crook of Max’s arm. “You saying what you have is better than this?” He demanded as he caressed a hand down Max’s front before pointing to Nasta, Blaise and Draco. “What about those three, do you think you’re better than them too? Better than all four of them?”

“Of course.” Nicodemus grinned.

Harry shook his head.

“Ignore him.” Myron told him. “My sister Kyra and I are the only sane ones.”

“Aunt Kyra isn’t here is she?” Max asked quickly, looking around as if his Aunt would step out of a corner somewhere.

“No, Nico came here to tell me that he was booted out of yet another meeting, but Cepheus might be in with a chance to get a mate.” Alexander said with a smile.

“I’m not surprised that he gets kicked out of every meeting if he goes around pinching people’s bums and trying to fondle them when they’re not looking.” Harry grumbled.

“What about Xerxes?” Richard butted in. “He’s sane.”

“You and I have different perceptions of sane.” Myron told him.
“He’s not that crazy, not like Nico and Ceph.” Richard said.

“Still here!” Nico called out with a grin.

“You can’t call everyone that’s not as boring as you are insane.” Richard carried on.

“I’m not boring.” Myron growled. “I’m sane.”

“See, you’re doing it again.”

“Who want’s tea?” Kimberly broke in mildly, glaring at her son and son-in-law.

She didn’t wait for a reply; she just left towards the kitchen, leaving them in silence.

“You two are in trouble.” Nicodemus laughed. “Mum only looks like that when she’s seriously pissed off.”

“Watch your language!” Myron snapped at his older brother, much like a Father.

Nicodemus just laughed and went to sit down. Harry joined him, but he sat on a different settee. He was so tired and he felt achy, almost flu like, perhaps they should have taken the rest of the day to just rest and come to pick up the children in the morning, but then he’d missed them so much that he didn’t think he could have waited that long.

“Stop it!” Kimberly hissed at Richard and Nicodemus when they started arguing just after she placed a tea tray of full cups on the table. “If it had escaped the notice of your fool brains, there are five babies trying to sleep in this room! Merlin help you if you wake any of them up! Don’t make me go and get my spoon.”

The two of them lapsed into silence, cowed by the anger of Kimberly who had sat down and started talking to Harry quietly about what the babies had gotten up to when he’d been on his heat.

Regan, Tegan and Calix usually napped for an hour and a half to two hours at a time, Leolin was still cat napping, he’d sleep for four or so hours, wake up for a little while before he fell off to sleep again. Farren would nap for thirty to forty minutes if they managed to get him to take his afternoon nap at all, but he always refused his late morning nap and Braiden would sleep for nearly three hours in the afternoon, but like Farren, he also refused his morning nap. It was a nightmare sorting them all out and trying to keep all of them straight and happy and well rested.

“How long have they been down now?” Harry asked. “I’d hate to wake them up with floo travel.”

“Braiden went down right after lunch.” Kimberly told him, smiling softly and the blanket covered bundles on her living room floor. “There’s no fuss from him either, just straight down and almost straight to sleep too. He’s such a good boy. He’s been down for…almost three hours now.” She said looking at the clock on the mantelpiece.

“He’ll be awake soon then, he usually only sleeps for three hours. How about the other four?”

“Calix, Regan and Tegan went to sleep two hours after Braiden, naughty little ones that they are; they thought that it was a game of catch.” Kimberly smiled indulgently. “They’ve been asleep for a little over an hour now.”

Harry nodded. “That’s about right, they usually wake up all together, though sometimes Braiden will wake up half an hour before them, it depends on how tired they are. How was Leolin?”

“Leolin has been a bit restless, he’s been sleeping shorter and waking up more often.”

“Has he been doing that through the night too?” Nasta asked curiously.

“Yes, he doesn’t seem to want anything though. Alexander and I tried feeding him, changing him and even singing to him, but he was just so disgruntled.”

“He usually only wakes up in the middle of the night once now, for a bottle.” Harry said, biting his lip concernedly.

Nasta went to where Leolin was in his bassinet and he picked him up gently. Harry watched with baited breath as Nasta checked him over and even sniffed him before his tongue peeked out and licked over a sharp cheek. He shook his head.
“He’s fine, maybe he just missed us?” Nasta wondered aloud as he cradled Leolin’s miniscule body in his arms. “It could be separation anxiety.”

Harry breathed a little easier and patted the seat next to him. Nasta took the hint and Harry bent over to smooth the hair away from Leolin’s tiny face.

“I hope that’s all it is.” He murmured.

“I’m sure it is; don’t stress yourself out over it.” Max said as he actually did the impossible and made Farren drowsy enough to close his eyes. He was still awake, because his fingers were twirling through the hair behind his ear, but his eyes were closed and his body was sagging in Max’s arms as his biggest mate swayed with him gently and slowly.

“I don’t know how you do that.” Blaise grumbled. “He never falls asleep for me, even when I do the same.”

“He loves me.” Max replied smugly.

Blaise rolled his eyes, but he smiled when Braiden’s blanket twitched, right before their eleven month old rolled onto his knees and rubbed his eyes with little fists.

“Call him, go on.” Max urged him in a hiss. “He loves you the most.”

Harry huffed, but shifted forward to the edge of the settee and opened his legs.

“Hello Braiden, love. Did you have a good sleep?” He asked gently and clearly.

Braiden turned around and the grin that lit up his face made Harry feel teary.

“Mama! Mama ma!” Braiden burbled out as he set forward as quickly as his hands and knees could get him, going back on his knees and lifting his arms up when he got between Harry’s legs.
“Hello Braiden, did you miss me?” Harry murmured gently as he squeezed his firstborn gently.

“I think it’s safe to say that he definitely missed you.” Richard grinned.

Harry smiled at him, but his attention was taken by Braiden, who stood in his lap and wrapped little arms around his neck. He was still babbling.

He couldn’t help but laugh softly. “I wasn’t gone that long, love. Come on, tell me what you got up to, did you have fun?”

Harry moved his son to sit on his thigh and wrapped an arm around him and then he sat and listened to Braiden babbling, nodding his head and humming when Braiden looked up at him, acting like they were having an actual conversation, which to Braiden they likely were.

“He’s so adorable.” Nicodemus praised. “You’re an amazing Mother, why can’t all submissives be like you?”

“Harry’s one of a kind.” Max said proudly, his chest swelling as his Uncle praised his submissive mate.

Harry snorted and turned away from both of them as he looked back at Braiden’s bright indigo coloured eyes and he smiled widely.

“Sorry love, Daddy Max distracted me; carry on with what you were saying.”

“Baba ca, da mambe ah.” Braiden nodded seriously.

Harry smiled and nodded his head back at him. “Is that right?” He questioned and was surprised when Braiden nodded his head and carried on babbling.

“I swear he understands every word you say.” Draco told him.

“I think I actually believe you.” Harry laughed. “Who’s my clever boy?”
Braiden giggled when Harry tickled him, but he couldn’t help grimacing as one of his pulled muscles throbbed.

“I think you’re the one who needs a nap.” Max laughed, still swaying and bouncing lightly with a sleeping Farren.

“I think it’s time we got home, none of us are really recovered yet.” Nasta said, not really giving them a choice either.

Harry nodded and yawned widely.

“I’ll go and pack up their things.” Alexander nodded with a grin. “I’ll miss these little blighters when they’re gone.”

“You can come around and visit you know.” Max told his Grandfather. “You never know, it might put you off babysitting the next time.”

“Why is that a good thing?” Draco demanded.

“It’ll give someone else a look it at the kids.” Max answered with a grin.

Harry shook his head and stood up, groaning as a pulled muscle in his back made itself known. He handed Braiden to Blaise and rubbed at the sore spot unhappily.

“I’ll give you a muscle relaxant when we get home.” Max said sympathetically. “Just enough to loosen them up to stop the pain.”

“Thank you, I feel like my body is trying to rip itself apart.”

Alexander came down from up the stairs with three suitcases of the stuff that Harry had packed, including toys, blankets, dummies, clothes for the six of them for ten days, with spares just in case, all of their bottles and formula powder, baby food jars, a box of rusks, a packet of apple rice cakes and carrot flavoured corn sticks. Alexander had bought his own stock of nappies for them, as Harry didn’t think he had a suitcase big enough to carry all the nappies they would need for ten days, let alone the wipes and talcum powder too. He had packed Calix’s medicated cream though, just in case.

“Thank you so much for looking after them.” Harry said with a shy smile.

“It was my pleasure to look after my great-grandchildren.” Alexander waved off. “They’re so cheeky now, such a difference two months makes.”

Harry smiled at that and went to ease up his remaining three quintuplets as Tegan woke up from her nap and was not very gentle in clambering all over Regan, waking him up too.

“Hello sweetheart.” Harry greeted her, kissing her little mouth gently. “I’ve missed you so much baby girl. Did you have fun while I was gone?”

“Mama.” Tegan babbled softly as she snuggled into him, clenching her little fists into his shirt.

“That one is definitely the naughtiest.” Alexander said, sounding very approving of that fact. “She wouldn’t let any of them play, she snatched toys, threw them at me when I tried to tell her not to and always…always filled a nappy right after I’d dressed her for the night after her bath. It didn’t matter how long I waited either, I kept her in just a nappy yesterday until I’d finished off the others and I honestly thought that she wasn’t going to, so I dressed her, tucked her in, bang on time she needs a change.”

Harry laughed and snuggled with Tegan. “She definitely likes being the one in charge.” He allowed with a nod.

Draco eased Regan out of sleep, he was a little groggy after the rude awaking he’d had, but he was very happy to see them back and he clapped his little hands together awkwardly, missing every other try.

“Cassander taught him that.” Kimberly smiled. “He was here the third day of your heat.”

“His depth perception is a little off.” Max grinned.
Harry rolled his eyes before easing Calix out of sleep when he made a soft murmur and shifted.

“Calix love, are you going to wake up?” He coaxed gently.

“Ah ma.” He sighed sleepily.

“Oh he’s so cute.” Harry gushed quietly.

Draco snorted and gave him a look that Harry knew meant he was being a complete dork, but he didn’t care.

Calix rolled over and blinked those jet black eyes open, so much like Myron’s and Kimberly’s. He grinned widely when he saw Harry sitting over him that he babbled nonsense and held his arms up in the air, still on his back.

Harry laughed at him. “Come on silly boy, up you get, we need to go home.”

Harry cradled Tegan and Calix to his chest and he stood up, groaning as it made his legs and back ache.

“We really need to get you home.” Max teased. “You’re falling apart at the seams.”

“It seems like it, I definitely feel like I’m falling to pieces.” Harry nodded.

“Let’s get you boys home then.” Alexander smiled. “You need the rest.”

It was easy getting home from then on, though Nasta made Harry wait until last, just so that he could be ready to catch him on the other side, he still wasn’t any good at landings, and experience from his trip to Alexander’s, pulled muscles only made him worse and with two babies in his arms, he really didn’t want to face plant the floor.

Nasta caught him easily and did a really cheesy dance dip before kissing him while his head was tipped backwards. Harry laughed along with Tegan and Calix as Nasta righted them up and led him to a settee to sit down.

Harry still had a grin on his face when Max held out a cup of tea which he promised had a muscle relaxant in it. Harry set Calix and Tegan on the floor by his feet before grabbing it and swallowing the hot tea down in five large gulps.

“It’ll take a few minutes to work, but it will work.” Max assured him with a smile.

“Where’s Leolin? I want to make sure he’s okay.”

“He hasn’t woken up yet, Cariad.” Nasta told him, but he nodded to the bassinet by the arm of the settee regardless.

“I just want him to know that we love him and that he’s home now.” Harry said. “I don’t like that this has distressed him in any way.”

“It couldn’t be helped.” Nasta soothed.

“That’s not the point.” Harry said sadly. “He was unrested and distressed when we took him to the Faerie city too, but at least that was only one day, now he’s distressed and unrested at Alexander’s too. I think we should focus more on his routine and work harder on keeping him in it.”

“It changes so often though.” Blaise pointed out. “Some days he sleeps longer than others, sometimes he takes in more milk, some nights he wakes up twice, others only once. His routine differs.”

Harry nodded. “I know, but if we focus on his main routine, feeding him at the same time every day, bathing him at the same time and doing everything on a repetitive cycle then maybe he’ll be more reassured.”

“If you think it’ll help then we’ll try it.” Nasta said.

Draco picked up some parchment and got a bottle of ink and a quill. “I’ll write it down so that we can look at it if we need reminding of what he needs next.”

“If he’s kept on near enough the same schedule every night then he should come to anticipate it and hopefully that will make everything less stressful, but there will be disturbances and things he may not like, like trips outside.” Max told them.

“I know that, but if his basic routine is solid then maybe he’ll deal with the disturbances and distractions better, or at least that’s what I hope.” Harry sighed sadly.

“He won’t be this way forever.” Draco reminded him as he scratched away with his quill.

“I know, but if there is anything I can do to reduce his stress and anxiety, I’ll do it.” Harry said firmly.

“You know that we all will.” Blaise answered him softly. “I hated hearing that he’s been unrested and anxious while we’ve been otherwise occupied. I’ll do anything to help him, even learn a new routine for him every week if needed.”

“Hopefully it won’t change that quickly, but with Leolin, you never know.”

Harry sighed and sunk into the chair, relaxing back and watching his children play on the floor, all of them looked at him every ten or so minutes to make sure that he was still there and it made his heart ache, he hated knowing that he had caused them all some degree of anxiety or stress, not just Leolin. He almost hoped that he was pregnant now, at least then he wouldn’t have to have a heat period and leave them for however many days at a time in another two months. He’d have a guaranteed nine months at least of no heats that he could stay at home with them and reassure them that everything was fine. That would actually be for the best now.

Chapter End Notes

A/N: I hope you enjoyed this one and the heat period. Next chapter will be around soon enough, so not long to wait for that, but naturally the longer the chapter the longer it’ll take.

The next chapter is definitely going to make you all smile if what I have planned goes well, it’s something that has been on my mind for a while since it was brought up in a previous chapter as a joke, but it’s stuck, so I’m writing it, you can’t miss it. So I hope you’ve enjoyed this chapter lovelies, until the next chapter then,
StarLight Massacre. X

Chapter Eighty-One – Fantasy

“Lay off!” Harry growled angrily as he was pushed towards a chair. “We have no idea if I’m pregnant or not yet and if I was I’m not doing any damage! Back away from my body!”

“Back away from the man’s body!” Max proclaimed loudly, picking Blaise up and hauling him to a different settee.

Harry’s anger and frustration melted away and he couldn’t help grinning, which was what Max had aimed for, he was sure.

He was turning eighteen tomorrow and he was getting excited as his mates kept hinting at a big surprise just for him, but the continuous manhandling and the urging to just take it easy and rest some more was stripping that away slowly, but surely.

“What is going on now?” Nasta asked exasperatedly. Harry felt bad for disturbing him; he’d had a large batch of paperwork come from the Welsh Dragon Reserve that morning and he was very busy trying to sort it all out. The stress rolled off of him like an almost visible haze, but Harry had learnt that Nasta dealt with stress very well. At least up to a certain point that was.

“Blaise is treating Harry like an invalid again.” Max told him. “Nothing I can’t sort out, don’t worry.”
“It looks like you’re making things worse.” Nasta replied tonelessly and with a cocked eyebrow.

Max was holding Blaise to the settee, but Blaise wasn’t paying any attention to them and was instead fighting and snarling, his claws and fangs were out, but his wings were still absent. Small mercies and all that.

Nasta sighed and got Max to back away before seizing Blaise around the waist and holding him tightly to his chest as he went to dive on Max, presumably to tear into him. His fangs slid out and Nasta sunk them into the back of Blaise’s neck to calm him and within minutes Blaise had calmed right down and he had gone boneless in Nasta’s arms. Harry breathed a bit easier; he hadn’t known that he had been getting tense from this situation until Blaise had visibly calmed down.

“Stop upsetting Harry.” Nasta demanded. “It’s his birthday tomorrow! You’re ruining his big surprise; he won’t want it if he’s angry with all of us.”

“I didn’t say that!” Harry cut in quickly with a wide grin. “I want the surprise; I just want to be left alone. We were on holiday in Guadeloupe last year and I was further into my pregnancy with the quintuplets than I am now, if I am pregnant at all that is and if I am it’s only a week along.”

“You’re a very fertile man.” Max purred. “Chances are that you are pregnant. We could have a little baby growing in here.”

Harry rolled his eyes as Max’s huge hand covered his slim belly. He was pulled into a harsh kiss and when they broke apart he shook his head, his chest heaving.

“When’s Draco coming home?” Harry asked. “I’m hungry.”

“He said early afternoon, before Regan and Tegan need to take their naps, so at about one.” Nasta answered.

“I can make you an early lunch.” Max offered happily. “Draco will likely eat at the Malfoy home with his parents and he has food for Regan and Tegan with him. There’s no point in us waiting for him to come back to eat lunch only to find out that he’s already eaten.”

Harry scooped up Calix and carried him into the kitchen. Braiden had already gone down for his nap at noon, after his own lunch, and Leolin was sleeping too, it was just Calix and Farren left awake for them to entertain and they’d both be going down for a nap in an hour or so and then they’d have an hour or two to themselves to clean up the house and sort everything out before the kids woke up and then made a mess again.

Nasta set Farren down in the play area that they’d set up, using a corner of the kitchen and cordon it off from the rest of the kitchen so that if they were all in the kitchen, they didn’t have to leave their babies in a different room, but it also kept the babies safe from the dangers of the kitchen.

Harry sat down with Calix in his lap, he was chewing on a small ball that had different textured nodules to help teething babies as Calix was cutting a new tooth. Nasta went back to his paperwork, Max started prepping for lunch and Blaise sat beside him, playing with Calix’s hair. His hand kept twitching as if he wanted to pull Harry onto his own lap and trap him there. Harry swore that he wouldn’t do or say anything about it until Blaise actually started manhandling him again.

“So are you excited for tomorrow?” Max asked him with a smile.

“Of course I am. I turn eighteen tomorrow. It’s always been a big birthday in my mind.” Harry smiled.

“You won’t be able to drink tomorrow.” Nasta told him without even looking up from his paperwork.

Harry sighed. “I know that. I wasn’t going to drink anyway, the kids will be here. I’m not some sort of alcoholic, Nasta; I don’t wait for any excuse to drink.”

Nasta looked up and blinked confusedly. “I know that. I wouldn’t have minded if your birthday had been before your heat, but with the unknown status of your…”

“I know.” Harry cut in aggrieved. “As I said, I wasn’t going to drink anyway, pregnant or not.”

Nasta seemed to realise that he’d shoved his foot into his mouth as he stopped talking and went back to his work silently. This was the downfall of being pregnant, or even just maybe pregnant it seemed. They were treating him like he was stupid. As if he didn’t already fucking know that he couldn’t drink because of the maybe baby, what sort of fool did they take him for?

Harry breathed in deeply and settled himself. He reminded himself that Nasta was under a lot of stress and had a lot of work to do and that his comment likely wasn’t aimed to hurt him or make him feel stupid, even if it had.

He was not some child who would fly off the handle for an imagined slight when it wasn’t intended that way. He wasn’t the raged filled teenager who had felt white hot anger burning through him at all hours of the day and blew up spectacularly for any small, minuscule reason. He’d grown up since then. He wasn’t the reckless boy who had once thrown himself into all sorts of danger just because he thought others were in trouble or because he was too curious for his own good. He was a Mother now. A Mother to six young babies and maybe more soon. He was a lover to four amazing men, he was one fifth of the adult percentage of their family, if he went and did something reckless and dangerous, he not only risked his lovers, but he could risk making his children Motherless too. How the hell could he live with himself if he risked that, risked them, for the sake of his own feelings and curiosities? No, he wasn’t that boy anymore, he’d grown up since then and he wasn’t going to look back. He would regret nothing.

---------------------------------------- X

Harry was the first one awake the next morning. He’d had a nightmare and he was covered in sweat, feeling sticky and dirty. He didn’t even remember that it was his birthday today; all he could think about was the nightmare that had been so bad that it had mentally disturbed him. What sort of person was he to have such disgusting dreams about his own children? He wanted to vomit.

Climbing out of the bed carefully so that he didn’t wake up his lovers, untangling himself from them and their limbs and from the duvet, he checked on Leolin, who was sleeping peacefully in his bassinet by their bedside. He grabbed a clean pair of pyjamas from the dresser before he went to the nursery next door and checked on the five other babies, who were again all sleeping peacefully in their cots. He’d just had to check on them after his nightmare. It was half four in the morning and he felt unrested and grubby, his thoughts flying around his head at a mile a minute, flitting through his nightmare on repeat, honing in on every vile detail until he felt physically sick and close to tears.

He went to the bathroom on the ground floor and got into the shower, making the water as hot as he could stand it to make himself feel cleaner. He stayed in just long enough to wash his hair and body before he got out and wrapped himself in a towel. He dried off carefully and dressed in the clean pyjamas that he’d brought down with him and he cleaned up the bathroom before he went into the kitchen to get a cup of tea, sitting at the table and trying to calm himself down and not think about the nightmare that he’d had, but it was the only thing on his mind, the only thing that he could actually think about. That was how Nasta found him just fifteen minutes later.

“Why are you up so early, love?” He asked softly as he checked how hot the water in the kettle was, Leolin wailing half-heartedly in the crook of his arm for a feed.

“Nightmare.” Harry grunted tiredly. “I’m going to drink this and get back into bed; hopefully I can sleep for an hour or two at least before the kids wake up and need dealing with.”

“I can handle them if you want a few more hours in bed; you look dead on your feet. How long have you been down here on your own?”

“Not long.” Harry answered as he watched Nasta make up a bottle for Leolin over the rim of his teacup. “I woke up at about half four, checked on the kids, grabbed a quick shower to clean myself up and then came to get some tea to settle myself. If I’d known that Leolin was going to wake up I’d have brought him down with me so that you could sleep for longer. I knew I should have grabbed the baby monitor, I just wasn’t thinking straight.”

“I still don’t think you are thinking straight.” Nasta told him gently. “Get some more sleep, maybe then you’ll feel better. We’ll talk through your nightmare when you wake up if you’d like to.”

Harry nodded and drained his tea. He dropped the cup into the sink gently, he kissed Nasta before he kissed Leolin and he trudged back up to bed, hoping to get a few more hours of sleep at least.

He crawled into the bed and he snuggled down between Draco and Blaise. He tried to clear his mind, or at the very least he tried not to think about the nightmare that he’d had, but it was difficult when it was roving around his mind and kept buzzing to life every time he tried to drift off to sleep. Max was just getting up when he finally fell asleep, restless and exhausted.

Max was very happy, excited almost, as he showered and dressed himself as quickly as he could, keeping himself as quiet as he could so that he didn’t wake Harry, the birthday boy. The youngest member of their mateship was eighteen today and he was now a legal adult in the Muggle world as well as the wizarding world, which was great as it meant that all five of them could now go out into the Muggle world and do everything that they wanted to do. There would be no sneaking wine to Harry or Draco like they’d done last Valentine’s Day, when Nasta had insisted seriously, to the owners of the rather grubby restaurant, that Harry and Draco were definitely eighteen, almost nineteen in fact, when in truth they’d been seventeen. The five of them had gotten seriously drunk off of that night, there were still some parts that one or more of them just didn’t remember. Max smiled, it had been an amazing Valentine’s night…he made a mental note to make next year’s just as amazing, he’d corroborate with Nasta to treat the younger three.

He peeked his head in on the kids, happy that none of them were awake as of yet as he rushed down the stairs to start breakfast, he was going to surprise Harry with breakfast in bed again.

“Don’t bother with Harry.” Nasta told him from the table where he was doing paperwork with Leolin cradled in one arm.

“You said that you weren’t going to do paperwork today and we agreed that we’d give Harry breakfast in bed.” Max said with a frown, wondering what had happened in just several hours to change this.

Nasta sighed and put his quill down, rubbing his face. “Harry was down here this morning when I
Max sighed and took the chair next to Nasta, taking Leolin from him so that he had both hands free for his paperwork. He cradled his youngest son gently and pressed a kiss to his sleeping brow.

“What did he dream about this time?” Max asked softly.

“I don’t know, he looked so out of it. I thought that it would be better to just put him to bed and let him tell me later. It likely has something to do with the Dursley case; it’s taking over his thoughts these days and his nightmares are getting worse.”

Max nodded. “I’ll make him brunch when he wakes up later. But Draco and Blaise should be awake in an hour or so, so I’ll make breakfast for four and get the kids sorted, that way you can get as much paperwork out of the way as possible before Harry wakes up.”

Nasta pulled Max down into a grateful kiss. “Thank you. I can’t believe how much I have to do. I’m going to have to pop in to the Reserve some when to evaluate the adolescents too. That’s snuck up on me, it seems only the other week that I got the update that they’d hatched.”

“You’re doing it again.” Max teased.

“Doing what?” Nasta asked curiously.

“Going all crazy, gooey eyed over the hatchlings. I’ve already told you, you can’t sneak one away under your shirt.”

Nasta smiled. “I do miss them a lot. I can’t help it, but I’d never risk our children in such a blatant, selfish way.”

“I know you wouldn’t, I was just teasing.” Max bopped him over the head before he turned to put Leolin in his kitchen bassinet before he boiled the kettle to make tea.
He made sure that Nasta was supplied with a fresh cup of green tea before he drained his own cup to wake himself up before he started the preparation for breakfast, reminding himself that it was for four people and not five like usual.

Draco came down at seven with Braiden and Farren tucked into his arms. He settled them both into highchairs with Nasta’s help and predictably Farren started bashing the tray of his highchair with his hands as his breakfast wasn’t immediately put in front of him.

“Alright Farren, calm down.” Draco chuckled sleepily. “I haven’t even woken up properly yet.”

“Here you go, love, wake yourself up.” Max pulled him into a kiss and passed over a teacup of white tea, just how Draco liked it, before he started up making two bowls of baby cereal.

“I’ll feed these two; you have too much to do with breakfast.” Nasta offered, putting his paperwork back into the case file to avoid spilling anything on it. He didn’t much feel like spending two hours of his time charming dried cereal off of his work.

Nasta took the two tiny bowls from Max and set Braiden’s in front of him, but he held Farren’s in one hand and loaded up a tiny spoon that was nearly lost in his hand.

Braiden’s hand went into his bowl and his hand then went to his mouth as he suckled his cereal happily.

“For a boy who doesn’t like having a bath, he sure does like getting into a mess.” Draco observed, watching over Braiden.

Farren greedily ate every bite that Nasta gave him. Nasta was so proud of how much Farren was growing and how quickly too. He had swallowed his cereal and had his mouth open again, waiting for more before Nasta had even loaded up the spoon and he had to chuckle at him. He made sure to keep an eye on Braiden, who was smearing his breakfast halfway across his face. He couldn’t believe that Braiden would be a year old in just two weeks. It had gone so very fast, he still remembered cradling a newborn Braiden in his arms, his heart bursting with love for his first ever child. He’d still been reeling at the thought that he was actually mated and that he finally had a submissive mate of his own after twenty-one years of waiting, that he had three other dominants to love too and then Braiden had come along and he had thought that his heart might burst from the amount of love that he felt.

Farren finished his cereal and Nasta had to scrape the bowl as Farren sat there with his mouth open waiting for more and when the cereal was completely gone and Nasta didn’t put the spoon back into his mouth, he started crying.
“What is the matter baby boy?” Max asked him softly, coming over to wipe Farren’s hands and chin with a damp cloth. Farren started crying harder as he realised that breakfast was over.

Nasta turned to help Braiden, picking up his spoon and helping him to actually eat his breakfast, grimacing as those gunky fingers tugged at his sleeves and gripped his hand and fingers, smearing more of his smooth cereal everywhere.

Max gave up trying to comfort Farren as he tore a ripe banana from the fruit bowl and peeled it. He broke it in half before picking up a knife and cutting each half into very thin slices.

He picked up half of the slices in his hand and scattered them over Farren’s tray and, sniffing softly, Farren picked one slice up and jammed it into his mouth, chewing happily and dribbling mashed banana down his chin.

“This boy is only happy when he’s eating!” He complained. “A whole bowl of cereal and half a banana, at seven months old! He’s going to be bigger than I am before he’s a teenager!”

“A little help please.” Blaise asked from down the hall and Draco stood to go and help him, coming back in with Calix squirming over his shoulder, giggling and yanking on baby fine, blond hair.

“Calix love, please don’t pull my hair.” Draco coaxed as he tried to get those little hands from his hair while trying to also get him into a highchair as Blaise came into the kitchen with Regan and Tegan babbling together in his arms.

“Harry’s sleeping like a rock today.” Blaise told them. “He didn’t so much as stir as I woke up because these three were screaming their heads off.”

“He’s had a rough night.” Nasta said with a sigh. “He was down here at four this morning, he had nightmares again. I thought it would be a bigger gift to him to let him have a lie in rather than wake him up with breakfast in bed.”

Draco nodded. “It would be. I think he’d enjoy that a lot more. He misses his sleep.”

“I vote that we let him sleep as long as he wants to, even if it’s past midday.” Blaise added.

“I agree with that. The best present that we could give him. His beauty sleep.” Max laughed. “We’ve got the family and his friends coming over later though for his party, so he can’t sleep for too long, I’d think he’d want a shower at least.”
“He had one this morning.” Nasta informed them as he finished feeding Braiden and was using a cloth to clean up what he could.

Max picked up the other half a banana and scattered it over Braiden’s tray, watching as their oldest boy clapped his hands happily as the banana slices just appeared for him. He picked one up and stuffed it into his mouth, chewing happily and wriggling his little body as he ate.

“I think he likes bananas.” Draco smiled.

Max pulled open a drawer and pulled out a notebook, he grabbed a pencil and wrote something down.

“Braiden loves bananas. They puree really well so I used to mix a bit of banana puree in with his cereal when we were just giving him his first taste of things other than milk. Farren likes them better now that they’re whole; he wasn’t fond of them when they were pureed.”

Max put the pencil down and went to get three bowls of baby cereal and handed them out with little spoons before he turned back to keep an eye on breakfast, washing up Farren and Braiden’s bowls and spoons before wiping down his counters.

Blaise fed Tegan her cereal as Draco tried to coax Regan into eating, but their fourth child was very fussy and he was playing up yet again.

“Only you could have such a fussy eater.” Draco groused to Nasta.

“You mean you weren’t?” Max teased.

“I’ll have you know that I have always eaten everything that I’ve been told to eat. If it was on my plate, I ate it without complaint. Have you ever known me to leave anything?”

Max frowned in thought before he laughed. “You know what, I haven’t. You always clear your plate. What if you don’t like something?”

“I still eat it and then I know for next time that I don’t like it and I won’t agree to eat it again.”
“I couldn’t do that.” Max grimaced. “If I didn’t like it, I would not fucking eat it. I was very opinionated and very strong willed, even as a child and nothing, not even the threat of a public spanking from my Dad, would get me to eat anything that I didn’t want to when I was a kid, which unfortunately had the effect of teaching my brother and sisters that they didn’t have to eat what they didn’t want to either. My Dad hated it.”

“Ba na.” Braiden babbled loudly, cutting across their conversation.

“Yes Braiden. Banana.” Nasta encouraged brightly, holding out a thin slice of the fruit to their, almost, one year old.

“Na na.” Braiden giggled as he grabbed the slice and squashed it in his hand before sucking the mashed banana into his mouth.

“You’re so messy.” Nasta mock growled at him, getting a happy giggle back and mashed banana covered fingers grabbing for his face. He pulled back very quickly out of reach.

“Ba na na.” Calix babbled and as one, four heads swung to look at him.

“Get the camera!” Max hissed.

Nasta rushed to fumble the camcorder from a kitchen drawer, he set it up and set it to record as Max hunched in front of Calix and babbled to him and then he said ‘banana’ to Calix and he screeched happily.

“Ba nana.” Calix said more clearly, clapping his hands together.

“Banana.” Max encouraged again showing the thin slice of fruit to him.

“Nanah.” Calix grinned bashing a little hand against his highchair tray.

“Banana.”
“Banana.” Calix copied.

Max scooped him up and cuddled him close. “Who is such a clever boy! Seven months old and he said his first proper word! This here is my boy!” He boasted, turning Calix to face the camcorder. “This clever boy is made with my genes and that bruiser by there, is also my genes!” He added pointing to Farren, who was sucking the last of the banana slices into his mouth. “I have a smart son and a big bruiser.”

“Are you done?” Draco sneered. “I haven’t had any biological children yet, we all know that my genes will be highly superior. Not that I think any of them are inferior, but my genes are naturally going to be a cut above yours.”

Blaise snorted. “I think that it’s Harry’s genes that are the superior ones. All the kids are amazing and they all have one thing in common. Harry.”

“I can agree to that.” Nasta said with a soft smile as he put the camcorder back down and placed it back into its drawer.

“Right lovers, breakfast is up, are these monsters finished yet?” Max asked as he handed Calix off to Nasta, who had held his arms out for him.

“We’re just waiting on Regan to stop being a fussy mare.” Draco grumbled as he tried to get Regan to eat a little more.

“I’ll set the bath up after breakfast.” Nasta sighed. “If one of you could give me a hand we can bathe three of them at a time and get done in half the time so that we can focus on setting everything up for Harry.”

“I’ll help you.” Blaise said after thanking Max for his breakfast.

“Thank you, Caru.” Nasta smiled and pulled his head into a kiss as he passed on his way to get to his own breakfast.

“Did Harry say what his nightmare was about?” Blaise asked.
Nasta shook his head. “No. He didn’t say much about it. He just told me that he had a nightmare, not what it was about, but I’d think it was about the Dursley trial.”

“Don’t say that too loudly today.” Draco warned. “It’s his birthday; the last thing he needs is hearing that damn name.”

Nasta nodded in understanding and dug into his breakfast, but it was like chewing rubber. He’d rather eat his own wings than tell Max such a thing though, especially as he was sure that Max’s cooking was just as perfect as it always was, the fault lay upstairs, sleeping in their bed and not even knowing that it was his birthday.

Max set to cleaning the dishes and the kitchen as he started baking little fairy cakes and making a very large birthday cake for Harry.

Nasta and Blaise bathed the children and dressed them smartly, but made sure they were still comfortable enough to play and move around in as they dropped them on Draco, who was freshly showered, in the living room with their toys and then they went for their own shower, and if they took a little longer than usual and Blaise came out a little bow legged and flushed, no one said a word.

Draco wrangled the five kids as best as he could, but he was definitely feeling more love for Leolin, who was fast asleep in his bassinet, not crawling over everything, not hitting his brothers, not throwing anything, not trying to climb the cabinets, not screaming, not crying, he wasn’t doing anything but sleeping peacefully and Draco was forced to run around like a fucking peasant trying to keep an eye on all five of them as they all crawled off in different directions. Calix, the little speed racer, was darting off out the door. Tegan was hitting Farren, who was just sat there letting her hit him, but he was crying loudly. Braiden was cruising the coffee table, hitting it on every step with a hard, plastic musical ball that was lighting up brightly and making an ear splitting sound every time one of the buttons was bashed into the table. He couldn’t see Regan anywhere.

“Max!” He called out loudly, trying to keep his voice under control so that he didn’t wake up Harry, but Max heard him and the urgency in his voice.

Max dashed into the room wearing his dark green apron, covered in flour and Calix under his arm.

“He was just coming into the kitchen when I heard you.” Max sighed as he settled Calix down on the floor and went to take the musical ball from Braiden as Draco picked up Farren and cuddled him gently, soothing and comforting him.

“I can’t find Regan!” He told Max desperately.
Max looked around and Draco saw when the panic set in. He put Braiden in the playpen, snatched up Calix and put him into it too, Draco got the message and placed Farren into it with his two brothers, but Max had separated Tegan off and placed her into a travel cot that was up behind the settee, then he started looking for Regan.

Draco joined him, his heart in his throat and he felt like either bursting into tears or shifting form and clawing up some prey.

“What’s wrong, what happened?” Blaise asked as he came into the living room from the downstairs bathroom, happy, relaxed and sated for all of a minute.

Nasta moved him to the side so that he could come into the room and see what was happening for himself.

“Regan’s gone missing.” Max informed them.

Both of their faces slackened and then the panic set in as they started searching the whole room.

“How the hell did you lose him?!” Blaise raged hysterically.

“Braiden was bashing his damn music ball against the table, Tegan was attacking Farren and Calix was off out the door, I couldn’t track all of them at once and I lost Regan.”

“We’ll find him.” Nasta said soothingly. “He can’t get out of the house.”

Max blanched. “I have the back door open to stop the kitchen from overheating.” He explained before he ran to his kitchen to the back door to see if maybe Regan had taken a trip outside. His heart felt like it was going to explode.

“He couldn’t have gotten far!” Draco said a bit hysterically.

“Calm down, just stay calm.” Nasta encouraged. “Check under the settees, check under everything.”
Draco dropped to his belly and peered under their chairs, his heart constricting when he didn’t see even a hint of his little boy.

“Where the hell can he be?!” Blaise shouted.

They all sighed when they heard Harry getting up at Blaise’s shout, but before they could even exchange glances to decide what to say to him or how they could possibly explain to their submissive mate that they’d lost one of their children, a thump on the stairs had their hearts lurching into their throats, another thump followed by another had them rushing into the passageway as they heard a little body falling down the stairs.

A sleep tousled, very exhausted looking Harry in pyjamas stood at the top of the stairs, his face etched in fury and horror.

Regan was stuck halfway up the stairs, floating a mere half an inch from hitting the next step, he was screaming even as he was frozen in place and Harry almost fell head long down the stairs to grab him as Nasta rushed up the stairs to grab them both.

Harry clutched at Regan tightly and ignored Nasta carrying him down the stairs as he focused on the screaming baby in his arms. He was so angry that he was visibly shaking and all sorts of thoughts and scenarios were going through his mind, he felt bile creep up his throat.

Nasta sent Draco to go and find Max in the considerable garden and Harry kicked out at Nasta to get to the floor, sniffing and tracing his eyes all over Regan’s little body, but there seemed to be no damage done to him at all that he could see, but he wasn’t taking any chances, not with his little boy as he inhaled deeply around his head, trying to scent out any damage whatsoever.

“Oh thank fuck. I need a shot of Firewhiskey after that scare.” Max groaned.

“He fell down the stairs.” Harry bit out so coldly that they all swallowed nervously.

“Is… is he alright?” Max asked hesitantly.

“He fell down the stairs!” Harry repeated angrily, his voice rising as his arms tightened around Regan.

“Let me see him, Harry, I have first aid training.” Max encouraged. “One simple spell, that’s all, you know that this could be an emergency situation, we’ve been in this position before, just let me check him okay? Please.”
Harry clenched his jaw so hard that they could hear his teeth grinding together. “I won’t let go of him.”

“If you’re pregnant then the spell might…”

“I don’t give a fuck!” Harry hissed. “If I’m not pregnant then I’m going to feel worse for not holding him, stop wasting time! If he needs a Healer then the sooner we get him there the better!”

Max nodded haltingly and pulled his wand out of his sleeve and cast a diagnostic spell while Harry nuzzled with Regan, still sniffing him.

“He’s alright, Harry. There’s absolutely no head trauma and no concussion. He doesn’t have any broken or fractured bones, he might have a little bruising, but I swear to you there is no danger to him or any damage done.”

Harry unclenched his jaw and he swallowed hard as he heard that. He nodded sharply instead and tried to regain normal breathing patterns.

“What happened?” Harry asked them, deceptively calm.

“I…I couldn’t keep track of them.” Draco admitted bitterly. “Braiden was damaging the table, Tegan was attacking Farren, Calix was out of the door and into the kitchen and I lost Regan. He must have gone out of the door before Calix did without me noticing. I’m so sorry.”

Harry nodded and sat down on the settee, curling his legs up and cuddling with Regan. He looked so tired that none of them knew what to say.

“He was on the top landing.” Harry informed them. “He was right on the edge of the stairs as I came out of the bedroom because you were all shouting, when I woke up I heard him babbling to himself. I thought I was having a heart attack. He turned sharply to look at something down the hall and he just fell backwards. I tried to reach him, fuck I tried to get to him before he fell, but he toppled backwards before I could get halfway to him. Anything could have happened to him. He could have broken his neck! We’re lucky that he was born a wizard and he had his magic to help save him from tumbling down the full staircase, but he shouldn’t have been in that position in the first place. I want those safety gates put in on the top and bottom of those stairs within the hour.”
“Mama!” Braiden called out from his small prison.

“Let them out too, I won’t have them locked up like animals because you can’t keep an eye on them.” He said grumpily.

“Did you have another nightmare?” Nasta asked softly.

“Not now.” Harry snapped. “I at least want some tea before I start thinking about that again. That is the very last thing that I want to deal with right now.”

Nasta sighed and turned away, letting the kids out to play once again, separating Tegan and Farren as his little girl seemed to really enjoying going after Farren in particular for some reason. He closed the door to the living room so that none of them could get out again as Max went to get Harry a cup of his favoured honey tea and Blaise took a dejected Draco to find the safety gates that they’d put into storage when the babies were older, they really hadn’t thought that they’d need them until the kids were at least walking around a little, but it seemed that there was still a hell of a lot they needed to learn. He couldn’t believe that Regan had been put into such danger, just for the sake of a gate at the bottom of the stairs.

Max came back quickly to hand Harry his cup of tea and Harry was feeling better enough to at least thank him for it, but he looked ill from where Nasta was standing and he hated the thought that Harry was plagued by these nightmares enough to make him ill. He really couldn’t wait until it was all over and done with and Harry never had anything to worry over again.

The room was silent except for baby giggles and screeches and babbling, with the occasional sip that Harry took from the cup of tea that he’d been given. They watched silently as Braiden crawled to where Harry was sat and pulled himself up to his feet, lifting one arm up towards Harry, the other had a death grip on the fabric of the settee.

“Mama!” Braiden called out loudly and demandingly, gaining Harry’s attention and Harry gave him a small, pained looking smile, but he smiled nonetheless and he bent forward to put his cup on the table before he pulled Braiden up to cuddle on his lap with Regan, who was held so tightly to Harry’s front that he couldn’t have gotten away even if he’d been trying to, but their little boy was just lying on Harry, not doing or saying anything with his little hands clenched tight into Harry’s pyjama top. They could almost believe that he was sleeping, but his hazel-gold eyes were wide open and frozen with shock and terror. That made all of them feel so much guilt and pain, all of them felt terrible that this had happened to Regan, their beautiful little boy.

“The safety gates are up and I checked them several times. They’re secured and magically warded. They won’t be able to fall down the stairs again.” Draco said hesitantly as he came back into the room with Blaise.

None of them were sure what to do or to say about what had happened, they were at a loss in such a heart stopping situation. Honestly speaking, what could they do after what had happened?

“Do you even know what day it is?” Blaise asked him suddenly.

Harry frowned. “Friday.”

Nasta sighed as his concerns from earlier were confirmed. “It’s your eighteenth birthday, Harry.”

They watched as Harry’s eyes widened as realisation hit him. Nasta sighed again and rubbed his forehead with his finger and thumb.

“I completely forgot. I just wasn’t thinking.” Harry tried to assure them.

“That’s okay, Harry, you had a rough night. Would you like to talk about it?” Nasta asked patiently.

Harry sighed. “It was them again. It’s always them! I just want these dreams to stop.”

“If you talk the nightmares through with us then maybe you'll feel better.” Max hedged. “You know you can come to any of us for anything, Harry, anything at all. We only want to help you.”

Harry raked a hand through his already messed up hair and all but groaned, wrapping his arm back around Braiden and he kissed him lingeringly before turning to do the same with Regan on his other side.

“They took the kids away from us. They hurt them like they once used to hurt me and I was just stood there like a fucking idiot doing absolutely nothing but shouting at them to stop, but they never. No matter what I did I couldn’t move, it was like I was cursed to the spot. I heard the babies crying, calling out for me, but I couldn’t go to them. I’ve never felt so helpless. I think it was a mix of the trial, my old memories and those damned Faeries threatening to take Leolin away from us. It all jumbled up and made that monstrosity of a nightmare. Then I wake up from the same dream that I had had this morning and I find Regan playing on the top of the stairs! Seeing him fall backwards while I was powerless to help him, while I was too far away to protect him, hearing him hitting the stairs as he fell down them, his crying and his screaming. I couldn’t have controlled my reaction to that if I’d tried, but I did manage to keep a hold on my Dracken, who still wants to come out to make sure our little baby is alright.”
“How did he even get up the stairs?”

“He crawled up them.” Harry said with a look. “Myron and Richard told us that he pulled himself up using the settee and held himself off the floor. If he can do that then he can pull himself up a set of stairs.”

“The gates are up now, he won’t be able to do it again and he’s fine, Harry. He might be a little scared from his sudden fall, but he’s not injured. I am sorry that it happened in the first place, of course I am, but he’s okay and we’ve taken measures so that it’ll never happen again.” Draco said softly.

Harry sighed and nodded. “I know, I’m sorry for snapping, but it’s been a long night and after that nightmare and finding Regan on the landing, watching him falling…it didn’t make me feel very secure. If he hadn’t have been up on the landing, if he hadn’t have fallen, then I might not have had a bitch fit over just a few nightmares, but he was and he did.”

“You have as many bitch fits as you want. You’re entitled to them after that.” Max grinned. “We still love you, or at least we do until you start gouging out eyes.”

Harry chuckled and smiled at Max, grateful to him for lightening the mood.

“Do I get birthday kisses now?” He asked with a cheeky smile, trying to apologise for his behaviour, even if it was caused by the most horrific nightmare that he’d had to date and watching his precious little boy falling backwards down the stairs. His heart still wasn’t beating smoothly.

Max darted right in and snogged him breathless, sweeping his tongue into his mouth and pressing their lips together hard and kissing until they were both struggling for air. Harry’s lips were bruised, bright red and felt a little tender, but his chest heaved and he was grinning a bit dazedly.

“Now that was a birthday kiss.” Harry practically giggled. “Where are my other three?”

Harry was in a much better mood after he’d had a proper kiss from all of his mates and seeing Regan moving again also helped. His little boy pushed back from him and shimmied to get himself off the settee and onto the floor, Harry’s hands hovering over him in a protective gesture that he didn’t even try to reel in. He watched with his heart in his throat as Regan crawled to a soft bear and cuddled with it, rubbing it over his face in a comforting gesture.
Max jumped at the chance to get back into his kitchen, remembering that he had a cake in the oven. He made Harry swear not to move and not to go into the kitchen. Harry pouted and threw his arms up and had a mini, very exaggerated tantrum, even rolling over the floor, in which all of his babies and his mates laughed at him. Braiden even clapped for him and it made Harry feel better as he pulled Braiden into his arms and he carried on rolled around the floor with him.

“You haven’t even asked about your presents.” Max teased as he brought Harry another cup of tea and a bacon sandwich.

“I keep telling you, I don’t need them. I have everything that I could possibly want, what else can you give me?” Harry asked with a smile as he cradled an armful of children close to his chest before letting them roam off towards their toys again. “This helps though.” He grinned as he held up his sandwich and took a big bite, wiping the blob of brown sauce from his lip with his thumb.

Max shook his head and sat behind him and dragged him back onto his lap, wrapping his arms around him tightly and kissing the back of his neck with soft, dry lips.

Braiden stood on Harry’s lap and reached over his shoulder to grasp at Max’s hair, giggling his little heart out.

“You’re getting so much better at standing, little man. A year old in a few short weeks, dear Merlin where does the time go? I still remember you looking like a small hairless rat lying in the crook of my arm.”

Harry stopped chewing and turned his head to stare at Max. He swallowed hard.

“Did you, or did you not, just call our son a hairless rat?” He demanded.

“He did look like a hairless rat.” Max defended. “Didn’t you baby?”

Max pulled Braiden over Harry’s shoulder and cuddled him tightly. “You were a little hairless rat weren’t you, love? Yes you were!”

“Did I just hear you calling my Grandson a hairless rat?”

They all stopped and turned to look at a very unimpressed Marianna standing framed in the doorway.
“Well?!” She demanded of Max, her hands on her considerable hips.

“I uhh…well that might not have been exactly what I meant.” Max stammered a little and Harry laughed at how uncomfortable and embarrassed he looked.

“It had better not have been!” Marianna huffed before she turned to Blaise and gave him a hug that looked like it had crippled his back before she turned to Harry and smiled at him. “Happy birthday, sweetheart, here you go.”

She handed him a wrapped present and took Braiden from Max’s arms to squeeze him tight.

“Thank you.” Harry said politely with a smile as he went to open it.

“You can’t open just one gift, you need to receive them all first.” Draco complained.

Harry rolled his eyes. “Marianna has been kind enough to bring me a gift, I’m not going to shove it to the side and ignore it.” He said as he tore the colourful paper open to reveal an absolutely gorgeous jumper, it was overlarge, just how he liked them in the winter and he buried his nose into it. It was so soft and thick and it smelt clean and he knew just from looking at it and feeling it that it was expensive. The label was all in French.

“Thank you so much. I love it.”

“I thought you might.” Marianna smiled. “Even if it is summer, I’ve never known a boy to wear so many jumpers.”

Harry grinned as he folded his new jumper back up and carefully placed it on the coffee table, scrunching up the paper to dispose of it before a baby got hold of it, but Max took it from him and ushered Marianna to a settee, offering to get her tea.

“A coffee would be better.” Marianna told him. “You had better make a good cup too, to make up for calling my sweet Braiden a rat; you just wait until your Father hears what I overheard.”
Max actually blushed, one of the only times that Harry had ever seen him do so. He could count on one hand the amount of times that something had embarrassed Max enough to blush and he couldn’t help grinning as he watched Max nod his head and rush out to the sanctuary of his kitchen.

“He is just too fun to wind up.” Marianna chuckled huskily.

“You shouldn’t tease him, Mother.” Blaise chastised lightly.

“Why not?” Marianna asked. “He insulted my Grandson, I will tease him until he gets all flustered or, if that doesn’t work, I’ll insult his parentage and insinuate that he is a few genetic pairs short of normal.”

Blaise rolled his eyes as if this was all completely normal and Harry chuckled, finishing his sandwich and draining his tea. He didn’t have to wait long before Max came back to refill his cup, handing Blaise and Marianna mugs of coffee as he sorted out Nasta and Draco with tea too.

“Silly boy, did you hear me say put milk and sugar into my coffee?” Marianna asked with a frown.

Max swallowed and apologised, going to take the mug back to make her a new one, but Marianna laughed.

“You’re lucky that I like my coffee with milk and sugar.” She explained with a smirk as she took a deep sip. Her violet eyes glinting with the smile that she wouldn’t let show on her mouth.

Max sat down heavily on the settee behind Harry and seemed to be giving himself a mental pep talk. Harry wondered if it was the calm down and get under control sort or the ‘I’m not going to kill her’ mantra. He smiled and hid it behind his cup as he pulled a lost looking Regan back onto his lap and tickled him until he screeched happily. He still hand the stuffed bear, which had been a gift for Braiden last Christmas if he believed right, in his one hand.

“Muma.” He said quietly, looking up at him through Nasta’s hazel-gold eyes, a wide grin on his little face. He looked so much like Sanex that he had to smile. His hair was black and his eyes were paler than Sanex’s, but the face was all Nasta’s older brother’s and by extension Aneirin’s, he hoped they would both come today, it seemed like forever since he’d last seen Sanex and Caesar, he wanted to catch up with Amelle and with Talia too. He wanted to know if Julinda had worked things out with her Husband that was never there and if Alayla’s nursing course was going well. He had so much to talk about with so many people.
“How are you, Regan?” Harry asked him happily. “Are you enjoying yourself? I bet you are. I bet you’re just hampering to go exploring again, but you can’t do that without me or one of your Daddies with you, it isn’t safe.”

Regan giggled and reached for Harry’s lips. He couldn’t help but smile as those little fingers curled around his bottom lip, little nails digging in, but not too much, they’d groomed all of them recently, cutting nails, trimming hair and making sure everything was all alright and after the ordeal that Regan had been through, Harry would have let his son do anything and everything to keep that smile on his face and the giggle on his lips. He seemed to be much better now, or at least the wide eyed, frozen terror had gone.

“There you are! I found you.” Richard insisted. “Where are you boys hiding?” Richard’s voice demanded just before he rounded the corner into the larger living room, the one that wasn’t connected to the floo. His scowl transformed into a grin. “There you are! I found you.”

Harry chuckled as Richard came to greet him first, bending down to hug Harry where he was on the floor before taking Regan from him and holding him tight.

“Hello munchkin!” He greeted brightly before swooping in and kissing Regan on the cheek. “How have you been? Still as naughty as you were last week, or have you gotten even naughtier?”

“Naughtier.” Max said with a smile, obviously feeling better since his run in with Marianna.

“I don’t believe you.” Myron grumbled as he stepped up behind Richard, his arms going around his Husband’s waist and holding him tightly as he bent his head to kiss the top of Regan’s head, his fluffy black hair just long enough to show that it wasn’t going to take after Harry’s own.

“This little one is as good as gold.” Myron continued. “Richard seems to think that Regan knew enough to only act up when I wasn’t in the room to witness it.”

“He did!” Richard insisted. “I swear he only got that evil glint in his eyes when he saw you leave the room.”

“He fell down the stairs, please be careful with him.” Harry breathed out, his fingers aching to turn into claws. “I don’t want to attack you, but my Dracken does, so be gentle with him.
“He fell down the stairs?” Richard gasped and Harry saw his arms tighten in an automatic gesture of protection; it calmed his Dracken down further.

“Halfway down them.” Harry amended. “His innate magic took over and he froze himself in mid fall. He was so scared.”

“Are you sure he isn’t Max’s baby? Did we ever tell you about the time that Max fell out of the third storey window? Myron jumped out after him only to find him floating just off the ground.” Richard said with a shiver.

“You did tell me that story.” Harry nodded and he felt better for being reminded of it. All parents had scares like this, he still wasn’t going to let Regan out of his sight, but he did feel calmer.

“All parents go through something like this, Harry, there will be many more accidents to happen too, you can be sure of that, but someone is always going to be there to help pick them up and dust them off. Regan seems fine to me, just like Max was fine after his tumble out of the window, you won’t want to let him go, but he’s absolutely fine and he doesn’t need smothering. Myron even brought Max to bed with us and he was six at the time, my poor balls have never ached so much!”

Myron rolled his eyes and kissed Richard before he took a small something from his pocket and enlarged it with his wand.

“Happy birthday, Harry.” He said as he pulled Harry off the floor with the force of his hug and petted his hair lovingly before setting him back on the floor and he sat himself next to Max, pulling his son into a tight hug and pressing his lips to Max’s temple. That gesture alone told Harry that Myron still had nightmares over Max falling from that window, thinking on it, his loveable mate could have died that day, Harry might never have met him and then he wouldn’t have had Farren or Calix. He swallowed and made a mental note to catch a tight hug with Max himself later.

“Thank you.” Harry grinned as he tore open his present and opened the box inside, only to gasp and shut it again quickly. He blushed to the roots of his hair and even down his neck, his cheeks flaming. He could feel the heat of it as he turned to stare at Myron, his mouth parted slightly in shock and embarrassment. He couldn’t believe that Myron would have ever thought to get him a sex toy, let alone such an outrageous set.

“Don’t you like it?” Myron asked confusedly.
“I...yes of course. Thank you.” Harry flustered out, the heat in his face flaring up another level and he had to lower his eyes, he couldn’t even look at Myron as his cheeks burned red.

Richard started laughing uproariously and Myron’s eyes narrowed dangerously, he knew his Husband too well by now and that laugh let him know that Richard had done something that he wouldn’t approve of.

“What was in the box?” He demanded. Harry wasn’t sure if he was talking to him or to Richard.

“Nothing they won’t enjoy, I promise.” Richard laughed.

“What was in the box?!” Myron hissed dangerously. “Where is the gift that we bought for him?”

Richard grinned as he took out an identically wrapped box and enlarged it, he handed it to Harry with a wink. Harry was almost too afraid to open it. He was noticeably slower in unwrapping it, keeping the box away from his body as if expecting a python to fly out at his face as he cracked the lid open on the box and peeked inside carefully.

Harry pulled the lid off completely as he deemed it safe, he removed the safety packaging that kept his gift from being damaged by being thrown around in the slightly too big box and he took out the beautiful leather case that held a collection of nine beautifully bound books. He pulled the first one out and a grin split his face as he realised that it was all about defensive techniques and offensive spells. A set of nine, fully detailed defence books for advanced learners of the art. He sat up on his knees and he turned and threw his arms around Myron’s waist where he was sat on the settee next to Max, squeezing that thick middle as tightly as he could. Myron chuckled and held him back tightly.

“I hope you like this one more than whatever was in the box that was given to you the first time. I will find out what it is though and I’ll punish him accordingly.” Myron told him, glaring at a grinning Richard, who was completely unrepentant.

“I do. I love it. Thank you so much.”

A scream had Harry’s heart leaping into his throat as his mind took him back to what had happened to Regan that morning, his head snapped to the side to look at Farren who was lying on his back on the floor, Tegan kneeling over him with a wooden block in her hand.

He breathed deeply to calm himself, his fangs digging into his bottom lip as he picked up Farren and all but smothered him to his chest as Nasta picked up Tegan, took the block from her hand and set her into the travel cot with no toys.

“I see she’s still a bully.” Myron grumbled. “We had a hell of a time trying to keep her and Farren separated; she really doesn’t like him.”

Harry hated that. He hated that two of his children weren’t getting along and they were so young. This shouldn’t have been happening.

“It’s because Regan likes playing with Farren.” Blaise told them. “Tegan doesn’t like him playing with anyone other than her and usually he doesn’t mind, but sometimes he’ll crawl over to Farren and she hates it when Regan wants to play with any of the others.”

“She shouldn’t have the capacity to feel jealousy yet!” Harry said desperately as he rocked Farren.

“They’re born from Drackens.” Max reminded him. “They’ll develop a lot quicker than you might think, even if they are humans. They still have our genes, even though they aren’t Drackens themselves they’re still Dracken gene carriers and they still have Dracken blood.”

“I think she needs some sisters to play with. That might make her feel better.” Marianna said.

“That or she’ll get jealous over them too because she’s not the only girl anymore.” Richard shrugged. “She might very well get jealous over any new babies because they’re just that, new babies.”

Harry tugged at his hair with his free hand and sat on the settee with a sigh. “Why does she have to be so jealous and spiteful? She shared my body with Farren for four months, you’d think that she’d feel even a slight connection to him for that, she doesn’t do this to Braiden and Regan plays with him too.”

“Ah...actually she does do the same to Braiden.” Richard told him with an apologetic grimace. “It’s just that he’s up on his feet now and cruising, she can’t compete with that as she hasn’t found her feet yet, but we noticed that if he was on the floor playing, then she would make her way over to him and give him a smack and a couple of times she’s hit him when he’s taking his nap, so we had to always keep an eye on her.”

Harry couldn’t believe what he was hearing and he held Farren tighter.
“How do I make her stop? I don’t want her to do these things, I want her to stop!”

“She’s a baby still.” Myron sighed. “The only thing you can do is keep a close eye on her and pull her away if she gets too close to Farren or Braiden, it’s what we were doing in the end, it’s all we could do. She won’t understand what she’s doing wrong for a while yet, so she won’t understand punishment, though I would start your method of punishment sooner rather than later, just so they know there are consequences and whatever you do, stay consistent!”

Harry lay back with Farren and his second oldest son lay snuggled into his chest and murmured quietly to himself as Harry rubbed the spot that Tegan had hit him with the block with one hand while his other rubbed his back slowly and soothingly.

When she was old enough, he would most definitely put a stop to her behaviour, he would not have any of his children treating one another this way, he wouldn’t stand for bullying in his own home. He wouldn’t stand for it.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

At two in the afternoon, the babies were all fast asleep napping; even Farren who had had a rough start to his day, though not as rough as Regan had, who was sleeping peacefully, completely safe in his travel cot, his soft bear tucked under his arm still and Harry was happily catching up with Hermione, Ginny, Fred, George and Bill.

Hermione had just started a job at the Department for the Regulation and Control of Magical Creatures and she hoped to make a huge difference for all magical creatures and Harry knew that she’d make sure that she would do so fairly and justly and for all creatures, including Drackens. She hoped, with the help of Myron, Aneirin and Lucius, to help reform the way that Drackens were perceived and persecuted, stating that the execution of anyone without fair trial was barbaric and archaic. She went on for a long while, but Harry just smiled and nodded along with her like he’d been doing for most of their friendship together. It was just easier than trying to keep up with her when he didn’t understand half of what she was saying. It was a survival technique.

“Merlin, stop for breath once in a while, Granger, here have a cake.” Draco said as he shoved a cake into her hands before dragging Harry away and into the next room.

“Are you okay, what’s wrong?” Harry asked panicked, but Draco just gave him an evil smirk and pulled him into a passionate, lingering kiss.

“I’ve been wanting to do that for the last hour.” Draco confessed as they broke apart slowly, Harry blinking at him dazedly.

“By all means, carry on.” Harry encouraged with a grin.

They were found ten minutes later, still snogging and clutching one another close, by Caesar, who of course laughed loudly and ran back into the kitchen to tell everyone what he’d seen, embellishing his story by claiming that Harry and Draco were half naked and were ‘all but having sex’ in the next room.

It backfired on him slightly as Max hit him for seeing his claimed mates in the heat of the moment and Caesar went whining to Myron, who cuffed him around the ear for snooping around in someone else’s home.

Harry went to explain, only to find that the more he protested that he and Draco weren’t half naked and trying to have sex, the more people actually believed that he had done it, which he thought was completely stupid, so he just huffed and went to sit next to the newly arrived Amelle, who was four months pregnant and was trying to control a fussy Eleonora.

“Hey Amelle, how are you feeling?” Harry asked softly as he sat next to her.

“Don’t you start too!” She snapped. “How do you think I feel? Why does everyone have to ask me that?”

Harry grinned. “Sorry. Have your cravings started yet? How about your bump, how incapacitated do you feel with it currently? Can you still see your toes?”

“Harry!” Caesar gasped in shock.

“Finally someone who gets it!” Amelle crowed happily as she turned her body to face him and she smiled gratefully at him. “My cravings have started. Marmite, I need marmite on everything and if this damn baby gets any bigger I’ll need a mirror to tie my shoelaces! How much room does this baby need? I’m sure I was never this big with Nora.”

“You were bigger.” Caesar informed her.

Both Harry and Amelle looked at him, both with mouths agape.
“You seriously did not just say that.” Harry told him. “Well…I suppose it was nice knowing you, but you are so dead.”

“What do you mean I was bigger?!” Amelle demanded, cutting Harry off. “Are you calling me fat? How dare you! This is all your fault, this baby is yours and if it wasn’t for you then it wouldn’t be there!”

Harry pulled her into a hug and petted her gorgeous auburn hair. “It’s alright, he doesn’t know what he’s saying, he’s a stupid man, we can’t expect him to know these things. It’s called ignorance.” Harry told her soothingly.

“You’re a man too.” Sanex told him.

“I’m a submissive, it doesn’t count.” Harry sniffed.

“Why not?” Caesar pouted.

“Because he knows what Amelle is going through because he’s gone through it himself.” Nasta told them.

“I knew I loved you for a reason.” Harry said with a grin. “See Amelle, not all men are hopeless. Nasta gets it.”

Harry took the fussing and struggling Nora from Amelle and held her in front of his face, examining her from when he’d last seen her.

“Well now, you certainly have grown since I last saw you!” He told the year old girl softly. He had very regretfully missed her birthday because it had been when he was on his heat period. “Look how gorgeous you are, Nora! Just look at this hair.” He chuckled and he twirled a long lock of the soft, dark auburn hair around his finger. “Don’t let Draco see you with this hair or he’ll continuously brush it for you. He loves hair.”

“That’s a good thing.” Amelle smiled. “She loves having her hair played with.”
Harry grinned. “Draco! You have a willing victim this time, go and get your brush.”

Draco rolled his eyes, but did as he was told, sitting Nora on the table and using his favourite brush to smooth through Eleonora’s thick, gorgeous hair, which had the effect of calming her right down and stopping her fussing.

Nora screeched happily and wriggled her little body as Draco pulled the brush through her hair that was almost to her shoulders already. He wrapped an arm around her quickly, just in case she fell from the table and carried on. Harry knew from experience that Draco could do this for an hour or more, he could almost guarantee that Nora would get sick of it before Draco did.

Harry talked to Amelle more, asking her about her little café job, which she was enjoying, though Caesar was driving her completely mad as he turned up for coffee every other hour just to check up on her throughout the day, but Amelle was just happy to actually have her small job.

He greeted more guests as they arrived, he greeted Alexander enthusiastically and Max was in his element as he cooked up a feast for them all, keeping everything under control as so many people tried to cram themselves into his kitchen, which looked tiny when it was filled with so many people, but the more people who arrived, the happier Max seemed to be, it was adorable and made Harry almost melt from seeing him act this way, from seeing him so very happy just because he had so many people to cook for.

Harry was very surprised when a sound came over the baby monitor and he realised which one it was coming from. Leolin usually never woke so early.

Harry excused himself and he went to get him quickly, seeing what he wanted, but he didn’t seem to want anything as he looked up at him through his bright, golden eyes, sniffling.

Harry picked him up when it looked like he might start to cry again and he cradled him close to his heart, shushing him gently before the tears could come.

“What’s the matter, love, are you alright?” He asked as he smoothed Leolin’s thin, black hair through his finger and thumb. “Do you want to come out with all of us and join the party too, is that what you want?”

Harry carried Leolin back down the stairs, securing the safety gates behind him as he went, and he joined everyone back in the kitchen and reclaimed his place with Amelle on one side of him and Hermione on the other as he showed Leolin off to them both. His seven month old was scowling up at the two women.

Amelle laughed lightly. “Oh look at that sweet face.”

“Does that mean he’s an Unseelie?” Hermione asked. “I read up about Faeries when you told me that Leolin was one through Nasta’s bloodline. You should have an indication by now of whether he’s a Seelie or an Unseelie.”
Harry nodded at his friend, smiling indulgently as she went into a spiel about everything she’d learnt about Unseelie Faeries, even Aneirin looked impressed.

“You know more about him than I do.” Harry told her with a laugh. “At least if I ever have any questions I’ll know where to go.”

Hermione gave him a small, embarrassed smile, but Max took all the pressure and attention away from her by serving dinner and yelling at everyone to sit down at the table, which had been magically enhanced to its limits to fit everyone in.

“I’ve been reading up on Drackens too, Harry.” Hermione said. “The book I have said that you could only be pregnant with chicks in the winter.”

Amelle turned and snarled at Hermione, but Harry touched her shoulder and murmured gently to her.

“What did I say wrong?” Hermione asked.

“You called our children chicks.” Harry said softly, trying not to let the others hear, but Amelle had attracted their attention by growling.

“The books said…”

“I know. I read a book that called Dracken young chicks too, but I found out, when I called them chicks in front of my Elder chaperone, that it’s a derogatory term that the Ministry have coined to describe a Dracken’s young to dehumanise them to the public to make it easier for them to be able to extradite Dracken carriers and execute the inherited Drackens as soon as they’re sixteen. They’re not chicks, they’re not birds and they are not born from eggs. They’re babies, Hermione and to our Drackens they’re just our young, or our offspring, we don’t call them chicks and our Drackens don’t call them chicks.”

“I didn’t know.” Hermione said, biting her lip.

“I know. I didn’t know either, as I said I read a Ministry sanctioned book when I was first inherited, it was the only information I had to go on while I was still keeping it a secret, and I honestly thought that they were called chicks, but no, it’s just another way that the Ministry is trying to turn the mass public against us as a whole species, a way to dehumanise our children so that they aren’t seen as human right from their birth.”

“That’s disgusting.” Hermione said furiously.

“It is.” Myron said calmly. “We’re trying to change such things, but there is only so much we can do without endangering our families. No one is going to listen to a Dracken preaching about Dracken rights.”

“I’ll do as much as I can.” Hermione swore seriously. “I’ve been overturning house-elf rights and campaigning for the legal discrimination against vampires and werewolves to be demolished, including the children of said creatures. I’ve got a rather large backing from both colleagues and from the public too.”

“Be careful, Granger. It’s our lives that you’re playing with, not your own.” Draco warned her.

“No, this could be a good thing.” Harry said. “Hermione is well known for fighting against such injustices, even while we were still in Hogwarts, and she’s a Muggleborn…if anyone is not going to be linked in the slightest to any Dracken blood, it’s going to be her.”

“Harry’s right, this could be just what our species needs as a whole. Someone obviously not a Dracken or related to one to stand and fight our corner.” Aneirin insisted. “If you’re serious about doing this, Hermione then we will give you all the help and support that you need. Lucius Malfoy is pushing through several protective bills himself, if you add to that to support his bills, this could actually work and the laws can finally be changed.”

Hermione started talking seriously with Myron, Aneirin and Richard about reforming the laws and what needed to be done and how much work there was to do, but Hermione being placed in the Control of Magical Creatures department was an amazing opportunity that they couldn’t miss out on. This could be just want their species needed, people to support them and back them. With Hermione and Lucius, two people who weren’t linked in the slightest to Drackens, perhaps between them they could get the public on the side of the Drackens and that disgusting ‘executed on sight’ law could be abolished and their ‘dark creature’ status could be overturned.

Dinner carried on as normal after that and Harry had just blown out the candles on his two tiered birthday cake an hour and a half later when he heard Braiden calling for him through the baby monitor. He was up and gone before anyone else could offer to go and get his first born son for him.

He went in to the nursery to find Braiden stood in his cot and bouncing in anticipation as he called out for him repeatedly.
“Hey, what’s this?” He asked. “You impatient little boy.” He cooed, picking him up and cuddling him close.

Calix and Farren were also awake and Harry scooped them both up and carried them carefully down the stairs, thankful that he’d left the gates open on his way up, anticipating coming back down. He sent Blaise to get Regan and Tegan and told him to close the gates on his way down.

The attention went from Harry to his children in seconds and he was thankful for that, he’d had more than enough attention for one day as his sons were taken from him and cooed and fussed over, but Max did serve him a huge chunk of cake with orders to tell him how much he liked it. Harry grinned and took a huge bite of the moist cake, chewing thoughtfully.

“Love it.” He declared after swallowing, kissing Max hard, his mate’s tongue sweeping into his mouth to taste the cake for himself.

Harry broke away from Max to take another big bite of cake. It was chocolate cake, he could see that well enough, but he detected a hint of fudge and he grinned at Max as he realised that it was actually a chocolate fudge cake.

“I really do love you.” Harry said as he rested against him.

Max wrapped his arms around him and bent to kiss him, making his way to his ear. “Don’t forget you have your big surprise later.”

Harry blinked as he remembered his promised surprise and he grinned excitedly.

“I can’t wait! What is it?”

“Later.” Max promised as he kissed him hard again before turning away and annoying his sister Alayla.

“Piss off, Max!” Alayla shouted loudly five minutes later as her temper won out over her patience and control.
“Alayla, watch your language, there are children in this room!” Myron chastised.

“Tell Max to leave me alone then, he’s more annoying now than he was when he still lived with us!”

Myron sighed heavily and went to split up his son and daughter, cuffing Max upside the head as he was at it.

Harry shook his head as Max turned to him, pouting and holding his arms out. He had to chuckle and he opened his arms and let Max bury himself into his chest as best as he could. It looked as ridiculous as it sounded.

“Everyone is mean to me, Harry.”

Harry laughed. “If you weren’t such an annoying twat then maybe they wouldn’t be mean to you.”

Harry suddenly found himself off his feet and in the air as Max carried him around and held him happily, nibbling at his neck.

“Mama!” Braiden called out startled and Harry looked down at him to see him frowning up at him as if wondering how he’d suddenly gotten so tall.

Harry bent to pick him up from Blaise and Max settled them both up in his arms and Harry clutched at Braiden tightly as he wriggled and stood up to look over his shoulder, giggling at how high he was.

“My fearless little boy.” Harry kissed him.

“Did you find out if you’re carrying?” Alexander asked him.

“Not yet. I’m holding it off as long as possible so that I can enjoy an extra week or two of freedom.”

Harry shared a laugh with some of his guests, but others, including his mates, were not impressed.
“It would be better if we found out sooner rather than later.” Nasta tried to soothe.

Harry rolled his eyes. “What do you think I’m going to do, go skydiving?” He asked. “I won’t do anything more or less than I already do, pregnant or not. At least if you lot don’t know then you can’t treat me like I’m made of glass.”

“Isn’t the point of being mated to a dominant, or four dominants in this case, being treated like glass? Shouldn’t you be enjoying it?” Julinda asked curiously.

Both Harry and Amelle scoffed, looked at one another and then laughed. Harry shook his head. “No, Juda. The very last thing that we want is to be treated like glass, pregnant or not. We can look after ourselves and we want to.”

“Exactly.” Amelle nodded. “I only know a handful of submissives that actually enjoy being treated in such a way and I always thought they were weird.”

Harry snorted and grinned at her. “I don’t mind being pampered occasionally, or getting a bit of bonding time and I’m getting better at letting these lugs carry me, but I’m not some pathetic, weak person who needs a big strong man around just to function normally. I don’t need protection, I don’t want to be coddled and I absolutely do not want to be escorted around everywhere like a dainty woman from the nineteen hundreds.”

“We can’t help ourselves sometimes.” Max assured him. “If we know you’re pregnant, or even suspect it, the urge to protect you is nearly overwhelming.”

“Which is why I don’t want it confirmed until the very last moment possible.” Harry smiled as he cuddled into Max’s body. “I don’t want to be overwhelmed or coddled. I’m not used to it and it makes me uncomfortable.”

“We can’t be having that.” Alexander said as he pulled Harry into his own arms, taking Braiden with them. “You boys can’t be letting your instincts rule you.”

“It’s hard, Granddad.” Max said with a sigh.

“You don’t think I know that?” Alexander snorted. “I’m not some feeble old man, I’m a dominant Dracken too; I had my own mate and children. How terrified do you think I was when your Grandmother had quadruplets after a string of six singleton births? How about when we had the quintuplets? How much do you think I wanted to smother my mate and never let her out of my sight?"

“I could see the physical strain on your body and in your eyes as you stopped yourself.” Kimberly smiled at her Husband softly. “But I will be forever thankful that you let me deal with it the way that I wanted to, in the way that I felt I needed to, to get through those high multiple pregnancies.”

Alexander shared a soft look with his Wife and mate and kissed her gently.

“How hard do you think it’s been on Harry to actually go against his instincts so much? You idiots can’t even suppress a mere overprotective instinct, yet every single day this amazing young man not only suppresses his instincts, but he goes against them using logic and his heart. If he can do that, why can’t you? If I could do it decades ago, why can’t you youngsters do it now, when you’re two generations younger than I was when I managed it? You’re supposed to be evolving into smart, intelligent humanoid dragons, not devolving back into mindless beasts who only run on their base instincts.”

Harry glanced at his mates and saw their unhappy looks and he sighed. “It isn’t easy.” He admitted as he wiggled to be put down. “It’s a continuous struggle between my head, my heart and my instincts. I have to fight one of them every day, with almost every decision that I make and sometimes the instincts just take over, but I see how proud you all are of me when I decide to ignore my more irrational instincts, I see how happy it makes you, so it makes it easier to do, but I face that fight, that struggle every single day, yet I do it to make you all happy, why can’t you do the same?”

“We’ll try.” Nasta nodded. “But the safety of you and the children come first.”

Harry nodded. “Trust me, if we were attacked or under threat, my instincts would take over too. I almost lost it this morning and I only managed to hold on by a thread.”

“Let’s stop this talk now and get back to your birthday.” Aneirin encouraged. “I don’t like that this heavy talk has taken over what is supposed to be a celebration.”

“I quite agree.” Mrs Weasley nodded. “Harry dear, if you are pregnant we can cross that bridge when we get to it, for now, concentrate on yourself and the fact that you have turned eighteen today, not if you might or might not be pregnant.”
Harry nodded and he smiled at the wonderful people that he had around him. He knew sometimes he was difficult to deal with, he had a temper and he had his own thoughts and ideas that maybe others didn’t like or agree with, but they were his thoughts and feelings and he’d like for others to respect them as he respected their thoughts and feelings too, even if he might not like them.

It was eight at night when the last of his guests left, his children had been bedded down for an hour already and Caesar had taken Amelle and Eleonora home a few hours before when Amelle started to get tired and Eleonora was starting to flag from all the excitement and people fussing around her.

Harry collapsed onto the settee and accepted a cup of tea from Max gratefully as Nasta moved around them picking up debris and cleaning up. There wasn’t much to do as everyone had been considerate of them and they had cleaned up after themselves for the most part. It was mainly forgotten cups and glasses and a few plates of half-eaten cake that had been put down and forgotten about.

“I’m bloody knackered.” Harry groaned.

“You can’t be that tired!” Draco insisted.

“I didn’t sleep very much or for very long.” Harry sighed. “I don’t want to be tired, but I am.”

“How about if you stay awake for another hour or two, I’ll give you a dose of Dreamless sleep.” Max offered.

Harry perked up and grinned. “That would work, why can’t I have it now though?”

“You’ll be awake at four in the morning again if you take it now. So if you wait until ten, then you can take it to get yourself back into a regular sleep pattern.” Max told him with a strict, no nonsense tone that only came out when it came to dealing with doling out his pre-dosed potions.

Harry nodded at that logic and settled back once again, cuddling into Draco who wrapped a muscular arm around him and held him close.

Feeling safe, happy and very content, Harry let himself snuggle into Draco’s chest and kissed his chin, peppering lingering kisses along his cheeks and his lips.
“Are you ready for your surprise?” Max asked him, his voice deepening.

Harry blinked and stopped kissing Draco’s face to look at him.

“You mean there’s more? You already gave me presents, I’ve had too much as it is.”

“I don’t think you have.” Max told him firmly. “None of us do, so you get a big surprise from all of us because you deserve so much and more.”

“Will I like it?” Harry asked curiously.

“I damn well hope so.” Max grinned and Harry grinned back. Max’s happiness really was the infectious type of happiness; Harry was almost certain that not even a Dementor could rip Max’s happiness from him.

“Well, where is my surprise? I want it.” Harry said.

Draco chuckled and carried him up to their bedroom. Harry was dumped on the bed and told to stay where he was as his mates all walked into the bathroom.

Harry frowned and stared at the closed door, wondering what the hell they were doing. He swung his legs over the bed and went to check on Leolin and made sure that he was alright and sleeping peacefully. He tucked the blanket around him, made sure that his little feet were to the bottom of the bassinet so that he couldn’t be suffocated by his own blanket and then he made sure that there was a silencing bubble around his bassinet. He didn’t want Leolin hearing them, if he was getting what he suspected at least, but he wanted to know immediately if his little Faerie baby woke up.

He climbed back onto the bed and he lay back sighing, looking at the clock on the bedside table before looking back at the ceiling. What the hell was taking them so long and what the hell were they doing?

His thoughts run around his mind at a mile a minute as he tried to guess what they were doing. Several thoughts floated through his head, ranging from sex, sex, more sex and then his mates ambush into the bath, but that one made him laugh to himself, so he went back to sex. He did wonder why they had to go into the bathroom though, why couldn’t they have stripped in front of him? They’d done it half a hundred times before, why was tonight different?

“Harry?”
Harry propped himself up on his elbows and his jaw dropped and his mind went completely blank. His eyes traced every detail of what was in front of him and he hardened instantly, completely out of his control.

All four of them stood there with their heads bowed, collars around their necks and wrists, wearing robes made from such a sheer material that he could see that they were wearing nothing underneath them and that they themselves were hard.

He swallowed several times, trying to wet his bone dry throat.

“What…what’s this?” He asked, or more stuttered really as he tried to wrap his head around what was happening.

“We’re your new slaves, Master.” Max answered demurely, his head still bent to the carpet.

Harry almost bit off his tongue and a full body shiver raced through his spine, one he couldn’t have suppressed even if he’d wanted to.

“Do we not meet your high expectations, Master?” Blaise asked.

Harry giggled nervously and he tried to sort himself out. “This is insane.”

“Should we leave you be, Master?” Nasta asked him and Harry understood immediately that if he told them to leave, even if it was just to sort out his own nervous tension, then this would be over and they wouldn’t try it again. He absolutely did not want that to happen.

“No, I want you to stay here with me.” Harry told them, trying to get himself into the fantasy that they had obviously been planning for him, trying to get into a ‘master’ mind set. He didn’t want to spoil this for them, or discourage their efforts, but he still wanted to break down into helpless giggles, he couldn’t believe that they’d set this up just for him.

He took a deep breath and wondered just how far they’d let him go, how much control they’d give him, they were his dominant mates after all, they were in their human forms at the moment, but their Drackens were never far from the surface.

Was this a new level of trust that they were giving him? Especially after that talk downstairs that afternoon about them pushing away their needless instincts more. But no, they would have had to have planned this for longer than a few hours, they had obviously talked about this at length and they had to have been planning it for a while, well before the talk that afternoon, because they were all in those sheer robes that he’d never seen before and he knew, without a doubt, that they hadn’t owned them before now. His mind conjured up the morning, at least a week and a half ago now, when Max had received a parcel at breakfast that he had hurried away and hidden and Harry remembered vividly that Max had almost swallowed his own tongue when Harry had asked what it was. He was obviously looking at the contents of that parcel on his mates’ bodies.

He stood up, locking his knees to keep them steady. He had an uncontrollable urge to touch the floaty, sheer robes that they were wearing and he reached out to run it through his fingers. It was soft and comfortable, he had expected something coarse like lace, but it wasn’t, it was so very soft.

This close he could see that Draco was wearing a cock ring that matched the collar around his neck and the bracelets at his wrists and he quickly checked his other mates, to see them wearing cock rings too. He swallowed and he almost shook from the quivers that wracked him, he felt lightheaded, almost like he wanted to swoon like one of the damsels in an old romance novel.

He giggled again and he breathed deeply again to try to calm himself. If this is how his mates felt when he dressed up in a skirt for them then he felt their pain. He was rock hard, throbbing and leaking and his balls were aching already.

“What do I do with you four?” Harry asked almost breathlessly as he walked around to stand behind them, smiling at the sight of their gorgeous bums through the teasing material.

“Whatever you want to do with us, Master.” Draco told him carefully, no hint of his usual superiority in his voice. He actually sounded demure and bland, like Harry truly was his Master.

Harry trailed his hand over his back and down to his bum, leaning forward to kiss his shoulder through the soft, sheer mesh robe, rewarding him for trying.

They had taken a huge leap of faith here, put themselves in such a vulnerable position and Harry would not abuse that. He settled himself and swallowed another nervous giggle. He wasn’t used to taking charge in the bedroom, not outside of his heats and even then all he did was whine until his mates took notice of him, or when he was drunk, of which he barely remembered much other than throwing himself at his lovers. Even when he topped them during sex, it was never really him in charge, it was them who pushed back onto him, them who told him what to do, this was something entirely different.

This was out of his comfort zone too, but these four men were his. He loved and trusted them and they loved and trusted him too, he could do this, he would do this. They were his mates and for the next hour or so, they were his play slaves and he wouldn’t embarrass them or make them regret the decision to give him this gift and their trust.

“You, on the bed.” Harry ordered with a thick tongue, giving Draco a gentle little shove, watching with a dry mouth as Draco moved slowly and crawled onto the bed, giving him a show and his breath caught in his chest at the sight.
“Where do you want me, Master?” Draco asked with his head still bent subserviently.

Harry was nearly panting as he moved to position Draco exactly how he wanted him on the bed, his sheer robe falling open to frame his body as it had no ties on it to hold it closed.

“You look gorgeous like this.” Harry complimented.

“Thank you for saying so, Master.”

Harry shivered as his cock twitched yet again at that title, he was already leaking against his belly. He licked his lips and bent to kiss at Draco’s cobblestone abs, they were softer than they once were, Draco not having done his usual exercising with so much going on, but he wanted to get back into it now that they were all out of school. He said it wasn’t anything time consuming, just fifteen minutes, maybe half an hour at the most of simple stomach crunches and maybe push ups. Apparently wizards didn’t have magical means of staying fit that were as permanent as actually doing the exercise, so the young, admittedly vain, witches and wizards did it the good, old physical way to keep fit and Harry was more than appreciative of Draco’s efforts to keep himself healthy and in top shape.

Harry licked and kissed his pale skin, sucking at his belly button and he felt the effort Draco made not to break character, not to make a noise that would displease his ‘Master’ and Harry raised himself up to smile at him, letting his love show through.

He stood up again and turned to the other three, who hadn’t moved but definitely looked more unsettled and wobbly than they had before. This was driving them insane as well as him. He smiled at them.

“I’m very pleased with you all.” He said softly, his voice slightly gruff from arousal.

“We’re very happy to have pleased you, Master.” Blaise told him.

Harry went onto his toes to kiss Blaise. “Climb onto the bed for me.”

Blaise did as he was asked and climbed on, sitting away from Draco and waiting for Harry to position him.

Harry laid them next to one another, Blaise’s robe slipping open to show off his gorgeous body as well. Harry paid him the same amount of attention as he’d given to Draco, licking and kissing his skin. He was so hard that he pressed against his own belly and he shuddered as he reached down under his trousers to tug at himself sharply, trying to ease the pressure, just a little.
“You four are going to kill me.” He groaned.

“Never, Master. We love our Master. We would never harm you.” Max assured him passionately.

Harry smiled at him. “Then you better get over here and help me.”

“Yes, Master.” Max agreed fluidly as he came to stand in front of him.

Harry was frustrated as hell, he didn’t want to order them to do anything, things they might not want to do or might not have otherwise done, but they seemed to expect him to order them to do everything and anything.

“Kiss me.” He gave in and Max immediately pulled him into his arms and kissed him passionately. At least he didn’t have to order the passion into their kisses or order them to hold him while they kissed. That would have been too much for him.

Harry stumbled away when Max let him go and he sat on the bed between Draco and Blaise, who had both sat up and started caressing his shoulders on either side.

“Let us make you feel good, Master.” Blaise whispered into his ear.

“We can make you feel everything, Master.” Draco agreed.

Leolin however had different ideas as he started sniffing and then wailing. Harry sighed and stood up; he mock glared as Nasta had moved to go to Leolin.

“Did I say that you could move?” He queried, showing that he was still going to keep to this fantasy, even if they had a little distraction in the form of Leolin wanting a feed.

“I…sorry, Master.” Nasta said as he stood still and spread his legs, holding his arms behind his back and he dropped his chin to his chest.
Harry went to Leolin and picked him up, cradling his littlest boy to his chest gently.

“This little one is my son. You do not touch my son without permission. Now, none of you move while I see to him and my other children. It won’t take longer than ten minutes. I’m sure you can behave and stay still for that amount of time, can’t you?”

Harry got four ‘yes Master’s’ from his ‘play slaves’ before he left the room to feed Leolin. The others wouldn’t need feeding for a while and he would be free to play with his mates and the fantasy they had set up for him on his birthday just as soon as he settled Leolin back down to sleep.

Harry took the downtime to get himself into the zone that he needed, the head space he needed to slip into this fantasy, he wanted to do this, he wanted this gift that they’d given him and had planned to give him for a while, something that they had planned meticulously. It was only fair that he did his best too. He just needed to calm down a little, get over the shock and the surprise of seeing them in such a way and squash the nervous giggles that wanted to come out at inappropriate times. He could do this, he would and he’d damn well enjoy it too.

He fed Leolin and encouraged and coaxed him to drink as much as he could before burping him and snuggling with him gently and humming softly until those half open golden eyes closed and stayed closed, his little chest raising and falling rhythmically in sleep.

Harry carried him back up the stairs and took Leolin into the nursery to check on the five sleepers inside, all in separate cots, all in various positions and all fast asleep and peaceful. He checked the baby monitor to make sure that it was still on before he went next door to find his ‘play slaves’ were all still exactly where he’d left them. It sent a thrill of excited pleasure through his spine and down into his gut. It pleased him more than he would have expected to see them as still as statues, still exactly where they’d been when he’d left the room.

“Is your son alright and well fed, Master?” Draco asked.

Harry nodded. “An extra eighth of an ounce of milk tonight. I’m very proud of him.”

“We’re happy that you’re proud of him, Master.” Nasta smiled softly, his own pride glittering in his hazel eyes as he watched Harry tucking Leolin in gently. They looked darker in the low lighting.

“I’m very proud of the man who gave him to me too.” Harry said smiling. “Now come here, I want to play.”

“I am yours to play with, Master.” Nasta assured him softly, ducking his head with a playful part smile, part smirk on those kissable lips.
“I’m going to play with all of you tonight.” Harry promised with a naughty grin. “Kiss me.”

Nasta snatched him up and kissed him hard and deep, pulling his body in tight to his own barely covered skin. Harry let out a soft, uncontrollable moan that was muffled by Nasta’s mouth.

He felt breathless and a little dizzy when Nasta set him back onto his feet and he sucked in deep, rapid breaths and tried to calm himself, but he was hard and solid in his trousers, verging on being uncomfortable and almost painful.

“What would you have of us, Master?” Blaise almost purred in his ear.

Harry swallowed and tried to keep track of where all four of them were and what they were saying, but as soon as they said ‘Master’ he couldn’t remember anything that came before it, he just felt a huge jolt of absolute desire and all he could think about was his cock.

He played with the collar around Draco’s neck; it was simple in design, lightweight and looked like it had been put on with a charm as it was seamless. The matching cuffs around his wrists were the same and Harry kissed the thin, pale skin of Draco’s wrist.

“You don’t know how turned on I am at seeing these on your body.” Harry whispered.

“Anything to please you, Master.” Draco whispered softly.

“You all please me.” Harry said, trying to keep in his Master persona, but he couldn’t help adding. “You didn’t have to do this to please me.”

“We wanted to.” Max whispered behind him, bending his head to his hair. “We just want to please our beautiful, wonder Master.”

“You do.” Harry said strongly, slipping back into the fantasy. “Now make yourselves useful and strip me.”

Four pairs of hands immediately set to taking off the clothes that he was wearing and then touching and caressing bare skin. Harry gasped as his cock was taken in a tight grip and squeezed. He shuddered as he was stroked in that firm grip and he could feel his orgasm being pumped out of him, getting closer and closer and he wriggled to try and get away, only for a solid chest to press against his back, one large arm wrapping around his chest, the other around his hips to keep him still and upright, even as he quivered and writhed as he was played with and teased.

He tried to get them off, tried to tell them that he didn’t want to cum so soon into the game, but every time he opened his mouth, a tongue was pushed past his lips and stopped him from doing anything other than moaning, not that he could think straight under the onslaught of sensations that his mates turned play slaves were giving to him.

His head connected with a shoulder with a loud crack of bone on bone as he threw his head back in orgasm, his body jumping as every last drop of cum was urged and coaxed out of his body as he was held upright and he screamed himself hoarse. Someone placed their hand on the back of his head and rubbed it gently, that someone also bent down to sniff at the back of his head, checking for any damage. He must have been declared fine as he was kissed again, hard.

“What would you have of us now, Master?” Draco asked him from behind. It had been Draco who was holding him still and upright and Harry wanted to glare at him for it, but he was too relaxed, too sated to even think of moving.

“Please. Please.” He begged.

“What does our Master want from his four slaves?” Max asked him. Harry shivered as he heard how very deep Max’s voice had gone. How gruff it was with his arousal. He loved when Max’s voice deepened with arousal; it made his already spent cock twitch in interest.

“I want…I want.” Harry licked his lips as he rested himself back on Draco’s body.

“Tell us, Master. We love you so much. We just want to please you, we’re obedient and trained, Master, we’ll do anything and everything that you tell us to do, Master.” Nasta told him in a soft, breathy voice.

“Oh fuck!” Harry screwed his eyes closed and tried to catch his breath that he had lost at hearing those words. “Please. Fuck me! Fuck me!” He begged them.

“As our Master commands.” Blaise said with a meek smile that didn’t fit him at all, but he swooped in and stole his mouth in a fierce kiss, stealing the very air from his lungs.

He was moved to the bed, still kissing Blaise, and before he’d even settled onto his hands and knees a tongue licked across the back of his leg and had him whimpering and as that tongue moved up and to his entrance, Harry ripped his mouth from Blaise’s and screamed as his body was seized by such exquisite pleasure. He loved it when his mates did this for him, the sensation of it was like nothing else he’d ever felt and he loved that they loved him enough to do this for him.

He was a quivering wreck when Max took a break to bite at his bum cheek. He knew it was Max because he stopped every now and then to say the most absolutely perfect, utterly filthy things to him, still calling him Master and Harry felt like he could cum just from this, just from being on his knees, Max’s tongue in his arse, listening to the dirty things that Max was whispering against his body, calling him Master, with his leaking cock head rubbing against his own belly.

Max went back to licking him, pressing his tongue into him and Harry’s body jumped and he screamed yet again at the sensation of it, fisting the sheets in both hands and arching his back, pushing himself back onto Max as he felt like sobbing with the exquisite sensations.

Hands were touching him, stroking his back; one hand moved to wrap tightly around his cock, moving slowly, but firmly enough that he could feel his toes curling in anticipation of an orgasm.

He actually did let out a small sob as he felt his stomach muscles tighten, he dropped his head down and he wiggled on his knees.

“I can’t…I can’t take anymore, please! Please!”

“All you had to do was beg, Master.” Max’s arousal gruff voice came from behind and he started opening him up with his tongue in earnest as that hand on his cock, which he thought might have been Nasta’s though his brain was too scrambled to tell, started moving faster and he couldn’t hold back, he didn’t want to as he screamed himself raw as he orgasmed yet again.

“Are you alright, Master?” Blaise asked him, laying down on the bed too so that they could look at one another.

“Amazing.” Harry said with a goofy grin.

“It can get better if you wish, Master.”

Harry regained his breath and chuckled roughly. “I thought I had already asked my play slaves to fuck me.”

All four of them gasped. “We are so sorry, Master, we are terrible slaves to you, we promise to do better, we love our Master, we only want to please our Master.” Nasta grovelled and Harry chuckled sleepily.
“If you get to it now then all will be forgiven.” He said with a grin, inching forward to kiss Blaise.

“Of course, Master.” Draco practically sighed out and he started kissing Harry’s back as Max pressed lubricated fingers into him.

Harry hadn’t been expecting that, he’d hoped for a cock, not more teasing and as those fingers started stroking his insides and found the small bundle of nerves that made him shake and quiver, he cried out for them, begging for them to fill him, babbling his need and his wants to them as he tried anything and everything to get them to fuck him faster.

When Max’s fingers pulled out and something a lot thicker and harder pressed in, Harry all but sighed in utter bliss as he finally got what he wanted.

“Are you alright, Master?” Draco asked him, one large hand rubbing soothingly over his lower back as Max gripped both of his hips tightly with strong hands.

He nodded jerkily, about all his scattered brain could manage at the moment as he was split open, Max rocking into him gently to loosen him up even more, but he didn’t pull out, he barely moved, just rocked deep inside of him and it drove Harry crazy with want and desire. He could feel Max’s cock ring press against him. He’d had more than enough of this torturous, seemingly endless teasing.

“Damn it, fuck me or I’ll replace you!” Harry yelled out.

Max held still and he sniffled like he was crying, but Harry could tell immediately that it was fake. Max didn’t sniffle when he was crying, he sobbed into both of his hands, his face hidden from everyone who might see.

“Please, Master, no. Don’t get rid of me. I’ll be good. I will!” Max assured him, proving Harry right and he smiled right before it was wiped from his face as with one powerful move, Max pulled out of him and then in the same moment pushed back in deep, stimulating nerves that had been teased to sensitivity and pulling a choked off yelp from Harry.

Max stilled again. “Are you alright, Harry?” He asked panicked and Harry knew right then that Max had thought that he had hurt him.

“I don’t believe that I ever gave you leave to use my name, slave.” Harry answered cheekily. “Nor did I tell you to stop.”
Max moved a little hesitantly after that, acutely aware of how big he was and how small Harry was, but, reassured by Harry’s moaning and little movements back onto him that Harry was perfectly fine, he started moving harder and deeper once again.

Harry’s head snapped to the side and he looked down at the headless body of Nasta, who had slipped under him to take his hard, leaking cock into his mouth. Harry panted harder, seeing Nasta’s strong body framed by the soft, floaty and transparent robe was doing something for him.

Blaise caught his attention again by pulling his head around and into a kiss and assaulted by all four of them at the same time, Harry was unable to hold himself back and he screamed loudly into Blaise’s mouth, arching against Draco’s hands on his back, clenching tight around Max and cumming hard into Nasta’s mouth, who sucked him lightly and gently to clean him up before pulling away carefully.

“Please, Master! Please, permission to remove the cock ring?” Max begged.

“Yes, yes!” Harry shouted as Max moving prolonged his own orgasm until his eyes felt like rolling into his head.

Max screamed behind him as Harry assumed the cock ring had been removed for him and Harry curled up and rested, feeling cum sliding out of his body and over his one thigh, he didn’t care, at least he didn’t until a tongue licked up the line of cum sliding from his body. He jumped and turned onto his back, to see Nasta smirking down at him, the tip of his tongue still poking out like a cat. Even as Harry watched him, he bent his head back down and licked at him again.

“Please. Too much.” Harry said even as he wriggled on the bed. Part of him wanted Nasta to stop, part of him wanted him to carry on.

Nasta held his legs open and licked at him again and Harry arched up, only to have Blaise slip under him and rest his head in his naked lap, that floaty robe teasing him where it touched.

Nasta tongued around his balls and Harry almost sobbed, twisting his head in Blaise’s lap, feeling him hard and wet against the top of his head. He arched his neck and looked at that cock, curved against Blaise’s belly and leaking. He moaned and squirmed again as Nasta dug his tongue inside him, cleaning him of Max’s cum and Harry couldn’t take the sensations.

“Stop! Please, just fuck me, no more teasing. Too much.” He babbled.

“As my Master wishes.” Nasta told him, pulling back and licking his lips. That one word made his tired cock twitch yet again and Harry wanted to punch himself between the legs; surely he couldn’t get himself hard again? He couldn’t take another orgasm, he was too sensitive, the ache in his balls was almost painful.

Nasta slid into him and Harry shook from the sensation of it. He didn’t get hard, but he still enjoyed it.

“I don’t think I can go again; go for your own orgasm.” He said. “It still feels amazing.” He added when Nasta looked at him with a look that said that he was ready to stop at any moment. “I think it’s too close to my last heat and that drained me of all my sperm, they haven’t had a chance to recover their numbers yet.”

Max laughed loudly and bent to kiss him as his play slaves shared a chuckle. Nasta started to move and Harry gave a small moan, grabbing the nearest thing to him, which was the thin robe that Max was wearing and tugging on it.

He shook Max as much as he could and Max chuckled at him, getting that look on his face that said he thought someone was doing something adorable, he usually saved that look for the babies.

“Don’t you laugh at your Master!” Harry shouted as the pleasure escalated.

“Forgive me, Master. This lowly slave will shut his mouth.”

“Good or I’ll have to have one of the other slaves plug it up for you.”

Max actually moaned and Harry grinned. “Why don’t you suck on Blaise for me?”

Max dove on Blaise and pinned him down, swallowing his cock down and Harry felt his own cock twitch and he couldn’t stop the moan that tore from his throat as Draco started sucking on his belly, avoiding his over stimulated cock.

Nasta started rolling his hips and Harry started sobbing again as the exquisite pleasure pain took over his brain and he started hardening. He thrashed his head from side to side and he could almost feel how sore this next orgasm was going to make him.

Nasta’s finesse slipped and he started pushing into him harder and Harry dug his fingers into Draco’s baby fine blond hair, his mate thrusting against his hip.

Harry bent his head to see that one of Nasta’s hands was wrapped around Draco’s cock, which was missing its cock ring, jerking him off as he tried to bring them both to orgasm at the same time while...
Max swallowed hard around Blaise.

They were all so very close, he could feel his balls drawing up, he could feel the desperation coming off of Draco, he could feel Nasta moving faster, he could hear Blaise moaning and muttering in French beside him and it was all suddenly too much, he was on the brink of orgasm and then, of course, Nasta pushed him right on over by opening his mouth.

“Master, permission to cum.” He asked breathlessly, his hips still moving relentlessly, his hand tugging on Draco hard and his blond lover was very, very close if his grip on Harry’s waist was anything to go on.

“Yes! Yes, please!” Harry begged. “Please cum, I can’t anymore, I need…I need, Nasta!”

Nasta pushed up into him and Harry felt the wash of hot liquid filling him, Blaise was screaming, Max was shouting, Draco was a warm heat against his side, lying on him and Harry’s orgasm was so explosive that his eyes rolled up into his head.

Harry woke up to someone washing him with a damp cloth, he felt the strange residue from being magically cleaned, but still someone was washing him with a damp cloth as well.

He cracked his eyes open to see Draco smiling above him, damp flannel in hand as he washed Harry’s body. He was wearing pyjama bottoms and not his floaty robe, Harry wondered which one he liked the most, Draco in just pyjama bottoms, his view unobstructed from that glorious chest and cobblestone abs by any material or the teasing, tantalising sight of glimpsing skin and the hint of muscles beneath the transparent robe.

Something in his mind clicked and he sat up, or he tried to as he fell back holding his lower abdomen with a groan, the pain in his lower back making itself known.

“Leolin!” He called out. “We can’t use magic around Leolin!”

“We didn’t.” Max assured him from somewhere near the foot of the bed. “He wanted another bottle, so Nasta took him to feed and change him; we cleaned everything up when he was out of the room.”

Harry relaxed then and he wondered why he had thought that his mates wouldn’t have already made sure that Leolin was well out of the room before using magic. Then he decided that his brain wasn’t really in the best of places after his birthday surprise, fantasy, whatever it had been and he just rested back on the pillows and let Draco pamper him, one large hand massaging his lower belly to ease what was most definitely pulled muscles.

“Where’s Blaise?” He croaked out.
“Changing Calix and seeing if any of the other kids need anything.” Max answered as he clambered into the bed wearing sleep shorts and a wide grin.

“Am I clean?” He asked Draco.

“As clean as I can get you outside of a bath, yes.” Draco replied as he stood to take the damp cloth back to the bathroom.

Harry rolled over and snuggled into Max’s chest.

“Did you have a good birthday, Master?”

Harry groaned. “Stop that, I’m too tired to get hard, but yes I did. I loved my big surprise. Thank you.”

“You’re very welcome. We remembered that you said that you had a slave fantasy.”

“It was a joke.” Harry groaned.

“You enjoyed it though, didn’t you?”

“I can’t exactly lie now and say no, can I?”

“Not really.” Nasta chuckled as he came in with Leolin.

Harry forced himself to sit up and held his arms out when Leolin turned to look at him through gold eyes.

“Hey baby, why are you still awake? Why don’t you go to sleep?” Harry cooed tiredly to Leolin.
His mates all clambered into the bed around him, watching as he rocked and hummed and bounced Leolin to try and get him to sleep, but his little boy refused.

The main lights were switched off, leaving just the lamp on the bedside table switched on so that they could see and tend to Leolin.

“Of all nights to fight sleep, Leolin, you choose the one night where I’m so tired I can’t think properly.”

“Do you want me to take over?” Nasta asked, sitting up and moving over as much as he could with Draco between them.

“No, I’ve got him. I won’t sleep and leave you to deal with him alone.” Harry said, speaking louder in his last sentence.

Blaise groaned and rolled over, covering his head with his arm. Max did nothing as he was deeply asleep already and Draco just sighed.

Harry huffed and rocked Leolin, wondering why his Faerie baby wasn’t sleeping, but his brain was too tired and too fucked out to think on it.

“Please baby, go to sleep. You like sleep and though I love this new development in you, maybe you could sleep now and try it again tomorrow when Mummy and your Daddies are actually awake and have enough brains left in their heads to function, yes? Is that a deal?”

Leolin did nothing, just blinked up at him and then he smiled at him and Harry smiled back wider.

“I saw that smile.” Nasta told him. Harry looked at him and they shared a proud grin together.

“These bastards should have been awake to see it too!” Harry scowled.

Leolin copied him and his little mouth pulled into his familiar frown. Harry laughed and cradled him gently.

“Who’s my favourite little Faerie baby?” Harry cooed. “You’re so adorable!”
“Stop talkin’, go sleep.” Draco complained from between them.

“Oh I’m sorry, is being awake with our son bothering you and disturbing your sleep?” Harry demanded. “Maybe you should damn well wake up and sit with Nasta and me as we try to get him to sleep.”

Nasta plucked Leolin from his arms and sniffed at him, his tongue flicking out to lick over Leolin’s forehead. He shook his head.

“No fever, no sickness. He just wants to be awake with us.”

Harry yawned tiredly, almost unhinging his jaw and Leolin copied him a moment later, tiny mouth puckering in a wide yawn. Harry cooed some more and nuzzled with Leolin.

“I’m not sure, love, but I actually think that he’s copying you. That wasn’t a real yawn.” Nasta said with a small frown. “You smiled, he smiled, you frowned, he frowned, you yawned and so did he.”

“Coincidence maybe.” Harry said, his own frown coming to his lips and he watched as Leolin’s blank face slipped into a frown.

“He is copying you.” Nasta laughed.

“I still think it’s coincidence.”

“Close your eyes and pretend to sleep.” Nasta encouraged.

Harry did as he was told, he was almost actually asleep after ten minutes of pretending, but Nasta’s soft laugh had him blinking open his eyes, to see that Leolin was fast asleep and breathing deeply and evenly.

“He was copying you.” Nasta grinned as he slid out of the bed and placed Leolin gently, oh so very gently, into his bassinet and covered him over, laying a huge hand over his little son’s chest and smiling softly. He bent to kiss Leolin’s little face before he slid back into the bed and turned on his side and cupped Harry’s face over Draco’s broad shoulder.

“That was new, I wonder if he’ll do…do it…tomorrow.” Harry said around a huge yawn that made his eyes water.

Nasta nodded and lay down. “We’ll see tomorrow, but for now, let’s just get some sleep, Cariad. We need the sleep now.”

Harry didn’t reply. He just snuggled in tighter to Draco and heard Max groan in his sleep as he shifted tighter to his back. He settled himself down and stopped himself thinking too much, he’d think about Leolin’s development and his want to copy everything that he did tomorrow, for now, he ached pleasantly in all the right places and he wanted some sleep before he had to wake up again tomorrow morning. He’d had a fucking brilliant birthday, his surprise was even better and he was very, very happy. He couldn’t have asked for any more than he’d gotten and he was thankful every single day that he had these four amazing men with him to share in everything his life held. He loved them so much and he would be sure to tell them that tomorrow, after some decent sleep that was. He didn’t even care that Max had forgotten his Dreamless Sleep potion, because after that, he was sure that his sleep would be too deep to dream of anything at all.

Chapter End Notes

A/N: I love this chapter, or rather the last scene. The slave fantasy thing is from a few chapters ago where Harry and the guys were just joking around, but the idea stuck with me and I couldn’t get it off of my mind…so as any good author would do, I wrote it in. I hope you lovelies enjoyed it and the slight development of Leolin. He’s getting bigger and older now and his brain is kick starting a little, but more about that in the next chapter, but first thing’s first. What did you think of this chapter and all it contained? Let me know lovelies, I appreciate it more than you could ever know!

I’ll see you all soon with the next chapter, I hope you enjoyed this newest one, let me know if you did, please point out any mistakes you’ve found, I am human behind this laptop screen and mistakes are unavoidable and until next time, take care and carry on,

Chapter Eighty-Two – Birthday Baby

The thirteenth of August saw Harry rushing around like a blue arsed fly. It was his baby Braiden’s first birthday tomorrow and he was getting everything ready for his big day.

He had told Nasta to check the little party foods that he and Max had brought from the supermarket to make sure that there were no nasties in them, Max was scouring the kitchen, including the floor, and Harry had put Blaise and Draco on watching the babies while he was cleaning every single room in the house, his wand blurring with how quickly that he was casting cleaning spells.

He just wanted everything to be perfect and of course being a month pregnant really didn’t help. His mates had freaked when he’d told them. Of course he’d known first, usually after his heat period he’d have a down time of eating exactly what he wanted with absolutely no problems, though he’d mostly eat meat, especially after his week and a half of a liquid diet of mainly blood, and his mates always presented him with freshly killed prey that he gulped down without hardly chewing it once he woke up off his heat, but even though he always ate what Max made for him and everything that he was encouraged to eat, even the lamb casserole, he only wanted light foods, like soups and fruits. That was the first clue that he had that he might actually be pregnant.

He’d finally had enough of wondering about it though and he’d wanted it officially confirmed, so he’d packed up Calix and Tegan, told his mates that he was going to visit Mrs Weasley for a bit and from there he’d begged her to watch the two babies while he went to Saint Mungos for a pregnancy test. She had been absolutely delighted to watch them for him and Harry was only gone for a mere half an hour.

He didn’t usually like getting things through the fanfare surrounding his name, but he was glad of it this time as it got him in to see a Healer quicker than he normally would have and he didn’t much like the idea of spending all day sat in the hospital.

“Are you?” Mrs Weasley asked him as soon as he flooed back to the Burrow. She had a knowing smile on her face, as if she already knew without him having to say anything.

Harry nodded, his suspicions confirmed. “Three weeks pregnant.” He shook his head. “I really wish there was a contraceptive for Drackens.”

“If ever you need a break, dear, you know where I am.”

“I have six babies Mrs…Molly.” He said with a grin as she went to glare at him. “I’ll have more soon. What if I have another set of quintuplets?”

“Then you have another set of quintuplets.” She’d told him firmly. “You’ll love them just as much as your previous six, I have no doubt of that and you have family who love you, dear. We’d do anything for you, just call us when you need us, even if it’s to give three babies to me and Arthur and three to someone else. We’ll look after you.”

Harry had smiled at that and he had hugged her tightly, scooping up Calix and Tegan and saying his goodbyes.

“Oh, before I forget, next week is Braiden’s first birthday. The fourteenth and we’re holding a party at our house. It goes without saying that you’re invited. It’s just going to be a few hours for the kids, I doubt they’ll be up to much, but still. My first baby’s first birthday.”

“Of course I’ll be there; I wouldn’t miss it for the world.”

Harry had grinned then and had flooed home to feed Calix and Tegan their lunch and then settle them down for their nap. Braiden was already upstairs sleeping and Leolin was in and out of sleep. Harry was very excited because he seemed to be sleeping less and less each day, but he still spent the majority of his time sleeping.
His original plan had been to find out if he was pregnant or not and keep it to himself, but he found that he couldn't. He had a fiercely burning desire to share his news with his mates and as soon as all the babies were tucked up for their naps, he got a cup of honey tea and got his mates to sit with him.

“What’s this about?” Draco asked carefully. “Did Wea… Ron say something that you didn’t like? Was it about the kids?”

Harry shook his head quickly. “No, nothing like that.” He explained. “Ron wasn’t even there. I had an ulterior motive for going to the Burrow. I went to get myself checked out at the hospital and I wanted to do it without an entourage.”

As he had known they all started speaking at once and the gist of it was that he should have told them and let them escort him or at least let one of them go with him for protection, that he was possibly pregnant and he needed a shield with him at all times.

“I’m not possibly pregnant.” He told them and they had all shut up.

“It’s not a big deal.” Max said quickly and encouragingly, even though he looked a tad devastated. “We can try again in two months’ time, now that you’ve had a fertile heat; your next one will be fertile too and so on until you are actually pregnant. It’s alright, love.”

Harry had pulled a confused face, looking at them all and wondering how they had come to the conclusion that he wasn’t pregnant just from the vague answer that he’d given. He had chuckled and shaken his head at them for jumping the gun to reassure him over something that wasn’t even true. He hadn’t wanted to tease them with the news, but it seemed that they were teasing themselves, but now that they thought that he wasn’t pregnant, he was very happy to see no joy in their faces at thinking he wasn’t pregnant, but he hadn’t wanted or expected to see the disappointment there either and that’s all that he could see in four sets of eyes.

“You misunderstood me, Max, my love.” He had told him calmly. “I’m not possibly pregnant. I am pregnant. Confirmed at three weeks and four days along. I conceived on the third day of my heat cycle. I’m very healthy and there are no problems as of yet according to Healer Almus.”

It had taken a moment for that to sink in and then their faces had broken out into happy, excited faces and he had been clamoured and hugged and treated like a porcelain figurine and he enjoyed it, for all of an hour at least.

He grinned now as he thought back to when he’d told them and the following week where he could barely take two steps without one of them being there offering him something or holding an arm out for him to hold on to. He was exasperated already and it had been a week, but he had warned them all that if they fucked up Braiden’s first ever birthday then they were going to be thrown off the roof with a rope tied to their ankles and left dangling there until he took pity on them, which wouldn’t be for at least a week, he had assured them seriously.

“Harry, come down for something to eat!” Max called up to him. Which was at least an improvement from just last week when Max had come up to get him just to carry him back down.

“Damn it, Max, I’ll eat when I’m fucking hungry!” He shouted back.

“The babies want you to feed them!” Max called back.

Harry grimaced at the low blow. If anything could have gotten him down those stairs and into the kitchen, it was telling him that his children needed him. Cursing under his breath, Harry cleaned up the very last room that he had to clean before he headed out of the door and down the stairs, ignoring that Max was almost buzzing to rush up them to help him down.

“You touch me and you’re dead, Mister Maddison.” Harry threatened with a smile. “I’m fine for another couple of months yet.”

“Can I at least hold your hand? I did that before you were pregnant and I liked it. I don’t want to lose that contact just because you are pregnant. Not every touch is meant to rip away your independence, Harry, sometimes we just want to touch you because we like touching you. I don’t want to only be able to touch you when we’re in bed and going to have sex, though I do like that.” He stressed with a grin. “But I miss just touching you. We all do.”

Harry bit his lip and screwed his eyes closed. He’d been on such a vendetta against them mollycoddling him during his pregnancy that he’d stopped noticing what was just an innocent touch between lovers and what was actually mollycoddling him during his pregnancy.

“I’m sorry.” He said softly. “I didn’t mean…I didn’t realise that I was acting this way. I just don’t want to be smothered and I was so against it that every touch became oppressive. Can you forgive me?”

Max laughed and pulled him into a tight hug. “Of course I can. I love you; it’s what crazy people mated together do.”
“I’m going to ignore that I was just called crazy and ask for a hug instead.”

Max hugged him even tighter and Harry wrapped his arms and legs around Max, who bumped him up and carried him into the kitchen where five babies in highchairs were giving Draco the run around and Nasta was trying to suppress his laughter by biting his lips as he fed a lazily suckling Leolin.

“There you are! You can’t leave me with five of them! They’re all hungry and Farren’s upset, Tegan’s throwing her dinner at me and the only happy one is Braiden because he can feed himself!” Draco hissed.

Max kissed the side of his head and set him on his feet and took over feeding Tegan and Regan, leaving Draco to focus all his attention on Farren, who was always going to be a guzzler and left Harry to supervise Braiden while feeding Calix.

“How did your cleaning go?” Nasta asked as he stood looking like a sexy pin up from a Mother’s magazine, hip cocked against the counter, legs tight and taut in faded, well-worn jeans, Leolin cradled lovingly in one arm to a bare chest as he fed him watchfully from his tiny bottle.

“Fine, all done and everything’s clean. It’s just the living room now when the kids are in bed and any mess they or we ourselves make until then. Did you find any unsuitable foods?”

Nasta shook his head. “It’s all aimed at babies in their age group and you did well picking the organic foods, there’s nothing in them that shouldn’t be.”

“I found that recipe you wanted, for the little mini cakes for them to share. There’s perhaps a bit too much sugar in them, but nothing harmful and they have no icing, just something similar made with cream cheese and powdered sugar, but we can leave that off of the kids ones if we wanted, it’ll just a sponge cake with shredded carrot in them then.” Max informed him.

Harry nodded. “I’ll make them later tonight. I don’t want to miss a single thing tomorrow.”

“I’ve put the camcorder on charge; it’ll be on him all day tomorrow.” Nasta assured him.

“Thank you.”
“Caesar wrote me back. He, Amelle and Eleonora will be here for the party.” Max told him. “Half my family are coming too, so it’s a good thing we’re setting up outside. There would never be enough room for everyone who’s coming inside.”

Harry nodded distractedly as he fed another little spoon of grey goo to Calix.

“What is this?” He asked Max.

“Potatoes, chicken, peas, carrots and gravy. It looks disgusting, but tastes like a full meal in one bite.”

Max proved it back taking the next spoon of food for himself.

“It doesn’t look like this in the supermarkets.” Harry frowned.

“If you read the back of the jar you’d know why. They colour it to make it look more appetising with paprika or tomato puree or spinach extract. It’s all natural, but it doesn’t need to be in there, it’s included just for aesthetics.”

Harry was so curious that he had to take a spoon for himself after watching Max do it. It wasn’t bad, but it was strange and the texture was strange too, with small, soft lumps in it.

“It’s okay. I still prefer adult food though.” Harry grinned.

Calix giggled and Harry looked at him, his mouth and cheeks a mess, his mouth open to show off his several little teeth and a covered tongue as he bashed little hands against his tray.

Harry gasped and exaggeratedly pulled back. “Do you not like me eating your food, Calix? Do you want it all to yourself?” He teased as he loaded the spoon up and went to put it into his own mouth only for Calix to bash the tray again and gurgle.

Harry laughed and fed the spoon to Calix, who worked it with his mouth and tongue, mashing up the little lumps with his tongue before swallowing and opening his mouth again.
“You’re such a good boy! Who’s going to be so big and strong when he grows up?”

Calix giggled as Harry fed him the last of his little bowl of food before he run the spoon over his cheeks and chin and fed the last of the food to Calix before he sat back and sighed.

“Are you okay?” Draco asked and Harry tempered his immediate anger and clipped answer of ‘yes’ and allowed himself a few moments to breathe.

“I’m fine, Calix needs a wash cloth though, he’s such a mucky boy.”

“Ba nana.” Calix clapped his hands and Harry grinned. He’d been so proud when he’s been shown the footage of Calix saying a proper word and now after every meal Calix always said banana.

“Strike that, I think he wants dessert first.” Harry smiled.

“I cooked up some peaches for them to try.” Max said with an excited grin. “I think they might want a little more than bananas now that Braiden is a year old tomorrow and the quintuplets are turning eight months old.”

Harry felt a flutter of the excitement that Max was feeling and he watched as his largest mate easily shifted Nasta aside, who was gently rocking Leolin while playing peek-a-boo with him, to reach a bowl he had put on the counter.

He used the back of a curled finger to check the contents and grinned. “They’re cool enough. I steamed them to keep as much nutrition in them as I could” He announced as he took a knife to the three balls, which Harry assumed were peaches.

Max peeled them, eating the skins himself and he cut out the stones easily and then diced them up small, cursing every time he squashed one of the soft cubes.

Once he was done, he separated them out into five piles; two were slightly larger than the other three. He checked over his shoulder for the babies who were done and he scattered a handful of the peach cubes onto highchair trays, Braiden and Farren got the larger piles.

Harry watched as Calix squashed the piece of fruit in his hand picking it up and then poked a little tongue out to lick at the juice.

“That’s a peach, Calix.” Harry encouraged. “Peach.”
“Eah.” Calix nodded.

“Each.” Braiden nodded from beside him as he mashed up a cube in his mouth, the juice going absolutely everywhere.

Harry grinned and smoothed Braiden’s hair away from his mouth, kissing a cheek that was wet and tasted of peaches.

“Braiden love, you taste delicious. I’m going to have to eat you all up.” Harry declared as he started kissing all over Braiden’s cheeks and lips, his little boy giggling.

“Mama. Mam mam ma ma.” He babbled happily.

“I think they need a bath now and then an hour to settle down before bed.” Nasta said as he placed a sleeping Leolin down into his bassinet gently before hoisting up Farren and Braiden, who had both finished.

Harry sighed as Max collected empty bowls to wash and Draco scooped up Regan, Tegan and got Calix into a firm grip in his long arms, leaving Harry with just a sleeping Leolin to watch over.

“I hope Blaise’s job search has gone well. He’s going to be a nightmare otherwise.” Harry sighed softly.

“It’ll be good practice.” Max told him as he slipped the trays off of the highchairs to wash them down in the sink. “I’d be very surprised if he got a job from his first application. It’s a milestone, being rejected from your first interview.”

Harry rolled his eyes. “I suppose. I just don’t want him to be upset on Braiden’s birthday.”

“Braiden is his son, Harry. He’s as excited as us that he’s turning a year old. He won’t let himself ruin it by being in a bad mood.”
Harry nodded and took a moment to sit down and relax. There was nothing he needed to do, nothing that needed his attention at the moment. He’d wrapped all of Braiden’s gifts for tomorrow; he had everything sorted for now. It was time to take a breather.

Max worked around him, picking up globs of food from the floor and table, disinfecting everything, washing everything down and then folding up the highchairs and storing them in a pantry at the other end of the kitchen before he dried the little plastic bowls and spoons and put them away, he put Leolin’s bottle in the steriliser and set that going before he boiled the kettle and sat opposite Harry with a groan.

“Do you ever get tired of being in the kitchen?” Harry asked him with a smile.

Max laughed. “That’s the equivalent of asking me if I get tired of sex. No I don’t. I love my kitchen and I love sex. I think it’s impossible for me to get tired of either.”

Harry smiled and nudged Max with his foot. Max nudged him back, so Harry did it again and very soon they were giggling like little girls and playing a rather forceful game of footsie under the table. They stopped when Draco demanded a cup of tea from the living room.

“His royal highness has spoken!” Max called out loudly.

“Damn right he’s spoken!” Draco shouted back. “Bring me tea!”

Harry laughed and with a shake of his head he picked up Leolin gently and carried him into the war zone that was their living room to screeches, giggles and Nasta laughing deeply.

Harry sat down against the arm of the chair and snuggled with Leolin, resting his baby on his chest; little face tucked into his neck and he let him take the pressure off of his little wings, one hand supporting the tiny nappy clad bum as he watched his other children play on the floor.

Regan was getting better at holding himself off of the floor and cruising the furniture, Tegan was getting more coordinated and could crawl faster and better now and she was just finding her feet now that she had learnt how to hold herself upright against the table. Calix had absolutely no interest in standing and instead he zoomed around the floor, knocking people off their feet as they cursed and tried to avoid him as he crawled around their legs like an overly affectionate cat.

Farren shuffled over to sit by the settee where Harry was sat with Leolin and Harry dropped a hand to play with his fluffy, dark brown hair. Those blue-green eyes tilted back to look at him and Harry grinned down at him.

“Hello love, are you alright? Do you want to stay here with me?”
Farren babbled a bit and giggled before he turned back and sat watching as Nasta lay on his back and played with Braiden, who was laughing so hard that he was drooling. Nasta grimaced every time a drop of baby spit landed on his neck or his shirt, but he still carried on playing and Harry loved him just a little bit more for that.

Max came into the room with a tray that he set down on the table before bending down and snatching Calix from the floor, rolling him up over his shoulder, their son screaming in joy all the while.

Draco grabbed his tea and sipped at it with a sigh before handing Harry’s to him and Harry took excessive care not to drip anything onto Leolin. He was so paranoid that he handed his cup back to Draco after a few quick gulps. He scalded the back of his throat and the roof of his mouth, but he didn’t care as he wrapped his arm back around Leolin and dropped his other hand back to Farren’s hair.

Nasta sat up and placed Braiden into his lap and reached for his own cup of tea.

“Oh I needed this.” He said with a grin.

Harry listened to his mates, he greeted Blaise enthusiastically when he came home, encouraging him with words and kisses as he told them dejectedly that he hadn’t been successful with his interview and that they wanted someone more experienced than a wizard straight out of Hogwarts.

“Tell me how I can get more experience when no one want’s to hire anyone with no experience?!?” He demanded, shaking his head.

Max had gotten Blaise a cup of coffee for him and he cheered Blaise up by pulling off his shoes and giving him a foot rub.

“Where’s mine?” Draco demanded with a grin.

Max had laughed and given Draco a foot rub while Blaise finished off his coffee before he shuffled over on his knees and he had rubbed Harry’s feet too, without him having to ask, before their biggest mate stood and stretched his back.

Nasta calmed the babies down and then Max gathered them around him to read a picture book, it was the same pictures every night, but always a different story and though the babies couldn’t really understand them, they always enjoyed story time with Daddy Max.

After that they had a bottle of warm milk as Nasta, Draco and Max took them to bed at ten to seven, leaving Harry and Blaise where they were and Leolin was left on Harry’s chest when Harry refused
Max came down first and he set to refilling tea cups before he started on dinner which he had already prepared earlier. Draco came down next and lowered himself to the floor by Harry, where Farren had sat and he set to gently stroking Leolin.

“Nasta’s taking a quick shower so he’s free later on tonight and tomorrow.” Draco told him.

“I want to take one tonight too.” Harry nodded. “I don’t want to miss a thing tomorrow. I can’t believe I gave birth to him a year ago tomorrow.”

“I can’t believe you fell pregnant with quintuplets a few days after giving birth to him this time last year.” Blaise chuckled.

Harry pulled a face. “I love them, so much.” He insisted. “But if I have another set of quintuplets growing in here, I’m going to spend my next several heats alone by any means necessary.”

“If you have another set of quintuplets then I’ll chain myself up outside on your heats.” Max told him as he came into the living room to top up their teacups. “Dinner will be ready soon. It doesn’t need much time to cook.”

Draco moved into the kitchen with Max to keep him company and Blaise helped Harry sit up with Leolin to also move into the kitchen before Blaise went to call Nasta.

Harry made it to the kitchen and he kept Leolin against his chest as Max finished everything off. Nasta came in dressed in pyjama trousers, his hair still damp and he was talking to Blaise happily.

Harry stood and placed Leolin into the bassinet as Max brought over the plates for them.

“You’re such a brilliant cook.” Blaise groaned as he almost inhaled his food.

Max grinned and tried to play it off, but Harry could see how pleased he was, how his chest swelled, how he had a slightly pink tinge to his tanned cheeks.

“What do we need to do now tonight?” Max asked, changing the subject without trying to make it seem like he was.
“The living room needs to be cleaned up and a space needs to be made, I’ve got the cakes to do still. I want his presents brought down and set up too.”

“What’s first tomorrow? Presents?” Blaise asked.

Harry shook his head empathetically and swallowed quickly.

“No. They can have their breakfast first and then a bath and we can get them ready and then we can go in the living room. Which reminds me, I want the bouncers out for the other babies, so that they don’t crawl here there and everywhere, but they don’t feel left out by being separated off and put into the playpen.”

“That seems a good idea.” Nasta nodded. “Keep them close enough to feel involved, but keep them out of the way and in one place.”

Harry was banned from moving after dinner, his mates insisting stubbornly that he had done more than enough for one day and he instead sat on the settee with a cup of tea and watched his mates clean up all the toys and mess. He let this ‘order’ stand mainly because he had Leolin back on his chest and he loved cuddling with his little boy.

They broke for a tea break once they were done clearing up and all that was left now was to clear a space large enough for tomorrow, set up the bouncers for the quintuplets and then bring his gifts down for him.

Leolin made a soft noise against Harry’s neck and he broke out of his thoughts and looked at him as best as he could with his little head buried in his neck.

Leolin squirmed a little and made the noise again and Harry pulled him back from his neck gently and smiled as those gold eyes narrowed and his little mouth frowned up at him. Then soft recognition flowed in those eyes and Leolin smiled to match Harry’s smile.

“You’re being so adorable tonight, love.” He praised.

Harry sat up and placed Leolin on his thighs, bum to his lap and his head supported by Harry’s knees. He held Leolin’s tiny hands in his own and kissed them, smiling and talking to Leolin gently as Leolin tracked every movement he made greedily and stared at his mouth, watching the movement as Harry spoke.

“Come on, Leolin, say mama. It’s easy.” Harry encouraged lightly.
Leolin blinked softly at him and Harry laughed holding his hands gently as he bent to kiss that tiny face.

“What’s taking the tea so long? I’m gasping and dying of thirst!” Harry called out to his mates with a smile.

“Max was making the tea, but he’s currently got his tongue stuck down Draco’s throat.” Blaise answered back. “Give us a minute.”

Harry shook his head and he smiled to himself. How he loved those men, faults and flaws and all, though he did admit that they drove him fucking insane sometimes and he did get angry with them, sometimes so angry that he wanted to scream and curse them into oblivion, but he still loved them.

“Ma.”

Harry’s heart about stopped and he stopped breathing as he looked down at Leolin, who was looking up at him through those eyes. He gasped in a deep breath and calmed himself, he couldn’t react like he wanted to and dance around the room with Leolin, shouting in joy. Instead he bent his head and laid a kiss to those lips that had just uttered their very first word for the very first time.

“I love you, Leolin, you’re my very special little boy and I love you so much, you don’t know how happy it makes me to hear you saying something, but why don’t we show your Daddies too, yes? Can you do it again?”

Harry nuzzled with Leolin before he sat up and covered Leolin’s little ears to protect them a little from what he was going to do next.

“NASTA!” He screamed out, not even having to fake his excitement, all he had to do was recall the memory of Leolin saying just one word. Not even a word, just a sound really; one syllable and his heart missed a beat.

Harry was all but crushed in Nasta’s arms, all four of his mates rabbiting at him and he smacked them each in turn and glared at them.
“How dare you frighten Leolin so badly!” He chastised. “Can’t you tell the difference between me calling in fear and calling in excitement? Surely you have enough brain cells to make that distinction? If I’d known that you’d do this then I would have left you all in the kitchen!”

Nasta breathed in deeply and visibly calmed himself. “Why did you call for me?”

“I wanted you all here, I knew that if I called for one of you, that you’d all come. But Leolin spoke!”

“Spoke? What do you mean he spoke?” Max asked.

“He said Ma.” Harry said proudly, his previous excitement drawing back in.

“Are you sure it wasn’t just wind?” Max asked.

Harry glared at him. “Sit back and away from him, let me show you and then you can try and claim his amazing achievements as wind!”

His mates did as he asked and sat on the settee or on the floor and Harry captured Leolin’s attention again.

“Look at me baby, don’t look at them, they don’t believe that you can say anything, but I know you can. Your first word at seven and a half months old. Can you say Mama again for me, love?”

Leolin blinked and squirmed, but Harry didn’t press him. Leolin had taken a minute or two the last time he had prompted him to say anything as well and as Harry spoke softly and regularly about nonsense, stopping for a little pause every now and then to give Leolin what he needed to speak, encouraging and prompting him regularly to say ‘Ma’ again. It was in one of these little pauses that Leolin graced him with a grin and made his heart soar again.

“Ma.” He called out softly, raising a little hand to Harry’s face.

Harry pulled him up and kissed him all over his little face. So very, very proud.
“I told you!” He gloated to his stunned mates.

“I can’t believe it.” Blaise said as he shuffled forward to run his long fingers through Leolin’s dark hair.

“He must have taken some of our Dracken blood.” Nasta said consideringly. “Most Faerie babies do not say their first words until they’re well over a year old at least, some have yet to speak a single word on their third birthdays, but I’m not surprised that it was just a monosyllable, that’s typical of Faerie born babies.”

Harry smiled. “I don’t care about what other Faerie babies do, this little baby is mine and I’m so proud of him, even if it was just a monosyllable, it was for me and he called me Ma and to me, he couldn’t have made me prouder or happier even if he’d sat up and sung.”

“Don’t misunderstand, Cariad. I’m so very proud of him and how well he’s coming on. The courts will want to know about this development though; this is what they meant when they told us to keep them updated with Leolin.”

“Time for you to put your plan into action then.” Harry pulled a face, not sure how he thought about it.

“We’re going to use Blaise’s old home.” Nasta nodded decisively. “I don’t want them to know exactly where we live, I’d never rest, but Marianna is hardly ever home, she’s always away with Josiah or she’s away shopping. It won’t be too hard to convince the court that we live there if we scatter around a few toys and let the older ones roam free, we just have to make sure that it’s baby proof and that Marianna moves anything she doesn’t want broken or damaged.”

“I talked to her about it.” Blaise nodded. “She will do anything to help us, even give us the house when we need it. Did you…talk to them?”

Nasta snarled under his breath, but he reeled it back in and took a deep, cleansing breath. He nodded sharply.

“I talked to them both and I invited them around to visit.”

Nasta’s tone of voice alone let them know what he really thought of that idea, what he really thought of having Dain and Kailen coming over and having to play nice with them to get the court on side.

He’d done it soon after their talk about not taking Leolin back and forth to the Faerie city every couple of months and he’d proposed his idea of getting Dain and Kailen on their side, as the both of them sat on the court they could act as envoys between them and the rest of the court without risking Leolin’s health and his life travelling all the way to the Faerie city every couple of months.

The two Valkyries had all but jumped at the chance and that made Nasta angrier. He had come from the floo conversation grinding his teeth, large hands clenched into fists and the only thing they could get out of him for a while had been short, angry grunts.

Harry hated that this was upsetting Nasta so much, that it was adding to his stress. He wanted to grab a hold of Dain and Kailen and throttle them both until they told him why they had never sought out their own family members; he wanted to demand why they were only interested in them after a Faerie had been born to the Delericey line. He wanted to scream at them and ban them from even looking at Leolin for the hurt they’d caused not only Nasta, but Aneirin and Sanex too, but he couldn’t. They needed the two of them on their side to convince the court that Leolin was safe and happy with them. They needed Dain and Kailen so that Leolin remained happy and healthy as the risk to his life was insurmountable the more they travelled with him and risked him getting a bug, a virus or an infection.

They didn’t need this now, why couldn’t everything just happen how he wanted it to? Why did everything always have to be a bumpy road? Why were there always obstacles in the way of him and his family?

Harry sighed and shoved it out of his mind, he needed to focus on Braiden’s birthday, it’s what he wanted to focus on, but with Dain and Kailen coming to visit, Ashleigh still insisting that she didn’t need mental help, Remus’s silence, the trial looming ever closer and Severus' funeral coming up next month, their plate was full to bursting point already, they didn’t need anything else to pile on top of it now.

Growling softly, Harry gave Leolin a soft, sweet kiss and handed him to Nasta as he went to the kitchen and grabbed the recipe that Max had left on the counter in his soft, slightly sloped writing. When in need of stress relief he turned to sex or to baking. He wanted the former, but he needed to do the latter. He sighed heavily and washed his hands before he set to baking the carrot cupcakes for tomorrow.

Blaise came in to keep him company, chatting to him excitedly. Max was right, despite being rejected due to inexperience; Blaise was so excited for Braiden’s first birthday. He was currently wondering how Braiden would react to his presents and if he’d like what was given to him.

“I think it might overwhelm him a little.” Harry said as he turned to face Blaise, mixing bowl in hand, wooden spoon beating his cake mixture as he talked. “He’s never had anything like this, but I can’t wait for Christmas, he’ll be sixteen months then and he’ll be much more aware of what’s happening and what’s going on, but I really can’t wait to see his face tomorrow, I just hope that the quintuplets will be alright with all the focus being mostly on Braiden. I don’t want them to be jealous, but I always want tomorrow to be special for Braiden, it’s a very fine line.”

That was one of his biggest worries about having quintuplets. That they’d be jealous of the attention Braiden got tomorrow and further on, when they were older, when they had to share their birthday with four other siblings, how could they all focus on five different children at the same time as they tore into presents and clamoured for their attention all at once? It was going to be nigh on impossible. He pushed it out of his mind for now, he’d think about it when they were older, but for now, they didn’t even know what a birthday was.

Harry finished his cakes and stored them in several large air tight tubs and cleaned up the kitchen before Max could lynch him for the mess.

Nasta wandered in, moving over to the back door and he checked that it was locked.

“Are you done, Harry?”

“Tucked up in bed, he fell asleep soon after you came out here, I’m going to make his bottle up and let it cool for him and then we can get ourselves to bed, for the boring kind of bed activities as Max would say, we need to be up early.”

Harry chuckled and shook his head as he made absolutely sure that there wasn’t a speck left in the kitchen, that his cakes were stored safely and then he wandered up to their bedroom with Blaise and Nasta.

“Did you…” Max started to say, but Harry cut him off gently with a hand over his mouth.

“The kitchen is spotless.” He said with a grin.

Max licked his hand and Harry rolled his eyes as he pulled it away and dried it on his shirt, which he then stripped off and threw towards their clothes hamper. Draco rolled his eyes and went to pick it up from the floor to put into the hamper properly. Harry stripped off completely and threw the clothes at Draco, who caught them deftly and deposited them into the hamper as Harry slipped into a pair of clean pyjama shorts and climbed into bed, it had been boiling hot that day and the night didn’t look like it was going to be any better and sleeping in a large, heavy bed with four other bodies would not help the night feel any less hot and sticky.

Harry moved on his knees towards Max, who was already sitting in the bed, his back propped up against the headboard watching them all. He flopped onto Max and snuggled in, one large hand fell to his hair and trailing over the back of his neck and rubbing gently and soothingly, playing with his hair, his skin, his ear until one moment Harry was awake, laughing sleepily at Nasta and Blaise and the next he was fast asleep in the bed, Max on one side of him and Blaise on the other. Draco was on the other side of Max and Nasta was on the other side of him.
Harry was awake with the sun and he was more excited today than he had been for his own birthday as he bounced excitedly and roughly pulled himself out of the tangle of limbs that he had found himself in, waking his mates up as he did so.

Max groaned being the worst affected as he was sleeping wrapped up with Harry. “Too early.”

“It’s not! Braiden was born today! Get the fuck up now!” Harry ordered. “He’s a year old today.” He exclaimed excitedly and loudly as he clambered out of the bed.

Harry rushed into their en suite and tore off his sleep shorts, jumping into the shower as he had been too tired to have one yesterday, despite wanting to get it done and out of the way before today, but it was early still; he had a bit of time before Braiden would wake up for his breakfast.

He scrubbed himself clean, used the first shower gel that came to hand and roughly washed his hair before he jumped out and dried himself off. He padded naked back into the bedroom to find that his mates had all gone back to sleep in his absence and hadn’t gotten up like he’d wanted them to.

He smirked and jumped onto the bed naked and still a little damp from his shower.

“Get up now!” He demanded, watching as they cracked open eyes to glare at him, groaning, yawning and then Max swore as he looked at him and realised that he was naked and damp.

“I didn’t like this wake-up call until I opened my eyes.” He said with a yawn. “It’s too early to be awake though.”

“It’s almost six, Leolin will be awake soon and then Braiden will be up, we need to get their breakfasts done, our breakfasts over with and then onto his presents! Wake up and get up!”

Draco sighed and forced himself to sit up. He swung one leg out of the bed and then the other, standing up and going into the bathroom. Harry smiled.

“One up, three more to go. Don’t make me push you out. I’m pregnant. It could put too much of a strain on me and the baby.” Harry threatened.
That got Nasta’s attention and he sat up immediately, one hand pressing to Harry’s flat belly.

“Don’t strain yourself, if you want me to push Max out of the bed, all you have to do is ask me.”

“You were still sleeping too.” Harry pointed out.

“I’m up now; do you want him out of bed?”

Harry nodded. “I want you all out of this bed.”

“I’m up, I’m up!” Max complained as he forced himself into an upright position, dislodging Blaise, who has sidled up to him for warmth after Harry had left the bed.

Blaise groaned but Harry helped him sit up and his first mate went to join Draco in the bathroom just as Leolin decided that he was hungry and wanted something to eat.

Nasta saw to him and Max grinned as he spied a naked Harry still sat on the bed. He grabbed him and rolled him over until they were naked chest to naked chest and they shared a morning kiss.

“Your breath is horrible.” Harry laughed teasingly.

“I couldn’t reach the bedside table last night and I needed a drink, but you and Draco were pinning me down and I didn’t want to wake you up.” Max pouted. “I want more kisses.”

Harry laughed. “As if I’d let something so trivial as morning breath stop us from having kisses.”

They went back to kissing for a few minutes until Nasta hit them both with a pillow.

“You wanted us all up, now you’re the one who is left in bed. Get up the both of you; we have a birthday boy to sort out.”
Harry grinned and pulled Nasta into a furious snog too, moving his mouth until his jaw ached and using his tongue to fight off Nasta’s. They were both breathless when they broke apart.

“You need to sort out Leolin.” Harry reminded him as their little boy watched them impassively from the crook of Nasta’s arm.

Draco and Blaise came back from their shower just as Max was going into the bathroom and Nasta left for the kitchen. Harry pulled Blaise and then Draco into their own morning kisses before he hurriedly dressed and dried his hair with a quick charm before shoving his wand up his sleeve.

“I’m so excited I can’t stand it!” He told them as he bounced where he was stood, watching them dress, entirely too slowly in his opinion.

“You weren’t this excited for your own birthday.” Draco complained.

Harry nodded. He’d made that observation as well, but he didn’t care. “Braiden is my first born child and he turns a year old today, of course I’m more excited for that.”

Draco rolled his eyes but Harry grabbed Blaise’s hand and dragged him into the nursery next door to peek in at their children. Only Calix was awake and he burbled happily when they approached his cot. He had been sitting quietly, rocking himself back and forth while gripping his little feet.

Blaise picked him up and cradled him in his arms, kissing his little head and brushing his fingers through his sleep tousled, chestnut brown hair. He was looking more and more like Myron as the days passed, though Harry would put money on Calix never reaching Myron’s six foot ten inch height.

“Let’s get you downstairs for breakfast, Calix.” Blaise told him with a smile, those jet black eyes peering at him as he chewed on one of his hands.

“Mama.”

Harry turned with a grin to see Braiden rubbing his eyes and rolling over in his cot to get up. Harry eased him to his feet and then picked him up and squeezed him.

“Hello my lovely, birthday baby. How are you?” Harry asked as he cradled him tightly.
“Mama ba la.” Braiden babbled as Harry settled him in his arms and turned to Blaise, who had a watching Calix in his arms still.

“Let’s get you boys down stairs.” Harry said softly.

“Baba ca!” Braiden called out, reaching to touch Calix, patting his head.

Harry and Blaise shared a laugh before they moved down into the kitchen where Nasta was feeding Leolin and Max was sorting out the little bowls of baby cereal, setting them up ready to warm through.

“No Farren?” Max asked surprised.

“No, these two were the only ones up, but Calix was awake when we went in, but we didn’t hear anything over the monitor, so we need to keep an eye on that.” Harry told them as he settled Braiden into his high chair.

“Was he upset?” Draco asked as he placed a concerned hand on Calix’s head.

“No, he seemed quite happy to just sit there rocking as he clutched at his feet. I just want us all to be aware that he is waking up and he’s not making any noise when he does wake up.”

“First person awake goes to check on them then.” Nasta nodded his agreement.

Their morning passed much the same as it always did. A mess of feeding babies, cleaning up their hands and faces keeping them happy until they had eaten their own breakfasts and then they bathed the babies, changed them into their clothes and once everything was clean and Max had the camcorder set up and ready and Blaise, Draco and Nasta had taken their five other babies to sit in their bouncers, or in Leolin’s case settled him on his beanbag, Harry carried Braiden into the room, to his pile of presents and set him in front of it, sitting behind him.

Braiden clapped his hands and burbled at the gifts and he hit at them and clapped his hands some more.
“Mama!” He called out, looking behind him to Harry and he pointed at the gifts.

“Yes, Braiden love, let me show you.” Harry said as he turned Braiden back around and tore at the bright, coloured paper covering a large box.

Braiden screeched and clapped his hands harder, giggling and he reached forward to tug at a strip of paper, uncovering a trampoline.

“I’m still not sure about that thing; I thought we were going to wait until Christmas, when he was a little older.” Draco said worriedly.

“It’s fine, Draco, I promise you.” Max insisted. “He’s going to love it.”

“He hasn’t used half the toys he had last Christmas.” Blaise complained.

“Will you killjoys leave him be for one day? We got too many toys for him for Christmas, we all know that and I told everyone to calm down this year, but that doesn’t mean that I don’t want him to have presents on his special days, now shut your mouths and get the pregnant man a cup of tea.”

Blaise went to do it, partly because he wanted to sneak a cup of coffee and partly because Max couldn’t because he was holding the camcorder.

Harry helped Braiden through the pile of gifts and sipped on his tea, he fussed over the babies in their bouncers, Calix was up and down like a jack rabbit, properly bouncing and Farren was laying still, Regan was fussing and Tegan was dozing lightly, every screech and clap from Braiden jerked her awake, but her eyes drifted closed again when everything calmed down. It was so adorable and Harry made sure that Max got some footage of her as Braiden turned a knitted Snidget around in his hands, examining it.

“How many gifts does he have left? I can’t see anything through the sea of coloured paper.” Draco smiled.

“Three I think.” Harry said as he scrunched up some of the loose paper and threw it away, uncovering the remaining presents. “Here you go, Braiden, three more for you, love.”

Braiden giggled and Harry helped him unwrap the remaining presents and Nasta cleaned away all Calix and Tegan were napping, Farren was just lying there and Regan was watching them all through his hazel eyes, but he was blinking slowly, each time his eyes remained closed a little longer and Harry knew that he’d be taking his mid-morning nap at any moment.

Blaise slid to the floor and he helped Braiden with some of his toys, tearing packaging away and letting him play with his new toys.

“Here, Draco, hold this, I need to go start his birthday lunch, we’ll be having guests soon.” Max said as he looked at the clock on the fireplace mantel piece.

Draco took over the recording of Braiden bashing around his new toys and Blaise got rid of packaging and boxes, but when Braiden cried when Blaise tried to take a box out of his hands, Harry gave him a glare to back off.

“He’s more interested in the box than what was inside it!” Draco huffed.

“A box promotes imagination. Leave him be.” Harry said as he covered the four quintuplets over as they slept, though Farren just sat there, not sleeping, not moving and not minding having a blanket placed over his lower body.

At eleven in the morning they greeted Marianna and Josiah, who had actually come to see them for once, but he was so boring and droning that Harry gave up talking to him after just ten minutes. He was glad for the distraction that Aneirin made when he arrived, hugging him tighter than he usually would have.

“Are you alright?” Aneirin asked him concernedly, pulling back from him and looking him over critically before giving him a subtle sniff.

“Save me from him.” Harry hissed under his breath as he threw his arms back around Aneirin’s neck tightly; the man growled dangerously as he presumably glared at Josiah.

“What has he done to you?”

“He’s so boring!” Harry whimpered. “I could feel my arm hairs growing!”
Aneirin sagged in his arms and Harry felt him shaking his head. “I thought he’d hurt or threatened you!” He sighed. “Don’t do that to me, Harry, I’m a sixty-one year old man.”

“You’re not old.” Harry scoffed. “Sixty-one years young!”

Aneirin chuckled and patted his back. “I love you, kid, I really do. You make me feel young again.”

“You are young.” Harry rolled his eyes dramatically. “Aren’t you listening to me?”

“I’m listening.” Aneirin smiled.

“Where’s Sanex?” Nasta asked, coming over to them. “Surely he isn’t thinking of missing my son’s first birthday?”

“He’s running a little late, he has a new girlfriend and he spent the night with her, he was just waking up when I floo called him.”

“Is she human?”

“Not quite.” Aneirin pulled a face. “She’s a werewolf according to Nex, you have no idea how much I wanted to just yank him away from her and hide him away, but I tried talking to him instead, but he won’t be swayed.”

“Werewolves aren’t all bad.” Harry defended automatically, but his mind went to Remus before he could stop it and he clenched his teeth. He had a four month old Godson that he hadn’t even seen yet and Remus and Tonks were still silent. He’d even sent them a second letter, but so far, still nothing.

“When one of your children comes home with a werewolf for a bed partner, I’ll hold you to that.” Aneirin said darkly.

Harry sighed. “I don’t even want to think that far ahead, they’re babies, but I’m going to make sure that my babies can protect themselves and a werewolf is only dangerous for one night a month, just twelve, thirteen days in every year. That’s nothing in the bigger picture, Aneirin. I know I set you on edge when I tried to kill Sanex last December, but that doesn’t mean that you shouldn’t trust him with his new girlfriend, if it makes you feel better then have Sanex sleep under your roof on the full moons until you can trust his girlfriend more.” Harry shrugged.

“Sanex isn’t known for listening to reason; he’ll probably want to stay with her on the full moons to show how supportive he is of her.” Aneirin grumbled.

“Who’s to say that she’ll want him to be there? She might not want him there to see her change into what most consider a ‘monster’ and a contagious one at that. She could lay down the law and tell him to leave her alone on the full moons. Their relationship is new, brand new if they haven’t experienced their first full moon while together yet, you don’t show your new boyfriend the proverbial monster in the wardrobe when you’ve only been together for a few weeks. She’s going to want to wait and take that sort of thing slowly because she’s probably afraid of scaring him off, or at least I damn well would if it was me, so you might be worrying for nothing.”

“I actually feel better.” Aneirin said with a look and a small laugh. “Why do I feel better?”

“Because I’m a genius and you should all listen to me more often.” Harry informed them before turning his attention to a newly arrived Myron.

“Where’s Richard? Is he grounded for the gift that he gave me for my birthday?” Harry asked. “He better not give Braiden anything like that, not ever!”

“I can’t believe what he gave you and I’d never allow him to entertain the thought of giving anything like that to the children.” Myron growled as he clutched Harry in a fierce hug, proving that he’d done as good as his word and had found out what Richard had gotten for him. “He’s been thoroughly punished, I assure you, but no, he had to slip into work really quickly, but he promised to be here before lunch.”

“Is it…is it my trial?” Harry asked nervously, a pit forming in his stomach.

Myron sighed. “Why do you torture yourself? You know yours is the only case that Richard is working on currently.”

“What’s happened?” Harry asked, almost dreading the answer.

“You also know that Richard can’t speak of his trial cases with anyone not involved.”
Harry snorted. “Don’t try to tell me that he doesn’t tell you absolutely everything because I won’t believe you.”

Myron gave a wry smile. “He does tell me everything about his cases, but he trusts me not to spread it around, not only could it mean his job and his practice, something which he loves, but it could mean all of his trials fall through, including yours and he could face court himself for perverting the cause of justice.”

“I won’t tell anyone, just my mates…”

“Who will then tell their families and so on, it takes just one person to say something in another’s hearing and that’s it.”

“Can you…can you just tell me if it’s anything bad?”

Myron sighed heavily. “Not really. It’s to do with your cousin. He has killed one of his Aunt’s dogs apparently and she’s now screaming like a banshee about how much of an awful, evil child he is, but he’s now old enough to be tried as an adult. Richard is hoping she’ll spill something revealing that can help him put yet another nail in their coffin. That’s all.”

Harry just blinked and frowned. “Dudley used to kill the neighbourhood cats, but I didn’t think he’d actually kill one of Marge’s dogs. She loves those things more than anything else in the world and he would have known that. If he killed Ripper, her favourite dog, then I’m not surprised that she’s turned on him in a heartbeat. That dog was her baby, she treated it like a child and took it everywhere with her.”

“This is all good news for the trial, Harry.” Myron reminded him. “Unfortunately Richard is still collecting evidence, more of it now that this woman is willing to spill about your cousin, so we can’t apply for a court date until all of the evidence has been seen, selected and examined. I know this must be a lot of pressure for you to deal with, but try to put it from your mind. It’s not for you to worry about it, it’s a done deal, the trial is just a formality and if Richard has it his way, which he usually does, then they’ll never get out.”

Harry nodded glumly. He’d been hoping to get the trial over and done with sooner rather than later, all this new evidence coming forward was just delaying everything, surely they had enough for a conviction by now? All he wanted was this over and done with, it had been his mates who had wanted to press charges against them, to get justice for him, when he just wanted to forget.
Harry’s attention was taken by Farren, who startled him by clutching at his leg and Harry wondered when, and who, had let him out of his bouncer. Harry bent down and picked him up, groaning at the hefty weight of him.

“You’re getting so heavy, Farren, you’ll kill my back.”

“Then you shouldn’t be picking him up in your condition!” Max told him sternly, taking Farren from him as quickly as Harry had picked him up.

“His condition?” Aneirin picked up on immediately as he had been passing close by them, Tegan in his arms. “Have you had it confirmed that you’re pregnant?”

Harry sighed and scratched at his head. “Yeah, I’m pregnant again. A month gone already, the time is flying by.”

“Who got to you first?” Marianna asked with a little laugh.

Harry scowled. “Draco if I remember right, but it doesn’t matter who got to me first, according to my dates I didn’t conceive until the third day of my heat cycle and I was too far gone then to tell when I got pregnant or who did the impregnating, not that I’d be able to tell anyway as I’m sure all four of my mates had me several times over during every single day of my ten day heat period.”

“So it could be any of them?”

Harry nodded. “I don’t care who got me pregnant. I’m having another clutch and if any of them complain about it not being theirs biologically I’ll gouge out their testicles. I don’t give two shits which one Fathered the baby, if any of them refuse to help with the newborn baby just because the baby turns out not to be theirs, then I’ll nail them to a tree outside.”

“Very well said, sweet one!”

Harry turned with a smile to find Alexander had arrived and he opened his arms for a cuddle.

“I take it you received the news that you’re pregnant again?”
Harry nodded with a smile. Kimberly squealed happily and pulled him into a tight hug.

“Oh I can’t wait to meet the new little one, congratulations darling.”

“You’re pregnant?” Narcissa’s smooth voice asked from behind Kimberly.

Harry ducked his head around Kimberly and smiled at her and Lucius. He nodded. “I am. A month gone, approximately six more to go.”

“Congratulations, but where is the birthday boy? I bought him a gift.” Narcissa smiled.

Harry grinned and went to scoop Braiden out of his pile of presents, holding him in one arm, his hand between Braiden’s legs as he held him back to his chest and carried him over to Narcissa. She was right, today was about Braiden, not about him, not about the trial and not about his new pregnancy.

“Hello, sweetie.” Narcissa cooed, taking Braiden gently from Harry’s arms and sitting him on the crook of her one arm.

“A year old, he’ll be walking before we know it and then he’ll be in school, then he’ll be off to Hogwarts or any other school that you wish to send him to. Time passes too quickly.” Alexander sighed and Harry looked at him strangely, wondering if something had happened that he hadn’t been told. He didn’t like the thought of Alexander hurting for any reason, the man was too kind.

Harry helped Braiden open his new gifts and let him screech his excitement as he revealed new toys. He had to laugh at Aneirin’s gift of a doll’s pushchair. He just shrugged when Harry gave him a knowing look.

“It was one of Nasta’s favourite toys when he was a boy, he used to steal his sister’s pushchair, he didn’t want the doll, he just wanted to push something around. So I thought that it might help with Braiden’s walking if instead of staying where the furniture was, he could have something that rolled with him.”

“Thank you, Aneirin, I’m sure he’s going to love it. Nasta set it up for him.” Harry ordered and Nasta smiled as he did as he was told, opening the box and pulling out the instructions. He’d already set up the trampoline and after a mini disaster and a short hissy fit in which he hadn’t realised that he’d screwed the handle bar on backwards which is why it looked twisted, he’d gotten it set up and ready.

“Come here, love, your Daddy Nasta has spent a lot of his time today putting this together for you.” Harry couldn’t resist the dig at how long it had taken Nasta to set it up and the glare he got in return told him that Nasta had gotten the message, which made him laugh.

Harry held Braiden tightly under his arms as he bounced him on the trampoline. Braiden looked at his feet and giggled so Harry took it as a good sign and did it again.

Blaise sat in front of him and clapped his hands to gain Braiden’s attention.

“You can do this yourself, Braiden.” He told their son clearly. “Come here.”

He held his arms open and Braiden wobbled over to Blaise on the surface of the trampoline, Harry supporting him all the way. Blaise took his hands and put them on the handle bar and Braiden got it immediately as he started bouncing himself and he screeched in joy as he bounced on the spot.

It was probably too generous to call it bouncing, as Braiden was just holding on and bending his knees, his feet never left the surface of the trampoline, but damn was Harry bursting with pride as he watched his little boy trying his best and having a hell of a time at that too.

Harry turned to see if his mates were watching him, only to see that everyone was watching and they had the camcorder on him, Blaise and a giggling Braiden as he played with his new trampoline.

Regan crawled over to him and Harry sat him on his lap. His little boy was still a little clingy after his tumble down the stairs a few weeks before, but he was getting his confidence back slowly. He’d all but forgotten what had happened to him, but every now and then he sought Harry out and clutched at him tightly as if he were remembering what had happened, but all the books he’d read said that he would have forgotten by now. Harry wasn’t convinced and he soothed Regan and held him tightly and comfortably. He hadn’t put the bear down since he’d snatched it up after his fall and he cried a fit if they tidied up and he couldn’t find it. Nasta was more than likely right in telling them that it had become his security and comfort object. Nasta had charmed it so that it didn’t fall apart in Regan’s hands and they didn’t have a replacement to soothe him with.

“Lunch is ready.” Max told them all with a grin. “Braiden! My birthday boy, do you want to come and have lunch? You can come back to your trampoline after.”

Braiden looked up, all the way up, at Max and frowned. “Nah.” He said clearly, shaking his head softly for emphasis, before he turned away from Max and carried on bouncing.
Harry was the first to start laughing, joined by the others. “Please tell me you got that on tape?” Harry begged Nasta.

“I got it.” Nasta assured him with a smirk.

Max just looked gobsmacked. “Did my little boy just tell me no?” He demanded.

“I believe he said ‘nah.’” Harry informed him with a cheeky grin. “But essentially, yes, he did the equivalent of telling you to piss off and leave him to play.”

“I thought he did.” Max grimaced.

Max moved then and hunched down in front of Braiden, holding his little waist and holding him still and gaining eye contact with him.

“You can come back and play with your trampoline after you’ve had your lunch and after your nap.” He said clearly and sternly. “But now it’s time for you to eat your lunch.”

Braiden wriggled in Max’s firm hold and tried to push his big hands off of his waist, then the tears started but Max was having none of it as he picked Braiden up and carried him, wailing and crying, into the kitchen.

“We raised that boy well.” Richard sighed with an exaggerated misty look up at Myron, who rolled his eyes, but he had a smirk on his face.

“Yes, we did. Now let’s see if he can stick it through when Braiden starts a tantrum.”

Richard cackled evilly and Harry shook his head as he carried Regan into the kitchen, where Max was strapping a thrashing Braiden carefully into his highchair.

“Calm down, baby boy, you can eat and then you can go back on your trampoline.” Max told him.
“Nah!” Braiden cried out.

“If you don’t want to go back on it after lunch, then you don’t have to, but you will eat your food.” Max told him.

“Nah!”

“Leave him to me.” Harry sighed.

“No. I started this, I will finish it.” Max said stubbornly.

“What if he refuses to eat?” Harry asked worriedly.

“If he doesn’t want to eat, then he won’t eat. He’s not having anything else.”

Harry gaped at Max in horror. “He’s a baby! How can you be so cruel to him?!”

“It’s not cruel.” Max denied. “He will learn not to mess about with his meal times and his food or he’ll go hungry. He’s not going to starve from one missed meal, Harry and it will enforce discipline and a set routine.”

“So that’s it is it? He’s a year old now, today in fact, so now he’s open to discipline?”

Nasta placed a hand on his back and nuzzled the top of his head.

“I think Max has the right of this, love.” He told him soothingly. “Braiden’s showing up and he’s throwing a tantrum, if we let him get his own way, then he will learn that if he acts up like this then he gets what he wants. We can’t let that happen.”

“But…”
“No.” Nasta told him, pulling him and Regan into a hug. “I know it’s his birthday, I want to spoil him as much as you do and of course I want him to be happy today of all days, but he doesn’t understand all the excitement, he doesn’t understand the fuss or what’s happening and if we let him get his way ‘just for today’ then he’s going to expect it tomorrow too and he’ll play up twice as much because he won’t understand why he was allowed to get away with it today and why he won’t be able to get away with it tomorrow. It’ll confuse him, love. We can spoil him and let him get his way within reason when he’s older, when he can understand that a birthday is a special occasion, but today, when he’s so young, he follows our rules and the routine we set for him.”

Harry swallowed and he nodded. He didn’t like it, but he understood and his mates were making sense. He allowed Max to be firm with Braiden, he bit his lip hard enough to draw blood to restrain himself when Braiden started crying out for him and he watched as Braiden threw an all-out tantrum, throwing his spoon, throwing his food and knocking his bowl to the floor.

“Alright, that’s enough.” Max sighed as he picked Braiden up and carried him out of the room. Harry heard him talking to Braiden as he went down the hallway. “You’ve obviously been overstimulated and over excited and you’re in need of a nap, so let’s settle you down and you can have a nice long sleep and we can try this again when you’re less grouchy.”

Harry sighed and continued feeding Calix and Regan as everyone finished off their light finger food snacks and Amelle encouraged Eleonora to eat the little tomato flavoured corn sticks.

Farren was also eating the little finger foods, very, very happy to be trying new things that were edible and with different textures to what he’d tried before.

Max came back down twenty minutes later and cleaned up the mess that Braiden had made.

“He’s fast asleep. I think all the stimulation today just overworked him and he couldn’t process it, so he needs some down time to settle himself.”

Harry nodded and he felt better knowing that Braiden had settled down and that it was likely just all the fuss and attention on him.

The quintuplets went down for their own nap an hour after lunch, but Leolin, who had slept right through the morning and through lunch, woke up just ten minutes after his brothers and sister had gone to sleep.

Harry cuddled him to his chest as he teased a newly arrived Sanex over his new girlfriend and naturally, the best friends Caesar and Sanex, teamed up on him and teased the absolute fuck out of him, claiming that his posture had been permanently altered from having a cock rammed up his arse four times a night.

Myron was almost apoplectic with rage as he overheard them both. He smacked them both upside the head and he demanded that they apologise immediately and dredge up some respect for other people.
Myron sat next to Harry, still giving Caesar and Sanex a glare, they were both grinning and trying to hide it, but not much ever got past Myron. Richard had joined them just before lunch and Harry had found the time now that his children were all taking their naps to corner him to demand details about what was going on.

“I knew Myron wouldn’t deny you anything.” He’d sighed. “He loves you far too much to deny you anything that your cute behind desires, but it’s nothing, Harry, just new evidence coming forward, that’s all. It’s nothing for you to worry about.”

Harry had almost sagged with relief and he was able to carry on with Braiden’s birthday, what he could at the moment with all the kids but Leolin being asleep. Speaking of the devil, Richard came to dump himself on Myron’s lap and the older man wrapped him up tight in his arms and kissed subtly at his neck. Harry was sure that he could only see it because he was right next to them at just the right angle to see. He hoped his relationship with all of his mates was like the one between Myron and Richard when they’d been together as long as they had.

“How is Leolin today?”

“He spoke!” Harry told everyone proudly and loudly.

“He did what?” Aneirin asked from across the room.

“Leolin said his first word yesterday.” Harry repeated.

“Are you sure you weren’t hearing things?” Aneirin said as carefully as he could, trying not to offend him, but being very sceptical at the same time.

“That’s what those four said when I told them, but then I got him to repeat it for them and they had to believe me!” Harry said with a wide grin.

Myron’s huge hand swallowed the top of Leolin’s head and he cradled it gently in his palm. “He’s coming on so well.” He praised.

Harry nodded proudly. “I also want it on the record that he said ‘Ma’ that’s all of them now. Every single one of my babies has said some variant of ‘Mum’ as their first words.”
“Duly noted.” Max winked at him.

“We think that he has some Dracken blood in him. He’s seems stronger than most Faerie babies and now he’s talking and he likes copying everything Harry does.” Nasta put in.

“He does?” Blaise asked with a frown.

Harry nodded. “Yes, we found that out after my birthday surprise. When you, Max and Draco were all fast asleep and Nasta and I sat up with Leolin as he wouldn’t sleep. He copied everything that I did, when I smiled he smiled, when I frowned, he did and when I yawned he did, I thought it was a coincidence until Nasta got me to pretend that I was sleeping and Leolin copied me, only he really went to sleep.”

“You may have a point, you’re both Drackens, he must have taken something from your genes, even if it’s a bit of added strength or robustness.” Aneirin said. He looked more relaxed and less stressed and Harry wondered if it was his work, Sanex’s new girlfriend or if he truly was that worried about Leolin.

A few hours later Harry said goodbye to everyone as he cleaned up cake from the floor, the table, the high chair trays, everywhere. His babies had loved their carrot cakes, but they’d gotten them everywhere in the attempt to eat them.

Regan had been the worst, as their baby with the least teeth, soggy, drool covered bits of cake were absolutely everywhere. Though, naturally, Leolin hadn’t had any cake, he was still struggling just to drink a whole three ounces of milk in one go.

“I swear today was an ordeal.” He groaned as he fell onto Blaise and cuddled with him.

“It was worth it to see him happy, but I’m glad birthdays are only going to be once a year.”

Harry laughed. “Love, have you forgotten that we have six babies and more on the way? In ten, twenty years, how many babies do you think we’ll have and how many birthdays do you think there will be?”

Blaise groaned. “Every other day is going to be a birthday.”
“Welcome to the circus.” Max laughed.

“Seriously, Max, did you just call our family a circus?” Draco demanded. “One of those Muggle centres that display oddities for the public to laugh at?”

“It’s an expression more than anything, love, don’t take it to heart.” Max told him, pulling him into a hug and kissed his temple softly.

Nasta was sat on the floor and he was supervising Braiden, who hadn’t stopped bouncing on his trampoline since he’d seen it after he’d woken from his nap, they’d hoped he’d have tired himself out by now, but he was still going strong.

“Is he even slightly tired yet?” Draco asked. “He’s making me tired just watching him.”

Nasta shook his head. “He stops now and then to babble, but then he starts bouncing again.”

“Can you even call it bouncing when his feet don’t leave the trampoline?” Blaise asked.

“Well it certainly isn’t jumping.” Max laughed. “But he’s definitely doing something, what else would you call it?”

“I think it’s a mix of both.” Harry said. “If he did that on a flat surface, would his feet leave the ground then? Maybe the trampoline is too stiff for him to actually bounce and this is the best he can do at the moment?”

“We’ll try it, but for now, I think he needs to calm down. I think a nice bath while someone hides his trampoline so that he can’t see it, a relaxing story and then to bed, he’s had an exciting day and if we don’t keep to his routine now, then he’s not going to sleep.” Nasta said as he placed his hands on either side of Braiden, let him bounce a few more times, giggling, before he lifted him off of the trampoline.

It took several seconds for Braiden to realise that he wasn’t being played with and that he wasn’t going back onto the trampoline. He started throwing a tantrum like he had that morning.
“I told you that thing was a bad idea.” Draco grumbled as Nasta handed him to Max, who took Braiden for a bath; Harry carried Tegan and Leolin up to bathe them too.

“He loves it though.” Blaise answered. “We can’t take it off of him now, I won’t have him upset.”

“He’s more upset being let on it and then taken off again.” Draco pointed out. “I hate seeing him upset and taking him off of that thing all the time is upsetting him more than anything else he’s had so far.”

“That’s a good thing.” Nasta told them seriously as he moved the trampoline to the corner of the room and covered it over with a blanket. “He needs to learn that not everything is always going to go his way, that we are his parents and he has to listen to us. A bit of disappointment isn’t going to hurt him and it’ll actually help him later in life.”

Nasta sat down and pulled Farren up on to his lap. Their big bruiser was sporting a very large bump on his head after he’d tried to stand, only to grab hold of a small stack of parchment and not the table. The parchment had slid from under his hand and Farren had head butted the table. It seemed that all of their children were going to be in the wars this month; his heart had never been in his throat so much as when they’d started finding their mobility, which led then to injuries.

“How’s his head?” Blaise asked concernedly.

Nasta brushed Farren’s fringe from his face and kissed his bump gently.

“Still looking sore, but I don’t think it’s causing him any pain. He doesn’t seem bothered by it.”

“He’s definitely Max son.” Blaise grinned. “No sense, no feeling.”

Draco shoved him, scowling. “Don’t say that about him! He’s just a baby.”

Blaise laughed. “It was more a dig at Max than Farren. We all know that Farren’s our tough little boy, there’s not a lot that’s going to faze him.”
Harry came back down and swapped a freshly bathed Braiden, dressed in a soft, light and clean sleepsuit. He was sucking on a pale pink dummy, already dropping his eyes closed in tiredness.

“I think the bath did him in, he’s knackered.” Harry laughed softly. “We had to take him out because we were afraid that he was going to slip under.”

Harry gave Braiden to Draco and picked up Calix and Regan to take them up to give them their bath.

“Can you listen on the monitor for Leolin please? He went straight to bed.”

Nasta nodded. “Of course, Cariad. If Braiden drops off, I’ll take him up and drop Farren off for you and Max. Then maybe we can rush the clean-up and then have a cwtch before bed.”

Harry smiled widely. “I’d love to.”

Harry took Regan and Calix up to Max who was drying Tegan off and trying to dress her. He’d thankfully let out the water and refilled the bath, so all Harry had to do was strip Calix and Regan and dunk them into the warm water before taking a soft cloth to their bodies as they laughed and squirmed in the warm water.

He and Max managed to get their children bathed, dried, dressed and bedded down easily enough and Harry collapsed onto the settee with a groan, watching as Nasta and Draco cleaned up quickly, using the odd, sparse spell.

They were done with the cleaning quickly and Max brought them all tea, even Blaise, who didn’t drink coffee after seven in the evening so that he could sleep properly at night. They sat and relaxed while they drank their tea before they checked all the windows and doors and Max sent a quick spell at their tea cups to wash and dry them and then they traipsed up to their bedroom, doing their nightly routine, dressing and chatting quietly. Harry set up the baby monitor for the nursery next door on their bedside table; he didn’t need to bother with the one for Leolin, who slept contently in his bassinet next to their bedside.

None of them were all that tired, it was still early, it being only half eight at night, but as they all climbed into bed, they were all sat up against the headboard and Nasta started the cwtch he’d promised, wrapping an arm around Draco tight before throwing his other arm around Harry and pulling them in close to his warm, naked upper body. What a glorious upper body it was too, Harry grinned as he rested the side of his face against the solid muscles of Nasta’s chest.

Blaise leaned into Harry’s side and Max threw a huge arm around Draco, managing to touch all of them at once as he snuggled down and relaxed himself, his arm going heavy over them.
“Today’s been long.” Draco sighed as he eased himself down against the pillows and lay between Nasta and Max comfortably.

“Too much excitement, too much overstimulation and too many tantrums.” Harry agreed with a nod. “And only four more months until we have to do it all again. We have Christmas and the Quintuplets’ first birthday coming up in December, just six days from one another.”

Max groaned. “We’ll never survive. Braiden will be sixteen months old by then; he should be up on his feet and walking and with how interested Regan and Calix are with moving they could be up on their feet too.”

Harry blew out a deep breath against Nasta’s nipple and closed his eyes in defeat.

“I’ll be five months pregnant at Christmas; I’ll be next to no help with chasing them down if I’m all rotund and cumbersome.”

That got him laughs and a few chuckles.

“I’m sure we can manage, we wouldn’t want you rushing around like a lunatic, not when you’ll be so heavily pregnant. We value our lives.” Max told him.

“If you value your tongue you’ll keep your mouth closed.” Harry huffed.

“Yes, Master.” Max purred.

Harry groaned tiredly. “You know what that does to me, be a good mated slave and save it for when my body doesn’t feel like it’s been trampled into the ground.”

“Yes, Master.” Max grinned.

Harry rolled his eyes and smothered a yawn into Nasta.

“Hopefully we can get back to a more normal schedule tomorrow.” Draco said sleepily. “Today was
“I fully agree.” Harry said. “I hope Braiden learns to take ‘no’ better than he did today. I hope it was just all the fuss and the attention coupled with overstimulation and overtiredness. I don’t know what to think if he behaves like that every day from now on.”

“I think we’re focusing too much on the negative.” Nasta informed them. “He did learn a new word today. just because that word was no, or rather nah, doesn’t make it any less of an achievement. That he actually applied the word in the correct way, even if it was in a surprising and rebellious way, he still used it correctly. He’s growing and his brain is developing. We should be happy and thankful for this.”

“I’ll feel happy and thankful tomorrow, when I’ve had some sleep.” Blaise grumbled, a slight French twang to his words.

“Get to sleep, Blaise.”

“I’m trying, but it’s difficult with you all talking over me.” He groused.

Harry chuckled and twisted himself around more comfortably. “Alright, we get the message; we’re going to sleep now.”

Nasta slipped down and pulled Harry and Draco into his body tighter. “I’ll see you all in the morning. Max, don’t forget that you have an afternoon shift tomorrow.”

Max groaned. “I’ve gotten too used to lying around and sitting on my arse, I don’t want to go back to work.”

“At least it’s only a couple of hours in the afternoon and not a full day.” Draco tried to put the silver lining into the cloud.

“There is that.” Max murmured. “I’d still rather not go in at all.”

Harry yawned and settled down, keeping his eyes closed and his arms wrapped around Nasta, one hand touching Draco, Max’s arm heavy over his waist and Blaise a warm heat at his back, one slim, smooth hand holding onto his hip.

“Night lovers.” Max called out just as Harry was drifting into a peaceful sleep.

Everything was quiet and they didn’t have anything to worry about and nothing was pressing, they had a funeral coming up soon, they had the trial to deal with a little after that and they would have to get back into a working mentality, a working schedule yet again now that their schooling was over and done with. Draco and Blaise would want to look for jobs soon and Harry entertained the thought of a small job for himself, but maybe not just yet. He didn’t know what he wanted to do and there was really no rush at all, he was only just eighteen, he’d deal with the most pressing matters first, the unavoidable obstacles, and then he’d entertain the thought of jobs and careers, until then, he had nothing else that he needed to do, it could all wait for the morning.

Chapter End Notes

A/N: I can’t believe Braiden is a year old! Where has the time gone? Where has my newborn boy gone? A year! The quintuplets will be a year old soon too, fuck me I need a lie down!

Well that’s all for this week! Absorb the fluff of this chapter lovelies, the next chapter is the horror filled, tear jerker I promised would be coming up soon and don’t forget that you can always join me on Facebook, I’m under the name StarLight Mass and I’d love to welcome you to the page. Chapter Eighty-Three – Poison

Alexander’s birthday came and went on the twentieth of August and with it the end of the summer approached fast and Harry felt relaxed and calm as September came upon them. A far cry from this time last year when he was only just pregnant and had a two week old Braiden when they were due back in Hogwarts. Though the holiday to Guadeloupe was extraordinary and Harry didn’t think that he’d forget that holiday for as long as he lived.

The first of September had brought some bad news, but it was the morning of the fifth of September that they received the harrowing, tear stained letter from Kimberly. Alexander’s very unwell Mother, Evelyn, had passed away. Alexander was inconsolable and couldn’t stop sobbing.

Harry floo called Mrs Weasley immediately and he asked her through his own tears if she could babysit for a couple of hours. The kindly woman who he saw as close to a Mother as he’d ever get readily agreed without question and bless her she came right over, still in her house apron and she took charge as Harry tried to rally around a bone white Max, who was devastated that he’d lost his great-grandmother so suddenly and out of the blue.

Harry remembered Evelyn from Alexander’s birthday party last year, he hadn’t realised that he’d met her, but when he’d been introduced to her properly at Alexander’s birthday party this year, he recognised her as one of the elderly ladies who had fusssed over a newborn Braiden as they sat under a parasol eating cakes and drinking iced tea. The same group of ladies that Harry had snatched Braiden from when Draco had made a comment about them smothering Braiden and he’d flown off the handle like a fool. But Evelyn had been so lovely, so kind and generous and loving that Harry had fallen in love with her easily. It was no wonder that Alexander himself was so loving and kind and so laid back with a Mother like Evelyn and now, just as he’d been properly introduced to her, she was gone.

They flooed over to Alexander’s home, to find it full and buzzing with activity and noise. It seemed that the entire Maddison brood had turned out…there were no children in sight.

Max forced his way through his family members to find Alexander sobbing hysterically on the settee and Max sat down heavily next to him and dragged his Grandfather into a hug, sobbing himself.

Harry didn’t know what to do, they already had one funeral to attend this month, Severus Snape’s, now they’d have yet another one, a more personal funeral and Harry swallowed hard. He hated seeing any of his mates upset, he hated it more if they started crying, but seeing Max’s devastated face as he received the news of Evelyn’s death was the worst thing in the world.

Harry was at a loss for what to do, he’d never really had to deal with someone else’s loss, only his own and he knew that what he found helpful, might be the worst thing possible for someone else. The closest that he’d come in this sort of situation was helping to comfort Nasta and Blaise when the subject of parents came up, Nasta having lost his Mother and sister and Blaise losing his Father, but he hadn’t been there for the initial loss. He’d never had to see anything like this, but he remembered feeling this way when he’d lost Sirius. He remembered the shock and devastation that that had made him feel and he went light headed with the mere thought that that was how Max was feeling right now.

He breathed in deeply and he turned away from the room of grief and huddled into Draco, it broke his heart to see so many people whom he loved and cared about hurting so much.

He could see Cassander and Julius, Keanu and Enrique just behind them and Lydia and a pregnant Shae. All of them were crying and Shae was openly sobbing. Xerxes, the oldest of them, was dealing with his grief differently. He was standing tall and strong, his mouth a severe line and his fists were clenched tightly. He was angry and Harry recognised that type of grief as his own. He’d gotten angry in public at any and every one and he’d sobbed on his own in private where no one could see or hear him.

Harry slipped away from Draco and made his way over to Xerxes and he touched him lightly, flinching back automatically as Xerxes turned sharply to him, one fist raised. He had reacted the same when Dudley had interrupted his grieving once, and he had recognised the tight tension in Xerxes’ shoulders, thrumming all the way down his straining arms to his tightly clenched fists.

“I’m sorry, Harry.” Xerxes grumbled. “I’m not the best company right now. I didn’t mean to frighten you.”

Harry smiled wanly. “I know. You didn’t frighten me though; I knew you’d react like you did. I was the same when my Godfather died. I felt like I could take on the world in a bare knuckled blood bath and that was before I knew that I was a Dracken and that I’d have claws to help me.”
Xerxes looked down at him and gave him a grimace that was mostly a pained smirk and he pulled him into a hug. He was almost Myron’s twin, despite the age difference. Xerxes definitely looked older, but he was also a few inches shorter than his youngest sibling.

“Only you have been able to get a smile from me today.” Xerxes said with a shake of his head. “Even my own mate, Holly, has avoided me since I got the news. She doesn’t know how to handle me when I’m like this.”

“Lucky for you both that I do.” Harry said. “We grieve in the same way it seems.”

“Have you…are you better? I can’t seem to shake it off, my sisters, my brother, my own children and now my grandmother. It’s all just piling on top.”

Harry laughed humourlessly. “No. I’m not better by a long shot. It never goes away.”

“How long…?”

“Over three years now and if I think about it too much or if I allow myself to wallow, then it feels like I’m drowning in the grief.” Harry admitted. “But that said, the pain of it does get better. It may never go away, but it…lessens. It becomes less sharp. You just have to get over the initial loss, but then I wasn’t allowed to grieve naturally, so maybe it’s just the two of us stuck in this angry stage of grief.”

“You weren’t?” Xerxes said with a frown.

Harry shook his head. “I had lost my Godfather, I’d killed someone, actually killed someone and I was just fifteen. Instead of grieving for Sirius and getting therapy for killing Voldemort, I was thrust into the limelight. I had interviews left and right, I had people looking to me for strength and guidance that I couldn’t possibly give them when all I wanted to do was curl up and cry. The strain of it was immense, the pressure was incredible and I had to stand under that on my own, while inwardly grieving my loss, putting a face on for the public and crying myself to sleep while in private. I was always angry, I wanted to punch everyone who came near me, I wanted to cry and rage at everyone who congratulated me, I still feel like that when random strangers approach me, but you learn to deal with it.”

“I had no idea.” Xerxes muttered. “I knew you were always thrust into the papers and in front of reporters until you went home for the summer, but you looked so…so…"

“Happy? Normal? I made myself look like that for the pictures, but inside I was stabbing out all of their eyes so that they couldn’t look at me, so they couldn’t see me when all I wanted was to rage and scream and cry at them to leave me well enough alone. I destroyed half of my possessions and some of Dumbledore’s too. I was just so angry.”

“Did you ever harm yourself?” Xerxes asked curiously.

Harry shook his head. “Not purposefully, there were a few incidences of cutting my hands and fingers when I was picking up all my broken stuff after my rage and I punched a few walls and doors and I almost broke my foot kicking my trunk, but no, nothing where I consciously thought ‘oh this is sharp, I want to hurt myself with it.’ I’ve never thought of suicide either, in case that was your next question. My mates already asked me that before. Have you ever hurt yourself?”

Xerxes sighed. “When I was much younger. I was twenty-one when I mated to Holly. I’m her only dominant and I tried my very best for her and our children. We had our first son, John, with no problems, then Hannah and Joel came along and everything was perfect, then the problems started. I don’t know what changed or what happened, but Holly started miscarrying. Seven now, but the first baby after Joel was…was stillborn and I…” Xerxes sighed heavily and looked off into space. “I was so strong for Holly, comforting her, protecting her like a good dominant should, but I needed a release myself, I needed comfort and relief from the pain in my heart. I found that release with cutting spells. It was always my upper arms, never my wrists; it wasn’t about killing myself, I would never have left my submissive and our children alone, it was just about the release of the sorrow and anger that I felt that I couldn’t show in my need to be strong for Holly. Needless to say I sought out professional help when I realised that what I was doing wasn’t healthy, then my Father found out and he all but wiped the floor with me, but by then I had already stopped and had gotten onto the road to recovery. It was all over and sorted quickly when I had his help and I was better able to then deal with the miscarriages after that. Holly hasn’t had a heat period in ten years now. I think her Dracken realises that one more miscarriage or stillbirth will destroy her.”

“That’s so sad.” Harry said sympathetically, looking up at Xerxes with his mouth puckered, trying to keep from crying.

Xerxes smirked anyway, knowing exactly what that face meant, and threw a huge arm around him and pulled him into a tight hug. It was hard to believe that he was a seventy year old man with the strength that Harry felt running through his muscles, but he was steadily coming to understand Dracken physiology and the difference between what he had grown up thinking an old man was, to what an old man meant in Dracken terms.

Alexander was ninety-three now, he was so strong, his back was unbent and his knees didn’t shake. He could run and jump, laugh until he had to hunch over and he was as energetic as Harry himself was at eighteen, perhaps more so at the moment because he was always so tired what with being pregnant and looking after six young babies.

“Holly and I have both made our peace with it, Harry and we love the three children that we have got, even though our oldest is now forty-eight and doesn’t need us as much. John is actually only four years younger than my youngest brother Myron.”

Harry chuckled at that. Myron must feel so strange, having a nephew who was only four years his junior, but then how did he feel knowing that Xerxes was fifteen years older?

“You remind me a lot of Myron. You’re both calm and strong.”

“It doesn’t help that we look like mirror images of one another.” Xerxes chuckled. “But naturally as the elder, I’m also the better looking.”

Harry grinned and had a little chuckle with Xerxes. He was glad that he could make the older man laugh and feel less rage and overwhelming anger. He knew from his own experience with grief that if he laughed, even just a little, then he felt a lot better afterwards and he couldn’t even begin to understand the type of pain that Xerxes must have been in to lose so many babies, to lose a brother and two sisters and now to lose his Grandmother, a beloved Grandmother it seemed, apparently very suddenly, despite her being unwell for some time, it was just too much to bear thinking about. Evelyn had seemed so strong at Alexander’s birthday party, if a bit pale and tired, but certainly not so close to death as to just die out of the blue only two weeks later.

She had delighted in the babies that he’d not only allowed her to see, but had encouraged her to hold and cuddle, introducing them properly as half of the submissives had clutched their babies to their breasts, though another exception, like him, had been Shae, who was a born Maddison, not to mention that she had fourteen children and was pregnant yet again, she couldn’t hold them all, but she didn’t even try as she set them free on the garden and the other guests, only several of them were young, a few were still babies, but Shae’s oldest children were well into their teenaged years and were very well behaved…well, mostly well behaved.

Evelyn had thoroughly enjoyed herself however, being allowed to hold and play with babies and children, even if it was only Harry and Shae allowing it, though Amelle did let Evelyn hold Eleonora, but being pregnant, just a month and a half from carrying to term, it was hard for her to not hover over her baby girl. Evelyn had seemed so strong and so full of life and lustre at the party, laughing and joking and giving him, Shae and Amelle tips on how to handle their dominant mates which had had all four of them laughing hysterically with actual tears running down their faces, it was hard to believe that just two weeks later she was dead; it was a surprise and not a good one.

Draco and Nasta had gone back home, they couldn’t leave Mrs Weasley with all six of their babies all day and expect her to look after them fully, but Harry and Blaise stayed with Max, among the grieving adults. Blaise tried to do what he could, helping Harry make tea and coffee and then all but forcing the Maddisons to drink them, but he was still uncomfortable in this situation. He had lost his Father, but like Harry it had been before he’d even known him.

Harry had tried to comfort Max, but his mate had shrugged him off viciously, which had hurt, but Harry understood. He had shrugged his friends off sometimes when he was upset too, when he hadn’t wanted any fuss or anyone to talk or comfort him, when he’d just wanted to think and remember. He understood, he really did, but it still hurt.

He was seven weeks pregnant now, just five days from being a full two months pregnant. He would be going for his first scan soon. He was already booked in with the Healer at St Mungos, but before then he had five Dragon Pox vaccinations to oversee.

His quintuplets were eight and a bit months old and Braiden was twelve and a bit months old. They would need their Dragon Pox vaccines and then a few days later he would be going for his first scan of this pregnancy. He rubbed his belly gently, foolishly he was trying to feel the babies within, despite knowing that he wouldn’t be able to feel anything for months ahead yet, he just couldn’t stop himself from doing it, he couldn’t have another set of quintuplets, hell he couldn’t have quadruplets, he just couldn’t handle so many young babies. He prayed for just the one.

“Are you well, Harry?” Myron asked him.

Myron had turned up to the grieving party shortly after they themselves had arrived. His eyes were red rimmed, not like he had been crying but more like he was preventing himself from crying and holding his tears back with as much force as he could muster, which was then irritating his eyes.

“Fine.” Harry said quietly, but his throat was constricted with tears that he wouldn’t let fall.

Myron sighed and pulled him into a hug.

“Max doesn’t deal well with grief.” Myron told him softly. “He doesn’t like being upset; he’s too much of an insufferable happy person. He doesn’t like anyone making a fuss over him and I know, as his mate, that that will be the first thing that you’ll want to do, but just let him get it all out on his own first and then when he’s calmed down and he feels empty, then he’ll need some comfort to make him feel more like himself again.”

Harry nodded, brushing his tears away. This wasn’t about him. It was about Max. Myron was right, the only thing that he wanted to do was comfort Max, but that wasn’t what his mate wanted or needed, it was what he himself needed and this couldn’t be about him, it had to be about Max.
“I understand.” Harry said, sniffling to get himself back under control.

“You can take comfort yourself, Harry, you knew her too and it just so happens that when I grieve I need someone to take care of before I have a complete breakdown. I usually use Richard and Ashleigh, but Richard is in work and Ashleigh is trying to talk Julinda out of taking her from her birth certificate, I need to feel needed and useful in order to process and deal with my own loss, will you let me help you and in turn help myself?”

Harry nodded and Myron pulled him back into rest on his chest and Harry couldn’t prevent the tears that started falling again as he cried. He cried for Evelyn, he cried for Alexander and Max and Myron and Xerxes and all of the Maddisons who were so devastated by the loss of Evelyn. He cried away his fear of the coming trial, the uncertainty over his pregnancy, the nerves he felt at dealing with having more children. He cried out the stress of Ashleigh’s stubbornness, for the confusion with Remus and the baby godson that he’d never met and he let Myron comfort him all through it, let him hold him and touch him, the older man taking comfort from helping him through his tears. He fell asleep on Myron feeling drained, worn and raw, but so much better and lighter for drawing out all of the poison that had been weighing him down for the last several months.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

When Harry woke up he didn’t know where he was or what had happened or how he’d gotten to where he was.

He was on a bed, he could see that much, but he didn’t recognise the bedroom he was in or any of the scents around him.

Confused and on high alert, he inhaled deeply and then deeper again when he couldn’t decipher anything. He slipped from the bed and pulled on his Dracken to break the surface of his body and he shifted himself to his Dracken form. He didn’t like this.

A hand fell to his pregnant belly, still flat and not showing just yet and he growled softly. They had to protect their unborn clutch by any means necessary.

He inhaled as deeply as he could and held the air inside his lungs as he tried to pick up on any scents on the lingering air, but his head felt like it was stuffed with cotton wool and the skin on his face was tight and itchy. He couldn’t remember what had happened to him, his memories were blank. He didn’t like this at all.

He moved carefully to the door and tried the handle. It was unlocked and there was no magic on it or the surrounding area. He pulled open the door onto an unfamiliar landing with an unfamiliar colour scheme. He didn’t recognise anything. There were no windows.

The corridor seemed to go on forever and there were open doors on either side that showed rooms identical to the one that he had woken up in, there were no windows.

The corridor carried on and on, it twisted and turned, on and on until he rounded a final corner and came out onto a balcony landing that overlooked a spiralling, square staircase that wrapped like a block around the wall, going down and down into the depths of an unknown manor house.

He listened hard and inhaled deeply, but he couldn’t hear anything and he couldn’t smell anything. He carefully made his way down the stairs, picking his way down each step, keeping his back to the wall as he wound his way down each carefully measured stair. He couldn’t hear anything, he couldn’t see anything and he couldn’t smell anything. Where were his mates? His children? What had he been doing before he’d gone to sleep? Why had he been left in an unfamiliar place, surely his mates wouldn’t have left him, especially not when he was pregnant, where were they?

He wanted to call out to them, but he didn’t even know if they were here, he couldn’t smell them, what if they weren’t here and whoever was here heard him and got to him first while he was unprotected? He swallowed around a dry mouth and tried to figure out a plan. If he could find a window then he could fly away, but everywhere was dark, there didn’t seem to be any windows at all in this place and he felt panic claw at him, the walls closing in before he shook it off and calmed himself down. He was good at dealing with this sort of pressure, he could deal with this sort of situation, he’d done it a thousand times…only when he reached up his sleeve for his wand he found it missing.

He searched his whole body, but his wand had definitely been removed. Then he panicked. He was no good at wandless spells, he couldn’t do it consciously! He’d only managed it a handful of times and none of them had been intentional or controlled.

Moving faster down the stairs, he hoped to find a door, anything that led to the outside, but the staircase kept going on and on, down and down and with every flight of stairs, his panic grew, his footsteps quickening until he was all but running down the stairs. He stopped to catch his ragged breath, hand on his pregnant belly, a stitch in his side and his lungs burning from lack of oxygen.

He didn’t know what to do, he was torn. He wanted his mates, he needed them, but he couldn’t call out for fear that someone was here. He had a feeling that someone was here and that that someone meant to cause him harm, but he couldn’t get out, there didn’t seem to be any sort of exit here.

He inhaled deeply and tried to find any scents, anything at all, but nothing he recognised came to him, the winding staircase made him blind at every corner as he couldn’t see far before a wall cut off his sight. He was trapped in an unfamiliar place, with no wand, no protection, with no windows and no exit, pregnant and on his own without anyone around him, where were his mates? What had happened? Had he been drugged? He thought as he rubbed at his itchy eyes and tried to think past his cotton wool stuffed head. He looked down the stairs as far as he could, but he couldn’t see an end, what sort of magic was this?

A noise behind him on the stairs had his eyes widening as he realised his mistake too late and he spun around to see what had snuck up behind him only for him to scream as he caught sight of what had been following him, stalking him through the house and down the stairs, and he leapt backwards in horror and fright, only to tumble down the endless flights of stairs, the vile creature behind him following with a manic grin, just waiting for his battered body to come to rest to claim him, and quite possibly his unborn baby, as his prize.

Harry was ripped from sleep in a cold sweat, panicked and finding it difficult to breathe, his face and eyes were tight and itchy and his head felt like it was stuffed with cotton wool, his memory was blank and softly fuzzy and when he calmed enough to look around himself, he found that he was on the very same bed that he’d been on in his dream, in the very same windowless room and he screamed in distress. He screamed until he thought that his throat might tear and his eardrums would burst.

In his panic he saw the door and refused to even go near it, instead he turned and ripped the tapestries and fabrics from the walls, one of them had to be hiding a window, it had to! He heard pounding feet and his fear leapt up another level. The monster on the stairs was running to come and get him instead of stalking him through the house. It was coming for him and his unborn clutch!

He screamed in severe distress, his voice breaking as he held the call for as long as he possibly could before his shrivelled lungs demanded air as he pulled down another floor length piece of heavy fabric and his heart almost burst as he found the window at last. He flung it open, thankful that it wasn’t locked, and as the footfalls came louder down the corridor, getting nearer and nearer to him, he flung himself out of the window and into the open air. Into freedom.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Flying wasn’t so bad, he decided as his powerful wings beat the air in fast, rapid strokes. He’d stopped calling as soon as he hit the air and his wings had unfurled, twisting around and flying off over the roof so that the monster couldn’t see him through the window he’d uncovered.

It was peaceful out here, there was nothing to worry about, nothing to do but fly, he had nothing to do and no one to look after. It was just him, the white, fluffy wisps of cloud below him, the endless blue sky ahead and the burning sun that felt amazing on his scales and wings.

He had outsmarted his captor, the monster from his nightmares, and he was free. He was following the ingrained scents that his children had left on his mind at their birth and he was following the almost minute directions that he could pick up on. He was going back to his mates and his children. His captor would not be able to fight off his mates, they were too strong and too powerful, they would protect him, he knew it.

The only problem was that he was getting tired. He’d been flying for an hour or more now and he ached fiercely, the strain on his wing joints especially was almost excruciating by now and he was hungry and in need of a good, long drink of cool water, but he still had a way to go yet and he couldn’t stop. What if the monster caught up to him when he was resting and still so far away from his protectors?

Just the thought of the monster on the stairs had him beating his wings yet faster, despite how very tired he was and how much his muscles protested. He wanted his home nest, he wanted his mates and he wanted to hug his children, especially his Faerie baby. He rested a hand on his pregnant belly as his whole body rose and fell rhythmically with every beat of his wings. It was almost soothing, a balm to the panic and fear that he’d felt an hour or so ago. He never wanted to feel like that again, he never wanted to see such a sight again. He wished now that he had killed the monster, so that he might sleep easily, but he had been too panicked, too distressed, his first thought to his unborn clutch and the fall he’d had down the stairs in his dream. He couldn’t risk his clutch, better to draw the monster out and have his mates kill it rather than take the risk upon himself and lose his unborn clutch and maybe his own life too. It was too great a risk and he trusted his mates to deal with the monster, he trusted them to protect him and their children with their very lives.

He was covered in a sheen of dewy sweat when he finally reached the place that his inner navigation system was telling him was his home nest, the place where his mates and children were…only he could smell his children, but not his mates.

Panic gripped him yet again at the thought that maybe the monster had beaten him here, that the monster had taken his children hostage and he landed quickly with that thought, panic tearing through him as he ripped the door from its hinges and rushed into a more familiar setting, he recognised this place, the smells, the sights, he knew where he was.

He rushed to his children to find them with four humans. He hissed dangerously and he could smell the fear pouring off of them. It was so potent that he could almost taste it on the back of his tongue.

“Mama!”

He advanced and chased the humans away from his babies, one step at a time. He flared his wings in warning; he snapped his jaws at them and bared his teeth as they tried to slip out of his home nest. Were they working for the monster? Were they here for his children? Where the fuck were his mates and why had they left their children alone and unprotected like they’d done to him?!

He picked up the baby who had called out to him and he nuzzled his child, inhaling his scent deeply to make sure that these humans hadn’t hurt him. His little child clutched at him as if terrified and it made him growl deeply, he felt his venom secrete then, with just the thought that his child had been hurt or scared and he twittered to him comfortingly, placing him down and turning his attention to the humans, baring his coated teeth at them. Their fear racked up another level as a glob of venom welled up over his bottom lip and dripped off of his chin. They knew what he was and what his venom could do to them.

The male human had bravely stepped in front of the three female humans; he had a stick in his hand like a weapon. He cocked his head slightly, more venom leaking from his mouth at the action, he remembered this human male from his last birthing, he remembered the stick that shot hot sparks at him too, almost blinding him. He growled dangerously. This was twice now that this human male had threatened him and his children and he wasn’t going to stand for it. He wouldn’t live to do it a third time.

One of the human females squawked loudly in distress and he snarled. She was calling for backup; he couldn’t protect all six of his children by himself, he was pregnant too, he couldn’t handle this himself. He let out his own distress call, louder and longer than the human female and he felt his mates rumble back to him, they weren’t too far away from him now and he trilled at them to hurry them along. They knew he was pregnant; they would be here to protect him soon.

He gathered all of his children up, they had gone still and silent from his first snarl, he had very clever children; they knew not to move and not to make a sound, that this was a dangerous time and he needed them to be as still and as quiet as possible.

He got them all behind him and put them down, letting out a soft rumble for them to stay where they were before he straightened up and glared at the humans, who had slipped further towards the door while he had been gathering up his children to better protect them.

He stalked forward; if they worked for the monster then they had to die.

“Harry, please. Let’s not do this again.” The male human jabbered at him nervously.

He growled and he smelt salt water, one of the human females was crying. He bared his teeth again and hissed; darting forward only to be stopped by sparks. He swiped at the human male warningly as he rubbed his face free of the sting from the sparks, watching the human male as he backed the three women up to the back of the room, still using himself as a fronted shield.

A whooshing noise had him swinging around, but it was too late. He was tackled to the floor and he screamed in distress, thinking that the monster had grabbed him, only for him to smell an unmated dominant Dracken. His thoughts flew immediately to his unborn baby and the fall he’d just taken… was this Dracken trying to kill his cutch to impregnate him with his own? He screamed louder in distress and fought back harder, it was not going to happen, not while he still lived.

He dug his claws in and clenched his jaws tight around the nearest body part that he could find, he would have liked the neck or throat, but he got a wrist instead and he bit down, clenching his jaws together rapidly and repeatedly until he felt his teeth grate on bone and then he worked his jaw back and forth, over and over, depositing his venom into the blood stream and into his attacker’s very wrist bone causing the Dracken above him to yell out in absolute agony. His attacker tried to yank his arm back, used his fingers to try and pry his mouth from his wrist, but he refused to unclamp his teeth as he sunk his claws deep into whatever flesh he could to keep his prey where he wanted it, pushing more venom into his body from his claws, secreting more and more venom as he wrestled with the Dracken above him, feeling the excess liquid numbing his lips as it dribbled out of his mouth and rested on his face.

One of his babies cried out and that was all it took to get him to let go of his prey as he scrambled out of the tangle of limbs that he and his attacker had become and he rushed to where he had left his children and he rammed a balled up fist into the face of the new threat, another unmated dominant Dracken, that had been holding his little boy. He caught his baby around the waist and snarled as ferociously as he could manage to get the threat to back away from his babies as he stood protectively in front of them, his fifth born child nuzzling into his shirt, calling for him.

A familiar scent entered his home nest then and he called out, a soft cooing roar and then comforting arms were around him, large wings wrapped around him, shielding him, comforting him and out of sight, he turned and buried himself into his mate’s chest and clung to him, rumbling and growling, telling his mate how afraid he had been and how glad that he was now that he was finally here.

He smelt all of his mates around him, heard their reassuring rumbles and then he was released to be held and nuzzled by his three other mates as his top dominant turned to get rid of the Dracken and human threats in their home nest.

Only when they were alone did he start calming down and as he calmed down, the tears came. He cried and cried until his human form washed over him and then he bawled his eyes out, safe in the arms of his mates in their home nest with all six of his babies around him and completely safe.

He didn’t think about anything, he just got rid of his pain and his fear and the anguish he still felt over the events of the last few hours with his cleansing tears and when he had no more tears left to cry, he stood resting, tired and bonelessly on who he thought might have been his second mate and he felt and thought nothing. He just stood there against his mate, the three others around him.

“He’s alive!” He shouted. “He’s alive!”

He blinked and turned to look at the noise, staring blankly at his top dominant who was stood with such concern and worry on his face, but the threat was gone now, there was nothing to be worried over yet, unless they already knew about the monster.

“Do you want to talk about it?”

Harry blinked.

“Do you remember how to talk?” His top dominant asked him gently.

“He’s been in Dracken form for hours, Nasta; it’s his first distress shift where he hasn’t calmed down immediately or shortly afterward. It’s going to take a while for him to get recalibrated.”

Nasta nodded. “I suspected as much. Harry, do you want to go to sleep?”

He understood that and he felt his eyes widen at that very suggestion and his hands balled up tight into the shirt under his hands.

“Alright, love, no sleeping.” Nasta soothed him, petting his hair gently to calm him down.

His mates got him sitting down on a soft seat and they helped him to drink a liquid from something they called a cup, he recognised it, though he didn’t remember how to drink from a cup, so he instead used the tip of his tongue like a cat to drink the warm liquid, but he was calming down more, relaxing more as his mates touched and soothed him, though their worry was like a sharp blade underneath their care and love.

He fell asleep without meaning to and his mates covered him over and tucked him in, never straying far from him just in case he woke up again as they fixed up the house and checked on their napping children and had a hell of a lot of floo calls to receive and take care of.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Nasta rubbed his face with his hands as he made sure that his older brother, Sanex was alright. This was the second time that Sanex had come up against a feral Harry in Dracken form and twice he had come perilously close to dying, only this time Max’s three younger sisters had been in the house with him.

Max’s Uncle, Cepheus, was being cared for after the surprising amount of damage that Harry had done to him after he’d heard and reacted to the distress calls from Alayla. The bite to his wrist was very bad and very, very deep, it had gone down to the bone apparently, which had been chipped and fractured by the force of Harry’s bite and his four fangs, which had gone into the bone and infected it with his venom and it was taking some expert medical treatment from an actual Dracken Healer to fix it, yet Cepheus was still fevered, hallucinating and talking gibberish. The expert Dracken Healer from the Counsel was unsure whether he would live or not, Harry’s venom had not only gotten into his blood circulation, but had been deposited into his bone too, which was spreading to other bones like a poison. Even if he lived he might never have the full use of his hand again.

Nasta had never felt so much fear for anyone in his life than when he’d heard the highest pitch of Harry’s distress call and then when they’d reached the bedroom he’d been in only to find him missing. He’d honestly thought that someone had taken him, his pregnant submissive mate.

The fear and the panic he’d felt as he tried to follow Harry’s scent, the destruction of the bedroom he had been placed in to rest. None of them had given up for a moment as they called in the back up, as they called in all of their family members to help search for Harry. They had left Sanex, Julinda, Talia and Alayla at their home to look after their children as they searched for an, assumed, abducted Harry.

He had gone half crazed in his need to find him; he couldn’t get the echoes of Harry’s distress call out of his mind. Harry had never called out in such a state of distress and fear before, it made him ache to tear into something, knowing that someone had put Harry into such a state of distress as to give a call such as he had.

Nasta looked to Harry now, sleeping peacefully, Blaise sat right by him just in case and everything seemed fine, but he knew what was lurking beneath all of their minds, in their hearts. They needed to know what had happened to Harry, what had made him scream in so much panic, fear and distress and where he had gone, what had happened to the bedroom and who had hurt him so badly.

Nasta’s fists clenched and he took another gulp of green tea. It was laced with calming draught that Max had snuck into all of their cups of tea, to keep them all from shifting and going out to claw up any and everyone their Drackens even suspected of hurting Harry, they needed both the tea and the calming draught and he knew it, Max knew it too which is why he had laced all of their tea with calming draught, courtesy of his potions stash; Draco had gulped his tea down in just four large swallows, somehow just knowing that it contained a calming draught and knowing that he needed it, but then, after Max, he was the expert on potions, so Nasta wasn’t all that surprised that Draco knew that the tea contained a calming draught.

“How are you feeling?”

Nasta turned to look at Max and gave him a small, wry smile. “That should be my line.” He said gruffly.

Max had been in a state before Harry had gone missing. He’d just lost his beloved great-grandmother and then hours later he lost his submissive mate…his pregnant submissive mate, from his own Grandfather’s house no less, when he’d been right there, just down a couple flights of stairs.
“I’m fine. Calming draughts work a treat.” Max said, pulling a face.

Nasta sighed and pulled Max into a long, lingering hug. “We’ll sort this and we’ll find out what happened, we just need Harry to remember how to talk and to come back into his human self before he talks to us.”

“What if he doesn’t want to talk about it?” Blaise wondered aloud.

“I’m sure he will.” Nasta answered. “Something happened and whatever it was, it was bad. I’ve never heard him call in such distress before and from the way he was sobbing earlier, something happened to absolutely terrify him.”

“I just want to know how anyone knew that Harry would be at my Grandfather’s house.” Max said. “He’s distraught thinking that Harry was kidnapped because of him.”

“I’m more concerned with who knew that the Maddisons are Drackens.” Nasta said darkly. “Was it a coincidence? Was it just Harry they were after because of who he is and what he’s done in his past? Or were they poachers who somehow knew that the Maddison family are Drackens and lay in wait for the first opportunity they could get to snatch a suspected Dracken?”

Max bit his lip. “My Dad had the same thought, but Oliver was on his own in the library, Kyra was alone in the attic and Philip was actually out in the garden, if they wanted a Maddison Dracken, why not snatch one of them? Why Harry?”

“Oliver and Philip are large men.” Draco answered gruffly. “Kyra is visibly a dominant. From what I know of these poachers, they prefer submissive Drackens. Easier to work with and easier to overpower and manhandle and Harry is obviously a submissive and he was sleeping at the time, it would have been easier to snatch him groggy and half asleep than to try and overpower an awake and alert dominant.”

Nasta’s hands clenched at the logic in that and he snarled before he could stop himself. Harry let out a soft rumble and turned in his sleep towards Blaise.

“How did he get away though?” Blaise asked softly.

“We need to ask him when he’s awake.” Max answered. “It’s very rarely that a Dracken can get away from poachers unscathed and virtually never without any sort of outside help. They know they can’t take a Dracken one on one, so they make sure they have the numbers to overcome us before they even consider approaching a Dracken.”

“How did they get off the Maddison property, with Harry, without any of us noticing them?” Nasta asked. “If Harry was calling for us, then he was awake enough to know what was happening and he was scared. We know that from his call. He would have fought them, he would have shifted and fought them, how did they fight him, overpower him and get him out of that room before the Maddison family, who were just down a few flights of stairs, reached it?”

Max groaned in frustration, but when the floo flared and a voice called out from the fireplace, he got onto his knees to talk softly, keeping the family updated on what had happened, but no one knew anything, there were more questions than answers and those questions wouldn’t start to be answered until Harry woke up.

Harry woke up slowly and he frowned as he blinked open his eyes and he was surprised to see the ceiling of his living room. It wasn’t often that he fell asleep downstairs and not in the middle of the day either, which the sun through the front window seemed to indicate. He sat up and stretched and opened his eyes to see Blaise staring at him.

“What’s the matter?” Harry asked, frowning harder as his throat was dry and sore.

“Are you alright?” Blaise asked, leaning in to nuzzle at him.

“I feel a bit fuzzy and a little sore, but otherwise I’m okay. I need a drink though.”

“Max! Harry needs tea.”

“Is Max here? I thought he’d be at Alexander’s.”

Nasta rushed in, Draco not far behind him and they held Harry tightly, Blaise squashed to him by Nasta’s unyielding arm. Max came in only moments later with tray of tea. He’d already been making the tea when Blaise had shouted to him.
“How are you feeling?” Nasta pulled back to ask.

“Fine. A bit fuzzy and sore, like I told Blaise, but otherwise I’m fine.”

“Here, this has a bit of calming draught in it.” Max said as he handed Harry a cup of his favourite honey tea. Max was an expert at making it perfectly now.

Harry looked at him a little strangely, but he drank it anyway and felt the calming effects hit him almost immediately and the built up tension in his shoulders melted away and he couldn’t hold back the pleasurable sigh as his whole body relaxed.

“With what?” Harry frowned as he lowered his tea cup.

Nasta sighed. “What’s the last thing that you remember?”

Harry pursed his lips as he thought back, the action harder than it should have been, which confused him, but he eventually found the memory he wanted. “We were at Alexander’s house, I fell asleep on Myron and then I woke up here. What’s going on?”

“You don’t remember anything that happened after you fell asleep?”

“No, I was asleep, how do you expect me to remember?” Harry deadpanned sarcastically.

“You woke up before you did just now, Harry.” Max told him gently. “You woke up at my Granddad’s. You fell asleep here after you almost killed my sisters and Sanex again.”

“Don’t tell him that!” Blaise hissed angrily as he wrapped his arms around Harry’s shoulders protectively, as if he could shield Harry from what he’d just heard, but Max had jogged something in his memory and he frowned as he explored these memories that were, as far as he could tell, from when he was in his Dracken form.
“I went feral.” He said softly. “I…I don’t…I didn’t mean it. I didn’t recognise any of them, I just…I was scared and I was so happy to be home and I thought that you’d all be here, but I only scented our children and I panicked when there were humans around them. I thought…I thought the humans were trying to hurt my babies or trying to take them from me. I couldn’t allow it.”

“We understand, Harry, everyone understands.”

“Someone attacked me. A Dracken. I bit him.”

“Cepheus. He’s going to be…fine.” Max said more than a bit strained.

Harry shook his head. “He’s not. I wanted him dead. I bit right down to the bone and still I didn’t stop, I was trying to bite his hand off and I didn’t want to let go. Oh god, what have I done?”

“It’s not your fault, Harry and Ceph might be fine. He’s got one of the Counsel’s Healer’s with him.” Max assured him.

“Do you remember what happened before you arrived at the house?” Nasta prompted.

“I was flying.” Harry nodded as he took comfort from Blaise who was still holding him. “I…I think I flew all the way here. I remember thinking that I needed to land to have a rest, but…but I was scared in case…in case I was caught up and captured when I was still away from you all.”

“Caught by whom?” Draco asked him desperately.

“The monster.” Harry replied with a swallow.

“The monster?” Draco prompted.

Harry nodded before he stopped, his stomach dropped and he felt completely empty. He flushed heavily when he realised exactly what had happened and why. He buried his face in his hands.
“I think I need a mind Healer.” He told his mates softly. “Or at the very least I need to talk to someone.”

“Talk to us.” Nasta encouraged.

“I need a professional.” Harry insisted.

“Whatever you think happened…whatever those people did to you, we’ll get through it.” Max soothed him.

“That’s just the point, no one did anything to me.” Harry whispered. “It was all me. This is my fault and I need help or it’s going to happen again.”

“What…what do you mean, Harry?”

“I had a nightmare.” Harry admitted bitterly. “Everything that’s happened…it stemmed from one nightmare.”

“A nightmare?” Max asked incredulously, his anger flaring up. “My Uncle Cepheus is going to die over a goddamned nightmare?!”

Harry flinched and clenched his hands together. “I said that I didn’t mean to do it.”

“Do you think that’s going to matter at all to Cepheus?!”

“Max, stop it.” Nasta ordered harshly.

Max’s jaw clamped shut with the full order from his top dominant, but he growled instead, turned on his heel and then stormed over to the fireplace. He threw a handful of floo powder into the flames and then left them.

“He’s just upset over Evelyn dying.” Blaise insisted, holding him tighter, his fingers digging almost painfully into his shoulders.
Harry shook his head. “I need help. These nightmares are getting worse and if I did all of this from one nightmare, then what happens the next time I have one? Will I hurt you the next time? Myself? What if I hurt our children?! I can’t live like this. I need help…immediately.”

“Can you talk to us first?” Nasta asked him. “I just want what’s best for you, I want to help you; I want to understand what happened. What monster were you talking about?”

“The monster from my nightmare.” Harry told him ashamedly. “I thought it was actually real and I panicked. I actually believed that it was real even after I had woken up, Nasta!”

“What did it look like?”

“Like all of my fears rolled into one.” Harry explained. “It had strange legs, in a dress that I think I saw at the last Dracken meeting; it had my Uncle’s upper body and Voldemort’s head. But it…Leolin’s face was in its chest, like he’d been sucked into the body of the monster. It’s getting worse, Nasta, I need help. I thought it was real, I actually, honestly thought that that thing was real and I completely lost my mind and the ability to think rationally. I destroyed the room that I was in because I actually believed that there were no windows in the house, I believed that I was trapped there like I was in my nightmare and I went bat shit crazy because of it.”

“You were scared, Harry, people believe all sorts of things when they’re scared. You aren’t going crazy.”

“I’ve lost Max! He’s gone! What else am I supposed to think?”

“You haven’t lost him. He’s grieving.”

“They’re all going to hate me for attacking Cepheus, I know it, I do, I hate myself for it.”

“Harry, Cepheus is a fifty-seven year old man, he knew you would attack him as soon as he touched you, but still he did it.”

“Because I was going to kill his three nieces and Sanex!” Harry shouted.
“He still knew how you would react! The both of them did!”

“Both of them?” Harry demanded, his voice lilting in panic.

Nasta sighed. “Nicodemus came over with him. They stayed at their Father’s house just in case you went back there and they were the closest when Alayla let out a distress call.”

“What…what did I do to him?”

Nasta looked uncomfortable for a moment but he sighed in defeat. “You punched him in the face, but that’s all. He’s got a broken nose, but he’s completely fine.”

“I killed his twin brother!”

“Cepheus is still alive and he’s with one of the best Dracken Healers that we have, he’s going to be fine.”

“You hope.” Harry said glumly.

Nasta seized his shoulders and shook him a little. “No, Harry. This wasn’t your fault! You were in Dracken form. We all know what happens when we’re in Dracken form. You weren’t in your right mind, you didn’t know who you were attacking, if they were friend, family or foe, if Cepheus had been an enemy and you’d hesitated then he could have killed you! You did the right thing listening to your instincts and no one can hold that against you. No one!”

“I should have had more control…”

“No. No, Harry, I will not have you pinning the blame of this on yourself! Your control is amazing for your age. You were scared, we heard it in your distress call, everyone heard that you were frightened. They knew, Harry and they knew how you would react to them before they even flooed over here.”
“Max hates me.” Harry said rubbing his eyes, trying not to let his tears fall.

“He doesn’t hate you, he’s grie…”

“If you say that once more!” Harry growled at Blaise. “He was fine with me until I told him that it was a nightmare that set me off and then he left!”

“He’ll calm down.” Nasta assured him.

Harry blinked then as realised that his hand had been absently playing with the hem of his jumper. He pressed a hand to his belly panicked as he remembered something else that had him infinitely more worried than anything else.

“Cepheus tackled me to the floor. The baby!” He cried out.

“He did what⁈!” Blaise demanded furiously before turning to Nasta. “We have to get him to the hospital!”

Nasta picked him up in his arms and before Harry could get his bearings back, Nasta had taken him through the floo and they had arrived at Saint Mungos.

“They’ll stay there won’t they?” Harry asked Nasta. “The other children…”

“They’ll stay.” Nasta nodded as he demanded to be seen by Healer Almus. The witch behind the desk looked through a book in front of her that was magically updating and tried to tell Nasta that Healer Almus was booked up, but his mate would hear nothing of it.

“I can get you an immediate appointment with Healer Morrisey…”

“I don’t want an appointment with Healer Morrisey, I want Healer Almus. Now!” Nasta hissed, releasing the pheromones that induced fear in others and Harry saw when it hit the welcome witch as she gulped hard and shifted her chair back a little.
“I…I’ll see what I can do.”

“I want it within ten minutes.” Nasta told her irrationally before he turned and sat down in the seat, right in front of the witch’s desk.

“That was horrible, Nas.” Harry told him with no real heat behind his words. He was too worried to be angry or disapproving and he trusted Nasta as his top dominant to do his all to make sure that he and the baby were safe.

“I’m not messing around with this. You are pregnant and you’ve been injured. I will have that appointment with Healer Almus no matter what it takes me to get it.”

Harry could have laughed if he wasn’t feeling so upset and miserable when a harried Healer Almus followed the nervous welcome witch into the waiting room and he almost deflated at seeing them.

“How did I know it would be you?” He shook his head. “Come on then, let’s see what you’ve gotten up to in just four weeks.”

Nasta carried him into Healer Almus’ private office, very few patients ever got an examination in the Healer’s private office, but Harry qualified for the honour.

“What’s happened then, I assume it’s the pregnancy?”

“I got tackled by a well-meaning relative because I was trying to kill four other relatives.” Harry nodded.

Healer Maximilian Almus blinked and then blinked again, before he nodded as if everything was normal and he heard such statements daily as he started moving, using a series of spells to check on him and the progressing pregnancy. Harry held himself as still as he could, letting the Healer work. He wasn’t worried about the spells, they had been created for pregnant witches and wizards and Healer Almus knew exactly what he was doing. He was a senior Healer after all and Harry trusted that he knew what he was doing and he trusted that Nasta would protect him if anything happened or threatened him and the baby.

“Well you seem to be fine and there are no adverse reactions to the pregnancy. I can do a scan if you wish.”
Harry nodded. “I think I would feel better if you looked at what little you’ll be able to see.”

Healer Almus set up the equipment and Harry grimaced as the cold gel was rubbed all over his belly. Harry squinted at the black, white and grey grainy picture on the monitor, but if he thought it had been hard to see the quintuplets, this was near enough impossible, even Healer Almus was pulling a face trying to force himself to see what was on the monitor.

“I hate doing early scans.” He grumbled good naturedly. “You have no idea how many parents I meet that come in demanding a scan when they’re three or four weeks pregnant because they want to see their babies. Do you know how difficult it is to see an embryo that small?”

Harry shook his head. “Is that what’s wrong here? I can’t see anything, but then I have a lot of problems seeing anything in scan photos.”

“I can just make out the sac surrounding the baby and I can just about see a heart beating, if I’m seeing things right though, then this is a second heart right here.”

“That means two babies, doesn’t it?” Harry asked curiously.

“That means twins, yes. I can’t see any evidence of any more hearts, so it looks like it might be just the two…but if you could wiggle onto your side for me…that’s it.”

Harry twisted onto his left side and Healer Almus dug the transducer as deep into his body as he could. He did the same to his other side before digging it back into his abdomen.

“No, I’d say definitely two, but we’ll have a better idea of if that is accurate or not in another couple of weeks and from what I can see, these two are fine. Oh, there’s the one heart, beating strong.” He said as he pointed out a throbbing white blob that was no bigger than the nib of a quill.

“Where’s the second heart?” Harry asked, leaning up on his arms to see the screen better.

“It could be that we just can’t find it, Harry, I assure you that my spells told me that nothing is wrong inside of you and it would have picked up a dead embryo.”
Harry nodded and calmed himself. “So nothing is wrong and the tackle to the floor didn’t hurt the babies?”

“No, you and your maybe twins are fine.”

Harry smiled and let out a sigh of relief.

“Five months to go and then these two will be out, but first I need to survive two funerals, Christmas and three birthdays, one of those for quintuplets.”

“I would advise you to go slow for a week or two, just in case. Dracken pregnancies are delicate from what I’ve learnt, I’ve been reading so much and learning from other Dracken Healers and from what I’ve been told, you’re lucky that you aren’t just a few more weeks along or you could have had a miscarriage. So take it easy for a bit and rest when you can.”

Harry nodded his understanding and then Nasta helped him wipe off his stomach and pull his shirt back down and then they were thanking the Healer for his time and making their way back home, at least Harry could tell them now that he wasn’t having another set of quintuplets, even if his pregnancy didn’t stay with twins.

Max stayed away from all of them for the next two days and nights, this would be the third day and he was sleeping over at Alexander’s with most of his Aunts and Uncles and a hoard of his cousins and Harry was feeling more and more unhappy about it the longer it went on.

Cepheus was going to live according to Nasta, who had heard it from Aneirin who had heard it from Myron as apparently none of the Maddisons wanted to come near him, even Aneirin was keeping his distance, yet he understood. He’d tried to kill Sanex again, Myron and Richard’s three human daughters had been separated from him by Sanex, another human, and he’d almost killed Cepheus and he had broken Nicodemus’ nose. He was surprised the Maddison family hadn’t launched a lynch mob after him for what he’d done to their family, no, he could very well understand their behaviour towards him, but Max was his mate, one of his dominant mates and regardless of what he’d done he should have been here, he didn’t have to speak to him or even look at him, Harry would even stay in a separate room if it helped, but he should have been here for the sake of their children if nothing else. They knew that something was wrong and they missed their Daddy Max and it broke his heart having to tell them that Daddy Max wasn’t here every time they looked around and asked for him.

Harry held Calix on his lap and tried to get him to swallow a small syringe of medicine, but his fever red face was screwed up with his crying and he pushed away anything that went near his mouth. Harry felt ready to cry himself, but he swallowed it back down and carried on trying to comfort a fevered Calix. The last thing that his son needed was to see his Mother crying right now, even if it was the only thing that he felt like doing in that moment.

It didn’t help that he was on his own either. Nasta had been called into work urgently just before lunch as one of the female dragons had just suddenly turned and started killing and maiming her juvenile offspring, the keepers were trying to save as many of them as possible and they needed as many hands as they could get as the juvenile dragons were attacking the well-meaning keepers as their mother attacked them and the keepers. Draco was on a planned visit to Malfoy Manor with Farren and Regan and Blaise had gone job hunting again. Calix had been fine that morning and none of the kids were playing up, everything had been calm and quiet and going fine, until Calix had woken from his after lunch nap with cherry red cheeks and a burning fever. He felt useless, utterly useless.

He’d put a sleeping Leolin upstairs and he hoped that was enough to spare his little son from the virus that had caught Calix, but Braiden and Tegan were crawling around the floor and without Regan to distract her, Tegan was throwing things at Braiden and trying to get close enough to hit him.

“Tegan, stop it!” He snapped, sharper than he had intended, which made him close his eyes as Calix’s cries picked up another pitch.

He’d contemplated sending out a weak, non-urgent distress call, but the only mate who was free was Max and at the moment, Harry wasn’t sure that Max would come and he didn’t want to feel the pain that he knew he would when Max didn’t come at his call. He didn’t want to give anyone any more ammunition to use against him either when they found out that he’d given a distress call because he couldn’t cope with his own children. He felt useless enough without that.

He swallowed the lump in his throat and blinked away the tears. He redoubled his efforts to get the medicine into Calix and he actually managed to do it when Calix threw his head back to cry, his arms flinging out to the sides, which gave Harry the opening he’d been waiting for to get the syringe into Calix’s mouth and depress the plunger, finally getting the potion into Calix’s little tummy. Calix cried harder.

“I know it tastes horrible, Calix, but it’ll help you, I promise.”

Harry offered Calix a bottle and his fifth born son turned his head away and cried until he was very nearly sick, which would have brought the potion straight back up and he would be back to where he started.

Harry got him up onto his shoulder and rubbed his back softly to calm him down, walking around the room with him as he moved Tegan away from Braiden on every other circuit of the room.

“Tegan, I'll put you in the playpen in a minute, stop trying to hit your brother!”
Calix drifted off into a fitful sleep and Harry carefully eased him down into a travel cot and covered him over.

He dealt with Tegan and used the sides of the playpen to separate them off from one another, so that Braiden could play on one side of the room happily and Tegan could play on the other, unable to reach, and therefore hurt, Braiden.

He went up to check on Leolin, who had been very quiet while he was dealing with Calix, only for his heart to stop at the sight of cherry red cheeks on his pale, unmoving baby.

He snatched him up and rushed down the stairs. He all be ripped the potion’s case apart looking for the infant fever reducer that he’d given to Calix, before remembering that Leolin couldn’t take it just as his hand closed around the small dosage vial. He ran to the living room and fell to his knees in front of the fire and he floo called Saint Mungos and Healer Cole, who had given him his personal and professional floo addresses when Leolin had been born. He explained as best as he could to the man, but he was so deathly afraid for his little son that he couldn’t stop the tears or the warbling of his words.

“Can you come through right now? He needs to be seen immediately.”

“Give me a minute, I have three other babies, one of them has the same fever I think.”

“Bring that baby with you, but try not to infect the other two.”

Harry nodded miserably. “I’ll need to get a babysitter; I’ll be over with them both as soon as I can.”

Healer Cole nodded and severed the call and Harry immediately called Mrs Weasley. He explained as quickly as he could and she dashed right on over and took charge of Tegan and Braiden as Harry packed a quick nappy bag for Calix and Leolin.

“Where are your lovers?” Mrs Weasley demanded angrily. “They should be here with you.”

“I…Nasta’s in work, Blaise is job hunting, Draco’s got Regan and Farren at his parents and Max isn’t speaking to me at the moment. I’ll be back as soon as I can, I promise, I just…I need to get them to the hospital.”

“I more than understand, I’ll stay here all night if I have to, dear, just get them to the hospital and keep me updated if you can.”
Harry nodded and then he was gone. He flooed directly into Healer Cole’s office, who rushed him away immediately into another room.

Leolin was taken straight from him and Harry clutched Calix tightly for comfort, wondering how this had happened, how he could have been so careless just because he was feeling upset. His little Leolin could die from this and he felt sick and shocky.

The door burst open and Healer Almus rushed into the room looking panicked.

“I got your message, what’s the…Harry?”

“Cal…Calix got a fever and he…he passed it to Leolin.” Harry huffed out.

“Let me take Calix and have a look at him while Healer Cole see’s to Leolin, where are your lovers?”

Harry couldn’t speak anymore, he just shook his head.

“Come on, Harry, let’s see to Calix.”

Harry was pulled from the room and he felt torn. He wanted Calix seen to, but he didn’t want to leave Leolin, who was in a quarantined area he saw as he was led out of the room.

“There’s nothing you can do hovering over Leolin.” Healer Almus told him firmly. “Come with me and we’ll look at Calix, the less people around Leolin at the moment the better.”

Harry nodded, but he didn’t feel any better and he felt his chin wobbling with the urge to cry, but he bit his lip and took Calix into a different room down the corridor and he watched as the Healer checked him over and settled him down in a tiny bed with sides.

He felt terrible and his throat ached to release a distress call so much that he trilled softly. Healer Almus looked at him sharply but Harry shook his head.

“Dracken thing. I’m calling my mates and hoping they’ll come.”
Harry was forced to wait outside the room then as Healer Almus examined Calix and he had resorted to pacing the corridor agitatedly in tight, dizzying circles, wringing his hands and playing over the afternoon and everything that he could and should have done to prevent this from happening in the first place. He was worried about his sons, he was so terrified that he felt like he could vomit and he hadn’t even seen Leolin since he’d brought him in fifteen minutes ago. He couldn’t believe that it had only been fifteen minutes, it felt like hours had passed, it felt like time was making a mockery of him and he yanked on two fistfuls of his hair harshly, why was this happening?

It took ten minutes before Nasta, sweat soaked, soot covered and his tee-shirt missing came barrelling down the corridor to meet him.

“I came straight from work when I realised that your call came from the hospital, what happened?! Are you alright? Is it the twins?”

“It’s Calix and Leolin! They have a fever!”

“Leolin has a fever?” Nasta asked, his eyes widening in panic and fear.

Harry nodded. “Calix got it first, right after his nap and I separated them straight away, but it wasn’t soon enough, when I went to check on Leolin he had the same cherry red cheeks as Calix. I brought him right here after I called Molly to watch Tegan and Braiden. I called out for you shortly after I arrived.”

Nasta held him tightly and placed a kiss on his forehead. Blaise arrived moments later and Nasta filled him in, then Draco arrived and Nasta filled him in too and then they were finally allowed in to see Calix, who was sleeping peacefully in just a nappy, though he was still fever flushed.

“He’s going to be fine.” Healer Almus assured them. “He’s got bronchiolitis, he’s just a little fevered and a bit congested, though he is thoroughly miserable about it. You reacted very quickly in getting the potion into him, Harry, he’s already getting better, but it’s a very bad virus and it could have been so much worse if left undetected for a few more hours.”

“What about Leolin?” Draco demanded.

“I’ll see what I can find out, but it would be best if you didn’t see him just yet.”

Harry shivered and hunched his shoulders up as he turned to smooth out Calix’s hair. Max hadn’t come. Blaise seemed to be thinking the same thing as he kissed Harry’s cheek and touched Calix’s “I’ll be right back.”

“Where are you going?” Draco demanded. “Two of our children are in the hospital, you can’t leave now! What are you thinking?!”

“I’m thinking that Max needs to be here. He should be here!” Blaise hissed as he turned and left.

Blaise stormed out of the hospital and flooed right over to the Maddison’s house. He was staying at Alexander’s still as the whole family were grieving and Max still wasn’t speaking to his Mother, or at least he hadn’t been when he’d last heard from Max, but Ashleigh was sat on the settee when he arrived, though no one was talking to her, she tried to talk to him when she saw him, but he walked right past her angrily.

He stormed through the house to where he smelt Max the most strongly, he found him sat at the kitchen table with what looked like half his family, Blaise noted that a pale, sick looking Cepheus was also there.

Blaise pulled Max away from the table and he looked at his lover, whose eyes widened and the smile on his face slipped just as Blaise brought his fist down into his stupid mouth.

“What the fuck was that for?!” Max shouted loudly, jumping to his feet while simultaneously wiping away a smear of blood from his lip.

“You ignored Harry’s distress call you bastard!” Blaise screamed at him, his French accent thickening. “How dare you ignore a distress call from our submissive mate, our pregnant submissive mate. You’re supposed to care for him and drop everything and anything and go to him when he calls! I left in the middle of an interview when he called for me, an interview that was going wonderfully well, but he called and I ran to him, as we’re all supposed to!”

“I didn’t think that he’d want to see me when I’m in such a mood.” Max said softly. “His call wasn’t distressed; I thought he was just calling to get me to go back.”

“Calix and Leolin are in the hospital you selfish prick, he couldn’t call any louder than he did or the humans would have heard him! Calix, your own son, has bronchiolitis and Leolin is in an isolation ward and he could actually die but you’re too selfish to care!” Blaise yelled as loudly as he could, before turning and leaving as quickly as he’d come.
He rushed through the hospital, but Max was following just half a step behind him, demanding answers and Blaise ignored him until they reached the room where Calix was, Harry was crying silently by his bedside, holding a tiny hand.

“What the hell happened?”

“Get out!” Draco hissed.

“I want to know what happened!”

“And we needed you with us for the past three days!” Blaise told him angrily. “Yet you were nowhere to be found!”

“Why are Calix and Leolin in the hospital?” Max asked, sounding terrified.

“Calix has a bad viral infection and he got a fever from fighting the virus. Leolin caught it from him before I could separate them.” Harry said softly, not taking his eyes from Calix.

“Where’s Leolin, why isn’t he here?”

“He’s being kept in quarantine, we haven’t...haven’t been allowed to see him yet.” Harry said, his voice breaking.

“I am so sorry.” Max said with a nervous swallow.

“It’s fine, now go away.” Harry said quietly.

“I...I can’t leave!” Max said shocked that all of his mates seemed to be suggesting the same.

“You were happy to leave them for the last three days!” Harry stood to hiss at him. “You didn’t give a shit what it would do to them, you didn’t care when Braiden turned around and asked us where ‘Dada Ma’ was yesterday! You didn’t even come to visit them because you were so busy wrapped up in your own little world! You can be angry at me all you damn well want to, but why would you
“I’m not angry with you!” Max said. “I just… I needed to get my head straight. I didn’t mean to take it out on the kids.”

“Well you did.” Blaise snapped. “You should have been home with Harry and the kids today, you should have been there when Harry found Calix and Leolin fevered, he had to waste time floo calling someone to babysit before he brought Calix and Leolin here. Leolin could die, Max!”

“Don’t.” Harry warbled out, shaking his head. “I can’t hear you say things like that…I can’t…I can’t think that my little baby is going to die. Please, I can’t.”

Nasta wrapped his arms around Harry’s shoulders and bent to kiss his head, standing tall and offering silent comfort without any empty promises or words.

“We all rushed from where we were to get to Harry, you didn’t even move a muscle.” Blaise snarled. “Nasta rushed from a disaster at work to get here! But you wouldn’t have known that he was even called into work, would you, because you weren’t there. He injured himself to get here!” He hissed referring to the hideous burn that Nasta had on his back that he’d gotten when he’d turned his back on the dragon and just ran when he’d heard the call.

“I didn’t…I’m sorry, I’ve been so absorbed with my grandmother’s death that I forgot everything else and then the whole thing with Uncle Ceph…”

“I know your family hate me now, but what does that have to do with you not coming to see your own children?!”

“My family don’t hate you!” Max said surprised. “Cepheus is even joking about the force of your bite and he asked me how you give blow jobs. My Dad almost put him back on bed rest.”

Harry shook his head and sat back down, turning back to Calix.

“Calix is your biological son; Farren is your biological son. You claim that Braiden, Tegan, Regan and Leolin are like your own sons and daughter, yet you were happy to leave them for three days and two nights. I can’t bear to be apart from them for a few hours. They were asking for you, calling for you, Regan even went looking for you, we found him crawling around the kitchen as if you’d be hiding in there. How did you think they would take you just upping and leaving them?”

“I didn’t mean to.” Max said and Harry could hear the tears falling in his voice.

“Did you even think of them? Have you thought of them even once for the past three days?”

“Oh course I did! I thought of them all the time!”

“Then why didn’t you come and see them!” Draco demanded.

“I didn’t think you’d want to see me. Not after my harsh words. I didn’t mean them, I know you’ve been suffering badly with your nightmares, I’d just lost my great-grandmother and I couldn’t bear the thought of losing an Uncle too, not so close together.”

“You shouldn’t have let that stop you from seeing your children.” Harry told him calmly. “Even if I hated all four of you and couldn’t stand to be on the same ground space that you had stood on, I would still put up with it for a mere hour with my children.”

“Is this a bad time?” An orderly in her pale yellow robes asked as she looked from Harry to Max and then back.

“What do you want?” Blaise asked her, too tired to even make the statement sound rude.

“I…I’m doing my rounds of this floor, I’ll just need to check…Calix over.” She said as she looked at the name on the clipboard.

Harry nodded and the poor orderly checked Calix over while dealing with five, stony silent men who were watching her every move critically, almost glaring at her as she touched their sick son. She recorded her findings on the clipboard; both the one in her hands and the one at the end of Calix’s little bed.

“He’s doing well and he’s started to show an improvement.” She told them before leaving the room very quickly.
Harry huddled up in his own skin as he controlled the shiver that wanted to wrack his whole body. Nasta noticed and wrapped his arms back around him.

“He’ll be alright, love. He’s improving already.”

“What about Leolin?” Harry asked him quietly. “We haven’t heard anything.”

“No news is good news.” Draco encouraged him.

“I just can’t help thinking that he’s in a different room, all alone and I can’t go and see him, I can’t comfort him, I can’t hold him!” Harry said trying to hold back the tears that wanted to fall.

“It’s going to be alright, Harry.” Max said softly.

“Are you still here?” Blaise hissed poisonously.

“I’m not going anywhere! Calix and Leolin are my children too, I have as much right to be here as you!”

“Glad to hear it.” Draco sneered. “Too bad you didn’t remember that three days ago.”

“I’ve said I’m sorry. How much blood do you want?”

“How much do you currently have in your body?” Blaise asked him spitefully.

“You can’t get blood from stone.” Harry put in softly.

“Please, I am sorry. I just wasn’t thinking. I swear I never meant for this to happen or for any of what I’ve done to come across this way.”
“How did you think we’d take you abandoning us, your own mates, and the kids? Your own children!” Draco demanded.

“Enough.” Nasta cut in gently, but firmly. “This isn’t the time or the place. We’ll do this later, at home; we can’t forget that we are in public. Anyone can walk in on us at any time and if we shout then they’ll hear us.”

Calix squirmed in his bed and as one; all eyes were upon him as he blinked open his jet black eyes and squinted up at them, lifting his hands to scrub at them tiredly.

“Mama.”

“I’m right here, Calix, love. I’m right here.” Harry murmured softly as he sat forward into Calix’s line of vision.

“Mama ba.” Calix told him as he squirmed on his back and rubbed his arm over his face and head in obvious discomfort.

“I know you feel bad, Calix, but you’re in the hospital, the hospital is going to make you all better.”

“Dum.”

“Did he just call you dumb?” Blaise chuckled.

Harry glared at him. “No he didn’t. He’s asking for his dummy. I’m not sure I picked it up, I think it’s on the mantelpiece.” Harry said panicked as he dug through the nappy bag that he’d brought with him, practically tearing it to pieces to find Calix what he wanted.

“I’ll go and get it.” Max offered immediately.

“He wants the green one, the darker one, he likes that one the best.” Harry gushed out. “Hurry!”

Max sped out of the room and Harry tried to distract Calix by offering him a bottle, him having refused his earlier feed.

“Dum.” Calix whined as he pushed the bottle away.

“I know, love; Daddy Max is going to get it now.”

“Dada ma.”

“Yes, love, he’s here too. He’ll be right back with your dummy.”

It took Max what seemed like an age to come back and Harry was dancing on eggshells by the time he darted back into the hospital room, Calix’s favourite green dummy in hand.

Harry took it from him and waved it in front of Calix, who grinned weakly when he saw it, but still lifted a pale hand to reach for it. Harry placed it to his lips and watched as Calix took it into his mouth and started slowly sucking on it, his eyes closing immediately, his hand dropping back to the bed.

“You took your sweet time.” Draco growled, not willing to give an inch.

“Everyone’s congregated at ours to wait for news, I updated them on what was happening and then Braiden wanted a hug and Farren and Tegan and Regan wanted one after him. The pale green dummy was on the mantelpiece, the darker one was on the kitchen counter.”

Harry made an angry noise and pulled at his already stuck out hair. He looked like a mad man. “Of course it was! I left it there after Calix’s nap when I rushed to get the fever reducer! I took it from his mouth and left it on the side. I’m sorry.”

“It’s fine, Harry, it took me minutes to find it, it’s fine.” Max assured him quickly.

“Did…did anyone say anything?” Harry asked nervously.

“What do you mean?” Max asked.
“I think that Harry might be worried that your family are blaming him for Leolin and Calix getting sick.” Nasta put in perceptively.

Harry nodded. “I’ve been…inattentive in the last few days. I’ve been thinking more of myself and my feelings than that of my children and now this has happened and it’s all my…”

“Stop.” Blaise hissed at him. “You have not once been inattentive to them. Your first thought was always and will always be for them, we all know that, Harry. You’re hurting and the meeting with that mind Healer scrambled you up a bit. This is a virus, it’s airborne and they didn’t catch it through any imagined inattentiveness, they were going to get it regardless of anything that we could have done, even if we’d known about it. They have probably had it for days before the fever started, or at least Calix would have, I’m not sure how long it would take to show up in Leolin.” He added looking questioningly to Nasta.

Their oldest mate shook his head. “It would have shown up almost immediately in Leolin the moment that he got it. He has next to no immune system, what little he has would start to fight the virus, giving him the fever, but the virus would have been far too strong and would have overwhelmed his antibodies in minutes, half an hour at most. That he was still fever flushed when he was admitted to the hospital is a good sign, he wasn’t yet overwhelmed by the virus and then the Healers would have dived in to help him fight it off with potions, we’ve given him the best chance of survival that we could.”

“I should have noticed that Calix was sick sooner!” Harry cried, not yet willing to forgive himself. “He was quiet during lunch, but he ate everything so I didn’t look into it, I thought he was just missing Max. He was right next to Leolin throughout lunch; his fever hit him after his nap a few hours later.”

“It’s not your fault and no one blames you, especially not my family.” Max told him. “They’re worried, not accusing you behind your back; they know things like this can happen at a moment’s notice.”

Harry nodded, feeling a little more reassured. “I just don’t want this to be happening, please tell me that this is another nightmare.”

“It’s not, Mio Amore, I’m sorry.” Blaise said, coming to nuzzle him.

“You…you said that you had an appointment with a mind Healer, I didn’t know.” Max said softly.
“You weren’t there to know!” Draco snarled.

“I’m getting therapy for my nightmares.” Harry told Max, ignoring Blaise and Draco. “I’m talking it all out with my mind Healer, my fears, my dreams, my memories. Though apparently when Myron carried me upstairs to the bedroom was I partially awake. The Healer told me that my dream emulated where I was because I was awake enough to see it, but not conscious enough to take it in, so I knew where I was enough to visualise it, but I didn’t recognise it or see it as familiar. All the dark fabric covering the walls, the matching floor length curtains covering the windows, I remembered them in my nightmare, only it made it seem like there were no windows, which made me feel trapped, so when I woke up and saw the room from my nightmare, lying on the bed from my nightmare and in a room covered with dark fabrics with no windows, I lost my mind.”

“When…when’s your next appointment?”

“In a few days. We’re going to talk about how I was treated after I killed Voldemort and dig out all the festering pain left from having to shut it all up inside due to being in the media limelight instead of letting my thoughts and feelings come out at the time.”

“I…I want to be there for you, Harry, please let me.”

“I haven’t stopped you from being anywhere, Max; you made that decision on your own.” Harry told him.

Max nodded and came to hold him. Harry let him. “I’ll make this up to you. I swear.”

“It’s not me you have to make it up to, it’s the kids and at the moment we could lose one of them.” Harry told him seriously. “I’m not exaggerating just to make you feel bad when I say that they missed you a lot and all of them have been calling for you. Calix called for you just now when he woke up, none of the others, just you when you left to get his dummy. How could you punish them so much?”

“I didn’t…I didn’t think, I’ve been trying not to think for the past few days, but I missed them terribly, I missed you too, and those three even though none of you are happy with me, I’ve spent most of my time crying on my own. My Grandmother has been there for me through every step and milestone that I’ve taken in my life and it’s hard to believe that she’s gone. It was so sudden and I just can’t wrap my head around it. I didn’t want you or the kids to see me sobbing or just breaking down randomly throughout the day.”
“We’re your mates!” Harry told him. “We want to help you through this, we wanted to be there for you, no matter what happened or how you felt or how you reacted, we wanted to be there for you, we wanted to comfort you and hold you and tell you that it would pass and everything would turn out fine, but you didn’t even give us the chance to try!”

“I don’t like anyone seeing me like that, I feel like I have to hide it, how can I be a dominant if I’m the one having a break down?”

Harry blinked at that and then he panicked and rolled up Max’s sleeves and checked his arms carefully, with eyes, fingers and by scent.

“What’s the matter? What is it?” Max asked confusedly.

“Your Uncle Xerxes told me something similar when I was talking to him, he told me that he felt useless and like he couldn’t take care of his mate if he was the one crying, so he used to get his emotional release by using a cutting spell on his upper arms.”

Max looked thoroughly shell shocked. “Uncle Xerxes used to cut himself?!”

Harry nodded. “He felt like it was the only way that he could deal with it at the time, he went to get himself help and then Alexander found out and wiped the floor with him apparently, you echoed pretty much exactly how he said he was feeling, I had to check.”

“I haven’t been staying away because I’m hurting myself, I promise.” Max told him, cuddling him tightly.

“Will you come back to us then?” Harry asked.

“If you’ll still have me there.”

“I told you, it wasn’t my choice to keep you away, you did that yourself.”

“But do you want me back?”
“I never wanted you to leave and I’d be happy to have you back.”

Max picked him up out of the chair he was sat on and then sat on it himself and held Harry on his lap, holding him and inhaling his scent.

“You’ve missed so much.” Nasta told him.

“It’s been three days, how much could I have missed?” Max asked dumbfounded.

“I found out that I’m having twins.” Harry told him with a smile.

“Your scan isn’t for another two weeks. The twenty-fourth.” Max said, looking upset that he’d missed it and worried that perhaps he’d gotten the wrong date.

Harry sighed. “Cepheus tackled me to the floor in his attempt to save Sanex, Julinda, Talia and Alayla. Nasta took me for a scan to make sure that everything was alright and that I wasn’t having a miscarriage.”

“He did what?” Max growled as his hand fell protectively to his belly.

“Why do you think I tried to bite his hand off instead of just clawing him up? He tackled me to the floor with that hand, that and it was closer to my mouth than his neck.”

“I’ll kill him!”

“I think he’s been punished enough.” Harry said darkly. “I almost did kill him.”

“He knew you were pregnant! He knew better!” Max snarled.

“You’re missing the big deal here, we have twins! Not another set of quintuplets, not quadruplets, not even triplets. Twins. Though the Healer did warn me that they might not stay twins.”
“How can they not stay twins?” Draco asked with a frown.

“Vanishing twin syndrome.” Nasta told him. “Where one isn’t viable or something happens, if they’re under ten weeks then sometimes the one twin is absorbed by the other or by the Mother. So even though the scan showed twins at seven weeks, doesn’t mean we’ll end up with twins. The next scan, which is on the twenty-fourth, will show us a better picture more clearly of what we’re having.”

“What else did I miss? Was it just the mind Healer and finding out about the twins?”

“Tegan learnt to say pea. Though she says it like quadruple ‘E’ so it comes out more like peepee, but she means the vegetable. We tried her on some mashed peas the day before yesterday and coaxed her to say it and that’s what she came out with.”

“She likes peas?” Max asked softly.

Harry nodded. “Calix likes them too, but Regan absolutely hates them. Oh and we gave them some avocado, I think we may have actually found a food that Farren does not like.”

Max smiled at that. “I can’t believe I stayed away for so long. I wasn’t thinking.”

“So you’ve said.” Draco huffed.

“Draco, please. This is the wrong time and the wrong place. We’re trying here.” Harry pleaded.

Draco scowled but he nodded curtly as he touched a little foot with the pads of three fingers.

“I hate this.” The blond muttered.

“I know.” Harry nodded.
Hours passed in quiet conversation, the orderly in her yellow over robes and her clipboard came in to check on Calix again and she smiled and told them that he was improving steadily.

“He should be showing visible improvements soon, the potions are doing their job.” She said as she marked down the improvements on both clipboards.

“Can you…can you tell us anything about our other son, Leolin?”

“Leolin?” She questioned as she looked down the names on her clipboard.

“Leolin Siorus Potter.” Harry elaborated.

“I…I don’t have him on my rounds. Hold on one moment, I’ll be right back, I’ll ask the head nurse for you immediately.”

Harry shared a look with his mates. He did not like that he hadn’t heard anything and now an orderly was saying that he wasn’t here, he was in a room just down the corridor to his knowledge.

The orderly, bless her, came back quickly.

“I don’t have him on my rounds, but he’s on our check in book. He’s in quarantine so no access is allowed to him except by two cleared Healers. Healer Cole and Healer Almus are both in the room with him, they haven’t come out yet to update us, I could try and get one of their attention to ask, if you’d like.”

“I’d like an update, but I’d rather not interrupt.” Harry said with a grimace. “I’d rather let them both work.”

The orderly nodded. “I’ll let you know as soon as I know anything if a Healer doesn’t do so first.”

“Thank you.” Harry said gratefully and almost sagged into Max.

“That would be great, thank you.” Nasta replied with a nod.

The orderly left them and they stayed in silence, wondering what it meant that Leolin was being seen to by two experienced, senior Healers and they hadn’t come out of his room once for hours.

The orderly came back with a tray of tea, a jug of milk, packets of sugar and even a large teapot and a pile of packaged sandwiches and a pack of biscuits.

“Thank you so much.” Harry said.

“I’ll come back to check on Calix in a few hours and again, I’ll let you know as soon as we hear anything about Leolin.”

Harry nodded and then they were left alone again as Draco set everyone’s tea up more for something to do with his hands than anything and he handed the cups out to them, though Blaise took his tea black with no sugar, so he just picked up a cup and drank after it was made.

They ate on automatic, the sandwiches first and then the biscuits. They spoke quietly and Calix woke up once more because he was wet and Harry dealt with him quickly as Max kept him distracted, their little boy giggling tiredly and he was visibly happy to see his Daddy Max again as he babbled ‘Dada ma’ over and over again in a croaked whisper they had never before heard from any of their children. Their little son was so exhausted and he’d been sleeping for most of the day, it was heart wrenching to see him, to hear him so tired when he was usually so energetic.

They spent the night in the hospital; Blaise slipped home to tell everyone congregated there that they were going to be in overnight and they still hadn’t heard anything about Leolin, but that Calix was doing better.

He came back with more nappies and two new bottles for Calix and he had picked up the blanket from Calix’s cot to help make him feel more at home and his favourite soft toy, which had been given to Braiden last Christmas.

“I hate this.” Harry growled.

“He’s going to be fine.” Nasta soothed. No one voiced the thought that Leolin might not be, they just couldn’t handle those sorts of thoughts being said out loud, they couldn’t think that their baby boy might be snatched from them after such little time spent with him. It didn’t bear thinking about.
Harry woke up stiff backed and aching. He grimaced and wondered why he felt this way when the memories of the day before slammed into him.

He snapped his head to the little hospital bed in panic and he found Calix sat up and playing quietly with his favourite stuffed dinosaur teddy. He let out a loud, shaky sigh which drew his son’s attention.

“Mama.” Calix called out when he saw that Harry was awake.

“Oh baby, how are you?” Harry said softly as he picked his little boy up and cradled him, feeling his forehead consideringly.

Nasta had transfigured their sandwich packets into temporary beds for them last night to sleep on when three in the morning came and there was still no news about Leolin. He wanted to go and hammer on the door to Leolin’s room and demand answers, but then he’d thought about what could happen if he disturbed the Healers and his disturbance became the difference between life and death for Leolin and he stayed in his seat.

“Baba go.” Calix asked, patting his face.

“Your brother’s and sister are at home love, you’re in the hospital to make you feel better.”

“Dada ma.”

“Daddy Max is here too.” Harry turned and pointed out a sleeping Max to Calix who screeched… loudly.

His mates were awake like a shot, which made Calix happy as he reached out for Max happily, who took him gently and cradled him.

“Dada ma!”

“Hi baby. I missed you so much.” Max said almost tearfully as he squeezed Calix firmly, but not tightly.
Calix babbled to Max then, odd words, sounds and he went from almost whispering one moment to almost shouting the next as he bashed around his stuffed dinosaur.

Harry offered him a bottle but he looked at it confusedly and the looked around him and then he frowned.

“I think he’s confused as to why it’s daytime, but he’s getting a bottle. It’s usually in the evenings when he has a bottle; he has his cereal in the morning.” Nasta told them.

“You need to eat, Calix, you need your strength, just one bottle, I promise.” Harry encouraged as he scooped Calix back up into the crook of his one arm and pressed the bottle teat into his mouth.

Calix sucked and swallowed happily enough, but halfway through he slowed down and his eyes started drooping, he fought the sleep, but it came as no surprise when he finally lost his battle and dropped back off to sleep. His little body too exhausted to fight for long when it was still fighting the virus on the inside.

Harry sighed and put him down on the bed, covering him over with his blanket and making sure his stuffed dinosaur was cuddled up close to him for comfort.

“I’m going to find the bathroom a minute.” Harry explained as he stood up and stretched.

“Thank fuck, I really, really need to go, but I didn’t want to leave.” Max explained as he stood and then groaned, holding himself through his jeans.

Harry laughed at him. “That’s ridiculous, you should have just gone.”

They left and went to find the bathroom, which was around the corner from their room. They washed their faces in the sink while they were at it too and found a waiting room with a kettle and tea bags.

They made Blaise a cup of coffee while they were at it, anything to keep them all happy in this situation.

“Has there been any news on Leolin?” Harry asked the nurse, in his pale blue robes, at the desk on their way back.

“The child’s name?” He asked them.
“Leolin Siorus Potter.”

He did a double take at him then and seemed more interested in the search than before. Harry didn’t like him, he wanted the kind orderly from last night back, but he knew logically that her shift would have ended by now.

“There’s still no news and the Healers with him have not come out nor have they been relieved by any colleagues. What did you do to him?”

Harry’s mouth dropped open.

“How dare you insinuate that we would do anything to our child!” Max growled dangerously.

Max hurried Harry away before either of them could shift and attack the man in public, but they were both shaking in temper. They went back into the room that held Calix and Nasta rushed to them the moment he saw them.

“What is it? Is it Leolin, did you hear anything?”

“No, that fucking nurse at the desk asked us what we did to Leolin.” Max growled.

“But we haven’t done anything to him.” Blaise replied with a frown.

“Exactly!” Harry burst out furiously, his temper rising. “He made it sound like we had and that we were the reason that he was here in the hospital. He had no right! I’m going to go claw him a new fucking hole.”

“I’ll sort him out.” Nasta assured him as he grabbed Harry around the waist and bit his neck lightly in warning, running his fingers through Harry’s hair to calm him before putting him down and he left the room after a last, soft kiss.

“I smell coffee.”
“It’s not your usual stuff, but we thought that you’d rather have coffee than more tea.” Max explained.

“This is wonderful, but I need a piss too, I think this cup will go right through me.”

“There’s a bathroom just around the far corner, we washed our faces a bit in the sink too.” Harry told him and Draco. “We could all use a splash of water.”

“Nasta needs a razor more than a wash, there has to be half an inch of stubble on him already and it’s only going to get worse the further into the day he waits.” Draco chuckled.

Harry smiled a bit at that. Nasta did look quite scruffy and rugged today. Haggard too, but Harry more than understood that one.

Nasta stormed back into the room and he calmed himself down visibly as Harry handed him his cup of tea like a peace offering. Nasta smirked at him and pulled him into another kiss.

“I sorted him out and the head nurse turned up as I was flaying him alive and she took off where I left off. I’ve been assured that he’s going to have a full disciplinary.”

“I’m going for that piss.” Blaise told them and Draco followed.

“I went before I started shouting at the nurse.” Nasta told them. “I glared at him as I went past, made him squirm a little first.”

Max chuckled and kissed Nasta’s hairy cheek. “Seriously, love, go home and shave your face. I feel like I’m kissing a carpet. Do you still have that electric one that I bought for you all those years ago?”

Nasta laughed then. “Of course not, I burnt the motor out using it twice a day for three years. I do need a shave though.” He grimaced as he scrubbed a hand over the beginnings of his beard.

“You’re the only man I know who can grow a beard in a day.” Harry smiled.
“We can’t all be baby faced and smooth like you.” Nasta teased as he pulled Harry up into a hug only to rub his beard all over his smooth cheeks. That made him laugh.

“I have more hair on my arse than Harry has on his face.” Blaise said with a grin as he walked back into the room.

Harry rolled his eyes. “Me and Draco both.” He grinned.

“Draco has to shave once in a blue moon; you don’t have to shave at all.”

Harry rolled his eyes again before sighing. “I miss the kids. This is killing me.”

“And all of us too.” Blaise assured him. “Hopefully Calix can go home today, then we just need to see what’s happening with Leolin.”

Harry bit his bottom lip nervously. “I’m worried by how long it’s taking. Healer Cole and Healer Almus haven’t even taken a break, it’s been fifteen hours. I’m really, really worried.”

“It’ll be okay, love, take this as a positive thing.” Nasta encouraged.

“How?!” Harry demanded.

“If they’re still working on him, then he’s still alive.” Nasta told them with a grimace. “Truthfully speaking, most Faerie babies would have died from a virus like this one by now. Leolin is in good hands.”

Harry swallowed and nodded. “There is that.” He allowed bitterly.

It took another few hours for an orderly to come around and check on Calix again. He was discharged now that he was better, though they’d been told that he would be a bit sluggish and a bit tired for the rest of the day, but he would start showing improvements in the next coming days.

It was a waiting game then, Draco took Calix home after he’d been discharged and left him in Granddad Myron’s capable arms and he was forced to tell the family that they still had no news on Leolin. It was destroying them all.

Draco was gone for an hour, talking to the family and catching a few quick hugs with the kids and he’d only been back at the hospital for half an hour when a ragged Healer Almus came into the waiting room they had taken up residence in after they had left Calix’s now empty room to be cleaned up, sterilised and ready for a new infant patient.

“Healer, how is he, please.” Harry begged, his nerves frayed and his hands aching from how hard he’d been twisting his fingers together.

“We’re doing all we can. We’ve had to take a break because we’ve reached the limit for energising potions.”

“How is he?” Nasta asked sharply.

“He’s alive, but not in a good way at the moment.” Healer Almus admitted sadly. “I think…I think it might be best if you come and see him now…to say goodbye.”

Harry felt his eyes widen. “No.” He denied. “No! No, this can’t be happening! This can’t happen!” He screamed.

Nasta grabbed him around his waist and picked him up, shoving his face into his neck and he held him there until Harry had breathed in enough of his calming pheromones to relax, but then the tears came and the wracking sobs shook his whole body violently.

“Come on, Harry. Let’s do this now. We need to say…we need to say goodbye.” Nasta told him, his voice breaking as he sniffed hard, trying desperately to cling onto his hard won control.

“I can’t. I can’t do it!” He sobbed.

“You’ll regret it for the rest of your life if you don’t.”

“If…if we say goodbye, it sounds…it sounds like we’re just giving up on him.” Harry said. “I won’t give up on him. Never.”
“It’s not giving up on him, love.” Nasta told him. “We’re just going to see him after waiting nineteen hours for any news about him.”

A door opened and Harry squeezed his eyes closed tighter when his mates gasped. He knew it would be bad but he felt his own gasp rip out of his throat when he opened his eyes. It was like someone had just crushed his lungs.

Leolin looked terrible. His skin was almost translucent pale, his blue spider web of thin, delicate veins showing through prominently. His eyelids were bluish-purple bruises with black bags around the sockets. He was wired up to machines, like in a Muggle hospital, then he reminded himself that excess magic couldn’t be used on magical babies, but right then and there he wouldn’t have cared if Leolin was made a squib through magical overuse, as long as it saved his life.

He was breathing too rapidly and he felt shocky as he was the first to step forward and touch one little hand, which was too small, too pale and unmoving. He didn’t like seeing his little boy like this; even his previous cherry red cheeks had gone colourless, leech of all vibrancy and signs of life. He looked grey. He looked like he was dying…or like he was already dead.

He almost choked on a sob that forced its way out and he shoved a hand over his lower face, mouth and nose both, to try to keep from making a noise. He didn’t want to wake Leolin, he needed his rest.

“It’s going to be alright, Leolin.” Harry said thickly, swallowing hard and blinking away his tears so that he could see his son clearly.

“We’ve done all that we can for him.” Healer Cole assured him and Harry spared him a glance to see that he looked worse than exhausted. “But bronchiolitis is a very serious virus for a baby of Faerie blood to get, his lungs are already underdeveloped from being born premature, he’s at a disadvantage because of his Faerie blood and the bronchiolitis virus has inflamed the small airways of his lungs. Leolin is having some very serious problems breathing on his own.”

“Is he in…is he in any pain at all?” He asked shakily. He needed to know that his baby wasn’t suffering.

“No. He’s been crying weakly on and off for half the night, he’s as exhausted as we are. He needs some sleep to recover his strength, I’m glad he’s sleeping at all with the cough he has, but he needs something to eat now. He refused any sort of milk last night, he was too distressed.”

Harry swallowed. “I could get him to eat, but which is more important for him now, sleep or food?”

“Unfortunately both.”
Harry closed his eyes so he couldn’t see his mates crowded around their son lying in a glass bassinet and hooked up to all sorts.

“How long has he been asleep?”

“An hour or so now. He hasn’t slept for any longer than two hours at a time though.”

Harry nodded and he took the bottle from Healer Cole and grabbed the only chair in the room, which had been moved well out of the way, and he placed it by the bassinet.

He tested the milk and checked it over, before he scooped up Leolin gently, watching the wires and his fragile little body.

“Leolin love, wake up baby.” Harry coaxed stroking a pale, pale cheek gently, trying to make his voice as even and calm as he could, even though his heart was beating out of his chest and he just wanted to cry his eyes out. Leolin’s skin was paper thin and felt dry and flaky. Even on his cheeks Harry could see the pattern of his veins and he could easily trace them with his eyes.

Gold eyes cracked open to scowl tiredly at him, but when Leolin saw who it was who was holding him he opened his eyes fully and he tried to smile at him, making nonsense noises, but he tired so quickly that Harry was afraid that his little boy had died in his arms at how still and silent he’d gone so quickly.

Draco even looked over his shoulder in panic, but Harry relaxed when he saw his little chest raise and fall slightly.

“Come on, love, I know you’re excited to see us, but you need something to eat right now.”

Harry got Leolin awake again and placed the bottle into his mouth and it truly was the strongest that Harry had ever seen him suck in his short life.

He couldn’t even manage a quarter of the bottle before he fell asleep again, but Healer Cole looked mightily relieved that he’d taken that much.

“That could really help him, we just couldn’t get him to drink, it seems that he wanted you to feed him, a familiar face to keep him going.”
Harry felt better at that, but he still couldn’t stop his heart from pounding, the fear from infecting his every thought. He felt sick and half crazed with the need to protect his baby, yet how could he when there was no way to protect him from what was already in his body.

He cradled Leolin as tightly as he dared; laying his lips on Leolin’s forehead and leaving them there, tears escaping from his eyes as he tried not to start sobbing, which would jostle Leolin from his much needed sleep.

“There’s nothing more you can do now.” Healer Cole told them. “Go home, get some rest, see your other children. We will floo call you immediately if anything changes, my office is just a few doors down, you could be here in moments, but there really is nothing that you can do now.”

None of them liked it, they didn’t want to leave, but they all needed a shower, they needed proper food, all they’d had in the last twenty-three or so hours had been a few cups of tea, a sandwich each and a pack of biscuits shared between them. They needed some proper sleep and Harry really wanted to cradle his five other children to him tightly. It didn’t help that they were reminded that the more people around Leolin the worse he could get and they were all dirty and needed a good wash.

“Goodbye, Leolin, we love you and we’ll be waiting for you to come back home with us soon.” Nasta told him, kissing a little cheek softly, mindful of his new beard.

Harry cried harder, but silently, as each one of his mates said goodbye to Leolin and gave him a farewell kiss. It seemed too permanent to Harry, too much like giving up, but he murmured his own goodbye, telling Leolin how much he loved him, how proud he was of him and all he’d achieved in his short life and he couldn’t breathe at all when he kissed him for a final time and laid him back in his hospital bassinet.

He covered his mouth and nose again, sobbing and trying to muffle it so that he didn’t wake his baby son and he let Nasta lead him out of the room and away from his baby. He couldn’t stand it.

They flooed home to questions, but Draco stalked off in sullen anger, Max all but ran to find a quiet place to cry in private, Blaise went straight to the top cupboard in the kitchen and grabbed a bottle of Firewhiskey and took it out into the back garden, Nasta muttered about going for a shower and a shave, which left Harry standing in the middle of the room, crying still and feeling lost.

Myron was there then, holding him and comforting him and easing him onto the settee.

“They shouldn’t have left you like that.” He growled.

“I understand, we all need to deal with this in our own way, I don’t begrudge them that. We all need to come to terms with everything.” Harry warbled out.
“What’s happened?” Aneirin asked him. He’d been crying too, or at least rubbing his eyes a lot. They were red and puffy.

“We…the Healers said…we had to say…say goodbye to him. They’ve done…they’ve done all they can for him.” Harry said shakily as he quivered like a leaf in a high wind.

He couldn’t stand it and he broke down into his hands and he cried so hard that he gave himself a headache. Myron held him tightly and Aneirin crowded him from the other side as he heard Mrs Weasley sniffling quietly, he heard some others crying and Amelle came to sit on her knees in front of him, an extraordinary feat as she was very big with baby now. She’d be nesting soon.

She wrapped her long arms around him and rubbed his back as he hiccupped and sniffed hard between Myron and Aneirin. He felt numb and like he’d been battered.

“If you need to talk it through, Harry, you know that I’ve been through this myself. I’ve lost a baby too, you can come and talk to me whenever you want to, I won’t turn you away, just please don’t shut it all up or it’ll take you ten years to heal from it like it took me. Don’t drag it out for as long as I did, Harry, your other children need you too. I didn’t have other children, I didn’t have a mate to help me, I was left alone to deal with the loss of my baby, you have mates, you have family and you have other children. It does happen sometimes, but I can tell you from experience that it gets better too.”

Harry nodded as he swiped at his tears and tried to control his huffing so that he might be able to breathe properly.

“I just…I can’t…I didn’t want to say goodbye to him. I know that sounds…sounds terrible, but it seems like…it just seems like giving…giving up on him, but Nas said that I’d regret it if I didn’t.”

“He’s probably right, Harry.” Richard said gently, not even the hint of a smile on his face. He looked old.

Harry nodded understandingly. He knew why they wanted him to say goodbye. They all thought that Leolin wasn’t going to make it, they thought that he was going to die and that he’d regret not saying goodbye to him while he had the chance, but even though he’d gone through the motions, even though he’d said goodbye to his little baby, he was never going to give up on him while he still drew breath. Never. They could get him to say goodbye every single hour of every day and he would do it, but he wouldn’t believe it, not until his sweet little Leolin drew his very last breath for the very last time. He wouldn’t believe his goodbye until then.
Chapter End Notes

A/N: I refused to post this for Christmas as I refused to ruin Christmas for you, my readers, as you can see, this chapter hits a few sore points and a lot of emotional buttons, but please remember that if it isn’t in the main fic, then it’s not set in stone, even if it is in the Scaled Bits or I’ve mentioned it on Facebook or in authors notes, it doesn’t matter because I can change my mind. I’ve said that all along, so please bear in mind that anything could happen, despite the Scaled Bits that aren’t directly linked to a specified chapter or the ones that are reminiscing of the past.

The next chapter is titled ‘Goodbye’ and may cause even more emotional distress, but from my early plans it’ll only last for half the chapter, not the whole chapter like this one, so it’ll be worse in some instances and better in others.

Don’t think that Max is going to get away with leaving his family for three days either, he’s had a slap on the wrist so far for doing it, but regardless of the situation, he shouldn’t have left and he should have come when Harry called for him, the entire purpose of a dominant Dracken is to procreated and to protect, he can’t do either if he’s not with his submissive or his offspring. So expect dominant on dominant punishment to come.

I hope you’ve all had a lovely Christmas and I’m sorry to say that I am taking a few weeks off from writing now to enjoy my own holidays, I’ll be back in the New Year with new chapters for all of my stories, though I’ll likely be on my Facebook page now and then throughout, I love my readers too much to stay away from you all for too long, but family and friends come first at this time of the year, so I’ll see you soon, take care of yourselves,

StarLight Massacre. X
Goodbye

Chapter Eighty-Four – Goodbye

Nasta couldn’t stop thinking. He cut himself twice trying to hack through the beard growth on his cheeks and chin and he gave up soon after, throwing the disposable razor as hard as he could, watching dissatisfied as the light, plastic rubbish hit the wall with a quiet sound and bounced only once on the floor.

He took out his wand and used the spell that he had become so very familiar with over the years to get rid of the hair on his face. It took twice as long as using a razor and left his skin feeling mucky, but the shaving burn that he got when using a razor wasn’t there when he had finished, so he didn’t need to use the aftershave moisturising cream.

He climbed into the shower and washed himself on automatic, his mind on the image of his youngest son in the hospital. He swallowed hard and clenched his fists tightly. He could not lose his son; he would not lose his son! He couldn’t believe that this had happened, they’d all been so careful, but in the end it hadn’t been enough.

Getting out of the shower, not even feeling the pain of the burns on his back, he dried himself off and dressed himself on automatic. He went down the stairs and into the living room, slightly annoyed that it was full of people that he just didn’t want there, but he ignored them and went to his mate.

Harry looked as bad as he felt, completely and utterly destroyed and Nasta didn’t know if it was a good sign or a bad one that Harry had stopped crying, but as he was sat listlessly on the settee and staring off into space, Nasta was more inclined to think that it was the latter. He needed a release for his emotions, a release that crying would give him, trying to bottle himself up wasn’t going to work and it wasn’t healthy.

Now more in control of himself and his overwhelming emotions than he had been when he had arrived back home, Nasta sat down and pulled Harry gently onto his lap. Harry didn’t react, it was like Nasta wasn’t even there and Harry hadn’t registered being moved at all.

Nasta nuzzled around his neck, kissing and brushing his skin with his nose, holding him and caressing him where he touched. It took four minutes before Harry’s resolve broke into pieces and he started crying harshly and Nasta held him and rocked him on his lap as Harry screamed into his shirt, curling up and burying his face into Nasta’s chest.

“Are you alright, Nasta?” Aneirin asked his youngest son.

Nasta looked at his Father, a sneer wanting to form, but he controlled himself, barely. “Do you honestly think that I’d be at all fine after hearing that my son has to rely on luck and miracles to survive?” He demanded harshly. “No, I’m not alright.”

“I lost my daughter, Nasta. Your sister.” Aneirin reminded him. “Don’t shut me out because you think I don’t know what you’re going through. I do.”

“Angharad didn’t have Faerie blood. She didn’t get sick and waste away in front of your very eyes!” Nasta hissed, forcing his Dracken side down deeper when it flashed up.

His Father sighed sadly and Nasta felt like apologising, he knew how much it had hurt his Dad to lose Angharad, he and Sanex had witnessed it first hand, but he sighed instead and turned away. He didn’t mean to take his anger out on his Father; it was the last thing he wanted to do, alienate his remaining family members when he actually needed them close by, his Father had lost a daughter and now he might lose a grandson too.

“How…how’s Calix?” Harry asked, hiccupping as he swallowed air in rapid huffs.

“He’s sleeping.” Myron told him, moving his arm, which had a blanket draped over it, showing Calix’s little face, his mouth obscured by his green dummy.

Harry nodded. “I feel empty.” He confessed, rubbing at his eyes, irritating them more, the red outline clashing with the pale skin and the green iris.

“It’s alright to feel this way.” Nasta assured his mate firmly. “We’ve all had a terrible shock; this is our body’s way of dealing with it.”
"I…I can’t…can’t handle any of my babies passing. I can’t!"

Harry started crying again and Nasta felt a stab of annoyance, but he crushed it viciously and held Harry tighter to his chest. He understood what was happening, he was isolating himself from everyone, including his own lovers, he’d done it before when his sister had died, he wouldn’t let it happen here and now. They needed him now more than ever, they needed him as their top dominant to hold them all together and he would give his all to make them feel better, to keep them together because they were a family and he wouldn’t let this break them, even if Leolin didn’t make it.

He had known all along that the odds against Leolin were high. He had never in his life expected to have a Faerie baby himself, a hundred and fifty years the last one had been born into his family and she had died too. Perhaps the Delericey line was cursed, not to not have any Faerie babies, but to have them sparsely and then watch them die as infants.

He closed his eyes and clenched his hands, forcing those thoughts away. Harry was right, Leolin wasn’t dead yet and he would not give up on his son by acting like he already was. That Leolin had survived thus far was nothing short of miraculous, but Harry had gotten him to the hospital very quickly and that had helped immensely. Harry had done everything that he could have possibly done to ensure Leolin’s survival and Calix’s health and he was proud that his young submissive mate, just eighteen years old and two years into being a fully-fledged Dracken that he hadn’t even known he was, hadn’t completely gone to pieces and just sat on the floor crying and calling for his dominants to deal with it.

He’d heard of several horror stories where that had happened and one story where the submissive had attacked her own baby because she couldn’t get him to stop crying and then instead of getting him help as he haemorrhaged, she had sat on the floor, rocking her dying child in her arms and calling for her dominant, who was half a world away for work, instead of dealing with it herself, which could have given her child what he needed to survive.

Harry cried for several more minutes, before he stopped and calmed himself. It took six additional minutes of calm and quiet before Harry sat up on his lap and brushed at his face, sniffing hard. He pushed himself to his feet, stood up and just got on with everything. Nasta admired him and his strength so much in that moment; he didn’t think he could deal with anything even remotely normal at the moment. He felt like he would have a breakdown if he tried, but not Harry, who seemed to need the pointless, menial tasks to centre himself as he cleaned up the toys and odd bits lying around.

He took Calix from Myron and cradled him, listening to him wheeze slightly as he breathed through his congested, inflamed lungs. Harry snuggled him into the crook of his arm securely, keeping him slightly elevated as he set about sorting this and that, finding things to do. Nasta didn’t tell him what to do and he didn’t even think of suggesting that he stop and just sit down to rest, if this helped Harry cope in whatever small way then he wouldn’t stop him from doing it. Harry needed this as much as Nasta needed to just sit here and not do anything.

“Mama.” Braiden called out from where he had just stood up in his travel cot, his face still creased in sleep from his nap, rubbing wide indigo eyes with little, chubby hands.

Harry smiled sadly and picked him up, being careful of Calix.
“Hello, love, I’m sorry it’s been so long since I last saw and held you. I love you so much, but your baby brother is…he’s unwell and I needed to stay with him for a little bit.”

Nasta’s heart broke for Harry and for his children and he swallowed the lump that had formed in his throat. He felt so out of control, he felt so angry and he didn’t like this, he needed to gather himself up, pull himself together. He couldn’t lose his family.

Max had silenced the room he had holed himself up in. The spare bedroom that Harry had once demolished to make his nest was out of the way and quiet, everything had been cleaned and put back, even his carpet, but he didn’t care as he rammed his fist into the wall yet again, leaving yet another orange sized crater in the wall.

He’d fix the wall later, but for now, all he cared about was the anger inside him, the pain, the uncertainty, the uselessness and the never ending cycle of why the fuck was this happening to his baby boy.

He knew he should be down in the living room with Harry, but he also knew that as top dominant that Nasta would be there with him and he knew that Nasta was so much better for Harry at the moment than he, or even Blaise and Draco were going to be.

He had lost his great-grandmother, he had almost lost an Uncle who was still sick and in pain and now he might lose a son, all in a few days. He rammed a fist into the wall yet again, harder this time. He couldn’t give up on Leolin, he had to believe that his son could bounce back from this, he’d never taken much thought to Faerie children, he’d learnt about them vaguely in school, nothing in depth, but then he’d never known what it would mean to have a Faerie child, not even after Harry had mated to Nasta, who was well known to have Faerie blood in him. Even after Leolin had been born, after everything he’d been told and warned about, he’d never expected this, none of them had.

His knuckles ached and he thought that he might have broken a few bones as his hand was already swelling, but just the thought of what he’d seen at that hospital had him angry enough to hit the wall over and over, the thought of Harry downstairs, crying and in pain had him hitting the wall again and again and the guilt he felt at staying away for three days because he hadn’t wanted his mates to see him breakdown had him screaming in rage.

Three days he had missed out on, he’d missed too much and that it might have been the last three healthy days of Leolin’s life had him collapsing to the floor and burying his face in his knees, sobbing. This couldn’t be happening, he couldn’t lose Leolin, he loved the tiny little boy so much and that he might now die crushed his heart. He couldn’t bear the pain of it.

He stayed upstairs in the spare bedroom all day, he just sat there crying and trying to block out the emotional pain by creating physical pain, but it never lasted long enough and his hands were red raw, swollen and bleeding after just a few hours. They were shaking uncontrollably and he knew then that he’d done some serious damage, but he still didn’t care.

He must have fallen asleep at some point because the next he knew he was pushing himself up off of the floor groggily and it was early morning. Very early morning. His hands were throbbing with his heartbeat, an ache so fierce that he had to grit his teeth against the pain of it. At least they had stopped bleeding, but they were so swollen they looked and felt like they were made of fluid filled rubber. They were nearly useless he found out as he tried several times to open the bedroom door.

He went down into the kitchen and grit his teeth as he used his hands to get the potions that he needed from the case of his potions collection, he’d never hated the fact that the case had a zip lock top before that moment as his swollen, balloon like fingers fumbled to grip the metal tab.

“If you’re looking for dreamless sleep you won’t find any.” A voice in the darkness whispered, making him jump and curse as he let go of the tab he’d only just managed to grip.

Nasta moved over to him then, he looked like he hadn’t slept in a month and his beard was back. He frowned at Max’s hands when he noticed them and he picked them up carefully to see them better in the dark and he hissed deeply.

“I hope this made you feel better.” Nasta said harshly as he unzipped the potions case in harsh, jerky motions, getting out a pain reliever and something to reduce the swelling.

“Might need Skele-Gro as well.” Max muttered, shamefaced in the shadow of Nasta's anger. “I think there are broken bones.”

“Looking at this I’d say there are definitely broken bones.” Nasta quipped as he took Max’s hands in his again and applied a topical paste that Max knew by the scent alone without even having to look at it. It would be a pale, bluish grey colour and it would help heal the cuts and scrapes on his knuckles while cooling the skin so that the potion to help aid the swelling would have a better chance of working.

Nasta helped him swallow the three potions as he couldn’t pick up the delicate vials in his clumsy, swollen and paste coated hands. He took the swelling reducer first, then the pain reliever and finally a small measure of Skele-Gro. Max grimaced as it burnt all the way down his throat and into his belly, reacting unpleasantly with his stomach acid, the taste alone making him regret hitting the wall so often and after his hands had already been injured as well.

Nasta got him sat at the table and used his wand to conjure up a soft cushion out of thin air which he made Max rest his hands on as he set about making tea.

“You said something about not having any dreamless sleep left; I had at least two doses left if I remember right.” Max said more for something to say as he really didn’t want to sleep anymore right now.
“Blaise drank himself into a coma, he didn’t even recognise me when I carried him up to bed when I found him in a pool of his own sick, he almost suffocated himself because he’d drank that much. Harry really needed the potion as he refused to sleep. I tricked him into drinking it just to get him to sleep and Draco had nightmares so I forced him to drink some before taking him back to bed.”

“Which explains why you’re still awake at least.” Max sighed. “I didn’t expect anything like this to ever happen, if I had I would have made more to keep at hand.”

“None of us knew this was going to happen, Max.” Nasta said harshly as he all but dropped a cup of tea by Max’s elbow before throwing himself into the chair next to him and cradling his own cup. “I mean, I knew the odds were against us and against Leolin, but this…” Nasta trailed off and shook his head.

“It was very sudden, I know I have a cheek saying it, as I was gone for three days, but I never would have gone if I knew this would happen or if I had any idea that it was building up to this. I just… didn’t want to breakdown in front of you all and take your attention away from what was truly important.”

“You are important.” Nasta hissed at him. “You are important to us! Yes the kids come first, and yes Harry comes first as our submissive, but that doesn’t mean that we don’t care what happens to you or what you go through, Max, we love you, but this can’t keep happening.”

“It’s just…she died so suddenly and none of us were expecting it. It blindsided us all, I was just starting to feel like myself again when Blaise came with the news that Leolin and Calix were in the hospital. I was… I was honestly going to floo call you that evening to talk out everything and why I’d left and why I felt like I couldn’t be here. I needed to be with family, not that you aren’t family! I don’t mean that, I just needed to be with people who knew her like I did, remembered her like I did and it was easier for me to deal with everything knowing that I could slip upstairs to cry alone but still have those family members to talk to just downstairs, it helped me.”

“I understand that, Max, but you should have at least made an hour or two during the day to come to us, to see the kids and to talk to us and the way you left…can’t you see that Harry thought that you were still angry with him? Can’t you see how that looked to him and to us? You might have come to realise that you weren’t angry with Harry after you left, but you never came back to tell us that, we still thought that you were staying away because of Cepheus.”

“I didn’t want any of this to happen.” Max said quietly.
“None of us did. I carried Blaise up to bed and found Harry sobbing over the empty bassinet by the bedside. I tried to remove it and he almost gutted me. He actually tried to sneak back to the hospital you know, at one in the morning no less, I tried to tell him that we can’t do any more for him, but he wouldn’t hear of it and kept insisting that Leolin needed him. I don’t deny that, Leolin has always been more attached to Harry, but Leolin’s life is in the hands of two experienced Healers who know what they’re doing and we have to trust in that, but we all need to understand that he is still alive and that’s more than I could have hoped for. If he survives this, then it will give him a serious boost in childhood as his immune system will be just that much stronger.”

“I’ve never really understood praying before. I’ve never really had to do it, but I haven’t stopped praying to Merlin, Morgana and any other fucker who wants to listen. I’ve prayed before, but I’ve never done so with such fervour or honesty before.”

“I know exactly what you mean.” Nasta said with a sigh. “Part of travelling all over the world and diving into all sorts of different cultures, is that you learn so many different religions and hear about different gods and goddesses that people believe in and I learnt about them all, but I never really had faith in any of it, I’m too much of a logical thinker to believe in such things, but when we were in the hospital, waiting for any sort of news, I prayed to every god and goddess I knew or had even heard about to give him just a bit more strength. I’ve never done that before either.”

Max snuggled into Nasta and dropped his head to Nasta’s shoulder, he felt a hand tug through his short hair and he sighed softly.

“You know I still have to punish you. I still have that urge.” Nasta said almost conversationally.

“I know. I was expecting it yesterday to be honest, we couldn’t have done it in the hospital, too public, but once we got home…”

“I left you alone to think about what had happened, that and I had to make sure that Harry was alright, his need for me to support him outweighed my urge to punish you. The kids knew something was wrong though, they could sense something was wrong almost as soon as they woke up. They were happy to see us home though.”

“How was Calix?”

“Very chesty. He’s got a very bad cough which probably sounds worse than it is just because he’s so young. He’s refusing feeds as well, Harry had to practically plead with him to get him to eat last night, which led to Calix crying and coughing more, this entire situation is distressing.”
Max was upset enough that he clenched his hands and then he did it again when no pain was forthcoming, the pain reliever had worked. He picked up his cup and all but drained his cooling tea in a few large swallows.

“You can punish me now if you want, I don’t think either of us are going to be getting to bed and I want to be able to look after Harry and the kids today without thinking of anything else. I’ll have to brew more dreamless sleep and a hangover cure for Blaise too and maybe I should restock the calming draughts and headache relievers while I’m at it.”

Nasta nodded at that idea and he stood up; he pulled the collar of Max’s jumper down away from the apex of his neck and pressed a thumb deep into the muscles where Max’s neck met his shoulders. His fangs came out smoothly when he thought about them and he licked them to coat them with his saliva.

He let Max sit and squirm, worrying about when the strike would come. He wouldn’t let this be easy on him, not after what he’d done, but he was too tired to be angry at the moment, which was probably a good thing as he knew he should never punish someone while angry, and he had more pressing matters on his mind than punishing an errant subordinate mate.

He bit deep and sudden with all four fangs and Max tensed under his hands and mouth, his body automatically twisting away from what had caused the injury, which made him grunt in pain as the pressure of Nasta’s fangs increased.

Nasta held on for a long time, biting down hard, clenching his jaws before releasing without removing his fangs and then biting down hard again, causing as much pain as he could with minimal damage.

He finally felt that Max had had enough and he released him, leaving the collection of puncture wounds in his neck to bleed freely. They were already going a deep reddish-purple, they would bruise horribly.

“Thank you.” Max said raggedly.

“Did you feel enough pain?” Nasta asked him seriously.

Max nodded. “More than enough. I wanted to scream out several times, but I didn’t want to wake anyone.”

Nasta nodded and sat back down, running his tongue along the inside of his mouth to clean away the lingering traces of blood. He made more tea, even though he really wanted to take a leaf out of Blaise’s book and just drown himself in alcohol, he couldn’t afford that luxury. He was the top dominant of this family and it fell to him to be the strong one. It fell on his shoulders to look after everyone and make sure they didn’t hurt or kill themselves. He spared a glance for Max’s hands; he had already failed one of his subordinate males, two if Blaise counted for drinking himself unconscious and almost drowning in a pool of his own sick before he’d been found. He had to pull himself together. It fell to him to look after them all.

The both of them were quiet for long minutes, they both kept half an ear on the baby monitor and half an ear for any incoming floo calls.

Max rolled his shoulder yet again. It hurt terribly, but it would serve as a reminder to never take his family for granted. He’d started to rely on them to always be there for him, even if he wasn’t there for them, he had fully expected to come back and everything would be how he had left it, but he had been dragged back in amidst a crisis and everything was changed now forever. Calix was sick, Leolin might die, Harry was having twins and seeing a mind healer to boot, his babies had grown and learnt and developed while he’d been gone…it wasn’t worth the price he’d paid, just for a bit of privacy to cry on his own.

He knew now that he should have trusted his mates, trusted himself to them and their love and care, but hindsight was always so much clearer than in the moment. He’d failed his family and now they might never be a family again, but he swore right then and there that he would do his all to keep them together. He wouldn’t let this ruin them. He wouldn’t let what he’d selfishly done be their breaking point.

Harry woke up at nine in the morning and it took just mere seconds for him to remember everything that had happened and where he was. He sat bolt upright and looked around him. Draco was fast asleep in bed beside him, in a way that Harry just knew was potion induced. Blaise, Max and Nasta were not in the bedroom and hadn’t been for a while, if at all, if the cold sheets were any indication.

Harry got out of the bed and made his way down the stairs and into the kitchen, where his three mates were sat, four babies in the corner of the room in a playpen and Calix was swaddled up tighter than tight in the bassinet. He hadn’t moved as his blankets were still wrapped around his little body.

“Stop being so loud.” Blaise moaned pathetically.

“I’m not being loud; I’m making you a potion so your head won’t feel like it’s falling off your shoulders.” Max answered as he stirred a potion on the countertop.

“It’s your own fault.” Nasta told him.

“I don’t need the speech right now.” Blaise growled.
“What’s going on?” Harry asked softly, his voice muzzy from crying nearly all of yesterday afternoon and being forced to sleep through potions.

“Blaise drank himself into unconsciousness last night and now he’s miserable because he has one hell of a hangover.” Nasta told him as he came to hug him and guide him into a chair.

Harry sat by Calix’s head and brushed his hair back gently. Chestnut brown and thick, it was taken straight from his Father and Grandfather, but those eyes, those jet black eyes were straight from his Granddad Myron. He looked like a clone of Myron and by extension Xerxes and he had physical traits of nearly every Maddison family member in some way, whether it was his eyes or hair, he looked like a Maddison, more so than Farren despite his very dainty size.

“Did he feed this morning?” Harry asked worriedly.

“Max got him to eat a bit of cereal, but he didn’t finish it and he coughed a lot, which put him off eating anymore, but he ate enough to last him until lunch at least.”

Harry swallowed and nodded, snatching his hand back from Calix. It was so unusual to see Calix sleeping during the day that he just wanted to wake him up, but he quelled that urge and stopped touching his baby so that he wouldn’t be tempted.

Instead he turned his attention to what had happened last night, he stared at Nasta hard until his mate took notice and turned to look at him. He watched as Nasta’s shoulders squared and he puffed up in preparation for the fight he knew was coming.

“Why did you stop me from going to see Leolin last night?” Harry asked, the bite of a growl in his throat.

Nasta sighed. “It was one in the morning, Harry, you needed to sleep, you can’t go for two days without sleep, you still haven’t eaten anything and you haven’t even tried to shower.”

“Who the hell cares if I haven’t had a shower when our son is in the hospital!” Harry shouted. He stopped and calmed himself down when four babies stopped playing in the corner and turned to look at him.

He swallowed hard and bit the inside of his cheek when he felt tears well up in his eyes. He swallowed again and breathed calmly.

“You need to shower, Harry and you need to eat, don’t make me order you to do it because I will if I have to.” Nasta said softly. “You need to shower before I’ll even think of letting you go back, those are the clothes that you wore when you were tending to Calix, they have the virus on them, I don’t have to tell you that reinfecting Leolin at this point could undo all of the hard work that his body and the Healers have done for him.”

Harry looked at the table top and swallowed. “Did you have to force a sleeping potion on me? I could be at the hospital right now.”

“You needed the sleep and I knew you wouldn’t sleep without help.” Nasta told him unrepentantly.

“Will you tell me if there have been any floo calls at least?” Harry asked desperately.

“Two.” Nasta nodded. “One at six in the morning, the other at twenty past eight. There’s no change in him, he’s still breathing, he slept straight through the night and he fed once this morning. He hasn’t opened his eyes since last night. Healer Almus thinks that Leolin believes that you’re still there with him, which is why he slept through the night and why he fed with no fuss.”

“All the more reason for me to get there as quickly as possible so that when he does actually open his eyes he doesn’t realise that I wasn’t there all night!”

“You will shower and eat before we go back, even if it’s a five minute scrub down and a piece of toast, understand me?” Nasta growled. “Don’t test me on this or I’ll order you to do it and I don’t want to.”

Harry snarled but he stood and stormed out of the kitchen and went and took his ‘five minute scrub down’ which actually took him eight minutes as he got lost in thought under the fall of the water.

He dressed at record speed and as he was leaving the bedroom, a groggy Draco was just waking up.

“Get a shower, Draco.” Harry told him. “Get dressed; we’re going to the hospital soon.”

Draco just nodded and did as Harry had told him. When he reached the kitchen a plate of buttered toast was waiting for him. He felt queasy just looking at it.
“Try and eat something, Harry.”

“Have you lot eaten.”

Nasta nodded. “Getting Blaise to eat was a struggle as he is suffering with nausea from his hangover. But even he ate a few pieces of toast, so please try, Harry. For our unborn twins if not for yourself.”

Harry nodded and slumped down into his chair and nibbled at his toast, trying not to taste the damp cardboard texture or the sandy flavour. He didn’t want to do this.

Draco came down showered and dressed, but his eyes were bruised with too much crying and not enough sleep. He looked rough, they all did.

Draco tore at a piece of toast with the intent of just getting it in and over with and once done, he gulped at his tea as if he’d just eaten a plate of sand.

Harry took a leaf out of Draco’s book and scoffed a piece of toast, smearing butter over his face as he just wasn’t as well-mannered and graceful as Draco, but he wiped his face with the tea towel that Max threw at him and gulped down his tea.

“Can we go now?” Harry asked, practically glaring at Nasta.

“Our other children?” Nasta asked him simply.

Harry looked at them and felt something slice through his heart. He wanted so much to be with Leolin, to hold him and make sure that he was okay. He’d locked his Dracken side up tight because otherwise he would have already slashed up Nasta’s face and made a break for the hospital. No matter how much he wanted to see Leolin, he wouldn’t injure anyone he loved to do it.

He dropped his head and the anger was just there, brewing just under the surface. He stood up and knocked his chair back, slamming his hands on the table top.

“You said that we could go when I’d showered and eaten! I’ve done both! What more do you want from me?! I can’t just sit here and wait like nothing’s wrong when my baby is in the hospital and I haven’t seen him in hours! I want to see him NOW!”

Of course he paid for his loss of control when Calix screwed up his face and started crying and then coughing as he cried, which made Harry feel like a monster. An inch tall monster as Nasta glared at him for waking Calix up with his outburst.

“Did that make you feel better?” Blaise hissed at him, his face tight with the pain he must have experienced from Harry shouting and was prolonged by Calix’s crying.

Harry shook his head silently as he watched Draco sooth Calix gently. He felt wretched.

“Calix is still sick.” Nasta told him coldly, which made Harry swallow hard and caused his eyes to fill up with tears that he wouldn’t let fall. “He was released from the hospital yes, he’s getting better, but he is still sick and he needs his rest. Get control of yourself! We’ll go to the hospital soon, you’re not the only one who wants to see him, but we have five other children to think about, one of whom is sick himself!”

Harry curled up on his chair and he sat quiet after that. Max finished the potion for Blaise and his first mate drained it gratefully. He listened as they moved around and murmured quietly together. He sat and thought about his outburst, but it made him feel worse. He hadn’t meant to wake Calix, of course not, but he was out of control, his emotions were destroying him and locking up his Dracken with no outlet was splitting his mind, his emotions and his instincts into two separate halves which was confusing him and winding him up until he felt that he could bounce he was that high strung.

A soft touch to his back had his claws coming out and poised to kill as he swung around ready to gouge his claws into whatever had touched him, but his wrist was caught and after a few moments of fighting and struggling, his sight cleared and he saw Nasta looking at him. He stopped all movement and he collapsed back into his chair, or he tried to, Nasta caught him and held him up to his chest and pressed him in tight.

“We’re all angry.” Nasta whispered into his hair. “None of us want to be in this situation, but we are, but we can’t forget that we have five other babies to look after and shouting in the vicinity of our sick son is going to cause the anger to rise in all of us.”

“I need to see Leolin. I need to!” Harry sniffled.

“I understand that this is hard for you as a submissive, but override your instincts, Harry. You’re pregnant, you can’t risk our two unborn babies in such a way, you need sleep, you need food and rest. You need to keep yourself healthy and we’re no good to Leolin if we’re too tired to keep our eyes open when we go to see him. The showers are self-explanatory, if we take any germs or bacteria into Leolin’s quarantined room while he’s so sick and weak, it could kill him. We can coat our hands in the cleansing potion, we can wear any number of overcoats and sterilised aprons, but if our skin is dirty and covered in bacteria…can you see where I’m going with this, Harry?”
Harry nodded. “It’s like none of that matters, like it doesn’t get through to my brain, all that matters is that I’m with Leolin and that he knows that I’m there for him.”

“I know it’s difficult, we’re all struggling, Draco had nightmares, I couldn’t sleep because I was half waiting for a floo call all night, Blaise drank himself half to death and Max broke his hands. We’re all struggling to come to terms with this, but we need more control, we can’t keep doing this.”

“Max broke his hands?” Harry queried and he looked around. Max wasn’t in the kitchen anymore.

Harry kicked out gently and Nasta put him down and Harry went hunting. He found Max just climbing out of the shower, towelling his body awkwardly with bruised, swollen hands. He hissed deeply and he cradled those hands that were hot to the touch.

“What did you do?!?” He hissed as he brought those hands up carefully and nuzzled them softly. Max didn’t make a sound, not a murmur of pain and Harry knew then that he had taken a pain reliever for them.

“You’re stupid.” Harry told him. “Look at the state of your hands! This will take days to heal.”

“I’m alright.” Max said thickly.

Harry looked up and saw his eyes shimmery with tears. Harry pulled Max down and cupped his cheek, brushing a thumb under his bright blue eye and causing the built up tears to slip down a strong cheek. Harry kissed it away.

“Why are you crying? It’s okay, I just don’t like seeing you hurt, especially knowing that you did it to yourself. Why would you do this?”

“I was just angry. So angry. I knew that I was hurting myself, but it wasn’t enough to block out the emotional pain, so I kept doing it.”

Harry kissed both hands softly. “Your family will be here soon, Max, you need to get dressed.”

Max nodded and sucked in a deep breath, his huge chest filling up before he exhaled harshly. “Let’s go and see our baby.”

Harry nodded and he slipped back down the stairs, letting Max dress himself clumsily with his hands. Myron was already going to give him hell for it, Harry knew. He was surprised to see that Myron was already in the living room though, Farren cocked on his hip happily.

“Harry.” Myron nodded in greeting.

Harry bit his lip and nodded back, rushing around and sorting what he needed to, to visit Leolin in the hospital, packing up any and all toys that he thought Leolin might like and as he rushed around the room yet again, Myron grabbed his upper arm and pulled him into a tight, almost crushing hug.

“It’ll be alright, Harry. Leolin’s got two strong people as parents and three others to act as role models, he’ll fight, but while you visit I’ll look after these five.”

Harry nodded and held on tight to Myron’s thick waist. Relieved almost to the point of tears that Myron was treating him normally again, he had a suspicion that Myron knew that that had been what was wrong with him, but he was too tactful to say it and humiliate him, so this was his way of letting him know that everything was fine and that he didn’t hold a grudge because of what he had done to his brother Cepheus.

“What did you do to your hands?!” Myron demanded harshly.

“I thought Aneirin was coming over this morning?” Max hissed at Nasta.

“He is, but your Dad wanted to come over too.” Nasta said unrepentantly.

Max cursed.

“Watch your language and tell me what you did!” Myron chastised and demanded at the same time.

“I was angry.”
“So you battered your hands against a wall until they looked like that? Tell me, are you a caveman? Did I raise a caveman for a son?” Myron snapped.

“No.” Max sighed exasperatedly.

“No, you’re more foolish! How could you think that injuring yourself could make you feel better? Have you had blood?”

“I can’t.” Max answered, pulling the neck of his shirt aside to show his punishment marks.

Myron shook his head. “Have you at least treated them?”

Max nodded. “Of course. I’ll continue to treat them as well, but right now I just want to go and see Leolin.”

Myron huffed and sat himself down on the settee, pulling Farren fully onto his lap.

“I’ll look after these five; does Calix have any potions to take?”

“Just the one. He had it this morning, his next dose is just after he’s had his lunch, the instructions are on the bottle. He needs to eat something, anything, before he can take it though, even if it’s just a spoonful of something or a mouthful of milk if he doesn’t want to eat solids with his sore throat.”

“I’ll sort it, get yourselves off and tell me how my little boy is when you get back and don’t forget to give him a kiss from me.”

Harry nodded and then he was jittery with nerves, almost sick with anticipation as he entered the hospital just seconds later through the floo. He managed to force himself to wait for all of his mates to arrive, which could have been helped along by Nasta’s hand holding his like an errant toddler who would wander off and get lost.

They exited Healer Cole’s office just as Healer Almus poked his head out of the quarantined room that Leolin was in.
“The wards went off on the floo connection, I knew you were here. Come on in.”

The entered the anteroom and they did the whole dipping their hands into the bowl of cleansing solution that Harry could barely remember Nasta doing for him yesterday. Healer Almus muttered a few spells over them and Harry felt like bursting through the wall to get to his baby, who he could just barely see through the window and Healer Cole who was standing vigil over him.

“He’s been wonderful all night and all morning. We’ve limited his human contact and… I’m not sure if you saw the paper this morning?”

“No, we haven’t had a chance.” Nasta answered, a note of anger in his tone. “What happened?”

“The media knows that one of your children is here and that another one was released yesterday. A reporter tried to trick the orderlies into letting them in to see Leolin, only the human restriction rules kept them out of the room.”

Harry snarled furiously and he wasn’t the only one. Sometimes he seriously hated being Harry fucking Potter. He couldn’t deal with the media on top of this already stressful and painful situation.

“No one asking to see Leolin at the front desk is being allowed in; in fact we’re evicting them from the hospital. We know that you come through the private floo and that no one knows the baby’s name… well that sorts out the real from the fake right away.”

“They’re putting him at risk!” Harry said furiously. “Just by asking to be near him, in the same room as him they’re putting him at risk! How dare they!”

“They can’t get in. Jasper and I haven’t left the hospital; we’ve been keeping vigil day and night. If by some fluke these people got past the Healer desks, they couldn’t get into that room as only Jasper and I can open this door.” Healer Almus explained, pointing to the flimsy looking clear door that was the only thing separating them from Leolin.

“Thank you.” Nasta said gratefully.

They were let into Leolin’s room and Healer Jasper Cole greeted them softly, but Harry rushed to Leolin and raked his eyes all over his little body, still wired up to all sorts, but he was breathing still, even if he looked worse than when they’d left last night. He’d never been a pudgy baby, having been premature and with Faerie blood to boot, he’d never really gained any weight like his siblings, he’d looked thin and like a newborn for so long, but now he looked starved and skeletal, Harry could see his whole rib cage and he shivered as his hands itched to pick him up and cradle him.

“Can I…can I…?”

“You can pick him up, but remember to watch the wires.” Healer Cole said gently and understandingly.

Harry did just that, wrapping the blanket that Leolin had been lying on around his little body and he cradled him to his chest, staving off his tears and the urge to bawl and beg and plead. Why his son? Why his little boy? Why was this happening to him and to his little Leolin? It wasn’t fair!

“Hey, love.” He said softly. “Did you have a good night?”

His mates came and sat around him, Healer Almus pulling chairs from a far corner of the room. They all touched or held a part of Leolin, being mindful of the wires and his delicate body.

It took ten minutes for their soft voices to filter through Leolin’s sleeping mind and he woke with a small sound in his throat and a weak little wiggle.

“Good morning, love, are you going to open your gorgeous eyes for us?” Harry coaxed.

Leolin did as he was asked after a few minutes where he wiggled slightly some more, but those gold eyes cracked open, dull and dark and Harry clenched his jaw to prevent the urge to just start sobbing, instead he forced a smile and Leolin did the same, which made Harry laugh as he brushed at his eyes so that Leolin wouldn’t see his tears.

“You’re going to get better. I know you are.” Harry said firmly. “You don’t give up, you hear me. You never give up, because we aren’t giving up on you. We love you, sweetheart, you will get better. I made a promise that I’d never let anything happen to you and I swear I won’t. I won’t be made a liar, so you fight and with the wonderful Healers we’ve got for you helping you, you will get better.”

Leolin burbled tiredly, not making any sense as he made noised that sounded like ‘blak’, ‘mern’ and ‘olp’. His lungs sounded wet, like Calix’s were and Harry only realised then that Leolin had the same virus as what Calix did, it was the same virus, but it affected Leolin more dangerously and it could easily kill him.
“Are his lungs alright?” Harry asked the Healers, breaking eye contact with Leolin, who whined sadly.

Harry immediately shot his gaze back to Leolin, who smiled weakly at him. Harry smiled back widely.

“They’re very constricted and inflamed. He’s having a lot of trouble breathing, which is why we’re keeping him elevated and not flat on his back. We’re always watching him and so far, his lungs haven’t failed once, we’re very surprised and deliriously pleased with this, but we’re aware of it happening at any moment all the same.”

Harry nodded to show that he’d heard, but he didn’t take his eyes from Leolin, who was getting tired again.

“Does he need to feed?” Nasta asked the Healers.

“It would be advisable to feed him as often as possible. He drank less than half an ounce earlier.” Healer Cole nodded.

Harry took a bottle from the bag he’d packed, checked it and the coaxed Leolin into eating it. Far from being as gutsy as he had yesterday, Leolin didn’t even want the teat in his mouth this morning.

“Hey, you will eat.” Harry told him sternly. “Drink your milk, Leolin.”

Leolin’s eyes opened and he gave Harry a glare, but he parted his lips to accept the bulb of the teat into his mouth and he suckled softly, a few mouthfuls before he stopped again and peered up at Harry through those purple-black bruised eyes.

“Keep going.” Harry encouraged softly but firmly.

Leolin closed his eyes again and suckled a few more mouthfuls before he looked back at Harry.
“Drink as much as you can, love, we’re not going anywhere, your Daddies and I will be here for you.”

Leolin suckled for a few minutes, slow, small sucks. He drank a bit more, but he soon weakly swatted at the bottle, refusing to take any more.

“Ma.” He murmured softly.

Harry smiled and cradled him close. “I love you, Leolin, never forget that.”

Leolin fell asleep quickly and easily with a reasonably full belly, Harry handed him carefully over to Nasta and he stepped out of the room to take a moment. He didn’t want to wake Leolin up by crying all over him. He wiped his eyes and his nose before he dipped his hands back into the cleansing potion before Healer Almus let him back in.

“We’re going to take him for some more X-rays later, we’d like for you to go home in this time and then you can come back in the afternoon.” Healer Cole said in a tone that he must have used a hundred times, but Harry still snapped his head to him and glared.

“I won’t leave him to go through that alone!”

“He’ll be asleep through it.” Healer Almus soothed. “We can’t let you into the X-ray room anyway. Have you forgotten that you’ve already had one knock in your current pregnancy, don’t push your luck with this, Harry, you could lose them and as your personal Healer, I can and will bar you from the hospital.”

“You can’t do that!” Harry said aghast.

“Then follow our instructions and leave Leolin to us. Overexposure to people will only harm him further.”

“I can’t just leave him! I don’t want to leave him!”

“Under normal circumstances we’d allow you to remain, as we allowed you to do for Calix, but Leolin isn’t a normal baby, these aren’t normal circumstances and we can’t allow you to see him for more than a few hours a day. I’m sorry, this must be excruciating for you all, but we’re Healers for a reason; don’t make us throw you out for Leolin’s own good.”

Harry was shaking he was so shocked and angry.

“This isn’t right! You can’t do this! We’re his parents!”

“They’re Healers, Harry, they can do this.” Draco said with a bite of anger in his voice as he glared at the Healers.

“We’re doing this for Leolin; we’ve been living in this hospital, in this room and the office since he came in. My Wife hasn’t seen me in days and I’m missing my own children.” Healer Almus said with a hard bite to his own voice. “All we want is for Leolin to live, if that means we chuck all of you out, we’ll do it!”

“Why can’t we wait in the corridor?” Blaise demanded.

“We understand the want to be close to him, but with Harry pregnant it isn’t practical to have him not eating or sleeping properly and loitering about in corridors. It’ll do none of you any good to hang around here when you have five babies at home and two more on the way. Leolin is doing amazingly well in our care; you are just a floo call away, it’ll take us moments to get you over to him if anything goes wrong or if anything changes, but so far he’s been stable and very well, we’ll allow you visitation, but we can’t have you here all the time, it makes our job harder and strictly speaking, Leolin needs a lot of rest, as much of it as we can give him, which means no disturbances.”

“We’re not happy with this.” Nasta growled.

“You don’t have to be.” Healer Cole piped up. “As long as Leolin survives this then we don’t care what you think of us or the situation.”

“I don’t understand how you can do this! He’s our son!” Harry cried desperately.

“They can legally kick us out and keep us out if they think we’re disrupting the health and healing of a patient.” Max rumbled deeply, his eyes dark with his anger. “The Wizengamot brought the law in just eight years ago after a Mother refused to leave her baby and even slept in the same room and would continuously pester and question the Healers to the point where they couldn’t do their job and that baby died as a result, my Dad studied the case, but the Wizengamot will now take the Healer’s side in ninety percent of cases to keep the number of magical babies up.

“Please!” Harry begged. “Please, I can’t stay away from him, he’s my baby! I need to look after him, can’t you understand that I need to be here with him, that I have to look after him and assure myself that he’s alright!”

“Our instincts would demand that we see him.” Nasta explained with a nod. “If too long passed we’d force our way in and we’d take him, which would ultimately kill him. We need to sort out a balance, you need to understand that we have to see him, our Drackens demand no less, but I at least understand the logic behind not camping out in the hospital for days at a time, especially with Harry’s pregnancy.”

“We would like your cooperation in this. You won’t be allowed in this room overnight as we restrict the air flow and up the oxygen levels to help Leolin sleep better, so it would be best if you left at night and came back in the morning, this would ensure you get sleep. At lunchtimes we’ll be checking the spread or the receding of the virus through his lungs with X-rays, so I would again advise you all to go home, get something to eat, or some more rest or even just play a game with your other children to see them for a few hours, but it’ll be better for you than hanging around the hospital, waiting for news that we don’t have ourselves to give to you. We should know more in the afternoons, after the X-rays, but in the mornings we’ll just be informing you of how he was in the night, we won’t have much more to tell you than that, but he’s stable, he’s calm and he’s been better than we expected.”

“Will he…will he recover?” Harry asked, looking up hopefully.

The two Healers exchanged a glance and Harry’s heart sank.

“You either don’t want to say anything or you don’t think he has much hope.” Harry said softly.

“The former, Harry.” Healer Almus said. “We really don’t want to say or get any of your hopes up just yet. It’s too early to tell, but we are happy with the strength and determination that he’s shown so far.”

Harry nodded as he brushed Leolin’s hair back, he was being passed around, he was in Draco’s arms at the moment, having gone from Nasta to Blaise and to Draco, who wasn’t allowing Max to hold him.
“Draco.” Harry said firmly, giving him a look. “Pass Leolin to Max, I want a hold afterwards before we’re forced to leave.”

“Forced to leave for your own good.” Healer Almus cut in.

Draco very reluctantly passed Leolin over and it looked like he was going to say something, but Nasta’s hand cupped the back of his head warningly.

“I hate this.” Max murmured as he cradled Leolin in just one arm, his other, swollen, hand free to brush gentle fingers and a lone thumb over Leolin’s even sharper features. He looked gaunt and sickly.

“I can’t leave him.” Harry whispered. “Not like this.”

“Have some faith in him, love.” Nasta encouraged. “None of us like it, but try to think what’s best for Leolin.”

Harry swallowed hard and bitterly. He wanted to scream and rage and demand that he be able to stay here with Leolin, but he wouldn’t risk being barred and not being allowed to come back, even if the Healers were bluffing, he wouldn’t risk it, he couldn’t.

Nasta pulled him forward and gently put his head in the crook of his neck, letting Harry inhale the calming pheromones that he was emitting.

“This won’t last forever, Harry and the Healers are right, we need to focus on the twins as well and to do that you need rest and food.”

“I just don’t want to leave him.” Harry warbled. “I feel so lost, so out of control, I don’t know what to do!”

“Then listen to me and let me tell you what to do.” Nasta said gently. “I’ll look after you.”

“Who’ll look after you?” Harry asked concernedly.
Nasta chuckled darkly. “I’m almost forty, love, I’m the top dominant of our family, I’ll look after myself or I wouldn’t be fit to be your top dominant, though I wouldn’t say no to cwtching every now and then.”

Harry smiled then, albeit weakly, but he tried. He sat back and nodded as he brushed the tears from his face.

“We can try it your way, but I can’t promise that I won’t give you hell over it because I probably will. I don’t want to leave him here.”

“It’s to make him better.” Nasta assured him.

“I know that…logically, but part of me doesn’t want to listen to the logical part of my brain.”

“I think that’s why you always ended up in trouble, it’s because you didn’t listen to the logical part of your brain that you ended up running after a death omen that turned out to be a mass murderer.” Draco commented flippantly.

“Wait, what?!” Nasta hissed. “When was this?!”

Harry glared at Draco. “My third year.”

“You took on a mass murderer when you were THIRTEEN!” Nasta hissed, his face reddening.

“It was better than the sixty foot basilisk when I was twelve.” Harry answered distractedly as he was handed Leolin carefully and he elatedly got to cuddle his sick son back into his arms.

“What did you just say?” Blaise asked.

Harry looked up and then he seemed to realise exactly what he had said. He pulled a face.
“Well at least I can still surprise you after two years.” He said. “I told you all that my school years were adventurous.”

“Your first year.” Nasta nodded. “I remember, but I thought that was it.”

Harry actually laughed. “Yet you knew about the Tri-wizard tournament when I was fourteen and my journey to the Ministry at fifteen where I fought and killed Voldemort and you thought hunting for the Philosophers stone was the worst?”

“It seems we need to have a talk about all this.”

“There’s nothing to talk about, it happened, it’s in the past. My school boy adventures are the last thing on my mind right now.” Harry answered as he cradled Leolin more firmly into his chest, Leolin who was sleeping deeply, deeper than Harry had ever seen him.

He picked up a tiny hand, the skin dry and paper thin, and held it gently, staring at Leolin. He couldn’t stop staring.

“I love you sweet boy. I will never, never give up on you, so you don’t get to give up either, do you hear me? You fight, Leolin; you fight for me, for your Daddies, for your brothers and your sister and most of all for yourself. You fight and you keep fighting, I will never say goodbye to you for real, so please don’t say it to me.”

Three hands pressed against his back and shoulders and one hand slipped over his side to his stomach, Harry smiled softly at the silent support offered to him.

“We’re all here for you, love, even if we are forced to go home, it’s only goodbye for now, not forever. I know you’re going to get better because I know that my strong little fighter won’t give up and neither will we, no matter what happens. We will always love you, don’t you give up, don’t you say goodbye.”

Harry was aware that he was going around in circles, but he didn’t care as he widened his eyes to stop the tears from falling as he cradled Leolin to him. He swallowed; he couldn’t believe the papers had found out about Leolin and Calix being in the hospital and the only possible reason for Myron not telling them that morning would have been because he didn’t know either. He had come over very earlier, so he might not have seen the paper yet.

The media was going to pay for this breach of privacy, it had grated on his nerves when they’d published naked photos of him arriving at the hospital with his newborn children, publishing a story about his dying, hospitalised baby was a huge leap over the boundary line and he wouldn’t stand for it, if Richard couldn’t handle it himself along with his trial, he’d ask if his business partner could sue the media for him.

This ended, he wasn’t the little boy who didn’t have anyone to protect him or look out for him anymore, he was an adult now, he had family completely surrounding him, but more importantly he was a Mother, the naked photos of him he could take, the article about his ruined anniversary dinner he could take, but he would not stand idly by and do nothing as they theorised and speculated on why his baby was in the hospital, what had happened, if it was his fault, his lovers fault or if his baby would live or not. He wouldn’t stand for it and if he could he’d rip them all to pieces, the Daily Prophet, Witch Weekly, World News, any and all of them who’d published the article or some semblance of it about his baby would get the full force of his rage and Merlin help them if Leolin didn’t make it.

Harry was all but dragged out the hospital an hour later and he couldn’t stop the tears as he was pulled away from Leolin so that he could go down to have his X-rays done.

Nasta picked him up and bumped him over his shoulder so that he could carry him easier and Harry wrapped himself around Nasta tightly, holding on as he cried. It helped to know that this hurt his mates as much as it hurt him, he hated it, he didn’t want to leave, but he couldn’t risk being barred from the hospital.

He hated those fucking Healers, he hated them for making him leave, but he respected the hell out of them for sleeping in the hospital just to keep an all-night vigil on Leolin to make sure that he was alright and if his little boy survived this…he’d apologise to them for his behaviour, his words, his thoughts and he’d send them and their families on fucking holiday to the tropics if he could, but he hated them in that moment as he was taken through the floo in tears, his heart ripped in two between the sick baby he was going home to and the sick baby he was being forced to leave in the hospital.

Chapter Eighty-Five - Our Farewell

Harry knew immediately when he got home through the floo that Myron had been told of the news article. His face was red, bordering on purple, a vein was throbbing in his temple and his one hand was clenched into a tight fist, the other was wrapped around Calix’s sleeping body.

Aneirin was sat on the settee, he looked angry too and he also had a red flush to his face and neck, he was holding the newspaper spread out over his knees.

“Let me see.” Harry demanded, his throat raw.

“I don’t think now is the right…” Nasta tried but Harry cut over him.

“Now is the perfect time, give it to me!”
Aneirin handed the paper over reluctantly and Harry glared at it in disgust as he read the article. He ground his teeth together and was practically shaking with his anger the more that he read. He had been right, they subtly implied that it was his, or his lovers’, fault, they insinuated that if a ‘Mother’, which Harry took to mean a woman, had been in their household it wouldn’t have happened and speculated on why two of his children had been admitted to St Mungos and why one was still there despite the attention of senior Healers, theorising heavily that the baby wasn’t going to leave the hospital alive after its treatment in his care.

He was going to kill all of them. Suing them wasn’t enough, he was going to march straight to their offices and rip them all limb from limb and then slash out their throats.

He hadn’t realised that he’d actually been doing just that until Draco rushed after him and snatched him up into his arms, holding him tight as Nasta read the article aloud, sneering heavily.

Of course Narcissa flooed over in such a panic that she almost fell over Myron’s foot and the bigger man had to dart quickly to catch her by grabbing the back of her robes and yanking her up, unable to do anything more gentle or gentlemanly as Calix was still sleeping in his other arm.

“Mother.” Draco greeted, unable to go to her because he was afraid that Harry might make a break for escape.

Before another word could be said, Lucius Malfoy was there looking almost apoplectic with rage, his pale face flushed the same pink that Draco’s went when angry.

“I take it that this is another unauthorised piece?” He snapped out softly with so much contained anger and threat that it reminded Harry that this man had been a Death Eater, blackmailed into it or not, he had been a Death Eater.

“I don’t want to sue them.” Harry said calmly.

Eight heads almost broke their necks with how quickly they turned to stare at him.

“How could you not?!” Blaise demanded.

“I want them dead.” Harry snarled, kicking out and writhing in Draco’s hold. “I want every single one of them DEAD!”

Nasta took him from Draco and forced his head into the crook of his neck, but Harry wasn’t having any of it and he unsheathed his fangs and bit Nasta’s neck instead, which startled Nasta enough to drop him and then Harry rushed for the nearest door.
It was Aneirin who caught him this time, the sixty year old man surprisingly quick for such an age, but then it didn’t really count with Drackens, sixty in Dracken years was the equivalent of being stuck at thirty biologically, or at least Harry thought it might have been, because the speed and strength of Aneirin left him stumped stupid as to what had happened and how he had been stopped for a few moments.

Then Nasta, fangs, claws and wings out, snatched him back and snarled right in his ear.

“Remember that he’s pregnant, Nas.” Was all that Aneirin said as he sat back on the settee.

Harry felt teeth scrape over the back of his neck and his instincts stilled his body immediately, those teeth bit down just enough to apply pressure without breaking the skin and his body was flooded with endorphins and he went boneless in Nasta’s arms.

“I am your dominant, the top dominant for this family! I decide what we do.” Nasta growled harshly at him. “You do not make the decisions for us, I do!”

Harry was pushed onto the settee and he stayed there unhappily.

“We’re suing them.” Nasta growled tightly. “I won’t have my family disrespected in such a way, I won’t have my submissive or my subordinates accused of endangering our children and I will not allow them to get away with surmising over my sick, hospitalised son.”

The three older men in the room nodded and they started talking about the process to get the lawsuit rolling.

“I will start wording the letters.” Lucius promised. “I sent the cease and desist letter in the summer when they harassed Harry at his own graduation, I am certain that you will win this case.”

“Thank you, we appreciate your help.” Nasta nodded.

Max forced a cup of tea into Harry’s hands, his own shaking a bit too much to be anything other than pain related and Harry sat up and took note of it, thinking of something else besides Leolin for the first time in several hours.

“Are you okay?” He asked softly, trying to avoid Nasta’s attention.
Max sat down and held out his quivering hands.

“It feels like they’re being stabbed over and over.” Max grumbled. “It’s the Skele-gro.”

“I remember what that was like; it felt like a thousand splinters were being stabbed into my arm.”

Harry took his one hot hand and rubbed it between both of his own and Max sighed happily.

“This helped when I was dealing with Skele-gro, a little bit at least, I wasn’t allowed any visitors in the Hospital Wing, so I had to do it myself and as it was my whole arm, it never really worked properly, at least it’s only your knuckles. Have you taken any more pain reliever?”

“I don’t deserve it.” Max said softly, looking away in shame.

Harry gave him the look that that comment deserved.

“Can someone go and get Max a pain reliever please.” Harry asked as he continued massaging Max’s burning knuckles, swapping over to his other hand.

Draco did as he was told and brought back the potion quickly, which Harry forced Max to drink, not that it took much as Myron was giving Max his own look, which effectively had Max swallowing the potion quickly and without question.

“What happened to your hands?” Aneirin asked curiously.

“He thought that it would be a good idea to hit walls.” Harry replied as he finished up his massage and picked up his cup of tea, somehow he just knew there was a calming draught in it.

Once he’d drained his tea and the potion had taken effect, only then did he realise that the only baby in the room was Calix. He could almost feel his panic attacking the calming draught.
“Where are the others?” He demanded.

“They went up for their afternoon nap. Aneirin and I had just come back down when you came home.” Myron answered concisely.

Harry knew then that he was still a little slow and shocky, he should have known that his babies would have gone up for their nap by now, but the routine he had worked out with his mates that they kept to strictly had slipped from his mind and he couldn’t remember anything and that made him feel useless.

“They won’t sleep for long.” Aneirin told them. “They barely stayed down for their midmorning nap. They know that something’s wrong.”

They found out exactly how true that was when only fifteen minutes later they heard one of the babies waking up and letting out a shrill cry, which woke the others.

Nasta and Blaise went up to get them and when they came down, two babies apiece, there were tears on chubby little cheeks.

“Mama!” Braiden called out as soon as he saw him sat on the settee, he was struggling in Blaise’s arms to get to him, reaching out for him.

Harry took him from Blaise and held him tight, but it seemed his three other babies wanted him and his attention as well and Harry was stuck with Regan lounging on his lap, Farren was on one side of him and Tegan and Braiden were on his other side and he was getting the full works, babbling, screeches, dribbling, calls of ‘Mama’ and the baby equivalent of hugs, which included little hands clenching in his hair.

“I missed you all too.” Harry said softly as he tried to hold their squirming bodies and stop them from falling to the floor as they all babbled over one another.

Braiden was settled and happy to know that Harry was there and was not going anywhere as he slipped himself off the settee and crawled over the floor to his toys, looking back to make sure that Harry hadn’t moved from where he was sat on the settee.

He got out his toys from the large box in the corner, which attracted Regan’s attention and he slipped down to crawl over to the toys too and he giggled happily as Braiden handed him a wooden block and they started building a tower together, a very wonky, strange looking tower, but still a tower. Harry just loved watching them playing together, Braiden handing Regan blocks, sharing without being taught or told, doing it because he wanted to.

Tegan babbled angrily and got onto the floor and Harry watched her carefully as she went the long way around the coffee table so that Braiden wouldn’t see her, trying to sneak up on him to hurt him for taking Regan’s attention, and then Blaise picked her up, which she did not like at all if her squalling was any indication.

Calix made a soft sound in his sleep and Harry stood up, handing a relaxed and laidback Farren quickly to Max and taking Calix from Myron and taking him away from the noise, but it was too late, he made it to the hallway when glassy jet black eyes blinked open and Calix babbled softly, tiredly.

Harry sighed. “Hello, love, how are you?”

Harry brushed his fluffy hair back from his face and kissed him gently; sniffing him lightly and he didn’t need to breathe in any deeper than that, he smelt the sickness on him, the cloying, too sweet smell of it and it almost choked him. His arms automatically clenched tight around Calix before relaxing so that he didn’t hurt his sick son.

He took Calix back into the living room and he grimaced at the people there.

“Did he have his potion?” He asked.

Myron nodded. “He refused all solid food though; he had half a bottle of milk instead. He was able to swallow it more easily than anything more solid.”

Harry nodded and cradled Calix gently until Narcissa wanted a hold and he passed him over reluctantly. It was driving him out of his mind smelling the sickness on Calix and knowing that he was sick and that Leolin was sick too, but Calix wasn’t getting better, surely there should have been some improvement by now, but all Calix wanted to do was continually sleep and he wasn’t eating properly. He was nine months old; he needed more than just half a bottle of milk.

Even now Harry watched him fighting off sleep, little mouth puckering in a yawn as he settled down in Narcissa’s arms to sleep some more. He was worried.

He felt like he was having a complete mental breakdown, torn clean in half between Leolin and Calix, he wanted to keep them both together so that he could stay with them indefinitely until they were both recovered, but doing so would risk Leolin’s life and going between the both of them was hurting something within him, he tugged at his own hair and bit his bottom lip hard to keep in the sob that wanted to escape. He felt like he was going slowly insane and he was losing his grip on reality, it wasn’t any wonder why the Ministry classed Drackens as dark, dangerous creatures if this is what they saw, the mindless insanity that came from being stuck between two sick children when he was unable to help either of them.

A shrill scream of pain had him snapping his head over to see Tegan attacking Braiden, her little hands fisted into Braiden’s hair tighter than tight and putting all of her weight behind pulling on it, and of course then he heard Calix crying behind him as he was woken by Braiden’s cries and he snapped.

“Stop it, Tegan! For fuck’s sake just STOP IT!” He shouted as loudly as he could at her.

He realised exactly what he’d done in the silence that followed and he was horrified with himself as he stared wide eyed at his frowning daughter. Her hazel eyes filled with tears and when the first one fell, Harry broke and he ran from the room and barricaded himself in his bedroom.

His own tears started and he sobbed harshly, wracking his whole body as he cried. He couldn’t believe what he’d just done, to his own child no less, and he slumped to the floor, curled up on his side, which put him partially under the bed, and he just cried. He cried violently, the picture of Tegan’s crumpled face in his mind until he was sick and then he couldn’t stop crying or vomiting. It was a vicious, unending, unrelenting circle, he couldn’t stop crying and he was so disgusted with himself that he vomited and then it carried on until he was lying in his own sick and then he couldn’t move himself because of how hard he was sobbing, said sobs wracking and convulsing his whole body out of his control.

He was shaking and he couldn’t believe that he’d shouted at his baby daughter, what sort of monster was he?

Someone knocked on the door and it creaked open, then suddenly he was being pulled backwards and someone was soothing him, but he couldn’t see through his tears. He was carried into the bathroom and placed by the toilet.

“I was wondering when this would start, you always suffer with morning sickness and you’re almost two months pregnant.” Nasta’s strong, comforting voice said gently as he pulled his hair away from his mouth.

“It’s not morning sickness.” Harry said weakly. “I cried too much and started being sick and then I couldn’t stop. I’m a monster.”

“You’re not a monster.” Nasta told him with a sigh. “We’re all under a lot of pressure and the stress of this is getting to all of us. Tegan is no worse off for having you shout at her, in fact she’s actually behaving herself for once.”

“She is nine months old! I shouted at my nine month old daughter!” Harry sobbed.

“It’s alright.” Nasta soothed as he rocked Harry gently. “These aren’t normal circumstances, you don’t go around shouting at her every day, it was once, Harry. Once under a high pressure, severe stress situation. Let it go, love.”

Harry cried onto Nasta and breathed calmly and shallowly to calm his roiling belly.

“I can’t believe I shouted at her like that, she’s going to hate me.”

“She cried for you the moment you left the room.” Nasta told him. “You were the one she wanted and she stopped hurting Braiden as well.”

“I need to see her, I need to apologise.”

“You don’t. Do you feel better?”

Harry nodded as he stood on wobbly legs and washed his hands and face with cold water, checking in the mirror to make sure there was no vomit in his hair. Nasta was in the bedroom cleaning up the mess he’d made and then he escorted him down the stairs.

“Are you alright?” Draco asked him gruffly, pulling Harry into a tight hug.

Harry nodded.

“Ma mam ma.” Tegan called out, her own face tearstained as she crawled to his legs and sat back on her knees lifting her hands up to him.

Harry picked her up and cuddled her tightly, apologising to her over and over. He told her how sorry he was and how much he loved her as he kissed her chubby cheek as she clung to him.

“Sit down, Harry; you need to recover your strength.” Nasta said as he sat Harry down and fussed over him.

“It was just a little sick.” Harry said weakly.
“You were sick?” Max asked and he shared a look with Nasta.

“What?” Harry asked with a frown. “I cried too hard, that’s all.”

Max looked relieved and he sighed with that relief.

“What’s the matter?”

“If you’d been sick because of an illness, you couldn’t have gone back to see Leolin.” Blaise told him.

“But you weren’t.” Nasta said firmly before Harry could rip out Blaise’s throat for daring to say such a thing. “So we’ll be going back in a few hours to see him, but first, you need to eat something to regain your strength.”

“You aren’t giving me a choice, are you?” Harry said with a groan.

Nasta shook his head. “No. You eat or you aren’t going back, especially after being so sick upstairs.”

Harry just nodded, giving in to Nasta’s demands without a fight. He didn’t want to fight any more as he rocked Tegan in his arms, holding her little head to his chest, running gentle fingers through her hair, it reached just below her ears, it made Harry smile as he realised that she and Nasta had the same length hair, though Nasta did grow it a little longer on top and at the back.

He was watched as he sat on the floor to eat a bowl of light soup, Tegan staying between his legs on the floor, playing with his socked toes and a stuffed penguin.

Harry ate his soup easily and then a sandwich with two cups of honey tea and a glass of water. He had Calix back in his arms as Myron and Lucius left to start the suing process of the Daily Prophet and Narcissa followed after them half an hour later, leaving Aneirin to stay with them, offering to be their babysitter when they went back to see Leolin. He looked troubled however.

“What’s wrong, Dad?” Nasta asked, picking up on the thread of tension also as he wiped Farren’s chin with a muslin cloth after he’d dribbled a biscuit over his face because he’d eaten it with too much relish and fervour.
“I’m just wondering how long it’s going to take the Faerie courts to see that article and put two and two together. They read the Daily Prophet as well.”

Nasta’s face went stark white and Harry felt a thread of fear filter into his heart.

“They won’t go near him.” He said firmly and with more confidence than he felt.

“If the courts decide that Leolin isn’t safe with us…” Nasta said weakly.

“They won’t take him!” Draco hissed. “Over my dead fucking body!”

“Don’t say things like that!” Harry cried out. “They won’t take our Leolin and they certainly will not be killing any of us! I won’t allow it!”

“They can’t just take him can they?” Max asked. “I mean, that would be the worst thing possible for Leolin right now, they’d end up killing him and that’s the last thing they want, right? So they can fight us all they want, but the Ministry won’t recognise their authority in the hospital because they’re magical creatures, so they can’t get access to Leolin without our permission and even then that’s subject to the Healers’ demands. They cannot get to Leolin in the hospital and they don’t know where we are, we’d have to take Leolin to them, which of course we won’t do. They cannot get our son and if they do find out where we live…we get the kids out and we fight them for daring to try and take our baby boy by force.”

“They won’t.” Aneirin shook his head. “They won’t try to take him by force, there’d be too much of an opportunity for him to be injured or killed. They’d talk their way to him, they’d play mind games to make you feel like handing him over is the only way to keep him alive. They’d make you feel guilty and useless and unfit to look after him and they’d convince you that the only way is to hand him over, they’d promise that you’d get to see him when he’s older, that he can see you whenever he likes when he’s an adult and much stronger than he is as a child, but even if he reached his adult years you’d never see him again. They’d adopt him out to Faerie parents, who would raise him like their own and they’d never tell him that they weren’t his biological parents and because you gave him up to them, Faerie law, which they won’t tell you about by the way, means that you sign away all of your rights to him as his parents and you agree to never seek to get him back and you never try to see him again under threat of execution in the Faerie city, even if you don’t touch a document, the mere act of handing him over is paramount in Faerie law, if you hand him over to them, then you’re signing away your right to him as his parents.”

Harry felt weak kneed at that and he carefully felt his way to the settee to sit down. He felt more reassured that they wouldn’t take Leolin by force, because he knew he would never hand his son over to anyone, but the thought that if he did, in a moment of grief or guilt that the Faeries would exploi t mercilessly, that he’d never see his little boy again made bile crawl up the back of his throat.

He made it to the downstairs bathroom with just seconds to spare as he dry heaved twice and then he vomited up his lunch. He was dimly aware of hands touching him, soothing him as he calmed himself and lay his head on his arms, which were folded over the toilet seat.

“They won’t ever get him.” Blaise said soothingly. “We would never give up our rights to him, even if we weren’t Drackens.”

“What if I do?” Harry whispered hoarsely. “What if they make me feel like I can’t look after him? I already feel like I can’t! But I won’t give him up to anyone else. I won’t!”

“You take Nasta with you to the Faerie city, you don’t go alone, Harry, so even if you do start to feel that handing him over is the only way to keep him alive through their vicious mind tricks, Nasta will stop you, Innamorato.”

“What if we both start feeling like it’s the only way?” Harry spoke aloud his new fear.

“That is easily solved if you do not take him to the city. If he’s not there for them to take, how can they take him?” Blaise said carefully. “Go to them without Leolin to talk everything through, and then when you feel better and more secure, take him to visit.”

Harry turned around and latched onto Blaise and hugged him tightly.

“What would I have ever done without you?” Harry sniffed. “You’re always the one to help me through these hard times.”

“I wouldn’t be a very good dominant mate if I didn’t.” Blaise brushed off.

“No. It’s more than that. You’ve been here for me from the very beginning, Blaise. You were my first everything. My first boyfriend, my first mate, my first lover, my first love, the Father to my first born child, I had my first ever heat period with you, my first mate meeting with the knowledge that you were always there, you’ve always been there for me.”

“Not always.” Blaise said with a self-depreciating grimace.
“You were punished and forgiven for that, Blaise.” Harry told him. “Like Max has been punished and forgiven. That’s how this works, if we do something wrong, we get punished for it and time to realise what we’ve done and to make amends and then we are forgiven and life carries on. I still love you, Blaise, like I still love Max despite any wrong doing he’s done. He upset me, you upset me, I get over it and I still love you.”

“That’s because we have children with you, would you have put up with us and our actions if we weren’t Drackens? If we never had children with you?” Blaise asked seriously.

Harry sighed heavily. “It’s impossible to say, I am a Dracken and we do have children, but I know, deep inside that I love you all. I love every single one of you right down into the deepest parts of me and if anything happened to you, it would kill a piece of me to lose you. Submissive Drackens are forced to love their dominants with the birth of children, but I loved you all before any children came along and I think that if that dominant died, then the hold over the submissive would die as well, thus they would be happy and grateful and glad that the dominant had died. I wouldn’t feel that way if you or Max died, Blaise. I’d be crushed and devastated. I don’t just love you because of Braiden; I don’t hate you just because you walked out on me once due to anger, stress and sleep deprivation. It’ll take a hell of a lot more than that to counter all the good qualities that you have, all the little things you do for me each and every day, it will take a lot of bad and negative feelings to change the love I hold for you into hate.”

Blaise all but crushed him in his arms then, holding him tight and kissing his hair.

“Ti amo, Blaise.” Harry whispered with a soft smile into Blaise’s shoulder.

“Ti amo, mio diletto.” Blaise whispered back, his breath just ruffling the messy tufts of Harry’s hair.

“I’d kiss you right now, but I’ve just been sick and I think only Max is gross enough to kiss me after I’ve vomited, so I need to brush my teeth.”

Harry did just that as he pushed away from Blaise’s warm, soft body.

“Max kissed you after you’d vomited, properly kissed you?”

“Four times.” Harry nodded. “Tongues and all.”
Harry laughed as he saw Blaise’s face in the mirror, crinkled with his disgust.

“I am never kissing him again.”

“It was before I’d even mated to him. It was when I was rejecting Draco, I accepted Max through those four kisses and then I took Draco back, it’s how I forced them both to be mated to me when really only one of them should have been. If it hadn’t have been for those four kisses, I might never have had Max to call mine.”

“Then I’m glad he found the courage to kiss you, vomit and all.” Blaise said and Harry hit him gently with a chuckle. “Let’s go and get you something to drink, mio amore, you need a sit down too.”

Harry let Blaise lead him into the living room and sit him on the settee before he was gone to get him another glass of water.

“You look like you feel better.” Max said with a worried smile.

“I told Blaise about the time that you kissed me after I’d been sick. He was suitably disgusted, which made me laugh.”

Max laughed himself and sat next to him, pulling him into a deep kiss.

“I don’t care what you’ve been doing; the urge to just kiss you overtakes everything else. I love you too much, even back then, to care about such trivial things, I needed to kiss you, so I did.”

“He’d been sick!” Draco said aghast. “Your first thought should have been to comfort him and get him into a bed, not ravishing him!”

“It wasn’t that type of sick, Draco.” Harry assured him. “It was after Max told me what that little bastard Dominic was going to do to my babies, I couldn’t hold onto my stomach after hearing that my children, my babies, would have been harvested for potion ingredients.”
Harry looked to his babies, Braiden and Regan who were playing in the remains of what had once been a tower, Farren on the floor by the table actually playing for once with a ball, Tegan by Draco’s feet still with her stuffed penguin and Calix, fast asleep on the settee, cushions piled high to prevent him from rolling off. He shivered and cuddled into Max.

“I wouldn’t have allowed him to do such a thing.” Blaise assured him as he came back into the living room. “I was older, bigger, stronger than him and I was mated to you first. If by some freak accident you had mated to such a vile dominant, I would have killed him for you and you would have been able to get a new mate, but he would have never been able to do what he had planned to our children. He wouldn’t have lived long enough to have seen them born.”

Harry smiled at that and accepted the glass of water. “I hope none of our children end up with anyone like that.”

“We’ll raise them right and we’ll raise them to be picky.” Nasta assured him. “Draco and Blaise got lucky, finding you so young and with only a few meetings between them, but it takes a few meetings to get into the swing of things and then a few more to actually find a submissive worth the time and effort. No one is exaggerating when they say that you were one of the most coveted subsmissives of the last decade. I can count on one hand the amount of submissives I’ve truly chased after; two of them rejected me and one found her dominant before I even got to speak to her, but the point I’m trying to make is that submissives like you and like the three others I saw are rare, Harry and they’re getting rarer. For every twenty submissive meetings only one or two will be kind, conscientious, loving submissives.”

“I was bisexual with a preference for men.” Max shrugged. “Chasing after the female submissives was something I knew I had to do, because everyone thought that male submissives had fallen out of the genes and with female dominant numbers going down too…everyone thought that the anomalies were being bred out…I think I chased after several submissives properly and three of them don’t count because they were my first meetings and I was young, brash and overly excited to just be near a submissive that I would have taken them if they’d been the devil incarnate. But Nasta’s right, being lucky enough to be one of the hundred dominants chosen by one of the kinder, sweeter submissives who aren’t utter sluts is near impossible. I was so stunned when you asked to speak to me that first time that my Uncle had to give me a smack to get me moving. You were so beautiful, so perfect, I couldn’t believe my luck.”

“I’m not perfect!” Harry denied with a scowl. “You know that I’m not!”

“Perfect doesn’t mean flawless.” Nasta told him with an indulging, adoring smile. “You have your faults as we all do, but you’re still perfect to us because you’re exactly what we were looking for. We say perfect because we’ve seen the utter bitches that some submissives can be, the sluts who order us to strip off so that they can fondle us before choosing us like prime cattle, the submissives who order us to fight to the death like ancient gladiators of a ludus, those who belittle us and make us lose all self-confidence and belief in ourselves. You were never like that, even with those you knew you weren’t going to be mated with, you shot a few of them down sharply after they were disrespectful to you, but you never destroyed them or their confidence and I think I loved you from the first time that I saw you. Your friend, the baby dominant, Henley, he actually took away the confidence to get his own submissive from meeting you, if his first meeting had been anyone else, acting how he did, like an overgrown child and actually allowing his Father to accompany him…he would have been torn to pieces by some subsmissives, they would have stomped on his excited buoyancy, torn out his kind, good intentions and crushed his sweet nature under foot. I’ve seen it a thousand times, even with Max.” Nasta said with a nod to Max, whose face shadowed with the memory of his first meeting where he had been ripped to pieces and had had his confidence completely shattered. “But not you, you gave that baby dominant what he needed, the belief in himself, the confidence to be himself and not to try to be someone else to impress a submissive and because of that, he’s mated with a child and another one on the way.”

Harry grinned at the reminder of Henley’s baby. The excitable young man he’d once compared to a crack addicted puppy dog had sent him an excited letter, enclosed with a photo of himself with his pretty mate Anabel and their little daughter Claudia, who was just months younger than Braiden. She had been born at the beginning of December, so she was just weeks older than his quintuplets and it made Harry feel slightly better to know that Henley’s mate Anabel had caught on her first heat after she’d given birth too. He hadn’t had an update from Henley since, but he’d made sure to inform him of his six babies with the more on the way, he’d enclosed his own family portrait photo, him, his mates and all of their little ones. It had been hell trying to get them all to look at the camera at once, but the finished result was worth it. That portrait was hanging on at least several walls of family members with instructions to update them as soon as the twins were born.

“Do you feel better now?” Aneirin asked him from where he was sat, easily forgettable, in an armchair away from them. Harry had forgotten that he was there.

Harry nodded. “I do actually. I can’t wait to hear from Henley, his mate is due in October, the same as Amelle.”

“Amelle is beating Caesar with baby names.” Max informed him. “Or at least that’s what Caesar says. Though apparently she only wanted Eleonora to be Gem Bear to wind him up.”

Harry nodded. “She did, she was never seriously considering it. He kept telling her what to do, so she tortured him with the idea that she was naming the baby Gem Bear. I wish I’d thought of it, I might have had a bit more freedom.”

His mates gave him an evil look and he smiled innocently.

“Do you want some more tea?” Max asked as he looked at the clock. It was almost two in the afternoon. They’d been told sternly not to go back until after four o’clock and that they could stay until nine at the very latest. Having the set, unchanging times helped Harry deal a little better with everything.

Harry nodded his head. “Fingers crossed I can keep this down.” He said wryly.

“Do you want to try some toast?”

Harry shook his head. “I honestly don’t think I could eat anything, I’m going to struggle with just the tea. I don’t want to risk it.”

Max fretted then and Harry sighed and pulled him into a hug, rubbing their foreheads together with a smile.

“I’m fine, Maxie, I promise. Take care of yourself, especially with your hands. I can’t keep anything down and forcing it in isn’t going to help.”

“You’re pregnant.”

“Harry’s right.” Nasta cut in. “He is pregnant, but forcing him to eat isn’t going to help him or the babies if he can’t keep it down. It’ll just ruin the lining of his stomach, so leave him be, if he feels up to it later, he can have a little light something to eat for dinner.”

Harry all but beamed at Nasta for what he’d said and he forced himself up and he threw his arms around Nasta, which made him chuckle deeply and cuddle him back. They kept this up for long minutes, wrapped up with one another and rocking from side to side with wide smiles.

“Are you two done cwtching?” Aneirin said, the laughter clear in his voice. “I think Braiden’s jealous.”

Harry looked down and found Braiden at his feet, frowning up at him and Nasta, arms around one another, Nasta swaying him lightly and soothingly.

Harry bent down and plucked his first born up off the floor and cradled him gently between him and Nasta.
“What’s the matter, Braiden?” He asked.

“Mama, baba in.”

“Baba in?” Harry said curiously. “That’s a new one.”

“Baba in.” Braiden nodded seriously, before he turned in Harry’s arms and pointed curiously to the bassinet that Leolin slept in and all at once Harry understood and his throat closed tight.

Nasta looked astounded. “I can’t believe that he made such a connection so young.”

“Baby Leolin isn’t here right now, love.” Harry said to his year old son, completely choked up. “He’s at the hospital. He needs to get better before he can come home, but I’ll be sure to let him know that you miss him.”

Braiden nodded as if he actually understood him and Harry made a mental note to be careful with what he said around Braiden from now on. If Braiden could understand what they were saying, even a little, then he wanted absolutely no swearing or cursing around him and he wanted his mates, and himself of course, to censor what they said when little ears were listening in.

He shared a look with Nasta, who nodded as if he’d read his mind, Harry smiled; Nasta truly was the best candidate for their top dominant. He knew everything that was going on and what everyone was thinking, at least vaguely enough to guess and his guesses were usually correct. Harry loved him deeply.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

At four in the afternoon, Harry had nibbled on a few dry, cream crackers and he was back in the hospital, dipping his hands into the cleansing solution while Healer Almus waved his wand over him and his mates.

He rushed into the secured, quarantined room and he hovered over Leolin’s glass bassinet, checking all the wires and counting them, to make sure they were all there and nothing had changed.

Leolin looked worse than he had that morning, his breathing was now noticeably affected as he wheezed with every inhale and rattled with every exhale. The black-purpling bruising around his eyes was more pronounced, deeper and, not a chubby baby to begin with, he was starting to look skeletal.
“What happened?!” Harry demanded in a hiss. “He looks worse!”

“The virus has spread to encompass more of his lungs. More to his left than his right lung. He’s finding it increasingly difficult to breathe, as you can probably hear for yourselves. We’ve got the ventilator on hand, just in case.” Healer Cole told him, indicating a new machine off to the one side.

“You have to stop it!” Harry demanded furiously. “Do your jobs and help him!”

“Harry.” Nasta warned him sharply. “I apologise for him, he’s been having difficulties today.”

Harry turned slowly and he glared at Nasta, baring his teeth.

“How is your pregnancy progressing?” Healer Almus concernedly.

“I’ve been queasy this afternoon.” Harry admitted as he obsessively traced Leolin’s face and body, pressing a finger to the tiny hand that was wired up to a machine that was beeping slowly, barely realising what he was saying.

“Would you like to have a once over?” Healer Almus offered.

“That would be kind, thank you.” Nasta agreed.

“There’s no need.” Harry shot down. “I’m not leaving Leolin when I only have a limited amount of time with him. Can I pick him up?”

Healer Cole shook his head firmly. “No. At the moment he’s at the perfect elevation to keep him breathing on his own and to help ease the congestion in his lungs, any disturbance to that could mean that he has to be put on the ventilator.”

Harry swallowed the frustration and the urge to scream. This was for Leolin, he couldn’t think of himself and his own needs. He wouldn’t be that selfish, he’d already shoved his children to the side these past two days, he’d made a sick Calix cry and he’d actually shouted at Tegan. He had acted like the monster that the Ministry claimed all of his species, but he couldn’t, he wouldn’t, put Leolin’s life at risk for himself. He wouldn’t allow it when he knew that it could kill his son.

He contented himself with watching Leolin sleep, soothed himself with the knowledge that he was still breathing on his own for now. Leaving him was going to be that much harder when it came to nine o’clock, but until then he had five full hours with Leolin, unless of course the Healers threw them out early, but he didn’t want to think about that happening, because if it did, it would mean that Leolin had taken a turn for the worst.

Leolin woke up when they’d been there for two hours, just sat in the quiet of the room with the whirring and beeping of the machines and he was visibly happy to see Harry bent over his bassinet as he wriggled enthusiastically as much as his tired, aching body could while it was wired up to all sorts.

Healer Almus handed him a premade bottle and Harry slipped an arm under the back of his head after asking the Healers if it was alright and he offered Leolin the bottle and he looked very unhappy to have the bottle waved in his face, but he took one look at Harry and opened his mouth, his throat looked red raw and Harry held his tears back by every single ounce of strength that he had left in his body. He now understood why Leolin didn’t want to drink, every swallow must have been a painful hell for him, but he did it anyway, for his Mother, for Harry, who encouraged every single suckle and swallow enthusiastically.

“Who is such a good boy?” He gushed exaggeratedly, but Leolin cracked tired eyes open to look at him and he smiled around the bottle bulb.

Harry could feel his emotions getting out of hand and he used his right foot to stomp on his left, grinding down on his toes as he took a deep breath to calm himself. While Leolin was awake, he would be the picture of strength, care and confidence along with love and happiness. He could break down later at home, safe in the knowledge that his children couldn’t see or hear him and that he had the support of his lovers at his side.

“You are my special little Faerie baby and I love you very, very much.” Harry said clearly, his voice only wavered once.

“Ma.” Leolin croaked softly, letting the bottle slip from his mouth.

“I’m right here, sweetheart.” Harry assured him with a wide smile. “I’m right here, you can go back to sleep now, your Daddies and I aren’t leaving, we won’t leave you sweet baby.”

Harry almost choked on the lie, but he watched as Leolin yawned, his raw throat being exposed yet again, before he held onto Harry’s finger and he fell asleep again, but seeing him drink a little milk boosted Harry’s spirits. Leolin hadn’t given up and if he was half the little boy that Harry knew he was inside, then he wouldn’t give up and neither would he.
The hours passed all too quickly, but they dragged slowly, endlessly on as they sat around Leolin and listened to him fight just to breathe. He woke up once more for some more milk and he didn’t look at anyone else except Harry and it was Harry he reached out for when he had had enough milk.

Harry held him and hugged him as best as he could without picking him up or moving him from the soft, padded, foam mat that was keeping him elevated as he struggled to breathe before he fell back into a restless, uneasy sleep.

Healer Almus kicked them out at nine in the night and Harry was once again dragged away by Nasta as he cried and begged not to leave the hospital, to not be taken away from his son.

Aneirin had put all of their children to bed, but he’d kept Calix down with him and informed them unhappily that he had been sick at about seven. Max checked him over as the mate with the most medical training and he declared that he was alright, but that they’d have to keep an eye on him and if he was sick again or if his condition worsened, then he’d have to pay another visit to the hospital. Harry felt his sanity slipping away from him yet again and Nasta quickly bundled him up and off to the bedroom, ordering someone, anyone, to get a cup of tea and a mild sleeping potion.

“I don’t want to sleep. I can’t sleep, Nasta, please!” Harry begged, in tears at the very thought of it.

“You need to sleep, love. I don’t like doing this to you, you know that I don’t, but you’re pregnant and you need to sleep. It’s only a mild dosage, you won’t have a full one, you’ll sleep for eight hours under the potion and then however long your body can afterwards, but our twins need you to get some sleep. Let us deal with everything and get some sleep.”

“I can’t leave you to deal with everything…”

“We are not pregnant. You are.” Nasta told him firmly. “I need you to sleep, Harry, as much for my peace of mind as for your health and our twins’ health. You’ll be up in time to visit Leolin in the morning, after a nice shower and breakfast, but right now, I need you to sleep, please do this for me, for our twins. Please, Cariad.”

Harry sighed and he ducked his head. “Okay, but I’m not happy about this and you promise, you promise me, that you will look after Calix.”

“You heard Max, he’s alright, he just needs some watching, so if I bring his cot in here to sleep beside us and I sleep the closest to him, will that reassure you enough to sleep peacefully?”

Harry nodded. “Get some sleep yourself, Nas, please. I know that you never had any last night and don’t try to fob me off, an hour or two on the settee doesn’t count. You can put a ward on the floo to alert you to incoming calls and Calix can be right here with us. We all need the sleep and if you’re forcing me to sleep, I want you to sleep for more than five hours tonight.”

“I’ll make sure that he does.” Max assured him as he came over to the bed and handed over the potion laced tea.

“You too, Max, I want all of you to sleep for a couple of hours. You’re all forcing me to eat and sleep and bathe and I know I’m pregnant, but you need to look after yourselves too, babies or no babies. They’re going to need their Daddies too.” Harry told them, palm over his belly as he sipped at his tea, waiting for it to cool a little before he gulped it down.

“I’ll make sure of it.” Nasta promised as he kissed him and took off Harry’s jacket and his socks, because he knew how much Harry hated sleeping in his socks, and he tucked him in and urged him to drink down his tea.

Harry gulped it down before the potion could take effect and he spilt half the cup on himself, but he nodded off before he could lie down, he never saw the adoring smile that Max and Nasta gave him as they laid him down on the mattress, undressed him fully and covered him over, taking away the almost empty cup and they left him to sleep. They had a challenging several days coming up for them and they were going to need all of their strength and control to get them through it, but whatever the outcome, they would get through it together as a family.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Harry didn’t know what was worse that following week. How slowly it went as they waited desperately for any update on Leolin, as they waited anxiously for Calix to show even the slightest improvement. So far Calix had not improved that they could see and all the updates on Leolin were the same and left him craving for even more information.

The funeral for Evelyn had been held on the sixteenth of September, which Alexander had graciously and sympathetically offered to postpone for them, but they had refused. Evelyn deserved to be put to rest by her family, with her family around her. He couldn’t make the whole Maddison family wait to bury a beloved family member. There were relatives that he’d never seen or met before, Alexander’s brothers and sisters and nieces and nephews who were scattered to the four winds, all over the world, all reunited together for the funeral of Evelyn Maddison, all waiting to bury her, he couldn’t keep them waiting because of himself. Evelyn deserved to be put to rest, she deserved better than to rot above the ground waiting for something that might never happen.

It almost destroyed Max to attend, but Nasta had him in hand as he pulled Max into his body and held him tight when it looked like Max would bolt and hide from them. Harry reached up and laid a hand on Max’s, which was locked around Nasta’s shoulders as his biggest mate’s knees gave in, Nasta holding him up and supporting that large body and heavier weight without a murmur of complaint. Blaise was running soothing lines up and down Max’s spine as he watched the sermon and Draco was stood, tall and silent, the picture of perfect solemnness, it was only when you slipped around and looked at him from the front that you realised that his hand was between Max and Nasta’s bodies, his palm resting comfortingly on Max’s belly, the back of his hand pressing into Nasta’s belly in silent support.

Severus Snape’s funeral had been held three days later on the nineteenth, in the Hogwarts grounds and in front of the whole school. Old students had been invited back along with retired teachers who had known him and it was easy to sink into the shadows as he helped Blaise grieve for his Godfather and Draco grieve for his mentor.

Harry was stood with Hermione, who told him that even if Snape hadn’t exactly been pleasant to her in her school years, he had still been a brilliant teacher and had helped her push herself to be her best to prove everyone wrong about her and her abilities. It was strange that half the graduated students that had come back to see Snape buried on the grounds had said near enough the same thing. They hadn’t liked the man, but they said that he was a brilliant Potion’s Master and in his own ‘unique’ way, had taught them what they needed to know.

A monument had been erected for Snape in a quiet, out of the way area of the grounds, far from being disrespectful to the man, Harry thought he would have rather preferred it as he looked at the wild plants growing around the area that Snape was being laid to rest in, at least half of them were used as potions ingredients.

Severus Snape was finally laid to rest and Harry shuddered at the thought of losing his mates in such a way. He and Nasta had gone with Snape to find Regulus and he still had the odd nightmare about it now. Snape deserved peace and quiet, he deserved to be reunited with Regulus and the baby daughter that they had lost.

Throughout the funerals, two in near as many days, Harry forced his mind to be blank and calm. He absolutely did not let it wander to the thoughts that in another few days he could be doing this for his own little boy. He wouldn’t have been able to attend either funeral with that thought in his mind, but now, on the twenty-second of September, it was all he could think about.

He was spending as much time in the hospital as he could, he knew he was barely taking care of himself and as far as he was concerned, he was at the very bottom of the list. Leolin and Calix came first, as they were both sick, his four other children came next, then his mates as real people, then his unborn twins and then himself.

He was aware that he was distancing himself from his twins, because he knew that if anything happened to Leolin or Calix, then he wouldn’t be in any fit state to look after them before or after they were born and that frightened him, truly frightened him. He didn’t want to give up on any of his babies and realising that he was subconsciously distancing himself from his own children hurt his heart. He tried to counteract what he was doing once he knew that he was doing it, but he had so much to do, so many thoughts in his head and emotions in his heart that everything he did was difficult, was a struggle and he didn’t know what to do or how to deal with it, so he shoved it to one side.

Braiden, Farren, Regan and Tegan had had their third and fourth Dragon Pox vaccines, Braiden didn’t need another one now until he was three years of age, the quintuplets needed to have another jab in four months and Calix was not allowed his third jab until he was better, but that didn’t seem like it would be any when soon.

Harry had finally had enough of Calix not improving and he snapped out where he was going as he bundled Calix up and took him through the floo and into the hospital, ignoring his startled mates. Healer Almus came out of Leolin’s room just as Harry was going to knock on the door.
“It isn’t time for…ah.” Healer Almus started before he trailed off and Harry could almost see his Healer’s mask slip into place.

“He’s not getting any better, I know that you said it would take time, but it’s been two weeks, surely he would have shown some improvements?”

“He hasn’t shown any improvements since he was discharged from the hospital?” Healer Almus asked seriously.

Harry shook his head. “I’m so worried, he’s spending all of his time sleeping, he’s not eating, he’ll only take a bit of milk when pushed and Max says that the last few times haven’t been enough to give him his potion. I know that isn’t serious, but I checked him over today and he’s started to lose weight and I know that that is dangerous, please, I know you’re looking after Leolin, but Calix is still sick!”

“Don’t wind yourself up.” Healer Almus soothed him gently; leading him into a room, a different one to the one that Calix had been in the first time. “I’ll take a look at him. Bronchiolitis is a very virulent condition. Though it often sounds worse than it is because it affects the lungs, but if Calix is still refusing to eat, he may need to be readmitted.”

Harry nodded, nervously playing with his hands as he watched Healer Almus check on a sleeping, wheezing, Calix.

“This is one of the premature babies, isn’t it?” Healer Almus asked almost conversationally, but Harry picked up on a thread of something in his voice and he swallowed, nodding slowly. “How premature was he?”

“I…he was born nearly three months early.” Harry said quietly.

“You don’t happen to know how long it was in weeks, exactly.” Healer Almus said, still in that strange tone as he checked Calix over.

“I conceived on the eighteenth of August and gave birth on the thirty-first of December; they were born ten weeks and four days early.”
Healer Almus nodded. “Is Calix the baby who wasn’t breathing at birth? The one who had fluid in his lungs?”

Harry nodded, feeling very scared now as he watched Healer Almus work on Calix. Had he focused all of his attentions on Leolin only to have Calix ripped from him instead? He had thought that Calix was going to be fine, that he was strong and robust and that he would be fine after his initial stay in the hospital because he didn’t seem as weak as Leolin, didn’t seem as small and fragile. Had he been wrong? Was he now going to lose his baby Calix because he had brushed aside his illness in favour of Leolin?

His body quivered with fear, he couldn’t lose Calix, his happy, bubbly baby, but looking at him now, pale and exhausted, struggling to breathe, he felt sick and scared. Calix was seriously ill too and he hadn’t noticed before now and because of that, Calix was suffering and through their negligence, they could now lose him after all.

“I need you to step outside for a while, Harry, go and get your lovers if you need to, but I need to check Calix over without distraction.”

Harry nodded and he rushed to Healer Cole’s office and he went straight home, stumbling out of the floo, to find that Nasta was rallying everyone and barking at them to do as he said.

“Harry! Where is Calix?” He growled.

“Healer Almus has him…he…he thinks that because he had fluid in his lungs and was so premature that he’s not healing how he shou…should be!” Harry cried desperately as he fell into Nasta’s arms. “He might have to be readmitted to the hospital.”

Harry watched Nasta swallow hard and he closed his eyes. He knew how difficult this was for all of them and having Calix in the hospital again was only going to add to their stress, but if it’s what Calix needed, he would keep him in the hospital.

“You couldn’t have waited five more minutes for us to go with you?” He sighed.

Harry shook his head. “He needed a Healer. He wasn’t getting better and time was of the essence!” He said dramatically.

Nasta nodded instead of arguing, this had been a new thing for the last week and Harry thought it was because Nasta was just too tired, he wasn’t sleeping properly and his appetite had started to dwindle. He was going to make himself sick and Harry couldn’t deal with a sick mate on top of two sick children. He just couldn’t. The stress of this was going to kill him.

“We shall stay here if you…are you allowed to go and see him?” Myron cut himself off to ask, Tegan was up on his shoulder and she was giggling as Richard pulled faces behind Myron’s back, but even as he pulled another face, he gave them a concerned, saddened look.

“I can’t say goodbye to Calix too.” Harry whispered in the quiet that followed, the only noise was of the babies playing and Tegan’s giggles. “We can go back for Calix, but Healer Almus said I had to wait outside for a bit.”

“Come on then, let’s get back to the hospital.” Max said, looking pale and sick himself.

“Keep us informed.” Myron said as he sat on the settee, sitting Tegan on his knee and bouncing her, Tegan screeching in utter delight.

“If…if we’re longer than their dinner time, they have jars in the top cupboard. Regan doesn’t like anything with sweet potato.” Harry said hesitantly.

“We have them in hand and I’m sure that Max has a book of their likes and dislikes in the kitchen.”

Max nodded. “Top, middle drawer in the counter that faces the kitchen.”

“Get going then.” Myron encouraged and Harry found himself flooing back to the hospital, landing on wobbly feet as all the floo travel in such a short amount of time affected his balance and his stomach it seemed as he was a little queasy.

Draco wrapped an arm around him and Blaise came to him on his other side, holding and supporting him and giving him comfort too as he let his head drop to Draco’s pectoral muscle and he let his two mates escort him to the family waiting room that they had spent so much time waiting for news on Leolin.

This was all wrong and backward, this shouldn’t be happening to his two youngest children, no…it shouldn’t be happening to his children at all! He wanted to scream and rage and attack, but he knew that that wouldn’t make him feel any better, he had given into those instincts and twice his children had paid the price for it, he didn’t want to think on how this was affecting his unborn twins.

The anxious waiting on tenterhooks was not something that Harry had missed and as the minutes passed like hours, he couldn’t stop himself from leaping out of his seat and pacing as much as he could, out of the reach of his mates, who would likely pull him back down in aggravation, but he needed to expel his restless, nervous energy and this was the safest way that he could think of.

Healer Almus came into the waiting room and at once, Harry wasn’t the only one on his feet waiting anxiously for the exhausted looking man to start speaking.

“Calix has been readmitted to the hospital. He should be fine…”

“You said that before!” Draco cut in angrily.

“Calix was healing fine while in the hospital, but I believe he was discharged too quickly and the potion given to him wasn’t strong enough to knock the problem on the head. He hasn’t gotten any worse, but he hasn’t improved either. The potion prevented the virus from spreading or getting any worse, but it wasn’t strong enough to help aid Calix in fighting it off. He’s on a higher dosage now…”

“How high?” Max demanded and Harry knew that look on his face, if it was one thing that Max knew better than anything else, it was potions. He would know immediately how serious things were from the dosage prescribed to Calix. Harry loved him more in that moment as he would tell them exactly how bad things were and he wouldn’t use medical speak to do it.

“We’ve put him on a three millilitre dosage three times a day.”

“That’s double what he was taking before!” Harry said aghast, it had been a struggle to get Calix to eat enough to give him the one point five millilitres of potion.

“We’ve been having trouble trying to get him to eat.” Max said, straight to the point and deadly serious. “We won’t be able to feed him enough to support a three millilitre dosage and not three times a day.”

“We’ve injected the first dose directly into his bloodstream, we will continue to do this while he’s here, by the time he leaves we would like to see an improvement to his appetite, then we shall release him back into your care. I promise that he will improve this time.”

“On a three millilitre dosage I damn well expect it.” Max said tightly.
“Calix will be fine?” Nasta questioned.

Healer Almus nodded his head once.

“How is Leolin?” He asked next.

The Healer pulled a face and closed his eyes, steeling himself.

“He has taken milk this afternoon, as you know, Harry fed him…but shortly after you left he brought it back up.”

“He…that’s new, he hasn’t done that before!” Harry said panicked.

“His vitals dropped after he’d vomited, we may have to put him back on the ventilator, just to help ease his breathing. He’s struggling.”

Harry felt like he’d been poleaxed, he could hear the blood rushing in his ears and his world sort of tipped to the one side. It wasn’t until Draco grabbed him and picked him up that he realised that he’d been swaying and his knees had gone from under him.

They all remembered the four days that Leolin had spent on the ventilator last week, how awful he’d looked and how…how utterly still he’d been and how worried they’d been that they would get that dreaded floo call in the middle of the night.

Leolin had improved to the point where he could breathe on his own again and they had taken that as such a good sign, to be told now that that improvement was wiped away in a mere hour was devastating. Leolin had been in the hospital for two weeks; Harry didn’t know how much more he could take without his brain splitting right down the middle. This was going to make him insane, he knew it.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

October saw Lucius Malfoy launching a full scale lawsuit against the Daily Prophet, who had published an article about Calix being readmitted to the hospital before he had declared his intent to sue them for the previous article, which meant that they were doubly in trouble and though the lawsuit didn’t make the mainstream news, as the Daily Prophet was one of only two newspapers that wizarding Britain read, the second being a paper for world news, everyone knew about Lucius Malfoy suing the paper from the Ministry grapevine. This was helped along when the story had been published in the Quibbler, courtesy of Luna Lovegood, who was now co-editor along with her Father. The magazine had sold out just three hours after it had gone on sale and had had to go back into re-print.

Amelle had started nesting and Caesar had flooed over to them and told them that she apologised heavily for not being able to hold on for longer in such a family crisis, but Harry waved him away.

“It’s fine, I know more than anyone that it can’t be helped. I mean, hell when I went into my nest with Braiden it was the afternoon of my seventeenth birthday! No, just make sure that she and the baby are okay and watch after this cutie.” Harry said as he chucked Eleonora under the chin and she burbled happily at him, her chubby cheeks flushed with her laughter.

Calix was released from the hospital on the fourth of October, he was eating happily and the higher dosage seemed to have knocked his virus on its head, finally, and he was back to fighting sleep, eating heartily and even playing for short amounts of time, though he still slept and rested for the majority of the day, regaining his strength. His bad cough however persisted.

The Faeries had been in touch several times in the last two weeks, demanding that they answer their questions, but none of them were particularly in the mood to entertain the pompous Faeries, so they were ignored, at least until Sindri, the head of the court, contacted them personally. Aneirin and Nasta both agreed that to ignore the head of the court was an insult that they couldn’t afford to give the Faeries.

The ninth of October, the day after Sindri had contacted them, saw Dain and Kailen standing in their living room, none of them were in the mood to play musical houses and switch around to Marianna’s house when the Healers would be contacting them at their house and Harry was not missing any news on Leolin because Dain and fucking Kailen were pushing themselves onto his family.

There was a stony silence as they, along with the non-negotiable bodyguards that they had to bring with them as members of the court, stood facing off against one another; the only good thing about this was that one of the bodyguards was Warren, though the other was unknown to them.

“Where is Leolin?” Dain asked, finally breaking the lengthy silence.

“He’s in the hospital.” Nasta answered. “As you well know. I told Sindri this yesterday and you read the papers yourselves.”

“We did not know which babe was in the hospital.” Kailen said placatingly, giving Dain a stern look. “Is Leolin well?”

“He’s in the hospital!” Harry hissed. “Of course he’s not well!”
Nasta pressed a hand to his arm and soothed him gently.

“Leolin has been sick now for over four weeks. He improves and then he relapses and then he improves again. He is currently doing well. He is fighting so very hard to continue living and we are doing our all to help him, the Healers who are looking after him haven’t left the hospital since Leolin was admitted. We are doing everything that we possibly can to help him.”

“May we ask what happened?” Kailen asked gently.

“He got sick.” Harry said, also lowering his voice and lowering his shoulders. “Bronchiolitis, a lung infection.”

“Most Faerie babies do not survive lung infections, especially not those who were born premature.” Dain said and Harry’s eyes blistered with his anger which came surging back. He’d always had a temper.

“How dare you say such a thing to us when we’re already destroyed over this! Do you have any idea how hard this last month has been for all of us?! How hard it is to visit Leolin day after day in the same hospital room! We know the odds, but it has been a month already and he is still alive, so fuck you both! You can give up on him and brush him aside like he’s already dead, but I can’t! I WON’T!”

Nasta pulled him into a hug and a look up at him showed Harry that he was glaring poisonously at Dain and Kailen, even as his gentle hands comforted him and his soft voice soothed him.

“Calm yourself, Harry. You don’t need this stress.” Nasta was murmuring over and over.

“You are pregnant again.” Warren said sharply, Harry was surprised by his observation; he hadn’t even started showing yet.

Harry nodded. “Three months.”

“The stress of this will not be good for your new baby.” The Faerie guard said concernedly.
Harry shook his head. “No, it’s not. I’m having twins…I’ve been stressed all through their main growth period, which makes me more stressed and worried about the damage I’m doing to them that I can’t even see.”

“Have you had one of your medic personnel check the two babes over?” Warren asked with a frown.

Harry nodded. “I’m being very well taken care of; it’s just the stress of Leolin and Calix being sick.”

“Is…is Calix still sick too?” Kailen asked, trying to show an interest in the other babies, which earned him a few brownie points at least, but not many.

Harry turned, took several steps across the living room and picked Calix up from the playpen. He was almost completely back to normal and had had his dosage dropped now that he had visibly improved and was much better. It was just that persistent cough that was heart wrenching to hear from one so very young.

“He’s okay. He’s getting better with the right medication.” Harry said as he kissed Calix, who giggled and threw his arms around Harry and hugged him. He’d been allowed to have his third Dragon Pox vaccine and his little arm was still bruised from it, but even that was fading and Harry hugged him back tightly, accepting the sticky kiss that Calix gave him. He couldn’t believe that he could have lost his baby Calix, this sweet, loving, bubbly boy.

“Max, can you get a wet wipe please, he’s still got peach juice on his face, it makes him taste gorgeous, but he’s sticky.” Harry said with a tired smile.

“Come here my boy.” Max said, clapping his hands to get Calix’s attention and then holding them out to accept him when Harry handed him over.

The Faeries watched everything with stern, judgemental eyes and Harry wanted to jam his claws into their eyes. He wasn’t going to win any awards for world’s best Mum, he knew that, but he was doing a damn good job in his opinion, he was doing his damned best and that’s all anyone could ask of him. His children were clean and happy, were well fed and they were loved. Calix had gotten sick and had passed it to Leolin. At the end of the day, that was all that had happened and it couldn’t have been prevented.

“I suppose you think you could have done a better job?” He demanded furiously, unable to keep silent as his anger grew.

Warren shook his head. “It is a good thing that Leolin was with you, we had an outbreak of Dragon Pox in the city, a merchant brought his illegitimate human daughter into our walls and she was carrying the disease, even though she was protected from it by her vaccinations. We lost eleven children; we only have three of them left to us.”

“How do you know Ezrah?” Dain demanded suspiciously as he looked from the unknown Faerie on his left to Kailen and Warren beside him, on his right.

“I met him the last time I was in the city.” Harry replied with narrowed eyes.

“Ezrah is fine, he is an adult, just barely maybe, but he is an adult and such diseases cannot harm him.” Warren explained kindly.

“I know that, but he was trying to conceive.”

“He has thus far been unsuccessful. He is still young.” Warren said. “We have however lost our youngest Faerie babe living in the city. Niobe died half a moon turn ago, her parents have been inconsolable. We have lost several teenagers and one boy who was on the cusp of manhood. His death came as a huge blow to us and the city. He’d had a very promising future.”

“I’m sorry for the children that you’ve lost.” Harry said sincerely, thinking about how close he was to losing Leolin and how close he’d come to losing Calix too.

“Leolin is the youngest Faerie babe known to the court.” Dain told them. “We have lost all others and for that, our city is grieving. To hear that Leolin may not make it either…prayers are being sent to the gods in the house of worship for him, I think most, if not all of the Faerie city is sending strength to him.”

Harry didn’t know what to think about that. He’d thought, they’d all thought, that the Faeries would try to snatch Leolin from them as quickly as they could because of his illness. Yet here were Dain and Kailen, telling them that nearly all of the Faerie city was praying for his son’s health instead.

Of course the information on the Faerie city and the outbreak of Dragon Pox made more sense. They definitely would not risk one of the only remaining Faerie babies by taking him to a city riddled with Dragon Pox.

“Please sit down.” Harry offered, indicating the settee behind them.

“We would prefer to remain…”

“You sit down because I’ve told you too and I’m three months pregnant and I can’t remain standing up for a minute longer.” Harry hissed.

Nasta escorted him to the settee and sat him down and sat beside him as his mates sat around him. Aneirin was also there for the visit, but he was staying silent as he took the armchair which offered him the best position to protect the playpen that the babies were playing in. Warren had barely taken his eyes from Aneirin, who had either noticed and was ignoring the Faerie, or he was completely and utterly oblivious to the amount of scrutiny that he was being placed under.

“Have the Healers told you anything of Leolin’s chances?” Dain asked as he sat uncomfortably on the settee adjacent to the one that Harry was sat on.

“The mere fact that he is still alive after a month is a good sign, but other than that, there isn’t much to go on. He has his good days and bad ones.” Nasta said simply. “As I said he improves and then he relapses. We don’t know what’s going to happen, but we do know that he is going to be sick for a long time, but we have the best Healers that we could find with him and, again as I said, they haven’t left the hospital once since he was admitted.”

“They know how delicate he is? How to care for him as a Faerie?” Kailen asked with deep concern.

Harry nodded. “Healer Cole has fifty years of experience in caring for sick magical creature babies.”

“Healer Jasper Cole?” Warren asked, a hint of relief in his voice.

Harry nodded. “Yes, you know of him?”
“He helps a lot of the Faerie babes we have when they get sick and he has saved more than a few of them. We trust him.”

“He, along with Healer Almus, have been looking after Leolin to the very best of their abilities. We trust them both to keep Leolin as healthy as they can, but we...we also trust them to...to keep him comfortable if he...if he does give in.” Harry stumbled thickly.

Nasta wrapped an arm around him and he felt Max’s hand gently petting his hair. Only Max’s hands were big enough to encompass the whole of his head and since Max’s hands had fully healed from the abuse he’d put them through, he’d been using them more and more having realised just how much he did with them when he was unable to use them properly.

“Mama.” Braiden called out, standing up and reaching his hands out of the playpen for him. “Mama, up.”

Harry couldn’t help smiling at his little boy as he eased himself up carefully and went to scoop Braiden up and out of the playpen.

“That is one of your Dracken sons, yes?” Kailen asked.

Harry nodded. “My first born child and the first of my Dracken children.”

“You have one other?” Dain questioned as he looked at Braiden like a curious oddity.

“Yes, Farren is a Dracken also.” Harry said, nodding to Farren, who was in a bouncer beside Aneirin’s chair, just lounging and watching everyone around him.

“The other three are human?”

“Yes, two wizards and a witch.” Harry confirmed and he sighed.

Dain and Kailen were trying, but they were hundreds of years old and they just didn’t know how to act or what to do or say. They weren’t being knowingly malicious or insensitive, they just didn’t understand and Harry felt sorry for them. He wondered how many Faerie babies they’d seen die over the centuries and how many of those had been relatives. Now that Leolin was in the hospital, their last and only Faerie relative for a hundred years…he could see their sadness and the helplessness that he himself felt.

“You’re welcome to see him when he comes out of the hospital.” Harry offered in a moment of kindness and shared compassion. “You can’t visit him inside the hospital, the Healers won’t allow it because the more people around him, the more risk he’s in, but I’m positive that he will recover and he will come home.”

The look they gave him, that sad look like he was a small, disillusioned child made him want to take back the empathetic offer for them to see Leolin. His son would come home; to think otherwise was condemning Leolin to death while he was still alive and fighting for his life. He wouldn’t do it.

“Thank you, that is kind.” Warren answered. At least he had the sensitivity and the intelligence to keep the scepticism off of his face.

Harry sneered at the four of them and turned to Braiden on his lap, playing with him instead. He had missed playing with his children, but with Calix home and Leolin having a good day when they’d visited him that morning, his heart was lighter. Now he just wanted Leolin home and his twin children to be born quickly, easily and healthily and hopefully they could put this dark cloud to rest.

“I think we’ll say goodbye now.” Nasta said firmly. “We’re needed at the hospital in half an hour and we need to prepare. Thank you for coming to see us, but you’ve got what you came for. We’ll keep in contact with the court about Leolin’s health, but until then, we would like you to leave.”

“You cannot dismiss a member of the court from your presence…” The unknown Faerie started angrily and offended on behalf of the two Faeries that he was there to protect and serve, but Dain cut him off with a raised hand.

“This is their home; they have the right to ask us to leave.” Dain said with a respectful nod at Nasta. “Trefor wouldn’t have stood to have anyone in his home a minute longer than he wanted them there. You remind me of him very much.”

Nasta swallowed back what was likely an insult, but Aneirin cleared his throat and stopped him.
“Thank you for coming.” Nasta said instead, but his eyes were shouting that he really wanted to tell them that he wanted to flay them inch by inch until they were raw and screaming.

“Please keep us informed of Leolin and we hope to come and visit again soon, once Leolin is out of the hospital.” Kailen said with a small smile and a nod to Harry.

Nasta saw them out of the front door and Harry relaxed back with a happy groan.

“I’m so glad that they’re gone.” He said.

Braiden giggled at him as Harry sunk in the seat and Harry pulled him flat on his chest with a playful growl before he tickled him.

Braiden screeched in utter joy. “Mama no! Mama no!” He cried out as he giggled, his body wriggling.

Nasta came back in and smirked at them both. “If you could see what you both look like.” He said as he shook his head, pulling Braiden up and brushing away his happy tears from laughter flushed cheeks. He kissed one of those cheeks before he placed Braiden on the floor to play and pulled Harry up.

“I’ll get us a snack.” Max said as he pushed himself to his feet. “We’ll need something before we go back to the hospital.”

“Thank you, Max, nothing too heavy for Harry though. His morning sickness is getting worse.”

“I feel okay.” Harry replied, patting his belly. “They’re settled at the moment.”

“I can’t wait to meet them.” Draco said with a smile. “I wonder if they’re girls or boys.”

“Still genderless at the moment.” Harry said.

Though he’d had another scan in September and gotten a blurry photo for it. His one twin was tucked up, knees to chin and ankles crossed over where the genitals would be and no amount of prodding would move the baby. The second twin was spooning the first, arms tucked into chest, forehead resting against the back of the first baby and of course, genitals covered by the back of the first baby.

It was frustrating, not knowing, but it made everything so much more exciting and with Amelle now nesting without knowing the gender beforehand, Harry was wondering, along with half of the family, if Amelle would have a boy or a girl and the excitement was running thick through the family. Caesar was practically vibrating as he counted the days until his new son or daughter was born and he was free to bug the family, along with a year old Eleonora, until Myron lost his temper with his younger son and hauled him away to calm him down. That had made Harry laugh.

The tenth of October had brought Harry a shock and more happiness. Henley sent him another letter, his handwriting quick and excited and Harry could just picture him bouncing and vibrating as he wrote the letter. Anabel, his mate, had had her second baby on the seventh of October. A boy. A boy that they had named Harry Henley Jackson.

Max had snatched the letter from him when he had frozen in shock and ignored the questioning of his mates. He had boomed out a laugh and almost doubled over with his amusement.

“The baby dom named his son Harry!” He told the others. “He named his first born son after the submissive that he couldn’t have!”

“It wasn’t like that!” Harry denied immediately, but everyone was laughing now and he rolled his eyes at them exasperatedly.

“I can’t wait to meet baby Harry.” Max said.

“What do you mean?” Harry asked.

“The baby dom, Henley, he’s going to bring his two babies to come and see you once his mate is feeling more settled and has healed up.”

Harry snatched the letter back and read the rest of the letter, read everything that came after the announcement that Henley had named his newborn son after him and there at the bottom was the promise to come and visit him in the New Year with his mate and his two children, Claudia and baby Harry.

He was of course excited to see Henley, but he’d be sure to remind him that he had to come after February, when he’d nested and given birth to his twins. He still couldn’t believe that Henley had named his first born son Harry and it wasn’t just a coincidence, but he’d named his son for him. Him, of all people! He’d be sure to ask what the hell Henley had been thinking when he’d made that decision, but until then, he put the letter safe and he smiled at the enclosed photo of a happy, but exhausted Anabel holding the newborn Harry and an excited, grinning Henley who was holding sweet little Claudia, who was almost a year old now.

“I can’t wait to see Henley again; I’ve missed that little puppy.”

“I don’t think he’d like you calling him a puppy. He’s a Father now.” Nasta pointed out.

“He looks just the same! And he’s only seventeen.” Harry almost cooed, like he’d used to when Henley had been trying to court him.

“He’s almost eighteen.” Blaise pointed out.

Harry nodded. “This December. Claudia turns a year old on the fourth and he’ll be eighteen on the seventeenth. He’s so cute though!”

Draco came and kissed him. “You’re adorable when you gush.”

“I do not gush!” Harry said, prodding Draco.

“I like it when you gush.” He said as he laid a kiss on his neck, arms around his waist and hands cupped on his belly.

“Are we talking about the same thing now? I like gushing in some ways.” Harry said naughtily.

“Always one to lower the tone.” Max said with a grin. “I love it.”

“I knew you would.” Harry smiled, then he sighed. “I hope Leolin is home from the hospital for Christmas.”

“Two months is a long time away.” Blaise assured him. “A lot can happen in two months.”
“I know, but I do want Leolin home for Christmas and his birthday and everything that comes after.”

“I know you do. We all do.” Nasta said, pulling him into a kiss. “Until then, let’s get something to eat and then we can go and visit him, we can keep hoping and with some luck and perhaps some help from his Dracken blood, Leolin will pull through and we can shove all of this behind us.”

Harry smiled and he nodded. Over a month Leolin had been fighting and the Faeries themselves had said how rare that was, he took that as a good sign that Leolin would survive this damnable virus and he was not going to let anyone rip that hope away from him, it was all that was keeping him clinging to his sanity and he knew that even if Leolin was released from the hospital, it would be a long while before he was fully recovered, if he ever did fully recover, but he didn’t care what it took or if he had to look after Leolin for the rest of his life, he damn well would and he’d do it without complaint and with a happy smile, just as long as he still had his Leolin.

Chapter End Notes

A/N: The next chapter should be the last in this tear-jerking clump. I’m hoping it’ll span to December, the beginning of December, not Christmas, but I’m still hoping to get the story that far in the next chapter.

A massive thanks to Tamara, one of my Facebookers, who did a picture for this period in the story:

Chapter Notes

Last Time

Harry smiled and he nodded. Over a month Leolin had been fighting and the Faeries themselves had said how rare that was, he took that as a good sign that Leolin would survive this damnable virus and he was not going to let anyone rip that hope away from him, it was all that was keeping him clinging to his sanity and he knew that even if Leolin was released from the hospital, it would be a long while before he was fully recovered, if he ever did fully recover, but he didn’t care what it took or if he had to look after Leolin for the rest of his life, he damn well would and he’d do it without complaint and with a happy smile, just as long as he still had his Leolin.

Chapter Eighty-Six – Preservation

Blaise’s nineteenth birthday on the twelfth of October couldn’t have been more sombre. With Leolin in the hospital, Blaise didn’t want to celebrate and the last thing that he wanted was a party. Marianna was very downcast as well, she gave Blaise his gift, as they all had, but they could all see how much Blaise did not want the fuss or the attention as he dispassionately unwrapped books and clothes and gave a polite, yet distant expression of gratitude that he obviously didn’t truly feel. None of them felt like sex, none of them wanted to celebrate, but it was unfair to Blaise, so they tried to be happy for him, but he didn’t want any of those things either, so it just made the lot of them miserable, just like they’d been for Max’s thirty-second birthday on the nineteenth of September.

Blaise didn’t let Marianna stay for long, in fact he all but told her to leave when quarter to nine in the morning came and their usual visiting time for Leolin approached.

Alexander was there to look after the five other babies and though Marianna had said that she didn’t mind staying to help, Blaise said something harsh in French and she all but fled from their home, almost in tears. Harry had tried to wheedle what he’d said out of Blaise as unfortunately Nasta had not been in the room to translate, but something on Blaise’s face told him that he hadn’t wanted Nasta to hear what he’d said and he refused to tell them.

They’d been called in the middle of the night, only one of a handful of times that it had happened over the last six weeks, to rush straight to the hospital. They’d had to leave Max at home with their other sleeping babies and it was unfair and heartbreaking to leave one of them at home while they were urgently rushed to the hospital for what could be Leolin’s final hours.

Leolin had thankfully been stabilised and they’d come home in the early hours to update an anxious, worried Max before climbing back into bed for an hour or two of sleep before they’d been awoken by their other children who wanted their breakfasts, so Blaise had already been in a bad mood before his birthday had actually really started.

Leolin was doing better that morning, he was on a ventilator again, but he’d taken a half ounce more milk than he had the morning before and despite the horrifying dash to the hospital at two in the morning, he was looking better. They knew though the danger that lurked below, Leolin had been fighting so hard and for so long now and he still had the virus, the danger now was that he would just give up, that he would become so tired that he couldn’t fight any more and the virus took him over completely and his tiny body gave in.

Harry was shaking violently as he arrived in Leolin’s room, touching a tiny, wired up hand that was chalk white, translucent and dry and flaky. He sat in the chair silently and with no fighting or fuss. Everything else just seemed so inconsequential when he sat next to Leolin. Arguing was pointless, fighting was ridiculous, shouting was unneeded…nothing else mattered next to Leolin, who fought for every beat his heart took. He wasn’t even taking his own breaths today as the ventilator expanded and compressed his chest artificially, breathing evenly and deeply for him.

For three hours they sat in the hushed room with him, and in that time he didn’t wake once. He was going longer and longer between waking up, he spent several hours asleep and only ten or so minutes awake now before he slept again. Worry didn’t even begin to cover what Harry was feeling, the black cloud that was hanging over him, making him feel like the end was coming ever closer for his son…he tried not to think about it, but the thoughts pressed in anyway, unwanted and all encompassing.

They were kicked out at midday as Leolin went for his daily X-rays and Harry prayed that this time there was some improvement, any improvement, just a tiny little ray of hope to break the black clouds that were gathering thicker and thicker by the day.
