The Rise of the Drackens.

Chapter One – Welcome to Dracken Life

Harry James Potter woke up slowly, languidly, in the early hours of the morning on his sixteenth birthday, not knowing what had woken him up, but he found out soon as he realised some very surprising, unexpected and, quite frankly, shocking changes.

The first thing his groggy mind, that was still clinging to the last remnants of sleep, made him aware of was his changed eyesight. Everything was so perfectly clear, even in the near darkness of the early morning. He had never seen with such startling clarity before, even with his glasses on and now the dim box bedroom of number four Privet Drive was like a whole new experience to the young wizard.

The tiny dust motes floating in the air, the individual strokes of paint on the bedroom walls, the specks of dirt on the carpet, he could see it all. Colours, he noticed, were more vibrant and there was so much more to everything, every colour, every shape, every pattern. He never knew there were so many shades of white before. His eyesight was better than any human could hope to achieve.

After staring for twenty minutes at the pattern the wood grain made in his battered, second hand, dresser Harry figured he had better see what other changes he might have gained whilst he had been sleeping. Hopefully they were as wonderful as his new found eyesight.

After listening for a few silent minutes to check to make sure that the Dursleys were still asleep, he tip-toed down the hall to the bathroom. Upon entering the cool, tiled room he could only stare in shock at the reflection staring back at him in the mirror. The boy in the mirror was about five foot five, a little taller than he’d been when he’d gone to sleep. His face was not as round any more, but thinner. He had high cheekbones, a thin nose that was placed neatly over full lips. His eyes were a deep emerald green framed by long, sooty lashes. His hair was pure silk, cascading down to the middle of his back like an inky black waterfall, which was also very new, there was no way the Dursleys wouldn’t notice that his hair had grown several inches overnight.

His body was still slender, but he was a little more shapely than he’d been. His waist was pulled in under his rib cage and his hips were bigger and more rounded than they had been before. He had strong, long legs, and a pert bum. His skin was perfectly smooth and unblemished. Not a freckle or scar marred the ivory flesh and that was new too. Every scar he’d had when he’d gone to sleep the night before was gone…all of them bar one, the lightning bolt on his forehead, and there’d been quite a few of them too. But now, with them all gone, with all of the other changes, he was beautiful and that wasn’t a word that he would have every picked to refer to himself before.

After stripping off his clothes to get a better look at himself, Harry peered once more into the mirror. He could hardly believe the reflection in the mirror was actually him. He twirled around before a glint of something caught his eye. He looked closer; trying to see what it was that had caught his attention. He gasped loudly partly in shock, partly in horror as he caught sight of what had caught the overhead light. Scales! He had hundreds of tiny scales on his skin!

They were small, white scales, so perfectly blended in with his pale skin that he could barely tell that they were there at all. After looking closer he saw that the scales were all over his body. They started at the top of his neck and went down his shoulders and back. They continued on down his bum and his legs. They glittered on his chest and stomach as well, reflecting the harsh bathroom light.

The scales did not cover every inch of him, but were in some sort of intricate, random design. Looking at his face he saw that there were scales there as well, but they were so much smaller than the others that they were easily missed or over looked unless you knew that they were there. They were on his forehead, circling the lightning bolt scar but not actually going near it, and they speckled over his cheekbones, flowing over the bridge of his nose like a masquerade mask. Looking closer Harry also spotted the scales on his chin, neck and they were even on his ears! He couldn’t believe it; this had to be some sort of weird, realistic dream.

‘What the hell am I?’ He wondered in slight panic. ‘Maybe I'm some sort of snake or lizard, perhaps a dragon? Do I actually have wings or anything?’

No sooner he had finished that particular thought when he felt an agonising, searing pain in his back. He fell to his knees and gasped as quietly as he could, so that he didn’t wake his relatives, as he felt a strange weight upon his shoulders after a ripping sensation and a warm liquid gushed down his bare back.
Glancing fearfully up into the mirror he saw there were indeed wings sprouting from his back, they were attached to him by thin, but solid protruding bones that started at the base of his neck joined up with his shoulder blades and merged with the middle of his rib cage to support the huge wings on his back. He was bleeding heavily and the wings were covered thickly in blood and a mucous like membrane.

The patches of the leathery white wings that were clean of blood were covered in the same white scales as the rest of his body, only they were larger, more easily seen and had ridges that could be felt where the scales on his face and his body were completely smooth to the touch. Harry stared in awe at the beautiful appendages he had just gained. They were almost as tall as he was. He flexed them carefully, experimentally, wanting to get used to the feel of them. He stretched them out as wide as they would go, being mindful of the bathroom appliances and the light fixture above him. He made a rough estimate that his wing span was probably about eleven or twelve feet.

‘I wonder if I can fly with these. It would be so much better than flying on a broom. I wonder if I can get them to go away as easily as they come.’

The wings immediately receded into his back with just a thought and a slight twitch to his back muscles. Thankfully without as much pain as calling them out had caused him.

‘I'd better get back to my room before the Dursleys get up. I really don't want to deal with them right now. I just want to get my things ready.’ Harry thought to himself as he redressed and padded back to his bedroom. ‘Thank Merlin I don't have to spend another night in this house. I don't know why I was sent back here in the first place. Voldemort is gone now and the Death Eaters are all in Azkaban. Well, most of them anyway and I would be just as safe in the Leaky Cauldron.’

Back in his room, dressed once more in his too large clothing, Harry decided to do some self-research. He wanted to know what sort of creature he had become. So getting out all of his books on magical creatures he flipped through them all until finally in the last and the thickest of the books, one that Hagrid had given him the year previous as a birthday present, he found a short excerpt that could possibly explain his creature inheritance to him.

\textit{Drackens (Or Dragon Kind.)}

\textit{Drackens are a rare breed of magical creature. They are believed to be nearly extinct with the number of the creatures’ population dropping significantly as more Drackens choose to breed with humans to avoid detection, causing the bloodline to dilute and eventually die out.}

\textit{The drop in Dracken populace can also be accounted to wizards, who hunt Drackens for their blood, organs and scales which are useful for certain potions, rituals and spells.}

\textit{Drackens have been classed as dark creatures since the eighteen-forties by the British, American, Asian and European Ministries of Magic and have consequently been deemed as a dangerous threat} to civilised society.

There are rumoured to be less than a hundred living Drackens worldwide, though it is unclear if this number is accurate as Drackens have become adept at hiding their defining characteristics making it easier for them to blend in with human beings.

‘Interesting. I wonder if there are any Drackens at Hogwarts. Surely I'm not the only one. But then again if there are so few worldwide...’ Harry shook off those morbid thoughts and turned back to the book.

There are two kinds of Drackens. The dominant Dracken and the submissive Dracken. Or the Alpha Dracken and Beta Dracken.

Dominant Drackens, or the Alpha Dracken as some cultures have come to know them as, are ninety-eight percent of the time males. There have been only two reported and proven cases of a dominant female Dracken. Dominants are always much larger and more vicious than their submissive counterparts. This is to protect their submissive and any offspring they might have.

Dominant Drackens are very possessive of what they deem is theirs and are very territorial, most likely due to the dragon blood in their veins. A dominant Dracken will be at his most vicious and dangerous when his submissive is in heat, is pregnant or is nesting. Any threat to his submissive or his young will be removed as quickly as he is able to do so.

Dominant Drackens appear to be outwardly cold and cruel. It is only with his submissive and his young that he will show any tenderness. But even then the dark side of the Dracken will show through as a dominant Dracken will still be rough, unknowing of his own strength.

A dominant Dracken will punish his submissive if he feels the submissive has done wrong, though he will never cause his submissive any permanent harm as a Dracken, like their dragon counterparts, is a very vain and prideful creature and having a beautiful, flawless submissive will be a source of great pride for a dominant.

The dominant counterpart is the submissive Dracken, or Beta Dracken, who are typically female, though there have been several reported submissive male Drackens; none have been verified as their dominant partners have always hidden them away before verification can take place.

Submissive male Drackens, like dominant females are exceptionally rare. It is a rumoured belief that submissive male Drackens are perfectly capable of carrying and giving birth to young, but it is assumed that this is only possible if the submissive Dracken breeds with a dominant Dracken as it has been tested and verified that copulating with a human male blocks a submissive Drackens natural breeding cycle, resulting in the Dracken becoming barren and unable to conceive a child. This is not true however of the dominant Dracken, who is fully able to impregnate a human woman, or man, if he so chooses. The male submissive and the female dominant are anomalies and without further proof we are unable to separate fact from fiction on whether or not submissive males can impregnate humans like their dominant male counter parts or if dominant females turn barren when breeding with a human like their submissive female counterparts.

Though submissive Drackens are smaller than their dominant counterparts, they can be just as dangerous if provoked, nearly ninety percent of documented deaths caused by a submissive Dracken were over the Dracken’s offspring being threatened or harmed. A submissive will rarely kill for their dominant as, exactly like their dragon ancestors, the dominant male is expected to take care of himself and his family, it is a submissives job to protect the young and not her dominant.

A submissive may, in some cases, have more than one dominant mate. A powerful submissive Dracken requires more than one dominant to impregnate her for the conception to take up; it is unclear as to why, as the Drackens are so few in number that nearly all of them hide themselves away as a safety precaution.

Both dominant and submissive Drackens are extremely durable, adaptable and notoriously hard to kill. Because of their tough skin most spells will not affect a Dracken and their scales are highly reflective, allowing spells to just bounce right off of them. The only exception is the killing curse, Avada Kedavra.

Drackens are also reported to be allergic to salt water, which with prolonged exposure can cause the skin of a Dracken to become irritated and inflamed. Though the allergy is not deadly, it can cause serious harm including; itching, burning, boils and if in contact with the eyes of a Dracken for any extended period of time can cause blindness.

The characteristics and features of a Dracken include:

Scales:

Dominant Drackens have scales covering approximately fifty to sixty percent of their body, excluding their wings which are covered entirely with scales just one inch apart from one another. The dominant will have darker, coloured scales ranging from black to dark reds, blues, greens and purples etcetera.

Submissive Drackens have scales covering approximately seventy-five to eighty percent of their body. A submissive Dracken’s wings are also entirely covered with scales an inch apart from one another, but the submissive Dracken differs from the dominant because a submissive Dracken’s scales will start out solidly white and will, with time, change to reflect the colour(s) of their dominant(s).

Wings:

A dominant Dracken’s wings are large and powerful, much like the dominant Dracken is himself, spanning up to twenty-five feet in length depending on how old, how tall, how heavy (and/or) powerful the Dracken is. Dominants will display their wings for a potential mate. The larger the wings, the more impressive they’ll be to a submissive.

A submissive Dracken’s wings are not as large as their dominant counterpart, spanning out at approximately thirteen or fourteen feet at most. This is most probably because the submissive Dracken is smaller and lighter than a dominant and also because the submissive does not need her wings to entice a dominant mate to her.

Both dominant and submissive Drackens can use their wings for flight and can travel for long distances and at great heights without the need to stop for rest or without the worry of altitude sickness.
Fangs/Claws:

Both dominant and submissive Drackens have fangs and claws, though these will be considerably bigger on the dominant Dracken. The fangs and claws are usually kept sheathed until needed for killing, hunting or protecting. Both are large and deadly, but a submissive Dracken’s claws are very acidic. This acid is secreted in the nail beds and can coat the claws in seconds; the acid is so corrosive just a few swipes can burn a medium sized hole through a human body.

Breeding Cycles:

Submissive Drackens go into heat several times a year, but despite this it is believed that there are only two periods of time in a single year in which a Dracken can be impregnated.

Breeding cycles vary with each submissive, but the most common time for a Dracken to become pregnant is in the winter. The average range of days for a submissive Dracken to be in heat is ten days in which a dominant Dracken will breed his submissive almost continually to ensure the largest possible number of offspring. Neither the dominant nor submissive will feed during this time of continuous mating.

Pregnancy:

The gestation period of a submissive Dracken is approximately seven months, during this time the dominant Dracken will be so severely protective of his submissive that he will rarely let her out of his sight and he will not let anyone near her, not even family members, the only exception to this is if the submissive Dracken has more than one dominant mate, in which case, only the other Dracken will be allowed near her.

It is believed that in order to keep the offspring healthy and growing strongly the dominant Dracken will need to share his fluids with his submissive. He will do this by kissing his mate to share his saliva, touching to share his sweat, ejaculating into his mate to give his semen and feeding his blood to his mate and child.

Symptoms of Dracken pregnancy include; Nausea, irritability, dizziness, sensitivity to cold, craving raw meat and accidental magical outbursts. When close to birthing the submissive Dracken will feel a need for high, dark places. Once the submissive finds/makes a suitable 'nest' they will stay there until after the birth.

Birthing:

A submissive Dracken will give birth alone. The dominant(s) will not be permitted entry to the nest until after the birthing is over. A submissive will give birth to between one and seven or eight young or 'chicks' as they have been labelled by the Ministry. Once the birth is over and the new mother has nursed the chicks, the Father(s) will be allowed to enter the nest. The chicks will nurse for twelve weeks before becoming mature enough to be weaned if the Mother so wishes it.
Harry closed the book, having read the small section through several times. He swallowed heavily and placed the book down with his quivering hands. He now had so many questions and absolutely no way to find out the answers and no one that he could ask about it.

‘I’m a submissive Dracken.’ He thought detachedly, willing his hands to keep still as they shook continually. ‘I’m going to have a dominant Dracken as a mate; I’ll be expected to give birth to Dracken young.’

Harry breathed evenly and deeply to dispel the raising bout of panic that was causing him to hyperventilate. He had gone to sleep as a human; he had woken up as a submissive Dracken. A male submissive Dracken, which were thought to be mere legends and not actually real.

‘It’s okay. I can handle this. It’s not completely horrible.’ He coached himself, trying not to make any noise as he walked to his window to watch the world in the early morning light.

‘I think I could enjoy being a Dracken. Of course, I’ll never be able to tell anyone what I am. There’s no one I’d trust with something as life altering as this. Except maybe Remus. Do Drackens and werewolves get along with each other or are they like werewolves and vampires. They must do, after all Remus was friends with Mum and Dad and they had to have been Drackens to have made me. I wonder if anyone knew about them being Drackens. Probably not. Well if my parents didn't tell Remus then maybe I shouldn't either.’

Harry sighed at the prospect of keeping this from Remus, the man who had been his rock these past few months following Sirius’ death. Thinking of Sirius made Harry wonder if his Godfather had known about his Mum and Dad being Drackens. Sirius was his Godfather for fuck sake! He had been his Dad’s best friend and the Dracken transformation had to have happened when his parents were sixteen as well, surely someone as close to his Dad as Sirius would have noticed the changes? That made him think about his parents getting together; they hadn’t done so until they were seventeen, but if the Dracken genes came out at sixteen, what had happened during that gap year? They had been in school together; Sirius had said his Dad had fallen in love with his Mum from the moment he had laid eyes upon her, so why had it taken a year for them to get together after their inheritances. He doubted that he would ever find out now.

Thinking about his parents, got him to thinking about himself. He didn’t like anyone, he hadn’t fallen in love with anyone at first sight, he hadn’t even had time to sexually explore anything, let alone practice like he knew his year mates had. What if his dominant didn’t like him? The section he had read hadn’t said anything about that, but it did explain why he couldn’t force himself to ogle girls like Ron and it probably explained why he didn’t drool over Fleur in forth year like all the other boys.

‘I guess it does explain why I have no interest in women at all, I'm not meant to be with one. A man would be able to protect me better anyway. And if he’s strong and powerful he can help me to protect our children. My mate will have to be powerful and handsome. A strong mate will give me
The thought made him purr deeply in delight before Harry came to his sense and bolted away from the window. Where the hell did that train of thought come from? Babies at sixteen?! His mind had to be playing tricks on him.

‘Relax. Relax and calm down.’ Harry soothed himself, wrapping his arms around himself for comfort. ‘This is your natural instinct. The Dracken populace is dwindling; your instincts are going to be screaming at you to have children to boost numbers. You’d better get used to it. Fighting will only bring more pain and I’ve had enough pain to last a lifetime. Try to let yourself be happy. This could turn out to be all right in the end, just wait and see.’

Harry sighed again. He was tired of fighting, he was sick of the pain. He wanted to be happy. He wanted a strong, powerful man to call his own and he definitely wanted children to love, protect and care for. He’d have a family, a real family of his own. Children to rely on him, who would depend on him and love him and he’d also have a mate to protect him, to love and care for him. He needed this and he thanked his parents for being Drackens so that he could have this chance at happiness.

Harry turned from the window and put the book back into his trunk before he sat down on the bed. He couldn’t let anyone but his mate see him in his true form; he would have to practice at controlling his appearance.

First he stripped off his shirt again and willed his wings to appear. The process was less painful this time around, but the wings were still accompanied by blood and Harry took the time to clean his wings and to stroke his scales, he shivered and let go, just touching his wings was a thousand times more pleasurable than stroking himself the few times that he had masturbated.

Calming down and deciding not to touch his wings again like that, Harry concentrated on getting his claws and fangs to appear. It took a bit more concentration and will power to get them both to come at the same time, but they did. His claws were an inch long and razor sharp. He wondered how much acid he could produce, but no amount of willing made the acid come, Harry reasoned that he must be in danger before the acid was secreted. Just running his claws lightly over his bedspread, slashed it into ribbons, his claws would be able tear through flesh like a hot knife through butter.

His fangs were equally sharp, though not quite as long as his claws, there were four of them, two on the top, two on the bottom. The upper fangs rested comfortably on his bottom lip without piercing it when his mouth was closed.

Next Harry concentrated on willing them away. First his fangs and his claws, then the beautiful white wings, then finally he used all of his concentration to hide his scales away; this had the unforeseen reaction of his hair receding rapidly into his scalp until it was its usual messy mop. Once it was over Harry looked at himself in the reflection of the window, everything was exactly the same as it was when he had gone to sleep the night before.

The only thing Harry didn’t concentrate on removing was his new eyesight, he had been blind for so many years that now that he had the freedom of not wearing glasses, he wasn’t going to. If anyone asked him about it he’d simply tell them that he had gotten laser eye surgery during the summer, but he doubted anyone would notice let alone comment on it, no one ever saw past the scar anyway. Not even Ron or Hermione apparently.

He had had no word from anyone the entire summer he had been here in number four. Not that he had really been expecting any, not after his fall out with Ron during the last term of school. Hermione, not wanting to jeopardise her shiny new, budding relationship with the redhead, had not made contact with Harry either. He was sure that they would get over their idiocy eventually, but he was not so sure that he would be willing to forgive them this time. Hermione maybe, because this was the first time that she had ever turned her back on him, but Ron? How could he possibly stay friends with someone who had proven that he would turn on him time and time again?

He had been whisked away to Grimmauld Place, the one place that Harry had never wanted to see again. The memories and the pain were so acute that he found he had no appetite for Mrs Weasley’s cooking, which made her worry and fuss over him even more, and he found that he couldn’t sleep at night. Though that might have been because of the fact that he was still sharing a room with Ron, who hadn’t spoken a word to him all summer and hadn’t even looked at him past a few withering glares and sneers.

Harry kept mostly to himself as Ron and Hermione whispered together and snogged in the corners of the rooms to Grimmauld Place.

He heard the adults worry over him, some less than polite comments that he was deranged and unhinged after Sirius’ death, some saying that he had never been right in the head to begin with, that he was being antisocial, moody and sullen. He always smiled when Remus and the elder Weasleys defended him viciously and often violently and one Order member had even fled the house with a saucepan over his head after pushing Mrs Weasley too far.

He assured everyone who asked that he was fine, and really he was. He didn’t too much like being in Grimmauld Place again, but he was mostly beating himself up with his own thoughts on being a Dracken. He worried about everyone he met being dominant Drackens, he had nightmares about getting pregnant as a male and he sometimes had little panic fits over becoming a creature, but he was truly fine, he felt liberated, free. Harry supposed that that had something to do with the wings attached to his back, he loved flying, the wonderful, freeing sensation of the wind through his hair, to know that he could up and fly away whenever he wanted to, it relaxed him, eased the tension in his shoulders, calmed him, but no one believed him.

Ginny stayed close to him and so did Fred and George, making him laugh and smile and peek out of his shell a bit, which eased a few of the adults worries over him as they watched him play a game of tag with Ginny around the kitchen, ducking under the table, weaving around chairs and knocking people over. Fred and George joined in and even Charlie forgot he was an adult as he was tagged by Fred, which was more of a head slap. Though Charlie did only go for Fred, so Harry reasoned that maybe he wasn’t actually playing with them but attempting to murder his brother instead. The game was only called to a stop when dinner was ready and Harry ate minimally, but nonetheless more than he had had so far at Grimmauld Place which made Mrs Weasley much happier.

August was really uneventful as Harry caught up with the homework that he hadn’t been able to do at the Dursleys with the help of Remus and Bill. He moped about a bit, played silly games with Ginny and helped Fred and George with their joke shop creations whilst avoiding Ron and Hermione like the plague, several times Hermione had made to come and talk to him, but Ron either recaptured her interest or Harry darted away before she could open her mouth. He didn’t want to speak to them.

When the morning of September first rolled around Harry was sitting in the kitchen waiting for everyone to be ready so they could set off for Kings Cross Station and then on to Hogwarts. He had been packed and ready for days as he hadn’t seen the point in emptying his trunk just to pack it back up a few weeks later.

“How are you feeling, Harry?” Remus asked him softly as he sat with him in the kitchen listening to the herd of elephants charging up and down the stairs, Walburga Black screaming with all her might about Mudbloods and traitors.

“Fine. A bit excited, but nothing like how I was when I was younger.” Harry answered calmly.

Remus looked at him strangely. “You seem to have simultaneously gotten more childish and more mature this summer. You played those childish games with Ginny to keep her from being bored, yet you seem to have become an adult before your time.”

Harry smiled as he looked to Remus, his sole surviving Father figure. Several times over the month he had wanted to tell Remus about his Dracken inheritance, but every time he bottled out. What was he supposed to say? What if Remus reacted badly and told everyone else and he became an outlaw? Where would he go then? What would he do? He couldn’t take the risk.

“HARRY! REMUS! WE NEED TO GO!” Mrs Weasley shouted from the hall, her voice just a smidge louder than Walburga Black.

Harry jumped up and hugged Remus tightly, not that it made a blind bit of difference to the werewolf, who held him back.

“Come on, cub. Are you sure you’re all ready to go?”

Harry nodded his head. “Everything’s packed, I have my new books and school supplies and I made doubly sure that I packed my socks and boxers, let’s go. I can’t wait to get out of here.”

Remus looked at him sadly, knowing what he meant; it was hard for him to be here too, where he had fond memories of an adult Sirius before he had been taken once again from his life. He had stayed mainly for Harry, to a lesser extent to say goodbye to his old friend, because he hadn’t had the chance to before he died.
“Is Hedwig on her way to Hogwarts?” He asked as he saw Harry carting around an empty owl cage.

“Yes, I let her go yesterday so she’d be there waiting for me.”

“Alright then, let's get going before Molly shouts again.”

Harry grinned as he claimed one more hug before heading into the hallway with a flustered Mrs Weasley and a troupe of people and trunks.

“How are we getting to the platform?” He asked curiously.

“Ministry cars again.” Mr Weasley told him as he caught Harry’s question over the din of noise.

Harry sighed but climbed into the car that didn’t have Ron and Hermione in it as he reached the curb and the dark green cars on the road, even if he did end up in the ‘adult’ car, at least it meant he had a bit more time with Remus.

Eleven hours later found a sleepy and very hungry Harry taking a seat at the Gryffindor table in the Great Hall. He sat down at the end, having no wish to sit near his friends. Ex-friends, he reminded himself bitterly. He got a few curious looks from his classmates but ignored them. It was none of their business anyway.

The hall went quiet when Professor McGonagall brought out the sorting hat. The tattered old hat sung its usual song of the houses, but also gave a cheerfully cryptic message about the rival houses soon being united. The new first years were sorted into their houses, the last student, a tiny blond boy, took a seat at the Ravenclaw table and finally, after the Headmaster had made his usual announcements, they were free to eat.

Harry had to be very careful not to pile his plate solely with meat as in the past he had eaten mainly fruits and vegetables due to his almost non-existent diet at the Dursleys, he had found that fruits and vegetables had lined his stomach better than meat and stopped the hunger pains for longer, but lately he had been craving meat more and more, ever since his birthday and subsequent inheritance actually, it must have been part of being a Dracken.

The bloodier the meat the better in his opinion, so he placed a large piece of blue rare steak on his plate along with his vegetables and chips. Once or twice Harry had caught himself thinking of how delicious it would taste to find something fresh to sink his teeth into. The thought made him shudder and it was not with disgust.

As he was about to take a bite of his steak he was suddenly aware of a pair of eyes drilling into him. Discreetly looking around for the source he found no one until he glanced up at the head table. It was Snape. Of course it was Snape. The Potions Professor’s black eyes bore into him. Harry could not discern what that look was nor what he had done to gain himself such a look. He’d only been here for an hour.

Harry met the man’s eyes for a moment before he quickly lowered them, his new found instincts telling him that without a dominant mate to protect him it was unwise to pick a fight with someone who could harm him. Glancing cautiously at the man from beneath his lashes he saw Snape’s eyes narrow in suspicion at him.

Harry looked away from the man and kept his head down for the rest of dinner. He couldn’t afford anyone, least of all Snape, finding out about his secret.

A delicate scent reached his nose and all at once his body started quivering and he tingled, as if his scales were trying to make an unwanted appearance. He pushed the feeling back ruthlessly. He couldn’t afford to let them appear, not now, not in front of the entire student body. It would only spell utter disaster for him…and if he’d read that excerpt right, then it might even spell his death.

Dessert had come and gone and the Headmaster finally sent the children off to bed. Harry waited until the hall emptied out a bit before heading up to Gryffindor tower. Once he entered his dorm room he ignored Ron, said goodnight to Seamus, Dean and Neville, before he tugged closed his bed hangings and stripped off his clothes and climbed into bed. Despite being worried that Snape would find out about his secret, he fell asleep almost instantly.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

It was two weeks into term and that light scent was driving him crazy! It was constantly around him, as if the actual castle was the one making it. It was driving him to the brink of destruction and he had hourly battles with himself to force his Dracken side down. No one else noticed of course, but Harry counted this as a blessing, the last thing he needed right now was another round of newspaper articles on how crazy and unstable he was after he’d defeated Voldemort several months ago.

Snape was also watching him relentlessly. The man was absolutely unshakeable. No matter how much Harry tried to act invisible or divert his attention to something else those eyes were always there, watching him closely. Snape thought that he was up to something unsavoury and until Harry stopped being so jumpy and nervous, he was unlikely to stop, but Harry was just so worried that Snape would figure out that he was a Dracken that he couldn’t control it, he needed a dominant, he couldn’t face off against Snape on his own, not now that he had come into a submissive inheritance, not when he was concentrating so much on making sure his scales and wings wouldn’t just appear one day in class for everyone to see.

It was Halloween night and Harry had no interest in attending the feast. Instead he was taking full advantage of everyone else being at the feast to let his Dracken side out for the first time in two months.

He was deep in the forbidden forest, the moon, though not quite full as it was waning, was very bright tonight and lit the way for the young Dracken as he weaved his way through the undergrowth. Not that he needed the light, as a Dracken he had excellent night vision, but the moon was so big and beautiful tonight, Harry was glad that it was there to light up the sky.

After walking steadily for over thirty minutes, Harry deduced that he was far enough away from the school and called his Dracken features forward. It had been so long since he’d been able to and now that he could finally do so he felt the instantaneous bliss of letting go. His hair, his scales, his wings, his claws and his fangs all made their appearance. The white scales that covered his wings and grew in patches on his face, neck and hands glowed dimly in the moonlight. It was a beautiful sight to see, not that anyone was there to appreciate it other than himself.

Now that the liquid relief of letting his Dracken appearance out had diminished, there was something else that he had been wanting to take care of for the past three months, tasting raw meat.

Opening his new enhanced senses wide he listened for a specific movement. He could hear squirrels in their nests, owls hunting for their breakfasts, rabbits nibbling on clovers, mice scurrying along in the underbrush and then he heard what he’d been listening for, hoof falls on the leafy ground.

About thirty yards ahead of him were four deer. In an instant Harry was off, running with lightning speed and before anything else registered he had sunk his fangs into the jugular vein of a small doe. He wasn’t strong, or experienced enough to go for a buck; he’d leave that to his dominant mate.

The three remaining deer had scarpered, bounding off into the forest. The deer that Harry had latched onto kicked in an effort to free itself and he swiftly sliced through its neck with his claws, silencing it for good.

The taste of blood was intoxicating and Harry could hardly keep himself from moaning aloud. Using his claws and fangs he tore off chunks of the still warm flesh and devoured it. It was the most delicious thing he had ever eaten and he couldn’t get enough. He crouched down and dug in, tearing away at the hide with his fangs and claws to reach the tender meat underneath.

Halfway through his meal though, Harry stilled instinctively. He cocked he head, listening, ignoring the rivulets of blood pouring down his neck from his chin as he tried to puzzle out what had disturbed him. There was something out there. His head snapped itself to the left and he growled menacingly.

The growl that answered him was a deep, earth rumbling growl that shook him to his core. Harry shrank back. The figure that stepped out from behind the group of trees at the edge of the clearing he had chosen to eat in was tall and slender, but that wasn’t what troubled Harry. No. He was a dominant Dracken. The first thing that Harry noticed about the Dominant was his wings. They spanned at least twenty feet and they easily dwarfed his own, which he pulled in tighter to cocoon himself, to protect himself.

The next thing that Harry noticed was the man himself. He was tall at approximately six foot three and was very muscled for such a slender body; he was not wearing a shirt. Scales done in bottomless obsidian and a deep dark amethyst were scattered over the man’s wings, olive scales picked out over his bare, tanned skin that Harry could barely make out. His hair was as black as his scales and was chopped into layers that just covered his ears. His face was smooth and strong, angular and exotic looking. His slanted indigo eyes were cold and hard, but filled with warming lust as they devoured as much of Harry’s skin as they could, lingering on his face and especially at his neck.

This man took the breath from Harry’s lungs, took the oxygen from the very air around him and as Harry took a deep, shuddering breath, the Dracken opposite him made his move.

Chapter Two – Shifted Perspectives

Harry moved instinctually as he threw himself to the side to avoid the Dracken who had leapt at him. He kept moving and he dodged the trees and bushes with an almost feline grace. He could hear the other Dracken behind him, crashing through the same undergrowth as him, and god help him, but the other Dracken was much faster than he was.

Harry refused to slow down, even with the other Dracken gaining on him and growling like a thunder storm, he’d run until his legs gave out on him and even then he would crawl away from this man. He would not give in meekly without some sort of fight.

With his breath coming in short, painful bursts of air, Harry tried to lose his assailant by cutting to either side of himself randomly, but the Dracken following him just moved with him easily, keeping pace and following just a hairs breadth from his back and it was then that Harry got the sinking suspicion that the other Dracken was just playing with him, that he was enjoying the chase through the forest and he didn’t see any possible way in which he could lose Harry, so he wasn’t trying too hard.
Putting on a burst of speed, even though his chest already felt like it was on fire, he weaved through a tightknit group of trees, getting a slash to his cheek and numerous pricks from thorns in an unseen bush that he’d trampled through, Harry stumbled and tried to make up for his mistake by jinking left very quickly, avoiding a large boulder, skirting around a tree that was oozing a dark liquid before jumping over a large puddle, it was as he was doing the last that Harry was suddenly seized around the waist in mid-air and the added weight sent him crashing to the forest floor. A harsh growl and large hands squeezing around his throat kept him still and silent as the other Dracken sniffed around the back of his neck. The book that he’d read several times since his inheritance had not mentioned this at all!

A strong, muscled tongue licked a slow, sensual line up the spinal cord in his neck and almost instantaneously Harry’s mind set changed. His instincts were telling him that this Dracken wasn’t going to hurt him, that if he had meant him any harm he would have bitten into him and not merely licked him. The other Dracken was vying for his attention. This Dracken was a possible mate. Harry didn’t know if this frightened him or aroused him, so he settled for being a terrifying mix of both. He had found out only three months ago that he was a Dracken; he couldn’t have a mate already! It was far too soon.

Harry quivered in fright as the Dracken continued to lick and lave his neck with his tongue, tasting him, marking him with the scent of his saliva.

Was this how his Mother had felt when she had first realised that his Father was also a Dracken and a possible mate? Had he pursued her immediately? Had her will been strong enough to hold him away for a whole year? Harry didn’t think his will was that strong, not when the only thing that he wanted in the world was lying on his back, licking at him gently.

Harry tried to roll over, he wanted to look into the eyes of the man who was doing such sinful things to his body, but the hands that had loosened to rest around the base of his neck tightened into a punishing grip.

Harry whined and stilled once more, but he shifted his body to try and convey to the other Dracken that he only wanted to turn over.

“Hush little one, I’ll take care of you. Just stay still.” The other Dracken purred. His voice was deep and smooth, like velvet honey. There was just a hint of an accent, but it was too light for Harry to pick up on exactly what it was.

The tongue came back to find a spot behind his ear that had Harry’s body jumping in excited surprise and a dark chuckle fell from the other Dracken’s lips.

“You’ve been driving me wild with your intoxicating scent for two months. I couldn’t find you; I would follow the scent only to meet dead ends or a class in session. I tried sniffing you out at meal times, but you have been avoiding me, Prezioso.”

Harry shook his head as much as he was able to and long fingers that tangled through his messy mop of black hair stopped him as they tugged harshly.
“Yes, you have. Why else would you run from me? I don’t like being avoided or run from, Prezioso.”

Harry had no clue what Prezioso meant, but he knew that tone of voice. The other Dracken was angry and annoyed with him. He shrunk in on himself and whimpered.

“Oh, no, I understand, Prezioso. You didn’t know what you were doing, but you will learn. There will be no more running from me, will there?”

Harry shook his head and he was rewarded with the hand that had clenched into his hair loosening and massaging his scalp instead. It felt amazing.

“Can I see you?” Harry asked bravely, hiding his fear and strengthening his voice so that the waver wouldn’t be heard.

“Of course you can, Prezioso. I would love nothing more than for you to gaze at me for hours on end.”

Harry cautiously turned onto his back so he was chest to chest with the Dracken on top of him. He looked deeply into those indigo eyes. They were so familiar, but the face was unlike anything he had ever seen before. It was hardly surprising; he didn’t look anything like Harry Potter when he was in his Dracken form, why would this person look the same as he did in his human form?

“You are so beautiful, Prezioso.” The other Dracken told him softly, running those long, elegant fingers over his cheek.

Harry really looked at the other male lying on him. He was so handsome it was unreal. High cheekbones, chiselled nose, strong jaw, those slanted indigo eyes and a sensual mouth that was curved over deadly looking fangs that were just a little longer than his own.

“Do you like what you see?” The indigo eyed Dracken asked him cockily, a smirk curving that mouth more.

“Yes.” Harry answered in a whisper.
A moment later his mouth was seized in a harsh, bruising kiss that left him speechless and unable to do anything other than to fully submit to his mate, because there was no doubt in his mind that this Dracken would now be his dominant mate. Harry was too desperate for love, too desperate for any sort of affection that he would only be hurting himself if he tried to hold himself away from this Dracken now, after what they had done here tonight.

He was not as strong willed as his Mother and his childhood and poor upbringing had left him craving for any sort of love or attention, this man could give him his dream of a family and Harry would take it with both hands.

“What is your name, Prezioso?”

“Harry.” He answered without pause. “What’s yours?”

“I’m Blaise; I shall assume that you came into your inheritance either this summer or in very early September as you were not here last year. Or should I say that you weren’t inherited last year?”

“That’s right.” Harry answered. “I came into my inheritance during the summer.”

“I have been a Dracken for a year already; I turned seventeen on October the twelfth.”

His mate was older than him by ten months; his mate had been a Dracken for over a year already. Any questions that Harry had, his mate would likely be able to answer them for him. He felt safe and comforted as his mate, Blaise, explored his neck and face with his fingertips, staring at him as if he were the most amazing thing that he’d ever seen in his life.

“You are very strong, Prezioso, there will likely be others vying for your attention. I will share you only with the minimum number of dominants that you need to impregnate you with our children, I will not allow you to have a harem of men. I will not be pushed aside nor be ignored because you have so many men around you that you do not have enough hours in a day to spend time with us all.”

Harry looked up into the enraged face of his new mate and he lay completely still as Blaise’s claws came dangerously close to his throat.

“I don’t want a harem.” Harry whispered out honestly, staring into Blaise’s eyes unwaveringly, willing him to see the truth in them. “I just want a family.”

A rough kiss to his lips answered Harry’s statement and Blaise’s hands slipped around his neck to lift his head for a better angle.

“That was the right answer, Bello.” Blaise exclaimed as Harry tried to regain his breathing. “I will not be disgraced by having a whore for a submissive mate.”

“I’m not a whore!” Harry bit out harshly.

Immediately Blaise’s claws dug into the back of his neck and Harry cried out in pain.

“You do not speak to me like that, Harry. As your dominant mate, as your protector and the future Father of your children, I will be respected.”

“Respect is earned and not freely given.” Harry answered strongly, but he kept his voice placid.

He would not be an inferior person to his mate just because he was a submissive Dracken. They would go into this as equals or Blaise could go away and leave him to find another dominant mate, one who would treat him as an equal and not just someone to order around. He’d had more than enough of that at the Dursleys.

Blaise smirked and licked his cheek slowly as he retracted his claws to leave his fingertips caressing his neck once more.

“I have a strong mate.” Blaise whispered, almost to himself. “So strong and so stubborn. You are perfect for me, Prezioso.”

Harry felt pleasure fill him as his mate praised him. He confidently lifted his arms to wrap them around Blaise’s broad shoulders and Blaise smirked down at him.

“Never be afraid to touch me, Harry. You will never be rejected from my body.”

Harry nuzzled into Blaise’s strong neck now that he had been given the go ahead to touch his new mate as much as he wanted, loving the silky skin under his nose and cheek.

“You are endearing, Bello. Are you still hungry? I interrupted your meal and I need to prove my worth to you as an adept hunter. I will catch us something.”

Blaise stood up and pulled Harry easily to his feet, dusting him off, letting his hands linger upon Harry’s body, before he gave Harry a sweet kiss to the lips.

“Stay right here, Prezioso. I will be back very soon; I am a very skilled hunter.”

Blaise was gone in a blink and even with his new eyesight, Harry only saw a streak of black and purple reflecting in the moonlight. Harry wanted to move into the hollow of the tree to his left, he didn’t feel comfortable out in the open where any predator could stalk and attack him, but his dominant had told him to stay still, he didn’t want Blaise’s claws back in his neck again and that book had said that dominants punished their submissives harshly for doing anything wrong.

Debating with himself, Harry weighed the pros and cons carefully, before deciding that his dominant would rather have an alive mate when he came back rather than an obedient dead one and he crawled into the hollowed out tree.

The rotten inside was warm and Harry snuggled down in the decaying leaves, wrapping his wings tightly around himself for warmth and protection. He found himself thinking idly that this would have been the perfect spot to nest if it was a bit higher up. As Harry realised the train of thought he was on, his eyes snapped open and though he couldn’t see it, his face had taken on a look of abject horror.

This was the hundredth time that he had caught himself thinking about nesting and having children since his inheritance three months ago, but it was the first time that he had pictured those children as a perfect blend of himself and Blaise. He swallowed. He didn’t know Blaise at all, only that he was a dominant Dracken and that Harry considered him a good, strong and capable mate. That was it, other than his mate went to the same school as him, was in the same year and his birthday was October the twelfth. He knew nothing else about him and Harry refused to have children with a stranger.

Harry crawled out of the hollow tree and found himself being crushed to a solid chest. Expecting punishment, Harry did not expect to be pushed in front of a huge, mouth-watering, stallion. Blaise sat behind him and Harry tensed up for discipline again, only for Blaise to start grooming him, gently pulling the leaves and twigs from his hair.

“Eat up, Prezioso, before your meal bleeds out and goes cold.” Blaise urged him.
Harry carefully cut a piece of flesh from the stallion and offered it to Blaise first, who chuckled and shook his head.

“This meal is for you, little Harry. I have eaten my fill.”

“I can’t eat all of this by myself.” Harry told him, not even thinking of mentioning that the reason for that was his summer starvation.

“I wouldn’t have expected you to. I caught the biggest animal that I could find to prove to you that I am more than capable of providing food for you and our future young.” Blaise told him with that damnable smirk, still picking bits of woodland out of Harry’s nest of hair.

Harry sunk his teeth into the bloody meat and moaned lightly, Blaise stiffening behind him. Large, muscled arms wrapped around Harry’s shoulders and he was yanked backwards and into a passionate kiss, Blaise licking and lapping at his bloodied lips and chin.

This time, Harry fought against Blaise, moving his mouth and tangling their tongues together. Blaise growled, but he didn’t punish him, so Harry took it that he wasn’t doing anything wrong and twisted in Blaise’s arms to press up closer to his dominant mate.

It was Blaise who broke their kiss and pushed him again towards the stallion, urging Harry to eat until he couldn’t anymore. With all the bits of twigs and leaves gone from his hair, Blaise settled for running his fingers through it and stroking the silky skin of Harry’s neck.

When most of the stallion was gone and Harry was so full that his stomach had distended and all he wanted to do was sleep, Blaise stopped playing with his skin and hair and instead he wrapped Harry gently in his arms, rocking him softly and cooing to him.

“We can’t sleep out here. People will notice that we aren’t in our dormitories.” He said sleepily.

“Relax, Prezioso, do not fret so much. I will take care of it. No one would dare ask me where I have been and those that do dare, are friends who know better than to ask in the first place.”

Blaise had inadvertently reminded him that he now had no friends to track his movements and he frowned, before he snuggled into Blaise’s warmth. Blaise was the only one he had now.
Blaise smiled softly down at his sleeping submissive. Harry was so beautiful, so fragile looking, but he had seen his mate take down that doe, his mate was deadly too; beautiful and dangerous. The way that he had used his claws to tear out the throat of the doe, how he had pounced on her as she had been grazing unexpectedly, how he had torn at her with his fangs, the noises he had made as he had devoured her flesh.

Blaise shivered and groaned lowly. Harry would be the end of him. He had only met one other submissive Dracken since coming into his inheritance last year, a spoilt girl who had believed that she was the only submissive Dracken in the world. Her parents had ruined her, all three of them believed that she should have the strongest, most powerful, handsome dominant with the largest wings; they had called all dominant Drackens to their manor house in Toulouse to meet their daughter.

Needless to say that whilst she was a very beautiful girl on the outside, her insides were rotten, she had treated the dominants that had come to greet her into the Dracken lifestyle like dogs that should bow down before her and beg for her attention.

Blaise wouldn’t forget Miette Amarante Solange for a long time. She had been so despicable that dominants, including himself, had just upped and left. She had ended up with a dominant so desperate for a mate that he would have taken just about anyone.

He fully believed that it was her karma coming back to punish her for being so spoilt and arrogant. He looked down as Harry’s breath hitched, but his submissive just turned his head further into his stomach and cuddled closer.

Blaise knew exactly who was in his arms, but he couldn’t bring himself to care. The moment he had seen those startlingly beautiful, emerald green eyes, he had known who was in front of him, because there was only one person in Hogwarts with eyes so stunningly green as the ones he was looking at. Harry Potter.

He knew he was going to have one hell of a war to overcome when the word got out that there was an unknown, unmated submissive among them, but he was willing to fight to the death for his mate. Harry was worth it, he would die a thousand times in agony for Harry and that was only after knowing him for a single night.

He knew that he was breaking the rules, knew that he would be punished for not informing the Dracken Counsel immediately that there was a submissive Dracken in his vicinity, but from the first lungful of Harry’s light, chestnut scent, he had wanted the Dracken for his own.

He didn’t want to give every unmated Dracken in the world a fair chance at winning Harry, he wanted Harry for himself and no one else would be getting him. At least, not until he had firmly established himself as Harry’s mate, then he would have to let Harry chose more dominants in order to get him pregnant. Though not one more than was needed to get a clutch of babies.

Harry snuffled in his sleep and Blaise smiled down at him again. Harry was so adorable and endearing. He was natural and sweet, unlike Miette. Blaise could already envision himself having several clutches of children with Harry, all of them sweet and just as endearing as their Mother, where with Miette all he had been able to think about was the spoilt spawn she would create. That was if she ever fell pregnant in the first place, there was a rumour travelling around the Dracken community that she had slept with human men before her inheritance just because she didn’t want to go through the body altering pregnancy nor the pain of labour.
Blaise looked to Harry’s flat belly. It would look gorgeous rounded and ripe with his children. He growled in pleasure and wrapped his arms more firmly around Harry. Submissive male Drackens were so rare that every dominant would come to see Harry, would try to get his attention and become his mate. Blaise couldn’t allow that, not when dominants outnumbered submissives by twenty to one, there weren’t enough submissives to go around and the longer a dominant Dracken was without a mate, the more vicious and desperate he got as his instincts screamed at him to breed a clutch of children to boost numbers.

Blaise didn’t want to end up like that, he wanted a large family. He wanted clutch after clutch of children with Harry, only with Harry.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Harry woke up warm and comfortable in an unfamiliar bed. He blinked before he sat up and looked around, every muscle tensing and his senses on high alert. That is until he looked at where he was. He was obviously in the Slytherin dormitories, the copious amounts of green and silver and the excessive use of snakes attested to that, but what really made him calm down was the scent of the unfamiliar person lying in the bed with him. Blaise.

This must be what Blaise looked like without his Dracken features. He was just as handsome, still as strong and unshakable, still broad shouldered and he still had the powerful, yet slender body. But his scales were gone leaving behind flawless, olive toned skin. His wings were gone and Harry lamented the loss of such beautiful appendages.

Lying back down, Harry watched as Blaise slept. His dominant looked so strong, even as he slept, those broad shoulders raising and falling with each breath, his face just as unemotional when he was asleep as he was when he was awake. Blaise’s mouth just wasn’t made for smiles.

A bed creaking had Harry looking over his shoulder to a gap in the green hangings around the bed. A shock of white blond hair had Harry making the final connection his brain had been waiting for. His dominant mate was the best friend of Draco Malfoy. The Draco Malfoy who hated the very air he breathed.

“Blaise!” The sleep roughed voice of Malfoy cut through the morning silence. “Blaise, get up! We have to get to the library before the Gryffindor beaver steals all the good books again.”

Blaise’s face crinkled as he was pulled from sleep, but he was too slow in answering the blond, who ripped the bed hangings open, only to leap back in shock when he saw Harry cuddled into Blaise’s side.

“Potter? What the fuck are you doing down here?!”

Malfoy went to grab Harry’s arm, but he was intercepted by another hand that gripped his arm.
Harry felt Blaise press against his back as he sat up in the bed.

“Quit your yelling. I’m up. I think we all are.” Blaise grumbled, looking around to see the face of Theodore Nott poking out of his own bed hangings.

“Fuck you being up, what the hell is Potter doing in your bed?”

Blaise wrapped his arms around Harry and pulled him in close to his chest.

“Isn’t that obvious?” Blaise asked with a raised eyebrow. “Now leave him alone and go and get dressed, you take half an hour to get ready and I don’t.”

Draco opened his mouth, but a stern glare from Blaise had him grimacing and turning to go into the adjoining bathroom to get ready.

“I apologise for him, Harry, he is never at his best in the mornings.” Blaise told him softly.

“Did you carry me here?” Harry asked with a small blush.

Blaise’s sensual mouth curved into an irresistible smirk and he nodded once. “I did. I loved holding you close to me; you kept moving your head to place your ear over my heart.”

Harry blushed again trying to control himself, but all he managed to do was blush harder. Blaise chuckled and stood up from the bed, throwing his arms behind him and over his head to stretch, his back cracking.

Harry did the same and started looking for his robes, it was a Saturday and there were no lessons, but he didn’t have any other clothes.

“I will not permit you to wear the same outfit twice in a row, Prezioso.” Blaise’s voice whispered in his ear.

Harry turned around, his anger taking a place in his stomach. He was embarrassed enough to have been caught in bed with Blaise by Draco Malfoy of all people, but to be told that his clothes weren’t good enough was pushing a very fine line.

“I can wear what I like!” Harry hissed.

“No, you cannot.” Blaise answered sternly, his eyes turning to cold and harsh flint.

“Yes I can!”

Blaise’s hand shot out and gripped Harry around the neck, his large hand squeezing tightly in reprimand. Sharp, delicate points put pressure upon Harry’s skin as Blaise let his claws push through his fingers.

“You will wear a set of my clothing until you can get to your dorm room to change into a set of clothes that you didn’t wear and run around a forest in yesterday. I will not see you, my mate, wearing dirty clothing.” Blaise hissed.

Harry wanted to continue to defy Blaise, he didn’t want to be a doormat, he wanted to prove that he was defiant and that he wouldn’t quiver and give into Blaise’s demands, but this relationship, mateship, whatever it was, was brand new and Harry didn’t know how far Blaise was willing to go. He didn’t want to be in pain and Blaise had compromised. He sighed and nodded carefully, very aware of the claws at his neck.

Blaise let go of his throat and pulled him into a hug instead, placing a lingering kiss to Harry’s head. He pulled Harry over to the wardrobe beside his bed and took out a soft, navy jumper and a pair of designer jeans.

Blaise shrunk the clothes and, much to Harry’s embarrassment, tried dressing Harry himself.

“I’m not a baby!” Harry told him angrily.

“You are my mate and I will look after you.”

“But I don’t need you to dress me!” Harry stated. “That isn’t looking after me, Blaise. It’s humiliating.”

Blaise was confused. His understanding was that a submissive would relish having a mate dress them, it was seen as a dominant caring for his mate, but Harry was being defiant at every turn.

He sighed and held the clothes out to Harry, who snatched them with a glare. He had known having a mate would be hard work, what relationship wasn’t? But he had never in his wildest dreams thought that his mate would be so stubborn and hard willed.

He supposed it came with having Harry Potter, the only person in existence to have survived the killing curse, the sole person to have destroyed the Dark Lord, as a submissive mate. He needed to decide what he wanted more, Harry as a mate, or his sanity.

Chuckling softly as he watched Harry shyly and bashfully shimmy into the tight jeans, Blaise decided that his sanity could take a backseat for once, Harry would be a perfect mate for him and he was willing to compromise to keep Harry happy, at least on the less important things.

Chapter End Notes

A/N: I know that Blaise and Harry are a little OCC, but it won’t last for long, Blaise is shocked that Harry is a Dracken and Harry is still a bit stunned that he isn’t human anymore.
Don’t worry all you Draco lovers. He hasn’t noticed that Harry or Blaise are Drackens yet, he’s too wrapped up in his own life like the self-centred narcissist that we all love him for, but he will notice soon and then Blaise will have to fight for Harry.

Chapter Three – Possessiveness and Jealousy

Harry had to admit that Blaise’s clothes were so much more comfortable than anything he had ever worn before. He loved the tight, dark blue jeans and the navy blue sweater. They fit him so perfectly and he deduced that he had been a fool to argue with Blaise about what he was wearing, though he wasn’t going to tell Blaise that.

Harry was all for sneaking out of the Slytherin dormitory under a cloak, but Blaise would hear nothing of the sort and they walked out to breakfast together, in full view of the other Slytherins, who glared at him as he walked through their common room under the heavy and protective arm of Blaise.

The girls in particular were very vicious in their heated glares and Harry felt not only uncertainty, but also an unfamiliar spike of possessiveness. Blaise was his dominant mate! They couldn’t have him and he would strip the flesh from their bones if they tried anything to get Blaise away from him.

The intensity of his possessiveness frightened him; he had had next to nothing to ever be possessive of. He had had nothing growing up as a child, no toy or game that was ever strictly his, hell even his clothes weren’t his. The only possessions he owned that he felt remotely possessive over were his invisibility cloak, the marauders map and his Firebolt and those were all for sentimental reasons. The cloak had been his Father’s, the map had been his Father’s, Sirius’ and Remus’ and the Firebolt had been given to him by his Godfather, his dead Godfather.

But those three things paled in the possessiveness he felt for Blaise. He would slice up anyone who dared try to steal his mate from him, which contradicted what the book he had read had told him about submissive Drackens. That book had stated that submissive Drackens wouldn’t fight for their dominant mate, but Harry would fight with every last breath in his body for Blaise.
“Do not worry, Bello,” Blaise murmured to him. “These pathetic human girls hold no comparison to your stunning beauty. They are glaring because they are jealous of your flawless features.”

“I think they are jealous of me for having you, actually.” Harry answered back. “They want you, not me.”

“Well they will have to remain jealous then as they will never have me.”

“I don’t understand. You could have one of them if you wanted, hell you could have all of them. The book said there were no repercussions for dominant Drackens taking humans.”

Blaise chuckled deeply and the arm around Harry’s shoulders squeezed him gently.

“Ah, Harry, how adorable you are. You should not believe everything that you read about our kind in books. Most of the information is either muddled up or downright wrong. True there are no repercussions for a dominant male to have a human, but a dominant will always want a submissive Dracken over any human. Submissive Drackens are becoming less and less common, Prezioso; dominant Drackens now outnumber the submissives by approximately twenty dominants to one single submissive. We would not go with humans through choice.”

Suddenly Harry understood a whole lot better and he felt secure enough to even glare back at the girls sneering at him, much to Blaise’s amusement.

When they reached the Great Hall, Harry automatically veered off towards the Gryffindor table, until a hand gripping his arm stopped him. Blaise raised a single eyebrow and began tugging him towards the Slytherin table.

“I don’t want to sit at the Slytherin table!” Harry argued, trying, and failing, to pry Blaise’s fingers from his arm. “Blaise!”

“You will sit with me.” Blaise told him firmly. “You will not be out of my sight, or out of my reach.”

“This is ridiculous!” Harry hissed. “I’ll only be across the hall!”
Blaise sat down and pulled Harry down next to him, he did not let go of his arm.

“Eat your breakfast.” Blaise ordered, but Harry glared at him poisonously. “Harry, eat your breakfast.”

“What if I don’t? Are you going to force me to do that as well?”

Blaise’s eyes flashed dangerously, but Harry didn’t care as he bared his teeth in a primal show of defiance.

Blaise cuffed the back of his head hard and Harry winced, every ounce of defiance leaving his body at once. He huddled down in his borrowed jumper and curled in on himself as much as possible on the bench.

He didn’t like being punished by his dominant, but it all felt like it was happening too fast. Three months since becoming a Dracken and he already had a mate and Blaise had said that books didn’t have all the answers and that the answers they did have were either wrong or partial truths. The information he knew about his own species would have filled an eggcup, probably half an eggcup if most of the information he did have was wrong.

He felt like he was losing himself. He was not a doormat; he would not grovel or crawl around after Blaise on his knees. He was not a weak person! He had relied on himself for so long, he had practically raised himself, had fended for himself, yet now his instincts were forcing him to forget all of that and rely on Blaise for everything.

He didn’t need anyone to protect him! He had been doing just fine on his own and that was even before he had gotten razor sharp fangs and acidic claws. It wasn’t like he was defenceless or incapable of protecting himself!

A pair of lips nuzzling his cheek had Harry melting into Blaise’s embrace, despite what felt like the entire hall watching them. He wanted to remain angry at Blaise, he wanted to defy him and show that he was not a weak, pathetic, little creature to be kicked around, but he couldn’t bring himself to hold onto his anger at Blaise, not even after he had hit him, had humiliated him, in front of the entire school.

“Just eat something, Mio Prezioso.” Blaise whispered to him and Harry found himself filling his plate before he had really registered what Blaise had said.

Was this some sort of power dominant Drackens had over their submissives? Could a dominant force a submissive to do what they wanted or was Harry just fed up of fighting? Was he really so desperate for any sort of love and affection that he would cave in to any and all of Blaise’s demands?

He had to admit though that having Blaise’s large, warm hand rubbing gently at his lower back was much better than receiving a cuff around the head from the same hand. But he couldn’t think like that! He would not lose his personality just for an easier life! Blaise would just have to get used to Albus Dumbledore was very concerned. Very, very concerned as he watched Harry enter the Great Hall with a sixth year Slytherin named Blaise Zabini. He watched as Harry made to go to the Gryffindor table, only to be pulled forcibly towards the Slytherin table instead.

The last straw however had been the very harsh smack to the back of the head that the Zabini Heir had administered. He would not stand for Harry being abused right under his very own nose. He would have to put a stop to this abusive relationship, if indeed that is what it turned out to be.

He rose from his place at the Head table and made his way over to the Slytherin table. He placed a wizened, wrinkled hand on Harry’s shoulder and was met with a gasp of surprise from his favoured student and a low growl from the young Zabini Heir, who was glaring a hole through his head.

“Kindly remove your hand from Harry’s person.” Blaise ordered him as politely as he was able to through gritted teeth and balled up fists.

“I was wondering if I might have a word with you, Harry.” Albus addressed the young Gryffindor, his eyes twinkling. “I do so miss our afternoon talks over tea and as today is a Saturday, I had been hoping that you would do me the pleasure of accompanying an old man for the day.”

“Of course, Professor.” Harry answered politely with that beautiful smile that reminded Albus so much of a young Lily Evans.

“Ah, Harry my boy, you spoil this old man too much.”

Harry chuckled sweetly as he stood up, ready to accompany his Headmaster. Blaise however had other plans as he stood up between Harry and his Headmaster.

“I was going to spend the day with Harry.” He hissed, not even pretending to be respectful anymore.

“Blaise! Stop it.” Harry chided.

Blaise’s hand shot out to grip the back of Harry’s neck, his claws digging in, safely hidden by Harry’s hair.

“I suggest, Mister Zabini that you let Harry go this instant and come with me to my office.” Albus thundered.

“I suggest that you stay out of things that don’t concern you!”

“Mister Zabini.” A silky voice interrupted. “I would hope that you will follow the Headmaster’s request, I would hate to see a member of my own house in detention and believe me I would make it an extremely...torturous experience.”

Harry looked into those deep black eyes and shivered. Snape knew. He knew exactly what he and Blaise were and he did not look happy with Blaise.

“Severus, perhaps you could accompany us to my office. This discussion should be held away from curious little eyes and ears.”

Snape nodded his head and with a force Harry would never have believed from the skinny man, he pried Blaise’s hand away from his neck and guided Blaise out of the Hall, Harry and Dumbledore following more sedately.

The trip was silent, but Harry could not help but rub his neck to ease the pain that was there. He didn’t notice Dumbledore’s keen eyesight pick up on the unconscious action.

Once inside the office, Dumbledore sat behind his desk and motioned for Harry to sit in the chair the furthest away from Blaise, who had been forced into the chair on the right by Snape.

“Now would any of you boys like some tea? I have always found it very relaxing.”

Both Snape and Blaise shook their heads mutely, but Harry smiled and nodded. Dumbledore knew Harry could never resist a cup of honey tea.

Albus chuckled in joy as he prepared Harry’s favoured tea and slid the white and yellow china cup to his favourite student, before sipping on his own peppermint tea. Sighing in pleasure he surveyed the angry and struggling Zabini Heir over the rim of his cup.

“Whatever is the matter, Mister Zabini? Surely you will not deny Harry a simple cup of tea?”
Blaise growled and Snape had to exert even more pressure upon Blaise’s shoulders to keep him in his chair. Harry would have though it impossible to keep Blaise down seeing as he was a dominant Dracken and could rip Snape’s arms from his sockets. Something seriously wasn’t right.

“Albus, there is something about Mister Zabini that you should know about.” Snape spoke over Blaise’s growls.

Harry gasped. So Snape did know. He truly did know that he and Blaise were Drackens.

“Which would be what, Severus my boy?”

“I am fully aware of what Drackens are, Severus. Several have passed through this fine school since my becoming Headmaster. However I am curious as to why this was kept a secret, it is the foundation rules of this school that all non-human students are to be made known to the Headmaster of the school upon their inheritance. If I remember rightly, then Drackens have their inheritance at sixteen. Why was I not informed of Mister Zabini’s creature inheritance last year?”

“It was decided between myself and Marianna, Blaise’s Mother, that Blaise’s inheritance should be kept a secret due to his position in the school. The war with the Dark Lord was still raging when Blaise came into his inheritance, his Mother did not want her only child to be used as a weapon by the Dark Lord.”

“Ah and of course, the more people who knew, the more danger of the secret getting out, naturally.”

Dumbledore stroked his beard and Harry huddled down in his seat. He wanted to know what would happen to Blaise, what would happen to him seeing as he was a Dracken as well and hadn’t informed the Headmaster upon his inheritance, regardless that he hadn’t actually known about his creature status, nor the foundation rule of the school about informing the Headmaster about it.

“What does all of this have to do with Mister Potter?” Dumbledore asked seriously. Steepling his fingers over his half empty tea cup and looking sternly over his half-moon spectacles.
“He’s mine!” Blaise burst out furiously.

“I came into an inheritance this summer, Sir, on the morning of my sixteenth birthday.” Harry put in quietly. “I’m a submissive Dracken.”

“Blaise, you know the laws!” Snape burst out furiously. “You could be killed over this!”

“Harry’s worth it.” Blaise answered defiantly.

“Think of your Mother!”

“Madre would agree with me!” Blaise hissed, his accent becoming more pronounced the angrier he got.

Snape took a deep breath and he sighed.

“You know that he cannot be kept a secret, Blaise. The laws are firm; all dominant Drackens need to prove themselves to a submissive.”

“What?” Harry exclaimed in shock.

All eyes moved to him and he quivered, but remained staring back at them.

“The laws on this are clear, Potter. You have to be announced as a submissive Dracken and all dominant Drackens who are in search of a mate must prove themselves to you.”

“But I don’t want them to! I don’t want another dominant! I want Blaise!”

Snape closed his eyes, a grimace taking over his face.

“You have already woven yourself into him, Blaise; I hope you are ready for the repercussions of “You know the Counsel will punish you. Elder Getus’ grandson has recently come into his inheritance as a dominant Dracken; he has been searching for a submissive for him since.”

“Elder Getus’ grandson can shove his inheritance up his arse! Harry is mine! No one is going to take him away from me! Not even the Counsel.”

Snape swallowed as the look of pain on his face increased.

“You know that as a male submissive Potter will be highly sought after. That you did not immediately contact the Counsel upon finding him will be seen as a great injustice, Blaise.”

“I don’t care!” Blaise hissed.

“Why do they need to be informed that Mister Zabini has kept anything from them?” Dumbledore asked with a happy twinkle. “Wouldn’t it be easier all around if Mister Zabini was to plead ignorance in this matter and I will contact the Counsel today and inform them that I have recently discovered a submissive Dracken in my school?”

Snape blinked once before he nodded. “This idea has merit, it could work if both of you are careful. Potter, you must act as though you and Blaise are not already mates and Blaise, you cannot under any circumstances attack another dominant for touching Potter. You must act like he isn’t already your mate.”

“How did we even become mates?” Harry asked timidly. “We didn’t do anything.”

Snape sighed and looked to him as if he were the stupidest slug in the barrel, which he probably was.

“Drackens do not need intercourse to become mates, Potter. It can happen suddenly or gradually, over time. In your case it happened suddenly, which indicates that you are a very strong submissive and that you are drawing in mates to yourself to keep your power grounded so it does not lash out and inadvertently kill someone.”

“Our Drackens recognised each other as mates when I first licked you, Harry. We were mates from that first lick.”
“I do not need to hear such information, Blaise.” Snape cut in with a strong grimace. “What matters is that you are both mates and have to act like you are not, which is going to be monumentally difficult.”

“Not really. When all the other Drackens come here all I have to do is touch Blaise and say that he’s my mate.”

“You cannot be so stupid, Potter!” Snape groused. “It isn’t going to be that easy! All dominant Drackens have to congregate in one place before the process can even begin, you will have to put up with dominant Drackens trying to touch you and sweet talk you until then. They will say anything, will promise you everything to get you agree to be their mate. As the Dracken closest to you, Blaise will not be able to go near you until all other Drackens have arrived.”

“But I like having Blaise near me.”

“Do not whine, Potter. There is nothing that can be done about it.”

“Harry my boy; I will do anything and everything I can to make this experience more comfortable and less traumatic for you. I believe that the submissive Dracken chooses the place of meeting so as to be in a comfortable, familiar place.”

“Yes, that is correct.” Snape answered promptly.

“Harry, it might prove beneficial to use Hogwarts as your meeting place, this way you cannot be harmed and I will have the Professors, the ghosts and the portraits looking out for you.”

“Thank you, Professor, I wouldn’t know what other place to use.”

“If the submissive cannot come up with a meeting place then the congregation will be held at the Dracken Counsel Hall.” Snape cut in.

“Now, this meeting will be a waste of time, so we must hasten it along as much as possible.” Dumbledore stated. “We do not want the other students finding out, or the media getting a hold of the story.”
“How do we hide this?” Snape asked.

“I will put up a makeshift house on the other side of the lake and heavily ward it. We need to control this as much as we can, with Harry not having a guardian this will be much more difficult, but as Harry’s Headmaster and this being during the school year, I will be happy to act as your guardian Harry.”

Harry nodded immediately.

“Blaise said that I was going to need more than just him as my dominant, why would this meeting be a waste of time if I need more than one mate?”

“Because you won’t get all of the mates you need at once, Potter.” Snape told him. “You get your first dominant after your inheritance and then your breeding cycle will start. After your first period of heat has ended, you may gain a second mate. If you require another mate, you will need a third meeting again after your next period of heat and so on until you have the required number of dominant mates.”

“He will not have any more mates than necessary to impregnate him!” Blaise burst out, glaring at the Potions Professor.

“I’ve already told you I don’t want any more dominants than I need to get a clutch of children!” Harry shouted back.

Blaise’s glare switched to Harry and they stood there glaring at each other until Blaise growled so deeply that the sound reverberated through Harry’s lungs. Harry dropped his head, satisfied that Blaise had gotten the message, but before he pushed his dominant as far as punishing him. Who said that he was too stupid to learn anything?

Harry smiled and looked up through his eyelashes at the dour Potions Professor. He could learn new things just as well as the next person, regardless of what anyone else said.

Blaise opened his arms and Harry happily walked into the circle of his dominant’s arms. Those steel bands of muscle closed around him and immediately the feelings of peace, safety and protection washed over him, making all of his muscles relax and turned his body boneless. He had to admit that he loved the feeling of being cared for and protected, not that he’d tell Blaise that, at least, not so soon after they’d just met he wouldn’t.
Their tea with Dumbledore had taken them well past lunch and after assuring the concerned old man several times that he wasn’t actually being abused and that if Blaise even tried to take advantage of him or push him into something that he didn’t want then he’d have his balls lodged into his chest cavity, the two of them, him and Blaise, were free to go.

Blaise nuzzled and licked at him gently all the way down the spiral stairs and groped him through the borrowed clothing.

“Blaise! Please control yourself, I’m starving.”

That stopped Blaise in his tracks and his head shot up.

“You’re hungry? I will catch us something to eat, I will not have my mate go hungry.”

Harry shook his head and sighed. “Blaise, you can’t catch a deer for me at two in the afternoon, not with little first years happily exploring the forbidden forest and fourth years daring each other to see who can go the furthest in, you’ll be seen!”

“I will not have you going hungry, Prezioso. It goes against everything that I am as a dominant Dracken.”

“Yeah, so we’ll just go to the kitchens. Honestly, Blaise.”

“I don’t know where the kitchens are located, I know logically they are down near the Hufflepuff dormitories, it’s the only place that they can possibly be located, but Draco, Theo and I couldn’t find them when we went looking in our first and second years. We think that they might be warded to keep students out.”

Harry smiled secretively. “Lucky that you have me then, because I found the kitchens and how to get into them.”

“You are just full of surprises, Mio Prezioso.”

“I know nearly all of the secret passages in this school, Blaise. Didn’t Malfoy ever tell you about the time in Hogsmeade where my head suddenly appeared?”

“Yes he did. He ran straight to Professor Snape to tell him. It was never proven how you did that, or how you got past Filch.”

“I know two passageways out of the school and into Hogsmeade.” Harry told Blaise proudly.

“My clever little minx.” Blaise cooed, nuzzling at his neck again.

“What is with you and my neck?” Harry asked, even as he tilted it to the side to give Blaise more access to it.

“You have the most beautiful neck that I have ever seen.” Blaise answered, his lips a breath away from touching his skin.

Harry shivered and pressed closer to Blaise as those lips descended once again onto his neck, nibbling and licking.

“I want so badly to leave my mark upon you, but I can’t.” Blaise whispered. “The other Drackens would know immediately that you have been marked by someone else, it would ruin our entire plan.”

Harry moved away from Blaise, even though he really didn’t want to and he took his hand instead.

“We are almost at the kitchens.” Harry told him as the familiar picture of the bowl of fruit came into sight.

“I have walked past here a thousand times and not once have I gotten a hint that the kitchens are near here.”

Harry grinned as he reached out to tickle the pear in the fruit bowl. It let out the familiar, high pitched squealing giggle before it turned into a doorknob. Harry twisted it and pushed open the portrait, which had now become a door, with a flourish.
The exclamations and greetings from the house elves made Harry grin as he praised them and then kindly asked for a late lunch, early dinner with lots of rare meat. They happily accepted and sat him and Blaise down at a cloth covered table in the corner, before placing mounded plates in front of them.

“This is incredible.” Blaise told him, looking around whilst eating the delicious meal in front of him.

“I felt the same way when I came here for the first time.”

“Are those the house tables?”

“Yep, how did you think the food got to the tables so quickly? It doesn’t just appear out of thin air at the feasts you know; the house-elves lay these tables with the food and then use their magic to make it pass up to the tables counterparts in the Great Hall which is directly above us.” Harry explained.

Blaise shook his head with a wondrous smile on his face. “I had always wondered how that happened, Draco and I believed that it happened by magic, of course, but we had previously believed that it was the Headmaster’s magic, not house-elves.”

“Speaking of your friends, won’t they miss you?”

“No. They are used to me going off on my own for a couple of hours every other day. What about Granger and Weasley, everyone in the school has noticed you have been separated from them, what happened, Harry?”

Harry sighed and stabbed his jacket potato with more force than was necessary.

“Ron got jealous after that newspaper article that wouldn’t stop gushing about how amazing I was for defeating the Dark Lord last April. He said some hateful and hurtful things and well, I shouted back and then he said that I could stay alone forever with my fame and glory. That I would die a miserable, lonely old man and after that I told him I never wanted to speak to him again. Hermione sided with Ron because they’re going out and she didn’t want to do anything to jeopardise their relationship, she’s loved him for a long time. I haven’t spoken to either of them since May and they seem to be doing just fine without me.”

Harry shrugged, trying for nonchalance even though inside the breaking down of their friendship was tearing him apart at the seams. They had been friends since they were eleven, four years was a long time for everything to just disappear overnight.

Blaise slipped around the table and held him close, stroking his hair and rubbing his side gently.

“You have me now, Prezioso and nothing will split us apart. We will find you as many dominants as you need and then we will start having clutches of children. We will be a family, Prezioso, I will ensure it.”

“What if no other dominant wants me?” Harry asked insecurely.

Blaise laughed deeply and kissed Harry’s little nose.

“Oh Harry, of course they will want you, they will be fighting and killing each other just to get your attention. Submissive Drackens do not remain unmated for long after their inheritance, Prezioso. You could have been the ugliest, stupidest, most pathetic submissive in the world and you would still have dominant Drackens flocking to you. Unfortunately for me, you are the most beautiful, intelligent, fertile and powerful submissive in the world, I am going to have to have dominance battles daily to keep you mine.”

“I don’t want you to be hurt.”

“It is unavoidable, Harry. I will have to get into battles with the other Drackens to prove I am worthy of you, to prove that I can protect you and our young, it is inevitable that I will be hurt at some point, whether minor or majorly I cannot say for certain.”

Harry did not like that at all. In fact he didn’t like this entire situation at all. He didn’t want other dominant Drackens flocking around him, touching him, groping him, he could look after himself, but he could barely stand up to Blaise, what if there was a more powerful, cruel dominant Dracken out there? How would Harry cope if he became his mate?

He would just have to get this whole debacle done and out of the way quickly. He still wanted Blaise as a mate at the end of this and he wanted him alive.

Harry did not like that at all. In fact he didn’t like this entire situation at all. He didn’t want other dominant Drackens flocking around him, touching him, groping him, he could look after himself, but he could barely stand up to Blaise, what if there was a more powerful, cruel dominant Dracken out there? How would Harry cope if he became his mate? He would just have to get this whole debacle done and out of the way quickly. He still wanted Blaise as a mate at the end of this and he wanted him alive.

Harry hated this. He hated it with a bloody vengeance. He wasn’t even allowed to go near Blaise. After Dumbledore had informed the Dracken Counsel that there was a submissive Dracken in Hogwarts a Counsel Elder had appeared almost instantly afterwards and he had been stuck to Harry ever since, like some sort of animated shadow, assuring him that he was never to be alone or unprotected, and that as Harry’s chaperone, the elderly Dracken had to accompany him everywhere.

Harry was at his wits end already, honestly at the end of his tether with the elderly Dracken, a man named Quintalus Trintus, who wouldn’t let anyone and he meant anyone near him.

The other students were talking, rumours were flying around and spreading like wildfire about him having some sort of deadly infectious disease which was why no one was allowed to go near him and he felt like screaming out his frustration for everyone to hear him.

As it turned out there were three dominant Drackens currently at Hogwarts. Blaise was one of them, which he’d already known. Very, very surprisingly Snape was another of the three and the third was unknown, but Elder Trintus, his chaperone, could smell his pheromones around the school. Harry begged to anyone who was listening that Snape didn’t start vying for his attention like a horny teenager too; he wouldn’t be able to bear the thought of it, nor get over the sight of his Potions Professor doing something as normal as offering him a bunch of flowers or trying to have a civil conversation with him.

Blaise was playing his part of unmated, dominant perfectly. He was testing the limits of Harry’s chaperone to the max, just like any other unmated dominant who was interested in a submissive would do, and then some. Harry would giggle and chuckle and laugh and sometimes even cry with mirth at some of the things that Blaise was doing to get his attention, even going so far as to send him several dozen ruby red roses, a huge bar of Honeydukes finest chocolate fudge because he knew that it was Harry’s favourite and he had given him a kitten for the day, which had really freaked Harry out seeing as the kitten had exploded into confetti after twelve hours. Elder Trintus had had to calm him down and explain that it wasn’t anything that Harry had done to the kitten, but it had just been a spell. There was a spell to turn parchment into an animal, but it only lasted for twelve hours before the animal reverted back to its previous paper state. It was a very advanced, impressive display of magic that should have been well beyond a student of any age. Blaise was well and truly showing off.

Nothing was said about Blaise having an unfair advantage because he had a head start on all of the other dominants, it seemed that if you were further away from the submissive then it was just tough luck and you had to work doubly hard to impress the submissive, in this case him, when they arrived.

It took only sixteen hours after the announcement was made for the first of the dominant Drackens to arrive and when they did, they had immediately started raining attention down on him. It was like feeding time at the zoo, every Dracken flooded him with attention that he didn’t actually want and Harry barely had time to say hello to Blaise, let alone get near him enough to cuddle. He was starting to feel lonely and trapped the longer he spent away from Blaise.

Harry had been moved to the makeshift house, which was more like a hotel than a house, where the only good thing to happen was that he was free to wander around with all of his Dracken attributes on show. He loved the freedom of walking around with his wings out, but unfortunately the dominant Drackens had taken being in a huge house all on their own with a submissive and only one chaperone as Harry wanting the privacy to have sex with them.

Harry had been groped more times in the past hour than all of the hours he had been alive. His chaperone was having a hell of a time keeping tabs on every Dracken that had turned up and it was to Harry’s understanding that the poor elderly Dracken had called for reinforcements within the first hour.

When he had gotten two minutes alone with Blaise, his chaperone yelling himself blue at one particular Dracken who had shoved his hand down the back of Harry’s trousers to fondle his bum, his mate had told him that the other Drackens were being so vicious because Harry was just so desirable to them as a prospective mate. He was gorgeous and had a personality to match which was drawing in every Dracken he met. Harry was just so glad that Snape wasn’t here; he really couldn’t imagine the humiliation and embarrassment of having one of his teachers grope at him like the other Drackens were doing.

Blaise had been shooed away like a bothersome cat when Elder Trintus had finally finished biting the head off of the other Dracken and he had left with a wink and a kiss to the back of Harry’s hand, which had made Harry chuckle.

His chaperone had leant against the wall and had panted, pulling a handkerchief from his pocket and mopped his damp brow.

“You are something else, my dear.” He had told Harry softly. “I have never seen a meeting this ferocious in all my time of being a submissive chaperone. But then you are one of the more perfect catches.”

“Perfect catch?” Harry asked confusedly, wondering why he was being compared to a fish.

“Yes, my dear. You are stunning to look at, which alone would have gotten you a mate, but your outstanding personality really makes you shine a league above the other submissives, that you are so powerful and fertile just adds more bonuses on top of everything else.”

Harry hated being spoken about like he was some sort of pedigree animal, but he held his tongue. His chaperone was the only one who was keeping Harry from having his skin groped off. Blaise couldn’t help him seeing as they both had to pretend that they weren’t mates, if Blaise really wasn’t his mate then he’d be on the same side as the other dominant Drackens, trying to touch as much of him as possible, he wouldn’t be stopping the other Drackens.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

It had been two days and Harry was already bone tired. He had spoken to so many different men, had accepted so many gifts, some that he did actually like and some that were ridiculous, including a box of condoms, and had been told so many names, yet the only one he remembered was Blaise. Blaise giving him a single bracelet made of platinum, because he knew that Harry wouldn’t wear silver because of Remus. Blaise giving him a gorgeous grin and a small bow which had made Harry giggle. The other Drackens were just nameless, faceless people who were getting in Harry’s way of spending time with Blaise.

“Well, my dear, I think this meeting might be over sooner than I had believed.” Elder Trintus stated later that night when Harry was safely in his rooms, away from the other Drackens, but also away from Blaise.

“What do you mean?” Harry asked sweetly, sipping on his favoured honey tea.

“Oh. What does that mean?” Harry asked, playing ignorant.

The elderly Dracken chuckled. “Oh it is impossible not to be endeared by your sweetness, my dear. One can tell that you were not raised by other Drackens. You are so down to earth and not in the least bit spoilt or overindulged, that will surely change when you receive your mate, he or she will spoil you rotten and make sure that you want for nothing.”

“No, I wasn’t raised by other Drackens, my parents were killed when I was a baby and I was sent to live with my Mother’s Muggle sister.”
His chaperone shook his head sadly. “Had the Dracken world known of your existence you would have been given to a Counsel member. Such a shame. But back to you only being receptive to only one Dracken, it means that your Dracken side is being strongly drawn to him, your Dracken likes him very much, much more than the others, it will not take long before you are both mates.”

“Oh, but that’s good isn’t it?”

The elderly Dracken chuckled again. “Only a quarter of the dominant Drackens have arrived, the others will not be happy that they have missed out on a chance to win you.”

“It’s their fault for not getting here quicker. I’m glad it’s almost over; I can’t take so much attention. I’ve been kissed and touched so much in just two days. I’m not used to it. The first couple of hours of the first day really frightened me.”

“Do not fret, dear one, I will always be near you and these rooms are your sanctuary. If you feel overwhelmed then you only need to tell me and we will take a break here. But you are just so special that the other Drackens cannot get enough of you. Another point that makes you so endearing to the dominants is that you are so untouched; it excites them to know that they would be your first. Though they wouldn’t be your only, you are too powerful to have only one dominant.”

A sharp knock on the door preceded another elderly Dracken entering Harry’s private rooms, but what made Harry put his cup of tea down and stand up from his armchair, ready to run if the need arose, was the young dominant Dracken who had entered the room by the elderly Dracken’s side. An unmated dominant Dracken. An unmated dominant Dracken who stopped dead in his tracks as soon as he stepped into the room and inhaled the air deeply.

Deep brown eyes pinned Harry in place and a ferocious snarl was released from the other Dracken’s mouth, demanding Harry to submit.

“Elder Getus, you know that unmated dominants are not allowed in the submissive’s private rooms! This is a serious breach of protocol.” Harry’s chaperone, Elder Trintus, stated furiously, standing up himself and putting himself between Harry and this new dominant.

“I had only wished to introduce my grandson to the new submissive Dracken, Quintalus. We have only just gotten here and I thought that it would be nice to introduce them both to one another whilst you and I caught up with recent affairs.”

“Be that as it may, this is against the rules lain down for the safety of the submissive in question, these rooms are supposed to be a safe haven, a place to retreat to if it all gets too much. How can you expect the submissive to feel safe surrounded by so many dominants if his private sanctuary is invaded by an unmated Dracken?"

“We are hardly invading, Trintus.” The other Elder said, suddenly much less friendly than before. “I had just hoped that the little one might be feeling receptive to my grandson, I had only wished that they would get along.”

Before either Elder could speak again the dominant Dracken had leapt upon an unsubmitting Harry, who let out an undignified squeak and dropped to the floor to avoid the dominant, rolling under the coffee table and around the settee.

“Dominic! Stop this undignified display at once!” Elder Getus demanded.

His grandson, Dominic, obviously didn’t listen as he jumped onto the settee, trying to grab Harry over the back of it. Harry moved further away and edged around the room until he reached the door. He flung it open as Dominic ran at him and slammed it closed behind him as he set off running, his instincts telling him to get to Blaise, that he needed his dominant mate to protect him.

Harry was very lucky that Dominic did not appear to be as fast as Blaise was in the forest, or Harry would have been caught. It was severely unlucky though that he was in a hotel sized house full of unmated dominant Drackens, who were all in the same frame of mind as Dominic. To get him and grope him at any and all cost.

To Harry it seemed that there were more dominants than there had been when he had retired to his room for a break, but then he wouldn’t know any of them from Adam, the only Dracken he had been paying any attention to was Blaise and he wouldn’t have recognised anyone else if he had been introduced to them five minutes prior.

Harry made the heinous mistake of peeking over his shoulder to ascertain how far away the other Drackens were, the next thing he knew he had hit something so solid that he saw stars. He was hoisted up and he heard the belly rumbling growl above his head. It was an unfamiliar growl, but those arms were so protective, so strong and solid that Harry clung to the Dracken he had run into.

The only thing that Harry could discern was that he was taller and thicker than Blaise and much more solidly muscled.

The Dracken holding him growled so ferociously that Harry ducked his head under the other male’s chin; he heard at least three answering growls and two hisses before he was lurches sideways as the Dracken holding him started running and then flying, his absolutely huge wings beating the air violently.

Flying was so much faster than running and Harry squeezed his eyes closed so he couldn’t see the carpeted floor passing by at such disorienting speeds when he wasn’t the one in control of anything, he kept his eyes closed right up until the Dracken carrying him was tackled in mid-flight, right over the banister of the stairs.

The Dracken landed heavily on his back and Harry landed on top of him, but before he could get his bearings back he was ripped from the dazed dominant’s grasp and he was again held tightly as the new Dracken ran with him. A door opened and then closed and Harry heard a very strong locking spell chanted in a voice he recognised so very well.

“Prezioso, are you alright? Speak to me, Harry.” Blaise’s slightly breathless voice whispered into his ear. “Why did you leave the safety of your rooms?”

“One of the Elders brought his grandson into my rooms, Blaise. He was in my rooms! He tried to touch me, to grab me, so I had to run.”

“Oh Prezioso, Mio Prezioso.” Blaise exclaimed holding him tighter and wrapping his beautiful black and purple wings around him.

“Can I stay with you? My chaperone has already noticed that I’m more receptive to you than any of the other Drackens, he said that this meeting would be over soon because of it.”

“Of course you can, Harry, I would never turn you away, especially not when your rooms have been invaded.”

Harry smiled and snuggled in tighter to Blaise. This meeting had thrown him in at the deep end without armbands when he didn’t know how to swim. He was dreading when he had to have another meeting to find his second mate, why couldn’t Blaise be enough for him? He wasn’t greedy; he didn’t want more than one mate, so why did he have to have more than one mate just to get him pregnant?

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

The house was in uproar when the Elders and the dominants figured out that Harry was missing, but safely tucked up in bed with Blaise, Harry found that he didn’t care as his dominant stroked each of the sensitive, white scales on his pure white wings.

He was purring again, a deep, rumbling noise that came from deep within his chest as Blaise pressed his lips against his neck over and over whilst playing with his leathery wings.

Harry was not idle either as he explored the bare chest of his dominant for the first time. He had seen Blaise without a shirt on once, it had been that first time in the forest which seemed like so long ago now, but in reality it had only been a few days, but he hadn’t touched Blaise’s bare skin once. Until now that is.

Blaise was smooth and firm, there was a scattering of hair around his bellybutton and a soft line of hair that went below the waistband of his sleeping bottoms, but other than that, Blaise was smooth and hairless, deeply tanned and firmly muscled.

Harry run his fingers lightly over one dark brown nipple and then the other, loving the shiver that rolled down Blaise’s spine each time. He played with the darkly tanned skin, curiously comparing the olive tone to his own porcelain white with hints of pink.

Blaise chuckled and pulled Harry’s hands from his body, tucking them against his chest as he rolled over to trap them between both of their chests.

“If you carry on with that, Prezioso, then neither of us will be sleeping tonight.” Blaise whispered darkly.

“Is that such a bad thing? I’m done with this charade of a meeting. I want to announce you as my mate to the whole world, Blaise. I don’t want to be touched or kissed or groped by anyone other than you.”

“You will change your mind soon, after your first heat when your Dracken side realises that I alone will not be enough to impregnate you.”

“That’s later on, Blaise. I’m talking about now. I want just you for now. I don’t want them.”

Blaise sighed and buried his head into Harry’s long, black hair, he loved his mate’s hair, both long and silky when he was showing his Dracken features and short and messy when he was showing his human features. In both forms it smelt the same, like chestnuts.

“The other Drackens will call foul play if we announce it so soon, but then they always call foul play when they have not been chosen by a submissive, so it will not be looked into much, but the fact that you haven’t even compared wing sizes or spent a great deal of time with any Dracken will count against us, Bello.”

“I’ve had dominant Drackens flashing their wings at me for two whole days, Blaise! None of them entice me at all, I look at their brightly coloured wings being shoved into my face and I’m thinking, huh, another pair of wings, how nice, now get out of my way please. I don’t want to see green wings, blue wings, yellow ones or bloody red ones, the only wings I’m even remotely interested in are black and purple and I’m looking at them right now!”

Blaise silenced Harry with a ferocious kiss and Harry forgot about everything as those skilful lips teased his apart for a strong tongue to lay claim to his mouth.
Harry woke up on his third morning in the Dracken hotel, as he had named it, well rested and relaxed for the first time in months, perhaps even years. The reason became apparent almost immediately as he found himself cuddled under Blaise’s heavy, yet comforting, arm. One black leathery, purple scaled wing pulled over the top of their sleeping bodies like an umbrella, protecting him, and Blaise, from the bright sunlight filtering through the un-curtained window.

Yawning and stretching, Harry made a small, soft noise, but Blaise was awake and alert within seconds, sitting up and scanning the room for danger, before retracting his claws and fangs when he came to the conclusion that there was no apparent danger.

“Morning, Prezioso.” Blaise murmured, lying back down next to Harry and stroking one pale, but sleep reddened, cheek.

“Are you hungry? I can hunt for you.”

Harry shook his head fondly. Blaise sounded so excited at the prospect of going and killing an animal for Harry’s breakfast. Blaise was always offering to hunt for Harry; he had to wonder if it was in the dominant genes to hunt for every meal or if Blaise just liked hunting. Either way Harry was feeling more like having cereals for breakfast than meat, so regretfully he turned Blaise’s offer down with an explanation.

“You want cereals? You’re going into the first stages of heat, Prezioso. You need the grain for energy; soon you’ll want fruits and vegetables for slow release and energy storage.”

“Oh, but then the other Drackens will know that I already have a mate, the breeding cycle doesn’t start until I have a mate.”

Blaise nodded. “I know, Prezioso. We will announce our mateship later on, but first we have to be seen interacting with one another and you will have to watch some of the other dominants, then disregard them, if you really don’t like them, Harry, then simply reject their gifts and attentions. As the submissive the power is all yours, no one else’s. You have the right to reject or dismiss any Dracken that you want to, you can even send them away. Don’t let them bully you, Bello, they’re not allowed to.”
Harry smiled happily at this revelation and he hugged Blaise, mentally thanking him for giving him the strength and confidence he needed to get rid of the other dominants. If he was allowed to dismiss them and send them away from this hell hotel, then they couldn’t touch him, no more running from them, if they did something that he didn’t like then he’d damn well get rid of them. Unfortunately it would look too suspicious if he ordered all of them apart from Blaise out of the house like he wanted to.

Harry carefully slipped out of Blaise’s room and practically skipped down the corridor and into the breakfast room. Blaise was going to have a shower and take his time so it wouldn’t look in the least bit suspicious.

The massive hall that rivalled Hogwarts’ Great Hall fell silent as he entered and Harry had the odd thought that he was walking down death row as he confidently walked to the head of the table where his ‘special’ seat was located. Honestly it was more like a throne than a chair with a thick, soft, plush cushion for him to perch on with a padded back and arms.

“Oh, Harry, dear one. We have been searching all over for you.” His chaperone, Elder Trintus, stated with relief.

“I spent the night in the castle.” Harry lied smoothly. “I had to get away from this house, especially after my rooms were sullied.”

“Yes, about that, Harry, Dominic is very sorry for his behaviour.” The other Elder cut in, looking sorrowful. “He wishes to make it up to you.”

“He doesn’t have to, in fact I don’t want him to, what I want is for him to leave.”

“You don’t know what you’re saying, Harry.” Elder Getus told him firmly, chidingly.

“Yes I do. I will not stay here whilst he is here. I want him gone!”

“Get rid of him.” One dominant growled. “How can we properly interact with Harry if he is constantly running away from him?!”
“Let us not be hasty, all of you reacted the same to Harry when you first got here, Dominic is no different.”

“We didn’t act like him!” Another man, this one at least six foot eight with wide set shoulders to match, burst out harshly. “We respected the rules! None of us would have dared to enter the submissive’s room, only Dominic has been rude and disrespectful enough to do so! Harry’s rooms are supposed to be his own, no one is allowed in them because it is his space.”

“He’s right; no one else has barged into my rooms like that.” Harry answered, giving a smile to the huge man, who smirked back, his gorgeous blue eyes sparkling, puffing his chest out under Harry’s attention like he had just been told he’d won gold in an Olympic event. “There are some of you here that I just can’t be around, we are completely incompatible and you’ll never be my mate, I can’t concentrate on any of the others if you’re here.”

“Alright, dear one, you can come with me after your breakfast and we will interview each Dracken in turn, if you aren’t compatible with each other, you have the right to reject them.” Elder Trintus told him.

“I like that idea; it will give me a chance to spend some one on one time with all of you to find my prospective mate.”

The dominants all started murmuring to each other, but mostly they just growled at each other. They weren’t here to make friends after all; they were all in direct competition with each other. It was a shame; Harry thought sadly, none of them would be his mate, at least not this time around, but they all thought that they had a chance.

Harry happily ate his second bowl of cereal and then moved onto two pieces of wholemeal toast. He made sure to eat several pieces of nearly raw, cubed lamb because he was being watched closely, even though he didn’t really fancy eating meat and then it was time for the showdown. His one on one interviews with the dominant Drackens. He had a feeling that he just wasn’t going to enjoy this as much as he was supposed to.

Harry was going to be reduced to cold blooded slaughter. Honestly if this kept up he would have no other choice, it would be them or him and Harry would much rather it be them. He had deduced, in just three hours, that dominant Drackens were pompous, arrogant, self-satisfied, egotistical bastards.

Harry had been under the false impression that this interview was to learn about his compatibility with his prospective mate. But apparently it was him sitting in an armchair listening to a bunch of dicks and egos telling him their accomplishments, their prowess’s and their achievements.
Even Elder Trintus was looking quite astonished at their level of rudeness and self-centredness, at least Harry wasn’t the only one. Honestly he hadn’t once been asked how he was or even what he was interested in, there had been one Dracken who had been very into a hobby called caving, which Harry had expressed a slight interest in, so the guy had explained everything about it to him, before going on to brag that he had a trophy in mountain biking, a subject that Harry wasn’t in the least bit interested in.

Which wasn’t likely seeing as he already had one, but Harry’s fear was more for his future clutch of children, which he’d never have unless he found a second, possibly third and fourth mate. He wanted Blaise, of course he did, but he also wanted his own children. Was he doomed to pick an ignorant berk to spend the rest of his life with, to spend time with, to mate with and to have sex with, just to have children?

“Oh, Harry dearest, don’t be daft, of course you’ll find a mate. Really they can’t all be this selfish! There must be one among the hundred or so that are here that you like.”

“What if I don’t like any of them? And you told me that I will need more than one mate to get pregnant, I can’t choose one, how can I pick two?! What if I need more than two? Oh god I can’t do this, why can’t I just have the one mate? Why can’t one mate be enough for me to have a clutch of children?”

Elder Trintus sighed and took a refreshing sip of tea, before he looked at the distressed young man across from him. Sixteen, this boy was just sixteen years old he thought sadly and the biggest age group of the dominants was in the late twenties, early thirties range. He wished that there were more submissive Drackens, then he wouldn’t have to watch time and time again as a submissive was paired with a dominant three times older than they were.

“Your Dracken instincts know what they are doing, Harry. You may have already subconsciously chosen, you have, after all, been inhaling the scents of all of the dominants here for the past two days. Just get through these interviews and if at the end you still haven’t chosen then we will think of something else, but for now, we still have about sixty more dominants to interview.”

“Three hours and we aren’t even halfway.” Harry mumbled, throwing back the last few gulps of his honey tea and swallowing hard. “Someone give me the strength to carry on.”
Another hour and Harry wanted to slice up the next dominant Dracken that he saw. But unfortunately for his killing urges, but very fortunately for his sanity, it was Blaise who sauntered through the door next. His gorgeous, wonderful, amazing mate, Blaise.

“Good afternoon, I’m Blaise Mariano Zabini, seventeen.” Blaise greeted with a small smile that had just a hint of smirk in it. “I hope that you are well.”

“You know you are the first person to even ask me how I am. I’ve had an entire day of being bombarded with selfish remarks and comments and I’m just so glad that one of you isn’t too self-absorbed to actually ask me how I am!”

“How dull and utterly disgusting behaviour.” Blaise replied with a wink that was hidden from the chaperone. “I’ve brought you some more chocolate; you told me yesterday that you had none left so I went out this morning and bought you some more.”

Harry nearly pounced on the bar of chocolate that was offered to him and opened it immediately and bit into it.

“Thank you so much, I love chocolate fudge bars.”

“I know, I remember you telling me the first day we were in this house.” Which was a lie as Harry had told Blaise that he liked this particular chocolate bar a few days after their chase through the forest on Halloween, when he’d been eating the last bar that he had.

“You remember that? I didn’t think anyone was listening to me. That and I doubted anyone could hear me over the squawking of that huge Dracken, the one with orangey wings.”

“I was listening to you, Harry.”

Harry blushed lightly and coyly took a look at his chaperone, who was writing something on the clipboard that he had had all day during the interviews. The elderly Dracken had better not be putting anything other than praise down for Blaise or Harry would have his head on a plate.

“What are your interests, Blaise?” Harry asked, pretending to be politely interested. “What do you
“I spend most of my time studying; I am in the mind frame that my school years are for study. I wish to get a very good job, the very best that I can, in order to provide all the necessary and luxury items that my mate could possibly want. We would need a big house for us to share with our children, I will not see my family wearing rags and clothing costs money and also I would wish to feed my family the very finest foods to ensure the highest amount of nutrition.”

“Do you do anything else other than study?” Harry’s chaperone asked, surveying them.

Harry made sure to jump slightly, acting as if he had been so engrossed in his talk with Blaise that he had forgotten that the other Dracken was there. It worked as Elder Trintus made another note with a wide smile.

“I like walking.” Blaise answered. “If I had a mate, I would like to think that we could enjoy walks through the countryside together.”

“I like walking barefoot through grass.” Harry told him with a smile and a small blush. “I also like dipping my feet into the lake and walking through the forest and I’ve never actually told anyone that before.”

“Then I am honoured that you have told me about your secret wanderings.” Blaise answered with that gorgeous grin.

Harry laughed and broke a bit of his chocolate off, offering it to Blaise, who instead of taking it like Harry had expected, lowered his mouth to suck it from Harry’s fingers.

Blushing deeply, Harry smiled and moved from his armchair and over to sit next to Blaise on the settee opposite him. He cuddled into his side and subconsciously started purring.

“I think that this interview is over, Harry, my dear. You have obviously chosen a mate for yourself and a very fine mate as well. You get on really well with each other, Blaise you have obviously been very serious about your mate from the very beginning and you have been listening to Harry and what he says, which is more than some other dominants can say. We will be seeing each other again, Harry. As I have already said you are too powerful to only need one mate and I would be honoured to be your chaperone once again.”

“I’d love to have you as my chaperone again, but I really wish I didn’t have to go through all of this for a second time.”

Elder Trintus chuckled at the cute little submissive, he honestly thought that Harry had no idea how beautiful he was, inside and out, if only he were unmated and fifty years younger, he thought wistfully.

“I think that your next meeting will go much more smoothly, Harry dearest, you will, after all, have Blaise with you for your second meeting and you would have already been mated and had your first heat. Blaise, as your first mate, will not accept any dominant touching you without your permission; he will likely fight them to encourage them to stop.”

“I don’t like violence.” Harry stated softly.

“Then I will make sure that you will see nothing, Mio Bello.” Blaise told him seriously, wrapping a huge wing around Harry.

“I always do love seeing a mateship form before my eyes; you are a very strong and powerful submissive, Harry, to bond with Blaise as quickly as you have.”

“I could feel a connection with him right away, from that first time when he introduced himself to me with a handshake.”

“Dear Merlin, you are much more powerful that I could possibly have believed, Harry. Mating over a simple handshake, it takes a submissive on average three days before they recognise a mate, but if you and Blaise mated together the first time that you shook hands, it would possibly explain why your Dracken has been rejecting all of the other dominants.”

“I don’t mean to hurt their feelings, I just really like Blaise.”

“That is quite alright, dearest, they are not going to be happy, but then the only way they would be happy was if you had chosen them as your mate, which you are not going to.”

“Can I go back to having a semi-normal life now? I’m sure the rumours in the school are terrible by now. When I left I was dying from an incurable, deadly disease. Merlin knows what the students have come up with now.”
“Of course, my little dear. You leave the clean-up to me, you just have to announce Blaise as your mate to the other dominants and then you are free to do as you please.”

Harry did not relish the thought of telling the hundred or so dominant Drackens that they had wasted a journey or that he already had a mate and it wasn’t any of them.

He stood in the huge common room, looking at all of their hopeful eyes and lustful gazes and tucked his white wings into his body, some of the white scales were getting a slight purple tint to them and Harry couldn’t wait until he finally, proudly, wore the colours of his mate.

“You spent longer with him!” One dominant burst out. “I want a longer interview as well.”

“None of you are going to get another minute of my time. I’m sorry, but it seems that I have already found my first mate. Elder Trintus believes that Blaise and I mated from our very first handshake, which is why I have been less receptive to any of your advances. I’m sorry, but I am no longer looking for a mate.”

There was uproar, yells of denial, screams of rage and deep growls that had the hair on the back of his neck standing up on end.

Harry was very glad for the strong presence of Blaise at his back, his arms around his shoulders and his wings flared out, ready to wrap around him if needed.

“You all know that you cannot seek retribution.” Elder Trintus spoke up loudly, his voice easily carrying over the shouts and growls of the dominants. “Against Harry or Blaise. But this isn’t over yet, Harry is a very powerful Dracken and will require another mate at least, possibly two or even three more, you all have the chance to try again.”

Harry hated that too, being offered up like a piece of meat or a raffle prize. He might not be human anymore, but he was still a living person and he deserved the basic respect for that. He still had feelings and thoughts and he was still the same person that he was before, he just had wings, claws and fangs. Oh and his scales, he couldn’t forget his glittery, white scales, which were turning a very light purple in patches. He couldn’t wait until they went the same dark amethyst as Blaise’s, he smiled and looked at his wing scales over his shoulder. He really, really couldn’t wait for them to reflect his bond with Blaise.

With most of the dominants calm now that they had been informed that they could possibly become his mate still, Harry felt secure enough to walk through them, with Blaise of course, and out into Hogwarts’ grounds.

He slipped his hand into Blaise’s much larger one and smiled to his mate. Now they had time to get to know one another and enjoy their relationship. At least until it was ruined by the introduction of a second mate, but that was way off, he had to go onto his first heat period before he had to pick another mate. Harry smiled at Blaise from under his eyelashes, first things first though; they had to get to know one another better and maybe get in some practice before he officially went onto his heat. It never hurt to practice after all, he thought with a salacious grin.

Chapter End Notes

A/N: So Harry and Blaise are now officially mates, not that they weren’t before, but now everyone knows. Harry is on his way to his first heat, which is going to be a chapter of nothing but pure smut which can no longer be posted on this site, so if you want to see that chapter you have to venture to a different website to find it.

Harry is not being abused by Blaise, nor does Blaise throttle him. Blaise places his hand over the back of Harry’s neck and digs his claws in as a reprimand for bad behaviour. It has to be painful to make it an incentive for submissives to be good. A submissive needs to be obedient to their dominant because back when Drackens were new, they were hunted and killed. A submissive needed to listen to their dominant immediately and not ten minutes later when it could be too late for both of them.

That instinct has passed down through the genes and while they aren’t in as much danger as their ancestors, there are still a lot of people who do not like Drackens and would see them exterminated. Blaise is trying to instil his dominance on Harry to help keep him safe, he is not abusing him.

Last Time

He slipped his hand into Blaise’s much larger one and smiled to his mate. Now they had time to get to know one another and enjoy their relationship. Chapter Five – Blissful Days

Harry had come to the conclusion that Blaise was the only mate that he ever wanted. He didn’t want anyone else, fuck his genes or whatever it was that said he needed more than one person to become pregnant.

How ridiculous was that anyway? Girls got pregnant at the drop of a hat; it was why Hogwarts’ Medi-nurse was female, so that girls would feel more comfortable talking to her. Harry thought that that was a load of shit too. He wouldn’t feel any more or less embarrassed or humiliated talking to a woman about his sex life than he would a man. He’d be equally mortified either way.

As he lay on Blaise’s bed in the Slytherin dormitories, three days after the hotel from hell incident, Harry was contemplating when he would go into heat. He was still eating cereals and toast by the plateful and had recently added crackers and biscuits, but he wasn’t devouring bowl after bowl of fruits like Blaise had told him would be sign of the last stage of his breeding cycle before he went into heat.

The only thing that pointed to him progressing at all was that he couldn’t stand to be near meat of any sort, raw or cooked, which indicated that he was just over the crest of the middle period of his cycle. Blaise wasn’t worried at all, he said that breeding cycles could take weeks even months before the submissive went into heat, it was different for every submissive.

Harry didn’t know what he wanted his cycles to be, on the one hand, he really wanted to experience going into heat with Blaise, on the other hand, the minute he came off of heat, he would have to have a meeting to find his second mate.
“What’s floating around in that gorgeous head of yours, Mio Bello?” Blaise asked, coming from the bathroom fully dressed, much to Harry’s disappointment.

“I’m just wondering about going into heat.”

“The only thing that fills your head these days.” Blaise stated affectionately. “I’ve told you, Harry, it will happen when it happens. There is nothing to worry about.”

“I was thinking that maybe we should practice first, before I go onto heat.”

“Why?” Blaise asked, looking faintly offended. “I am a good lover, Harry. I don’t need to practice.”

“But I do, Blaise. This will be my first time; the heat is a primal act between Drackens that is rough and instinctual. I don’t want my first time to hurt, Blaise.”

“Oh Prezioso, come here.” Blaise cooed cuddling Harry tightly. “Why didn’t you tell me that you were afraid? Of course if you want me to make love to you beforehand I will. I would be honoured to.”

Harry smiled and held Blaise against him. “Thank you, Blaise.” He whispered.

Blaise gave that sexy smirk and took Harry’s hand in his own. “Come or we will be late for breakfast, you need to eat.”

“Why are you always trying to feed me? I feel like a pudding.” Harry sighed, he was not used to eating so much, even when he was at Hogwarts and away from the poisonous influence of his relatives.

“It is in my instincts to feed my mate, just be lucky that I am already a year into my life as a Dracken, a Dracken who is new and is mated would not be able to control his instinct to feed you. He would drag a dead animal to you in the Great Hall, in front of everyone. Would you prefer that?”

Harry looked faintly horrified. He didn’t know what to settle on, absolute disgust or faint amusement.
“That’s gross.” He finally settled on saying as Blaise tugged him out of his dormitory and into the common room.

Blaise gave him a wicked smirk as he pulled Harry to cradle him under his arm, hugging him close.

“Gross or not, it is how our instincts dictate that we should act. It takes a while for us to get a hold of our instincts; it took me eight weeks of running around and trying to force my housemates to submit to me before I could control myself. I don’t know if you remember but I was being labelled as insane this time last year.”

“I remember a mention of it and that was only because you tried to get a Gryffindor seventh year to bow down to you.”

Blaise grinned then. “I remember him, he thought he was stronger than me, strutting around like he owned the place, my Dracken had to put him in his place. It was after that incident that Professor Snape got involved and started teaching me.”

Blaise sighed sadly and nodded. “His mate died, Harry. When a Dracken’s mate dies, we turn bitter and sour, especially as Professor Snape didn’t have time to have a clutch of children with his mate. Without a mate and without children, well we sort of lose ourselves and we waste away. Many decide to commit suicide, but Professor Snape is far too strong to ever sink to that level.”

“My god, I don’t know what would happen if you suddenly died.” Harry breathed in horror.

“Don’t think about it, Mio Bello. It is usually the submissive who dies anyway.”

“Oh thanks for that.” Harry laughed in mock outrage.

Blaise chuckled. “Not that I would ever let you die, Prezioso. Professor Snape was separated from his mate when they died, he couldn’t protect them.”
“That’s awful, I feel bad now for ever thinking ill of him.”

“Don’t worry about it, Harry, you didn’t know. He doesn’t want people to know.”

Harry nodded at the hint to not mention it or to bring it up as they entered the Great Hall. Being used to sitting at the Slytherin table, Harry didn’t even try to veer off towards the Gryffindor table anymore, not that Blaise would have let him. It wasn’t like there was anything over there for him anyway; he’d only be eating on his own.

The only new thing about this was that Malfoy was back. Harry had had the feeling that the huge blond had been avoiding him since he had found Harry in Blaise’s bed, but he didn’t know Malfoy all that well, for all he knew it could have been normal behaviour.

Blaise sat down next to a girl with long, yellow-blonde hair and opposite a boy with a pointed face and light brown hair. Harry recognised the boy as Blaise’s friend Theodore Nott. This seating arrangement unfortunately left Harry sitting opposite Malfoy, who was being mauled by a fourth year girl, with the same blonde hair as the girl next to Blaise. Malfoy calmly pushed her off of himself every now and then with one arm, without stopping the calm, measured bites of his breakfast.

Harry watched curiously and Malfoy, as if he could feel Harry’s gaze, lifted his head as he was chewing his bacon to lock eyes with him. Harry tilted his head questioningly as the girl once again tried to climb onto Malfoy’s lap and the blond man sighed.

“Daphne, could you please remove your sibling from my proximity.” Malfoy’s low, serious voice cut through all surrounding conversations and drew people’s attention onto himself.

The blonde girl next to Blaise peeked around his mate’s huge shoulders and looked embarrassed and faintly shocked.

“Astoria!” She exclaimed sharply. “Come here and leave Draco be, I’ve told you before that this behaviour is unacceptable and the continuance of it will see a letter finding its way to Mother and Father!”

“She obviously hasn’t been taught properly.” A pug faced girl that Harry knew as Pansy Parkinson sniffed over her glass of pumpkin juice. “No self-respecting Pureblood woman would act like a desperate whore.”

Daphne flushed a brilliant red and glared hatefully at Pansy as she stood up. She took a hold of her sister’s arm as she passed her and started dragging her away.
“There was no need for those comments.” Harry stated quietly, looking at Parkinson.

Blaise immediately stopped his conversation at the sound of his voice and turned to look at him, whether he was reprimanding him with his eyes or just giving him support Harry didn’t know. He didn’t care, it was wrong of Parkinson to say such things out loud, even if she did think them.

“Keep your nose out, Half-blood.” Parkinson sneered.

“Do not speak to him like that.” Blaise threatened lightly.

“What do you even see in him, Blaise?” Pansy asked snootily, looking at Harry critically. “He’s too short, too skinny, he doesn’t look after his awful hair, his face is disgusting, he can’t see further than his own nose and he’s stupid as well. His only redeeming qualities are a passing skill in Quidditch and his eyes, only since he lost those disgusting, plebeian glasses though.”

Harry would never admit how much those words hurt him. Hadn’t he heard something similar from Ron’s mouth not seven months ago? Blaise however was growling continuously under his breath. Harry took a hold of his hand and squeezed it reassuringly.

“You will apologise to Harry immediately.” Blaise demanded, giving a pointed look to Parkinson, who quelled under his glare.

“I apologise.” She stated huffily and turned away from them both, engaging Millicent Bulstrode in conversation.

Blaise wrapped an arm around Harry and the diminutive Dracken rather thought that if he had been able to Blaise would have wrapped a wing around him as well.

“Do not listen to her, Mio Bello.” Blaise whispered into his ear. “You are so beautiful and she is jealous because she will never be as stunning as you are. Not with that nose at any rate.”

Harry giggled lightly and snuggled in tighter. He felt glad that Blaise had defended him, he had been too stunned to do so himself, what with Parkinson sounding so much like Ron. The only difference had been that Ron had slighted him for his fame as well; it seemed that Slytherins had no problem
Harry growled as yet another male student went past and smacked his bum. It seemed to be a new game that the Gryffindors had started. Seamus had done it first, but Harry could tolerate the flirty Irishman doing it, he had known Seamus for five years and they both knew it meant nothing serious, it was Seamus’ way of showing that they were still friends, well that and he liked Harry’s new look.

Dean Thomas had done it as a joke because Seamus had, then after that it was like a tidal wave had hit, he couldn’t go anywhere without having his arse smacked. Blaise didn’t know about it…yet, but Harry was sure he was going to blow up about it and probably kill someone if he ever found out about it. He had to put a stop to it himself and soon.

Walking into the library, Harry went into the potions section and scanned for the particular book that he wanted, which typically was right on the top shelf. He was five foot five, but you had to be over six foot to reach the top shelf of the library in any section.

Sighing and resigning himself to dragging a chair over to reach it, because not only could he not take out his wings to hover high enough to reach it, but he wasn’t allowed to use magic in the library anymore thanks to six, third year students who had had a duel in the study area last month.

“You’re not going to be able to get it down by pouting at it.” A smooth, cultured voice told him.

Harry knew that voice before he even turned around to see the hulking figure of Draco Malfoy. Harry hated that the blond had seemingly shot up a foot during the summer, they had almost been the same size last year, he had been five foot three and a half and Draco had been five foot seven, now the blond was at least six foot five, six foot six in height.

“I was just about to get a chair.” Harry defended hotly.

Malfoy rolled those silver coloured eyes and stood up from the chair that he had been sat in. Harry hadn’t seen him when he’d come down this way to get the particular book that he wanted.

“Which book do you want?”

“The big blue one.”
“Well that’s helpful seeing as there are several big blue books that you can’t reach.”

Harry wasn’t sure, but it looked like Draco went ten shades paler, which was quite a feat as he’d been look extra pale this term and slightly sick.

“Why do you want that book?” He asked, striving for nonchalance but only achieving Harry’s curiosity.

“Because I do.” Harry replied. “Now are you going to get it down for me or do I have to go and get a chair?”

Draco reached up and took down the book from the very top shelf; he didn’t even need to go on his tip toes to reach it. He handed it to Harry reluctantly and it made Harry so insanely curious. What was in this book that Malfoy didn’t want him to see?

“Thank you.” Harry stated, before scurrying away before Malfoy could change his mind and snatch the book back off of him.

Harry checked the book out and quickly left the library. He went out into the grounds and sighed as the fresh air hit him. His wings twitched under his skin and Harry had to concentrate doubly hard to keep them hidden. He wanted to bring them out and flex them.

He made his way over to the lake and sat down against the tree closest to the edge; he pulled his shoes and socks off of his feet and happily dipped them into the water. Blaise would probably kill him for doing it, what with it being the end of November, but Harry didn’t care, he had always loved the feeling of the icy water lapping at his toes.

He cracked open the book and started at chapter one. He had planned on just looking up Dracken pheromone suppressors, seeing as he didn’t like advertising himself to every Dracken within a fifty mile radius, but Malfoy had made him so itchingly curious, he had to find out why the huge blond hadn’t wanted him to read this book.

So he was being nosy, he really didn’t care, Blaise would have an eppy fit if he knew the reason he was scouring every page of this book, he valued privacy, but Harry was just too curious to let it drop. The truth was that Draco Malfoy had always fascinated him. He followed every move the blond made religiously and his eyes always found a way to follow his blond nemesis, only he wasn’t so much a nemesis anymore. Ever since they had come back to school things had changed, Malfoy wasn’t going out of his way to torment him, in fact he hadn’t even insulted him and had even helped him get the book from the too high shelves.

Harry automatically did as he was told, the voice of a dominant Dracken forcing his submissive will, but he looked over his shoulder at who had ordered him to do so, his emerald green eyes meeting and holding the jet black eyes of Severus Snape.

“Hello Professor.”

“I see Zabini hasn’t yet taught you enough. Drackens do not like the cold, Potter. Prolonged exposure to the cold will make you very, very ill.”

“Oh.” Harry frowned; he loved dipping his feet into water.

“I can see that Zabini is not going to teach you efficiently enough. I expect to see you in my quarters after dinner, Potter. This is not a request.”

With that the Potions Professor strode away, his black cloak billowing out behind him as per usual, but Harry was half expecting the sky to fall down. He was going to have private Dracken lessons with Snape! Of all people it had to be Snape.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Blaise was not happy at the idea of private lessons with Snape, a dominant Dracken at that, never mind that Snape wasn’t looking for anyone because he had already been mated, and he insisted on accompanying him.

“Honestly, Blaise this is ridiculous.” Harry grumbled.

Blaise’s hand curled around the back of his neck and squeezed lightly, warning him not to say another word, however Harry was incensed by the action. He was not some obedient little puppy!

Moving his shoulder to try and nudge Blaise’s hand away only made the hand squeeze tighter and Harry mewed in pain. He twisted in Blaise’s hold and tried to kick out, but Blaise moved his leg to block the attack.
“You can’t be with me twenty-four seven, Blaise! No matter how much you fucking want to! What if I get a detention? Are you going to walk me there holding my hand?”

“Why do you want to be alone with Snape so much? Is it because he’s older than me? More experienced? He sure as hell isn’t better looking.” Blaise hissed.

“Would you listen to yourself? You’re being a jealous dick! I don’t know what experienced is! I don’t know what inexperienced is because I’m a virgin! I’ve told you that already so get the fuck off of me!”

Blaise let his claws come out to touch the skin of Harry’s neck and pulled him closer so their faces were as close as they could get.

“Do not speak to me like that.”

“I’ll speak to you how I damn well please!”

Harry gasped as Blaise’s claws dug into his skin, but he still threw his arms out to push at Blaise’s chest.

“Let the fuck go!”

“Oi!” A new voice joined their argument in the assumedly deserted corridor. “Let him go!”

Harry looked to the side and could have groaned as he saw Cormac McLaggen, a seventh year Gryffindor, standing by an open doorway just a few feet from them. He walked closer and Blaise started growling, a low sound which Cormac probably couldn’t even hear, but Harry could feel under his hands which were frozen against his mate’s chest.

“Do not stick your nose into other people business!” Blaise threatened.

“It is my business if you’re abusing a fellow lion.”
McLaggen was either stupid or crazy, probably both, Harry deduced. No one would willing walk towards an enraged dominant Dracken. Not that McLaggen knew that Blaise was a dominant Dracken, but the pheromones that Blaise was releasing into the air should have scared any human off by now.

“Back off!” Blaise snarled, pulling Harry behind his own body and keeping him there by hooking four claws into his robes. At least it wasn’t his skin.

But fucking hell, Blaise was seeing McLaggen as a threat. Harry needed to diffuse this situation immediately!

“I’ll walk you there.” Cormac stated confidently.

“No you won’t!” Blaise burst out. Harry could feel his mate’s wings pulsing under the skin of Blaise’s back, through his shirt and his robes. If McLaggen didn’t leave soon, he wasn’t going to walk ever again.

“I’m going to be late!” Harry shouted at them both. “I’m not being late for Snape, you two stay here and fight like barbarian cavemen, I’m leaving!”

With that he hurried down the corridor and further into the dungeons. He had gotten a short missive from Snape at dinner, which had told him that his private quarters were located around the corner and six doors down from the potions classroom.

Solid arms wrapped around his waist and lifted him from the floor. They were unfamiliar and too wide to be Blaise’s.

“Little submissives shouldn’t be wandering around on their own, especially when they haven’t consummated their mateship through a period of heat.”

Harry didn’t recognise the voice and he started struggling more viciously and lashing out to break himself free.
“Well you are a fiery one, good. I hate little obedient slaves; you’ll be that much more fun to be around.”

“But you fit so well in my arms. I promise that you’ll come to love me after we have mated, you won’t be able to resist me when I have given you a baby.”

Harry felt his entire body tremble with rage and he didn’t care who was watching or who might see, he brought out all of his Dracken features and dug his claws deeply into his assailant’s arms. Not that he needed to seeing as his wings had almost taken the other Dracken’s head off.

“You little bitch! I’ll kill you!” The dominant Dracken screamed. Harry didn’t recognise him; he wasn’t a student here, had he been at the meetings a few days ago? Damn it, why hadn’t he paid more attention?!

“What is going on here?” Snape’s silky voice cut through the noise, just as Blaise ran around the corner.

“He attacked me!” The dominant Dracken stated. “I was just talking to him and the little psycho took a chunk out of each of my arms!”

Blaise snarled at the other dominant from his place cuddling Harry, who clung to Blaise like a lifeline. He didn’t want another dominant to take Blaise’s place. He didn’t want anyone other than Blaise’s babies. He had been shaken by the threats of forced mateship and a clutch of children with someone he didn’t love.

“You won't be able to resist me when I have given you a baby.” Harry shivered, was it true? Did a dominant Dracken only have to get him pregnant to get his love and affection? He needed answers.

“Mr Potter, is this true?” Snape addressed him, those jet black eyes warning him to not even think of lying.

“No. Well yes, I did attack him and I did gouge his arms with my claws, but he grabbed me from behind when I was walking to your rooms and he wouldn’t let me go. He said that I shouldn’t be walking alone when I haven’t consummated my mateship, that he would make me love him once he gave me a baby. I don’t want his baby!”

Harry flinched as Blaise damn near roared in his ear. Snape was there then, holding Blaise around the throat with both of his arms and trying to calm him down. Harry wanted to step away in fright, but he didn’t want to leave Blaise’s side in case the other dominant snatched him and forced him to mate with him. He didn’t want to mate with anyone other than Blaise!

“Potter, go to my rooms immediately.” Snape ordered, but Harry didn’t move. Blaise was the only one who could even try to order him around.

“Get a hold of yourself, Zabini and get your mate to safety before you go on a killing rampage.” Snape snarled.

Blaise’s head snapped around to look right at Harry, those gorgeous indigo eyes were furious, murderous and Harry did take a step back then, only for those eyes to soften and for Blaise to scoop him into his chest.

“No, Mio Amore, I’m not going to hurt you, I’m not angry with you. Please go to safety, I know you don’t like violence and I don’t want you to be harmed.”

Harry gave one last look to Blaise before he walked off to Snape’s rooms. He didn’t care what happened to the other dominant Dracken; he didn’t even want to think about it, so he gave in and left, because really, he just did not want to watch as Blaise tore him apart, which is what was going to happen and nothing could stop him, no person, no law, nothing. It was within Blaise’s rights as a dominant Dracken to grievously maim and kill any who touched, harmed or upset his mate and Blaise was right, Harry really didn’t want to stick around to watch it.

Snape’s private rooms calmed Harry instantaneously. They reminded him of a forest, of trees and leaves and woods and flying. Everything reminded him that he was a Dracken and he had had no want whatsoever to tuck his wings back in, or his claws or fangs or scales. He wanted them out, he wanted to feel the air against his leathery wings, he wanted to stretch them out to their fullest, which the extra wide, extra high ceilinged room actually allowed.

Yawning, his jaw stretching wide to accommodate his mouth full of sharp little teeth and four curving fangs, Harry automatically lay down in front of the near enough wall length fire, loving the wash of warmth it gave him, and he started purring deeply.
Snape was right, he would much rather be lying here in front of this huge fireplace than swimming his feet in icy water.

A hand stroking his hair had him bolting up right and snarling, before he realised that he was looking into the amused indigo eyes of his mate and he settled down again, purring even louder as Blaise pet him like an animal. It just felt so good.

“Did you kill him?” Harry asked in a quiet voice.

“Yes.” Blaise answered without hesitation. “I’d kill for you, Harry. You are my mate and I will not have anyone scaring you like that.”

“Won’t you get into trouble for killing him?” Harry asked quietly.

“No, Mio Bello. Not after what he threatened and tried to do to you. Forcing a submissive into a mateship by impregnating them is not just breaking a serious law, it’s obliterating it. It does not matter that he never tried to do it; just threatening to do it is enough for a death sentence that is how serious this law is. The Counsel would have executed him anyway for his threatened actions. It is better that I am seen to be protecting and honouring you than to be seen as weak by sending him to the Counsel just to be executed anyway.”

Harry nodded and silence filled the room, but Harry couldn’t keep silent for long, he had too many questions that he needed answers to.

“Could he really have made me love him just by getting me pregnant with his baby?” Harry asked, looking from Blaise to Snape, who had seated himself in a black armchair which looked to be made out of dragon hide.

“Yes.” Snape answered with a no nonsense tone. “It is a flaw in the submissive’s genetic make-up. A submissive, like yourself, will love any and all children that they give birth too and because you’ll love every single thing about your children, you will not be able to hate the one who gave them to you, because your children would be half you and half the dominant who gave them to you. In time you would be unable to hate the one who had given you your children, but because you feel such strong emotions for them, which used to be hate, it would transfer into love.”

“Why love?” Harry asked in a small voice.

“Because not only could you not hate them, but you wouldn’t be able to feel any negative emotions towards them either and love is the strongest positive emotion a person can feel.” Blaise told him gently, still stroking him.

“So all of the negative emotions I would have felt towards him would have built up and are then turned into the strongest positive emotion I could have possibly felt, all because of my child?”

Blaise nodded and brushed his fingers against his cheek, before he lay down next to him, their noses touching and they just stared at each other.

“Is this the reason that you didn’t want to leave me alone? Because I haven’t gone into heat yet and I could be attacked by another dominant?”

“Yes.” Blaise told him. “My instincts will calm down once we have consummated our mateship, but until then I will not want to risk leaving you.”

“Why was he even here?” Harry burst out. “He is too old to be a student here, why was he in the school?!”

Snape sighed and rubbed his eyes. “The other Drackens haven’t left yet, Potter. You need another mate and none of them want to risk losing you because they cannot get here in time. They are staying close by and many of them are holed up in the temporary house over on the other side of the lake.”

“They’re still on Hogwarts grounds?!” Harry asked, very upset by this revelation.

“Shh, Prezioso.” Blaise soothed. “I am not going to leave you alone. If you thought that I was bad before, it will be nothing compared to how I am going to be from now on, I cannot control myself now that they have made a move on what is mine, I cannot afford to leave you for even a moment.”

It should have bothered him, it really should have, as he valued his privacy and alone time above almost everything else, but it didn’t. He felt relieved, he felt safer now that he knew that Blaise wouldn’t let him be attacked or let any other dominant impregnate him to force him into loving them.

Maybe he would put a stop to it later, much later, after he had already fully mated with Blaise. But for now, he could live with Blaise constantly being at his side.
Two days later and what Harry had been waiting for finally happened. He started craving fruits and berries of all sorts. It happened quite literally overnight. One day he was still eating cereals and toast, the next morning, he saw a bowl of apples and he sat down eating one after the other like he was a starving man.

Blaise had looked at him and then plastered himself to his side, an arm firmly around his shoulders and back and he glared at everyone who came within a five foot distance of him.

“Could you at least pretend that you have some table manners, Potter?” Malfoy told him with a regal sniff.

Harry swallowed his bite of apple and cocked his head.

“No.” He answered before going right back to eating his apple.

Blaise had chuckled and happily handed him every fruit within reach, proudly watching as Harry ate them all.

“What in the name of Merlin is wrong with you?” Theodore Nott had asked.

Harry shrugged a slender shoulder and swallowed his blueberries. “I’m hungry, sue me.”

“If Harry wants to eat everything off of every plate in this hall he can!” Blaise stated.

“Fine, whatever.” Theo stated morosely. “Whatever happened to us being best friends? What happened to friends coming before girlfriends, or boyfriends in this case?”

“We are still friends; I just need time to settle down with Harry first.”

“Blaise, you’re acting as if you’re going to marry him! This behaviour isn’t normal.”
“I am going to marry him, as soon as we are out of school.”

“That isn’t you!” Theo burst out. “You haven’t been with Potter for a month yet and you’re already talking about marriage!”

“Quit your whinging, Nott.” Malfoy drawled. “If Zabini wants to spend more time with Potter than with you then let him. You don’t need him to hold your hand, its Potter he’s marrying not you, so stop acting like a jealous lover.”

Theo went bright red and stood up from the table, moving to storm away.

“Sheo!” Blaise called out. “Don’t bring this up again. I’ve told you several times I will never be with you. You are my best friend and that is how our relationship is going to stay.”

Harry watched this interaction with interest. He wasn’t at all threatened by Theodore Nott. He was a human and Blaise had told him that any Dracken would choose a submissive Dracken over a human, so he was secure in the knowledge that Blaise wouldn’t leave him for the other boy.

“We would be good together.” Theo whispered so quietly it was like listening to the wind.

“We will never be together. I am happily with Harry and we will be married.”

Harry watched Theo’s Adams apple bob as he swallowed heavily. He nodded once before he left the hall at a quick pace. No one from the other tables noticed him, no one ever noticed the Slytherins. They were discarded and disregarded when they shouldn’t have been.

Harry was now learning that labels and net stereotypes were dangerous. Not all Slytherins were bad where not all Gryffindors were good.

It was childish to think that every Gryffindor was a squeaky clean, goody two-shoes and that every Slytherin was a dark, evil, vile cretin that wanted to take over the world. There was so much more to a person than a stereotype and it was unfair to label someone and to group them with the few bad people who they shared a school house with.

Harry was a Gryffindor and he had killed several people. He had taken down Voldemort just seven months ago. He had killed Voldemort, it didn’t matter that he was a Dark Lord or a ruthless, merciless murderer. Harry had killed him, one moment was all it had taken and he was dead. He had killed some of the Death Eaters as well. All dead and nothing to bring them back. A good person didn’t kill anyone; a good Gryffindor didn’t kill another living thing, a good Gryffindor did not use the illegal Unforgivable Curses.

“Harry?”

Harry blinked and turned his head to look at Blaise questioningly.

“Are you alright?”

Harry smiled and nodded. “I’m fine, just thinking too hard.”

“I hope you aren’t reading anything into what Theo was saying.”

“No, I wasn’t. I’m not threatened by him.”

“Good, because nothing has ever happened nor will it ever.”

Harry smiled fully then and rested his head on Blaise’s shoulder, still popping blueberry after blueberry into his mouth. He wasn’t a good person, he had killed numerous people, but then Blaise had killed that other Dracken too, they had both killed others, so maybe they were meant for each other, they could be bad people together.
Harry smiled fully then and rested his head on Blaise’s shoulder, still popping blueberry after blueberry into his mouth. He wasn’t a good person, he had killed numerous people, but then Blaise had killed that other Dracken too, they had both killed others, so maybe they were meant for each other, they could be bad people together.

Harry groaned as he rolled over and once again found an arm tugging him back into a solid chest. He wanted to get up, but his stubborn mate had other ideas.

Peering over his own shoulder, Harry sent a glare to a sleeping Blaise. He once again tried to wiggle out of Blaise’s hold, only to be rewarded with a tight squeeze.

Growling, Harry had had enough. He put his hands in a good position on Blaise’s forearm and he pushed as hard as he could. He managed it, but it truly said volumes on how strong Blaise was that it had taken all of Harry’s strength just to move an arm, an arm that was attached to a heavily sleeping body. He would never be able to fight off Blaise if his mate turned violent, not that Harry ever thought that he would, he was more worried about the other dominant Drackens going up against Blaise than his mate turning on him.

If Blaise had this much strength, then so did the other Drackens and if it varied with size and amount of muscle, then it was something to worry about as some of those dominants had been at least seven feet tall and thickly muscled to go with it. Some of them were so broad they had to turn sideways to fit through doorways, and okay maybe he was exaggerating just a bit, but that’s what it seemed like to him. They were huge, thick and broad men who could crush his puny head with one hand if he upset them.

Oh fuck, why did it have to be him? Why was there such a pathetic law that said every submissive that came into their inheritance had to meet every single unmated dominant in the world? It was preposterous! He hoped to fucking Merlin that he only needed one more dominant mate to get him pregnant. He only wanted children, one child would be absolutely fine with him, he just wanted his own child, was that such a bad thing?

Crawling out of the bed now that he was free of Blaise’s arm, Harry wandered into the Slytherin boys’ bathroom and turned on a shower. His childish, prejudice mind had once thought that the water down in the dungeons would be icy cold, but contrary to what he had previously thought the water was actually warmer than in Gryffindor tower, his logical mind supplying that of course the water was warmer here, it was colder in the dungeons than in the rest of the school and obviously Dumbledore didn’t want any of his students getting frost bite.
Harry had also noticed the permanent, expertly weaved, warming charms warded into every room of the Slytherin dormitories. The common room wasn’t warded, but there were twelve fireplaces strategically placed around the cavernous room compared to the one and only fireplace in Gryffindor tower. Harry realised that when he had broken into the Slytherin common room with Ron back in second year, only one of those fireplaces had been lit and the few occupants of the room had been grouped around it. Obviously there was no sense in lighting all of the fireplaces if only three students were in the common room anyway.

Washing his body and his short, messy mop of hair, Harry stepped out and towelled himself dry before realising that he had left his clothes in the dormitory. Sighing at his preoccupation with being angry at Blaise for not letting him go, Harry wrapped the towel around his naked self and padded back into the boys dormitory.

“Advertising yourself, Potter?” A silky voice asked him softly.

Turning around Harry met the silver eyes of Draco Malfoy, who was sitting up in bed with a book in hand. Harry had a biting comment on the tip of his tongue, but it got stuck somewhere in his throat when his eyes met the gloriously bare chest of one, Draco Malfoy.

It was smooth, broad, muscled and hairless, a delicate shade of porcelain white with two identical, light pink nipples, erect against the cold of the dungeon air. Draco’s abdomen was crunched up in his part sitting, part reclining position against the headboard and it showed off his abdominal muscles clearly, Harry hadn’t even known that Draco had a six pack, let alone one that was so defined.

There was a thin, very fine trail of white blond hair travelling from his bellybutton to under the thick duvet covering his lower half. Oh dear god, did Draco sleep naked? Since when had he become Draco, and not just plain old Malfoy, anyway? Harry swallowed and averted his eyes.

A low chuckle took his attention right back to the muscled, ivory god in front of him.

“You obviously like what you see, Potter. You can’t take your eyes off of me. What would Blaise think if I told him?”

‘He’d likely kill you in jealous outrage.’ Harry thought, but he didn’t say it outwardly.

“I’m just looking.” Harry replied as nonchalantly as he possibly could. “It’s not as if I’m caressing you.”

“I’d like you to.” Draco answered with such a devilish smirk that Harry’s knees went weak.

“I…I just…I…” Harry trailed off because he had absolutely no idea what he was trying to say. He needed to get back into control of this situation and quickly.

Draco chuckled deeply, sexily and it went straight down Harry’s spine and into his already partially erect cock. He swallowed heavily and wetted his bone dry lips with the tip of a raspberry pink tongue. What the hell was going on here?! How had he lost so much control of this situation in mere minutes?

“I need to get dressed.” He stated shakily more for his own benefit than Draco’s.

“By all means, I am not stopping you. It isn’t like you have anything that I haven’t seen before. Though I wouldn’t be averse to seeing what you have to offer.”

Those silver eyes were now a dark grey in colour and Harry was sure that there was a meaning in it, but he couldn’t for the life of him figure it out, he couldn’t think at all, his mind was being clouded. He could barely breathe through an intoxicating scent floating over to him on the air. He was too hot and the room was getting warmer.

A cool, solid arm wrapped around him and Harry jerked his head back to look into sleepy indigo eyes.

“Are you well, Prezioso? You are looking very flushed.”

“The water of my shower was too warm.” Harry replied quickly.

Blaise chuckled and pulled him back to sit on the bed and drew closed the bed hangings, blocking out those invading silver eyes. Harry could breathe easier and as he sat on Blaise’s bed in nothing but a towel that was slipping from his slack grasp, he couldn’t even think of his mate who was so gently laying kisses on his neck and throat.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

The day passed in a huge blur of motion and noise and Harry could honestly say that he didn’t remember a thing about it. Harry had deduced that Malfoy’s behaviour had something to do with the book he hadn’t wanted him to have, he was more than halfway through it already and he hadn’t found a thing, on either Drackens or anything that could possibly make Malfoy so afraid to see him with the book. Because that was what the huge blond was, Harry realised, he was afraid. Those silver coloured eyes wouldn’t leave the book in his hands when he read it at dinner, he would constantly search his face as if he was looking for some sign that Harry had found out whatever it was that Malfoy didn’t want him to find. It was creepy.

Harry happily sipped on his honey tea as he sat opposite the Headmaster in the Headmaster’s office, Fawkes happily crooning in his lap as Harry’s free hand stroked that gorgeous red and gold plumage.

“Are you settling down, Harry, my boy?”

Harry sighed and twirled his teacup.

“I thought I was. Things were great until that big lummox went and frightened me by telling me that he could make me love him by forcing me to have his children. Now I don’t want to leave Blaise’s side and I can’t go near any boy who is bigger than me.”

“Yes, I had the great delights of receiving the poor soul’s body. Brought here to this office by a near hysterical house-elf who had been ordered to bring it to me by Professor Snape.”

“I had wondered how they had gotten rid of the body so quickly; it was barely ten minutes before they joined me in Professor Snape’s office. I didn’t want to ask, I didn’t really want to know too many details.”

“Yes well, suffice to say that that boy regretted his actions towards you immensely, Harry.”

“Are all of the dominants still here?” Harry asked seemingly distractedly as he stroked Fawkes, but the Headmaster could see through the guise.

“Yes, Harry and more come still every day.”

“More?” Harry asked hysterically, his head shooting up and his eyes wide in alarm.

“You are one of the rarest treasures to a dominant Dracken, Harry, their potential mate and Mother of their children. Many of them are well past the point of ready to settle down and have children, but they can’t because they haven’t found a submissive mate.”

“Why don’t they go with humans? I know Blaise said that they prefer another Dracken, but if they outnumber a submissive twenty to one, then surely some of them would go with humans to settle down.”

Dumbledore sighed and with a wave of his wand he refilled Harry’s teacup.

“A dominant Dracken will not give up his search for a submissive, Harry. Even if he does settle down with a human and has children with them, he will not stop searching for a submissive. He will still be at each and every submissive meeting, regardless of his human family at home. He would disregard them all for a chance to be with a submissive Dracken. He won’t be able to help it.”

“So they don’t go with a human because they know there is still a chance that he might be chosen by a submissive and that that isn’t fair on the family that he’d be leaving behind.”

“Exactly right, my boy. But most of the dominants that have settled down with humans are over the age of fifty; they are past their supposed prime and know there is very little chance that they will be picked by a submissive because of their age alone. A submissive looking for a mate is only sixteen years old, Harry. Sixteen year olds do not generally want to be with fifty, or even thirty year old men.”

“That’s so sad. Age is just a number, if I found a man who I honestly loved, who was kind and gentle and patient, who took care of me and our children, I wouldn’t care how old he was, he could be a hundred and fifty for all I would care.”

Dumbledore smiled at him proudly.

“Of course you would, Harry and that is why you are getting so much attention from the other Drackens, they can sense that you will not be discriminant in your choosing of a mate. They can feel it in their very blood, you are giving the older dominant’s hope and that is something they have never felt before.”

“But why? Surely I can’t be the first one to have ever been indiscriminate?”

“No, you are not. But you are the first in a very, very long time.”

“But why, Professor? Why would a submissive discount an older Dracken as a mate?”
“It is a vanity thing, Harry, nothing more than that. A young, pretty submissive who has so much male attention from young and handsome dominants does not want to be saddled with an elderly gentleman as a mate, regardless of how kind he is to her.”

“That’s ridiculous!” Harry snapped. “I would much rather an older and kinder mate than a young, stuck up, cruel git!”

“That, my boy, is what makes you so special, you are ignoring your vanity instincts that say you should have the most handsome of Drackens as your mate, not that I’m saying young Mister Zabini is ugly mind you.”

Harry laughed at the little wink that Dumbledore gave him and he happily bit the head off of a ginger newt. He chewed slowly, savouring the flavour of the biscuit, before he swallowed.

“I don’t think I’ve ever had any vanity instincts, I just don’t care about looks or fashion and I wouldn’t care if my mate didn’t either, after all if I did then that would be very hypocritical of me.”

Dumbledore sighed. “I have seen this sort of thing before, Harry, a submissive Dracken came into her inheritance only a few years before you came to Hogwarts, she was a Ravenclaw student here and for a Ravenclaw she was very vain and not as interested in studying as she had once been in her younger years. She had a meeting here at Hogwarts, much like yourself, but when she saw who had turned up to greet her, she had been livid.”

“Why?” Harry asked curiously.

“All of the submissives thought the same way, Harry; they wanted a young, handsome dominant with the brightest, biggest wings.”

“All that was left were older dominants.” Harry answered, cottoning on.

“There were a few younger dominants too, Harry, but a decade ago the biggest age range was thirty-five to forty years. There were very few dominants under the age of thirty and next to none under the age of twenty. There wasn’t very much to pick from.”
“What did she do? She had to have picked a mate, the urge is far too strong to resist, Blaise and me, we were near strangers and I let him touch and lick me when before I would never have let anyone near enough to me to do as such.”

“Oh she did pick a mate, Harry. After she had ordered away everyone over the age of twenty-five.”

“My god, how many were left after that?” Harry asked incredulously.

“Four. A sixteen year old, a nineteen year old, a twenty year old and a twenty-four year old female dominant, who was ordered away immediately.”

“She didn’t even give the female dominant a chance?”

“No, Harry, just like she hadn’t given the dominants over twenty-five a chance. It is very rare to find a male submissive like yourself, so female dominants rarely get a look in and are often forced to act more submissive than they are to mate with another dominant Dracken.”

“I can’t see that ending well.”

“Which of the three dominants left did the Ravenclaw choose?”

“Well my boy, see if you can answer that yourself. One dominant had the brightest blue wings I have ever seen, only they weren’t fully grown being only nineteen feet in length as he wasn’t fully grown. The second had twenty-two foot wings in a dull shade of yellow and the third had twenty foot wings in a brownish-green colour. Can you guess which one she chose?”

“I wouldn’t be able to pick on just size or colour of wings, but from what I heard the size of the wings is important, the bigger the better, so I assume she chose the dominant with the twenty-two foot, yellow wings regardless of personality.”

“Correct you are, Harry. She dismissed the very young, only recently inherited sixteen year old because his wings were only nineteen feet in length, I believe his wings are now a record twenty-eight feet in length and are still as brightly blue as they ever have been and she dismissed the twenty year old because his wings were smaller and a brown colour.”

“I wouldn’t mind a dominant with brown wings, it would remind me of the forest and you said his wings were a brownish-green. I would love his wings, they would calm me down a lot.”

The proud smile and twinkle in those pale blue eyes made Harry blush a bit.

“You are such a loving and caring person, Harry; I am amazed after everything that you have been through that this beautiful and selfless young man in front of me is the outcome.”

Harry did blush at that and ducked his head shyly. Dumbledore chuckled.

“But back to the point at hand. Submissive Drackens normally do not like older dominants, so all that is left are older dominants. The Ravenclaw was forced to pick between only three dominants and none of them were very compatible to her, all because she refused to have an open mind and was too vain to consider an older dominant.”

“I…I can’t see myself with anyone other than Blaise, but I know that I need another mate at least, so I am going to go into the next meeting and I will give everyone a fair chance, no matter their age. In fact, I think I’ll do things differently and start looking for an older mate, that will shock them all when I start from the oldest and work my way down.”

Dumbledore chuckled and patted Harry’s hand which was lying on his desk.

“Indeed it would, my boy. You would make the older dominants very, very happy if you did that, even if you don’t end up with one as a mate, they would likely be happy just to be considered. Perhaps you will set a new trend.”

“I hope so. I hate attention and everything, but those dominants deserve the fair chance of having a clutch of children and a mate!”

Silence fell upon the two, a very companionable silence in which each man sipped their cooling tea.

“What will happen if the Ministry finds out that I’m a Dracken?” Harry asked quietly, voicing the fear that had been on his mind for a while.

“If they try anything, Harry, we will get you away immediately, before they can take you. Australia does not recognise Drackens as dark creatures and neither does South Africa, but they are considered more of a neutral grey. If the worst comes to the worst, we will get Blaise and yourself, any other mates you may have and all children that you may have, out of the country and into either Australia or South Africa. You only need to seek asylum, Australia takes in a high number of Drackens and protects them from exportation and South Africa boasts a large Dracken culture, it is almost the perfect climate for a Dracken and many Drackens, if they do not live there already, holiday there often. South Africa is the central hub of Dracken society.”

“I would rather not leave Britain. This is my home. I was born here, my parents are buried here.”

“I know, Harry, but that is only the worst case scenario and they would have to find you first, but right now I wouldn’t worry about it, you are still being heralded as the Saviour, I doubt they would admit that you were a Dracken, they would rather just simply ignore it.”

“Until they become bored with singing my praises and turn on me like they always do.”

“I will do my utmost to protect you, Harry.”

Harry smiled and drained his cup of honey tea, before using both arms to cuddle Fawkes like a teddy bear.

“I shouldn’t need protecting. I should be allowed to stay in my country of birth! I’m going to change everyone’s views on Drackens. We aren’t soulless killing machines; we only kill to protect our own! That Dracken was threatening me and was going to use my children against me! Blaise had every right to remove him as a threat.”

“Of course he did.” Dumbledore nodded serenely. “It isn’t like you are killing humans, only other Drackens.”

“Exactly and if I was threatened by a human, I would only have to immobilise them and call for the Aurors.”

Dumbledore inclined his head and looked at his time piece on the desk.

“Oh dear, Harry, you have been here for five hours, I do believe that Mister Zabini will be beside himself with worry.”

“Oh! I always forget the time when talking to you, Professor.”

The elderly man chuckled. “You do like flattering this old man, my dear boy, now run along before Mister Zabini tears through the castle walls looking for you.”

Harry gave his trademark grin and bounced out of the room, going in search of his errant mate.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

After nearly an hour of having every inch of his body checked for injury, bruising or odd marks, of having every inch of him sniffed to make sure that no dominant had come near him, Harry had finally assured his mate that he had spent five hours safe and sound, talking to the Headmaster.

He was now lying on his stomach, on Blaise’s bed having his back and the back of his neck licked repeatedly. It was so soothing and calming, yet very arousing and erotic.

“Honestly, Blaise I’m fine.” Harry purred, loving the heavy weight of Blaise sitting on his bum.

“I know, I’m just getting my scent back onto you, you smell of ash and fire.”

“Oh, that was probably Fawkes, Dumbledore’s phoenix; he stayed on my lap for the whole five hours.”

“I still can’t fathom what you spoke about for five hours.”

Harry chuckled then let out a slight moan as Blaise got him right on that one spot that made his skin tingle and his bones quiver, it just felt so amazingly good.

Blaise laughed deeply and stayed on that one spot, licking, nibbling and teasing it and Harry was panting for breath after only a few seconds of delicious torture.

“Keep it down!” An annoyed voice yelled at them from the other side of the room and Harry bolted upright and curled away from Blaise in mortification.

Blaise actively clenched and unclenched his fists, breathing deeply and heavily and Harry’s eyes widened. Nott had just interrupted them. They had been having sexual contact that could quite possibly have led to them mating for the first time and Blaise was seeing the disturbance as an interruption to their mating. Harry could not let Blaise kill his best friend when they were never going to have had sex at this time; Harry didn’t feel comfortable enough yet, despite his impending heat.

“Blaise?” He called, moving to straddle Blaise’s thighs. “Blaise, you know nothing was going to come of the licking. It was just to put your scent on me remember, we weren’t going to mate.” He whispered softly.

Blaise’s arms wrapped around him tightly and his mate buried his head into his neck, still breathing heavily, but his hands were now caressing the skin of Harry’s back.

“We will never be able to mate under these conditions. You deserve better than a quick fumble in a boys dormitory with four other men listening in.”

Harry smiled. “That’s part of why I went to talk with Dumbledore. I asked for us to have a set of private rooms. He agreed and said he could have them up and ready for us in a few hours.”

Blaise grinned naughtily and Harry went pink.

“My sweet, thoughtful, diletto. You are so clever.” Blaise cooed.

Harry preened under the praise from his mate and he snuggled in tighter. He loved being praised by his mate, it felt so different from being praised for a correct answer by the teacher, not that he had too many of those with Hermione in the class. He felt loved and cherished. He could slowly become addicted to praise from his mate, it was so much nicer than being punished by his dominant. Harry hadn’t been punished in days, not since that time when he had been going to Snape’s private rooms for his Draken lessons. It felt amazing and made him feel elated and he wondered why he had ever fought against Blaise in the first place.

Harry was reminded why he fought Blaise only four hours later as he dropped down onto his knees to avoid Blaise’s hand shooting out towards the back of his neck and he sunk his slender, curving fangs into the soft flesh of Blaise’s side in aggravation.

His dominant yelled and Harry rolled away to avoid Blaise, who had dropped down onto his arse, both hands pressed over the freely bleeding wound in his side.

Blaise snarled at him as his Dracken attributes burst free of his human appearance. Harry unsheathed his claws and let his wings burst free of his back.

Anyone watching them would have thought that their fight was over something major from the way that they were acting, but it wasn’t. The fight was over what colour their bedroom carpet was going to be.

They had been given their new private rooms on the seventh floor of the school, Dumbledore had pulled out all the stops and a lot of house-elves had volunteered to put the room together so it had taken less time than expected. The only problem had been that every room had been white and they were going around with their wands colouring in the walls, floors, ceilings and fabrics.

Harry wanted the bedroom carpet to be red, to convey romance and passion. Blaise wanted the bedroom carpet to be green, not because of his ties to Slytherin, but because of Harry’s eyes. Neither one was willing to compromise so Harry had yelled at Blaise and Blaise had tried to reign Harry back in. It had ended in a fight that Harry was currently winning by avoiding his dominant’s attempts to grab him.

Harry leapt onto Blaise and sunk his fangs into the back of Blaise’s neck, only to be pulled over a shoulder and held tight on a constricting grasp.

“Let go!” Harry screamed.

“Calm down now!” Blaise demanded.

“No! Get the fuck off of me!”

Blaise snarled and Harry suddenly found himself flat on the floor on his back with Blaise lying on top of him.

Blaise, thoroughly fed up with his disobedient little mate, pressed his lips harshly to Harry’s stopping his ear splitting shouts, his heavy body stopping, or at least attempting to stop, Harry from bucking from the floor.

Blaise took his lips from Harry’s to breathe in some much needed oxygen before he peppered his unresisting mate’s face with kisses. He went back to Harry’s plush, pink lips and teased them apart before pressing his tongue into Harry’s delectable little mouth.

Harry tasted of pomegranate. Blaise smiled despite himself, in Greek Mythology Hades had lured Persephone into the Underworld with a pomegranate. He knew he would follow his little mate to the ends of the earth, perhaps that had been what Persephone had felt when Hades had offered her that ripe red fruit.

Harry lay passively under Blaise. He didn’t know what had just happened or why he was suddenly not angry anymore, he felt relaxed and calm, safe and secure. Despite the fact that five minutes ago Blaise had been trying to skin him.

“Mio Amore. L’adoro, Harry, mio piccolo amante.” Blaise breathed a hair’s breadth away from his lips.

“What are you saying?” Harry asked breathlessly.

Blaise smiled lovingly down at him. “My love. I adore you, Harry, my little lover.”

Harry went pink, but smiled happily. “Where did you learn Italian? It is Italian isn’t it? I don’t think it’s French.”

Blaise let out a spontaneous burst of laughter and held Harry close to him.

“Oh Harry, you are so precious to me.”

“What did I say?” Harry asked in surprise.

“You are perhaps the only person in the entire of Hogwarts who does not know that I am part Italian. I have an Italian Father and a French Mother, yet I was born here in Britain.”
“That must be a strange feeling, where do you live?”

“Oh, I’m sorry!”

Blaise smiled and pressed a kiss to his forehead.

“He died a long time ago, Harry, much like your own parents. I was only a few weeks old, but at least I still have Mother. She will adore you; she has been waiting for grandchildren since I hit puberty.”

“I…I’m not sure I’m ready yet.” Harry confided. “What if I’m a bad parent?”

Blaise smiled reassuringly at him and sat up, pulling Harry into his lap to cuddle.

“You will not be a bad parent, Mio Bello. Your inner instincts will guide you.”

“What is it like having a Mum?” Harry asked softly.

Blaise felt his heart crack just a little at that question and held Harry tighter.

“She has always loved me, but often displays it in harsh ways. She is a dominant Dracken too, Mio Bello, and my Father was a dominant Dracken. Long ago, before they were even born, they were betrothed to each other, one of the last ever Dracken betrothals, as it became an illegal practice shortly after their births to betroth any Dracken for the very reason that the male child could be a submissive or the female could be a dominant. They were set up to be married as soon as their parents knew for certain of their genders, but my Mother turned out to be a dominant Dracken, something that my Grandparents had not counted on. They did not know until Mother hit her inheritance of course, but by then it was too late to turn back, the betrothal papers were solid and locked with magic.”

“Do not get me wrong, Prezioso, they loved each other dearly, but you and I clash and we are dominant and submissive, could you imagine the fights for a dominant with another dominant? I was their only child and Mother only got worse in her pregnancy and then later when I came about, she was too protective and hardly let Father see me as she tried to be the caring submissive Mother and the protective, sturdy dominant Father by herself, as her instincts dictated that she should.”

“What happened?” Harry asked in a small voice, tilting his head to press a comforting kiss to the underside of Blaise’s chin.

“She killed him, Harry. It was an accident but it was destined to happen sooner or later. They were both too strong, both too controlling and dominant, neither would give an inch to the other, it wasn’t in their nature to do so. We fight, diletto, we draw blood, we bruise the other, can you imagine their fights? How bad they would have been. She didn’t mean to kill him, but she did kill him and she has never really recovered from losing her mate in such a tragic way. She tried to move on, though never with another Dracken, she has human men now, but they never seem to last long either.”

“Does she kill them?” Harry asked.

“Yes. It has gained her the name of a Black Widow, but she does not mean to kill, except for the one Husband who thought that it a good idea to slap me when I was just four years old, she killed him purposefully. All Drackens are insanely protective of their children and that I am my Mother’s one and only child, well perhaps she overreacted, but she would not survive the loss of me as well as my Father, her mate.”

“I don’t know which one of my parents was a Dracken, I didn’t even know that they or I was magical until I was eleven, let alone that we were some sort of magical creature.”

“There is a potion to determine which parent was the magical creature, Prezioso; I shall ask Severus if he is willing to brew it for you.”

Harry smiled beatifically and Blaise fell a little bit more in love as he held Harry in his lap. He could still scarcely believe that he had his mate already, what with the majority of the current dominant Drackens being in their early thirties and still being without mates, he had thought that he had a few years to wait yet, but he was so glad that he had Harry though, they would have beautiful and powerful children together.
Severus Snape sighed as he stirred the Jarvey eyes into the potion. Blaise had asked him if he could brew the creature inheritance potion for Potter. He remembered making this potion before, when he was seventeen, for his own mate, who wished to know where the Dracken genes had come from.

He had lost his mate, his beautiful submissive mate. They hadn’t had any children, he had suspected that his mate had been pregnant, only just, but he had been driven wild by his instincts to protect his mate, which pointed to his mate’s early pregnancy. How he wished he knew now for certain.

Dropping in a teaspoon of salamander ash, he stirred counter clockwise and waited. He had had no idea that Lily was a Dracken or the mate of one. She had never said. Potter had never shown signs of being a Dracken either, so maybe Potter junior’s Dracken genes came from further up the family tree, perhaps a grandfather or a great Aunt.

“How I wish that you were still here with me.” Severus whispered sadly, looking to the mantel piece where one of the only pictures of him and his mate together sat.

He missed his mate every single day and often wondered why he hadn’t just died and joined his mate yet, but he didn’t wish to kill himself, his Mother had always told him about strength and how one needed to remain strong in life to be strong in death.

He had learnt strength the hard way, his Father, Tobias, had not been the nicest of men and had beaten him and his Mother right up until his Dracken inheritance. Seeing his only son turn into a scaled, part dragon with wings had been the last straw for Muggle Tobias Snape and he had had a heart attack that had killed him outright.

His Mother had touched his face and had smiled at him, it was then that it had come out that his Mother’s dead brother had been a Dracken and a great-great Grandfather had been one also. He had inadvertently killed his own Father and freed himself and his Mother, who still lived in Prince Manor surrounded by kneazles and a few select house-elves.

Finishing up the potion, Severus allowed it to cool before he bottled it up and placed it to the side ready to give to Potter and Blaise. How had it come to this? He was like a Father to all of his Slytherins, many of whom came from either abusive or neglectful homes, he cared for them and so he was reluctant to see one of his closest Slytherins, his own godson, get involved with a submissive Dracken.

He knew Blaise was a Dracken himself and he was happy that he had found a mate already, but submissive Drackens were so easy to be killed. They died and sometimes it was for no apparent reason, his mate had died without reason. He still had not found his mate’s body, if there was even a body left to find in the first place. He had no idea where to start looking and he had given up scenting out his mate after two years, there wouldn’t have been a scent left to find now after so many years had passed.

Snarling and furiously swiping away the lone tear that made its way out of one of his onyx coloured eyes, Severus sat heavily in his dragon hide chair. He breathed in deeply and calmed his mind using his heavy knowledge of Occlumency; he doubted he would have lasted half as long as he had if he were not so proficient in the mind arts.
There wasn’t a day that went by where he didn’t regret not going with his mate that fateful day. He had known that something was wrong, but they had just had a quarrel and he had ignored his mate’s worried and preoccupied state. He had let his own submissive mate leave their house in that state and his mate had never returned. He felt such overwhelming guilt and he bore it with a heavy heart and a mind of pain, if only he had stopped his mate that day, if only.

Harry actually giggled when Blaise poked his fingers deeply into his sides, tickling the hell out of him in their brand new, purple, bedroom.

Harry was lying on his back on the purple carpet having the breath tickled out of him as he used his knees to try and push Blaise off of him.

“Blaise! I can’t breathe.” He giggled.

“But that giggle is just too cute, Prezioso.”

“Oh no?” Blaise asked with a raised eyebrow. “Then what is that beautiful sound that comes from between your lips?”

“I’m laughing! Not giggling, I don’t giggle.”

“Oh really?” Blaise asked with a mischievous grin, before he started tickling Harry mercilessly.

Harry giggled in forced delight as he thrashed and tried to get away from Blaise’s attack.

“You, Mio Bello, are gigling.”

Harry grinned as Blaise’s fingers stopped moving; he leant up and pecked Blaise’s lips with his own.
“I’m not giggling, Blaise.”

Blaise smiled softly down at Harry and Harry was amazed to see it, Blaise hardly ever smiled. He usually smirked or grinned, but never smiled.

“You look so handsome when you smile.” Harry told him.

Blaise let out a chuckle and pulled Harry up to rest against his chest, their faces touching as Blaise looked deeply into those green, green eyes.

“You are beautiful, Harry; no matter what you do you are always beautiful.”

Harry pushed at Blaise in embarrassment and shook his head.

“No I’m not.”

“Yes you are, Mio Amore.”

Harry rolled his eyes and yawned widely. Blaise stood up with Harry in his arms and walked up the solid set of stairs into the cavernous upper area of their bedroom. Dumbledore really did understand Drackens as he had placed their absolutely massive bed as high as he could manage underneath a huge glass skylight.

Blaise laid him down in the very centre of the bed before he crawled in next to him. They had already changed into their pyjamas, or Harry had seeing as Blaise slept commando in only a pair of pyjama bottoms.

Blaise covered Harry up in the purple duvet and pulled Harry to cuddle him gently. Pressing a kiss to Harry’s cheek, Blaise placed his head on the pillow and held his mate tightly as Harry fell asleep in his arms. He smiled at the beautiful picture of serenity, calm and peace that Harry made in his sleep. He was so happy and he couldn’t wait for the heat that he could feel pressing ever closer, but first Harry wanted to ‘practice’. Blaise fell asleep with a very naughty smile on his face and wicked thoughts taking up his dreams.

Chapter Seven – The Practice Heat and the Real Deal

Harry had decided that tonight was the night that he wanted to lose his virginity to Blaise. He had talked it over with Blaise and his mate had smirked and his eyes had gotten a decidedly lustful quality to them as he grinned and nodded his agreement.

“You’re a demon.” Harry complained, rolling his eyes as Blaise leisurely roved his eyes over him.

“You love me this way.” Blaise answered, wrapping his arms around Harry’s svelte waist.

“I love you full stop.” Harry answered, loving how Blaise stiffened in shock at hearing Harry proclaim his love for him for the first time.

“I love you too, Harry.” Blaise answered huskily, seductively.

“You know we can’t have sex now.” Harry exclaimed in shock. “We have classes in half an hour.”
“You are right. Half an hour isn’t nearly long enough for me to completely ravish you.”

“Blaise!” Harry snapped, his face turning a bright pink.

Blaise chuckled, wrapping an arm around him and leading him out of their brand new rooms and all the way down to the Great Hall for breakfast.

Harry was now eating so many fruits and vegetables that the house elves had started sending up extra bowls just for Harry. After all, who else would eat vegetables for breakfast?

He sat next to Blaise and avoided looking at Malfoy opposite him, who had gone from avoiding him like the plague to following his every step.

Harry had found the Dracken section in the potions book and was amazed at how many potions there actually were. Awful, horrible potions that he couldn’t imagine any Dracken ever taking. The worst one in his opinion was the ‘Dissolvere Pullus’ potion, or roughly translated as The Chick Dissolver.

It was a damned abortion potion for Drackens, who the hell would abort their children?! He had shown it angrily to Blaise who had petted his head and kissed his forehead and explained calmly that it was for submissive Drackens who had been raped and had gotten pregnant by a dominant who was not their mate, to stop the dominant from taking advantage of the submissive using the child.

Harry had calmed down then as he realised that the potion was not used as a quick and convenient tool to kill off babies but a way to stop submissive Drackens from being forced to love a dominant that had raped and impregnated them with a baby.

He had also found out that a submissive would usually get only the one baby from their first ever clutch, their bodies not wanting to overwhelm them with a clutch of five babies on their first ever conception. It was a sort of easing in period where the submissive got used to their instincts and became more comfortable looking after a baby before they had their next clutch, which could produce anything from between one and five babies.

He had also learnt that even if he had six clutches with the maximum of five babies, there was no guarantee that any of them would be Drackens. There had been a dominant and submissive couple who had had fifty children over seventy years and not one of them had been a Dracken. It wasn’t any wonder that the Dracken population was declining.

Harry wordless pointed to the bowl of cubed kiwi and Blaise snatched it from the table as if someone else would get there before him and take the entire serving bowl.

Harry happily spooned a good sized portion of the ripe kiwi into his own bowl before letting Blaise take it away as he speared some with his fork before eating it happily.
Harry smiled around his fork as he looked at Blaise who was spooning fruit into little pots so Harry could snack on them during the day. Harry was coming to adore the little things Blaise did for him, he was such a thoughtful mate and he really was loving and kind, except when he was giving Harry a punishment, then he was hard and unyielding. Not that Harry took the punishments lying down, the deep bite mark on Blaise’s side attested to that.

Harry did feel bad though as he watched as Blaise stretched too far reaching for some cucumber sticks and pulled on the scabs. It had bruised horribly as well. He’d make it up to Blaise somehow, though he doubted that with their impending sex session that Blaise would care if he was missing a leg.

“Harry?” Blaise called out softly. “We have potions and we need to leave. Have you had enough to eat?”

Harry picked up a handful of white grapes and nodded as he took Blaise’s hand with one of his own whilst the other continuously popped the grapes into his mouth one by one, so that he didn’t actually choke.

Blaise carefully led Harry down into the dungeons with his friends all around. He glared as Draco got too close to Harry and he tugged his mate into the side of his body and wrapped an arm around Harry’s shoulders.

Harry looked up at him with such adorable confusion that Blaise pulled him up slightly to press their lips together. Harry’s lips tasted of the grapes he was eating and Blaise couldn’t help but flick his tongue out to have a quick taste.

Blaise pulled Harry in tighter when Harry made a small noise in the back of his throat against his mouth. A small growl had him holding Harry crushingly tight and raising his eyes to glare at Draco, who was glaring back. He didn’t know what the fuck had gotten into his friend, but he would not have anyone, and he meant anyone, encroaching upon what was his! Not a Dracken, not a human, not a damned bloody veela. Blaise remembered all too well the chaos those Beauxbatons girls had brought to the school. The veela Fleur had been very beautiful, she had kissed his little mate numerous times, she would not have him.

“Blaise! Too tight.” Harry muffled against his chest, pushing against him to try and release his face from his mate’s robes.

Blaise immediately loosened his hold and held Harry’s face in his hands, checking to make sure that he hadn’t accidentally done Harry any damage. He gave one last glare to Draco, before carrying on down the corridor.

“Having fun with your new posse?!” A shout from a voice that Harry knew very well echoed down the corridor.
Harry looked into the rage burning blue eyes of his once best friend and sighed lightly. He had been hoping to avoid this; he didn’t want to get into a fight with his ex-friends. They might not care for him any longer, but he couldn’t forget four years of friendship in a few months. They had been through so much together and how they could disregard him so easily hurt him deeply.

“I don’t have a posse.” Harry replied calmly, clenching his fist into Blaise’s robes to keep his anger, and his tears, in check.

“Whatever, Potter! Strutting around as if you own the castle!” Ron snapped.

“Potter could easily buy the castle if he wished.” Draco replied coolly. “But I suppose you wouldn’t know anything about that would you, Weasley? What with you not being able to afford the bare essentials?”

Ron went as red as his hair and that enraged, jealous glint came back to his eyes as he started towards Draco, unsheathing his wand as he did so. Hermione and Seamus held him back.

“Stop it.” Harry told Malfoy, glaring at the blond.

“As you wish.” Malfoy drawled boredly.

“Already taken over the Slytherins have you?!” Ron spat at him. “Got Malfoy to do your bidding haven’t you, you traitor!”

“Ron that’s enough.” Hermione spoke up from behind her boyfriend.

She placed one of her small hands onto Ron’s arm and tugged him back into the Gryffindor line. She didn’t once look up or make eye contact with him and that hurt Harry as well. The three of them had once been as thick as thieves, now Hermione couldn’t even look at him and Ron was spitting spiteful things at him from down the corridor.

Harry sighed. It wasn’t what he wanted, this wasn’t how he had envisioned his friendship ending up five years ago, he had thought that he had made some friends for life. He had been wrong, so very wrong and it hurt.

Dean sidled up to him, ignoring the warning growl from Blaise and patted Harry’s head like one would a dog.
“Don’t worry about it, Harry. Ron’s being a jackass and Hermione’s being a prude. You still have the rest of us to look out for your back, which reminds me; I overheard the loud mouth talking to his sister. I wouldn’t recommend the treacle tart tonight.”

“At least he remembered that it was my favourite.”

“Dobby did actually, they went down to the kitchens and he mentioned that you hadn’t eaten it in a while and wondered why. Hermione picked up on it and started to see if there was any truth to it.”

Harry startled at that. Hermione was watching him? Did that mean that she still wanted to be friends? Was she just torn because of her love for Ron? Or had she just taken an interest in passing as she was prone to do?

Harry deflated at that and Blaise, feeling the difference in his stance, brought his other arm around his front to give him a sort of sideways hug.

“Harry has been advised to eat more fruits and vegetables by Madam Pomfrey.” Blaise lied smoothly. “To build up his immune system, she seems to believe that he will come down with something again soon and we are trying to prevent it.”

“Madam Pomfrey seems to think it will be unavoidable no matter what I do.” Harry added, picking up on Blaise’s thought process immediately, they needed a ready-made excuse for when he went into heat, after all they couldn’t just disappear for ten days and then pop back up like nothing had happened.

“It isn’t contagious is it, Har?” Seamus’ Irish lilt asked as his head appeared over Dean’s shoulder.

“No, Seamus, just a viral infection, though it’ll probably keep me in the hospital wing for a month.”

“Nothing new there then.” Dean grinned, as Seamus threw his head back and laughed deeply.

Harry smiled and it felt good to laugh with his old friends, even if they weren’t his best friends, Seamus and Dean were his friends and he had missed them.
“Honestly, Harry, the year hasn’t started until you’ve spent at least a week in the infirmary.” Neville piped up, a bit nervously in front of all the Slytherin sixth years, but he smiled kindly all the same.

“Thanks for the vote of confidence, Nev!” Harry grinned back before saying with exaggerated enthusiasm and excitement. “I’ll be sure to pass my illness onto you. We can spend the week in the infirmary together!”

“I think I’ll pass.” Neville stated.

“I won’t! A week off of lessons!” Seamus enthused.

“You mean a week in the hospital wing doing homework and catch up essays.” Dean told him.

Seamus’ face fell and Harry laughed at him from his place snuggled into Blaise, trying to lean away from Malfoy, who appeared to be inching closer.

All of them were stopped from saying anything else by the classroom door being thrown open and Snape’s head appearing around it.

“All of you get inside now and leave your insipid conversations out here!”

Harry gave a secret grin to Neville, Dean and Seamus and happily walked into the potions classroom with Blaise.

Harry chuckled under his breath as Blaise rushed to save their potion yet again. He must have done something wrong for it to have gone from a light shade of red to a violent, deep orange, but he had been sure he was following the instructions properly.

He looked at the chalkboard and wiped the sweat from his eyes; he squinted and tried to read the tiny, sharp, scrawling letters through the potion fumes of about twenty other cauldrons and Neville’s creation, which was spewing blue gas. Oh, no he had done it wrong; he hadn’t added the powdered moonstone before adding the beetle eyes.

Harry chuckled under his breath as Blaise rushed to save their potion yet again. He must have done something wrong for it to have gone from a light shade of red to a violent, deep orange, but he had been sure he was following the instructions properly.

He looked at the chalkboard and wiped the sweat from his eyes; he squinted and tried to read the tiny, sharp, scrawling letters through the potion fumes of about twenty other cauldrons and Neville’s creation, which was spewing blue gas. Oh, no he had done it wrong; he hadn’t added the powdered moonstone before adding the beetle eyes.

“Dear Merlin, are you trying to kill us both?” Blaise hissed.
“Not purposefully, but I’m terrible at potions.”

“I can see that, Harry! Didn’t you know that you can’t add pixie wings and beetle eyes one after the other into a potion without adding moonstone between them?!”

“Apparently I didn’t.” Harry grinned unrepentantly.

“Merlin, Harry! It’s in chapter seven of the potions textbook we were assigned for this year!”

“You mean I’m supposed to read that? I’m using it as a paperweight to stop my parchment from curling.”

Harry laughed at Blaise’s gobsmacked expression and went back to their potion. It was red again, a darker red than it had been before, but it was still red nonetheless, until Harry read the next line of instructions which clearly said ‘add the lacewing flies’ in Snape’s god awful writing and he tipped in the bowl of lacewing flies, then the potion went a poisonous yellow.

“I think I did something wrong again.” Harry told his mate seriously.

Blaise snapped out of it and looked at the potion, before he cursed and dived for the hellebore extract.

“Damn it, Harry! It meant several flies, not an entire bowl!” Blaise stated exasperatedly.

“Then why did we have an entire bowl laid out?!” Harry demanded.

“Because a handful of the lacewing flies need to be added to the potion every ten minutes after line twelve! The instructions clearly say that!”

Harry peered through the fumes and read the line twice over and then read a few lines down.
“Huh, so they do.”

Blaise sighed and picked up his hand before laying a chaste kiss to his knuckles.

“If we don’t come out of this lesson alive, Mio Amore, please know that I love you.”

“Oh stop being so overdramatic!” Harry demanded. “I’m not that bad!”

“It pains me to inform you that you are that bad, Mio Bello.”

Harry huffed and turned back to the chalkboard, reading through the next line of instructions twice and then once more to be sure before he picked up the tiny bottle of cobra snake blood and tipped exactly one drop into the potion.

“Harry, no!” Blaise cried.

The next thing Harry knew he was knocked to the floor with a heavy body on top of him, before he could ask Blaise what the hell he thought he was doing a massive explosion shook the very floor he was lying on.

He sat up and peered around at his fellow classmates, who were all staring wide eyed at the place where his and Blaise’s desk used to be. He touched Blaise when his mate didn’t move or make a sound and let out a relieved breath when one indigo eye opened to glare at him.

In the shocked silence that permeated the room, Harry shifted nervously and wiggled about on the stone floor.

“I don’t know what I did wrong.” He told his fellow students seriously. “I read the instructions three times.”

“Cobra blood reacts very violently with the hellebore extract that I used to stabilise the potion and with the amount of lacewing flies you added I’m surprised the floor is still intact.” Blaise told him.

“Oh. Well at least no one was hurt.” Harry replied meekly.
“Due to the containment ward that I hastily placed around your cauldron, Mister Potter.” Snape’s silky voice cut through the room like a knife. Harry had been wondering where the snarky git had been hiding.

“Thank you for saving us, Professor.” Harry simpered sarcastically. “But perhaps if your handwriting wasn’t so small and illegible this might never have happened.”

Harry’s eyes widened the moment he realised what had spewed out of his mouth. He could see Seamus and Dean out of the corner of one eye smothering their laughs into the sleeves of their robes and Blaise out of the corner of his other eye edging away from him like he had the plague. He’d be having words with his mate about loyalty if he survived this encounter.

“Detention with me tonight, Potter, seven o’clock, do not be late or I will be forced to make your life a misery.”

Harry was so tempted to tell his professor that he already made Harry’s life a misery, but he managed to control his wayward tongue. He needed to replace his brain to mouth filter because it was obviously broken.

“All of your potions will be ruined by now.” Snape told the rest of the class. “You all have Potter to thank for that, so let me see…I think five points from Gryffindor for every potion you ruined. That equates to fifty points from Gryffindor, Potter, because your feeble mind cannot even follow written instructions I highly doubt it can handle number equations.”

Only several people laughed at Snape’s barb. Pansy Parkinson, Theodore Nott, Crabbe and Goyle were to name a couple. Ron let out a snort, but he looked torn between amusement at Harry’s humiliation and anger at the prospect of losing so many points in early December.

Harry curled in on himself so he didn’t have to look at the sneers sent at him by the Slytherins nor the angered looks from the Gryffindors. If it had been any other situation he would have held his head high and glared right back at them, but with it emerging that he was a Dracken, not knowing where the genes came from, the whole losing his virginity tonight that was making him nervous and the entire situation with the dominant Drackens and the prospect of picking another million mates just so he could have a baby, well he wasn’t feeling very confident or much like himself.

Arms wrapped around him and a low growl rumbled through a large chest and vibrated through his body. Harry buried his head into Blaise’s neck and inhaled the soothing scent deeply. He clung to Blaise as Snape ordered everyone to leave due to the fact that the lesson had now ended because their potions were unsalvable.

Ashamedly Harry felt tears well up in his eyes and he strove desperately to blink them away. The last thing he wanted was for Blaise or Snape to see him crying and thinking him weak minded and pathetic.
“Let yourself cry, Mio Prezioso.” Blaise cooed to him. “It’s part of the breeding cycle, your emotions are going to be out of your control until after the heat.”

“Does this mean I’m closer to going on heat?”

“Yes, you are now in the last stage of the breeding cycle, I’d say in about a week you will be on heat.” Blaise told him gently.

“Be thankful that your breeding cycle is two months long, Potter.” Snape told him. “I knew a Dracken who had a sixteen day breeding cycle. It drove both the submissive and the dominant mad.”

Snape got a faraway, thoughtful look on his face and Harry realised that he was most likely thinking of his own mate, though the thought of sex and Snape in the same sentence made him shiver in revulsion. Snape had always been and would always be a teacher to him.

He didn’t think he’d be able to handle having a heat every sixteen days that was a horrible thought. He could barely handle having a heat every two months, though this was his first one ever, he might change his mind after having sex with Blaise for the first time. He peeked at Blaise through his fringe; his mate was speaking with Snape about the Dracken gene potion to find out where Harry’s Dracken blood came from.

Blaise was so handsome and so powerfully alluring and that he had said that he didn’t need to practice for their heat indicated that he was a good lover. Harry grinned at the turn his thoughts had taken. He doubted he would want to go into heat every sixteen days, but every two months? He wouldn’t mind having a sex marathon with Blaise for ten days every two months.

“This is the potion to tell you where your Dracken genes came from, Bello.” Blaise informed him, coming to stand close to him.

Harry nodded and looked to Snape for instructions.

“It was too much to ask for that you listened to a word I said ten minutes ago.” Snape sighed, pinching the bridge of his nose. “Swallow the potion and then prick your thumb with this knife, press your blood onto this chart.”
Snape indicated the small knife and the blinding white, circular piece of paper. Harry nodded and threw back the entire potion, grimacing at the horrid taste. He picked up the knife and jammed it into his thumb and let it bleed for a bit to build up the blood before pressing it onto the chart.

He was not prepared for the sucking sensation or the zap that started at his thumb before spreading through his whole hand and then through rest of his body. He ripped his thumb away and glared accusingly at Snape.

“Did I forget to mention that it might be painful? What a shame.” Snape drawled as Blaise held Harry’s hand gently and kissed the bloodied thumb.

“How long do I have to wait?” Harry asked.

“It depends how far back your genes are.” Snape answered slowly, as if Harry were a particularly moronic idiot.

Slowly words started forming on the circular chart, blooming outwards like a flower opening to the sunlight.

Harry looked at the names on the chart and smiled. His name was in the very middle of the white chart, then the name Lily Evans was on one side of his and the name James Potter was on the other side. Two names came from his Mother’s name, Deidre Campbell and Jackson Evans. His grandparents. He grinned at finally learning their names; Aunt Petunia had always refused to tell him who they were or what they were like when he had asked when he was younger. The only thing she had ever told him was that they were decent, hardworking people who didn’t deserve to be bothered by loathsome freaks.

He looked at the two names branching off from his Father’s name and saw the names Dorea Black and Charlus Potter. Black, he was related to the Black family through his paternal Grandmother!

More names appeared on both sides and Harry looked quickly to see it was adding siblings. Petunia Evans appeared branching off from his maternal Grandparents names, attaching itself to his Mother’s name. On his Father’s name nothing appeared, but three names appeared next to his paternal Grandmother’s name. Pollux Black, Cassiopeia Black and Marius Black. His Grandmother had had two older brothers and an older sister. The next level of names appeared, but only on his Father’s side.

“Your genes come from your Father’s side of the family.” Snape told him, also looking with interest at the chart.

Harry looked up at his Professor and nodded distractedly before quickly looking back down to follow the two lines connecting the four Black siblings to two new names. Cygnus Black and Violetta Bulstrode. The name Cygnus Black was glowing a soft yellow.
“There you have it, Potter. You got your Dracken genes from your Great-Grandfather Cygnus Black. The genes skipped his children and even his Grandchildren and manifested in you.”

“Lucky me.” Harry sighed, his eyes not leaving the parchment.

“The Black family is well known for having Dracken blood within it and no, before you ask your godfather was not a Dracken.” Snape added.

“I wasn’t going to ask, but it would be just my luck that I am the only one in three generations to get the Dracken gene.”

Blaise put an arm around him and pressed a lingering kiss to his temple.

“It isn’t all bad, Mio amore.”

Harry looked up at Blaise and smiled.

“No, it isn’t all bad.” He agreed going up on his tiptoes to press their lips together in a sweet kiss.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Harry nervously squirmed on the bed as he watched the sliver of bathroom door that he could see from his position. It was late evening and Blaise was having his usual shower at his usual time, only it wasn’t a usual night and Harry was nervous enough as it was without waiting.

His heart started racing as the water turned off and he wiggled even more in the nest bed as he had taken to calling it. He looked up through the skylight and drew in a deep breath at the sight of the almost full moon. It looked so beautiful, tonight really had been the best choice to give himself fully to Blaise, he just wished that his mate would hurry the hell up before he changed his mind through sheer cowardice.

He had wanted to get undressed, anything to make the waiting less painful, but he had gotten shy and embarrassed just sitting on their bed naked, waiting for Blaise to return so he had pulled his boxer shorts back on.

He played with the little curls of hair on his legs, he rubbed his goose bumped arms (it was December after all and it was damned cold.) he curled his toes and played with his fingers, he bit at his finger nails and he rubbed circles onto his bubbling belly.

He couldn’t relax, he just couldn’t. He knew that Blaise was drying off and drying his hair, but it seemed like an eternity before he emerged from the bathroom. It was then that Harry started feeling sick.

“Mio Prezioso, we don’t have to do this if you don’t want to, the heat leaves no room for fear or nervousness, just instinct.” Blaise told him calmly, giving him a readymade way out, but Harry didn’t want his first time with Blaise to be dictated by instinct.

He shook his head and reached out for Blaise, who was as naked as the day he was born. Blaise wrapped him up in his arms and gently stroked his back with light fingertips, causing sparks of pleasure to run down his spine.

“I want to do it now.” Harry stated. “I don’t want my first time to be fuelled by instinct. I want to do it myself, without the instincts to guide me and take away my free will.”

Blaise smiled at him and picked him up gently, only to lay him on his back against the cool bed sheets.

“Please don’t be afraid, Harry; there is nothing to be afraid of. I will not hurt you, I will prepare you properly and we will keep to foreplay all night if you feel you aren’t ready enough.”

Harry smiled up at Blaise and pulled him down for a sweet kiss, which turned more passionate when Blaise teased his mouth open and stroked his tongue over his own.

Harry let his hands wander over Blaise’s well-muscled chest. Seventeen or not, Blaise had a nice body that was still growing and still gaining more muscle mass. Unfortunately Harry’s sixteen year old body seemed to have been stretched to its absolute limits with the Dracken inheritance and he was positive he was actually shrinking; Blaise chuckled and told him not to be so daft, that of course he wasn’t shrinking.

Blaise moved from his mouth, over his cheek and down to his neck, there he stayed and nibbled and licked in his skin, Harry let out a breathy sigh at the sensation of it and tilted his head to the side.

Blaise grinned against Harry’s neck and licked from the base of his neck, right up to his ear. Harry’s body jerked uncontrollably and Blaise happily stayed at the one spot behind Harry’s earlobe, right on the neck muscle that made his beautiful mate quiver.

Blaise slipped down Harry’s body and moved to get rid of the last shred of clothing that separated their bodies from being in full contact with the other. Harry however shot up and gripped the waistband of his boxers tightly, preventing Blaise from pulling them off.
Blaise looked questioningly at his mate and took note of the red blush on Harry’s cheeks.

“I…I…can we leave them on?” Harry asked timidly.

“How would that work, Prezioso? How can I make love to you through cotton?”

Harry blushed a brighter red and slumped down.

“What’s the matter, Harry?” Blaise asked, very concerned for his mate as he sidled up to him and wrapped a comforting arm around him.

“I…I’m not as big as you are.”

Blaise shook his head in exasperation and tucked a finger under Harry’s chin, pulling his head up for a kiss.

“It does not matter, Mio Bello, I am the dominant here. There is nothing wrong, nor shameful, about being smaller than I am. I am not a good indicator of average size, being well endowed even before my Dracken inheritance.”

“It got bigger with the inheritance?” Harry asked, his embarrassment forgotten in his curiosity.

“Yes, like I got taller and wider and you grew taller and lost your baby fat.”

“Mine didn’t get bigger or smaller.” Harry stated, his cheeks going a bright shade of red again.

“Because you are not a dominant, Mio Amore, only a dominant Dracken’s penis swells with his body.”

“Oh.”
“Now am I allowed to see my mate in all of his stunning glory?” Blaise asked with a teasing grin, his hands moving to the waistband of Harry’s boxers again, but he waited for Harry to shyly nod his head before tugging them down his shapely legs.

Blaise took a nice long look at Harry, feasting his eyes on Harry’s naked body for the very first time. He found out quite quickly that he could stare at Harry uncovered for minutes at a time and not realise how much time had passed when Harry started squirming and embarrassedly covered himself with his hands.

Blaise chuckled and gently plucked Harry’s hands from his lap, holding them in his own as he looked at Harry’s small, but perfectly proportioned genitals before moving his head up to look lustfully into Harry’s eyes.

“You are so beautiful, Harry. So, so beautiful.”

Blaise laid a kiss to Harry’s inside thigh and revelled in the sharp intake of breath that he got in return. He nibbled on the flesh under his lips and Harry quivered, the skin between his teeth shaking in excitement, which made Blaise react.

His semi-erect cock pulsed and filled with even more blood, making it harder and hotter. He enclosed it with his hand and stroked it a few times to alleviate the pressure building before he moved the hand to hold Harry’s hip as his tongue did wicked things to Harry’s mouth.

He caressed Harry, teased him, played with him, stroked him, touched every inch of that gorgeous, silky smooth, body. He had Harry mewling under him and he was so excited his breathing came in harsh bursts.

“Harry, Mio amore. Sei talmente bello, così sexy.” Blaise whispered into his ear before he bit at it.

Harry had no idea what Blaise was saying. Bello and amore were familiar terms that Blaise said daily that he was beginning to see as endearments, he understood the word sexy that was thrown in there, but the rest were just pretty words. It didn’t stop his blood from pulsing faster through his veins nor his heart to thump harder in his chest though.

“Blaise. Please stop teasing.” He whispered out, hoping that Blaise put him out of his misery and stopped teasing his nerve endings.

Blaise grinned down at him and Harry had the distinct feeling that Blaise had been waiting for him to put a stop to the feather light touches.
“As you wish, Mio Diletto.”

Blaise kissed his way down Harry’s body and swiped his tongue around his beautiful mate’s navel, dipping his tongue into Harry’s bellybutton smirking as Harry made a small sound and wiggled on the sheets.

He moved further down and nuzzled the inner most part of Harry’s thigh, where it met the groin area. Harry gasped and squirmed, but Blaise held his hips in place as he let his tongue lick up Harry’s hard shaft for the first time, lingering around the head and getting his first taste of his beautiful mate.

Harry tasted delicious and Blaise lapped at him delicately as Harry shouted out his shock and pleasure. Moving his mouth further over Harry, Blaise sucked carefully at the head of Harry’s cock, trying not to overwhelm him with too many sensations at once, he had to keep reminding himself that this was all new for his mate.

Savage pride filled him as he thought about what he was doing, that this was the first time that Harry had ever been touched like this, that his mate was untouched except by him. He was the first, no matter that there would be at least one other dominant mate to join them, he had been Harry’s first and he would always have that over the other dominants.

Blaise moved his mouth smoothly down Harry’s shaft before pulling back up; keeping an even suction and watched as Harry almost completely lost himself in the pleasure. Blaise couldn’t help himself as he pushed his head down again and swallowed Harry in the back of his throat before pulling back up whilst his hands played with the silky skin of Harry’s perineum and the absolutely tiny, virginal rosebud that he had to somehow fit himself into.

Harry screamed his release silently, too shocked and overcome with pleasure to make a noise, his first ever non-self-induced orgasm robbing his voice as his hands clenched themselves into Blaise’s thick, layered hair and tugged mindlessly.

“Dio Mio amore, vorrei che questa notte non finisse mai.” Blaise spoke to him breathlessly.

“I don’t understand what you’re saying.” Harry panted out confusedly.

Blaise smiled at him as if he were the most precious thing on the earth and tucked a piece of his messy, flyaway hair behind his ear.

“God, my love, I wish that this night was never ending.” Blaise translated with a smirk.

Harry felt himself going pink in the cheeks, but he smiled up at Blaise nonetheless, reaching out to his mate who came to him willingly and laid a small kiss on the corner of his mouth. Blaise tasted musky and it was with a start that Harry realised that he was tasting himself in Blaise’s mouth.
Blaise moved himself to lie on his side facing Harry and pulled his mate onto his side to face him. He drew Harry into a deep, loving kiss as one of his hands fondled that gorgeous bum, a finger dipping in between those curved cheeks to delicately press against Harry’s entrance. Harry gasped and tried to move away, but he encountered Blaise’s chest before he could move away from the questing finger.

“Relax, Harry, it isn’t going to hurt.” Blaise soothed as he pressed a bit harder so his fingertip eased inside Harry’s body.

“Oh!” Harry exclaimed as Blaise pushed more of his finger inside and Harry’s arms and legs twitched lightly at the sparks of pleasure that were playing havoc with his body.

Blaise had to bite the inside of his cheek to keep control of himself as he moved his finger slowly in and out of Harry’s tight body, watching as Harry turned pink from arousal rather than embarrassment and observed through lust lidded eyes as Harry writhed against him, on his finger, his emerald eyes closed against the onslaught of pure pleasure.

Blaise carefully, slowly added a second finger and watched Harry’s face obsessively for one single sign of pain. There was a quick scrunching of Harry’s eyes and mouth, before it smoothed out again and those beautiful green eyes half opened to peer at him.

“How does it feel, Prezioso?”

“Strange and new, but it’s quickly becoming one of my favourite feelings.”

Blaise chuckled deeply and pressed his fingers in a bit faster, going in deeper, before pulling out and searching for that one place that would make Harry scream for him.

He knew exactly when he found the little circular gland of nerve endings when Harry suddenly arched against him, that pretty little mouth opened in amazement and his name was whispered on a broken plea.

Blaise tortured that little gland with firm fingers and very soon Harry choked out his second orgasm, his body jerking uncontrollably.

Blaise took advantage of the overwhelming amount of pleasure Harry was feeling to lube himself up and press into Harry delicately. He had promised not to hurt his little mate and the only way that that was possible was for Harry to be in the euphoric, coital bliss that was the direct afterglow of an orgasm.

The position was a bit awkward until Blaise rolled over Harry and pressed himself fully into his little mate. He kissed and teased those lips as Harry made small mewling sounds in the back of his throat.
Harry was so hot, so moist and so deliciously tight that Blaise had to stop and breathe for a moment before he lost himself completely. He pulled himself out carefully, pushing back in just as slowly, he sped up a bit when he heard no pained sounds from Harry.

Harry arched himself up to wrap his arms around Blaise’s neck, he couldn’t take this sort of slow, torturous ecstasy, it was killing him.

“Blaise, please. I can’t take much more.” He begged chopply as Blaise continued to push in and pull out of him at a snail’s pace.

Blaise smiled and pushed in a bit harder and was rewarded with a wail. He pulled out carefully before he pushed in faster and his smirk came back when he heard the scream that that got him. He had found the angle that he needed.

Using his arms he held Harry in the position that he wanted him in and with his legs as leverage, he thrusted into Harry as quickly as he could, having his neck squeezed tightly as Harry yelled out his shocked pleasure.

Once Blaise was assured that Harry really wasn’t feeling any pain, he started moving harder, aiming deeper and he almost lost it prematurely when Harry wrapped those lithely muscled legs around his waist and started thrusting up against him using his own body as a tool to slam their hips together.

“Harry! Dio! Fuck!” Blaise cursed out, his one hand holding his body up, the other caressing every inch of Harry’s smooth flesh it could reach.

“Blaise! Blaise! I don’t…tight feeling…don’t know…” Harry babbled chopply, not knowing what the new sensations he was feeling meant. He had never felt the near pleasure pain of the tightness building up in his gut.

Blaise growled when he realised that Harry was so close to his release. He pushed himself harder, faster, giving that one last extra burst of pleasure to tip them both over the edge of orgasm and over the edge they went, screaming and yelling out their shared gratification of their utter carnality.

Blaise kept himself elevated above Harry so as not to crush his little lover, but he could only manage to remain that way for a few moments before his arms gave way and he collapsed next to Harry, who was lying oh so still on the bed, his eyes closed. If it weren’t for the heavily heaving chest Blaise might have thought he had killed his mate.

“Are you alright, Mio amore?” Blaise asked after Harry made no movement or sound apart from his heavy breathing.
“That was amazing.” Harry answered through a screamed raw throat. Blaise took immense pride in that.

He grinned and kissed the red, pleasure flushed cheek, brushing away the completely disarrayed tufts of hair.

“I’m not going to be able to walk for a year.”

Blaise chuckled. “You stroke my ego so beautifully, Harry, but I think a year is a bit of an exaggeration. You will be sore tomorrow, but I have a cream to apply to help with that, you will be just fine.”

Harry smiled as he cracked open his eyes to see the sight of a completely sated Blaise Zabini.

“You’re so handsome.”

“And you, Mio caro, are the most beautifully alluring, stunning creature to have ever walking this planet.”

Harry fell into an exhausted sleep with a smile on his face, lying on his side with Blaise’s large body spooned up against his naked back. He had never thought he could be this happy, what with the rushed mateship, the fact that he had hardly knew Blaise before they had mated and the supposed animosity between the Slytherins and the Gryffindors, but he was so glad, so relieved that it had all worked out in the end, he was so happy in the here and now, it was a shame that it would all be ruined soon by the appearance of another, unknown, dominant Dracken.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Harry woke up a week later, on the fourteenth of December, sweltering hot. It was too warm and he couldn’t breathe. He kicked the heavy duvet from himself and ripped his pyjamas from his body, but his skin was just so warm.

He twisted and rolled, but he couldn’t find a cool spot on the sheets and he was so uncomfortable that he mewled in distress, which woke up Blaise who had been sound asleep beside him.

The moment Blaise inhaled his eyes went wild and he grabbed Harry’s waist and pulled him to lie underneath his body.
“Do not worry, sweet one.” He whispered into his ear whilst simultaneously kicking off his sleeping bottoms. “I will take care of you. I will take away the heat, I will fix this.”

Blaise had become hard within moments of smelling the scent that Harry was exuding and he didn’t wait a moment longer before pushing himself into Harry, joining them together for only the second time in their relationship.

Blaise was warm too and Harry couldn’t take the heat, his instincts told him that his mate could take it all away, but Blaise was making him hotter! He writhed and moved with Blaise as his mate pulled out and pushed back in with a primal force that he hadn’t used the first time that they’d had sex.

Harry screamed and clung to Blaise, digging his claws into his mate’s shoulders, breaking skin and still digging deeper. Far from putting him off, it seemed to make his mate move faster above him and it was all Harry could do to keep himself from being pushed right over the side of the bed.

He hadn’t noticed that they had both shifted into Dracken form, he realised when he opened his eyes to see his dominant’s huge wings fluttered out to their fullest length and when he moved his hands over his mate’s shoulders to his chest and he saw his blood covered claws.

He couldn’t keep his eyes open for long under the onslaught of debauchery and he moaned and mewled and wrapped himself completely around his mate as the pleasure forced his eyes into the back of his head.

He hadn’t been wrong, the heat didn’t force him to do anything, it didn’t turn the sex into a foggy scene that he felt like an outsider to or couldn’t stop. He could stop this right now if he wanted, but he didn’t want to, he didn’t want Blaise to ever stop, he doubted very much that he had the strength or will power to stop this.

“Blaise!” Harry forced out of his constricted throat. He pushed himself at Blaise and Blaise growled at him, moving his hands from the bed to Harry’s shoulders, moving his legs from their stretched out position to come up into a kneeling position.

Suddenly Blaise was so deep inside his body that Harry had trouble breathing in enough oxygen, he gasped and wailed and there wasn’t anything that he could do! Blaise had his upper body pinned down by the shoulders and his legs were wrapped around Blaise’s hips to keep them connected together. He wailed again and Blaise snarled, moving his arms yet again to wrap them around Harry’s back, tugging him upwards until they were chest to chest and Blaise was still thrusting into him, only now gravity was forcing Harry to sink as deeply as he possibly could onto Blaise.

His breath was forced out of his lungs with every thrust; his body was spasaming in such absolute pleasure that Harry could barely control it. This was so different from the slow and sensual love making that their first time had been.

Harry made a small, indistinguishable noise in the back of his throat and his arms shot up to grip Blaise’s hair in two fists, he tugged and yanked on it and Blaise lurched forward and sunk his fangs deeply into Harry’s neck.
It was Harry’s undoing, he unravelled and screamed out his release for the world to hear, not that they could, and Blaise followed after a single mouthful of Harry’s blood.

They lay on their shared bed, panting and quivering in the afterglow of their passion, staring at each other’s lax and unguarded faces. It did not last long. Only what seemed like mere moments later, Harry felt his body surging with blood and excitement again, his nipples pinched together and became sensitised, his breath came in harsh gasps and his cock hardened and thickened.

Blaise’s pupils dilated as the scent of Harry’s heat pheromones reached his nose; he shivered in delight as his body became instantly ready for sex again. He rolled onto his back and dragged Harry on top of him, pushing right into his delectable mate and moving slower than before, but hitting deeper as he moved Harry’s hips down and onto himself with every thrust.

Harry balanced himself by moving to his knees and wrapping his arms around Blaise’s neck, using his elbows and forearms to keep himself steady as Blaise hit that spot deep inside of his body that had him seeing black and white dots.

Their bodies rubbed together, eased by the sweat that had formed, making it easier for Blaise to hit the right angle, making it easier for Harry to continuously push himself back onto Blaise.

Harry’s gut tightened in a new, but familiar sensation, he pressed his mouth to Blaise’s and got a few quick bites from sharp teeth and a silky tongue entwining with his own as Blaise stroked the soft skin on Harry’s sides.

A hand moved from his side to his nipple, which was rubbed gently between a finger and a thumb, before it was tugged harshly making Harry gasp and twitch as he released his pleasure onto Blaise’s belly. Blaise followed quickly after and Harry lay fully on his mate, resting for a few minutes, but he didn’t even have that little respite, his erection came back even quicker than it had the last time and before he could even draw in a breath, he found himself face down on the bed, Blaise’s large hands holding his slender hips, his prostate being tortured as Blaise moved within him harshly.

Harry gasped and mewed, trying to squirm away from Blaise’s tongue, but his mate had a steel grip on his hips.

It was so swelteringly hot that Harry was finding it difficult to breathe, he was sweating and he was getting weaker where Blaise seemed to be getting stronger the longer they remained connected together. His blood had turned to fire and his skin felt like it was melting as he buried his face into the pillows of their bed, but even they were too warm.

He screamed as Blaise stopped moving within him and started doing something with his hips that left that huge cock inside of him, but nudging his prostate with every roll of his hips. He writhed and wiggled, mewed and screamed for Blaise as his orgasm hit. His mate crouched over him, Blaise’s chest to Harry’s back, but leaving his lower half enough room to move.
“Ti voglio bene!” Blaise cried out as he released into Harry, lying flat on Harry’s back as he panted harshly.

Harry breathed deeply and evenly, not even able to move a muscle. He was bone-tired and completely exhausted. It was only a couple of hours into the heat; they had approximately ten days of continuous sex before the heat ended. How did Drackens even survive this?

Harry didn’t have much longer to contemplate it before he found himself on his back looking into wild indigo eyes as Blaise pushed himself back into his abused entrance. He cried out and wrapped his arms and legs back around Blaise’s body, holding him tightly. His mate was supposed to take away the burn, but instead he was burning more quickly, but he couldn’t bring himself to pull away from Blaise, a huge part of his brain stopped him from pulling away from his mate.

Blaise’s hands slipped down to cup his bum as he pushed himself harder, faster. His instincts telling him that he needed to conceive a clutch of children with his mate, though he knew quite logically, in a small part of his human mind which had been taken over by his Dracken instincts, that it was impossible at this time to make a clutch with Harry. Though he wanted to, he wanted it very much.

Harry released himself first and Blaise happily followed. Thankfully they were allowed a minute of rest and recovery before their bodies demanded that they copulate again. Harry couldn’t take much more of this, he couldn’t stand the heat, the sex was just making him burn all the more hotter, why did Drackens have to feel this level of burning pain? What was the purpose of it?

Harry didn’t have time to come to a realisation on his own before Blaise had once again moved him into a new position and entered his body with a harsh, fast thrust of his hips, driving away any and all thoughts that weren’t about his mate or sex from his mind.

Last Time

Thankfully they were allowed a minute of rest and recovery before their bodies demanded that they copulate again. Harry couldn’t take much more of this, he couldn’t stand the heat, the sex was just making him burn all the more hotter, why did Drackens have to feel this level of burning pain? What was the purpose of it? Harry didn’t have time to come to a realisation on his own before Blaise had once again moved him into a new position and entered his body with a harsh, fast thrust of his hips, driving away any and all thoughts that weren’t about his mate or sex from his mind.

Chapter Eight – Christmas Meetings

Harry woke up rather quickly with his eyes feeling gritty and it didn’t take long to realise that he’d been woken up so rapidly because he had one hell of a pounding headache. For several minutes he just lay there, in the bed, trying to remember where he was, why he was there or what the hell had even happened. Then it all came flooding back to him. He’d had his first heat period.

He had been on his heat period with Blaise for ten days! That meant that today was in actual fact Christmas Eve. Well it was the early hours of Christmas Eve, it being only five o’clock in the morning.

Unfortunately other things took higher precedent than the fact that it was Christmas Eve, like his swollen bladder and his gurgling, roaring stomach that was demanding something to eat. Harry was just glad that Blaise had already used that cream to heal him up because he was still feeling stiff and sore and that was after the cream had been applied to his body. He didn’t want to think on how much pain he would be in if Blaise hadn’t used the cream.

Harry didn’t notice that Blaise wasn’t in the room with him at first, not until after he had spent five minutes emptying his bladder and giving his face a wash to make him feel more alive. He looked around the bedroom, went back up the stairs to the landing that held their nest bed and then he went to check their sitting room, but Blaise really wasn’t there.

Collapsing into a heap on the carpet, Harry felt oddly numb and lost. He let out a high pitched, inhuman squealing roar that he was sure had echoed all throughout the school. It sounded a bit like a dragon’s roar only in a higher pitch. He remembered well the sounds a dragon made from the first task of the Tri-wizard tournament. He’d had an unrivalled front row and VIP experience of a dragon roaring in his face and he knew the sound they made deep in their chests just before they spewed forth their destructive fire.

Harry curled up on the floor. He felt detached from himself, like he was missing half of his body. He let out the squealing roar again and this time he felt about a hundred answering vibrations in his very bones.
The door to his rooms slammed opened and before he could turn around there was a loud thump and the sound of the door closing again, but Harry didn’t care as the moment his eyes clogged deep black, layered hair and indigo eyes he pounced on his mate and licked his cheek, hugging him tightly.

“Harry, why are you giving out a distress call?” Blaise asked seriously.

“What?”

“You’re sending out a distress call to every dominant in the proximity, which I don’t know if you remember, is quite a few hundred.”

“I couldn’t find you.” Harry answered softly.

“Oh, Mio amore! I went hunting for you! I knew that you’d be hungry when you woke up.”

Harry looked over Blaise’s shoulder to see the half torn apart deer and his stomach rumbled loudly.

“Eat up, Harry; I have already eaten my fill.”

Harry near enough dived on the still warm corpse of the deer and happily tore chunks of meat from the bones to devour, getting blood everywhere and being watched by a very pleased, smug Blaise, who was watching his mate eat the meal that he had killed just for him.

Once he was full to bursting point, Harry leant back and groaned, patting his full belly.

“Do I even want to know how you dragged a fully grown buck up here without being seen?”

Blaise grinned. “It was easier with a concealment charm and it’s very early in the morning. It was only really the portraits and any wandering ghosts that I had to hide my kill from.”

Harry grinned back and reached out for Blaise. He felt so much better; his body was back to its normal temperature, he was no longer burning and he didn’t feel uncomfortable or pained anymore, with the ending of the heat, he had gone back to normal.
“Do you feel any better, Prezioso?”

“Yes, I was so uncomfortable at the beginning of the heat, I felt like I was being boiled alive.”

Blaise held Harry close and licked his mate’s neck.

“I’m sorry, Bello, it couldn’t be helped. Your body temperature had to reach one hundred and ten degrees.”

“Why?!” Harry asked stunned.

“Harry, why do you think Drackens call the mating period ‘heat’? Like our dragon ancestors we need to raise our body temperatures up to a certain degree in order to conceive a child. Drackens do not like the cold and we need heat and obviously sex in order to conceive a baby.”

“Our body temperatures have to be raised to a hundred and ten degrees to get children?” Harry asked astonished.

“Yes, and again when you are nesting and you are in labour, your body will raise its temperature to a hundred and ten degrees to keep the babies healthy and comfortable.”

“About that, how will I give birth, Blaise?”

“I’m not too sure, Mio amore. I’ll find out for you, I know that female submissives just birth their children naturally, but I’m not certain how you will give birth seeing as you are a male.”

Harry did not like being told that his mate didn’t know something so important as to how he would birth their children. It made him angry.

“What do you mean you don’t know?! You’ve been a Dracken for a year!”
“I can’t know everything, Harry! A year isn’t all that long and male submissives are so very rare that I never thought that I would ever see one, let alone meet and mate with one!”

“But you’re my dominant mate! You’re supposed to know!” Harry screamed.

“I will find out for you, now calm down and stop yelling at me.” Blaise hissed.

“No!”

Blaise was on him quicker than Harry’s eyes could keep up. Blaise had not been that fast before the heat.

A hand around the back of his neck forced him to his knees and kept pushing to get him onto his stomach, but the hell would Harry make it easy! He swiped a leg out and caught the back of Blaise’s knee, knocking it out from under his mate and letting him collapse next to him, before he leapt up and ran, or he tried to.

Blaise grabbed his ankle and yanked him back down before plastering himself to Harry’s back, pressing his considerable weight down onto his mate.

“Get off of me!”

“Not until you calm down.” Blaise told him, licking over the back of Harry’s neck, lightly nibbling the skin with his teeth.

“Oh! Blaise…no!” Harry moaned, caught between anger and pleasure.

“Yes, my love.” Blaise whispered, finding that one spot behind Harry’s ear that made his mate melt.

“Why am I so angry?” Harry asked miserably.

“Because your Dracken has realised that you are not pregnant. He is angry that he will not have young to carry and nurture.”

“But surely my Dracken knew I wouldn’t get pregnant, I need another mate before I can get pregnant.”

“We know that love, but both of our Dracken sides didn’t. Our Drackens run on instinct and not much else, love. The reason you have only me as a mate currently is because, though we knew otherwise, our Drackens fully believed that we would gain a clutch of children from mating. Your Dracken is angry that I couldn’t give you a child and my Dracken is feeling inferior and useless because I couldn’t give you a child.”

“Oh, Blaise! Please don’t feel like that, I’m sorry I need another mate, I don’t want one.”

Blaise smirked that gorgeous tilt of lips and kissed Harry gently as his mate rolled over so that they were face to face.

“I don’t feel like that, love, but my Dracken does. Again it is purely instinct, you knew we weren’t going to get children, I knew that you needed another mate to get a baby, but our Drackens have only just found out, so give them some time to settle down.”

“I feel like something is missing.” Harry confided softly. “Before this, you were enough, but now there is a small hole inside of me that is craving someone to fill it.”

“That is your Dracken telling you that you need another mate. You will start releasing pheromones to attract the dominants to you again and then you will start calling to them. To minimise the risk of damage or injury we should hold the meeting as soon as possible, in a few days at most.”

“After Christmas though. I want our first Christmas together to be just you and me.”

“Not Christmas, love, Winter solstice. Christmas is a Muggle thing.” Blaise chastised lightly.

“It will always be Christmas to me.” Harry stated stubbornly.

Blaise smiled and pecked Harry’s lips, standing up and pulling Harry into his arms. A bout of unexpected anger towards Blaise had Harry curling away from his mate.

“I’m sorry.” Harry whispered sadly.
“I know, Bello. It isn’t your fault.”

“I want a bath.” Harry decided, suddenly remembering that he hadn’t washed or bathed in ten days. “Join me?”

Blaise smiled lecherously and dragged Harry off to the bathroom wordlessly to ‘bathe’.

Blaise went hunting again for dinner and then again on Christmas morning, his instincts were too close to the surface for him not to hunt, which suited Harry just fine seeing as he had such an enormous craving for raw meat that it was all that he wanted to eat. Blaise said that it was to make up for the weeks of just grains, fruits and vegetables that he’d been eating recently.

Harry finished eating the mare that Blaise had dragged through the castle just for his breakfast and he smiled happily at Blaise. His emotions still hadn’t calmed down and he still had unexpected bouts of anger towards Blaise, his Dracken seeing his inability to give him children as a failure.

Unfortunately Blaise’s Dracken was moping about and was feeling like a failure and nothing Harry did could convince Blaise in Dracken form that he wasn’t a failure, as a result Christmas was spent in their human forms despite having the privacy to be in their Dracken forms.

Harry shyly handed Blaise a beautifully wrapped gift and watched as his mate carefully opened it and rustled the tissue paper inside before locating the gift.

Blaise pulled out a very thick, very heavy and very, very old book. He looked it over carefully noticing that it oddly did not have any title that he could see. It was covered in smooth, but age cracked, brown leather and the pages were very yellow, dry and musty with age.

Blaise carefully opened the top cover of the book and his heart almost stopped at the inscribed letters on the front page. Cægan Æðelræd Bealusearu.

“Harry? Where…where did you even get this?” Blaise whispered reverently.

“I had a hell of a time tracking it down for you. Remember I got you to write it down for me because I couldn’t pronounce it? Well I took that paper into every bookshop, and second hand junk shop, because you never know what you’ll find in those, and I hunted for it for you, because I remember that you said that you really wanted it and that you and your family had been looking for a copy for generations.”
“We agreed on no ridiculously expensive gifts, Harry! This must have cost you not only an arm and a leg, but both arms, both legs and all of your internal organs of yourself and all of your descendants for at least the next ten generations!”

Harry chuckled softly, bordering on a giggle. “It didn’t cost me anything, Blaise. I finally got fed up of hunting and getting nowhere, so I asked the goblins for help when I went to withdraw some money, I told them that I’d had no luck looking for it and they turned around and told me that a copy, this copy, had been sitting untouched in my bank vault for seven hundred years. I already owned it, so it didn’t cost me anything to get for you.”

Blaise mouthed wordlessly, unable to form how much this actually meant to him. “I…thank you, Harry, thank you so much!”

“Thank me by giving me my present before I go stir crazy!” Harry grinned bouncing a bit on the settee he was sitting on.

Blaise smiled so softly and tenderly at him Harry stopped all movement. Surely Blaise couldn’t feel the level of love he was displaying just for him, could he? Did he love Blaise as much as Blaise seemingly loved him?

His Dracken roared and clawed at his chest, saying a firm no. They should hate Blaise for not being strong enough to give them younglings, but that wasn’t Blaise’s fault. He needed more than one mate, he was too strong.

‘I am not too strong, he is too weak!’ A voice hissed in his head that sounded suspiciously like his own. Harry gasped, clutching at his head.

“Harry? Prezioso, are you alright, what is it?”

“My head hurts.”

Blaise held him so gently, run such soft fingers through his hair and pressed such light kisses against his temple that Harry started crying silent tears. Blaise deserved better than him. His own Dracken was rejecting Blaise! On Christmas day no less!

“Innamorato, what is wrong? Why are you crying?” Blaise asked stunned.
“The anger is back.” Harry whispered through his tears.

“Hush now, mio Diletto. We knew this would happen, we knew our Drackens would not be happy that we hadn’t conceived children. It’s alright if you are angry.”

“But I don’t want to be angry with you, Blaise. I love you!”

Blaise smiled and gave him a sweet kiss. “Ti amo, Harry.”

Harry cuddled into Blaise and breathed deeply to calm himself, he didn’t want to hate Blaise or be angry with him. He truly meant it when he told Blaise that he loved him.

Blaise handed him a small, very intricately wrapped box and Harry looked at it, not wanting to open it and destroy the beautiful masterpiece it was.

“It isn’t my chocolate then.” Harry stated with a grin.

“I buy you your favourite chocolate twice a week, innamorato, this gift is special.” Blaise told him, bringing him in for a hug.

“I don’t want to open it.” Harry said softly, before hastening to explain when Blaise looked upset and offended. “It’s too pretty! I don’t want to destroy it.”

Blaise chuckled and did a little wave with his wand before he run it up, down, over and around the little present.

“What did you just do?” Harry asked curiously.

“I took a photo of it, Prezioso. A proper photo, not those silly flat muggle ones, but a moving wizarding one so you will always know what my first Winter solstice present to you looked like.”

Harry hugged Blaise tightly before he carefully opened his present. It was a little blue velvet box and Harry pried the hinges open gently and gasped at the contents.

Sitting nestled in a bed of crushed silk and velvet was the most beautiful bracelet that Harry had ever seen. It was an inch wide and looked more like half a cuff than a bracelet, it would fit snugly against the base of his hand, but it would not cover his ulnar styloid. It was made of solid platinum and had a large emerald in the centre; an emerald that looked so much like his and his Mother’s eyes that it took his breath away. On either side of the emerald was a smaller, but no less beautiful amethyst. They were deep purple in colour, the same colour as Blaise’s wing scales.

“Oh, Blaise I love it!” Harry exclaimed, taking it out of the velvet and silk cushion and he flicked open the clasp. He wrapped it around his wrist and fastened the clasp again, loving how it was tight against his skin, but didn’t cut off his circulation.

There were small carvings on the bracelet, looking so delicate and flimsy that he didn’t want to touch them. They looked like vines wrapping around the bracelet with off-shooting spirals.

“It’s so beautiful, Blaise, but what the hell? You tell me not to give you an expensive gift and here you go giving me this?!”

Blaise grinned. “This is a family heirloom, mio caro. The only thing I spent money on was resizing it to fit your tiny, elfin wrists and changing the gems from diamonds and rubies to emeralds and amethysts.”

Harry grinned as well and hugged Blaise tightly. Blaise unclasped the bracelet when Harry’s head was turned and took it off of his wrist and Harry gasped, pulling back and looking at Blaise with wide eyes.

“You missed the inscription on the inside band, Harry.” Blaise told him, pointing out the elegant, cursive letters on the bottom.

‘Ti penso moltissimo.’

“What does it mean?” Harry asked. He had a very warm feeling from the words.

“I think of you always.” Blaise answered with a smile.

Harry nearly melted as Blaise fastened the bracelet back onto his wrist and kissed the back of his hand gently.
“*Ti amo, Harry. *Ti amo.”

“Tee ammo?” Harry questioned.

Blaise chuckled and pressed his lips to Harry’s temple. “*Ti amo. I love you. I love you deeply, Harry.

Harry smiled happily, ignoring the warmth in his cheeks as he pressed a kiss to Blaise’s soft lips.

---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------

Christmas day was turning out to be one of the happiest that Harry could ever remember. They went down for dinner in the Great Hall, where they found only a few students along with the Professors.

“Harry, my boy, it’s so nice to see that you are feeling better!” Dumbledore cried out jovially, sending him a wink.

“Yes, I felt better a few days ago, Professor, but I didn’t feel up to socialising much and yesterday was when I started to truly feel like myself again, but it being Christmas Eve, I wanted to spend the day with Blaise.”

“Of course you did, my boy. I am glad that you are feeling better, I hope you don’t have a relapse.”

“Madam Pomfrey said that if I did then it would be a small one a few days after I started feeling better, so I suppose if I’m going to relapse it will be any when from now to a couple of days away.”

Blaise sat Harry down before sitting down himself and serving Harry a plateful of food, knowing that Harry and himself had eaten purely raw meat for the past two days. He made sure to put a bit of turkey and chicken onto the plate, before he filled the rest with vegetables and side dishes.

Harry smiled at him and started eating with polite manners that he hadn’t had when he was tearing apart the mare that Blaise had hunted for him. Blaise would rather watch Harry eating the prey he had killed for him.
“Someone said that you had Dragon Pox!” An excitable second year Hufflepuff burst out.

Blaise glared at the little girl and she recoiled, but Harry sent his own glare to Blaise who sniffed and went back to his dinner.

“I didn’t have Dragon pox, but the illness that I did have is contagious through skin to skin contact, so I couldn’t leave my special rooms. Blaise had already caught it from me, so he stayed with me to keep me company.”

“But what about food!” The little girl asked, exuberant as usual now that Harry was talking to her.

“The house elves brought us our meals; they are a different species, so human illnesses don’t affect them.”

“Oh. What was it like?”

Harry went pink cheeked as he remembered the ten days of continuous sex and the pleasure it had brought, the smells and the sounds he and Blaise had made.

“It was pretty boring.” Harry stated lamely.

Blaise’s head snapped to glare at Harry. He leant in close and blew in Harry’s ear.

“I guess I’ll have to up my ante the next time, Prezioso, so that you are not so bored.”

Harry went a furious red in the cheeks and he pushed Blaise away from him. He didn’t need to defend his words. The little girl was twelve; she didn’t need to hear that they had been having non-stop sex for ten days. No one at this table, of age or not, needed to know that they had been having sex at all. It was bad enough that Snape and Dumbledore already knew.

“I hope that you do not relapse, Harry.” Dumbledore stated gravely.
“So do I. I’ve missed enough lessons as it is, but I just have a gut feeling that it’s going to happen.”

“If it happens it happens, Potter.” McGonagall stated. “Just make sure you catch up with all of your work.”

“Don’t worry, Professor, it’s all done and I’m even ahead in certain subjects! Blaise is trying to tutor me with Potions as well.”

“Do try not to blow out one of the castle walls, Potter.” Snape told him.

“I’ll try, Sir, but I can’t make any promises.”

“I think I am competent enough to stop him from blowing out a wall, Professor, but blowing off one of his own hands…” Blaise trailed off with a sigh and Harry nudged him as Dumbledore chuckled merrily.

Harry shook his head and popped a Brussels sprout into his mouth, chewing moodily. He stabbed at his peas and carrots before placing a forkful of mashed potatoes into his mouth and swallowing. He glared at Blaise as his mate laughed at his sulky behaviour.

The dinner passed by amicably and Harry found himself laughing and joking with Blaise and the younger students. Blaise pressed a kiss to his ear and licked it.

“You would make a wonderful Mother, Mio Bello.” Blaise whispered.

Harry smiled happily and snuggled in with Blaise, still spooning Christmas pudding and extra thick double cream into his mouth, giving the odd spoonful to Blaise.

Students began trickling away at eight and Harry yawned against Blaise for the third time in five minutes.

“Come on, Mio amore, let’s get you into bed. You still need to take it easy after your illness.” Blaise told him, standing up and pulling Harry to his feet.

Harry leant heavily on Blaise until they were out of the Great Hall and away from the curious eyes of all those who were left in the Hall. Blaise swept Harry’s legs out and caught him easily, carrying him cautiously up the stairs.

“I can walk!” Harry tried to sound angry, but a huge yawn that almost unhinged his jaw ruined the effect.

“I know.” Blaise soothed gently. “But I want to carry you.”

Harry didn’t have the energy to fight Blaise. He just gave in and let his body relax as he was carried up to their rooms and into their bedroom. Blaise carefully climbed the narrow set of stairs leading up to the ledge that their bed was on and placed him down on it.

Blaise happily undressed Harry, quelling any arguments with a soft, ‘I want to do this for you.’ Leaving Harry undressed, Blaise undressed himself and climbed in next to his ethereal mate, covering them both up and wrapping his arms around Harry’s waist.

“Sogni d’oro, mio amore.” Blaise whispered, kissing Harry’s cheek before settling down to sleep.

--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------- X

Harry was back in his private rooms in the hell hotel. Only this time it was more bearable with Blaise firmly by his side and his chaperone not too far behind them.

There were approximately one hundred and twenty dominants living here, there had been four deaths already from fighting and another several were injured. To be honest Harry was astounded that there wasn’t more than that, but apparently word had gotten around that he didn’t like violence and the dominants were trying to curb themselves, which he was actually grateful for.

“So, Harry.” Elder Trintus stated happily. “Here we are again.”

“Yes, I have no idea how I’m going to choose another dominant from all of these!”

“One submissive once held a gladiator like challenge.” Trintus told him reflectively. “Yes, she made all of the dominants fight each other. The one left standing at the end became her mate.”

Harry was horrified that anyone could be so cruel and heartless.
“So all the others just died?” He asked in absolute disgust.

“Oh no, dear boy! No, we placed up safety measures, a rarity as normally we would let the submissive gain their mate by any means that they see fit, but obviously we couldn’t just cull all the dominants down to one. No, we made a single rule that if you were knocked down for more than three seconds then you were automatically disqualified. It saved many dominants, but there were more than a few casualties and quite a fair few deaths too, despite the safety measures in place.”

“Can I just spend some time with each one?” Harry asked.

“You want to do the interviews again?” Trintus asked.

“Not exactly. I want to be able to walk around with them; I want to see what they are like when they are relaxed and comfortable, not crammed into an overstuffed armchair opposite me. I think some of them were nervous and hid it behind inane nattering.”

“Alright, my dear, let’s get started, after all you cannot be ill for too long or your classmates will get suspicious.”

Harry walked hand in hand with Blaise, who had his wings stretched out to their max, making them seem longer than they were, but he still got dirty looks from the other Drackens, who were flaunting their twenty-five foot wings, clearly telling Blaise that theirs were bigger.

Harry was dismayed to see that Dominic, the presumptuous twat who had burst into his rooms during his last meeting, was standing right in the front with his grandfather.

“Harry, sweet one.” Elder Getus greeted. “I hope you are well.”

“I am, thank you.” Harry replied politely.

“You remember my grandson Dominic.”

The big dominant held his hand out, but Harry didn’t take it. There was a gleam in both of their eyes that he didn’t like. Perhaps they remembered that he had mated with Blaise over a simple handshake and believed that it would work twice in a row. The only problem was that he hadn’t mated with Blaise over a handshake, but a single lick to the back of the neck.

“Yes, I do. I seem to remember telling him to leave and to not come back.” Harry answered coolly.

“I have seen the error of my ways.” Dominic told him, his voice very pompous and insincere.

“Good, but you will still never be my mate. I don’t want you as my mate!”

“Now Harry, it isn’t a choice as such but a need to have the strongest mate possible. Dominic might be the best suited mate for you.”

“He’s not.” Harry replied stubbornly and loudly. There were a few snorts, laughs and titters from the crowd of dominants.

“If we could calm this down a bit.” Elder Trintus boomed. “Harry wishes to get to know all of you in turn; he wishes to see you when you are relaxed and comfortable. You will not be permitted to take Harry away from this house or its grounds, you will not be permitted to be alone with Harry without myself and his first mate, Blaise, present and you are not permitted to touch him at any time.”

“Dominic will be going first.” Elder Getus stated as if it was his god given right and hell did Harry’s temper raise another few notches at that.

It was as if he wasn’t even a person capable of intelligent speech or thought patterns. His white wings, now with their shiny, deep purple scales flared out and he bared his fangs to the elder man and hissed deeply.

“He won’t!” Harry declared harshly. “He won’t even get a fucking turn because I don’t want him anywhere near me!”

“All dominants deserve a fair chance at becoming your mate, Harry.”

“Then why are you pushing your grandson at me? Why does he have to go first for everything? That isn’t fair to the others! What, is he so undesirable and so vile as a person that he needs your help getting him a mate because he can’t get one on his own?”

There were gasps, laughs and surprised snorts after his outburst. Elder Getus and his grandson were not included. They looked angry and offended and Harry did not care in the slightest.

Blaise placed a single hand on the back of his neck, he didn’t squeeze or apply any pressure, it was a warning to calm himself down lest he get himself into trouble.

Harry let his body relax and let his temper cool. He wouldn’t achieve anything by yelling. He knew he didn’t have to go anywhere near Dominic and the Elder knew that as well. Shouting was just giving him a headache and making him grumpy, it would be better if he turned and ignored them both, but ignoring something like that was never Harry’s strongest personality trait.

“I want a list of all the names and ages of the dominants.” Harry told Elder Trintus, before taking Blaise’s hand and storming away to cool down.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Harry estimated that it would take at least an hour, maybe more to get the names and ages of the dominants, enough time for him to work out his frustrations with Blaise, who was very happy to help him.

They were tangled on the carpet of his private rooms before the door had fully closed, kissing and biting at the other’s mouths. Harry’s breath hitched when Blaise moved his mouth down his chin to nibble on his neck.

Blaise squeezed Harry’s sides, moving his hands down to grip at his mate’s hips, before moving them up again to divest Harry of his shirt. Licking a sugar pink nipple, Blaise smirked as Harry yelled out in surprise.

“Blaise, no teasing, please. I just need to get my anger out.” Harry whined.

“As you wish.” Blaise answered, ripping Harry’s trousers from his legs, taking those bright grass green boxer shorts with them.

A knock on the door had Blaise roaring in rage and Harry scrambling to cover himself with something before Elder Trintus cautiously peeked around the door frame.

“I am so sorry!” He gasped as he caught sight of Blaise lying over a near enough naked Harry, who had only just managed to get his boxer shorts over his private bits in time.
“It’s okay.” Harry assured, throwing his arms around Blaise’s neck to stop him from pouncing on the poor elderly Dracken. “Did you want something?”

“I…the list is complete. We took a register at the very first meeting; we have been updating it with every new arrival.”

“Oh. Alright. We’ll be there in a minute.” Harry answered, pretending that he wasn’t laying in his boxer shorts underneath Blaise.

The Elder nodded and left very quickly as Blaise snarled angrily.

“We’ll continue this later, Blaise.” Harry assured him. “Nothing will stop us tonight.”

Blaise sighed and held Harry tightly, running his hands over Harry’s bare skin, squeezing those beautiful thighs possessively, before moving up over Harry’s covered arse and stopping on his lower back.

“Ti amo, Harry.” He stated seriously.

Harry grinned impishly. “Ti amo, Blaise.” He stated back, pronouncing the words carefully and a bit heavily, watching as Blaise smirked in happiness.

“You are learning.”

“I am. You’ll have to teach me more Italian, Blaise. I need to know what you’re saying to me.”

“Anything for you, little love, anything for you.”

Harry chuckled happily and shimmied back into his trousers and buttoned up his shirt.

“Let’s get this over with. I don’t want to be here any longer than necessary.”
Blaise nodded and he wrapped an arm around his shoulders. “Remember that I’ll be with you every step of the way this time, mio amore. If you don’t like one of them, just hide behind me and I’ll protect you with my life.”

Harry shook his head at the declaration, but he didn’t say anything as he walked out of his private rooms and back down to the Dracken common room. There wasn’t anything that he could say and he couldn’t argue either, Blaise would only tell him that he was his dominant and that was how it was supposed to be. Harry sighed silently and he walked, hand in hand with Blaise, to try and find his second, and hopefully last, dominant mate.

Choosing the Second Mate

Chapter Notes

Last Time

Blaise nodded and he wrapped an arm around his shoulders. “Remember that I’ll be with you every step of the way this time, mio amore. If you don’t like one of them, just hide behind me and I’ll protect you with my life.”

Harry shook his head at the declaration, but he didn’t say anything as he walked out of his private rooms and back down to the Dracken common room. There wasn’t anything that he could say and he couldn’t argue either, Blaise would only tell him that he was his dominant and that was how it was supposed to be. Harry sighed silently and he walked, hand in hand with Blaise, to try and find his second, and hopefully last, dominant mate.

Chapter Nine – Choosing The Second Mate

Harry sat in a small, cosy room off of the Dracken common room and he held the thick plastic folder he had been given in his hands and just gawped at the amount of names on the pieces of parchment that it contained.

Name after name was listed, some names he couldn’t even pronounce, some names were so long that they took up three lines of the parchments and others were so common that there were two or three of them reoccurring throughout the list.

The ages next to the names ranged from Drackens in their seventies all the way down to just turned sixteen year olds and Harry couldn’t believe that several sixteen year olds had made their way here from all over the world, most of them alone.

Next to the ages were a colour, or colours, and another number that he had been told were the dominant’s wing colours and sizes, so that he could further identify the more commonly named Drackens so that he didn’t accidentally scratch off the wrong person.

Harry took a quill to Dominic’s name immediately, who was listed under the section for the sixteen year olds, scratching it out with excessive force, much to the amusement of Blaise.

“Calm down, Harry, wait until you see his face and do the same with your claws.” Blaise advised him.

Harry giggled lightly and a bit hysterically and scooted over to cuddle into Blaise. Everything felt so out of his control, he felt like a passenger in his own body, on a rollercoaster with nowhere to go but “My dear, are you well?” Elder Trintus asked concernedly as he saw Harry’s face crumple as if he were about to cry.

“I just… I… why couldn’t Blaise be enough? I don’t want anyone else in my life. I want a family! Not a group of men accosting me and groping me every time I walk into a room. How many is it going to take?”

“I would think that one more dominant will see you with a child, sweet one.” Trintus told him thoughtfully. “But you might need one, maybe two more on top of that to ground your magic and to see to the needs of your Dracken.”

“I only want as many as I need to have a clutch of children!” Harry stated sharply.

“I wouldn’t advise it, my dear. Without an extra dominant to ground you, you may have bouts of irrationality or even very well go insane. I remember one submissive who fancied herself so in love with her first mate that she refused her grounding mate. Then six years down the line she ended up killing all of her children and then, when her lucidity came back to her, she killed herself in the grief of what she had done, leaving her dominant mate to suffer for years before he decided to join them.”

“That’s horrible.” Harry declared, feeling faintly sick at the thought of a Mother killing her children.

Blaise swallowed bitterly and held Harry tightly. He didn’t want to share his mate with anyone, but he didn’t want Harry to kill their children and then himself even more. Nothing else mattered when it came to Harry and his health, even if that did mean that they would have yet another dominant male, or even a female, who would push him out of the frame and claim all of Harry’s attention.

“It is horrible, yes, but that is the fate of a Dracken who refuses their grounding mate.” Trintus said simply.

“Blaise?” Harry questioned timidly.

He remembered very vividly that first meeting in the forest with his first mate, of how vehement Blaise was that he would not be permitted to have a harem or any more dominants than strictly necessary to get him pregnant.
“Discount my harsh words of before, Mio amore.” Blaise said softly, brushing Harry’s cheek with the back of his knuckles. “I did not know before what the Elder has just told us. I would rather add as many dominants as you need than to suffer the loss of you and our children a few years into the future.”

Harry smiled beatifically at him and Blaise felt his heart jolt. He had come to love Harry so very much. How was it possible to fall this deeply in love with someone in just two months?

He was truly amazed that it had only been two months that had passed when it felt like he’d known and loved Harry for an eternity already. A very good, loving eternity that he would live over again and again.

He felt like he knew Harry, really knew him, in the same way that decades old lovers knew the other like the backs of their hands. He wished to spend every minute of every day with Harry, which was probably why he was so jealous of adding in more Drackens to their relationship. It was needed to get the full family that they both wanted and craved, but Blaise still did not like the thought of sharing Harry with anyone.

It wasn’t even a Dracken thing; Blaise thought sourly, he would have been exactly the same had he been born a human. He would not have wanted to share Harry at all, not with anyone. Blaise believed fully that he was taking the news so well because he wasn’t human, because he was a Dracken and it was common for a submissive to have at least two mates, one to get them pregnant and then another one to ground their magic. It was rare to find a submissive that was weak enough to only need the one dominant to impregnate and ground them or a dominant strong enough over the submissive to do both. He would not have coped very well had he and Harry been human and Harry had informed him that he wanted more than one lover.

“Perhaps it would be best, dearest, if you got this over and done with?” Elder Trintus suggested carefully.

He had never seen a submissive so reluctant to take a second mate before, in his decades of experience all submissives craved children, their bodies demanded them, yet here this young, sixteen year old boy sat, looking so miserable that Quintalus just wanted to hold him, rock him and coo at him as if he were his own child.

“I suppose you’re right.” Harry sighed, making no move to untangle himself from Blaise’s lap.

Blaise smiled at the picture of misery that his mate made. He hated that Harry was upset and loathed himself for feeling so smug at Harry’s misery, but he couldn’t stop the pleasure or pride he felt knowing that Harry really didn’t want any more mates. He knew that Harry would get used to them in time and that he would come to love them all, but at this moment in time, Harry wanted him and only him.
Harry stood once again in the absolutely huge common room that held over a hundred unmated, dominant Drackens who were all vying for his attention. Well most of them were anyway and they all seemed to be under the age of thirty. The older dominants were standing in the back, as if they instinctually knew that they had already been discounted, as if they were only here because their instincts demanded that they had to be present for his meeting.

It broke Harry’s heart to see the hopeless and lost expressions that they all tried to hide. They were acting as if they had absolutely no shot whatsoever and Harry swallowed. He hadn’t talked his plan out with Blaise. He didn’t want his mate getting jealous or feel any more inadequate because Harry went looking through the older dominants first, but he had to give them hope that not all submissives were arrogant, stuck up pricks that wouldn’t touch them with a four foot stick just merely because of their age.

“Harry has reviewed all of your names and ages and has now decided that he would like to begin his search for his second mate.” Elder Trintus called out loudly, ensuring that all the dominants in the room heard him. “Harry, are there any deciding factors which would make you completely discount one of these dominants as your mate?”

Harry had known that this question was coming and he looked to Blaise, who didn’t smile, didn’t move his facial muscles, but wrapped him up in his arms comfortably, silently telling him that the floor was all his and that Blaise was behind him one hundred percent in anything that he decided to do.

“Just get on with it!” One of the younger dominants shouted out impatiently. “Get rid of the granddads and start the process already, the waiting is killing me!”

“Who are you?” Harry asked.

“Serif Ribbin. Twenty-three.” The dominant with lush heather coloured, twenty-four foot wings answered proudly.

Harry went down the list of parchments and found Serif on the list, glad that he was the only one so that he didn’t have to spend any more time on him looking for wing colour; Harry took his quill and exaggeratedly scratched out the name.
“Thank you, Serif, you can leave now.”

“What?” He demanded.

“You can leave now. I don’t want a cruel or spiteful man as a mate. Bye bye.”

Blaise smothered a chuckle by pressing his mouth into Harry’s hair. Serif was dragged out forcibly by the reinforcements that had come to protect Harry. The ‘security’ was made up of about eight to ten mated dominants who had agreed to be Harry’s protection for his meetings.

“Right, let’s start looking for my next mate.” Harry stated lackadaisically. “But first things first, if any of you are currently married or have a significant other at home, then you can leave as well, I don’t want to be labelled as a home wrecker, thanks.”

“How do you want to do this?” An older dominant asked from the back.

He looked like a hard man, with slate grey scales and charcoal coloured eyes. His hair was black, but it was thinning and lightening at the temples. He had a few facial scars, the most prominent of which looked like a claw scratch going down his left cheek, most likely put there by a right handed submissive; Harry felt such burning curiosity to ask.

“Who are you?” Harry asked instead and the dominant’s eyes hardened.

Harry had noticed that all the dominants answered with their name and age, like it was a raffle number or a military identity. He held a small pale hand out and smiled softly at the man, who blinked and looked faintly stunned.

“I think I’d like to get to know you first, Arsenio.”

“He’s forty-two, Harry.” Blaise ducked down to whisper in his ear.
“I know, I heard him perfectly well thank you and I don’t care much for ages, Blaise. I love a person for who they are, not for the number of years that they’ve been alive.” Harry whispered back as Arsenio slowly picked his way through the crowd of silent Drackens.

He still looked stunned when he reached the small dais where Harry and Blaise were standing with Elder Trintus, though he tried to hide it. He looked like Harry was about to suddenly call out that he had been joking and that he wanted to get to know a young eighteen year old instead.

“You can’t be serious!” Dominic Getus had found his voice at last. Harry had noticed him mouthing wordlessly for about a minute now.

“I thought that I told you to leave?” Harry stated harshly, looking dispassionately at Dominic.

They were the same age near enough, Dominic was only two weeks older than him, but the difference in their maturity levels was astounding. Harry didn’t know if it was his upbringing, his personality or the knowledge that he would be a parent as soon as he went onto his next heat period with Blaise and his new dominant that made him more mature, but whatever it was that had matured him so much at such a young age, it was missing in Dominic. Dominic who had been spoilt, like so many other Drackens, by his family, most likely from his very birth when his scent would have declared him a Dracken to any other Dracken standing near him.

It was the only time when a Dracken could be identified by their scent before their sixteenth birthday. The scent of a Dracken child was very strong at birth, but it dissipated very quickly thereafter. The scent would be rapidly diluted by the smells of the outside world as quickly as one to three hours after the baby had been born, not to return again until the child’s sixteenth birthday when the genes awoke in the child’s bloodstream and brought out all dormant traits and attributes.

Arsenio reached them on the dais and he gently picked up Harry’s hand, laying one of the softest kisses that Harry had ever felt to the face up, curled palm. Which brought out more questions in Harry’s mind, were older dominants more gentle? Had they learnt to be softer and gentler over time? Was it only the younger dominants who were harsh because they hadn’t fully learnt to control their instincts? Or was this purely something that Arsenio did? So many questions, no answers yet, but Harry found that he would really, really like to find out.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Arsenio really was a kind man, despite his harsh demeanour and appearance. He held Harry’s hand like it was made from spun glass; he didn’t tread on Blaise’s feet and backed off immediately if Blaise growled or hissed at something he did.

They were walking around the Dracken hell hotel, Harry taking advantage of being able to actually explore it this time around now that he had a lot more protection and all the dominants were stuck in the common room. Blaise was on one side of him and Arsenio was on the other, telling him all about Greece, his homeland. Harry found himself wanting to visit the country one day, even if Arsenio didn’t turn out to be his mate.

“How did you get this?” Harry asked, running his fingers lightly over the scar on Arsenio’s cheek, his curiosity finally bubbling over.

Arsenio smirked slightly as he reached up to touch the scar with rough fingers.

“A female submissive who did not like hearing some home truths.” Arsenio answered reminiscently.

“Did it hurt?” Harry asked, fingering the scar delicately, running his fingertips over the healed, but tight, puckered skin.

“It hurt a hell of a lot.” Arsenio answered, standing still and slightly slumped so that Harry could touch his face. “But I have met a lot of submissives like her and you are nothing like the others.”

“So I’ve been told.” Harry answered wryly.

“What did you say to her?” Blaise asked interestedly.

Harry looked over sharply; this was the first time that Blaise had actually taken any interest in another dominant. Did this mean that Blaise liked Arsenio? Or was he just being civil for his sake?

“I just told her the truth, that she was a pampered babyish airhead who would never get a real mate because of the way that she acted. I might have thrown in a few vulgar words here and there, but then I was only twenty-two at the time.”

Blaise chuckled. “I did the same thing with the only other submissive apart from Harry I have met. Miette.”

“Oh, you were there for the Solange meeting in Toulouse then?” Arsenio asked. “I didn’t even have words to say to her, I just left…quickly.”
Blaise chuckled again. “I couldn’t help shouting a few choice words at her, but there were so many other dominants yelling different variants of the same thing that I doubt she heard any of it.”

“Was she really so bad that dominants just left?” Harry asked, looking between the two.

“Oh yes.” Arsenio answered. “She was a real piece of work.”

“I’m almost certain she believed herself to be a Queen or something from the way she was acting,” Blaise added. “She ended up with a sixty-two year old dominant, the only one desperate enough to stay.”

“The rumours that have been circulating are now proving to be true, eleven months in and they still do not have a child.”

“Maybe she needs more than one dominant.” Harry pointed out logically. “If only one was desperate enough to stay…”

“We would have been called back regardless of our feelings towards Miette.” Arsenio answered with a shake of his head. “If she had needed a second dominant, we would have had to have gone to her home again because we left of our own free will; she did not order us away.”

“We’d go back just to leave again.” Blaise muttered darkly.

“How could any Dracken not want a child?” Harry asked. “I can’t wait for my children, I want as many as I’m physically able to produce.”

Blaise chuckled and kissed his temple. “You are adorable, Prezioso. Ti amo.”

Harry grinned happily at Blaise, before giving his attention back to Arsenio, whose giant hand was cradling his own tiny appendage carefully, as if the delicate bird bones in Harry’s hand would snap if he exerted too much pressure, it made Harry feel so very cherished.
The rest of the day passed in a similar fashion. Some of the older dominants weren’t nearly as lovely as Arsenio had been, some were kinder, but harsher with their touches, some were strongly outspoken, but treated him like a little doll. There were some who were so set in their ways that they believed that Harry should be kept locked up in a house with a chain and ball. Harry made sure to put a small X next to their names on the list of names that he was carrying around.

He was making notes next to names and on some he put a little tick, if it got that far then he would go to a second round sort of thing and see if he liked them anymore after a second interview with them and hopefully he would choose a mate from those who were left.

Dominic was being a very spoilt brat, but he wasn’t the only one. Many of the younger dominants were beside themselves in anger that Harry was only paying attention to the older dominants, the so called ‘granddads’ of the Drackens who had come to see him.

“When do we get a turn?” One of the young ones burst out impatiently, but not unkindly, he was bouncing slightly and reminded Harry of a little puppy, a puppy on either a sugar rush or on crack.

Harry smiled kindly and took his hand and pulled him off into the gardens, Blaise following behind at a sedate pace with Elder Trintus. He wasn’t insecure anymore. Harry fully believed that Blaise was now too used to Harry walking around with other dominants to care, but he did feel better knowing that Blaise’s indigo eyes never left his back.

Harry didn’t know whether to laugh or coo at Henley. He was one of only two dominants who were actually younger than himself. The other one was only just younger though, being born on the fourth of August. Henley was his youngest dominant suitor and Harry just wanted to bundle him up and mother him, which probably was a very bad thing seeing as Henley was supposed to be vying to be an equal lover of his with Blaise. He doubted it would work when all he had the urge to do was sit down and read Henley a fairytale story in front of a fire, underneath a thick blanket, perhaps with a mug of hot chocolate and fuck it, that was a really strange urge.

“I hope I’m not boring you.” Henley suddenly said and Harry blinked before he smiled softly.
“You’re not boring me, please carry on.”

“Well my sister’s dominant mate, Georgio, is really tough and he’s really big. He’s huge and he can be scary at times, and I know I’m not big or tough or scary, I really hope you aren’t embarrassed by me being here.”

“Oh, don’t feel like that!” Harry cried out, reaching out to hug Henley, who despite being younger than him, he was taller than him, though he wasn’t nearly as tall as some of the other’s. Harry estimated that he was about five foot ten inches, with a lot of room to grow in the next couple of years, after all Blaise was still growing too.

Henley’s arms wrapped around him and they just held each other. It felt nice, like how you would hold a brother or a son. Harry found he liked it and he cuddled in closer.

“I’m not at all embarrassed about you being here. Dominic however, him I am ashamed to have propositioning me.”

“But he’s the grandson of one of the Elders!” Henley cried. “It’s supposed to be a huge honour to be mated to a family member of an Elder.”

“I don’t care if he’s the Prince of Salem, I’ve told him to leave several times and he’s still here! I don’t want him at all, but he’s ignoring me and won’t leave.”

Henley giggled but then covered his mouth as if he shouldn’t have; Harry smiled encouragingly and took Henley’s hand into his own. It was bigger than his own hand, but not by much, their hands fit together like puzzle pieces.

“So what do you like doing, Henley?”

“I’m still in school so most of my time is taken up with school stuff, but I like playing Quidditch and I like swimming, our school has an indoor hot spring. The school was built over the hot spring so it’s on the ground floor. We don’t have dungeons like Hogwarts does, but I suppose they get really cold in the winter, don’t they? The hot spring keeps the entire ground floor and most of the first floor of our school warm no matter what the season. I guess it’s difficult for you to swim in the lake, it must be icy cold, even in the summer time.”
“I like dipping my feet into it and I like walking around barefoot.” Harry stated hastily as Henley stopped to draw breath.

“I’ve never walked around barefoot outside before, I mean I suppose I did as a little kid, but mum doesn’t like me going out without proper seasonal wear on, I have to have a scarf and gloves, a hat and a jumper in winter, I have to wear a hat, sunglasses and sun cream in summer, that sort of thing. I’m not even allowed to go barefoot on the beach, I have to wear sandals or flip flops. She’s very protective.”

Harry mentally cooed at Henley’s pouted, put out expression. Henley would make an amazing dominant later in life, when he was in his twenties, but for now, he was just a little boy whose dad had dragged him here and whose mum smothered him. Harry supposed it made for good life experience; this was, after all, Henley’s first ever meeting. Then it was Harry’s first meeting as well and he took it as a huge compliment that none of the dominants who had come to vie for him had stormed out on him like Blaise and Arsenio had with Miette.

----------------------------------------------------------- X

Harry looked at the man opposite him with a tilted head. He knew his face from somewhere, he wracked his brains and prodded his mind to remember because it was killing him. Then it came to him as the man fluttered his bright blue wings, those matching, absolutely gorgeous, deep blue eyes glinting mischievously at him from under brown eyebrows. He was the man who had defended him in the fake first meeting.

“Hi.” Harry greeted shyly.

The man grinned easily and shook his hand, before laying two gentle kisses to it.

“Hello. I’m Maximilius Diadesen Maddison. Thirty-one, with the mental age of a twelve year old.”

Harry chuckled at the man and happily accepted the hand that was held out to him.

“I must say congratulations to you for getting under the skin of that little snot Dominic. He hasn’t stopped bragging to everyone whether they’ll listen or not about how he’s going to have you for a mate just because his grandfather is an Elder.”
Harry’s fist clenched before he breathed and smiled.

“He needs to take a serious rain check.” Harry answered seriously. “If he thinks I’ll let him be my mate just because his grandfather is an Elder he needs to open his eyes, and ears, a bit more. I’ve told him to leave several times now and the little fucker is still here!”

Maximilius chuckled deeply and the sound went straight to Harry’s cock via his clenching gut, which made him turn pink cheeked.

“I…um…what do you like doing?” Harry stammered, his face going red as he heard Blaise chuckle from behind him.

“Eating and cooking. I eat a lot of food, so you can guarantee if you accept me as a mate that we’ll be spending quite a bit of time in the kitchen. I really like cooking and I’d be so happy to cook for you and Blaise every day and though it might not seem like it at first glance, I do have a quiet side…a small part of my personality it might be, but it is still there.” Maximilius shrugged a massive shoulder and grinned down at Harry, who was probably just the right height to lick and suck at a nipple.

He blushed deeply and cursed his raunchy thoughts, blaming Elder Trintus for interrupting him and Blaise that morning.

“I like reading in front of fires. I’m not a huge fan of the cold and I’m more reclusive in the winter months.” Maximilius carried on.

“I like sleeping or lying down in front of fires, Blaise is the one who reads in front of them, personally I don’t see how you can read in front of a fire because all it does it make me sleepy.”

“His favourite thing to do is to lay on me as I read, we have a bear fur in front of our fire and if I can’t find Harry, I go looking on the bear fur, because nine times out of ten that’s where he is, sleeping peacefully.” Blaise cut in.

Maximilius threw his head back and laughed. That laugh again went straight to Harry’s cock and he subtly readjusted himself as the two dominants laughed together. He didn’t know what was happening, why did Maximilius’ laugh affect him so much?
“So Maximilius, do you have a job?” He asked, trying to take his mind off of his throbbing erection.

“Oh, fuck no, call me Max, you sound like my Mother.” Max stated with a roguish grin. “I do have a job, I work for a potions company that makes and sells potions to stock hospitals and small chemists all over Britain.”

“You’re a Potions Master?” Harry asked impressed.

“Damn right I am. I worked hard to get my Mastery in potions too, I finally achieved it when I was twenty-six, it isn’t the record, but I’m still one of the youngest to ever do it so young.”

“That’s impressive.” Blaise stated. “It might not be the record but doing a ten year mastery in six years is still an accomplishment.”

“How do you know he started his Mastery at twenty?” Harry asked, fretting that he might have missed something that was said.

Blaise chuckled along with Max, but pressed a reassuring kiss to his cheek.

“I know because a witch or wizard is not allowed to start a Potions Mastery until they are twenty years of age.”

“Oh.” Harry blushed a bit again, but didn’t duck away, he wasn’t ashamed that he didn’t know little titbits like that about the wizarding world, he hated the Dursleys but he wouldn’t be ashamed of how he’d grown up because if he started doing that now then he’d probably break down and go mental, he’d be sharing a room with Lockhart in St Mungos before the end of the week.

“You’re adorable.” Max told him sincerely, bending down to kiss his hair.

Harry was surprised that Blaise actually let him, but his mate was grinning at him and moved over to them to throw an arm over his shoulder, his and Max’s arms crossing on his back.

Harry found hope, perhaps it wouldn’t be so difficult to find a mate that Blaise got on with after all. He seemed to really, really like Max and Harry really, really wasn’t opposed to him. Perhaps things wouldn’t be as bad as he had first thought.
Harry was exhausted at the end of the first day. The dominants had wanted to carry on the meeting throughout the night, but Harry could barely walk through exhaustion, so Blaise had cut through all the dominants arguments and using his authority of being Harry’s first mate, he had taken Harry to bed where he had curled up and snuggled into his pillow.

Blaise had clambered in next to him and had wrapped him up in his arms, holding Harry as he fell into an exhausted sleep.

Blaise stayed awake, thinking about the last day. He had watched Harry interact with all of those dominants; the majority of them men, a handful were women or boys. He saw how Harry acted and it wasn’t what he had expected. Harry didn’t seem interested in them as mates, but more as friends or in the case of the youngest dominant he had even acted parental, dashing Harry’s fears of not being good Mother material. The only two he had been at all receptive to had been Arsenio and Maximilius.

Despite what he had previously been feeling this wasn’t really a good sign. He didn’t want Harry to have another mate, he didn’t want competition to contend with for Harry’s attention, but he wanted children with Harry and that would be impossible without at least one other dominant Dracken. Compromises compromises.

Blaise sighed lightly so that he wouldn’t wake Harry before he settled down to get some sleep, maybe tomorrow would prove more eventful. Harry deserved to have more of a selection for his second mate than just two dominants, because if he did need a grounding mate after this, then he would only have Arsenio and Max to choose from and out of them both, only Max was a good enough fit.

Harry woke up to Blaise nibbling on his collar bone, he laughed softly and run his fingers through Blaise’s thick, soft hair, tugging on it lightly.

“Morning, Mio amore.”

“Morning, Blaise. What time is it?”

“Seven.” Blaise answered distractedly as he licked over the hollow of Harry’s throat.

“Should we get up?” Harry asked before Blaise found a particularly sensitive spot which made him
“Do you want to?”

“Not really.”

Blaise chuckled and stroked firm, yet gentle, fingers down Harry’s sides. Harry giggled, though he would deny it vehemently if ever asked, and he leant up to kiss at Blaise’s lips and chin.

“Are we going to finish what was interrupted yesterday?” Harry asked with a wicked grin, readjusting himself on the bed to make himself as open and sexually alluring as possible.

Not that Harry needed to, Blaise thought to himself with a smirk. Harry had the ability to get him hard with just a look.

Blaise covered Harry with his body and kissed Harry with every ounce of passion and love he held for his mate. He had already gone to tell Elder Trintus that he would be being intimate with his mate this morning and that if he interrupted them this time that he wouldn’t be walking away again.

Grinning as Harry mewed under him, Blaise unbuttoned Harry’s shirt loving the small flush of colour spreading down Harry’s body from his cheeks.

He couldn’t stand it anymore. He just needed a small peak in at the submissive. He wasn’t going to do anything; he just wanted to see him again. He was so beautiful, so delicate looking and his smell was inebriating.

He had cast spells upon himself to keep him from being heard or scented out, he just had to avoid being seen, it wouldn’t be that difficult, he only wanted a small peek after all.

He heard the noises before he came even close to the submissive’s private rooms and he snarled lowly at the sounds of moaning and growling, of skin hitting skin. He hated that another Dracken had gotten to the submissive first. Harry had smelt so pure, so fresh at that first ever meeting. Virginal. Now he wasn’t, the other Dracken had deflowered him, had stripped that pure scent from Harry’s skin.

He reached the door where the sounds were originating from and he pushed it open carefully, for all the notice it got him he could have kicked it in because the two entwined on the bed didn’t notice the door opening or him framed on the threshold.

Sweet, beautiful Harry was laid out on the bed, his long black hair was spread out on the white and gold embroidered bed covers. His white wings, which were now blemished with a deep amethyst colour, were cushioning his back. His long pale legs were wrapped around the other Dracken’s waist and his hands were holding on tightly to the headboard.

The other Dracken, Blair or something as equally unmemorable, was drenched with sweat, vile sweat that was dripping onto sweet Harry’s soft and pale chest. He was leaning over Harry; his hands were placed on either side of Harry’s head so he wouldn’t lose his balance.

The both of them were covered in sweat, Blair pounded into the boy under him steadily, never losing his pace. Sweet, lovable Harry threw back his head screaming the name of the other Dracken, Blaise, as he hit that sweet spot deep inside of him that made him see little white dots dancing in front of his eyes.

He almost snarled when he watched that atrocity Blaise lean down to kiss sweet Harry lovingly. Harry returned Blaise’s kiss in the same loving way, before a loud moan and a gasp broke them apart as Blaise did something with his hips that had Harry tugging on the bars of the headboard.

“More…harder…Blaise…please…oh god…more” Harry breathed out, his legs squeezing around Blaise’s waist tightly, urging him to go faster and deeper.

The vile dark haired Dracken said nothing but he started to thrust even harder than before into delectable little Harry, who looked so beautiful and tantalising stretched out on the bed of white silk.

Harry screamed and arched his back, pressing his chest into Blaise’s who was kissing along Harry’s neck and shoulders, placing small bites and long licks to the ivory white skin, marring it with bright red marks. How dare he bruise and mark Harry!

He was going to step forward, he was going to put an end to this vile display, but he stopped when Blaise wrapped his arms around Harry’s shoulders and shifted into a different position before he pulled Harry off of the bed to sit in his lap. His cock still buried deeply inside little Harry, who shuddered when Blaise’s cock went even deeper inside of him.

Blaise started thrusting into Harry again, but not as forcefully, Harry writhed and mewled and it stopped him dead. Those noises, Merlin those noises would be enough for him to get off on. He made sure not to move, not to make a sound; he didn’t even dare to breathe as he watched Harry experimentally lift himself onto his knees before sliding back down onto the piece of trash that had stolen his innocence.

Harry gasped so loudly, wrapped his arms tightly around Blaise’s neck, how he wished Harry would squeeze tighter and not let go until the other Dracken was dead. Harry repeated his previous actions and then started getting faster and dropping quicker, that vile Dracken’s breath hitched and Harry screamed in pleasure, the sound vibrating down his spine. How he wished that it was him who was causing Harry to scream like that.

“Keep going, Mio Bello.” The thief encouraged as he kissed Harry again, cupping one of Harry’s absolutely gorgeously round, plump bum cheeks in a large hand and he actually had the gall to squeeze it!

He was mesmerised by the sight of that beautiful bum raising and falling onto a cock that wasn’t his own. How he would give his very life to be in the position of the other Dracken right now.

The Dracken, Blaise, leant back with Harry until he was flat on his back on the bedspread, his knees bent and his feet flat on the duvet, his toes touching the pillows where Harry’s little head had previously lain. Sweet Harry was now kneeling on top of the other Dracken, looking a bit unsure and Merlin how he wished he could have that beautiful boy sat astride him.

Harry placed his small, delicate hands on Blaise’s chest and smiled beautifully as he lifted himself up carefully and slowly pushed back down onto Blaise’s cock. He was forced to watch, entranced, as Harry gained more confidence under the sure hands of Blaise, encouraging him with light strokes and soft words of love.

The noises the both of them were making was causing his body to arch in pleasure, his eyes never left Harry’s pleasure flushed face, or that supple, soft looking body moulded with lithe muscles and gorgeous curves.

Blaise moved his own hand and placed it over Harry’s small, but perfectly proportioned cock and he started to stroke it gently, softly, as if playing with something easily broken.

Harry threw his head back and wailed, the gorgeous length of his neck stretched and arched as he continued to fuck himself on Blaise’s cock. Those sinful pink lips let out a loud scream as he came undone, releasing himself onto the other Dracken’s chest and arms.

Growling, Blaise twisted around so that he once again had sweet little Harry pinned to the mattress underneath him and he was on top. He pulled himself out of Harry’s clenching channel before he thrust back into sweet, delectable Harry with a force that had Harry’s tired body arching from the bed, ripping a scream from his raw throat.

The other Dracken continued to brutalise his Harry and it took all of his will power not to pounce and rip the other Dracken off before showing him exactly how delicate submissives should be treated.

He almost screamed in rage when the other Dracken let out a choked moan and started thrusting erratically into Harry, leaning down to seal their lips together in a primal kiss before cumming inside of the exhausted, deliciously sated boy pinned underneath his body.

Blaise carefully pulled himself out of Harry and collapsed on top of him, turning his head to the side and nuzzled the side of Harry’s face, trailing his hand down to the heaving chest. He reached his hand back up to brush back a strand of wild hair that was in his lover’s face.

“Ti amo, Harry. Li amerò per sempre.”

“Ti amo, Blaise.” Harry whispered out softly, his throat sore and his body still not being recovered enough.

The next thing Harry knew, Blaise had disappeared from his side in a flash of orange. The sounds of snarling and ripping had him tiredly propping himself up on an elbow to see Blaise and another Dracken wrestling on the floor.

He yelled out in shock before he snatched up his wand before remembering that Drackens scales reflected offensive spells. Unsure what to do or what he could possibly do in this situation, Harry picked up the pillow lying beside him and he had thrown it before he had even thought things through.

“Stop it right now!” He screamed, his voice cracking twice with the pain it caused his already screamed raw throat.
The other Dracken, who had to have been six foot four and about thirty-eight years old, stopped immediately upon hearing his voice, Blaise however didn’t and with the other Dracken’s attention being on Harry, it was very easy for him to reach over and slice deeply into his exposed, vulnerable throat with four of his claws, digging the fifth claw, the one attached to his thumb, into the other side of the neck to get a cleaner swipe.

Blood spurted everywhere and Harry just sat there with his wide green eyes, blood covering him and everything around him.

“Bl…Blaise.” He called out, his voice quivering.

Blaise was there then, sweeping him up and carrying him off to the bathroom, running the water and submerging the both of them in the pool sized bath which was filling very rapidly.

Blaise washed and caressed him, scrubbing off the blood and Harry let him do so, huddling in Blaise’s arms. Someone had watched them making love, someone had seen them together, had watched one of their most intimate moments, it didn’t matter that he was now dead. It could have easily been the other way around, Blaise could be dead and Harry could have been being raped by an unknown dominant Dracken.

Harry clung to Blaise as if he would fall from the face of the earth if he didn’t. He let Blaise dry him off, let Blaise dress him gently before he was carried carefully in Blaise’s arms, facing the way they were walking because Blaise had taken hold of the dead Dracken and had started dragging him through the hell hotel, the body making a loud, wet thump after every step of the stairs and then they reached their destination. The dining hall which was full of dominant Drackens whose heads snapped up at the heavy scent of blood.

“What is the meaning of this?” Elder Getus demanded, standing up on the other side of the room.

“If anyone, and I mean anyone, tries to take Harry from me, this is what you’ll get.” Blaise hissed threateningly, hauling the dead man up with a show of absolute strength before slamming him onto the dining table, knocking food, plates, bowls and glasses everywhere.

“Harry, are you well dear one?” Elder Trintus asked, scurrying over.

“I’m fine, just a bit shaken up. He…he attacked us as we…as we were…” Harry trailed off with a pink blush and held tighter to Blaise, who was glaring at everyone.

“Well one more off the list is what I say. When are you going to pay me any attention?”
Harry turned his head to stare incredulously at Dominic, who for all the acknowledgement he showed, was acting like there wasn’t a dead body on the table in front of him.

Harry unwrapped his legs from Blaise and stood on the floor, Blaise stooping down to make sure he was actually on the floor before he let go. Harry stalked up to Dominic and stood in front of him, leaning into him.

“What did you just say?” He hissed in a deadly tone.

“When am I going to get my turn?!” Dominic answered back, stressing his words as if he thought Harry was stupid.

Harry reacted purely on instinct and jammed his clenched fist into Dominic’s nose, listening to the satisfying crack as it broke under the pressure.

Letting all of his frustrations out, Harry launched his knee into Dominic’s gut and brought an elbow down on his back, before kicking him repeatedly as he lay curled up on the floor.

Arms wrapped around him and Harry turned immediately, arm up, claws out, ready to swipe out the person’s eyes, only the eyes were a familiar shade of indigo.

Blaise held Harry’s head into the juncture between his neck and shoulder, forcing him to breathe in his scent, which calmed him immediately. Blaise pulled him away from the whimpering Dominic who was being fawned over by his grandfather.

“No one demands anything from me.” Harry told Blaise, but in the stunned silence nearly every Dracken there heard him. “I told him several times that I didn’t want him here and that he was never going to be my mate, I told him and he didn’t leave.”

Harry could see Henley from his position looking over Blaise’s shoulder, his young face was pale and a bit wary, but he grinned to Harry and gave him the double thumbs up, Harry smiled and laughed a bit at him. Henley really was too cute for words.

“I know, mio amore. You can do what you please in this house. He refused to leave even after being rejected, it was within your rights to attack him for his insensitive outburst.”

“Come along, dearest. You need some privacy and some rest while your rooms are cleaned up.” Elder Trintus chided, appearing at his elbow and shooing them into the little room off of the common room, which was opposite the dining hall.
“Am I in trouble?” Harry asked worriedly.

“No dear, no. Your mate has explained that you were within your rights to attack Dominic, just as Blaise was within his rights to attack the Dracken who attacked you. I’m afraid Elder Getus will not see it this way however, he is very fond of Dominic, he is the only one of his grandchildren who inherited his Dracken genes, his own children having been skipped.”

“What will he do?”

“Nothing!” Blaise snarled.

“He can’t do anything, Harry dear, now you just stay here and calm down a bit before we resume the search for your second mate.”

Harry nodded and he cuddled into Blaise, breathing deeply and evenly to calm his racing heart. He could hardly believe what he had just done. He had been so angry that he had just reacted, apparently when he didn’t think things through his Dracken took over and he became violent.

“Harry, are you feeling better?” Elder Trintus came back in to ask a few minutes later.

“Yes, thank you.”

“Alright, dear one. The first dominant off of the remainder of the list wishes to see you.”

Harry stood up with a sigh and taking hold of Blaise’s hand he tugged him out of the room to meet a tall, statuesque woman with jade and teal coloured wings.

“Hello Harry, I am Keeley. Thirty years old.”

“Hi Keeley, this is Blaise.”
Harry watched as Blaise and Keeley shook hands a bit stiffly before the day carried on pretty much the same as yesterday, only Blaise was far less receptive and was very cold towards the other dominants and very possessive of Harry. He hardly let anyone touch him or get close to him and he put himself between Harry and his prospective dominant. These meetings had now taken a turn for the worse because Harry refused to take a dominant mate who Blaise didn’t also like, but Blaise wasn’t giving any of them a chance anymore.

Harry wasn’t getting anywhere, Blaise wasn’t letting any of the other dominants touch him, some he wouldn’t even let near him and it was making everything more stressful and tense.

“Blaise, love, please.” Harry begged as his mate scared away yet another dominant by wrestling with them and with a quick jab to the temple, he had knocked the poor nineteen year old unconscious.

“Perhaps it would benefit you both if we stopped for today.” Elder Trintus sighed.

“It will take too long.” Harry complained. “People will talk and I’ll have to have another heat in two months and I’ll be away for ten days, the longer this takes the more people will become suspicious, I’m just glad that it’s still Christmas break and there are minimal students at Hogwarts to poke around in my business.”

The Elder Dracken sighed and nodded, before going out of the room to see if there were any other Drackens brave enough to come forward. Between Harry’s display of beating up an Elder’s grandson that morning, Blaise presenting the dining hall with a dead body and his continued bad mood it was any wonder that there were any Drackens left to choose from.

Harry heard Blaise suck in a breath and he looked first to his mate and then to where he was looking and his heart stopped and he leant away from the Dracken who was coming towards them in a reaction of pure shock. He was gorgeous with pale alabaster skin, bulky muscles and beautiful silver and pale blue wings. He was blond haired and had silver coloured eyes. Sitting opposite them was none other than Draco Malfoy himself.
Harry was sure that he must have been seeing things, he even rubbed his eyes to make sure, but no, Draco Malfoy was still sitting there. Those silver eyes were still staring at him, those silver and blue wings did not disappear and neither did the matching scales.

“Good afternoon.” Draco greeted politely, but all Harry could do was gawk like an idiot.

“Draco?” Blaise asked questioningly. “I… I didn’t even suspect that you were a Dracken, your smell, the way you acted.”

Draco sighed heavily and ran a hand through that sun kissed white-blond hair.

“I tried to hide what I am.” He said simply and honestly. “I didn’t want to be a Dracken, I still don’t.”
I was hiding what I am with suppression potions, but I don’t know what happened, they stopped working and the Dracken inside of me demanded that I release it. I refused but it clawed its way out anyway.”

“It would have been Harry’s appearance. Nothing can keep a dominant Dracken away from a submissive.” Blaise explained. “Harry calling for a dominant and releasing pheromones would have overridden anything that you were taking to supress your Dracken if you were in close contact with him and with Harry sleeping in the Slytherin dormitories every night…” Blaise trailed off with a shrug.

“Why would you hide yourself?” Harry asked, his eyes on that shirt covered chest, remembering it when it had been bare to his perusal with bunched up muscles and pale, silky skin.

“My parents, Potter. Neither of them are Drackens, I have no inkling as to where my genes came from, but my parents will not be happy about this at all. My Father speaks of little else other than the pure blood of his Heir. If it emerged that I was a creature, not a human, he would disown me at best.”

“You got your genes from your Mother; the Black family is overflowing with Dracken blood.” Blaise informed his blond friend.

“I got my genes from the Black family, my Great-Grandfather Cygnus Black.”

“Cygnus Black is my Great-Great Grandfather. His oldest son, Pollux was my Great-Grandfather.” Draco said a bit awestruck at the revelation.

“Your Great-Grandfather and my Grandmother were brother and sister.” Harry whispered out, he was actually related to Malfoy, it was distant and diluted, but it was still there. “Will that mess with the mating or any children?”

“No.” Blaise told him simply. “Magic is a powerful entity, Harry, as long as Draco isn’t your brother, Father, son, first cousin, Uncle or Nephew there won’t be any problems or repercussions.”

“You boys are talking as if you have already mated.” Elder Trintus pointed out from his seat in the armchair to the side of them.
Harry cocked his head and surveyed Draco. He looked different without the cruel sneer or the harsh lines to his face.

“I need to be sure.” Harry told the Elder. “I won't have my children put in danger of illness or deformity because of my choice in a mate. If anyone poses a risk to my babies, they will be gone before they can blink.”

“You will make a wonderful, yet formidable, Mother, Harry dear.” Trintus told him with a smile. “You are protective of them before you even have enough mates to become pregnant, a very promising sign.”

Harry went pink but he tried as best as he could to ignore the comment that the Elder had just made.

“Is it likely that Draco got his genes from Cygnus Black?”

“It is possibly very likely.” Draco answered. “My parents aren’t Drackens, my Grandfather Cygnus Black wasn’t a Dracken and neither was my Grandmother Druella Rosier. I’m not sure about anything after that.”

“The chart I did to find out where my genes came from named any and all Drackens in my line.” Harry stated. “Only Cygnus Black was a Dracken apart from me, his children Pollux, Cassiopeia, Marius and my Grandmother Dorea weren’t Drackens.

“My Great-Grandfather, Pollux, married Irma Crabbe; the Crabbe’s have absolutely no Dracken blood in them at all.” Draco sighed. “So we must have gotten our Dracken genes from the same place, Harry. May I call you Harry?”

“Sure, as long as I can call you Draco.”

Harry grinned then and chuckled. “Draco the Dracken. Maybe your parents knew all along, Draco is Latin for Dragon right? And Drackens are a race of humanoid dragons.”

“Except I was named after the constellation Draco, like all of the Black family. My Mother wished to honour her roots.”
“Why Draco? Why not another constellation like Vega or Vulpecula?”

Draco’s nose scrunched up in disgust at the names and that pointed chin rose defensively.

“I fully believe that my parents chose my name because it was one of the better sounding constellations that hasn’t been used before in the Black family, not because they thought that I was a humanoid dragon.”

“Why don’t you just ask them? If you become my mate I won’t let you hide who you are.” Harry told him seriously.

“To be honest, Potter I don’t even want to be here. My instincts are screaming at me, I find myself searching for you in a crowd, my eyes are drawn to you, your scent intoxicates me, my Dracken took over my body to bring me here for this meeting and the one before it…”

“You were here for the first meeting? I didn’t see you.” Harry interrupted.

“Because you are blind, Potter. You ran right into me, I just had to hold you after that first contact. I saw the other Drackens running after you, I couldn’t let them get you, you were MINE! I ran with you, then I started flying and you felt so good in my arms, all wrapped around my body. Then I was tackled in mid-air and thrown over the banister of the stairs, my only thought was to protect you, not myself, but you. I landed hard on my back and had all of the air knocked out of my lungs, someone ripped you from my arms but I could barely breathe let alone attempt to protect you.”

“That was me taking what was mine from you.” Blaise answered. “Only I didn’t see it was you, all I saw was someone holding my Harry. I saw a bit of blond hair, a flash of pale blue wing and that was it, I grabbed Harry and ran.”

“Then I escaped from you too and ran to the castle.” Harry lied fluidly giving Blaise a pointed look, reminding him that Elder Trintus was in the room.

“You’re a slippery little bugger when you want to be.” Blaise said affectionately.

Harry blushed twelve shades of red and smacked a hand against Blaise’s thigh. “There is no need for that!”
Blaise chuckled deeply and Harry smiled. He adored Blaise’s laugh.

“I didn’t see your face.” Harry answered Draco. “I felt your body, I remember thinking that you were wider and thicker than Blaise, and taller, but I didn’t bother looking up at your face, I tucked my head under your chin and let you carry me to safety, you were so safe, I knew you wouldn’t hurt me like them.”

“I would not dream of harming you.” Draco told him, sounding a bit put out because of that fact. “My Dracken won’t even allow me to tease you anymore.”

Harry laughed and sent a cheeky wink to Draco. “Blame it all on the Dracken; we all know you love me really. We’re too obsessed with each other not to be.”

“Speak for yourself, Potter!” Draco spat. “I am not obsessed with you!”

“By your own admission your eyes automatically search for me, my scent appeals to you, you can’t leave me alone, even before our inheritances we would intentionally seek the other out. You are obsessed with me.”

Draco went pink with anger and his fists clenched with the need to punish his cheeky submissive. Only Harry wasn’t his…not yet. But he would be, oh most certainly he would be, then he’d be taking the palm of his hand to that pert little bottom and turning its soft paleness into furious red.

Harry was still awake at three in the morning that night. He couldn’t stop thinking about Malfoy. Draco was the third Dracken at Hogwarts, he had told them that he had been forced to tell the Headmaster due to the founding rules of the school and he didn’t want to risk being expelled, but he hadn’t told anyone else.

Harry thought that it was sad that a young man of sixteen couldn’t confide in his own parents for fear of being cast out of the family. He would like to think that if he still had his parents that he would tell them everything from his deepest fears, his highest dreams and his widest aspirations. That Draco couldn’t even tell his parents that he was a Dracken for fear of rejection and disownment, it was sad and for the first time, Harry felt bad for his once school boy nemesis.

Rolling onto his belly and cuddling further into a heavily sleeping Blaise, Harry’s thoughts went a mile a minute. He wanted to help Draco, but how could he? It was for the blond to decide in the end, they were his parents and it was his life, but how Harry wanted to take a stick and beat some sense into the older Malfoys. Draco was their son, their only child, they should love him for who he was and what he aspired to become, not get rid of him the minute that he did something that they didn’t like or approve of, it wasn’t like Draco had chosen to become a Dracken either, it wasn’t like it was a lifestyle choice, it was something completely out of their control. They were born this way and they couldn’t change themselves just to suit other people’s wants or wishes. They were Drackens now for the rest of their lives, the least other people could do was be happy for them and support them as they needed it.

“Harry?” Blaise’s sleepy voice cut through his internal monologuing and Harry turned to look at his drowsy mate.

“I didn’t mean to wake you.” Harry said softly, tucking a piece of Blaise’s sleep tousled hair out of his mate’s eyes, smiling at the adorable sight Blaise made, not that he’d ever insult his dominant by telling him that he looked adorable when he had just woken up.

“Why are you still awake? What’s wrong?” Blaise voice got steadier and deeper as he came into full awareness; his eyes darting around for danger as he pulled Harry into his arms to protect him from the shadows.

“Nothing’s here, Blaise. I can’t sleep because I’m thinking too hard.”

“About what, mio Bello?”

“Draco. I…I can’t believe that anyone’s parents would disown their only son just because he came into an inheritance that he couldn’t control.”

Blaise smoothed Harry’s hair away from his face and kissed that rounded cheek gently. Harry was so thoughtful and caring towards others, he just wished that it didn’t keep his little mate up all night.

“Draco will be fine, love. He’ll work out what’s best for him and he’ll do it. He’s always been the same, we don’t always see eye to eye, but he is one of my friends and I’ve known him for a long time. His birthday is on June the fifth, so he’s had a long time to think about things and he’ll ultimately decide what he wants to do. What Draco Malfoy wants, Draco Malfoy gets, its always been the same.”

“They won’t, but Draco is afraid because there is always the possibility that they could, that his Father could hold his inheritance and his legacy over his head for the rest of his life, that he could use it to get Draco to do as he wishes with the threat of cutting him out of the family if he refuses. Draco will not stand to be manipulated or controlled and it is that that is making him so leery of telling his parents.”

“I could never treat my children that badly, Blaise. Please let us never treat them so badly.”

Blaise leant over and kissed Harry lingeringly. “Of course we will never treat our children so poorly, mio amore. We are Drackens, mates and children are everything to us. Lucius and Narcissa Malfoy are humans; their only thought is to themselves, they have no obligation except those that they choose to have. They do not have instinct screaming in their heads and hearts that they can’t do something they want to, if Narcissa Malfoy wished to stab Draco, she could, if Lucius Malfoy wished to disown his only son, he could, we as Drackens could not, our Dracken sides would not allow us to.”

Harry nodded and his heart squeezed tightly for Draco, who was set up to lose everything if his Father wished it. Could he put a potential mate through that? Could he force them to choose between everything they had ever known and himself? Which would be the better choice, a companion for life or your parents and their legacy?

Harry himself would give up his entire legacy to have his parents back with him, but he knew it was impossible so he would choose a life companion and children, a family of his own, but Draco still had his parents, they were alive and well. How could he possibly make a choice? Would Harry have made a choice if he had been in that position? Would he still have chosen Blaise as a mate if his parents were threatening to cut all ties with him?

“Go to sleep, Bello.” Blaise murmured softly, pulling him down to tuck under his chin. “You are thinking too hard and for no good reason.”

Harry sighed and snuggled into Blaise, wrapping himself completely around his mate, revelling in the love and protection that such an action garnered him. He closed his eyes and evened out his breathing, he needed to get some sleep. He had a second mate to choose and he needed every ounce of brain power he possessed to choose the right one, for himself, for Blaise and most of all, for his second mate too.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Harry sat in the cavernous dining room with Blaise at his side and Elder Trintus sitting near them.
Harry was picking at bits of raw meat, having already eaten his fill, but dominants took in more food than a submissive, so he was patiently waiting for the hundred or so dominants to finish devouring their meat.

Henley had gotten the pride of place sitting the closest to Harry and he was nattering at a mile a minute, Harry listening to him with a wide smile on his face. Henley was just too cute for words sometimes. The way he would constantly swap his cutlery into different hands when he was eating as if even when doing something as normal as eating he couldn’t keep still, how his legs were bouncing against the stone floor, the way his copper brown hair kept dipping into his left eye, causing him to brush it away irritated and with a scowl on that pretty boyish mouth.

Harry was resting his hand on Henley’s arm on the table top, something that the other dominants had picked up on and were not happy about. Harry didn’t care though, Henley needed protection, he needed love and care and confidence. Harry was hoping that having a submissive pay him one-on-one attention with a room full of older, bigger, buffer, stronger dominants would give the little slender sixteen year old the boost that he sorely needed.

“…So can we please?” Henley turned to him; fork stuck in one side of his mouth and those puppy dog eyes, large, wide and imploring. Hell Henley would have made a killer submissive if he wasn’t so bloody tall and likely to get bigger. He had that willowy, gangly, awkward look a teenager gets when they are nowhere near finished growing, both upwards and outwards. Harry didn’t know what it was but Henley looked unfinished, like a painting put down, just waiting for the artist to come back and put in those few final touches to turn it into a masterpiece.

“Sorry Henley, what did you say? I couldn’t hear you over the noise.” Harry told him softly and politely.

“It’s cool if you don’t want to, I’ll understand, but can we remain friends even if you don’t pick me as a mate? Please? I like you.”

Harry smiled widely and pulled Henley into a huge, tight, hug. He heard growls and snarls and an answering roar from Blaise, who knew exactly what was going on as he was close enough to hear their conversation and was warning the other dominants off.

“Of course we can, Henley; I’d love nothing more than to keep in touch with you.”

Henley gave that cheeky, tooth filled smile and Harry had the mental urge to coo at him and pet those copper brown waves. He managed to restrain himself, just, but he really wanted to cuddle Henley up under a blanket in front of a nice warm fire.

“You should avoid the baby dominant.” A voice growled from behind him. “He can’t give you what you need. You need a proper man, one who can make you scream in ecstasy and actually has the balls to get you pregnant.”

Harry glared up at the twenty something dominant who was standing behind him. Henley looked crushed and Harry slid over from his chair until he was sitting on Henley’s lap. Blaise had stood up and was standing between the new dominant and Harry and Henley.

The dominant was tall, not as tall as Maximilius, who at six foot eight was one of, if not the tallest person there, but he was at least six foot four and his burgundy red wings were twenty-four foot long. He was bulky as well, to go with those huge shoulders. He was a thick set man and had a nice body, a very nice body in fact, but that ugly sneer slashed a potentially pretty mouth into something twisted and bitter.

“I would much, much rather have Henley as a mate than you.” Harry snarled, throwing his arms around Henley’s neck and pressing a light kiss to those plump and pouty lips to get his point across.

He had never kissed a potential mate before and he heard the outraged snarls and gasps from the other dominants.

Henley pushed a hand through his hair and gripped the back of his head and pulled Harry’s lips against his own again. This time the kiss changed into something more passionate and with the introduction of Henley’s tongue, Harry melted into that slender, but muscled body.

It wasn’t a bad kiss, Henley was surprisingly a good kisser, not that Harry had much to compare to, but it just couldn’t ignite his blood like a single kiss from Blaise could. Harry had worried for a few seconds before he had leant forward that kissing Henley would be like kissing a son or a brother, but it wasn’t.

Henley wasn’t his son or a brother and his Dracken recognised that now. He didn’t need to Mother Henley, Henley didn’t want another Mother, he wanted a lover, a mate and children of his own. It was something that Harry couldn’t give him, but he could give him confidence, it was the least that he could do for the sweet boy whose Father had dragged him here, away from the rest of his family, just before Christmas.

“Harry dearest? Have you chosen your second mate?” Elder Trintus asked carefully, wary of interrupting two Drackens mating.

“No. I’m not his mate.” Henley answered sadly, though he was smiling that toothy smile. “I don’t think I was ever meant to be with Harry, but I hope that there will be other submissives just like him in the future.”

“You’re such a lovely person, Henley.” Harry answered, cupping that boyishly rounded cheek in his hand. “Don’t ever let anyone change who you are. Not every submissive wants the biggest, buffest or the most violent Dracken as a mate. In fact that last one is a major turn off for me and I’m very likely to run in the opposite direction.”

“I won’t, I don’t want to change anymore. My Dad said I should become whatever the submissive wants me to be, but I’d just be setting myself up to fall won’t I? If the submissive picks me through a lie, then how can they love the real me?”

Harry smiled, he was so proud of Henley, a just turned sixteen year old who had made a discovery that half of the dominants in this room, who were older than he was by years, decades even, hadn’t made in their lifetimes. A submissive didn’t want a false dominant who was only pretending to be something for that particular submissive, Harry himself was holding these interviews and meetings so that he could dig through their masks and find out the people that they really were under the guise that they thought that he wanted to see. He wanted an honest mate, one who didn’t try to hide themselves or didn’t lie to him and fucking hell, he wanted Draco Malfoy, needed him like he needed the blood rushing through his veins, but could he do it? Could he put Draco through hell with his parents just because he wanted the blond as a mate? Did he even have the right to?

Harry endured another four hours of being ‘wooed’ by nameless faceless dominants before he ran into someone who he could actually stand to be near. He was six foot six with jet black wings and deep, yellowish gold scales. His hair was pitch black and his eyes were hazel, but had a curious goldish-green shade to them when the light hit his eyes just right. He wasn’t as obviously muscled as some of the other dominants, he looked more like his muscles came from manual labour rather than weight lifting twenty times his own body weight several times a day but the muscles he did have were solid and compacted until every time he moved those muscles strained under his clothing, like they wanted to break free of their confines, it was an added bonus that he was a nice man as well, if a bit quiet and misunderstood at times.

“Hi, Nasta.” Harry called out.

“Harry.” He greeted with that low, deep rumble.

Nasta Tabrien Delericey was one of the older dominants; he was thirty-six years old and was a man of very few words. At first Harry had thought that perhaps Nasta had a problem with English, but after getting to know the man a bit better and poking and prodding relentlessly he had found out that the man had been born and raised in West Wales and had no problem speaking, writing and reading in several different languages, let alone English. He just didn’t say very much.
“Would you like to sit with me?” Harry asked, indicating the patch of grass next to him by the lake side. True it was the end of December, coming up to January, but Harry couldn’t keep away, the water kept calling him back.

Instead of verbally answering him Nasta took him up on his offer and eased himself down onto the patch of grass that Harry had defrosted with a spell and had warmed up with another.

He reclined back on those solid forearms and gently tugged Harry to lean against him. Nasta was really warm and Harry buried his frosty, red coloured nose into Nasta’s chest and he did the same with his frozen fingers, only he slipped those under Nasta’s shirt and held onto the warm skin of his sides.

A thick, heavy arm draped around his back and tugged him impossibly closer, a large hand moving up and down his back quickly and with a heavy pressure, giving him some friction to warm up his cold body. He hadn’t noticed how cold he actually was before now.

“You will freeze to death one of these days if you aren’t more careful.” Nasta grunted at him, sitting upright and removing his thick, woollen coat before wrapping Harry up in it in a manner that left no room for arguments or protests.

The coat came to Nasta’s calves, but it covered Harry’s feet, but it was so warm and cosy and it smelt like fire and musk, just like Nasta did and Harry inhaled deeply.

He didn’t bother asking Nasta if he was cold wearing just a jumper as Harry had taken his warm coat. The man probably wouldn’t answer or would just give him a look that told him not to be stupid, that of course he wasn’t cold and if he was he wouldn’t care nor accept the coat back.

Harry smiled and pressed a chaste kiss to Nasta’s stubbled cheek. Nasta’s arm tightened around him and pressed the full length of their bodies together. Harry grinned when he thought that if Elder Trintus were here he’d have a heart attack at the position they were in, Nasta reclining back on just one forearm, the other still wrapped around Harry’s back and Harry sat straddling the older dominant’s lap, cuddling close to keep warm.

As it was, Elder Trintus and Elder Getus were trying to control the situation in the common room involving several dominants; it was why Harry was taking a small break outside so he wouldn’t be accidentally hurt in the ‘fray’ going on inside.

Blaise was around though, he had gone to stretch out his muscles, but Harry knew that he wouldn’t have let him out of his sight, wherever Blaise was, he could see them both perfectly and had possibly moved close enough to hear them and react immediately if it was needed, not that it would be needed, but instincts were instincts after all.

“Do you have a job, Nasta?” Harry asked curiously, sometime later as he realised that this was the perfect opportunity to get to know the other man a little better.
“Yes.” Was the deep, immediate reply, but Nasta did not elaborate, Harry wondered if Nasta had a phobia of speaking too much.

“Can I know what it is?” Harry peeked up at the dominant to find those gorgeous hazel eyes, that had taken on a golden hint to match his scales in the weak winter sunlight, were looking down at him with something akin to adoration.

“I work on a dragon reserve back home in Wales.”

Again no more information that what Harry had asked for. Getting information, hell, getting any words from Nasta was like squeezing blood from a stone.

“What sort of dragons do you keep?” Harry tried to keep the man talking.

“Mostly Welsh greens, we can’t have many of the exotic or tropical dragons, they can’t adjust to the unpredictable, fluctuating climate or the wet and windy weather of Wales.”

Nasta’s hand slowed the up and down motion on Harry’s back, but did not stop, turning the movement more into a caress that was both relaxing him and warming his skin under the borrowed coat.

“Do you find it, I don’t know…strange that you’re a humanoid dragon working on a dragon reserve?”

“No. The dragons like me more than the ordinary humans. They listen to me and they never try to hurt me purposefully. I’m less of a threat to them because they understand my instincts and motives better than the unreadable, complex humans.”

That was probably the most that Nasta had ever said in one sentence to him before and Harry rewarded him with another kiss to the cheek, again Nasta’s arm squeezed impossibly tighter and expelled the air from Harry’s lungs, making him laugh huffily.

“I love the way you laugh.” Nasta told him quietly.
“You don’t have to try and crush me to get me to laugh.” Harry replied with a cheeky grin.

The one side of Nasta’s mouth lifted in a smile slash smirk. It’s appearance made Harry’s knees go weak and he was incredibly grateful that he was already sitting down.

They lapsed into the familiar silence that seemed to always be around Nasta, it was a very welcomed change from the noisy, headache inducing dominants that were always squawking and shouting at him or each other in the hell hotel.

Harry must have fallen asleep because the next thing he knew he was being rudely awoken by shouting and growling. He was being held carefully and gently in someone’s arms, both his head and body being protected by a large hand and a thick arm respectively.

Harry looked through the fingers of the hand protecting his head and he sighed as he saw the familiar form of Dominic. That twat just could not take a hint! He was still wearing the plaster on his broken nose and the black eye that Harry had given him was still a dark contrast to his otherwise pale skin.

“Give him to me!” Dominic yelled.

Nasta raised a black eyebrow incredulously and moved to walk around the annoying little bug in front of him, but the boy leapt in front of him.

“I am the grandson of an Elder of our kind! I order you to give him to me!”

“You cannot even protect yourself from a submissive, how do you think you will fare against me, boy?”

“I don’t need to fight you! My grandfather will get rid of you; he has been getting rid of all the dominant threats like you since these meetings started! He is barring every dominant who Harry is showing the slightest bit of interest in from these meetings! They won’t be able to get him as a mate and you’re going to be next!”

Harry held in a gasp of horror as he heard that outburst. He hadn’t seen Arsenio or Maximilius since he had had his one-on-one meeting with them yesterday. They hadn’t shown up for dinner last night either, or breakfast or lunch today. He had thought that maybe they were sleeping or off doing something else, but if they had been barred from entering the hell hotel or the grounds of Hogwarts…oh fuck, Elder Getus was screwing with his mate meetings! It wasn’t any wonder that he couldn’t find a second mate if every dominant he showed the slightest bit of interest in was barred from his meetings!
“That is interfering with a mateship, you and your grandfather, Elder or not, will be killed for this indiscretion. It is one of the most harshly punishable crimes to interfere with a submissive’s mate meetings.”

“A new law has been passed, haven’t you heard? It is now against our laws to kill a mated dominant!” Dominic stated proudly. “Our kind cannot risk the submissive killing herself, or himself in this case, because of the lost chance of more children to boost our numbers.”

“Your grandfather may be mated, but you are not.” Nasta stated coldly.

“I will be. I will be mated to Harry once every other threat has been disposed of!”

“Harry told you last night that he would rather be mateless than be with you.”

“No submissive ever wants to be on their own! That was all talk and bluster, he’ll change his mind in a moment when faced with the reality of a life alone.”

“He will not be alone.” Nasta said with a cruel smile. “He already has his first mate and of course because of the new law, no mated dominant can be killed, we can’t risk Harry killing himself now can we? It might drop our numbers.”

Harry grinned up at Nasta, who saw it and smiled back, but didn’t take his eyes from Dominic. Harry mouthed the word Henley and Nasta’s eyes narrowed.

“What about the baby dominant, Henley? If you are getting rid of all threats, then why is he still here? Harry has shown a real interest in him.”

Dominic snarled. “He wasn’t a real threat until this morning! After that kiss they shared at breakfast. We wanted to get rid of him too, but the kid’s Father is here and when that boy isn’t with Harry he’s with his Father, we can’t get to him, but we will! There will come a time when he’s alone and he’ll be barred too.”

Harry felt his body sag with relief. He didn’t want little Henley hurt just for being friendly. They would never be mates and the both of them knew and understood that now, even more so after the kiss at breakfast.
“You’re despicable. You won’t get away with it. Don’t you think that Harry will notice when all of those he is interested in just disappear? He’s not stupid.”

“Oh he will notice and he will be crushed that all of those that he is interested in have left him for a submissive meeting in Finland, a petite little dark haired girl with impossibly wide brown eyes. Irresistible to all dominants.”

“There isn’t a submissive meeting in Finland; we would have all felt the call.”

“We would have yes, but a submissive wouldn’t feel another submissive calling for dominants.”

“You heinous bastard! You will tear Harry apart with this! You’ll hurt him for no reason, making him think that he’s undesirable and that all those who previously liked him have left him for another submissive!”

“I don’t care as long as I get him as a mate!”

“You don’t care about him at all!” Nasta growled, his black and gold wings vibrating with angry energy.

“He is too powerful to pass up! He is powerful and fertile and his children will be a force to be reckoned with.”

“You loathsome little worm!” Nasta snarled. “How could you think to use a child in such a way?”

“I guess my instincts are broken!” Dominic snarled back and Nasta reared back like he had been hit.

“You’re taking a potion to suppress your instincts, you little fool! Do you know how dangerous that potion is?!”

“My grandfather is controlling my dosage, I will have Harry and our children will be the most sought after in the entire world. Think of it, the child of an Elder of the Drackens and The-Boy-Who-Lived.”
How much do you think one child would auction off for? Five hundred thousand Galleons?"

Both Harry and Nasta were stunned with horror and shock. Harry felt sick right down to his stomach and he could feel the bile trying to force its way out of his throat.

“It will never happen.” Nasta snarled, recovering quickly. “Harry knows your plan.”

“You won’t tell him!” Dominic stated confidently. “You won’t have the time to explain it to him or get him to believe you before my grandfather gets here to bar you from seeing him.”

“I don’t need to tell him.” Nasta stated with a smug smile. “You already have.”

Nasta moved his hand to Harry’s forehead to show Dominic Harry’s wide open, horrified eyes and the sixteen year old dominant screamed in rage. Harry let out the inhuman, high pitched, screeching roar that Blaise had told him was his distress call.

He immediately felt a hundred answering roars from all over the house and Nasta held him tightly, placing his back to the wall as the ante-room they were in before they reached the main part of the house was filled up with dominants in full Dracken form, all of them ready to fight to protect the submissive who had called out for help.

The two Elder’s waded through the sea of dominants to get to the front, Elder Trintus trying to get as close as possible to Harry and Elder Getus standing next to Dominic, a hand on his grandson’s shoulder.

Blaise was there then, snarling at Nasta, flashing his fangs and claws, his eyes brimming with deep anger, betrayal and behind that anger was panic and fear.

“I trusted you with him!” Blaise snarled venomously.

“What is the meaning of this?” Elder Getus yelled over Blaise. “Did you think that you could kidnap the submissive for yourself?! This is unacceptable.”

Harry knew exactly what the man was doing and he wanted to stop it now.

“Blaise!” He cried out, trying to get his dominant on his side, but he just made Blaise even more frantic as his wings twitched and he swayed from side to side, trying to find an opening to kill Nasta and get Harry back.
“I am not trying to kidnap…” Nasta started harshly, but he was cut off.

“Do not speak!” Elder Getus commanded and Harry felt a weight of power with the command.

Nasta’s mouth slammed closed with a hard crack that had to have hurt his teeth, but Harry could check on Nasta once this situation was diffused, preferably immediately.

“You’ll be up to face the Dracken Counsel for this crime! You’ll be put on trial and executed as the Elders see fit! For this heinous indiscretion you, Nasta Tabrien Delericey, are hereby banished from seeing and speaking with the submissive in question, Harry James…”

“NO!” Harry screamed out over the Elder, cutting him off and drowning out his words with his own. “Blaise! No! It’s not Nasta! It’s him!”

Harry pointed to Dominic and Blaise’s entire focus changed immediately. Blaise trusted him implicitly and it made Harry melt a bit inside, but he would savour that trust that his dominant had in him when he had the time to. He could not let Elder Getus banish Nasta like he had Arsenio and Max.

“What is this?” Elder Trintus demanded harshly, his friendly, approachable demeanour changed into something deadly and powerful. This was the reason that he was one of only five Elders chosen to become a submissive chaperone.

“He told us everything!” Harry yelled to make sure that everyone heard him in the quiet room. “He is getting his grandfather to banish everyone that I am showing an interest in! I liked Arsenio, he’s gone! I liked Maximilius, he’s gone! I liked Jensen, he’s disappeared without a trace! I liked Henley, but the only reason he is still here is because he stays with his Father! I really like Nasta; he was next on the list to be barred! He just tried to banish him in front of you all! He isn’t trying to kidnap me at all! He’s trying to save me from that putrid slug who wants to sell my children on the black market to the highest bidder!”

Harry panted for breath in the silence that followed his furious outburst.

“It’s all true.” Nasta said quietly. “Harry and I heard every word, but Getus didn’t realise that Harry was awake and listening, he thought he was just telling me and that I would be gone before I could reveal his plan.”
There was more silence, the kind where people just didn’t know what to say or what to do, before there was an earth shattering roar and Blaise moved quicker than Harry had ever seen him move before. He had leapt upon Dominic, taking them both to the stone floor, and his mate began smashing the back of Dominic’s head into the unyielding stone beneath, shouting at him and snarling.

“How dare you think you can try and sell my children! Even if you somehow mated with Harry do you think that I would just vanish?! That I would agree to let you sell our babies?! Did you?!”

“You wouldn’t have lived long enough to give Harry children!” Dominic spluttered out and Blaise roared again, slamming Dominic’s head into the stone even harder.

“I am no fool! You wouldn’t have been able to kill me if you had hired help!” Blaise spat. Harry had never seen him so upset or enraged before.

“Dominic, how could you have done such a thing?” Elder Getus stated making his voice go low and saddened, Harry saw red.

“Don’t act like you weren’t in on it!” He yelled. “You’re the one who has banished the only dominants that I saw fit as mates and all for nothing! I wouldn’t have picked your grandson if he was the only dominant here! I’d have stayed with Blaise no matter how much it hurt not to have children! I’d rather be on my own for eternity than have your grandson as a mate!”

“You’re making a mistake!” Dominic yelled ignoring the snarl Blaise gave him. “You’re choosing wrong! You’re supposed to go for the young, handsome Drackens with the largest, most colourful wings! Not ugly men old enough to be your Great-Grandfather!”

“They are going to be my mates for life! I can choose whoever the hell I please! Forgive me for wanting a nice, kind dominant who treats me well and will help me raise our children right! Not some pompous, stuck-up jackass who is cruel and harsh and would sell our children for a lousy five hundred thousand Galleons! My children are priceless and they won’t be leaving my nest!”

Harry held his arms out to Draco and Nasta reluctantly, very, very reluctantly, let Harry pass into Draco’s arms. Harry just needed to feel that measure of safety again, like he had when he had been running from the dominants the last time that he had been in this house for a mate meeting.

Harry sniffed a few times before raising his face to Draco’s, who was looking down at him with grey coloured eyes. They had gone the same colour as they had that day in the Slytherin dormitories. They had darkened with something that Harry could now identify, having watched Blaise’s indigo eyes darken in the same way. Lust. Draco was looking at him with eyes that had darkened with lust and arousal.

Lust for him, for his body and it was that which kept his head tilted towards Draco as the huge blond bent down and captured his lips in a searing kiss, making the ultimate choice between his parents and his legacy or having Harry as a life mate. He had chosen Harry.

Harry gasped and wrapped both arms around Draco’s shoulders as Draco’s arms shifted his body until he was plastered to Draco’s front with those large hands holding his thighs in place around a trim waist.

Harry whimpered and flared his white and amethyst wings out, before he wrapped them around Draco to hide their furious, passionate kisses from onlookers. He heard a scream of rage from Dominic, before an answering roar from Blaise cut it off in the middle. He heard Blaise go back to pounding Dominic into the floor, he heard Elder Getus yelling at Blaise to get off of his grandson, he heard Elder Trintus screaming at Elder Getus about misuse of power, corruption and sabotage of a submissive’s mating rites and he heard the hundred or so dominants scream out their displeasure at having missed their chance to get Harry for themselves yet again, but none of it mattered to Harry, who had just claimed his second dominant mate.

Harry whimpered and flared his white and amethyst wings out, before he wrapped them around Draco to hide their furious, passionate kisses from onlookers. He heard a scream of rage from Dominic, before an answering roar from Blaise cut it off in the middle. He heard Blaise go back to pounding Dominic into the floor, he heard Elder Getus yelling at Blaise to get off of his grandson, he heard Elder Trintus screaming at Elder Getus about misuse of power, corruption and sabotage of a submissive’s mating rites and he heard the hundred or so dominants scream out their displeasure at having missed their chance to get Harry for themselves yet again, but none of it mattered to Harry, who had just claimed his second dominant mate.

Chapter Eleven – One was Bliss. Two is Murder.

Harry had been steadfastly assured by Elder Trintus that, former Elder, Justo Getus would be severely punished by the other Elders of the Dracken Counsel, but unfortunately the brand new law that he’d passed couldn’t be reversed because all of the other Elders agreed that it was still a good law to have in effect. So Justo Getus, as a mated dominant, could not be legally executed without the permission of his submissive, who was a truly horrible woman who thought that her Husband had done the exact right thing and that her grandson deserved to have Harry as a mate just for being alive and born the grandson of a, former, Elder. But Justo Getus had suffered the humiliation of being stripped of his Elder title, a very serious, and dishonourable, punishment that was both embarrassing, humiliating and disgracing. It was nothing less than that monster deserved in Harry’s honest opinion.

Dominic was a moot point seeing as the Elders had all agreed to take him back to the Elder Hall and execute him; Blaise however did not like that one bit. He had other plans for the thing that had stated so crassly that he would sell his children on the black market and he had taken Dominic hostage in the dungeons. He had assured Harry that he wouldn’t be in any trouble and would in fact be saving the other Elders the trouble of having to kill Dominic themselves; the Elders didn’t like killing other Drackens if they didn’t have to, like nearly all politicians they didn’t like getting their hands dirty.

Harry was currently buried in a bed that was so filled with pillows and blankets that he barely had room to lay in it. Blaise had made sure that he was comfortable and cozy and warm because he and Draco were going to do some ‘dominant bonding’ by killing Dominic together…slowly.

Harry supposed that he should be happy that his two dominants were seemingly getting along alright; he just wished that they didn’t need to kill a sixteen year old in order to do it.
Sighing Harry snuggled down further in the bed, resting his head on a pillow so soft it had to have been made with cotton wool. He yawned and tried not to think of what Blaise and Draco were doing in the dungeons with Dominic. He shouldn’t care about him anyway after what he and his grandfather had done to him, and what they had been planning on doing with his children. Dominic was going to be executed either way, it didn’t really matter if it was by the Elders’ hands or by Blaise and Draco’s, he was still going to end up dead for what he had tried to do.

Blaise stood in the middle of the dungeon room and he calmly, calculatingly observed the little worm wriggling on the floor. Draco had tied him up with a spell that had conjured silk scarves from his wand tip. Blaise had no doubts that this particular spell was not meant to be used in this way or for this purpose, but it kept the cocky dick from trying to escape from them.

Draco was stalking around the outside of the room, making sure that everything had been covered by the silencing spell and that there were no weapons with which the little twat could hurt them with in the unlikely event that he actually escaped from his silk bonds and tried to defend himself.

“We’re ready.” Draco informed Blaise, sending a sideways glare at the filth as it screamed behind the scarf that they’d stuffed into his mouth.

“I’m wondering now if we should keep it down here overnight. We do have a gorgeous submissive waiting for us upstairs in a bed big enough for three.” Blaise answered, looking to his blond friend, fiercely stabbing out his jealousy. He didn’t want Draco in the bed with him and Harry, but he had no other choice, besides the look on the worm’s face was worth bragging about being in bed with Harry, he could brag as much as he liked down here in present company, as the filth would die soon anyway.

“I would rather get it over with now and not have to bother with him again. He is already cutting into the settling period, you know from experience that Harry will not be able to sleep unless I am near him. It was the same when you first mated with him.” Draco answered carefully, trying not to scream at Zabini that he didn’t want him in the bed with him and Harry. He had to keep reminding himself forcibly that Blaise had mated to Harry first, that Blaise had had first rights to Harry and that he was the intruder. It didn’t do anything to help settle the spoilt little boy inside of himself. He wanted Harry all to himself and that had been impossible right from the start of things.

“True.” Blaise nodded, looking back to the little worm on the floor. “How do we do this then, Draco? Slow and painful or quick and painful.”

“I would say quick and painful, so that I can get to Harry quicker, but he deserves to be punished slowly for daring to think that he could sell a child. Harry’s child.”
“Slow and painful it is then.” Blaise snarled as he imagined Harry’s devastated face if anything had happened to their children.

Dominic screamed again through the scarf and tried to rip apart the bonds; however conjured items were made with magic, so they didn’t break as easily as the normal, store bought product would have done.

“Be quiet you little rat!” Blaise snarled lashing out with a hard kick. “I’m going to enjoy ripping you limb from limb. How dare you think that you could get away with force mating to Harry and then selling our children to some scummy lowlife like you!”

Draco unsheathed his claws and he dug them deeply into Dominic’s calf muscles, stretching them and wiggling them around to cause the maximum amount of pain, ripping through the muscles and tearing the skin without needing to pull his claws out of his legs.

Dominic screamed and screamed through his scarf gag and Draco growled with dissatisfaction.

“Take the gag from his mouth; I want to hear how much pain I’m causing him! I want to hear him screaming and pleading.”

Blaise glared at the bigger blond and he waited a handful of seconds before he did as was asked of him, he was not a submissive, he was not beneath Draco bloody Malfoy.

Dominic screamed continuously when the gag came out of his mouth and Draco grinned, twisting his claws and shoving them in even deeper, the tips of his fingers brushing against the skin on the filth’s leg.

“Don’t make him pass out; I want him awake until he dies.” Blaise snarled.

Draco nodded silently, his jaw clenched to restrain himself from snarling back at being ordered to do anything. Harry came first and he always would, closely followed by any children that he had, for that purpose he had to get along with Zabini, not matter how much he wanted to kill him and be alone with Harry. He already knew that Harry would not appreciate him killing Blaise, or his other prospective mates, no matter how much he actually wanted to. Harry would not want to be with someone who killed everyone he tried to speak to.

The screams that Dominic rewarded their hard work with riled their Drackens up even further as they systematically tortured him, causing the most nerve wracking of pain whilst keeping him conscious and alive.
“I wonder what the tender meat of his belly would taste like.” Draco mused aloud, staring pointedly at the tanned, hairless expanse of pale skin.

“I would bet that he tastes disgusting, after all his insides are black.” Blaise warned from his place stripping the skin from Dominic’s left shin.

Draco hummed in agreement before he took the rat’s right arm and snapped it back at the elbow. The scream was beautiful and it echoed off of the dungeon walls sending shivers up both of their spines.

Dominic vomited through a combination of shock and pain, his body sweating profusely as tears ran down his cheeks.

“That almost went on my two hundred Galleon shoes!” Draco growled as he slammed Dominic’s head into the vomit and used it as an impromptu mop.

“Please! No more!” Dominic croaked out.

“I’m sorry, what was that?!” Blaise demanded. “Real dominants do not beg for their lives! They take their punishment with dignity! Didn’t your Grandfather teach you that or was he too busy filling your head with ways to rape innocent submissives?!”

“How could you even think to sell a defenceless baby?!” Draco carried on. “Do you know what people who buy Dracken babies do to them? They keep them in a tiny cage until they are sixteen. Can you imagine that? Sixteen years in a little cage, being fed just enough to keep you alive!”

“Then once the Dracken comes into their inheritance, they take them out their cage and strap them down onto a table.” Blaise took over. “On their backs first of course, the inside wing scales are much more sensitive than the outside wing scales after all, then they pin the wings down with metal stakes right through the wing bones, can’t have the Dracken retracting their wings now can they?”

“The only thing that is sharp enough and thin enough to remove our scales.” Blaise added in, conjuring a plain chisel and placing it against one of the slightly raised, jade green scales.
He let Dominic feel the cool metal, the sharp edge, before using the palm of his hand he slammed it into the flat bottom of the chisel and he prised off the one scale.

Dominic screamed so loudly that he lost his voice, screaming silently as pain tore itself through his body originating from the point where his scale had once been.

“Do you know why it hurts so much?” Blaise asked conversationally. “It’s because of two reasons. Reason one is that our wings are one of the most sensitive pieces of anatomy that we possess, the inside scales more so, that’s why we get aroused when they’re touched and why we can reach orgasm if they’re stroked just right.”

“Reason two is because each and every scale has at least two to twelve nerve endings inside it, depending on where the scale is located.” Draco cut in, conjuring his own chisel to place on another scale, this one turquoise blue. “Not to mention the amount of blood vessels in them, which is why you are bleeding so heavily from just one missing scale.”

“Which brings us back to what happens to our proverbial Dracken tied down on a table. They will let him or her bleed to death. Can you imagine the slow, painful agony this Dracken would be in? Having each and every scale removed, growing weaker and weaker, screams becoming harsh sobs of pain and choked gasps for air before finally, sweet blackness claims them. They will never wake again. They will bleed to death on this table, surrounded by people who neither care nor lose sleep over it, content that every scale they collect will get them sixteen Galleons, mere pocket change to some.”

“Could you live with that, knowing that that Dracken could have been your own child? Your own flesh and blood! The baby that you sold to them so that they could treat it like a fucking animal and then kill it sixteen years later?!” Draco snarled.

Dominic was snivelling into the floor, not caring that the side of his face was still lying in the pool of his own vomit.

Draco let out an inarticulate roar of rage before slamming the chisel into that bright, turquoise blue scale and tearing it off.

Dominic screeched with utmost pain and threw up again, tears falling faster and mucus dribbling down over his lips, bile trickling from his throat. How he wished for death’s embrace, anything to stop this terrible pain.

“Did you know that our wings are never more sensitive than in the first year of our Dracken lives?” Blaise told the cowering boy on the floor. “You’re still sixteen aren’t you? Not much older than Harry and just slightly younger than Draco here. You are feeling everything that your future children would have felt had we let you live long enough to have them and sell them.”

Blaise pressed the chisel against a pretty teal coloured scale and dug the chisel in slowly, going deeply into the wing before levering it so that the handle went down and the blade of the chisel came up, tearing off another scale as it did so.

“How many scales do you think he has?” Draco asked, putting up a façade of cool, disinterest even as his silver eyes gleamed with excitement. “A hundred thousand maybe? You know if we strip him of his scales we could get one point six million Galleons and if we haggle a bit we could get even more.”

Blaise chuckled darkly and ripped off another scale. “Did you know that the brighter and more pretty the scale the more Galleons we can get? There are some potions that need a certain colour of scale; I can think of three off of the top of my head and two of them need blue scales, something that you are in possession of, worm.”

“It’s something to do with the hormones needed to make the colour.” Draco informed his friend conversationally. “Different chemical hormones in our bodies make different colours that react differently to certain ingredients. I know for certain that orange scales react violently if used in a shrinking solution, the chemicals that make the orange pigment reacts to the bat saliva and turns it into a corrosive acid which then reacts with the foundation ingredients to cause one hell of an explosion.”

“I know yellow and green scales are used in healing potions and look, our vile ‘friend’ here has green scales too. St Mungos will pay through the teeth to get their hands on those.”

“Please, no more! I’ll do anything.” Dominic sobbed.

“Don’t you think that your children would have begged for their lives as well as they were strapped down and put through the same hell that you are now going through? Only you’ve been a pampered prick for sixteen years, not starved, abused and kept in a cage!” Blaise yelled tearing off a green scale at the same time that Draco sawed off a blue one.

“PLEASE!” Dominic screeched.

“No!” Draco hissed. “You would have seen Harry killed for taking his children from him! It would have DESTROYED HIM! All for your selfish gain! He would have begged and pleaded for his babies back, but you would have already sold them to be reared and slaughtered like pigs! You wouldn’t have been able to get them back for him even if you had wanted to!”

Blaise yelled in rage as he heard Draco say that, he had been trying not to think on how Harry would have reacted to learning that his own mate had sold his children and he dreaded the day that Harry found out what would have happened to his defenceless babies had Dominic managed to get his hands on them. How crushed he would be, how sick it would make him to learn the abominable truth.

Seeing red, Blaise ripped off four scales in quick succession, hearing, but not caring, about the screams and pleads that Dominic was emitting. Harry was his sweet, but fiery submissive mate, this thing would have betrayed sweet little Harry in one of the worst possible ways, he would have watched as Harry retreated and withdrew into himself before finally not being able to take the slow, mournful suffering anymore and he would have watched as Harry had killed himself from his overwhelming grief.

This bastard would have caused Harry this unbearable, slow suffering, would have watched and not batted an eyelid over it! All for five hundred thousand Galleons a child.

Roaring again, Blaise stabbed off several scales before throwing away the chisel and sinking his claws into the tender belly of the other dominant, ripping and tearing.

Huge arms encircled his shoulders and just held him as silent tears made wet tracks down his face.
Harry was the most important person in the world to him; just thinking about what Harry would have gone through if this spineless prick’s plan had succeeded caused the blinding rage to set in again and he used both fists to cave in the gurgling Dominic’s rib cage, finally killing the worthless mass of flesh.

Those arms held him tighter and a face pressed against the back of his neck, soft soothing noises coming from the strong throat. Blaise turned around and let himself be emotionally weak, just this once, accepting the comfort from the other dominant that he would be sharing Harry with, that he would share the rest of his life with and share all those precious moments with. He let out all of the pain and anger and sorrow that he felt, the images of a little girl looking just like Harry, but with his wing colouring strapped to a table and screaming and pleading with her captors as they peeled her deep amethyst wing scales off one by one, of Harry sitting in the corner of a dark room, tears marring his beautiful face, a picture of the little girl in his hands and a little pink teddy in the other held closely to his chest, rocking slowly backwards and forwards before picking up the silver knife sitting next to him and plunging it deeply into his own broken heart.

“It will never happen.” Draco assured Blaise, knowing exactly what he was thinking as he was picturing something very similar; only the child that he was seeing looked just like him, with Harry’s stunning emerald eyes.

---------------------------------------------------------------------------------- X

Harry was sitting up in bed when Draco and Blaise finally made it into the bedroom, jogging up the winding stairs to reach the platform that the bed was kept on. They had both stopped off at the Slytherin boys’ dormitory first, so that they could have a quick shower and grab a change of clothes so that they didn’t subject Harry to any unpleasantness unnecessarily.

Harry just looked at them blankly for a moment, before gesturing that they join him in the bed, which they do so after stripping down to their boxer shorts, or in Draco’s case, boxer briefs. Harry snuggled in with a dominant on either side of him, holding him close. He knew what they had done, that their hands were now blood stained with torture, but he found that he didn’t actually care.

He had found out quickly that he hadn’t been able to sleep; he had thought that it might be his conscience beating seven levels of hell out of him for letting his two dominants kill a sixteen year old, but he found that sleep was misting his eyes the moment that he came into contact with his two dominants.

He didn’t care about Dominic, didn’t care that he was dead; in fact he was actually quite glad that he was dead, all he cared about were his two dominants who were holding him so close in the bed that they would now share. At least for a little while because if he really did need a third mate then he was going to need a much bigger bed.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------

All three of them got to sleep in the next day, it still being the Christmas holidays there were no lessons to get up early to prepare for and with Harry knowing the location of the kitchens they didn’t even need to get up for breakfast as they could just go to the kitchens when they wanted to.

Draco was the first one awake and he remained perfectly still as he looked to the flawless face that was turned towards him. Harry truly was beautiful and he felt so privileged to be able to wake up next to him and he hoped to wake up next to him for the rest of their lives.

It was strange, he hadn’t wanted to be a Dracken, he had fought every single step of the way, but now, looking into the finely boned, delicate face of Harry ‘Scar head’ Potter, he realised that he didn’t want to fight anymore. He was perfectly content to lie here and never move if it made the young man sleeping next to him happy.

Unfortunately he couldn’t continue lying next to his little mate for much longer as nature called him urgently to the bathroom, where after he finished his morning business, his vanity called him to bathe and primp himself. He had been bad before, but with the Dracken inheritance and the proud, vanity instincts, he became almost manic with his morning routine and Merlin help anyone who even dared to slight his appearance or clothing.

“Are you going to take all day?” An annoyed sleep slurred voice demanded. “The rest of us mere mortals need the bathroom as well you know!”

Draco’s hand itched to smack his submissive’s arse red raw, but he controlled the urge and instead he unlocked the bathroom door to let Harry shuffle inside and take care of his own business. Draco’s annoyance lessened as he realised just how badly his submissive had needed to take a piss. He wouldn’t be a good dominant if he had made Harry wait for another five minutes. Making him hold in all that urine would have been cruel.

“Come on, Harry; piss for Britain why don’t you.” Blaise teased from the doorway.

“I was going to ask if you wanted to join me in the shower, but now I think I’ll share it with my flannel instead.”

“Oh don’t be like that, Prezioso. You know I was only teasing.” Blaise backtracked.

“Nope. You can have a shower all on your own.” Harry stated as he flushed the toilet, washed his hands before stripping off his boxers and climbing into the shower cubicle.

It was the first time that Draco had seen Harry completely naked and his mouth was bone dry and his muscles twitched to move and go and join him himself, his blood filled cock tenting his black trousers fully agreed with his muscles, if only his brain would regain function so that he would be able to remember how to move his tension filled limbs.

All of that beautiful, silky looking soft skin layered over firm, lithe muscles and such a delectable looking bum, he had to taste it.

“Don’t even think about it.” Blaise growled softly so that Harry wouldn’t hear him over the running water. “If Harry says no, then he means no, got it?!”

“He said no to your company not mine!” Draco growled back.

“He’ll react badly to you, I’m trying to help you here! Harry is very shy and he will not welcome your sudden advances, give him some time to adjust to you first!”

Draco snarled, trying to work out if Zabini was doing this on purpose to block any intimacy that he might have had with his submissive and thus make sure that he had less one-on-one time with Harry or if he actually was trying to help.

Growling angrily Draco stalked towards the bathroom door, but stopped as he reached Blaise.

“If you are lying to me, I will maim you whilst you sleep.”
“Duly noted.” Blaise spat back, watching as Draco walked through the doorway back into the bedroom.

Harry never took very long in the shower and he was in and out within ten minutes. He came out wearing a fluffy white towel and looked so adorable with his messy hair, dripping wet and falling all over his face and neck that Blaise chuckled and kissed a delicate cheek.

“Where did Blondie go?”

“I believe he went back into the bedroom to primp in the mirror we keep beside the wardrobes.”

“I am not primping in the bedroom mirror!” A harsh snarl came from the next room.

“Of course you’re not.” Blaise answered soothingly, whilst rolling his eyes to Harry, who stifled a giggle with his hand.

“If it’s a fight you want, you’ll get it!” Draco stormed into the bathroom and shoved Blaise’s shoulders.

“Stop it!” Harry cried out in horror. The last thing in the world that he wanted was his two dominant mates fighting with each other and over such a little thing as a teasing remark too.

The both of them ignored Harry as they faced off with one another, Blaise furious that Draco had physically manhandled him and Draco’s instincts telling him that he needed to both impress his new submissive and show the other dominant just who was bigger and stronger.

“Stop it now or I swear to god I’ll walk out!” Harry threatened, holding his towel closer.

When neither Draco nor Blaise took any notice of him and continued wrestling around the bathroom floor Harry got angry.

“I’m going to slice up all your clothes and books!” He threatened.
When this still got him no reaction he took a pair of scissors from the bathroom cabinet to cut up their clothes with and walked to the bathroom door. Half way there his Dracken side came out, coaxed out by the fighting dominants and his own anger. As his hair rapidly grew to tumble down his back he got a better idea and he fingered the silky tresses. He wouldn’t miss the hair, it was a pain to brush and keep tidy and it was always in the way. He honestly didn’t know how girls, and some men, could keep their hair this long, but then he supposed that that was why girls were always wearing ponytails, buns, plaits, braids and the like, to keep it from getting in the damned way so much.

The million Galleon question, however, was how much did Draco and Blaise like his long, shiny hair and would they even care if he cut it all off in rebellion?

“I’m going to cut all of my hair off!” He shouted over their snarls and roars and it was then that both of their heads snapped towards him, taking in the long, silky wave of jet black hair and the pair of scissors he had in his hand.

Harry ran and put as many obstacles between them as possible, clenching his hand around the end of the pair of scissors so that even if he fell they wouldn’t hurt him.

He backed into a corner of the common room slash living room and gripped all of his hair in his hand and placed the hair between the blades of the scissors.

Draco and Blaise found him like that, glaring at the both of them with his hair in his hand held tightly to his head and the scissors poised, ready to snip away that beautiful fall of hair.

“Harry, mio diletto, please don’t.” Blaise begged. “I am sorry. I let my instincts take over and I couldn’t pull myself away from them when I heard you shouting, please don’t do this.”

“Your hair is part of your Dracken appeal.” Draco told him and Harry turned his glare onto the blond. “All submissive Drackens have long hair in Dracken form, Harry.”

“I don’t care! I won’t have you fighting! We’re supposed to be a family! How can we be a family if you are always at each other’s throats?! How can I bring a child into this world when you two quarrel and bicker over the smallest things?! What example would that set for our children?!”

“What are you saying?” Blaise asked fearfully.

“You stop acting like kids and learn to love one another! We will be a family or we will never have children! I would never bring a child in this world with you two fighting and shedding blood all over my newborn baby!”
Harry’s rage grew and his hands tightened, cutting into a few strands of hair which fell over his closed fist like wilted flowers.

“Alright, Harry, whatever you want, but please put the scissors down. I’ll try to get on better with Draco, I promise.”

“No! You won’t try at all; you will get on better with each other! You were friends before all of this happened, you can at least be civil to one another in the beginning, but you will love one another before I will bring a baby into this world!”

Both dominants nodded, they just wanted Harry to put the scissors down and Draco, who was unused to Harry’s bouts of rebellion, was growing angry with his submissive. They shouldn’t be having this discussion, they had told him to put the scissors down and he should have damn well listened to them!

“It’s alright, Harry. I promise that Draco and I will work things out, we just need a settling in period to get out all of our bad feelings and then we’ll be fine. It’ll be alright.”

“Just put the damn scissors down already.” Draco snapped, being glared at by both Harry and Blaise for his impatient outburst. “What? Harry is a submissive he should do as he’s told!”

“I am not a doormat!” Harry yelled, his anger flooding his body once more, making him feel shaky as Blaise had been calming him down and edging him away from any drastic actions, but Draco was riling him right back up again. “I will not jump the minute you tell me to! I will not bow to your every command nor crawl around after you like a love sick dog! I’m a submissive Dracken, Draco, I can’t help that I was born a submissive, but all that means to me is that I get to carry our family’s children, other than that there is no difference between us in my eyes! If you carry on like this then you won’t be fucking me and you won’t be getting children until the moon turns neon green! Do you understand me?!”

“And so is Blaise! You have to learn to put up with each other because I will not put one of you before the other! I already love you both the same! I want children with you, but not if every hour of every day is a fucking power struggle between you! I won’t have it!”
“We understand, Harry.” Blaise soothed him gently. “Please put the scissors down.”

Harry sniffed and moved to take the scissors from his hair.

“You’d look awful with short hair in Dracken form anyway.” Draco huffed and just like that Harry saw red.

Putting the scissors back against the base of his skull, Harry let out a small yell of utter frustration and he closed his hand tight, the blades of the scissors easily cutting through his thick fall of hair. He threw the mound of hair onto the carpet and the scissors after them, glaring at Draco who looked a bit shell shocked, staring at the pile of hair, as if he’d never seriously thought that Harry would actually do as he’s threatened to do.

Harry’s head immediately felt lighter without the mass of hair and he fluffed up the remaining hair. It felt nice, he felt more like himself as his hair bounced back into messy tufts of uneven patches as the weight that was holding it straight and neat was taken away. He would have to visit a proper barber to have it evened out and cut neater, but he felt elated.

It didn’t last for long as Draco leapt at him and grabbed him into his arms, dragging him to the settee and sitting on it. He tugged the knot out of the towel that was the only thing that Harry was wearing, the only thing covering his naked body and Harry yelled out, trying to cover himself as the towel came free.

Before he could even scream, shout, cover himself or punch Draco in the nose, he was flipped over Draco’s knee and a hard slap landed on his left bum cheek. Harry found his voice then.

“What the fuck do you think you’re doing?!” He yelled out.

His only answer was an even harder slap to his other bum cheek.

“Stop it!” He screamed, trying to wiggle his hands free, but they were clasped tightly together in one of Draco’s huge hands. He tried rolling off of Draco’s lap, but the hand that continued spanking him just quickly and effectively tugged him back before carrying on with the slaps.

“You are never to disobey your dominant!” Draco breathed harshly bringing his hand down continuously onto Harry’s now flaming red bum. He had been right; it looked even more delicious stained red and covered in his handprints.

It took twelve hard slaps before Harry started crying, twenty slaps before Harry stopped yelling abuse at Draco, twenty-five before he stopped trying to get away, twenty-eight before he started pleading for Draco to stop and thirty-four before he started begging for Blaise.

“I am sorry, Prezioso; it is against the Dracken laws to interfere with a dominant punishing his submissive. It is Draco’s right to punish misbehaviour in any manner in which he chooses.”

“It’s just your luck that I prefer spanking to punish unruly little subs.” Draco growled. “That I love seeing my hand turning your pale, peachy little bottom flame red.”

“Please stop, I’m sorry.” Harry whispered as the continuous, stinging smacks to his arse caused it to throb painfully and the humiliation of being in this position made tears of shame clog his throat.

Draco ignored the soft pleads to stop until Harry stopped begging and just lay on his lap passively, sobbing his heart out.

He petted the beacon red bum and soothed it, feeling the heat radiating from it from at least two inches away from Harry’s skin.

Draco moved Harry until he lay over the arm of the settee, his little sub too docile to move, too humiliated to do anything other than what Draco did for him.

Blaise moved to Harry’s head as soon as the punishment was over, smoothing the butchered hair out of Harry’s red rimmed eyes, brushing the still falling tears off of his cheeks and kissing those red raw lips, from where Harry had bitten into them at the start of the punishment to keep from crying out.

Draco leant down and pressed a loving kiss to one bum cheek before kissing the other, letting his tongue come out to soothe the heated skin, loving the tiny little speckles of pale flesh coloured scales that covered Harry’s skin.

Harry let out a broken sob and just lay there like a weak little kitten and let his dominants do whatever they pleased. He had lost the battle, but he had won the war. He might have a red bum and wouldn’t be able to sit down comfortably for a few hours, but his hair was gone and that was a permanent change. He had cut it and it would take years before it grew back to the length that it had been before and if he had any say in it, he would keep his hair short in both his human and Dracken forms, in his opinion short hair was just better suited to him and regarding his appearance, his opinion was the only one that mattered. No matter how many punishments he had to endure, no matter how many times he had to do this, he would not take any demands or orders that his dominants gave to him lying down. He would stand up for himself and he would fight against them every single time if he had to, until they understood that he was not an animal to be trained and ordered about. He was a person and he demanded the same common decency that all people deserved.

Chapter Twelve - Retribution.

“Come on, Harry, let’s get you to bed.” Blaise said softly, glaring at Draco over Harry’s body.

“I just woke up.” Harry mourned.

“I know, it’ll just be until I can get some salve for you.” Blaise promised him. “Then you can do as you please.”

Blaise gently carried Harry back into their bedroom and up the stairs that were attached to the outside wall and he placed Harry gently into the bed. The sunlight that was coming through the skylight above made Harry’s naked body glow with the harsh light, his scales reflected that light and they looked like little mirrors. Blaise touched a group of them and smiled mirthlessly.

“You just stay here, mio amore. I’ll be back soon.”
Blaise kissed Harry gently and he let his mate stretch out on top of the duvet, basking in the warm sunlight that encased their whole bed, trying not to be distracted by the sight of Harry’s beautiful body.

Harry turned onto his stomach to get more comfortable and Blaise was reminded exactly why he had put Harry to bed at ten in the morning. He held his hand over the burning red bum and he clenched his fists tightly. Draco seriously needed his mind checked by a professional if he thought that he could hit Harry so hard and for so long without any repercussions.

Blaise kissed Harry’s cheek, which was lying on his folded arms on the bed, before he turned and jumped right from the platform, ignoring the stairs, and he landed in a crouch.

“Blaise, are you okay?” Harry’s soft voice called from up on the platform.

“Perfectly fine, Prezioso. Go to sleep or just bask in the sun for a little while. I’ll be back soon.”

It was very fortunate for Harry that he couldn’t see the look on Blaise’s face, or he would never have slept again.

Blaise walked out of the bedroom and softly closed the bedroom door behind him, placing up a hasty silencing charm before storming into the common room and yanking Draco out of his seat, the blond had still sitting where he had cruelly punished Harry for such a small, trivial offence.

“What the hell was that?” Blaise hissed, lashing out and catching Draco’s chin with an uppercut as hard as he could possibly manage. It hurt his knuckles, but damn did that bright red mark look good on Malfoy’s chin.

“I was punishing an unruly submissive!” Draco hissed back defensively. “He shouldn’t have cut his hair! He should have listened to us!”

“He would have listened if you hadn’t opened your huge mouth and shoved your whole foot and half of your leg into it! Harry looks gorgeous no matter what length his hair is! He’d look just as good covered in muck and dressed in a sack with a shaved head! How could you have hit him so hard?! He’s going to be bruised for a week!”

“I didn’t hit him hard!” Draco snapped back.

“His arse is already bruising, Malfoy! Why the hell did you give him forty spanks? That’s an outrageous, excessive number of hits just because he cut his fucking hair!”
“How many do you give him then?! Two or three? That’s not enough to even chastise him!”

“I don’t hit him at all!” Blaise spat. “I squeeze the back of his neck; if he carries on I either squeeze tighter or dig in claws.”

“So digging your claws into his neck is better than spanking him? At least I can’t paralyse him!”

“Yes it is better because I have never so much as bruised him, Draco! My claws have never pierced his skin! The closest I have ever come to hurting him was when I broke his virginity! It isn’t a dominant’s place to hurt any submissive let alone their own!”

Draco looked confused and Blaise sighed and dug his fingernails into the palms of his hands to keep from punching that strong, flawless face again.

“Punishment is fine, Draco, but only if the punishment fits the crime. Harry cutting his hair was a minor offence. Harry has a temper, it won’t be beaten out of him, it’s part of who he is. He also has a very high level of justice and morals, that is just Harry. If you take those things away from him, he wouldn’t be Harry anymore; you cannot punish him so severely for such a small thing as an act of rebellion. He can do what he wants with himself, Draco. He’s still a person!”

“We have to punish the small offences or he won’t learn to obey us when it comes to something serious.”

“He would listen. Harry is not some stupid little pet, Draco, he has a brain and he has his own set of instincts that tell him to listen to us.”

“Then why didn’t those instincts work this morning?”

“Because Harry’s anger over took his natural instincts!” Blaise cried, hoping to Merlin that Draco got this through his skull before he damaged Harry irreparably. “I don’t want a broken submissive for the rest of my life, Draco. I want Harry to remain exactly as he is! If you can’t accept that then I’m going to have to eliminate the threat you pose to my submissive.”

“He’s my submissive as well!”
“But I don’t want to kill his personality or his soul! You need to learn what is acceptable and what isn’t, Draco and quickly. What you did to Harry this morning was not acceptable and if you ever do it again, I’ll step in to stop you. Fuck the laws that prevent it, I’ll take my chances with the Elders!”

Blaise took hold of Draco’s arm and dragged him out of the room.

“What the fuck are you doing?!” Draco yelled.

“I don’t trust you alone with Harry and you need someone else to talk some sense into you, we’re going to Snape, me to get some salve for Harry and you to learn exactly how much is really too much!”

------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Severus was slowly going insane, he was sure of it. Being surrounded by all of these Drackens was bringing back all sorts of memories, instincts and thoughts that he would have rathered remained buried.

Thoughts about his own submissive and his life before he had lost his little mate. He remembered his submissive perfectly, despite there being very few pictures left. That soft black hair and laughing grey eyes, the slight and slender body and that beautiful, confident smile.

Eighteen, his mate had died at just eighteen years of age, two years after becoming a Dracken and only nineteen months after they had mated for the first time. Why?

He asked himself that question every single day, why had his mate died? Why had his mate left their house that day? Why had it been his mate who had died and for what purpose? He had no answers, no one had any answers and it was for that reason that he remained behind. He refused to move on until he knew exactly how his beloved had died and why.

A hammering on the door to his private quarters had him sighing in exasperation, if this was that infernal Ravenclaw with more questions on the essay that he had set for the winter holidays he would throttle her.

He carefully placed the photograph that he had been holding and staring at back onto his mantel piece and scrubbed his face with long, thin, pale hands, before fixing a harsh scowl onto his face and striding towards the door of his rooms.

He had been all set to yell at whoever was on the other side, but he had not expected who was standing on his threshold. The newly mated Blaise Zabini and Draco Malfoy. They were glaring and snarling at each other and Severus sighed, ushering the two boys into his living room and gesturing for them to sit on opposite chairs.
“What is the meaning of this?”

“I need some salve for Harry, Sir.” Blaise told him, his voice tight with anger.

Severus rubbed the bridge of his nose with a forefinger and thumb.

“What for and what happened to the boy?”

“Bruising and because Malfoy hit him too hard!”

That made Severus’ head snap up. He knew the boy had had a second meeting for a second mate, but he had had no idea who had been chosen.

“Why was Mister Malfoy hitting Potter at all?”

“I’m his second mate.” Draco grumbled.

“I had no idea you were a Dracken, Draco. Your Father didn’t mention it to me at all.”

“Because he doesn’t know.” Draco answered, raising his head to send icy eyes at his mentor.

“How could he not know he had an adolescent Dracken in his house all summer?”

“I took the suppression potion for six months; I’d still be taking it if it hadn’t started becoming ineffective.”

Severus blanched and went even paler, making his skin seem grey in colouring.

“You took a suppression potion for six months?” He asked softly, dangerously quietly. “Which
“The one that covers everything, instinct, appearance, actions, I didn’t want to be a Dracken! I thought that if I just kept taking it then everything would be fine.”

“Idiot boy!” Snape snapped, standing up and looming over the form of the boy he saw as a second Godson, whipping out his wand and performing diagnostic checks.

“You should not even be allowed near a submissive!” Snape hissed which perked up Blaise’s interest and got him listening intently to his Godfather. “That potion was designed for temporary use only! It is supposed to be used to hide us from those wishing our kind harm, it isn’t designed to be used for longer than two months, three months at the absolute maximum, you could have killed yourself!”

“What did you do to the boy?” Snape asked, almost dreading the answer.

“I just spanked him.”

“For twenty minutes!” Blaise burst out. “Forty hits and all of them were way too hard!”

Snape closed his eyes and run a hand down his face. “Blaise, the top shelf of the cabinet furthest from the door, the green paste in the round tub. It’ll sooth the skin and heal the bruising. Draco and I need to have a little… chat.”

Blaise nodded and he went to retrieve the paste, sending one last glare to Draco before he left to go and tend to Harry. He wasn’t finished with the blond yet, not by a long shot, after Professor Snape was finished, he’d take his revenge on what was left for his little mate.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Harry couldn’t sleep. He hated the settling in period because no matter how much he didn’t want Draco near him at the moment, he needed the brute to be able to sleep.
Sighing and sitting up, making sure to use his knees and not his burning bum, Harry got up and got dressed. Blaise had told him to stay, but to be honest he didn’t feel like doing anything his dominants told him to do today.

The suddenness of Draco just grabbing him and dragging him around had startled him for those few crucial seconds in which he could have gotten away from the blond; he wouldn’t be taken by surprise again now that he knew how the big brute liked to punish his submissive. Spanking though, really? He never would have thought the blond would lower himself to do something so undignified as to spank anyone.

But now that he knew otherwise and he would damn well make sure that he was ready to fight the next time Draco decided to humiliate him. Punishment he could deal with, being spanked like a naughty toddler he could not, his cheeks burnt as much as his bum every time he thought about it.

Making his way down to the lake, Harry spun around in a circle, loving the frosty air and the clean, pure whiteness of the freshly fallen, crisp snow. Everything seemed muted when snow had fallen, like the blanket muffled out every other noise. It was so quiet and peaceful, especially before lunchtime, which would be when the few occupants left in the castle would converge upon the grounds, building snowmen, making snow angels and the always epic snowball fights.

He grinned as he remembered last year, when he, Fred and George had taken on Ron, Hermione, Seamus and Dean. He, Fred and George had won, mainly because they had cheated by putting one of Fred and George’s inventions, stunning gel, inside the snowballs. They had wrapped the snow around the gel and when it hit bare skin, namely the faces of their poor victims; the unlucky victim was stunned for thirty seconds, allowing them to be pelted with a dozen more snowballs.

Harry sat on a high rock at the edge of the lake, crouched on his feet so his sore bum wouldn’t touch the cold stone, and he looked out over the frozen mass of water. This time last year had been a happy time for him. He had still had his two best friends, he wasn’t a creature whom the Ministry hated and his life had been happy. Yet now he may not have had his two best friends, but Voldemort was gone, he had a mate whom adored him and whom he adored back, he had another mate who he loved, but at the moment disliked, and he was content with his life and he was so much happier now than he ever had been before. He actually had a future, that future may have only been having mates and children, but really, that was all he needed, it was what he wanted. A family.

Arms wrapped around him and a nose nuzzled into his hair. Harry started and looked up at the person touching him, only to relax as he realised that it was only Nasta.

“You scared me.” Harry told the dominant Dracken.

“Sorry.” Nasta replied shortly, but sincerely as he rubbed his nose against Harry’s cheek.

Nasta tried to pull Harry back gently, so that he was sitting down properly, but Harry went down on his knees instead, not willing to let his bum hurt more than it already did. Maybe he should have stayed in bed until Blaise got back with that salve after all.

“You are in pain.” Nasta told him, not asking, knowing.
Harry stayed quiet, but so did Nasta and the older Dracken had a lot more practice at being silent than Harry did and he finally broke after fifteen minutes of straight, oppressing silence.

“My new dominant, Draco, punished me because I cut my hair when he told me not to.”

“He should not have punished you so much that you feel any pain. It is not a dominant’s place to hurt their submissive, not even through punishment.” Nasta told him seriously, those hazel eyes flecked with a light, sage green in the dim, weak winter sunlight. There wasn’t enough light for those eyes to go golden like the scales on his wings, but Harry would bet that those eyes looked gorgeous in the summer sunlight.

“But I cut my hair when he said not to.”

Nasta snorted softly in amusement. “All submissives push their new dominants, it is a way to test their boundaries and find out what they can do and what will cause them to be punished. For example if you were to dance around naked I would find it terribly amusing, yet I know certain dominants would punish you for it, they would see your body as being theirs, not for anyone else’s eyes. It is usually younger dominants who would cover you up in jealousy and possessiveness and punish you for bearing all, most of us older dominants would laugh. We are more secure in ourselves, more secure in our mateships and in the knowledge that our submissive is ours and will not stray from us. Each dominant will see your actions differently; there were many who believed that you should have been punished for what you did to Dominic in the dining room as they are of the belief that you should have let your dominant mate handle the defence of yourself, to them a submissive fighting for themselves is a turn off to them. I however thought that you looked just as sexy beating the shit out of him as you always do.”

Harry grinned at Nasta, who was opening up to him more and saying more to him. That last bout of speech was more than Harry had ever heard him say put together.

“I don’t know what to comment on.” Harry answered with a naughty grin. “That you think me beating the hell out of someone is a turn on or that you want to watch me dance around naked.”

“I…that is not what I meant.” Nasta told him, his cheeks turning a telling shade of red.

Harry laughed and forgot for one moment that his bum had been slapped raw. He turned around to face Nasta and sat heavily on the rock on his bum.
Harry yelped and scrambled to get off his bum, slipping and sliding over the rock as pain danced through his lower body.

Nasta lifted him up easily with an arm around his back and his other hand hovered over his arse.

“I can feel the heat from here, through your clothes, how hard did he actually hit you?” Nasta demanded furiously.

Harry had never seen the calm, reserved, near silent man this angry before, not even when he had faced Dominic saying all of those disgusting things about what he wanted to do to Harry and his future children.

“It…it wasn’t that hard!” Harry defended poorly. “It’s nothing.”

“Harry, are your dominants abusing you?” Nasta asked him seriously, his deep voice dropping down to a low, growling bass.

“No!” Harry replied quickly and sharply, remembering how the Dursleys used to treat him. That was abuse. Starving him, beating him until he could barely breathe and keeping him in a cupboard for eleven years. That was abuse, not a bloody spanking, not matter how sore his arse was at the moment.

Nasta just looked at him before lifting one of those muscled arms to his mouth and biting down, he pressed the bloody part of his arm to Harry’s mouth and Harry looked at him horrified.

“Such a look.” Nasta told him with a hint of wry amusement. “Dracken blood has healing properties, just take a bit and you won’t feel the pain anymore, the bruising will remain however as I am not your dominant mate. Your mate’s blood would work much better, but any Dracken blood will do in a pinch.”

“Why didn’t Blaise know of this?” Harry asked suspiciously.

“He is still a young dominant, Harry, he is only a year old. I have been a Dracken for twenty-one years this February.”

“You’re birthday is in February?”
“Yes, the third. I’ll be thirty-seven.”

Harry smiled and he carefully flicked his tongue out to taste the blood dribbling down Nasta’s arm. It tasted like blood at first, nothing special. Coppery and metallic, like sucking on pennies, but there was a very subtle hint of power in the blood, was it to do with magic or the Dracken? He didn’t know, he hardly went up to people and asked to taste their blood.

Harry licked gently against the teeth marks and smiled as his bum started to go numb and the almost forgotten pain in his fist (left over from battering Dominic.) began to fade away too. He felt so much better and overall stronger and healthier now.

“The next time you are injured or hurt, just ask your dominant for a bit of blood, you don’t even need a lot, just a few mouthfuls. They need to get used to it anyway, you will be biting holes in them with your fangs when you are pregnant.”

“Why?” Harry asked slightly alarmed at hearing that.

“When pregnant you will need to feed from your dominants bodily liquids to keep your growing babies healthy and strong, this includes blood, saliva, semen and sweat.” Nasta told him.

Harry’s mind jolted back to the book that he had read when he had first found out that he was a Dracken.

‘It is believed that in order to keep the offspring healthy and growing strongly the dominant Dracken will need to share his liquids with his submissive. He will do this by kissing his mate to share his saliva, touching to share his sweat, ejaculating into his mate to give his semen and feeding his blood to his mate and child.’

Holy fuck was this pregnancy going to be complicated! It was then that Harry thought to ask Nasta about how he would give birth, surely after over twenty years of being a Dracken Nasta would know?

“How?”

The older Dracken just looked at him, not saying anything, but giving him his full, undivided attention to prompt him on.
“Do you know how I’ll give birth? Blaise doesn’t know and Draco doesn’t even want to be a Dracken, so I doubt he’ll know.”

“With male submissives it is harder. It will take all of your strength and energy, Harry and your mates need to be ready to get to you as soon as possible.”

“But you know how?”

“Yes.” Nasta remained silent for so long that Harry was about to prod him to tell him when he started speaking again. “You will essentially give yourself a caesarean section, Harry. You will be in Dracken form and you will use your claws to slit open your abdomen and the walls of your womb and you will pull your baby out. You will need to have a flask of some sort with one, or all, of your dominants’ blood in it because as soon as the baby is out, the cord is cut and the placenta is removed, you need to drain it before you bleed to death or get an infection.”

Harry gaped at Nasta and silently begged him to tell him that he had been joking.

“I…I can’t do that!” He squeaked, coughing to cover up the fact that he had squeaked, but the amused smirk told him that Nasta had heard it.

“You can do it. It’s a natural instinct mixed with a lot of common sense.”

“There! I can’t do it; I’ve been told a million times that I have no common sense to speak of!”

Nasta shook his head at how adorable the little submissive was and took him into his arms.

“You can do it. The common sense bit is just drinking every drop of your dominants’ blood, making sure the baby is actually breathing and safe in the nest and pulling out the placenta.”

“Ergh, I have to pull bits out of me, that just doesn’t seem right.”

Nasta chuckled and pressed a soft kiss to Harry’s forehead. “I am sure you will do just fine, every submissive has misgivings about their first pregnancy, it gets easier the more clutches you have.”

“I’m going to be scarred something terrible if I have to keep slicing myself open.”

Nasta shook his head. “Dracken blood will get rid of all scar tissue if you take it quickly enough. Now little Harry, tell me which dominant bruised you, I would assume that it is your new one, your first dominant did not seem the type to hurt you so.”

“It was Draco, but he only spanked me.” Harry assured, then realised what he had admitted to and went red with embarrassment.

“Some dominants prefer spanking; personally I have never found it appealing.”

“How would you punish me?” Harry asked, before blushing a brighter red.

Nasta’s hazel eyes sparkled and he ran gentle fingertips over Harry’s cheek. “It would depend on what you had done little submissive, but I am a biting sort of guy. I would press my teeth against the inside of your wrist, then if you carried on I would bite down, not enough to break the skin, but enough for a brief spark of pain, if you still carried on after that, then I would bring out my fangs and they would pinch your skin. No dominant, not a single one, has the right to make his submissive bleed or feel excessive pain, there are strict laws against it.”

“What do you mean laws against it? Could Draco get into trouble? I don’t think he knows of the laws.”

“Then he needs to be taught by someone who does know the laws. He could get into very serious trouble had he made you bleed. Submissive blood is even more precious than dominant blood. That he has hit you hard enough to bruise is also an offence. It is against the laws lain down to protect the submissive mate from abusive dominant mates.”

“It wasn’t really abuse, Nasta, he just hit me a bit too hard.” Harry replied softly. “Blaise thinks it’s because he was taking a suppression potion.”

“He was taking a suppression potion?” Nasta asked seriously. “For how long?”
“I…about six months.”

“He should not be near you.” Nasta stated furiously. “It will take him a while to come back into himself after being under a suppression potion for so long. No wonder he hit you so hard, he most likely does not know how hard he hit you or how much it was hurting you. His instincts will be skewed and he will be unable to judge his actions, or yours, properly.”

“So it was an accident?” Harry asked a slight hope in his heart.

“If it is true that he has been under that suppression potion for so long then most likely yes, it was an accident, but that is no excuse! He should never have hit you in the first place!”

“It’s alright. If it was a onetime thing, then I can deal with it. If he starts doing it regularly or hitting me any other way, I’ll skin him alive.”

Nasta smiled at him, those perfectly white teeth glinting. No wonder he had a teeth fetish. If Harry had teeth as white as that then he’d be biting everything in sight as well. Alas he drank far too much tea to ever have teeth so white without bleaching them and he wasn’t that vain.

“At least I know you don’t drink coffee.” Harry mumbled, bringing up a little finger to push Nasta’s top lip away from his teeth so that he could glare at their pearly whiteness.

Nasta laughed and pulled him into a hug. “I drink pure fruit juices or green tea, I always have. My Father would have locked me in my bedroom if he even thought that I had drank coffee when I was a teenager and now, I just don’t like the taste of it, it’s too bitter for my tongue.”

Harry smiled a bit sadly. “I’ve never really had anyone to care whether I drank it or not.”

Nasta’s eyes narrowed at that comment, but he said nothing. It wasn’t his place, Harry didn’t even know him all that well, but he would keep an eye, and an ear, out for Harry and if he found out that anyone was abusing the little submissive, he’d kill them, quickly and simply. It would be an elimination job only.

“Are all the other dominants back yet?” Harry asked curiously. “The ones that Elder Getus sent away.”
“Many of them believed that their chance was gone so they went home to wallow, it will take them a while to get back depending on where they are coming from, but some have come back.”

Harry smiled. “I’m glad. They deserve just as much of a chance as everyone else!”

Nasta cupped Harry’s small face in his large hands and he pressed their lips together gently. “You are too kind, Harry. Many of those dominants do not deserve you and would not treat you properly.”

“I’ll weed them out.” Harry told him surely. “I don’t go into these things half-cocked and Blaise is happy to help me and I’m sure with how jealous Draco is showing that he is that more than half of them will scatter or be beaten to a pulp.”

“You don’t like violence.” Nasta stated, playing with Harry’s messy tufts of black hair.

“I know I don’t, but Draco does. He seems to be channelling the violence and vanity instincts more than any other, I’m not sure if that’s the fault of the suppression potion or not.”

“It is. His instincts will be all over the place until the potion is completely out of his system. That he has been taking it for so long is a cause for concern, it could have lain down deposits in his soft tissues.”

Harry sighed and leant into Nasta, letting the older man hold him and calm him. He wished that Blaise was there, Blaise’s cuddles were the best, he had just the right amount of muscle, just the right height and knew just how much pressure Harry liked, squeezy tight, but not enough to make him feel crushed or suffocated. No one else seemed to be able to hug him like Blaise.

“Harry!”

Speak of the devil and he shall appear, Harry thought wryly as he looked to see Blaise charging through the snowy grounds towards him.

“Harry, why did you leave our rooms?” Blaise demanded as he reached them, swiping him from the rock and from Nasta’s arms to hold him.
“I needed to get away to clear my head.” Harry answered.

Blaise sighed but he nodded, holding Harry tightly. Merlin, how much fear and panic had he been in when he had realised that Harry wasn’t in their rooms? He had thought that his heart had stopped beating, thoughts and horrific scenarios going through his mind as he thought what could have happened to his little mate.

“I was so worried about you, Mio Bello! Please don’t do that to me again.”

“Where is Draco?” Harry asked more than a little bit wary.

“He is with Professor Snape, learning exactly how a dominant should treat a submissive, what he did to you this morning was unacceptable, Prezioso, never let anyone treat you like that, ever.”

“Oh don’t worry, Draco’s going to get payback for what he did to me, no one spanks me like that and gets away with it! I was thinking about turning that cologne he likes so much into skunk liquid, that and I was hoping to have sex with you with him lying next to us. That will teach him not to mess with me!”

Blaise shook his head as Nasta chuckled beside them.

“The latter is very evil, Harry, besides I think between myself and Professor Snape, Draco will be sufficiently punished.”

“You don’t understand, Blaise! He humiliated me! I am not a naughty toddler! I deserve the same amount of respect as any adult! I am not pranking him because he hurt me; I’m doing it to make myself feel better about being humiliated by him.”

Blaise nodded. “That is fair enough, Bello, if you need any help, just ask for it. Now let’s get you back inside, you are freezing cold and I have the salve for you.”

Harry nodded his acceptance and waved goodbye to Nasta, who smiled at him and jumped up onto the rock he had been sitting on and waved to him, before turning to face the lake so that he could brood in perfect silence.
Harry was once again lying on his huge bed having his bum smoothed by Blaise’s hand, applying the green paste to the bruised parts of his bum. He had told Blaise about Nasta giving him his blood and Blaise had smacked his head with a hand.

“I should have remembered that! Hell I was told enough times! I’m so sorry, Harry.”

“That’s alright. I also found out from Nasta how I’m going to give birth. I’ll cut myself open with my claws and pull the baby free.”

Blaise went white under his tanned skin and he kissed the base of Harry’s spine.

“I think that would be unbearable to hear.” Blaise whispered into the skin of his back. “I am glad I will not be allowed near you enough to see it. I would likely lose my mind.”

“I’ll need a flask of your blood as well, to heal the split once the baby is out.”

“I’ll make sure to make one up every day for you, just in case you go into labour early.”

Harry smiled and turned to look over his shoulder at Blaise, who leant forward and kissed him deeply, lovingly, passionately.

“No sex for a few days, Harry, not with your bottom so injured. Professor Snape’s orders.”

Harry sighed and nodded unhappily. “I’m going to go change Draco’s cologne. No one will want to go near him then.”

Blaise chuckled. “He can’t even punish you for it, Bello. He won’t know for definite it was you and this isn’t even worth a punishment.”
Harry grinned wider and he hugged Blaise before scooping up his wand and jogging naked to the bathroom, where Draco’s cologne had been placed in the wall cabinet over the sink. He opened it and sniffed deeply. It really was a nice cologne, spices and slightly musky with a hint of sandalwood. He grinned; Draco loved this cologne and put it on every morning. He waved his wand over the bottle and inhaled again. He almost vomited and quickly screwed the lid back on, casting a mild scent disperser on it that would wear off after eighteen hours, enough time for Draco to put it on before it started smelling foul. The wonderful thing about skunk liquid was that it was so terribly difficult to get rid of it, no matter how much Draco scrubbed, he wouldn’t get rid of the smell. It was perfect.

“You are too pleased with yourself.” Blaise told him as he waltzed back into the bedroom.

“I feel elated!” Harry replied. “I’ve got my own back on a dick who humiliated me and now I can humiliate him in return.”

Blaise shook his head and went back to reading the book that Harry had given him for Christmas. It was a bitch translating it, but it was everything that he had been expecting and more.

“I’m going to go and visit Dumbledore. I’ll be back in time for dinner!”

It spoke volumes on how much their relationship had grown and how comfortable their Dracken’s were with each other now that they were settled that Blaise just waved him off with a warning to be careful.

Harry rushed to get himself dressed and happily made his way through the school, not having to go up or down any stairs because the Headmaster’s office and Harry’s rooms were on the same floor and he chirpily spoke the password (Toffee Tails) to the gargoyle.

He knocked on the door and was told to enter. Dumbledore was rustling through a pile of parchment when Harry entered and he closed the door behind him, but when the elderly man looked up he cried out in joy at seeing him.

“Ah! Harry my boy, come in and sit down! Tea?”

“Yes please.” Harry smiled, sitting down opposite his Headmaster, gratefully accepting the china cup full of his honey tea.

“What brings you here, my boy?”
“Can’t I just come and have a chat and a cup of tea?”

“Of course you can, which reminds me.”

Dumbledore stood up and swept around his office like a small hurricane, obviously looking for something.

“Now where did I put it? Ah, here we are.”

He handed Harry several colourful boxes and a pile of letters.

“Christmas presents I believe, Harry. I hope you don’t mind that I intercepted them and kept them here for you, I didn’t think it a good idea to interrupt your mate meetings with these given the senders of a few of them, so I kept them here, I had meant to give them to you sooner, but it must have slipped my mind.”

Harry chuckled, but grew sombre as he realised what Dumbledore had meant by who had sent them, some of the packages were from the Weasleys.

Harry opened the letters first and smiled at the Christmas cards from Remus, Hagrid, members of the Order of the Phoenix and one from the Weasley family.

He almost cried when he read the hurtful words in the letter Ron had sent him, Hermione hadn’t sent him anything, but he hadn’t been expecting her to.

“Who has upset you, dear boy?”

“Ron being stupid again.” Harry replied swiping away the moisture from his eyes angrily. “Calling me names and saying I'm a traitor to Godric Gryffindor for fraternising with the enemy.”

“Meaning Misters Zabini and Malfoy.”

Harry nodded and put Ron’s letter to the back of the pile.

“Well I can certainly say that Godric Gryffindor would have been proud to have you as one of his Harry smiled and opened his present from Hagrid. It was a bundle of bright and colourful feathers.

“Ah, I see Hagrid has been preening the Hippogriffs again. Hippogriff feathers are very valuable.”

“He sent me a box full of unicorn tail hairs last year.” Harry grinned. “I don’t think Hagrid knows the value of the things he sends me and if he does, then he obviously doesn’t care.”

“I believe it is the latter, dear boy. Hagrid has never been a materialistic person and as long as his pets are healthy and well, he is happy.”

Dumbledore chuckled and Harry put aside the bundle of feathers to open the next parcel. It contained books from everyone’s favourite werewolf teacher. Lupin had given him Defence books and a book entitled Pranking Potions for Morons with a small note that Sirius had seen it in his Snuffles form and had bought it for him last March and had been planning on giving it to him for Christmas.

That made Harry a bit sad but he held the book close and tried fruitlessly to absorb the presence of his Godfather from it, knowing that Sirius must have touched this book, had handled it and had bought it especially for him. He missed Sirius and it was so unfair that he was gone, but he was and he needed to come to grips with it because his slight obsession with the veil in the Department of Mysteries was becoming just a tad unhealthy.

Harry opened the next present which didn’t have a label on it and then looked at his Headmaster, who put a finger to his lips.

“I can’t be seen as showing you any special treatment, Harry, but I’m sure a couple pairs of nice socks can be inconspicuous enough.”

Harry laughed and pulled out the ‘inconspicuous’ socks, one pair which were bright red with little gold snakes slithering over them and the other pair emerald green with silver lions roaring.

“I had those custom made for you, my boy; a dear friend of mine owns a sock shop.”
Harry didn’t know whether to laugh or not at that, what were the chances of this friend only being the Headmaster’s friend because of how many Galleons the man spent in the sock shop.

He loved the theme of the socks though, one pair with Gryffindor colours but the little snakes to represent the Slytherin house, because of his mates and the other pair the opposite, with Slytherin colours and lions for his house.

“Thank you so much, Sir! I love them.”

Dumbledore beamed at him and urged him to open the last of his presents. Harry did cry when he opened the biggest one to find a soft, dark green knitted jumper with a blue H in the middle. A Weasley jumper. He picked up the letter that came with it and read it with shaking hands.

‘Harry dear,

I’ve been told that you are very ill; I do hope you feel better soon, but you make sure that you stay in bed and rest young man! If you must get up wear something on your feet and your new jumper to keep warm, do you hear me? Take in lots of fluids, I’ve sent you some chicken broth in a thermos flask, it is under a stasis charm so it won’t spoil, just send a mild heating charm at it before you drink it and make sure that you do drink it, all of it! It has nutrient potions in it to help you regain your strength quicker.

I was very upset that this illness meant that you couldn’t come to us for Christmas dear, so I’ve sent you some homemade mince pies and some treacle tart as I know it’s your favourite, and also some sweets and fudge, just don’t over do it with the treats, wait until you are better or I will come down to Hogwarts and give you such a telling off!

Have a happy Christmas and I hope to hear that you are better soon dear; Arthur and I are so worried about you,

All my love, Molly Weasley.

Harry wiped his eyes and looked through the large box of treats. There was a paper plate of fudge wrapped in Clingfilm, a foil package that was obviously a large slice of treacle tart, a tin that contained the minced pies, a box of Bertie Botts every flavour beans, a box of iced cauldron cakes and a huge thermos flask with the aforementioned broth.

“I see Molly is trying to feed you to death, I believe I made the mistake of telling her that you were too unwell to visit for Christmas when she fire called me to demand why you had not been on the train.”
Harry chuckled wetly and rubbed his eyes. He had been so afraid that Mrs Weasley would hate him because Ron was being a prat; it was amazing to know that she still cared for him, even though he and Ron were fighting.

Harry opened his last present to stop himself from thinking about Mrs Weasley so he wouldn’t start bawling his eyes out. It was a prank parcel from the twins, who wished him well because they had heard that he was actually ill and not just overeating their puking pastilles and wished him happy pranking of their ‘idiot brother, Ronnikins’ and anyone else who decided to pick on ‘their little brother’ and their financial backer.

Harry grinned and went picking through the box, finding new material and some things that would definitely come in handy for getting back at not only Ron, but Draco as well.

Harry put all of his presents into the one big box, all except his new jumper, which he pulled on over his tee shirt. He didn’t have any decent jumpers and the Weasley jumper he had received last year was much too tight around the armpits and about four inches too short in the stomach area after the growth spurt brought on by his Dracken inheritance.

Harry happily finished off his tea and his talk with the Headmaster, before he picked up his box of presents and left to go back to Blaise and Draco, if the blond wasn’t still being chewed out by Professor Snape that was, to get ready to go to dinner, he was more than a bit hungry. He just wished that Blaise would go hunting for him; he was sort of craving raw meat again.

Harry met Blaise in the common room, where the indigo eyed man had migrated with his book, only now he had a pad of parchment and a quill and he was making notes and difficult translations and it gave Harry a migraine just looking at them.

“Are you ready for dinner, Blaise?” Harry asked softly, leaning over the back of the settee to wrap his arms around Blaise’s shoulders.

“Just about. This book is giving me a headache.”

“Perhaps I shouldn’t have given it to you then.” Harry teased.

Blaise looked to him with startled eyes. “No matter how many headaches I get, I love this book, Harry, thank you for giving it to me. Ti amo.”

Harry smiled happily and took Blaise’s hand. Tugging him out of their private rooms and towards the Great Hall. He was ravenous and he realised the reason why was because he hadn’t eaten anything today.

“Where is Draco?” Harry asked.

“Still with Professor Snape, you can’t learn how to be a better dominant Draken in one day, Harry; he’ll be staying with Professor Snape until he knows how to treat you properly.”

“Good, I don’t want to be around him at the moment, even if it means I won’t be able to sleep for a few days.”

“Professor Snape gave me a sleeping potion for you to take, it isn’t as strong or as addictive as the Dreamless Sleep potion, but it should help you get some sleep without Draco being near you.”

Harry smiled happily and took Blaise’s hand, it was then that he noticed the bruised and skinned knuckles; he pulled the hand up to his eyelevel and gasped at how sore it looked. He pressed a kiss to them and looked to Blaise, silently demanding an explanation.

“I punched Draco. He had no right to treat you like he did.”

“Nasta said that Draco could be pulled up before the Elders for what he did.”

“Professor Snape said something similar. It is a serious crime to hurt a submissive.”

“I don’t want him to be punished; I just don’t want him to do it again.”

“Which is why he is being taught by Professor Snape instead of standing in a Counsel room full of Elders.”

“I’m going to get my own back though.” Harry stated determinedly.

Blaise smirked proudly and pulled Harry into a one armed, sideways hug as they walked into the Great Hall.
“I know you are, Mio Prezioso and I am behind you one hundred percent.”

Harry smiled and cuddled into Blaise more fully. Hopefully soon, everything would work out for the best. He wanted a family, but only if Draco could learn how to treat him with the respect he deserved, otherwise he would never let the blond near him, or any children he had in the future.

Chapter Thirteen – Realisations

Harry didn’t see Draco for the next six days, but he saw an awful lot of Nasta, who was always in the school grounds whenever Harry ventured outside, which was quite a bit.

His bum was perfectly pale and non-bruised again, he could sit on it in comfort and he could have sex with Blaise again, something he had been taking full advantage of.

The students had come back off of the Christmas holidays and lessons were set to resume the next day. Harry was dreading it, not only because it meant school work and lessons and homework, but because it marked Draco’s return to civilisation and back to their private rooms.

Blaise, who had been ‘visiting’ the blond in Professor Snape’s quarters, had assured him that Draco had been learning some very heavy lessons with Professor Snape, Harry believed that, but were those lessons enough to make the great Draco Malfoy change his ways? Harry guessed that he would find out soon enough.

He was having an internal crisis, however, he hated how skewed his decision had been in choosing his second mate. Draco had felt so safe and so warm and protective to him, but he had turned out to be the opposite. Draco had hurt him not only physically, but he had hurt his pride and his trust as well and it would take a lot for the blond to earn those things back. Harry believed that his hurt pride would take the longest to heal but it would be a very close call between his pride and his trust, but he hoped that his trust returned when Draco had been thoroughly pranked, there was not going to be a family, a mateship, while he didn’t trust one of his dominant mates.

The skunk liquid in the cologne had been a massive success, in more ways than one. Draco had collected his things whilst Harry and Blaise had been at dinner, as per Snape’s request, he had put the cologne on at the start of the day that marked the return to normal school activities, like he always did, and he had gone to breakfast as always, well away from Harry and Blaise, again per Snape’s request, and had been mauled again by Daphne’s younger sister, Astoria. The scent disperser had worn off halfway through breakfast and the little girl, who had gotten a large mouthful of the smell, had been physically sick, all over Malfoy’s lap.

Harry had laughed so hard that he had almost passed out through a lack of a sufficient oxygen supply. There had been no way that Malfoy didn’t know that it had been him who had organised and carried out the prank, as he passed by their part of the table he had just swallowed heavily, nodded his head to the both of them and had simply said that he, Harry, had the right to do anything that he wanted as revenge for his previous abominable actions, before he carried on walking to get changed and to possibly have a shower. Draco had stunk for the rest of the day and everyone had given him a very wide berth.

Harry had been quite stunned by what Draco had said, but what really got him were the little gifts that Draco had begun sending him. Blaise had explained to him that Snape had ordered Draco to make it up to him in any way that he saw fit and Blaise had told him that because Draco had been brought up as an old fashioned Englishman, he was sending wooing gifts to Harry to help make up for his harsh actions.

They weren’t big gifts or lavish things, one had been a handwritten apology card, another had been a box of chocolate frogs and Draco had even given him his own, real snitch, not one of those practice ones, which reminded Harry that he actually was the Gryffindor Seeker still.

Quidditch season had started just as he had found Blaise and he just hadn’t cared enough about anything other than the indigo eyed man that he loved so very much. He had been ignoring his team, but his absence had been explained away as his ‘illness’ and Ginny, who had taken over temporary team captaincy and his Seeker position, had welcomed him back with open arms, exclaiming that they had a match in two weeks’ time against Ravenclaw and that if they didn’t win it then they were out of the running for the cup due to their heavy defeat to Slytherin in November.

Harry was all too happy to take up the captaincy and his Seeker position once more and the entire team was very glad to see him back, but he had a hell of a time catching up on the team building exercises, he didn’t even know the names of the rest of the team…well he knew two, Ginny, who went back to her original position of Chaser once he took over the Seeker position once more and Dean Thomas, another Chaser, who was ecstatic that Harry was back to being fit enough to play.

Harry was so excited that he could hardly contain it, he told Blaise who sighed and looked up at the ceiling with a frown, which made Harry frown.

“Good bye Quidditch cup.”

Harry snorted and smacked Blaise’s shoulder, who then proceeded to pull him down into a kiss, right in the middle of the Great Hall, in front of everyone.

The rumours had been flying like wildfire throughout Hogwarts about the relationship of Harry Potter and Blaise Zabini. A Gryffindor and a Slytherin. There were even rumours now that Harry’s illness had been a sexual disease, which wasn’t strictly true as the heat period, whilst being a purely sexual desire, wasn’t a disease, more of a condition than anything else.

Blaise verbally attacked anyone who dared to say that they had had a sexual disease within earshot of him. Harry just laughed it off; he was too used to people saying shit about him to care about yet another rumour. He had grown thick enough skin during his childhood, which had only layered up to protect him even more as he got older and the wizarding world had started on him too.
It was only a day later that Harry heard that Draco was facing expulsion for physically attacking a seventh year student. He and Blaise had been called out of their lessons to go to Dumbledore’s office, where they met Dumbledore, Snape, Draco and a Hufflepuff seventh year student who was badly bruised and cut.

“Draco, what did you do?!” Harry demanded as he looked at the Hufflepuff. “You promised me that you were changed! That the potion was all gone!”

“It is all gone.” Draco answered softly. “I did this with full knowledge of what I was doing.”

“Why?!” Harry cried out. “Why would you try and ruin our mat…relationship by doing this!” Harry gave a quick glance to the Hufflepuff, who didn’t seem to have noticed his little slip of words. He looked far too dazed and out of things…Harry wondered just how hard Draco had hit him. It went back to his overly harsh punishment again, had Draco even known how hard he was hitting the Hufflepuff?

“He called you a slut!” Draco hissed. “He was bragging to his little friends about how easy you were and how quickly he could get you into his bed. I had to defend you!”

Harry opened his mouth but a soft continuous growl had him looking next to him, to Blaise, who was glaring so hard at the guy in the chair that it was a wonder that it hadn’t actually exploded. Blaise’s claws were out and he was flexing them carefully, as if he was fantasising about and thinking of the best way to slice into the Hufflepuff in the chair.

Harry flung himself around Blaise, who carefully caught him and held him, but did not take his eyes from the seventh year, nor re-sheath his claws.

“I told you that you had to control yourself!” Snape snarled. “This is not controlling yourself!”

“He was dishonouring Harry!” Draco spat back. “I couldn’t let him do it! I had to set him straight, away from his deluded fantasies.”

Harry sighed and blocked out the two dominant Drackens arguing. He didn’t care who had called him what or said anything about him, yet he understood that both of his mates wouldn’t stand for his ‘honour’ to be tarnished in such a way.

Harry just hoped that Draco hadn’t defended his honour in such an obvious manner as to tip off the Hufflepuff that the blond wasn’t human. That would be a disaster waiting to happen.
“Boys please!” Dumbledore called out before looking to the poor Hufflepuff opposite him. “Mister Roberts, will you agree to not press charges or will you face the law knowing that Mister Malfoy was within his rights as the lover of the person in question that you allegedly dishonoured.”

“I don’t understand.” The Hufflepuff groaned. “All I did was have a joke with my friends about how easy Potter’s become. I mean he’s a Gryffindor and rumour has it he has several Slytherin lovers. If he’ll let a Slytherin near him then obviously he’s desperate enough to have anyone.”

“That isn’t true!” Harry burst out, the Hufflepuff jumping in his seat at the harsh sound. “I only have Blaise and Draco as my lovers! It’s my business why or who I have in my bed! If I wanted a hundred men in my bed I damn well would have and I wouldn’t give a flying fuck what you or your little friends thought of me!”

Blaise wrapped his arms around him and soothed him, licking the side of his neck and releasing calming pheromones.

Harry huffed out an annoyed breath, his body relaxing even though he wanted to remain angry. Stupid dominant pheromones.

“I think everyone would just like this situation to disappear.” Dumbledore stated, his pale blue eyes twinkling.

The Hufflepuff nodded and Dumbledore dismissed him with a wave of his hand. The seventh year was up and gone, leaving faster as Blaise snarled at him as he went past.

Blaise took up the seat that the Hufflepuff had vacated and drew Harry down onto his lap, Harry did not relax. Draco was sitting right behind him and he could hear the blond’s breathing. He hadn’t forgotten the pain nor the humiliation and despite the week of pranking; he still didn’t feel any better.

“Now, Harry, Mister Malfoy has been thoroughly cleansed of the potion he had been taking and Professor Snape has assured me that he no longer poses a risk to you, are you willing to have him back in your rooms or would you wish for a bit more time?”

“He can come back into the rooms, but he can’t sleep with me and Blaise. He hasn’t earned that right yet.” Harry answered. “I had Dobby come around a few days ago and he turned the unused storage cupboard into a bedroom for Draco to sleep in.”

“You wish for me to sleep in a cupboard?” Draco asked incredulously.
Harry swallowed as that sentence brought up images of his tattered childhood. He had examined the new room that Dobby had made himself and it in no way resembled a cupboard, having been enlarged to fit a proper bed and even a wardrobe and side tables, it was more the knowledge that the room had once been a cupboard that would rub Draco up the wrong way rather than a lack of comfort.

Not like Harry had once suffered with, lying on a small camping cot with a ratty blanket and no pillow, stuffed into a space that in the end had hardly contained him and he was sure that had he not had magic to help protect his body, then he would have gotten asthma or some other respiratory condition from all the dust and cobwebs that he had been forced to live with from such a young age.

“It’s a bedroom now.” Harry dismissed. “You can join Blaise and me in our bed once you have proven to me that you can refrain from hurting me. I don’t trust you, Draco. I chose you as a mate out of hundreds of others and the first thing you did was hurt me, it doesn’t make for a very good first impression.”

“How many times do I have to say that I’m sorry?”

“You only need to say it once, Draco, but only say it if you really mean it.”

“Harry, I am sorry, I swear it to you.”

“I accept your apology, Draco, now you have to prove to me that you’re truly sorry, that I shouldn’t just give up on you, that the relationship between you and I is still worth the time and effort it needs to grow.”

Draco nodded and sat up straighter, determination stiffening his body. He was ready to grow up and prove that he deserved a second chance, that he was worthy of Harry’s love.

“Be warned, Draco that I give second chances, but you’ll never get a third.” Harry told the blond seriously as he slipped from Blaise’s lap and left the office to go wander around the frozen school grounds, like he usually did these days when he wanted to think on his own.

January had well and truly settled in and it was turning out to be a blisteringly cold month, not that Harry much cared as he wrapped himself up tightly and encased himself in warming charms.
He went down to his place by the lake and hopped up onto the large rock that he favoured sitting on. The lake had long since been frozen and it was even now covered in a few inches of snow. The teachers had marked its outline with bright yellow tape that was hovering in mid-air so that no student accidentally started walking on the lake, only to get to the thinner middle and fall to their icy death.

Harry sighed as large arms wrapped around him from behind. How Nasta always knew that Harry was out here he didn’t know and he didn’t think Nasta would answer him if he asked.

Something picked at his brain however and he shifted uncomfortably. Nasta didn’t breathe as loudly as the male behind him was, nor did he squeeze him quite so tightly, when the man gruffly said hello to him, Harry knew it definitely wasn’t Nasta behind him, but he did recognise the voice and he grinned as he turned his body around to see those gorgeous deep blue eyes that he had missed so much.

“Maxi…” Harry cut himself off short when the absolutely huge Dracken gave him a playful glare for trying to use his full name. “Fine, I’ll just call you Maxie from now on.”

“My Granddad calls me Maxie.” Maximilius grumbled.

“Well now I do too!” Harry said stubbornly as he threw his arms around Maximilius’ neck and hugged him tightly. “I missed you! How are you? How have you been? How could you possibly think that I’d send you away?! I wouldn’t have! I…”

A large hand covered his mouth and prevented the smaller Dracken from speaking.

“Take a breath, Harry.” Max grinned. “I knew exactly what the Elder was doing, it isn’t the first time that an Elder has abused his power and it won’t be the last. I had no choice but to leave, an Elder’s word is absolute. They have the power to control dominant Drackens to a certain extent during mate meetings. I was ordered away, so I had to leave, I was ordered not to see, speak or contact you in any way and I had to comply. I loathed myself for letting it happen, but there was nothing that I could do about it.”

Harry snuggled in close to Maximilius and he relished in the feeling of the man that he really liked being back here. Maximilius had come back. He could have just refused to come back like some of the other Drackens that had been sent away had, claiming that it was just too much trouble to try and court him. He could have stayed home, but he hadn’t, he had come back on the slim chance that Harry would pick him as a third mate. Harry liked him just a little bit more for that.

“As for how I’ve been, well truthfully I haven’t really been doing much since I was forced to leave. Wallowing would probably be the best way to describe it. I just sat at home all day, I didn’t talk very much and cursed myself for such a missed opportunity to have an absolutely amazing, kind, gentle and gorgeous little Dracken as a mate.”

Harry chuckled, trying to ignore the blush on his cheeks as he twisted his legs out from underneath him and placed them on either side of Max’s hips, which were about level with the top of the large rock. Fucking hell Maximilius was tall.

Harry shyly played with the decorative buttons of Max’s outer robe, finding the shiny black buttons with a swirl of red captivating as his twisted them around in his little fingers.

“How have you been, Harry?” Max asked his voice noticeably deeper.

“I’ve been through hell and back and then went back to hell.” Harry sighed, getting ready for the outburst when he told the other Dracken the reason why he had been sent away and what Elder Getus and his despicable Grandson, Dominic, had had planned for him and his children.

Nasta had gone ballistic once he’d been alone and had the privacy that he needed to get out his anger and frustrations and he had toppled a tree in his rage. Harry looked to the stump that was all that remained of Nasta’s fury after the Professors had cleaned it up and he sighed again. Nasta had kept hitting the tree well after it had splintered and he had only stopped once the tree had cracked under his onslaught and had finally fallen.

It wasn’t something that Harry liked seeing, such a huge display of violence and rage, but he understood that as a very reserved and quiet man, that Nasta sometimes needed a more physical release for his anger. Harry grinned as he remembered suggesting to Nasta that if he partook in more sexual activities then he wouldn’t need to release his anger and frustration in such a violent way. Nasta had gone red and coughed a bit before apologising for his actions and sitting down behind Harry to play with his hair. Harry loved how Nasta played silently with his hair; it was so relaxing that he often fell asleep under the ministrations.

“Are you still in hell?” Max asked him seriously.

“I think I’m climbing the limbo ladder one rung at a time.”

Max chuckled at his comparison and held him so tight the air was expelled from Harry’s lungs.

“What’s been happening since I’ve been away?”
Harry told the whole gruesome story and he watched as with every word Max’s muscles contracted until the veins popped out, his teeth clenched together until Harry was sure that they would crack and those beautiful, deep sapphire blue eyes darkened in rage to a midnight blue.

Max managed to control himself until Harry had finished speaking about what Dominic had wanted to do with him and went onto what Draco, his supposedly brand new mate, had done to him the very first morning after they had mated.

After hearing how Draco had treated him, Max lost control, just like Nasta had, and he exploded in rage, only instead of taking out his anger with his fists, he screamed long and loud, deep and guttural like an animal. The harsh sound echoed for miles and reverberated through Harry’s spine, giving him bone deep chills. He would not like to ever be on Max’s bad side.

Harry frowned sadly and waited until Max had finished screaming himself breathless. Max held him so tightly Harry thought that his bones would break as Max sniffed and touched every inch of him to determine if he had any injuries. Nasta had done it as well so Harry had come to realise that it had to be a dominant instinct.

“That they even dare!” Max hissed deeply.

“It isn’t that bad, Maxie.” Harry assured with a smile. “Draco was beaten by Blaise and Professor Snape and Blaise and Draco killed Dominic, I think they ripped his scales off of his wings and after gifting some to Professor Snape, they sold the rest to an apothecary, though I don’t know why.”

“Because that’s what the little shit would have seen done to your children.” Max told him, his breath coming in harsh pants.

“What?” Harry whispered in horror, his breath leaving him, his body going an icy cold that had nothing to do with the harsh January wind pinking up his exposed skin.

“When those disgusting poachers find a Dracken they strap them down and hack off every single wing scale we have. They’d steal our body scales as well if they weren’t completely smooth and flat so that no tool can gouge them out. They drain the blood into buckets and cut out the heart, liver, tongue, sex organs and eyes. All are very valuable and are used in all sorts of rare and obscure potions and rituals; the scales can even be used in jewellery.”

“He wanted to do that to my babies?” Harry asked, feeling as though someone had a hold of his heart and they were squeezing tighter and not letting go. He couldn’t breathe.

“He would have scented them out at birth and handed the Dracken babies over to the smugglers, who would have kept the baby in a cage or a small prison cell, keeping the baby alive, but barely, then when the Dracken comes into their inheritance, they start the harvesting process.”

Harry felt his stomach clench and then roil and before he could stop himself he had leant over the side of the rock and he vomited everything that he had eaten.

Max rubbed his back firmly, but his body was shaking in anger and horror. He was disgusted that anyone could even think to hand their own child off to one of those people. If they could even be called people. His mind slipped to his Mother and a white hot wash of rage seared his insides, that little shit had died far too quickly.

“Oh god, no one told me. I just thought my baby would have been killed instantly, that was excruciating enough. I thought everyone hated Drackens and would kill one on sight. This…that’s too much to bear! I can't…I can't think about it! My babies! Tortured, suffering, harvested for potions ingredients.”

Harry was sick again as tears fell down his cheeks. He held tightly onto Maximilius and let the large man soothe him.

Max nosed around Harry’s cheek and licked at the tears that fell from those stunning eyes. He kissed each closed eyelid as Harry sobbed and cried. It tugged at his heart to see Harry so upset, he felt he had to do something to help, he had caused Harry these tears by telling him what would happen to his babies, this was his problem to rectify.

He moved his nose down Harry’s cheek until his mouth hovered over Harry’s. He lightly pressed against those petal soft, plump lips and he held Harry tightly, hoping to convey safety and love.

Harry gasped in surprise and Max flicked his tongue into Harry’s mouth, ignoring the slight sour taste that Harry’s vomiting had left behind. Harry clenched his hands into his hair and tugged lightly, wrapping his legs around Max’s thick waist.

Max kissed more deeply when Harry didn’t push him away, running his tongue over every inch of that delectable mouth. Under the sour taste of bile was a sweeter taste, chocolate and fudge, Harry had been eating chocolate and a hell of a lot of it by the taste of it.

They broke apart for air, Harry heaving in lungfuls and Max breathing deeply and evenly trying to calm his racing heart. He inhaled deeply, his eyes widening before he inhaled again. He pulled Harry to him and kissed him for all that he was worth.

Harry made a small noise when he needed air again and Max broke their lips apart so that they could both breathe.

“You’re releasing mating pheromones.” He panted breathlessly. “You are looking for a mate.”

“But I haven’t had my second heat with Draco.” Harry protested thickly.
“Harry, you don’t understand, your Dracken is rejecting Draco because of his treatment of you, your Dracken is sending out pheromones to attract a different mate.”

Harry’s eyes went wide and his stomach clenched awfully. His Dracken was rejecting Draco? But he had chosen to give the blond Dracken a second chance! It had been the potion’s fault that Draco’s instincts were so messed up, not Draco’s! He didn’t want to reject Draco!

Max kissed him again and this time Harry struggled. Max let him go immediately, but still held him around the waist.

“I have to get to Draco; I have to make this right, Max! I know what he did to me was wrong, but it wasn’t his fault! He was under the effects of that suppressant potion; I don’t want to lose him! Not when he still has a chance to prove to me that he can be a good mate!”

Harry shimmied off of the rock and landed with slightly bended knees ready to run off to the school to find his two mates. Max caught his arm and pulled him into one last kiss, before giving him a smile and a light shove towards the school, before he turned and trekked off towards the hell hotel.

Harry watched him go before he snapped out of his thoughts and took off running back to the castle. Draco had risked everything just to be his mate, his family, his reputation, his legacy…everything! Harry couldn’t repay that by rejecting the blond now, he would not let his stupid Dracken dictate that to him! His Dracken side would not ruin everything for them! He would not allow that part of himself to reject Draco when he still wanted the blond; he didn’t care what his Dracken thought, Draco was HIS!
Chapter Fourteen – To Forgive and Let Die

Harry ran through the castle until his lungs burnt with the lack of oxygen and even then he didn’t stop, he didn’t even slow down as he charged past other students and he even knocked them over, but still he didn’t care. He burst into his and his mates’ room, sweating and panting and he startled Blaise into overprotective mate mode.

Before Harry could even get his breath back he was wrapped up in black wings and had solid arms around him holding him close as Blaise dragged him across their living room until they reached the bedroom.

Blaise slammed the door closed and physically pushed a chest of drawers in front of it as if it would stop anything that came through the door. Blaise always, always, forgot that he was a wizard when he fully let his Dracken out, it was cute, but from a safety angle it was a very bad thing. It meant that instead of putting up wards to protect his family, Blaise would remain primal, instinctual, purely physical and against a wizard, sometimes being physical just wasn’t enough. It was one of the biggest downfalls Harry had found about Drackens.

“Blaise!” Harry shouted, pushing at his mate’s chest to try and get him to release him.

“Must protect you.” Blaise growled giving a final shove to the chest of drawers with his back and turning around to keep his own back to the door, hunching over Harry.

“Nothing is coming through the door!” Harry insisted. “I was running because I need to ask you something!”
“You smell like an unmated dominant Dracken.”

“I was with Max, you remember Maximilius don’t you? The one that was sent away?”

“Why? Why were you with another man?”

“Oh god, Blaise! You know that I love you, I love you dearly.”

“You don’t go near other men!” Blaise snarled wrapping that large hand around the back of Harry’s neck and squeezing.

Harry hated it when Blaise went into overprotective mate mode. It made everything more tortuous and it was incredibly difficult to argue sense into a creature that was being purely primitive and acting on instinct.

“Alright, Blaise, I won’t go near any other men, forgetting that I need to be near Draco, we’ll forget that we are in a school that has about two hundred and fifty male students and that the majority of the staff here are males, oh and of course that I may need even more mates, or that I might have male children. Yeah, I won’t go near any other male but you.” Harry stated sarcastically, getting his neck squeezed tighter as reprimand.

“Stop that!” Harry hissed, wiggling his neck about to try and dislodge Blaise’s hand.

“You are MINE!” Blaise snarled. “You stay with ME! No one else is allowed to touch you!”

“How is that going to work?!” Harry hissed angrily, his Dracken coming to the forefront of his mind. “I need another mate to fuck me to get pregnant because you aren’t even strong enough to give me a baby!”

Immediately after Harry said those words, he wished with his life that he could take them back as Blaise’s face fell into a crestfallen expression, both of their Dracken’s receding, leaving their human minds at the forefront. He felt like such a bastard at that moment and he wrapped his arms tightly around Blaise.
“I’m sorry.” He whispered. “I was so angry, I couldn’t stop the words from coming out.”

“It’s okay, Harry.” Blaise stated back, his voice falsely strong and calm, but Harry could hear the slight waver underneath. “I know that your Dracken is still angry at me for not getting you pregnant, that won’t change until you are actually pregnant.”

Blaise pushed at Harry’s shoulders and gently sat him on the bed whilst he stood a few paces away.

“Blaise, please.” Harry begged as he scooted over and wrapped his arms around Blaise’s waist.

Harry desperately tried to hold his tears back, but one after the other they fell from his eyes. His Dracken was already rejecting Draco; he couldn’t lose Blaise as well. His entire world was crashing and burning right in front of him and it was all his fault. Such a freak, he couldn’t even keep hold of the men that he loved. Always a freak, freaks were always alone and they died alone too.

“Oh, Harry, Mio Prezioso, don’t cry. I hate seeing you cry.” Blaise crooned, gently combing his fingers through his hair and brushing the tears from his face with his other hand. “I know you need other mates, I was just being a little jealous and possessive. I’m the one who’s sorry, amore.”

Harry pushed his head into the front of Blaise’s robes and he cried even harder, words came tumbling from his mouth before he could stop them, he wasn’t even thinking as he came dangerously close to revealing his most guarded secret.

“I’m sorry! Please, Blaise! I’m so sorry. I promise not to be bad anymore! I promise to stop being a little freak, please don’t leave me.”

“Dio, Harry. No, I’m not leaving. I’m not going anywhere; I won’t leave you, Mio Bello. Please stop crying, please don’t call yourself names, I love you, Harry, I’m not mad at you.”

Blaise sat on their bed and he held Harry tightly. Harry breaking down like this scared him. He didn’t know what to do, Harry was so precious to him, to see him like this caused him great pain.

“I can’t lose you too.” Harry whispered into his robe and Blaise shushed him gently.
“You won’t lose me, Harry. I’m not going anywhere.”

“I’m already losing Draco, I can’t lose you too!” Harry continued and Blaise’s head shot down to look at Harry’s screwed up face. What the hell had Draco done now?

“Harry, Mio amore, what has Draco done now?”

“My Dracken is rejecting him!” Harry cried out, looking up at him with such a heart-breaking expression that Blaise’s words froze in his chest. “Max said that I’m releasing mating pheromones, I’m looking for another mate to replace Draco with! I don’t want another mate! I’m sure Draco is better now that the potion is gone, Blaise, I don’t want to reject him.”

“We must go and see Severus, now.” Blaise stated as he stood up, placing Harry on his feet and wrapping an arm around him.

Blaise used his magic to move the chest of drawers out of the way of the door and led Harry down to the dungeons before he knocked on Snape’s door, he could smell Draco inside the room as well, which would kill two owls with one spell, he wouldn’t have to repeat any of this to the blond at a later date.

Snape opened the door with his usual scowl, but ushered him in once he saw who was on his threshold.

“What’s the matter now?” He growled to them after he had indicated for them to sit on the settee.

“Harry’s upset because another Dracken told him that he is releasing mating pheromones. The other Dracken told him that Harry is subconsciously rejecting Draco as a mate and is looking for a new one.”

Draco’s face cracked in shock and misery. He could hardly blame Harry for rejecting him after his actions, but he had sincerely hoped that Harry would find it within himself to forgive him, even though he didn’t truly deserve it.

Snape looked at the submissive Dracken and he inhaled deeply, noticing the very slight change in scent. He knew both Draco and Blaise would be unable to detect the change, they were already mated to the boy and would be unaffected by the pheromones that he was releasing to attract a new mate to him.
“The other Dracken was correct, Harry is releasing pheromones to attract another dominant mate to him, however the pheromone is not very strong, only those within a small distance of him would be able to smell it. This is good news because Potter will not yet be hounded by every dominant in the vicinity and also because there is still time to rectify this.”

“How?!” Harry asked desperately. “How can I fix this?”

“You need to spend more time with Draco.” Snape said, trying to keep the sneer from his face as he looked to the son of his once best friend and his once enemy. “You need to accept him and it wouldn’t hurt to be intimate together.”

“I don’t want to force Harry to do anything with me that he doesn’t want to.” Draco cut in immediately.

“I know what you did to me was wrong and if you ever hit me like that again, Draco, then I’ll beat you myself, but I never wanted to lose you as a mate. I’ll do anything to fix this.”

Snape hid a smirk from the three young boys in front of him. Perhaps having Potter as a submissive mate wouldn’t be the end of their lives after all.

He watched with a bleeding heart as Potter crawled from Blaise to embrace Draco, kissing the blond quickly and chastely on the mouth before snuggling into him.

“You still have to sleep in the cupboard room though.” Harry told Draco seriously. “You can’t come back into our bed just yet. My trust won’t stretch that far just yet.”

“I don’t mind waiting for as long as you wish, as long as I can hold you like this.” Draco answered, his arms wrapped tightly around the smaller boy in his lap.

Perhaps Draco had learnt his lesson after all, Snape thought consideringly as he watched the boy cuddle like a lovesick fool. He remembered when that was him and his mate. How young he had acted, how foolish they both were. He gave a small smirk remembering how his mate used to whine for his attention like a puppy and how he always used to give it to the little brat, no matter what he was doing or how important it was, he dropped everything just to spend time with his beautiful mate and now he was gone. He could feel it in his heart that his mate was no longer a part of this world, but he would not stop until he found out why and who was responsible.

of his younger self and the beautiful young man who was sat on his lap. He wouldn’t rest in peace until he found out what had happened to his beautiful submissive mate.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

It had been two days and Harry had been down to Snape’s private quarters more times in those forty-eight hours than he had ever been before, either willingly or, in the case of his numerous detentions, unwillingly.

Every time he came down he asked the same question as soon as he saw Snape. ‘Am I still producing the pheromones?’ and he knew that Snape’s limited patience was being stretched to the extreme by the way that he had started to growl out a short, clipped ‘yes’ before slamming the door in his face.

Harry had spent every single free minute with Draco, talking, doing homework and even though they still argued and fought a bit, Harry thought that their relationship had started to strengthen, but he was still calling for another mate and Snape had told him that far from lessening, the smell was only getting stronger.

What made everything more difficult and made Harry panic was that he had started craving fruits and vegetables. He was in the first phase of his heat cycle and his Dracken still wasn’t recognising Draco as a mate.

Draco had complained and bitched about the cupboard room, as Harry had known that he would, but the blond still slept in there every night. Harry was so conflicted. He wanted to punish Draco for what he had said and done to him, but he didn’t want to lose the blond as a mate, he was unsure what he could do that wouldn’t be seen by his Dracken as him rejecting Draco further.

Harry had talked it over with Blaise and they had agreed that if Draco could behave himself, he could move into their bedroom and their bed at the end of the week, but only if he was on his best behaviour.

Nothing could have stopped the both of them from partaking in their more carnal instincts and desires, Harry just prayed that his Dracken didn’t see him having sex with just Blaise, whilst Draco was well within earshot, as him rejecting Draco further.

He knew it must have been torture for Draco to listen as he and Blaise had sex right in the next room, but it couldn’t be helped. He wasn’t ready to have sex with Draco yet, or god forbid, have sex with both Draco and Blaise at the same time, not yet at least, but he knew that he had to get used to the idea of the both of them being together in bed with him before he went onto his next period of heat. That is if he could reverse the whole rejection thing before then.

He sighed as he soared over the bleachers on his Firebolt. He was practising with the Gryffindor team and it just his luck that Ron, who was the Keeper for the team, had not grown-up over the Christmas holidays. The redhead kept yelling out that Harry shouldn’t be allowed on the team because he would purposefully hand the cup to the Slytherins.

Harry had finally had enough, his emotions were already highly strung and his anger was slowly climbing higher due to the situation he found himself in with Draco. He had yelled back that he was the Gryffindor Captain and that if Ron didn’t shut his mouth and stop at least one Quaffle from going through his hoops then he was going to replace him and he, rather cruelly, went on to say that they didn’t need him, Harry, on the team in order to sabotage the games so that Slytherin could win the cup because they were doing a bang up job all by themselves if they didn’t even have a Keeper who could stop a Quaffle.

Ron had not liked that at all and his face had turned so red that it had matched his Quidditch robes. Needless to say he hadn’t been able to stop a single Quaffle from going through the goal hoops during that practice session. Harry had pulled Ginny aside after the match and had asked her what was going on and why she had allowed Ron onto the team; he prayed to god that it wasn’t purely because that Ron was her brother.

“He was so much better at the try-outs, Harry, I swear. He didn’t miss a single Quaffle and his competitors were so much worse, all except for McLaggen, but he missed one and Ron didn’t, it seemed clear cut to me.”

Harry sighed and ran a hand through his hair. “We won’t be able to win anything, Gin if we haven’t got a decent Keeper. He hasn’t saved a single shot all practice; you said he was the same in the match against Slytherin?”

“No, he was worse. It was actually painful to watch that match, Harry. He’s my brother, but it was my first game ever being Captain and my face was filled with so much blood from flushing in embarrassment that I could hardly concentrate. It had been my decision to put Ron in the team and he showed all of us up, the entire school is laughing at us, not only the Slytherins. Ravenclaw now think that this next match is going to be a dawdle…they don’t know that you’re fit enough to play yet and we should keep it that way for as long as possible so they underestimate us and don’t have enough time to prepare.”

“To be honest, Ginny it probably is going to be a cake walk for them if Ron can’t even catch a Quaffle. We need to hold Keeper try outs again, what do you think?”

“You’re the Captain, Harry.”

“You’re my sort of Deputy Captain, you will take over the team next year as I’ll probably be unable to play due to my N.E.W.Ts, so your opinion matters, Gin. Should we hold try-outs or do we let ourselves be crushed by Ravenclaw and lose the cup for the first time in two years?”

Ginny sighed and scrubbed her freckled forehead. “We need to hold try-outs, Harry, but we only have a little over a week to integrate the new Keeper before the match against Ravenclaw, can we catch them up in time?”
“It’s the Keepers job to stop the Quaffle going into the hoop, even I can understand that, Gin. No fancy shit, just stop the Quaffle and stay focused.”

“Maybe you should take over the Keeper position then?” She said slyly.

Harry snorted. “You kidding me, Gin? I can’t keep still for an entire match; I have to be zooming through the air! I need dangerous manoeuvres and near Bludger misses.”

“You need to try and break your neck in every match.” Ginny grinned.

“That too.” Harry stated with a grin of his own. “Blaise is going to have a heart attack.”

“Ooo, speaking of your new little love interest, I’ve been meaning to ask you, is he good in bed? There are rumours that he’s got a ten inch cock, is it true? Come on spill!”

“Ginny!” Harry choked out, his face going redder than red.

“Ooo, it is true isn’t it?! Damn, Harry, did you luck out or what? Does he let you ride him or is he the ‘I’m on top and I’m staying on top’ type, I don’t like those kinds of men, I like using my legs to sink onto a nice cock.”

“Fucking hell, Ginny stop it!” Harry cried in despair as he covered his ears and screwed his eyes shut.

Ginny chuckled and patted Harry’s hair like he was a puppy. “There there, the images will go away soon.”

“You’re fifteen! You’re not legal to have sex.”

Ginny actually looked at him like he had lost his mind before she burst out laughing.

“You are so innocent, Harry it’s actually endearing. So do you and the gorgeous Mister Zabini do role playing? Have you ever played innocent virgin and predatory pervert? Or is disciplinarian
“teacher and naughty school boy more your thing? How about doctors and patients? You could have him give you a prostate exam with his cock.”

“Stop it, Ginny! Please, I’m begging you, just stop talking!”

Ginny chuckled again before kissing his cheek lightly. “I can give you some of my toys if you want them.”

“What are you talking about now? What toys?”

“You and Blaise don’t play with toys? I know what to get you for a late Christmas present slash Easter present. I wonder if Luna will help me.”

“I…what, Luna? I…no! Stop talking about mine and Blaise’s sex life!”

“Okay.” Ginny relented with a smile. “Can I talk about yours and Malfoy’s sex life? Is he good in bed?”

“Draco and I haven’t had sex so I don’t know.”

“Harry! You have been with him now for how long and you haven’t had sex with that gorgeous man yet? Shame on you!”

“I… he’s being punished!” Harry flustered out.

“Ooo, what for?”

“He spanked me, Ginny!”

Ginny’s grin ate up most of her face as she looked to him as if he had actually impressed her.
“Spanking, really? Harry, you naughty boy, I never took you for the sort to like corporal punishment during sex.”

“No!” Harry exclaimed, trying to gain back control of the situation. “He hit me too hard, Ginny. I couldn’t sit down for three days and that was with a bruise salve!”

“I remember when I had that gorgeous Ravenclaw, you know the one, the tall one with those big hands, I just had to have him spank me with those. I refused the bruise salve and I couldn’t sit right for a week!” Ginny sighed and got a glossy look on her face.

“You liked it?” Harry asked in an incredulous, slightly curious tone.

“But it wasn’t during sex, Ginny.” Harry confided softly. “He did it to punish me for cutting my hair; it’s why I’ve been pranking him.”

“You cut your hair?” Ginny asked looking him over with a critical eye. “I didn’t notice. Well spanking for punishment is alright in moderation I guess, just thrust and rub against his legs the next time and get yourself hard, turn it into something sexual and then you barely notice the small stinging slaps.”

Harry scrunched up his face in thought before he nodded. “Alright, I’ll try it.”

“Don’t forget to tell me all about it!” Ginny stated lecherously.

Harry blushed and lightly shoved Ginny’s shoulder. “How did we get to this from Quidditch try-outs?” He demanded.

“We’re just sexual creatures.” Ginny sighed as if put upon. “We need nice, large strong men to fuck us unconscious.”

“Ginny!” Harry cried.
“Oh come on, Harry, I’m not an innocent little girl anymore. Charlie ruined that when he brought his girlfriend home and fucked her without using silencing charms this summer, Mum almost beat him to death with a wooden spoon.”

Harry chuckled and swung an arm around Ginny’s shoulders, they were almost the same height, Ginny being five foot four and a half and him being five foot five. Just half an inch between them, at sixteen Harry should have reached at least five foot eight by now and by seventeen he should have been at least six foot if he were following his parents genes, because Remus and Sirius had told him that neither of his parents had been short, but now he would forever remain at five foot five thanks to his Dracken inheritance.

He sighed, perhaps Ginny was right and he needed to have Draco spank him again to get over his fear of it, to prove that Draco really had changed and of course to practice turning the spanking into something sexual so that he could escape the pain. It wasn’t a true punishment so Blaise would be able to intervene if Draco got too heavy handed. The question now was, did he want to do this tonight or put it off until he gained more confidence. Would he gain more confidence the longer he waited or would waiting make him lose his nerve? Damn it he was coming towards a huge hurdle and he wasn’t sure if he could leap over it or if he’d fall flat on his face.

Harry was snuggled up with Blaise on the settee. He hadn’t told the brunet about his plan to ask Draco to spank him again; he wasn’t sure how he would react to it.

Draco walked into the room and sat down opposite them, he still wasn’t confident enough to sit near the both of them, he was afraid that every small move would get him kicked out of their rooms permanently. It wasn’t anyway to live.

After sitting in a tense silence for ten minutes with no one saying a damn word and the air getting thicker with tension, Harry snapped.

“Right, I can’t put up with this any longer!” He burst out suddenly.

Draco looked alarmed, more than likely thinking that he had done something wrong and was going to be rejected for it.

“We can’t live like this!” Harry told them, standing between them and looking from one to the other. “I want this sorted out, NOW!”
“What do you suggest, Harry?” Blaise asked.

“I need to get over my fear of Draco unexpectedly touching me and you need to prove that you can touch me without hurting me, Draco and we all need to forget that this happened!”

“How?” Draco asked.

“You need to spank me again.” Harry rushed out with a burning face. “You have to control yourself enough not to hurt me, to not go overboard.”

“You…you want me to spank you?” Draco asked as if he hadn’t quite heard right. “I thought you never wanted me to do it again.”

“I’ve been enlightened that every dominant has a punishment technique that is instinctual, Blaise’s is squeezing, yours is spanking, you can’t change that, Draco, it would be like asking me to change my scale colour to orange.”

“Harry, are you sure about this?” Blaise asked seriously.

“Yes and if he gets out of hand you can intervene this time, Blaise, it isn’t a real punishment because I’ve asked him to do it.”

Blaise nodded and he moved to sit right next to Draco, who tensed up slightly at the proximity of the other dominant.

Harry breathed to calm himself as he slipped his trousers off of his legs, leaving him standing in front of both of his dominant mates in only his over large boxer shorts and his white school button up shirt. He was regretting this idea already. He felt like a tiny child standing in front of his parents waiting for a huge telling off and a cuff around the ear. Only he had never had parents to ‘cuff him around the ear’ he just got a harsh beating before he was thrown into his cupboard, or was locked in his room when he was older, and that was his punishment done with.

“Come here, Harry.” Draco coaxed him. Fuck, his voice had gone sexily gruff; the bastard was getting aroused from this.

Harry swallowed heavily, his pride going down as well, yet he kept a very tight hold onto his dignity, he would not lose that, this was his idea after all, Draco was HIS and no one, not even his Dracken was taking his blond brute from him.

Harry positioned himself over Draco’s lap, his head in Blaise’s lap, his oldest mate combing slender fingers through his hair, tugging on it soothingly as Draco slowly and hesitantly pulled down Harry’s boxers and bared his bum.

Harry’s face was almost purple red with his embarrassment as Draco’s hand caressed his bum cheeks; he was finding it difficult to breathe.

The first slap had Harry jumping, but it was nowhere near as hard as Draco had hit him the first time, but still Blaise held onto Draco’s shoulder with one hand whilst the other caressed Harry’s cheek.

“How was that, Harry?” Blaise asked him.

“Better than the first time. I just wasn’t expecting it.”

Draco smacked him again and Harry felt the sting, the brief burning pain in his bum, before Draco smacked his other bum cheek. Harry tried to think of having sex with Blaise, but as Draco’s hand came down it ruined the fantasy and he couldn’t think of anything but Draco’s strong hand smacking against his skin.

Harry resorted to the last thing he possibly could to turn this experience sexual, jabbing himself against Draco’s hip. He wasn’t really expecting it to work, so when he started to get hard he let out a surprised moan, which stopped both of his dominants dead.

“How are you getting off on this?” Blaise asked nearly silently, shocked and a little bit incredulous.

“Maybe.” Harry answered as he thrust against Draco’s hip again.

Draco shifted and Harry was no longer bumping his hip but rubbing over his thigh, which was so much more pleasurable. He let out a small whimper, which turned into a moan when Draco’s hand came down on his bum again.

Seven more slaps and Harry barely noticed as he rubbed against Draco like a shameless whore, he did notice however when he was suddenly hoisted up and his mouth was attacked with lips, tongue and teeth. His lower body was straddling Draco’s lap, a lap with a very, very hard piece of anatomy pressing against him.

A body moved to the side of him as a mouth attached itself to his neck and suckled, Harry let out a small whimper into the mouth that was attacking his own, a strong tongue mapping out the inside of his mouth.

His mouth was released as Draco moved to nibble along his neck, but Harry didn’t have time to pout as his mouth was taken once more by the very familiar tongue and teeth of Blaise, who tried to suffocate Harry by trying to crawl down his throat.

Draco tore his mouth from his neck and let out a deep growling moan as Harry started rocking his hips in his lap, seeking release. Large hands cupped his bum and moved his body faster, pushed him down harder and a whimper was forced from his throat.

A breeze on his shoulder had his head moving so he could see Blaise undoing the buttons on his shirt, leaving him dressed only in a pair of boxers. Harry turned back to face those lustful silver eyes, moving his hands to tug off the silver and green tie. Oh hell, he was going to have sex with Draco for the first time on their living room settee.

Harry’s mouth was claimed with Draco’s tongue and he rocked more firmly on the blond’s lap as a coiling pressure built up in his gut. He was close to orgasm now and he wanted it, he wanted to feel that blinding white release.

A naked chest pressing against his naked back had Harry wrenching his mouth from Draco and looking over his shoulder to Blaise, who was completely naked and not a damn bit ashamed about it.

Blaise grinned lecherously at him and moved to take over the inside of his mouth again. Harry felt a small pressure on his bottom lip and realised that Blaise’s fangs were out, opening his eyes, which had closed in pleasure and passion, he saw those black wings with their glinting amethyst scales.

Another set of fangs, bigger than Blaise’s went through his skin around his nipple and Harry arched as his nipple was sucked and flicked and licked with a strong tongue.

“How far do you want to go, Harry?” Blaise asked against his lips, detaching himself to speak and to breathe.

“All the way.” Harry replied breathlessly, holding Draco’s head to his nipple by those silky blond locks.

Blaise didn’t ask him if he was sure, didn’t advise him that maybe waiting would be better, instead he just nodded his head and went right back to pleasuring Harry. Harry loved that about Blaise that he trusted him to know what he wanted and didn’t second guess him.

Blaise lifted him from Draco’s lap and sat down on the settee with him on his own lap, for a moment Harry had believed that he would have to smack him for not sharing and for taking him from Draco, but then he realised that Draco had indicated to Blaise to take Harry from his lap and it was obvious why as Draco started stripping himself from his clothes.

Harry watched entranced as pale, pale skin was revealed, his jaw ached to bite red marks onto that unblemished skin. As if thinking the same thing, Blaise moved Harry back in his lap, bending him backwards, until Harry’s mouth was level with one of those hugely muscled thighs. Harry sank his teeth, and the fangs that he hadn’t known were present, into that thick thigh covered in delicate, almost invisible, silvery blond hairs. The muscle jumped under his mouth, but Harry let go with his teeth and laved his mark with an apologetic tongue, licking and lapping before Draco wrenched his mouth away and bent down to claim it with his own.
Kisses and small nips to his belly had Harry writhing and wriggling on Blaise’s lap, making small noises that were devoured by Draco.

Harry was hefted upwards and his neck almost snapped with the unexpected movement, but Draco’s hands quickly cradled the back of his head as Blaise pulled him back up to lean against his front.

His two dominants growled at each other, but Harry couldn’t for the life of him figure out why, not that he cared as he smacked the both of them upside the head.

“You have a choice, you can either both fuck me, or you can both fight each other, you can’t do both.”

Blaise pulled Harry until he was on his knees pressed against Blaise’s body, he was held there by a strong arm wrapped around his waist. Nothing happened.

Harry wriggled and was about to ask what the hell was going on when a smooth, lubricated finger pressed into his body. His head fell back with a breathy moan, he tried to move on that finger as it caressed his inner walls, but Blaise’s arm wouldn’t move.

A second set of hands holding his upper body up had Harry moving restlessly as one finger became two and he moved more insistently to get those fingers deeper in his body.

“Please.” He begged.

“You need to be properly prepared.” Blaise told him stiffly, his voice strained.

Harry let out a frustrated little groan, but he forgot about his frustration as his head was pulled back by his hair and Draco’s tongue took up residence in his mouth.

Harry was jolted as his hips were gripped and he was pulled down on top of Blaise’s hard, blunt shaft, the cock slipping inside of him slowly as his insides gripped at it tightly.

Blaise clenched his teeth and cursed in Italian as he lowered Harry down until there wasn’t enough space between them to fit a piece of parchment. Harry wriggled and twisted, trying to get Blaise to move within him, but those hands didn’t leave his hips.

Draco lightly bit the back of his neck and Harry gasped, rocking in Blaise’s lap, which caused Blaise to let out a muffled shout of surprised pleasure.

Blaise lifted him slowly and carefully from his lap, before letting him slip back down. Harry cried out at the blissful sensation and placed his hands on Blaise’s shoulders and moved himself quicker and let himself drop back down. Blaise’s hands on his hips still controlled the majority of his movements, but Harry didn’t care as Blaise finally found his prostate and jabbed it.
“Blaise!” Harry moaned as he shifted his knees deeper into the settee cushions to help elevate himself better.

Blaise growled lowly as he bucked under his little mate, pushing himself into Harry as much as he could as his submissive dropped down onto him.

They set a fast and furious pace ready to bring their release as quickly as possible, unable to stand the gut clenching coiling much longer.

Harry released first, helped on by Draco, who had reverently started stroking his hard cock between his and Blaise’s bodies. The alternating speed of Blaise thrusting into him hard and fast and Draco softly, gently caressing him in slow movements had Harry screaming his pleasure to the ceiling.

Hot liquid spilt into his body and Harry let out a soft moan as Blaise slowed down his movements before stopping completely holding Harry to him with almost crushing pressure, before loosening his hold and softly rubbing Harry’s back.

Harry yawned sleepily, but before he could fall asleep in Blaise’s comforting embrace, he was passed off to another warm, muscled body, one that was still hard and in dire need of release.

Draco kissed him almost desperately and Harry kissed him back, arching his body as a hand slid between his legs and cupped his balls and the base of his rapidly hardening cock. The tip of a thumb was pressed into his stretched and leaking entrance and Harry gasped in pleasure and slight shock.

His body quivered as Draco moved him to sit straddling him, in almost exactly the same position as Blaise had had him, only his legs were wrapped around Draco’s waist and not bent and pressing into the settee cushions. He had no control in this position and his head fell back when Draco cupped his bum and pulled him up before carefully lowering him onto his cock.

Harry couldn’t help but compare the feeling of Draco being inside of him to Blaise. Blaise was longer but Draco was definitely thicker, it made his blood feel thicker as Draco wrapped muscled arms around him to keep him in place as he started bucking his hips to move that cock inside of him.

Harry let out a keening mewl as he wrapped his arms around Draco’s shoulders and let himself be moved, there wasn’t much else that he could do in this position except to feel and occasionally tighten his muscles around Draco, which got him a primal growl and a harsh thrust.

Harry felt Draco’s thrusts get harder and deeper, more rushed and Harry knew now, after much practice with Blaise, that the blond was getting close to orgasm. Harry clenched his muscles around Draco as often as his pleasured brain could handle. A smooth, dry hand wrapped around his cock and Harry looked into deep, lust filled indigo eyes before a mouth claiming his had his fully attention again.

Harry quivered and arched as the tightening sensation in his gut came to its peak, he could feel the blood rushing around his body as he locked eyes with stunning silver before his orgasm took him over.

“Draco!” Harry managed to scream before his mouth was seized once again by the blond, who gave out a muffled groan and emptied himself into Harry, his release joining Blaise’s.
Harry must have blacked out; either that or he had fallen unconscious because the next he knew he was lying in a soft bed with two warm, sleeping bodies on either side of him and no way to tell how much time had passed.

Groaning Harry started to move into a more comfortable position, but as pain speared through his lower body, he decided against it and lay back down in the soft warm bed, cuddling into the body he was facing and dragging the arm of the body at his back closer so that he could wrap himself in it like a cocoon.

Neither of his mates had thought it a good idea to pull the duvet over them and he was going to beat the both of them for their lack of foresight. No matter, he’d use their body parts as his heater and if they complained, well it wasn’t him who had forgotten to cover them all up after all, he had been fucked unconscious.

Yawning Harry snuggled into someone’s back and cuddled the arm in his grasp tighter and he slipped off to sleep again, before he had to get up and get ready for lessons in the morning.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

A/N: Have a nose at the descriptions of the Drackens that are either in the story or that are suitors of Harry’s. Feel free to ask questions, but just so you know these descriptions are very basic guidelines only and some of them you have never even heard of before and some might not even appear in the story at all.

Arsenio Demetrius

42 years old with cropped black hair that is thinning and greying at the temples. He is Greek and lives in his homeland of Athens in Greece. He has charcoal eyes and black wings with slate grey scales. He has a few scars on his face, the most prominent of which is a claw scar running the length of his left cheek which he got from insulting a submissive when he was 22.

Arsenio is kind and gentle with Harry despite his harsh appearance and demeanour and holds Harry’s hand like it is made of spun glass. He is courteous and polite, respecting not only Harry’s wishes but Blaise’s as well.

Arsenio is 6 foot 3 inches tall with a slender frame. He enjoys politics and debating and has a Ministry job back in his home of Greece.

Maximilius Diadesen Maddox? (Maddison)

31 years old but has a self-admitted mental age of 12. He is 6 foot 8 inches tall and has thick brown hair and gorgeous, deep blue, sapphire coloured eyes. He has bright blue, 28 foot wings with cobalt blue and coal black scales.
He enjoys cooking and eating as well as reading in front of fires. He dislikes the cold and becomes reclusive in the winter months. He is a Potions Master having gotten his mastery at 26, one of the youngest to ever do so. He currently works for a potions company that makes and sells potions to stock hospitals chemists and small clinics all over Britain.

Max’s laugh is deep and alluring, it sexually arouses Harry who is at the right height to lick Max’s nipples.

Max is very muscled and very fit. Harry can only just about wrap his legs around his waist.

Nasta Tabrien Delericey

36 years old, nearly 37 his birthday being on the 3rd of February. He is 6 foot 6 inches tall with jet black, 26 foot wings and yellowish-gold scales. He always has a small growth of stubble on his face. He has pitch black hair that is ear length and floppy. He has soft hazel eyes that have a goldish-green tint to them; in different light settings they can appear fully green or fully gold.

He isn’t as obviously muscled as most of the other Dracken’s whom Harry compares to bodybuilders; the muscles Nasta has are solid and compacted from manual labour and Harry notes that they strain his clothing every time he moves ‘like they want to break free of their confines.’

Nasta is a nice man, but misunderstood at times due to the fact that he doesn’t speak much. He was born and raised in West Wales and works as a Dragon handler on the Welsh Dragon Reserve.

Nasta can write, read and speak fluently in several different languages and can convey what he means with just a look. He smells like musk and fire and his presence soothes Harry to the point where he can relax so much he falls asleep.

Nasta is not a jealous or possessive lover and would punish his mate by laying his teeth against the submissive’s inner wrist and biting down just enough to hurt. He finds the idea of Harry standing up for himself sexy and is a very confident man.

Nasta finds the idea of a dominant abusing a submissive repulsive and becomes very angry if it is mentioned near him.

Nasta drinks pure fruit juices, his Father having not allowed him to drink any coffee or carbonated drinks as a child or teenager.

Henley Jackson

Sixteen years old, birthday on the 17th of December. He is 5 foot 10 inches tall with a slender, only slightly muscled, willowy, gangly body that has the typical still growing teenage awkwardness and he has wavy copper brown hair which keeps flopping into his left eye causing him to constantly swipe it away and milk chocolate coloured eyes. He has a pretty, boyish mouth, rounded cheeks and a cheeky, toothy smile. His wings are 19 feet in length and are beige coloured with lemon yellow and light brown scales the colour of Demerara sugar.
He is quite naïve due to his age and reminds Harry of a crack addicted puppy. Henley loves Quidditch and swimming. He talks a lot and needs a bit more confidence.

He has an older sister who is also a Dracken, who is mated and a very over protective Mother and a Father who is pushing him to be mated.

Elder Quintalus Trintus

- 67 years old with short silvery grey hair. He is 6 foot exactly and gives the impression of a once fit and strong man grown frail with age. His eyes are a deep brown and are very kind.

Trintus is now an Elder of the Dracken counsel and has earned the title of submissive chaperone. He has a female submissive whom he married several years after their mateship; they have had eight clutches of chicks and have twenty-seven children. None of them were Drackens.

Elder Justo Getus

- 63 years old with longish, slicked back iron grey hair turned black in places with oil. He has brown eyes that have the appearance of ice. He is mated to a female submissive and has never seen the need to marry her. They had twelve clutches of chicks and have thirty-nine children, none of them were Drackens.

He has twelve grandchildren and only one of them was a Dracken, Dominic. Elder Getus is a determined and stern man who stops at nothing to get what he wants. This determination comes across as obsession.

Jensen Cian Kyron

- 33 years old with dark blonde almost brown hair and brown eyes. He has 25 foot, forest green wings and ocean blue and mint green scales. He is very adventurous and enjoys all outdoor activities, though he admits that rock climbing is by far is favourite.

Jensen is 6 foot 1 inches tall and is athletically built. He has gained muscles from the many different sports he partakes in. Jensen is energetic and strongly motivated to keep himself in shape which he has confessed to stemming from a childhood fear of becoming overweight.

He is nearly obsessed with his health and watches everything he eats; he proudly boasts that he has never had a tooth cavity and states that his family has not had any degenerative inherited diseases in four decades.

- Elijah ‘Eli’ Waterstone
28 years old. Birthday is March 10th. Eli has dark red hair and light blue eyes he is a fierce and loyal man who would stop at nothing to protect those he loves and believes that family is the most important thing in the world. He is just shy of 6 foot and his wings are 24 and a half foot long. They are a deep garnet colour with Heliotrope and cerise coloured scales.

Eli works very hard in the bookshop that his Mother owns and spends every spare minute with his family. He often babysits his Nieces and Nephews for his two sisters and his brother, none of which are Drackens.

Declan Yates

26 years old. Light brown hair and grey eyes. He has 22 foot wings that are cornflower blue. He has pearl white and dove grey scales.

Declan is a lawyer as well as owning his own law firm. He is very devoted to his job and it is because of this that submissives do not pick him as a mate.

He isn’t interested in sports or physical games, preferring his job over everything else. He often eats out after confessing that he does not know how to cook past making himself a sandwich.

Declan spends his evenings doing paperwork and if he has time before he falls asleep he will read an interesting murder mystery book.

Bartholomew Nasri

50 years old. Very pale blonde hair that is nearly completely grey and black eyes. Amber coloured 23 foot wings and champagne coloured scales.

Bartholomew has been married twice, but has no children from his marriages. Both of his ex-wives (Humans) left him because he could not stop himself from reacting to the call of a submissive and forcing him to attend submissive meetings.

He believes himself to be too old to find a mate and laments that he may never settle down and have a family due to his inability to find a human mate who will put up with him constantly rushing all over the world to find a submissive.

StarLight Massacre. X

Chapter Fifteen – Quidditch

After that one night spent together, Harry moved Draco into the bedroom immediately and permanently. It was a tight squeeze in their platform bed meant for two, but it could fit the three of them if they all snuggled together.

Harry had chewed out both Draco and Blaise for not bothering to pull the duvet over them all and both had promised that the next time they would make sure to tuck him in.

Harry happily waltzed down to the Great Hall and sat in between Blaise and Draco, the blond sitting so close to him that their legs were squished from hip to knee, whereas before Draco had opted to sit on the opposite side of the table. Blaise automatically filled Harry’s plate with all of his favourite fruits and a few slices of wholemeal toast.

Harry reached for the jar of jam and happily spread the apricot flavoured preserve thickly onto his toast. He finished it off and then went onto his slices of banana.

Draco watched avidly as he had been doing for the last couple of months, observing Harry’s routine and learning his favourite foods and what were just passing fancies. When Harry reached out to grab the jug of pure, freshly squeezed, apple juice, Draco beat him to it and poured him a glass of the chilled juice with a small smile.
Harry lent over and kissed him happily on the lips in thanks. A loud squeal and the sound of flesh hitting solid wood made the two look over and down the table to little, fourteen year old Astoria Greengrass, who by the looks of it had pounded her small fists into the table, a scowl taking over her reddening face.

“What do you think you’re doing?!” She demanded. “He’s my fiancé!”

“We were loosely betrothed, Astoria, a betrothal that I have already written to my Father about breaking, you should be receiving the news either this morning or tomorrow morning depending on how important my Father deems you to be. I would expect it tomorrow at the earliest.” Draco replied coldly as he held Harry’s hand tightly on top of the table.

Harry sighed. He had heard all of this directly from Draco and he hadn’t been happy about it, until Draco had assured him that it was a fall back plan. The terms of the betrothal were that if Draco and Astoria were not married to anyone else before Draco was twenty-five and Astoria twenty-three, then they would marry each other to carry on the name of Malfoy.

With Draco now near enough mated to Harry for life the terms of the contract were broken and the betrothal would never be fulfilled. Harry took satisfaction in that small victory, Draco didn’t even like Astoria Greengrass, it would have been unfair to have married the two together and then force them to have sex to create an Heir to the Malfoy name.

Harry glared at the young girl, feeling very possessive and slightly jealous that this…girl could have been married to his mate. He situated himself in Draco’s lap and he snuggled in, enjoying both the feel of Draco’s arms coming up around him, holding him tightly and the look on Astoria’s face.

Blaise scooted over to the seat that Harry had vacated and hooked an arm under Draco’s and held Harry’s hand.

Harry revelled in the jealous looks he received. His mates would never leave him and he would never leave them, people could look all they wanted, but if they dared to touch what was his, then he’d carve them up like so much meat.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Harry saw other Drackens floating around the school like ghosts as he went from class to class, it had unsettled him and he didn’t like them being so close to him when he hadn’t actually had his bonding heat with Draco yet. He had gone to Dumbledore when he next had a spare moment to see what was going on and the Headmaster had assured him that if any one of them so much as touched him then they would be restricted back to the Dracken compound, but they had become so restless stuck in the same building, no matter how big, with over a hundred other Drackens that it was becoming borderline cruel and there had been so many fights breaking out that the Elders were finding it difficult to keep control of the situation.

So Dumbledore had graciously allowed them to wander around the school and the extensive grounds and even allowed them to hunt the non-magical animals in the Forbidden Forest. Their presence was explained away as them being foreign students, and their supervisors in the case of the older dominants, doing a research trip to find out how magical England educated their young witches and wizards. Max hadn’t been able to stop laughing when Harry had told him this excuse and he had vowed to put on a false accent and ask every Hogwarts student that he met insanely difficult questions, calling them stupid as they inevitably got the answers wrong. Harry just shook his head having a little laugh about it.

Nasta had given a small smile and held him closer on their rock by the lake. He stated that he had been sneaking onto the grounds to see him for weeks, so he didn’t need the new freedom to see him. When Harry had told him about what Max was planning to do he let out a soft snort and a muttered ‘he always was childish’ before going back to nuzzle Harry’s hair, whilst simultaneously playing with the small fingers of his left hand.

As soon as the Drackens had permission to be on the grounds, Harry saw Arsenio for the first time since their walk through the Dracken house; Harry grinned at him and accepted the light kiss to the cheek. Draco had growled lowly and Arsenio had looked to him coldly.

“This is Draco, my second mate.” Harry explained.

“I see. I did not think you would enjoy the attentions and…limitations, of such a jealously natured mate.”

“I have every right to be jealous with you laying your hands on my mate!” Draco hissed.

“Hmm, I liked your first mate better, Harry. At least Blaise wasn’t as puerile and could actually control himself.”

Harry could see the friction and the tension rising and he sighed. Draco was not making the prospect of finding a third mate appealing. He absolutely refused to let Harry be near any potential mate that was older than twenty-five and he was downright hostile to anyone over the age of thirty, which included Max, Nasta, Jensen and especially to Arsenio, who at forty-two, was near the same age as Lucius Malfoy, Draco’s Father.

“Draco, please.” Harry pleaded gently, laying a small hand on Draco’s arm.

“He’s old enough to be our Father!” Draco bit out.

“My Father is dead, Draco.” Harry said firmly. “I don’t remember a thing about him! Being with an older mate doesn’t bother me, I’ve never really had a Father to compare ages to, so having a lover that is however old doesn’t register to me as being inappropriate.”

“It should.”

“But it doesn’t, so stop acting like this and let me do what I need to do to get all of my mates so I can have a family of my own.”

Draco growled and crossed his arms over his chest. He was still feeling unsettled and very possessive and he would continue to feel as such until Harry had gone through the final stage of his heat with him present. Then he would either return to near enough normal or Harry would get pregnant and his possessive and protective instincts would fly through the roof.

He watched sulkily as Harry laughed and strutted around with that Greek granddad and he felt his Dracken curl in anger inside of him. That man had no right to touch what was his!

Harry sighed as he curled into Blaise later that afternoon. Draco had made his morning nigh on impossible to enjoy. He was so jealous it was unreal. How could he find his third mate if Draco acted like an arsehole every time he spoke to someone?

Popping a cherry into his mouth, Harry nibbled all of the juicy red flesh from it and poked the stone back out with his tongue, placing it in a small rubbish bag that was by his hand that he was using for the stalks and stones.

Blaise watched him indulgently; a small smile across those sensuous lips as he tried once again to translate the book that Harry had given to him for Christmas.

Draco was on his other side of Blaise finishing his Potions essay, which was at least three foot longer than what was asked for, but as Draco had explained, where Granger just threw in every fact that she could find from the books that she read, he genuinely had a lot to say on the subject and found it difficult to curb himself to just a few feet of parchment. Draco actually enjoyed Potions, and he didn’t just love them, he adored them. It had nothing to do with him being a Slytherin, or that Snape was practically his Godfather in all but official documents, Draco got straight Os in Potions because he damn well worked for them.

Harry hadn’t known that you could go over the stated length for an essay, he’d thought that Hermione did just because she was Hermione, but in actuality the length of an essay given was the minimal amount that the Professor would accept, true he had trouble writing the required length in most of his subjects, but all of the time he had spent editing and cutting bits out of his Defence essays to make it exactly the length that was required, wasted. He could have handed in his essay as it was, gotten much higher marks and been credited for it on top.

No more, now his Defence essays were nearly as long as Draco’s Potions essays and with both Blaise and Draco helping and tutoring him in all of his classes so he could actually do the work himself now, who needed to copy Hermione’s fact riddled homework?

Harry startled as the cherry he had reached for was picked up by a large pale hand before he could grab it, Draco held it to his mouth with a smirk and a raised eyebrow. Harry chuckled and he sucked the cherry, and Draco’s fingers, into his mouth. He gave the fingers a little flick with his tongue before letting them pull out from his mouth.

Blaise snorted softly beside him in amusement and lent forward to press a soft kiss to Harry’s cheek as he chewed up the cherry flesh and poked out the stone.

“Why didn’t you just ask for pitted cherries?” Draco asked wrinkling his nose as Harry put the nibbled clean stone into his rubbish bag.

“Because they lose their juices and I find them dryer.” Harry replied simply. “They taste better this way, fresher.”

Draco rolled his eyes and went back to his Potions essay. The room went back to near silence, the only sounds were the scratching of Draco’s quill and the rustling of Blaise’s parchment as Harry finished off his large bowl of cherries and settled down to take a short nap, pillowing his head on Blaise’s thigh.

Harry was shaken awake after what seemed like only a few minutes. He groaned and pushed at the hand that was rubbing his back firmly to wake him up.

“Go ‘way.” He mumbled sleepily.

“Prezioso, it’s dinner time.” Blaise murmured to him softly.

Harry groaned as he forced himself upright, Blaise’s hands on his back helping him up. Harry stretched and yawned and still he felt so tired that he would rather just curl up and go back to sleep rather than go down to the Great Hall to eat.

“I think we might have to carry him.” Draco’s smooth voice sounded close by, the blond was amused.

“Fine, just don’t drop me.” Harry answered, holding his arms out to where he had heard Draco’s voice.
“You’re serious?”

“You offered.” Harry countered.

Harry had only been partly joking, but arms wrapped around his waist and hoisted him up before he could swing his feet off of the settee and stand up on his own. He was held closely and securely on Draco’s hip and Harry blushed a light pink.

“I was only joking!”

Draco smirked. “It’s alright if you want to be carried.” The blond stated. “I don’t mind carrying you from place to place.”

Harry rolled his eyes, but he didn’t make a fuss. Blaise had carried him around when they had first mated as well, true it had been from the Great Hall back to their rooms so no one saw them, but he just didn’t care what people thought anymore.

He was a fucking submissive male Draken! Why should such pathetic, human nattering bother him? All that mattered was his mates and his children, nothing else mattered, nothing else even came close to gaining his attention. Let the humans say what they wanted, as long as he had his mates and his future children, everything in his life was perfect.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

People stared, people pointed, First years gasped and all students of all ages whispered that the evil Draco Malfoy, son of the ex-Death Eater Lucius Malfoy, had hurt the wizarding world’s Saviour, the Defeater of Voldemort and his horde of vile Death Eaters.

Harry rolled his eyes to Blaise, who was walking behind Draco, keeping eye contact with Harry, who had his head pillowed on Draco’s wide shoulder. Honestly if Draco had hurt him why the hell would he carry his injured body into the Great Hall where there were twenty adult witches and wizards sitting at the Head table?

Harry was pulled from his resting place and he let out a small squawk at the sudden action. Draco sat down on the bench at the Slytherin table and sat Harry comfortably on his lap, holding him loosely around the waist.

Harry didn’t even try to move from where Draco had placed him, he knew the minute he moved to get off of Draco’s lap, those arms would tighten and tense and become unmovable steel bands or at least Blaise’s always did when he tried to move and his mate didn’t want him to, he didn’t see why Draco would be any different.
He scanned the table and nothing really took his fancy as Draco and Blaise both served themselves gracefully with all the manners that had been beaten into their young, impressionable minds. He tried not to notice the piles of meat they had served themselves nor the dishes and plates of the foul smelling animal bits up and down the table.

He was in the final stages of his heat now, only about a week to go before he was dragged off for ten days to have his body so pleasurably abused by his two dominants. He wondered how it would work. There were two of them now, what was going to happen? How would the both of them handle the heat? Would they take it in turns like they had during that night on the settee? Would they fight each other with their Drackens in charge of their mind and bodies? He wanted to ask one of the older Drackens, but he was too embarrassed.

“Aren’t you hungry, Bello?” Blaise asked.

Harry sighed. “Not really.”

Harry scooped a spoonful of vegetable rice onto his plate and added a couple of spoons of assorted steamed vegetables and picked at the small amount of food he had with his fork.

“Are you unwell again, Harry?”

Harry, and most of the Slytherin’s around them, looked to see Ginny Weasley confidently standing behind them. She placed the back of her hand against Harry’s forehead, ignoring the growls from both Blaise and Draco.

“You feel a bit heated. You better not be sick again, you hear me. The crucial game is tomorrow! Can’t you hold your illness at bay for another day? No, make that two days, we need you at the after party when we win.”

“Potter’s playing tomorrow?” The Ravenclaw Quidditch Captain, Roger Davis, asked with horror written on his face. He had overheard Ginny talking, not surprising seeing as he was sat almost directly behind where she was standing.

“He sure is, Roger-boy.” Ginny answered with a grin. “If he can hold his sickness off until tomorrow that is.”

“I’m sure I can play tomorrow, Gin.” Harry answered. “But I can feel the sickness creeping up on me again. This sucks.”
“Damn right it does, as long as you’re better for when we play Hufflepuff.”

Harry rolled his eyes and took a nibble of some steamed broccoli. Roger Davis was rushing up and down the Ravenclaw table rounding up his team. They were whining and complaining about being dragged from their dinners, until he shut them up with a curt “Potter is fit enough to play tomorrow! He’s back on the Gryffindor team and we have been practising for Weasley being the Seeker! Get your arses on the pitch.”

Harry chuckled lightly. “Think they’ll get in enough practice to beat lil old me by tomorrow?”

“Not a chance.” Ginny stated happily. “You heard Davis, they’ve been practising for me being the Seeker and I’m nowhere near your league, you could go pro if you wanted to.”

“You just have a head on your shoulders, Gin. Me, I don’t care what it takes as long as that snitch is in my hand at the end of the match.”

“Or in your mouth.” Ginny added slyly.

Harry grinned as he remembered his first ever match and nodded. “I don’t care where it ends up as long as I still get the points for catching it.”

Harry burst out laughing and almost choked on a baby carrot.

“That is a vile discussion to have whilst we are dining, Weasley. Are you so uncouth that you cannot restrain yourself whilst others are eating?” Parkinson sniffed pompously, delicately dabbing her mouth with a napkin before folding her knife over her fork and pushing her half eaten plate away from her body.
“Well everyone else dining has to put up with your vile face, Parkinson, I’m sure they can handle the conversation.” Ginny scathed back.

“Why you disgusting little blood traitor!”

“Don’t you speak to her like that!” Harry hissed, flicking a spoonful of buttered peas at the rude Slytherin.

“Don’t play with your food, Harry.” Draco admonished lightly, but otherwise ignored that his mate had just thrown a spoonful of peas and butter at his housemate, who was squawking and shrieking at her butter stained robes.

“These robes are made from crushed velvet, Potter! Velvet!”

“Then maybe you should have worn plain cotton ones like everyone else.” Harry stated simply, scooping up some rice to nibble on.

Ginny was roaring with laughter behind him and leant forward to rest against Draco’s back, who stiffened and opened his mouth to demand her to get the hell off of him, but Harry pushed a baby corn into his mouth and pecked his lips with a smile.

He reached over and tugged on Ginny’s flaming red hair and grinned at her, laughing lightly at her obvious, and infectious, laughter.

Ginny wrapped her arms around Malfoy and squeezed him.

“Damn Harry, why do you get all the good ones? Just feel these shoulders!”

“Stop molesting my ma…boyfriend please, Ginny.”

“What were you going to say before boyfriend hmm, Harry?” Ginny asked with a salacious grin. “Have you given Malfoy here a cute nickname? Suppose anything’s better than pale, pointy ferret.”

“That does it, get off of me, Weasley! Now!”
“Tetchy tetchy. So what is his nickname, Harry?” Ginny asked again as she straightened up before she fell flat on her face because Draco had twisted his shoulder out from under her.

“I was going to say man, but they don’t like me calling them my man, says it sounds too plebeian.” Harry said to cover himself.

“It is plebeian.” Draco sniffed, puffing himself up like a peacock.

Ginny giggled girlishly at Draco’s actions and Harry gave her a look which clearly stated that she was losing it. It made her giggle harder.

“I’ll be fighting fit for tomorrow, Ginny, have you told Ron that he isn’t playing?”

“Umm, well…no. Not yet.”

“Ginny! The match is tomorrow morning!”

“You’re the Captain!”

“You’re the Captain that let him onto the team!”

“You kicked Weasley off the team?” Blaise asked.

“Of course I did. He’s atrocious.”

“He wasn’t in try-outs!” Ginny defended.

“Well he is during the games and every practice we’ve had thus far. Put McLaggen on, brute can’t be any worse than Ron.”

“Oh Harry! He’s awful! He thinks I’m the Captain still and he won’t stop bombarding me with tips
“Then I’ll cut him down to size and if he refuses to reform we’ll use Pauley Hendix.”

“Right, okay, we’ve practised with both. Hendix is young, but he’s a damn good Keeper.”

“It’s because he was the Keeper when he used to play Football when he was a kid, got right into the under elevens league, could have gone pro if he hadn’t have given it up to come to Hogwarts. I mean being on a broom is different to being on the ground and of course in Football you don’t have balls being thrown at you or Bludgers and snitches, but it’s essentially the same thing, stop the ball from going in the hoop or rather the net in Football.”

“You lost me, but I’ll just nod and pretend that you aren’t crazy.” Ginny stated, patting his head and leaving them for her Gryffindor friends.

Harry smiled as he watched her bounce away, her hair swinging wildly. He snuggled into Draco and yawned.

“Have you finished, Harry?” His blond pillow asked. “You’ve barely touched a thing.”

“I’m done; I think I’m just tired.”

“Weasley said that you were heated.”

“Of course I am, my next heat period is in approximately a week, I got flushed the last time I neared my heat as well.”

Draco nodded and he stood up, this time with Harry in his arms, one arm under the bend in his knees and the other wrapped around his middle and his hand holding the top of Harry’s leg. Harry’s arms went around Draco’s neck and he yawned more deeply as he placed his head on Draco’s shoulder.

Blaise walked beside them this time and Harry noticed that there were only a couple of inches between their heights, but Draco was obviously taller and broader. Blaise was more slender, but hell if that man couldn’t pack a punch.
Harry woke up the next day draped over Blaise. He blinked and looked blearily around his bedroom and yawned widely.

He was lying on his stomach, on top of Blaise, who was lying on his back, the Italian’s left arm was wrapped around Harry’s back, the other was under Draco’s neck, who was sleeping on his side, pressed against both Harry and Blaise. The blond was sleeping on his left arm; the other was wrapped over Harry’s hip and was fisting the waistband of Blaise’s boxer shorts.

One thing Harry knew for certain, he was not getting out of the bed without waking the both of them up. He groaned and tried to extract himself from the pile of bodies, but he failed spectacularly when he slipped in his groggy state of mind and accidentally kneeled Blaise between the legs.

His part Italian, part French lover woke up with a scream that had Draco shooting up in the bed, his silver and pale blue wings bursting from his back in a spray of blood and wrapping tightly around Harry.

“What in the name of Merlin is wrong with you?!” Draco demanded as he realised that they were in no imminent danger and that the scream had come from Blaise.

“It was my fault.” Harry answered. “I tried to get out of the bed without waking the both of you up and I might have accidentally kneeled Blaise in the groin.”

Draco chuckled gruffly, his voice still sleep roughened. Harry shivered as he heard it.

“I have to get ready, I have a match today.”

“Can’t you get ready without crushing my balls?” Blaise asked in a shaky voice.

“I’m sorry, Blaise; want me to kiss them better?” Harry teased.

Blaise grinned naughtily. “Yes actually, I do.”

Harry snorted and pushed his mates away to go stumble down the winding stairs that attached to the wall. He stumbled his way into the bathroom and stumbled into the shower. He’d be taking another one after the match, but he needed one now just to wake himself up.
Draco was outside the shower cubicle washing his face, Harry saw Blaise walk in with a pile of scarlet robes. His Quidditch robes. Blaise laid them on the bench outside the shower and went to wrestle with Draco for the mirror so that he could brush his teeth.

“You two are like a bunch of girls.” Harry told them as he stepped out of the shower wearing a fluffy towel.

He patted himself dry and jumped into his pale yellow Quidditch leggings. It was unfortunate that they were so skin tight that there was no room to wear any underwear; he doubted that even the girls could fit a thong underneath them.

He towelled his hair roughly and when he deemed it dry enough he threw the towel into the hamper for the house-elves. He pulled on his skin tight Quidditch vest, also in pale yellow, before sitting down to pull on the bright scarlet socks with two yellow stripes on the tops.

“You look gorgeous just like that.” Blaise told him, leering at him through the mirror.

“Doesn’t leave much to the imagination.” Harry grinned back, cupping himself through the stretchy leggings.

Draco chuckled. “You should have shared a locker room with Flint then, his bulge was the size of a Quaffle.”

“You actually checked him out?” Harry asked incredulously.

“Sure.” Blaise answered. “It’s only normal to check out the opposition and damn did he have the biggest package I’ve ever seen.”

“Probably the part troll in him.” Harry stated seriously.

Draco almost swallowed his toothpaste as he choked out a laugh. “The Flint’s don’t have troll blood. Flint’s Mother slept with a mountain Fae, it reacted badly to the Drow blood already in their genes and Marcus was the product, though his younger brother looks worse.”

“I didn’t know that he had a brother.”
“Yeah, the Flints were so ashamed of how he turned out that they are home educating him, hardly surprising, he looks grotesque.”

Harry was silently fretting inside. He had never once looked at his team-mates ‘packages’ he had never even been curious about it, not even as the starry-eyed eleven year old taking an after practice shower with the fourteen to sixteen year olds. It had never bothered him, but what if they had looked at him? He wasn’t very big, not at all and his face grew warm and pink.

“What’s the matter, Harry?” Blaise asked, noticing immediately.

“I’ve never checked anyone out in the locker rooms.” He admitted.

“Never?”

Harry shook his head and Draco grinned. “You mean the only ‘packages’ you’ve seen besides your own are mine and Blaise’s?”

Harry nodded a bit shyly.

“What if they looked at me though? I’ve never thought about it before, but if it’s normal to look, then they’ve been looking at me!”

“You have nothing to be ashamed of.” Draco told him, wrapping arms around him and holding him tightly. “You have an absolutely gorgeous body.”

“I’m not as big as everyone else.”

“You’ve never looked so how do you know?” Blaise asked him. “You are about average, Harry, I told you that Draco and I are not going to be good indicators of size, we swelled with our inheritance.”
Harry pouted but he nodded his head. It had never bothered him before so he wasn’t going to let it bother him now, not when he had two mates who loved him for who he was. He was just put out that the other boys might have been looking at him showering.

He broke the two way hug he was getting and shrugged on his scarlet robes, tying them up with the dragon hide strings. He sat down and tugged on the dragon hide boots, lacing them up and then standing.

“How do I look?” He asked.

“Like the end of Slytherin’s dream of winning the Quidditch cup.” Draco grumbled.

Harry grinned widely and gave him a kiss.

“I can't help that I’m just so obviously talented on a broomstick.”

“Yeah you are.” Blaise stated, but the way he said it made Harry blush.

Harry pushed him. “I didn’t mean it like that!” He cried out.

Draco grinned cottoning on. “I don’t think it matters which way you meant it, you’re amazing at both ways.”

“You’re both perverts.” Harry huffed, walking to the sink to brush his teeth.

Blaise hopped into the shower and was out within five minutes, letting Draco hop in after him. Harry was in the living room polishing his Firebolt when they both came out.

“Merlin, between you two I’m surprised the entire morning hasn’t flown by, I’ve pampered this broom twice waiting for you to get out of the bathroom.”

“I can’t believe that you’re a Dracken and only take fifteen minutes to get ready.” Draco told him. “Ten minutes of that is showering, how can you go out in public without doing your hair?!”
Harry snorted. “If you hadn’t noticed I did comb it and then I brushed it, this is just the way it lays! I can’t do anything with it!”

“I’ll shave it for you if you’d like.” Draco stated seriously. “It might look better if you had no hair.”

“You come near my hair and I’ll gut you.” Harry snarled.

Blaise chuckled and wrapped an arm around Harry and led him out, Draco followed behind them still laughing.

They made it to the Great Hall and Harry spotted the exhausted looking Ravenclaw team dressed in bright blue. They all looked like they had been practising all night.

Draco huffed and shook his head.

“All the practice in the world won’t help them if they’re too tired to even play. Idiots.”

Harry grinned at Draco as the blond regally sat down on the bench and he happily sat next to him, in between the blond and Blaise. He perused the table and selected some cut up galia melon, cut up honeydew melon and cut up watermelon. He put a bit of each in his bowl and threw a spoonful of grapes on top of them.

“Is that all you want, Harry? No toast?”

Harry shook his head then cocked it as Blaise grinned. Oh hell, he was onto purely fruits; his heat was coming ever closer. He looked at Draco who smirked and he swallowed nervously. But what was he supposed to do? He would go on heat whether he wanted to or not and Draco and Blaise would both be there, he just prayed that they didn’t damn well kill each other as he whined beneath them for sex.

---------------------------------------------------------------------------------- X

Harry stood in the middle of the Quidditch pitch with his team in the pouring rain and the harsh winds, Ginny had told Ron at breakfast, just before they had come outside for the match, that he had been dropped from the team and had been replaced by McLaggen.
He had shouted and yelled and raged, but the team had just left the hall to his profanities and Professor McGonagall’s shrieks about his foul language and unacceptable behaviour.

Harry was sure he was going to be looking over his shoulder for the next week at least for retaliation attacks from Ron. Not that he didn’t think he could handle the hot tempered redhead, but he really didn’t want to think on how Blaise and Draco would react to someone intent on harming their submissive mate.

Thinking about Draco and Blaise automatically drew his eyes to them, they were right in the front of the Slytherin bleachers, but what touched Harry the most were the little Gryffindor flags that they had. It made him laugh and caused the rest of the team to look at him. He nodded to the crush of silver and green Slytherin students and the two flecks of bright red and gold.

Ginny grinned and looked to him with a naughty look.

“Your men are behind you, Harry, are you going to give them a present for supporting you so much?” She asked with a wink.

Harry blushed but was saved by Madam Hooch, who gestured for both of the Captains to come forward. Harry smiled at Roger Davis, who looked like he had swallowed an entire case of Fred and George’s puking pastilles. He had the air of a man who was already defeated before the battle had even begun; it made Harry’s self-confidence soar sky high.

Harry shook Davis’ hand amicably and he mounted his broom, the minute that Madam Hooch blew the whistle he was in the air, the superiority of the Firebolt ensuring that he was in the air before anyone else and he immediately zoomed off looking for the little golden ball that would win him the game.

Cho, the Ravenclaw Seeker, tailed him, Harry hated tailers, they were right up there in his list of things that he hated most in Quidditch, along with cheaters, illegal bludger moves and Professors jinxing his broom.

The reason he hated them was because instead of attempting to find the snitch, they just followed him everywhere he went, getting in his way and distracting him from looking for the snitch himself. He was aware that she was there and he clenched his broom handle with his hands and knees tightly. He was tempted to force her to crash, but it was too early in the game to give his mates heart attacks with a sudden nose dive.

Shooting off to the opposite end of the pitch, the acceleration of the Firebolt meaning that it took several moments for Cho to catch up to him on her Comet Two Sixty, allowing Harry to actually have a bit of time to search for the snitch. He didn’t see it, but what he did see were Drackens, a lot of them, in the bleachers and dotted around the stands. They called to him like homing beacons, his eyes were drawn to them and he swallowed heavily. That wasn’t right, he shouldn’t have been drawn to them, he had found his second mate! He would not accept any other person as his mate; He had already had sex with Draco that was near enough marriage for him.

Swallowing and breathing calmly, Harry zoomed right down to the other end of the pitch, just as Cho had reached him. He swooped upwards and hung in mid-air as his eyes scanned for the tiny golden ball with his new superior eyesight.
“Gryffindor Chaser, Katie Bell, scores another ten points! Gryffindor lead the match forty points to ten.”

Harry looked up at that and over to McLaggen who was hovering in front of his central hoop. He was a damn good Keeper so why the hell had Ravenclaw been able to score?

Harry watched as McLaggen saved a hard toss from Luke Bradley before throwing the Quaffle to Ginny, who sped off towards the Ravenclaw side of the pitch.

“What is Gryffindor Keeper, Cormac McLaggen, doing?” The commentator, a Hufflepuff fourth year, asked incredulously.

Harry, who had been watching Ginny, turned back to his Keeper and he sent a glare to McLaggen who was wrestling the Beater’s bat from Jimmy Peakes. Harry darted towards them and very, very narrowly dodged a bat to the head, it hit his shoulder instead, very fucking hard and he growled lowly, snatching the bat from McLaggen.

“Mclaggen, you are a fucking Keeper, not a Beater, get back to the fucking goal hoops and stay there or I’ll call time and replace you with Hendix!”

“I was just showing him…”

“I don’t care what the fuck you were doing, get back to the hoops and stay there! Oh, and the next time you fucking hit me with a bat, make sure it’s not my most dominant arm that you aim for! How do you expect me to catch the snitch with my arm throbbing like it is?!”

“I just…”

“STOP TALKING AND GET TO THE HOOPS!” Harry yelled. He could almost feel his throat tearing at the volume.

McLaggen flew off to the hoops and Harry handed the Beater’s bat back to Jimmy and clapped him on the back.
“The next time he tries to take it off you, hit him with it.” Harry advised.

Jimmy nodded trustingly and Harry grinned before flying off again, he growled as Cho sidled up to him and began shadowing him again. He had to get rid of her; he wasn’t in the bloody mood for this!

“So after that bit of inner-match drama involving Gryffindor Captain and Seeker, Harry Potter, yelling at his Keeper, who hit his own player with a Beater’s bat that he shouldn’t have had, Keeper Cormac McLaggen has gone back to where he is needed, but not before Ravenclaw stole another twenty points making the score forty points to thirty in favour of Gryffindor.”

Harry cursed violently and bashed his hand against his broom handle. He breathed deeply and scanned the air for the snitch, hoping to god that he actually caught it and he hadn’t been disabled by his own team member.

He curled the fingers of his right hand and pain speared through his shoulder. A bone was either fractured or he was bruised bone deep, he didn’t think anything was broken because he could still move everything.

He saw a sparkle of gold and quickly darted towards it, but it wasn’t the snitch, it was Nasta’s golden wing scales. Harry’s eyes widened in fear for the other Dracken. He was sitting in the stands surrounded by humans and he was displaying his Dracken attributes proudly for anyone to see, yet no one seemed to care or even notice…the rain seriously wasn’t coming down hard enough for those around Nasta to not see the giant freaking wings he was sporting.

Nasta saw him looking and smiled; he pulled a long, slender piece of wood from under his raincoat and he winked. Harry sighed, Nasta had spelled himself so that only other Drackens could see him, Harry should have remembered, it had been in the book that Max had given to him.

Going into a sudden and perfectly vertical nose dive from over a hundred feet up had everyone on their feet, yelling and cheering, shouting and jeering. Harry’s heart was in his throat, adrenaline pumping through his body, his muscles loose and limber. He pulled up at the very last possible second and he was exhilarated as he felt his knees scrape along the sand near the Gryffindor goal hoops.

Cho wasn’t so lucky and she plummeted straight into the sand and rolled off of her broom, unmoving. Harry should have felt bad, but he didn’t. He grinned and laughed. This match was Gryffindors; Ravenclaw no longer had a Seeker.

Harry’s smile hurt his face it was that wide. He did a couple of tight twirls to let out his joy, before he happily went back to surveying the pitch for the tiny golden ball that would get him off of his uncomfortable broom, out of his soaking wet robes and into the arms of his mates, hopefully in front of that wonderful, wood burning fire they had in their rooms.

Madam Hooch’s whistle cut through the howling wind and the lashing rain and Harry looked to see her calling for a time out. Harry sighed and he landed under the erected covering for the Gryffindor team.
“Who called time?” He asked as soon as his team were gathered around him.

“Davis.” Ginny told him. “He wants to bring on his substitute Seeker since you took out Chang. Great job on that by the way.”

Harry grinned. “I got her good. I can’t stand tailers and she was practically my shadow, I had to do something.”

Harry looked to his sopping wet team and nodded to each of them.

“We are doing great, sixty points to thirty is good, but not great. McLaggen, stay at the goal hoops, you got it, I am the Captain so you listen to me or you’ll be axed! Jimmy, Ritchie, you’re doing amazing, aim to take out the Chasers and keep the bludgers away from our own, you got it?”

The two young boys nodded and clashed their bats together with grins and Harry laughed at their antics.

“Ginny, Katie, Demelza, you’re doing great, watch out for those Bludgers and don’t forget that passing is the key to a goal!”

“That speech was worthy of Oliver.” Katie told him with a grin that made Harry blush.

“Are you ready to remount?” Madam Hooch asked as she fought her way through the wind and rain to speak to them.

“Yeh, yeh we are.” Harry answered and sent his team ahead of him.

“And here come the Gryffindors! Now that the little break is over we welcome substitute Ravenclaw Seeker, Heath Brodwick! Will this small, inexperienced fourth year stand up to the clear class and absolute might of the Harry Potter? The most amazing, most sensational Seeker and broomstick flier this school has seen in decades!”

Harry grinned as he caught sight of the quaking fourth year. He had fought a dragon on a broom when he was the age of Heath, no one else here could claim to have done that.
Harry set to finding the snitch as quickly as he could; he wanted to get out of this rain before he became sick for real, which would be a disaster with his impending heat. What would happen if he was sick when he went on a heat period? What if he was injured or unconscious? Would his mates still fuck him if he wasn’t aware of what was going on or if he was injured or sick? Damn, he really needed answers to these rather important questions!

Harry could have cursed Brodwick as it seemed he was mimicking his predecessor. The fourth year was following him everywhere on his Cleansweep Six. Harry sped off to the opposite end of the pitch and let his gaze wander for the snitch, a little tip he had learnt was that the snitch never showed up in your direct line of vision, he had always caught it out of the corner of his eye, so looking around leisurely always worked better for him.

A bludger came about an inch from the tip of his nose and he leant back to stop it from crushing his face. He glared at the Ravenclaw Beater, Duncan Inglebee, who had hit it towards him. It seemed that Davis had told his Beaters to aim for him during the time out.

Harry chanced a look at his mates, who were physically vibrating from the power of their deep growls. He swallowed, poor Inglebee, he’d probably end up with nightmares for the rest of his life for that little stunt after his mates got through with him. They wouldn’t kill or injure him; Inglebee hadn’t hurt him after all, but the possibility had been there.

“Gryffindor Chaser Demelza Robins scores! Ten points to Gryffindor who lead this game ninety points to forty!”

Harry let out a relieved breath, Ravenclaw hadn’t been able to score past McLaggen, at least his Keeper was staying where he damn well needed to be. Harry gave a light glare to his Keeper, who had just saved a spectacular shot from Davis.

Harry floated higher and higher and he unintentionally took the little fourth year, Brodwick, with him. It was pathetic; Brodwick should have been looking for the snitch on his own! He wasn’t going to find it looking at the tail end of his Firebolt!

At a hundred and fifty foot Harry sighed and gave a grin as he bent down on the handle of his broom and once again went into a vertical nosedive. He pushed the broom faster and the ground was suddenly right on top of him, but he kept his cool and went down into the maintenance trenches around the entire outside of the pitch. They were used to drain off the rain water so that the pitch didn’t get flooded. He dodged beams and skimmed his feet in the moat of water that had already formed and was steadily getting higher as the rain came down harder. Harry really hated February games. It was always either raining, or if it was cold enough then he had even played when it was snowing before, being frozen to his broom in the process.

He came out of the trench and looked around. He couldn’t even see Brodwick anymore; he prayed that the fourth year hadn’t followed him into the trenches because if he had then the boy wouldn’t be coming back up.

“And Harry Potter resurfaces after that spectacular and hair raising dive that left him travelling through the trenches! The Gryffindor Seeker is without the snitch, so we must assume that either he lost it in the wooden maze of beams or he hadn’t seen it in the first place and was looking to disable yet another of Ravenclaw’s Seekers!”

Harry snorted to himself, it had been neither reasons, he had dived because he liked the thrill of it, the wind in his hair, even if his hair was plastered to his skin by the downpour of icy rain.

He scanned the pitch and prayed that he found the snitch, this game had already passed the hour mark, he wouldn’t be able to go another hour, not in this weather.

“Ravenclaw score! It is now one hundred and thirty points to fifty to Gryffindor!”

Harry swivelled to glare at McLaggen, only he wasn’t at the goal hoops that Ravenclaw had just scored through, he was heckling Demelza.

“Fucking retarded ogre!” Harry cursed violently.

He gestured to Madam Hooch and called for timeout. He landed angrily and he waited for the rest of his team to join him.

“McLaggen you moronic monkey! What the fuck are you doing?!”

“She wasn’t flying properly I was just telling her…”

“I don’t care if she was flying backwards with her damned eyes closed as long as she scores points! You are going to lose us this match!”

“If you just caught the snitch…”

“Don’t you dare blame Harry for this!” Katie raged. “He is trying his hardest, he always does! How many times has he almost died trying to catch the snitch? How many times has he been in the hospital wing due to a Quidditch injury?!”

“I will not lose this game, McLaggen.” Harry growled seriously. “We’ll lose the cup for this year if we lose this match and that is unacceptable. You’re benched. Where’s Hendix?”
“He didn’t think he would be playing, he’s in the stands.” Richie answered. “He’s in his Quidditch gear though.” He added quickly as it looked like Harry would burst a blood vessel. “I’ll just go and get him.”

Ritchie ran off to go and fetch the wayward substitute Keeper and Harry turned to McLaggen’s angry shouts.

“You can’t cut me from the team! I’m the best Keeper you have!”

“I can cut you from the team and I have as I’m the Captain, you may be the best at saving goals, but if you’re never at the fucking hoops then even the best Keeper in the world would cause his team to lose! I will not lose this game, McLaggen!”

“I’ll try harder.”

“Tough, you’re already off the team, I gave you fair warning and still you didn’t listen, now fuck off!”

“I’m so cold.” Demelza chattered through her teeth.

“I’m trying, but I haven’t seen the snitch once. I can hardly see anything in this weather.”

“We can’t even blame your poor eyesight for it anymore.” Ginny teased.

Harry touched the place where his glasses used to rest against his face and grinned widely. He loved not having to wear them anymore.

“I’ll up the ante, I promise, this match will be over soon and we will be victorious.”

“You always lead us to victory.” Ginny told him with a smile.

Ritchie and Pauley came jogging into the little open fronted tent and Harry had to silence McLaggen before he burst his eardrums at his shouts of how unfair it was that he was being replaced by a third year.

“Sorry, Captain, I really didn’t think I’d get to see pitch time.” Hendix told him.

“Warm up, Hendix, we haven’t got too much longer.” Harry told him.

Hendix nodded and began stretching as quickly as he could. Madam Hooch came over to ask if they were ready to get back in the air. Harry nodded and sent his team out before him. He placed a hand on Pauley’s arm.

“Don’t panic, Pauley.” He said soothingly. “Do your best and no one will hold it against you. You’re a damn good Keeper and we know it. Just keep your eye on the Quaffle and watch out for deceptive throws.”

Harry clapped his shoulder and mounted his broom. Both he and Hendix took to the air and Harry waited for Madam Hooch’s whistle before he zoomed off looking for the snitch.

“And Gryffindor have replaced Keeper Cormac McLaggen with their substitute, third year Pauley Hendix. We have to ask ourselves is this so their inexperienced Keeper can get some action or is Captain Harry Potter really that fed up with McLaggen?”

Harry grinned. His reason was most definitely the latter. He had put McLaggen on because he wanted to win, but he realised now that there was no way they were going to win if McLaggen remained on the pitch.

“Gryffindor Keeper Hendix has just proven why he has been brought on, what a spectacular save!”

Harry gave a double thumbs up to Pauley as he flew past, holding onto his broom with his knees. The rain was coming down harder and faster, he was soaked through and he was starting to get chilled. This game needed to end!

He redoubled his efforts and they finally paid off when he caught a glimmer of gold out of the corner of his eye. He shot after it like a bullet and poor Brodwick, who had been saved from the moat of water during the time out, had his work cut out for him just trying to keep up with Harry and the Firebolt.

His hand outstretched Harry felt the flutter of tiny wings against the tips of his fingers, two bludgers almost tore his body apart with pain as one smashed into his knee and the other, in a hit that was reminiscent of his second year, hit his elbow, shattering his arm in two.

Growling with the pain that made his stomach lurch with nausea, Harry cradled his arm to his chest and used his other arm, the problem with this was that his right leg was searing with pain originating from the place where the bludger had connected with his knee. He was holding onto his broom with just one knee and as the snitch suddenly went down, Harry followed it and his body fell forward. He quickly gripped the broom with his broken arm and felt bile rise up his throat at the pain that he felt. Brodwick bumped into him, his knee digging into Harry’s bad one, almost crippling him with the pain and Harry fell back as the blinding pain encompassed his entire leg.

Pushing the Firebolt forward in absolute determination, he easily overtook Brodwick again and stretched his hand as far as he was able to, his hand closed around the little fluttering ball and as the Gryffindors were screaming up a storm at their victory over Ravenclaw, a bludger crashed into Harry’s back, sending him forwards and off of his broom as his one uninjured knee was unable to keep him seated.

He wasn’t very far from the ground, only ten, maybe fifteen feet at the most, not like the hundred foot fall in his third year thanks to the Dementors, but he was already injured from the game and he blacked out as soon as he hit the water soaked ground with a sickening thud, landing on his already injured arm and knee.

Chapter Notes

Last Time

He wasn’t very far from the ground, only ten, maybe fifteen feet at the most, not like the hundred foot fall in his third year thanks to the Dementors, but he was already injured from the game and he blacked out as soon as he hit the water soaked ground with a sickening thud, landing on his already injured arm and knee.

Chapter Sixteen – Recuperation.

Harry blinked open his eyes and he murmured unhappily at the bright sunlight that seared his eyeballs. He breathed inward deeply and then let it out again in a gust of air. He felt fine, his body wasn’t aching, his bones felt strong and whole again, he could move both his arm and his leg without pain and his back felt perfectly fine and normal.

Looking around him it looked to be the day after the match, proving how fickle the weather was that bright sunlight showed through the windows where yesterday, it had been pouring down with rain.

He smelt flowers and turned his head to the side to peer curiously at the array of colourful plants and blossoms that took over the small beside table and most of the floor around his bed. A moveable tray at the end of his bed held a wide selection of sweets, chocolate, cards and treats, there was even a teddy bear poking its way out of a basket of fruit, half stuck under a pile of chocolate frogs.

He hadn’t thought that he had been here long enough to have so many get well soon gifts, but he wouldn’t knock being given free sweets and chocolate. The two bars of Honeydukes finest chocolate fudge that Blaise gifted him with every week had seemed to be insufficient in the last few weeks, now if it had been four chocolate fudge bars, then maybe the sight of so much chocolate would have made him feel sick instead, but then he had always had a major sweet tooth thanks to a childhood that had been deprived of even the slightest sugary treat, so maybe not.

Easing himself up, Harry perused his get well soon cards, noticing that most of them were from Gryffindors. Ginny had seemingly drawn him a card with a folded up piece of parchment, it depicted a badly drawn picture of a nameless monster eating the Ravenclaw Quidditch team, it was his most favourite card.

There were no less than eighteen bars of his most favoured chocolate fudge bars and Harry immediately snatched one up, tore off the paper and took a huge, borderline indecent, bite and chewed it with a happy moan as the flavour flooded his mouth.

He took bite after bite as he looked over his other gifts and found some more cards buried at the back, he picked the teddy up and grinned when he realised that it was from Henley, the cute little baby dominant. He hadn’t spoken to him in a while and he made a mental note to go check up on him, he always had the strange urge to Mother Henley, even though his Dracken now knew that Henley was a dominant Dracken, not a child after the kiss that they had shared.

He held the little blue teddy on his lap and he took the last piece of chocolate and scrunched up the wrapper and dropped it into the bin beside his bed. He looked over the collection of sweets he had and rather thought that he now owned his own private sweetshop. He picked out a jar of what looked like sugar coated jelly snakes, they were wriggling around in the jar and hissing disjointed letters, obviously the person who had charmed them was not a Parselmouth. He grinned at his own little inside joke, letting out a few bubbly laughs that he couldn’t stop from escaping his mouth.

The little label on the lid of the jar urged him to get better soon, from Draco. Harry didn’t begrudge the blond for not putting love from Draco on the label, his blond mate was a very, very private person and saying the word love in public was a problem for him, writing it down and leaving it, where anyone could see it, was almost a sin.

However loving actions of endearment, those Draco had down to a tee. He didn’t mind showing the world that he loved Harry Potter, he just had a problem with verbally confirming it.

Blaise however had gifted him with four of the eighteen, now seventeen, bars of chocolate fudge, had written him such a loving missive that Harry’s eyes misted over. He had signed it: Ti amo, Harry, come back to us soon.

Harry dug through his treasure until he found a jar of strange looking, colourful round balls, the label was written in a language that he couldn’t read, but the tag told him that they were flavoured hard candies from Greece, courtesy of Arsenio.

Max had given him a box of Ice Mice and a few Peppermint Toads with a small note that he was eagerly awaiting his awakening.

Nasta had given him a big box of cookies, only they weren’t your usual bog standard biscuit. They were nearly the size of his face and had four types of chocolate in them. Milk chocolate, white chocolate, dark chocolate and to his everlasting joy, fudge chocolate. Nasta had had them custom made just for him, because apparently he was the only person Nasta knew who mainlined fudge flavoured chocolate. Nasta’s note also included how much Harry was being missed and how the big softie was missing their daily talk on ‘their rock’ beside the lake and that he missed holding Harry in his arms.

Harry almost melted under all the attention that he was getting from his prospective mates; Jensen had given him a strange, but wonderful gift. A photograph of the very moment he had caught the snitch, and dear god did he look fucking terrible! His arm was clutched to his chest but there was a distinctive bulge under the elbow part of his Quidditch robes, his knee was dangling uselessly from the broom and his face was streaked with mud and blades of grass clung to his face and neck like his hair did to his head. Not to mention the moving photo was ruined by the appearance of a Bludger that went right into the middle of photo Harry’s back, knocking him flying forwards off of the broom and out of the photo frame.

It couldn’t have happened that fast either, it had felt slower when he had experienced it, as if he had had all the time in the world to close his hand around the snitch and then to curl into a ball as he fell, it had seemed to have taken an age for him to hit the ground. This photo must have been speeded up with magic, it couldn’t have all happened so quickly! The photo showed that he had barely caught the snitch at all, a fraction of a second or so more and his hand would have grabbed at thin air instead.
“Mister Potter!”

Harry startled and looked to Madam Pomfrey as she bustled to his bedside and shimmied him back under the covers.

“Thank the heavens that you are awake!”

Harry thought that this was a very odd thing to say. He had been out for the count for longer than one night before, true it had never been for a Quidditch injury but there was a first time for everything and he had felt sure that Madam Pomfrey had come to expect such injuries from him.

“How are you feeling?” she asked as she waved her wand around him.

“Alright I guess, nothing hurts, nothing aches, I can move all of my limbs.”

Madam Pomfrey nodded at what he was saying before consulting her diagnostic results.

“Yes, everything is in order, Potter.” She sighed. “Your mates have been very, very worried about you.”

“Ma…mates?” Harry questioned shakily. How did she know?!

“Your secret is safe between the Headmaster and I, he had to inform me of your creature status so that I was better able to heal your injuries.”

Harry let out a breath and relaxed. Dumbledore wouldn’t have told his secret without asking first for a vow of silence. He was safe still, his mates were safe.

“Your prospective mates have been stampeding around as well; I don’t believe anyone in this school has ever had so many visitors to the hospital wing before. They have all left gifts and cards. I have noticed that you have eaten chocolate, shame on you! You know I would prefer you to eat a decent meal before sweets.”
“It was the only thing here and I was hungry.” Harry tried, knowing full well that it wouldn’t wash with the elderly Matron.

“Harry James Potter, you forget that I know you too well! You would have eaten that chocolate bar regardless of if there had been a full steak dinner beside you!”

Harry blushed and ducked his head, hiding his sheepish smile. Madam Pomfrey was of course right, chocolate fudge bars just called to him, he would have eaten it if there had been a whole treacle tart next to it. Well, he would have eaten the chocolate first and then eaten the tart, but the chocolate still would have gone down first.

“Now, have you filled up on chocolate or do you think you can handle some porridge?”

The look on Madam Pomfrey’s face told him that it didn’t matter if he was so full he was bloated, he would still be eating the porridge, so he nodded and let the Matron bustle about getting a small bowl of oats and mixing it with warm milk for him.

He clumsily fed himself with his left arm, his right arm was still stiff from the rapid, intensive healing that it had been through overnight. He looked out at the bright sunshine and realised that this would be a perfect day to visit Nasta on their rock, yet he didn’t want to be far from Draco or Blaise, so he’d drag them with him.

Finishing his porridge and letting Madam Pomfrey fuss over him, he was declared fit to leave, and he did just that, shrinking down all his sweets and presents whilst carrying his cards and the small blue bear that Henley had given him.

He made his way to his private rooms on the seventh floor of the castle and using his wand he poked the keyhole of the portrait of a solid wooden door. The portrait clicked as if it had unlocked and it swung inwards, allowing him to pass.

He carefully placed all of his gifts on the coffee table, being mindful of Blaise’s research work neatly placed on the one side, before he kicked his shoes off and went into the bedroom to find his mates.

He grinned when he found them on the platform bed. They were curled up together, their legs entwined, their arms wrapped around the other and Blaise’s head was tucked under Draco’s chin. They looked so adorable that Harry silently made his way back down the stairs and over to the side cupboard where he had left his camera. He made a mental note to ask little Colin Creevey for some development potion so that he could get a moving photo, not that his mates were moving much, but the soft even breaths and the slow rise and fall of their chests would prove that they were real people, and not just mannequins as the two would probably try to claim later on.

He snapped a couple of photos, because he was no photographer and he actually wanted one decent picture, before putting the camera in his bedside cupboard before worming his way under the duvet and snuggling up behind Blaise.
Blaise made a small noise in the back of his throat and Draco answered with his own, Harry’s eyebrows lowered as he peeked at his mates from over Blaise’s shoulder. They were still fast asleep, but if he didn’t know any better then he would have thought that the two were communicating with each other in their sleep. Did dominant Drackens do that? Did they subconsciously speak to the other dominants to…what? Reassure the other that they were still there? That they weren’t a strange dominant coming in to take their mate? Why would they speak to each other when asleep? He made a note to ask them as Blaise once again let out a soft noise from the back of his throat and Draco answered it with a deep rumble from within his chest.

Harry lay back down and snuggled right up to Blaise’s back. Draco’s hand, which was holding Blaise close, flexed and slipped under Harry’s tee shirt, touching skin.

Harry giggled and squirmed as Draco’s fingers hit a ticklish spot. Movement and then Draco’s face peering sleepily over Blaise’s body had Harry smiling happily. Those silver eyes widened before the blond almost shoved poor Blaise out of the bed to reach Harry.

“Harry! How are you?” Draco asked, sniffing along every inch of his skin, touching every part of his body as if to affirm that he was actually there and he wasn’t a dream.

Blaise, who had been jolted awake, did the same. Harry squirmed between them and giggled as he was sniffed and licked.

“I’m fine!” He burst out as he got fed up of being stroked and touched.

“We were so worried about you, Mio Amore.” Blaise whispered to him.

“Two nights.” Draco corrected.

Harry cocked his head to the side; he had been out of it for two nights?

“Still, I’ve been unconscious longer than that before.”

“Never with us as your mates.” Blaise told him seriously. “The entire Ravenclaw Quidditch team has been put into protective custody, as well as that moron McLaggen.”
Draco growled lowly at the mention of McLaggen and Harry lowered his eyebrows again. “Why?”

“They hurt you, they all hurt you.” Draco hissed as if it were obvious.

“Well yeah, that’s the point of the game, though I admit I wasn’t expecting to be hit with a Beaters bat by my own team mate who wasn’t even a Beater.” Harry stated, rubbing his shoulder in remembered pain.

Blaise and Draco were immediately all over his shoulder, sniffing and licking it.

“Stop that!” Harry demanded. “Why do you do it?”

“A dominant mate can scent out an injury on their submissive and if scenting doesn’t work, usually in the case of muscle damage, we use our tongues to feel if everything is alright underneath the skin.” Blaise told him.

“Yeah, right, that’s not creepy or weird at all.” Harry grumbled as Draco gave a final lick before kissing his shoulder. “Speaking of creepy things why do you talk to each other when you’re sleeping?”

“We don’t.” Draco told him confusedly.

“Yes, you do.” Harry stated. “You were doing it when I got into bed.”

“What were we saying?” Blaise asked.

“You weren’t using words, more soft noises and growls to communicate with each other.”

“Oh, that.” Blaise smiled. “Dominant Drackens do it to confirm to each other that our submissive mate and our children are safe and that we feel no danger. Our bodies subconsciously seek for danger around our nest so that we will be able to react at a moment’s notice if something that would harm our family pops up.”
“I didn’t know that.” Draco groused.

“You still have a lot to learn.” Blaise answered with a smile.

“So do you want to tell me anything?” Harry teased lightly after a pregnant pause.

His mates both turned to him and raised eyebrows.

“You’re sure you haven’t been holding out on me? Because if you’re both fucking each other behind my back without asking me to watch I’ll be very, very angry.”

The both of them spluttered and coughed and choked and both denied it vehemently and Harry clutched his stomach laughing.

“Yeah? Are you sure you’re not? Because you looked pretty damn close to me when I got here, I couldn’t even get between you, you were cuddled that close, you can’t even say it’s cold because it’s not.”

“We were not ‘cuddled close’, Harry.” Draco denied viciously.

“I have photographic evidence that proves that you were.” Harry teased in a sing-song voice.

“If you ever have that photo developed I will tie you to the bed and you will stay there for a year!” Draco threatened.

“Promises promises.” Harry chuckled.

“I mean it!”

“But I want it in my mate album.”
“Your what?” Blaise asked.

“My mate album. I’ve been taking pictures to document our lives together.”

“I don’t know whether to be horrified or think that’s cute and adorable.” Draco said.

“Well I have to have something to show the children when I tell them exactly why they aren’t allowed to have mates until they’re thirty.”

Blaise looked amused and Draco looked dumbstruck and incredulous.

“You can’t be serious. You can’t stop our children from mating.”

“Watch me!” Harry hissed.

Blaise chuckled and pulled Harry into his lap to cuddle. He pressed a loving kiss to Harry’s forehead and held him tightly. His Mother was becoming more and more demanding to meet Harry. She had wanted to meet him the moment he had informed her that he had found a submissive mate, when that was impossible because of school, she demanded that he bring his mate home for Christmas, when that became impossible because of the heat period, she became desperate to meet the person her son would spend the rest of his life with.

The moment she had learnt that he had mated, the very next owl she had sent to him asked when he was going to give her Grandchildren. He wondered if he had been as good a son to her as he had thought he had been if his Mother wanted Grandchildren and he had made a note to ask her in person when he next saw her.

“You’re thinking too hard.” Harry informed him softly, raising a small hand to rub against his cheek.

Blaise placed a hand over Harry’s and held that little hand to his face.

“I am thinking of my Mother, Bello. She is very eager to meet you.”

“You Mother is frightening.” Draco informed the British born, part Italian, part French Dracken.
“No she is not.” Blaise replied tightly, the last thing he wanted was for Harry to become frightened of his Mother before he even met her.

“Blaise, she is six foot two and those shoes she wears makes her up to my height!”

Blaise sniffed and held Harry tighter. “My Mother is a dominant Dracken; you cannot expect her to be some small, willowy woman like your Mother.”

“Before June I didn’t even know you or she were Drackens, I was always terrified when Father informed me that I was to have a playdate with you at your house.”

“It couldn’t have been that bad.” Harry stated.

“I thought she would squash me.” Draco defended. “She’s more muscled than I am now! Imagine meeting her when you were five!”

Blaise growled lowly “That’s enough about my Mother!” He snarled.

“Can we have a picnic?” Harry cut in, looking from one to the other.

“You have only just gotten out of the hospital wing; I do not think it a good idea to go a sit outside for any length of time.” Blaise told him seriously.

“But the sun is out!”

“It is still February and it is still only three degrees outside.”

“Honestly are you wizards or not? That’s what heating charms are for, love! Really, I could do with the fresh air.”

“Didn’t you get enough fresh air free falling from fifteen feet?” Draco asked.
Harry gave the blond a vicious glare. Which made Draco growl lowly in his throat. Blaise’s arms tightened around him and he gave his own snarl to Draco.

“Do not even think about punishing him.” Blaise hissed to the blond. “Do I need to reiterate that he has only just gotten out of the hospital wing this morning after being unconscious for two days?”

Draco huffed, but he looked away, his tightly clenched body slowly relaxing.

“I just realised that I haven’t actually been punished since Draco took things too far.”

Both of his dominants looked at each other and then looked away.

“Ah, so it isn’t that I’ve been good, it’s that you are unwilling to punish me. I wonder how long that will last now that I know.”

“You are going to deliberately push us aren’t you?” Blaise asked with a sigh.

“You know I can’t just leave things alone. So picnic, yes?”

“Fine, but you wrap up warm.” Blaise conceded.

Harry grinned and went to stand up to get ready, only to be pulled back down.

“You can get some sleep first.”

“I don’t need sleep; I’ve only just woken up.”

“Have you eaten?”
“Yes, Madam Pomfrey made me eat a bowl of porridge before I was allowed to leave.”

Blaise nodded and let him up again, before stretching and following him to get ready. Harry called Dobby, who excitably got together everything that Harry would need for a picnic, whilst Harry, Draco and Blaise got themselves ready.

When Harry was bundled up worse than a toddler with an overprotective Mother, he took both of his mates hands and led them down to the lake and the boulder which he and Nasta had claimed as theirs and was the very same place where Max had snogged him senseless.

It took only half an hour before Nasta made his way over to them and Harry grinned in greeting, pulling Nasta down to join them, much to Draco’s ire.

Max wandered over an hour later as Harry was laughing at Draco and Blaise’s fake wrestling match. He was so happy that the both of them were getting on, now he just needed to wait for his heat and then find a third and final mate who would fit in with himself and with the two mates that he already had.

Harry looked up and then leapt up and ran to the young sixteen year old who was approaching. He laughed as Henley swept him into a hug, actually picking him up, though Harry shouldn’t have been surprised at that, Henley might have been young and slender, but he was still a fully inherited dominant Dracken.

“Henley! How are you?” Harry asked with a smile.

“Great! I watched your match and I was so scared that you would die that I had to come and see you. My Father says you fly like a pro, but even the pros can be permanently injured by Bludgers and you got hit by three! I went to see you in the hospital wing; my Mum said that I should give you a healing Teddy to make you feel better, I managed to find you a blue one, it was the only one left in a bin full of pink and yellow bears, but I found it and I hope you like it, it’s supposed to draw out all your bad karma, I’m not sure if it works or not, but I hope you like him all the same.”

Harry pressed his lips chastely to Henley’s to stop him from talking and chuckled lightly.

“I loved the little bear, Henley, thank you.”

He had missed Henley so much, he may not have been mate material, but he was definitely friend material.

Henley beamed at him and Harry tugged him over to their picnic blanket, sitting down with his mates, Nasta and Max. Draco took an almost unhealthy interest in Henley and they began talking, however when Henley continued talking without stopping for breath, Draco got a look of irritation and annoyance on his face. At this rate Draco wouldn’t like any other dominant and it upset Harry Max had been more than a bit pushy at the picnic, he had even growled when Nasta had started playing with Harry’s hair.

It wasn’t too long after that that Harry had claimed to be tired and Blaise had immediately called an end to the picnic to take Harry back to bed, saying that it wasn’t wise to push him too hard due to the accident.

Harry said goodbye to Henley, Nasta and Max and let Draco carry him back to their bedroom. He fell asleep before they even reached the castle, safely snuggled in Draco’s arms.

He woke up a few hours later in bed, in his pyjamas. He smiled at the care his mates must have shown him as he hadn’t woken up all through having his clothes pulled off or having his pyjamas pulled on and he was actually tucked in, his mates hadn’t once forgotten that he liked to be covered up since that night on the settee.

Stretching happily and ignoring the grumble in his belly in favour of the press of his bladder, he made his way down the stairs and went into the bathroom to relieve himself. He felt infinitely better once that was done and his hands and face were washed.

He listened closely to the sounds around him and he just felt that something was off. He couldn’t hear Draco or Blaise. Everything was quiet and it gave him a funny feeling. He cautiously went into the living room of his and his mates private rooms and his jaw dropped.

Draco and Blaise were standing next to a table that was laden down with a romantic meal for three, wearing dress robes and they were both sipping on red wine.

“Did I miss something?” He asked weakly as he looked down to his pyjamas and his bare feet, feeling very underdressed next to his two mates.

“You were asleep for Valentine’s Day, mio amore.” Blaise told him.

“It was yesterday when you were in the hospital wing, so we thought that we would celebrate it today instead.” Draco added.

Harry blushed a bright pink and shyly nodded his head in understanding. His first Valentine’s Day with his mates and he was unconscious in the hospital wing, but then he had completely forgotten that Valentine’s Day was even close by. His only real memories of Valentine’s Day were all bad… Ginny giving him that singing dwarf, Romilda Vane and her spiked chocolates, gangs of giggling girls all waving cards and pink balloons and teddy bears. It was enough to make him feel sick.
This, he decided as Blaise kissed his hand softly and handed him to Draco to be seated, was much better and was more of his thing.

“I feel so underdressed, can I go and change?” He asked.

“You look absolutely fine, Harry.” Draco told him.

“I have said a hundred times that you look beautiful in anything that you wear, it is only us here to see you and we have seen you wearing much less.” Blaise told him with a naughty grin.

Harry blushed again but he smiled as Draco picked up a fork and speared a piece of asparagus onto it and held it out for Harry to eat. He took it into his mouth with a big smile and he chewed it up, so happy as Blaise had laced together their fingers on top of the table.

Blaise and Draco had a piece of steamed salmon on their plates with their vegetables, but Harry’s plate was filled with just vegetables drizzled with an absolutely gorgeous olive-oil based sauce.

Harry smiled as he realised that he would be looking forward to next year’s Valentine’s Day instead of dreading it as he had for all the previous years. Even in primary school when the teacher had told them to make cards and give them to their classmates, he had hated it, he had never gotten a single stupid, badly made card covered in dried glue, glitter and sequins, all the other kids were too afraid of Dudley to ever give him a card.

But no more, now he had two absolutely wonderful men to celebrate with, men whom he loved dearly and who he was sure loved him back. This time next year he would have all of his chosen mates and maybe he would even have children, would he be pregnant? He looked down at his very flat stomach and placed his hand over it, he couldn’t even imagine his body swollen with a baby. He had never had a stomach; it had always been very flat, concave at times, due to starvation at the hands of his relatives. Only in the last year had he been able to stomach an average amount of food for a teenager, before anything more than a third of a plate had made him feel very ill.

He had watched Ron as he devoured second and even third帮ings of a heaped plate of food and it had made his stomach roil in disgust. When he thought to how much he actually ate these days it held no comparison to what he had used to be fed. At the Dursleys he was lucky if what he ate in a week made up what a normal person ate in one day.

“Do you have a stomach ache, Prezioso?” Blaise asked concernedly.

Harry looked up at both of his mates, the both of them with dual looks of concern and worry, and he smiled.
“No, I was actually thinking that this time next year I might be pregnant.”

The near identical salacious looks made Harry shiver right down to his toes.

“You’ll be pregnant before then; you only need the two of us to get you impregnated.” Draco informed him slowly and seductively. “Three days until you go onto your heat period and you can conceive at any point during the heat, we could have our first baby in several months.”

Harry smiled softly and rubbed his belly again.

“If everything works according to clockwork, you would be four months pregnant this time next year and we would already have our first clutch.” Blaise told them looking thoughtful.

“Since when does everything go according to plan?” Harry asked. “What if I don’t get pregnant on this heat?”

“You will.” Blaise told him surely. “You are too fertile not to, Harry.”

“I don’t think you worked it out right.” Draco stated looking deeply in thought. “I make Harry out to be six months pregnant after our first clutch this time next year.”

“If Harry carries our first child to term, seven months from now is September, he will give birth and then his breeding cycle will start again, so it will be two months before he goes on to heat again, so this time next year Harry will be four months pregnant with our second clutch, if he conceives. He could be two months pregnant this time next year if it takes a second heat to get him pregnant again.”

“Ah, so I dock off two months because I need to go through another breeding cycle before a heat period.” Harry nodded. “I think that’s going to be a good thing, I don’t think I’d like to be pregnant again right after giving birth. I actually want to spend some time with my newborn baby before I start popping out others.”

“Like I said, mio amore, you may not even get pregnant on your next heat or even the one after; it could take a few heat periods for your hormones to settle down enough for your womb to allow sperm to access it again.”
“Right, stop speaking now before I lose my appetite.” Harry groused. “I don’t want to hear about my male body having a womb, it sounds wrong and weird.”

Blaise smiled indulgently and kissed the palm of his hand lovingly, keeping a hold of it as he nodded his understanding of a topic change.

Harry enjoyed the rest of his night with his mates and was surprised when dessert showed up. He had stuffed himself with the main course; he hadn’t thought that there would be dessert seeing as there hadn’t been a starter.

It wasn’t much, just profiteroles and melted chocolate to dip them in, but they were so rich and filling that Harry mainly used them to feed Blaise and Draco, who were both big men that needed feeding, like hippos. Harry grinned as he mentally called his mates various large mammals whilst feeding them more and more of the fresh cream filled choux pastry balls.

The clock in their living room struck one in the morning and Harry looked at it in surprise, all of a sudden feeling the weariness of the day take over him. He yawned widely behind his hand, yet before he could voice out loud that perhaps it was time for bed, Blaise had gently scooped him up like a child and was carrying him to the bedroom.

Harry smiled happily and as he snuggled into bed, Blaise on one side of him and Draco on the other, he wondered when everything was going to be blown to hell.

Chapter Seventeen – Everything Burns in Hell

Harry had been anxious for the last few days that remained before his heat period. Blaise and Draco had tried everything to make him relax, from baths, massages, hugs and talking, but Harry still had a bad feeling that something was going to go wrong. He had a feeling that something was missing.

He couldn’t put his finger on it, but all of the hair on the back of his neck stood up on end the closer his heat came. He got irritable and snappy and he didn’t know why, his Dracken side was rebelling and it was all Harry could do to keep his scales, fangs, claws and wings sheathed during lessons.

“Are you going down with that sickness again, Harry?” Dean Thomas asked during Potions on the Thursday, the day before he was supposed to go on heat.

Harry was shaking and sweating, he could barely sit still let alone concentrate on his potion and his fingers were digging into the desk edge.

“I think I might be.” Harry replied tightly, his voice strained and little more than a whisper, yet Snape heard them, of course he did, he was a Dracken. It wasn’t any wonder to him now that no student got to hold a conversation in lessons with Snape within a ten foot radius.
“Something to share with the class, Potter?” He asked silkily.

“No, Sir, I just…I think I’m unwell.”

“Again? Surely this is milking your illness for everything it’s worth, Potter. Don’t you think that you have taken it just a tad too far?”

Harry didn’t take anything the Professor said to heart, he knew that the man had to remain in character so no one realised that they were all illegal creatures, but it was so difficult today and he would have snapped had it not been for his courageous Gryffindor friends. His stupid, foolish, Gryffindor friends, jumping in before he could do so himself.

“Harry is not milking his illness!” Dean shouted, enraged on Harry’s behalf.

“He’s really ill!” Seamus added. “All you have to do is look at him to know that!”

“I think you’re being unfair, Professor, Harry does look unwell and he has been suffering lately, I heard Madam Pomfrey say so!” Parvati joined in, Lavender nodding seriously beside her.

Harry smiled. He was so, so happy that he had friends in Gryffindor still, friends who could hardly care less that he was in love and going out with two Slytherins, in fact Lavender and Parvati constantly begged him for little titbits of his personal life, asking him all sorts of questions that made his face light up like a flame. Them and Ginny too, who was still trying to grill him for details on his sex life with Blaise and Draco.

“Silence!” Snape hissed. “Twenty points from Gryffindor. Zabini, Malfoy, take Potter to the hospital wing as he obviously wishes for more people to fawn over him.”

Blaise was immediately by his side, helping him gently to his feet as Draco wrapped an arm around his back to support him on his jelly like legs.

“Attention seeking prat.” Ron said loudly enough for Harry to hear him, as well as half the class and a certain dominant Dracken.
“Ten more points from Gryffindor and a detention tonight, Weasley for disrupting my class further! What will it take for you to learn to keep your abnormally large mouth closed?!” Snape snapped.

Harry giggled, but hid it under a hacking cough, draping himself over Blaise, who half dragged; half carried him out of the Potions classroom.

Harry was sweating profusely by the time that Draco and Blaise had led him to the seventh floor from the dungeons and he was out of breath when they finally reached their rooms. He collapsed onto their settee and just lay there whining deeply in the back of his throat.

“I don’t know what’s wrong with you, diletto. I’m sorry.” Blaise apologised as he caressed his cheek, looking so apologetic that it was borderline pathetic.

Harry smiled and turned to lay a kiss to the hand on his face. “You can’t know everything, Blaise. Maybe this is what a second heat is supposed to be like.”

“We’ll wait for Severus.” Draco told him worriedly. “He’ll know what’s wrong. He’s older than all of us, he can help.”

Harry nodded slowly as he settled down more into the soft cushions. He couldn’t control the continuous whine, he couldn’t stop it and it made it very difficult to fall asleep, but somehow he managed it.

He woke up to a rough hand on his forehead and he hissed pitifully at it rolling away to stop the dominant Dracken from touching him.

“Kindly keep still, Mister Potter.” Snape’s silky drawl cut through his sleepy hissing and Harry frowned a bit, but he remained still as that hand clamped down over his forehead again. “You’re temperature shouldn’t have risen this high.”

“He is on his heat tomorrow.” Draco pointed out, his voice coming from the chair behind Snape.

“It still shouldn’t be this high. Harry, have you accepted Draco? This sort of occurrence only happens when you don’t have all of your mates around you in the week commencing your heat.”

“Yes.” Harry answered immediately with no preamble or hesitance.
“Perhaps the rejection messed with the breeding cycle.” Snape hedged looking thoughtful. “No submissive has ever partly rejected a dominant and then taken the same dominant as a mate.”

“What are you saying?” Harry asked worriedly, he had come to love Draco, he couldn’t lose him now.

“That perhaps your Dracken hasn’t fully accepted Draco back.”

“Well that will be sorted by the heat won’t it? I love Draco, I don’t care what my Dracken wants, he’s mine!”

“You may not have a choice in that, Mister Potter.”

“Damn well watch me have a choice!” Harry snarled.

He couldn’t believe that after everything he might still lose Draco. It wasn’t a bloody option!

“We will ultimately find out tomorrow.” Snape said, before rising to his feet from his knelt down position by the settee.

“There is nothing you can do?” Blaise asked.

“I cannot do anything, Mister Zabini, because I do not know what the problem is.”

Blaise nodded and the three of them watched as Snape left their rooms and shut the door behind him. Harry looked at his two mates and bit his lip. Come tomorrow everything could be blissfully wonderful, or everything would be utterly ruined.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Harry’s eyes snapped open and he breathed in deeply, wide awake in a matter of seconds. He rolled on the bed between his mates; sweat beading on his body which felt constrained by his clothing.

He kicked off his boxer shorts and yanked off his sleep shirt. He rolled around and pulled in another deep breath. He remembered this part of the heat all too well and he wasn’t happy to have to go through the burning again, he hated the feeling of being burnt alive.

He mewedled and whined in distress and both Blaise and Draco were awake within moments, both touching him, both kissing every inch of his body, both ripping off the minimal clothing they had gone to bed in.

Blaise took over his mouth as Draco latched onto a nipple, sucking it viciously. Harry arched from the bed and twisted his hands into Blaise’s hair, tugging on it and pulling him closer.

Draco’s mouth slid from his nipple and down to his side, nipping gently on the soft flesh of his belly, his hand cupping his bum and squeezing it, making Harry moan into Blaise’s mouth.

Blaise pulled Harry’s body under his own and Harry felt the hardness that pressed against him. Somewhere in the back of his mind he had thought that Draco would be the one to take him first, but the thought was driven from his mind by a single forward thrust of Blaise’s hips as his mate imbedded himself inside of his body.

Harry mewedled as he jerked in response to Blaise’s movements, feeling only a small burn in his lower back at the sudden completion caused by his mate’s body joining his through his tiny entrance. The small burn couldn’t ever hope to achieve the level of pure heat and searing discomfort that his body already felt and was very quickly forgotten as Blaise started to move within him as Draco moved his mouth down to nibble and lick his hips.

Harry screamed and instinctually moved his body to encase Blaise within him, his claws keeping his chest pressed to Blaise’s, even as Draco came between their lower bodies, stopping them from being completely together as one. It didn’t matter, Draco was a part of them, Draco was a mate, but he wasn’t the only one. Harry needed all of his mates to get him pregnant and he wanted so desperately to become so.

He threw his head back and let out a very loud, high pitched wail. He wanted to be pregnant, he wanted a child, he didn’t care if it would be his only baby, but he wanted one, just the one. He begged through his continuous whine that his mates give him just one baby. He would be content then.

Blaise stilled within him and Harry felt the flood of hot wetness within him, but before he could bask in the feel of his mate’s fertile seed within him, he was filled once more by a thicker cock that belonged to Draco.

Harry screamed again and hooked his legs around Draco’s hips pulling his mate into his body, desperate to get rid of the pulsing heat that was destroying his body piece by piece, desperate to have just one child to love and care for.

Blaise slid behind him and Harry’s hands, including his claws, were pulled off of Draco’s shoulders and he was pulled backwards to lay on Blaise’s lap, his hard cock jutting out beside Harry’s cheek.

Harry knew what his mate wanted and he twisted his upper body as much as he could and wrapped his mouth lovingly around the hard flesh that he had grown to love. He moaned and screamed around it as Draco viciously thrust into his body, striking his prostate and turning his body boneless in unending pleasure.
Harry sucked and licked at Blaise, despite two of his mate’s fingers in his mouth, caught between his upper and lower jaw, Harry didn’t know why Blaise did it, but he soon found out when Draco unexpectedly caught his prostate and released inside of him. Harry’s own orgasm took over him and his jaw automatically clenched shut over Blaise’s fingers, which were the only things stopping Harry from biting a very delicate part of Blaise clean off.

His mates didn’t give him a moment to rest and Harry soon found himself settling over Blaise, who was still lying against the pillows from when Harry had sucked him off. He bounced on his mate and gasped a bit at the feeling of being completely filled in a different way as Blaise reached further into his body than before.

“Bello. Ti amo. This may hurt just slightly more, Mio amore.” Blaise told him in a raw and guttural voice that Harry barely recognised but knew on an instinctual level.

“Ti amo, Blaise. I love you, Draco.” Harry whispered right before Draco pushed himself in along with Blaise.

Harry screamed but it wasn’t entirely from pleasure as the slight burn in his lower back and bum turned into a flare of white hot pain. He convulsed on his mates and they held him and stroked him, kissing, licking, laving, touching, caressing, anything to take his mind off of the pain.

Draco licked an erogenous patch of skin just behind his ear and Harry moaned as Draco manipulated it to his will, sucking on it and lightly nibbling it.

Blaise rolled his hips slowly and Harry whined as Blaise rubbed against his prostate. Blaise repeated his previous movements and steadily got faster. The pain was forgotten as the heat washed away all inhibitions and Harry gurgled as Draco drew himself fully out before pushing back in.

Soon Blaise started thrusting in and out as well and Harry couldn’t keep up, he lay down on Blaise’s chest and succumbed to the slow insanity of being taken by both of his mates simultaneously. He gasped and moaned as his body was taken well beyond its threshold of pleasure, he screamed out his orgasm as his body clenched around Draco and Blaise, making the space they were occupying smaller, causing him to feel filled beyond anything he had ever felt before.

Draco and Blaise rode out his orgasm and kept themselves hard through sheer stubborn will power, bringing Harry to full hardness once more and continuing to thrust into his body to sate their instincts and the heat period.

Everything seemed wrong on this heat period, his mind wasn’t slipping off fully, he felt wrong…this felt wrong and he didn’t know why and the pain of being burnt by his heat was steadily growing, it wasn’t being washed away by his mates’ attentions, it was just growing and growing and he called out again, this time slipping in a distress call as the pain and the confusion panicked him.

It was sometime through his fourth orgasm that Harry became aware that something else wasn’t quite right. There were too many hands touching him now, too many mouths. He had the momentary thought that he had been driven insane by the sensations caused by his dual mates and the wrong feeling heat period, but then he opened to eyes to count three heads, not two, six hands, not four, three mouths, not two. There was another person here with them, another person disrupting their heat, but then Harry realised that no...this person, this man, was not interrupting their heat at all, he was joining in, he was touching and caressing him, kissing and licking, but Harry felt completely at ease.

Draco and Blaise were including this new man, they weren’t fighting him, they were at ease with him, they were sharing with him and Harry was frightened. Who was this man and why was he joining in on their mating, their heat, the heat he was on to fully bond with Draco, his second mate?

“Hush, little love.” The man whispered seductively into his ear. “I felt your call and I answered, you wish for babies, I can give them to you.”

Harry’s back bowed as the man pressed into him, hell he was longer and thicker than both Blaise and Draco! His body had never been stretched so far and he cried out, immediately being soothed by Blaise as Draco lowered his mouth over his cock and sucked.

This man was brutal with him, but gentle enough so that he didn’t hurt him, as he thrust hard and fast into him, but taking care not to rip his insides, nor to hit places that were already bruised from Draco and Blaise.

Harry writhed under him as Draco licked at his hard cock and Blaise pushed his tongue down his throat. Harry’s scream of pleasure as the new Dracken found and hit his over sensitised prostate was swallowed by Blaise as he slipped his fingers through Harry’s hair and clenched them at the back of his skull, lifting his head to get a better angle for a deeper, more passionate kiss.

Harry shrieked his release for anyone to hear but the other Dracken just kept on going, not in the least bit affected by Harry’s body clenching so tightly around him through his orgasm.

Harry was soon teased into hardness again as Blaise shoved Draco away from his aching cock and took to playing with his nipples as Draco started touching the skin of Blaise’s back.

Harry watched them through lust blown eyes as Draco lowered his mouth to kiss Blaise’s muscled back as his first mate lowered his head to breathe a kiss over Harry’s left nipple. He was forced to close his eyes with a gasp as the new Dracken that he didn’t even know the name of struck deep inside his body, holding his hips in an almost punishing grip.

A set of teeth he didn’t know caught his shoulder in a quick, but hard bite and Harry’s hips jerked upwards reflexively. He whined deep in his throat, he wanted his mate’s seed.

Harry’s eyes snapped open again at that thought, something was going on here, he was only on his second heat period, he only needed two mates, was this third Dracken using magic to make him, and Blaise and Draco, think that he needed a third mate. Was this third Dracken trying to coerce Harry into being his mate by getting him pregnant with his baby?

Another powerful thrust and all though was driven from Harry’s mind as he clung to the third Dracken and whined for his seed again. Harry looked into those dark eyes and couldn’t find a colour to them.

Then he could barely make out Draco and Blaise beside him in the dark, it seemed that his heat had stolen over him in the middle of the night and through the pitch blackness, it was only his superior sight that allowed him to see silhouettes and make out the bodies and faces of his mates, he couldn’t discern colour from the dim lighting of the room, he wished dearly that there was light so he could see the face of the one who was fucking him so thoroughly. How he wished it wasn’t a moonless night, maybe the light of the moon would have let him see the face of the new Dracken.

Harry was covered in a cocktail of liquids as he lay resting for a moment with all three of his mates. He couldn’t believe it, there were three of them! He had been hoping that two would be more than enough, even as the Elder had told him might need one, maybe two more to ground him to stop him from going insane and killing his own children, but hell this wasn’t what he had been expecting! He’d have to talk to the Elder and work out what the hell had happened here tonight, because from what he had been told he couldn’t accept two mates at once, so why had he tonight?

Unfortunately for him his new third mate seemed to recover quicker than any of them and he was lovingly rearranging Harry before pushing into him once more as Harry tiredly cried out, his screamed raw throat stealing his voice. At least the horrid confusion had disappeared now and the burning of his heat was slowly lowering as it had during his first ever heat.

“Please! Please!” He cried out desperately, not sure if he was crying for the heat to stop already or if he was begging for more.

The third Dracken didn’t answer, he just grunted and upped his thrusts, hitting deeper inside of him and wringing another orgasm from his tired and spent body. He’d sleep for a week after these ten days were over, he was sure of it.

Harry woke up slowly and lethargically. His body was dead tired and as his stomach grumbled loudly in the silence of the bedroom, Harry contemplated ignoring it and his bladder in favour of falling back to sleep.

His bladder won out as it threatened to burst in the bed where he lay and he crawled out of the warm cocoon and bum shuffled his way down the stairs because he didn’t trust his legs to carry him down safely, this had the repercussion of making his bum ache after every step until, when he reached the bottom, he was nearly in tears, but he had reached the bottom without falling down them, an accomplishment by his standards.

He relieved himself and washed his hands, using the sink to stay on his feet. Harry contemplated falling asleep in the pool sized, empty bath, but came to the conclusion that it wouldn’t be very comfortable.

Harry crawled out of the bathroom on his hands and knees, his bum too sore to sit on and his body too tired, too hungry to get up and use energy to walk. The sight of all the stairs back up to the warm, comfortable bed made him feel like crying. For the first time he felt like cursing Dumbledore for giving them a bed on a ledge that was only accessible by a set of stairs that was looking like a mountain right about now.

Harry whined in the back of his throat, only lightly. He was distressed, but it wasn’t anything he couldn’t deal with himself. However he was up in someone’s arms before he had finished his first whine.
“You should have called.” Draco’s smooth, aristocratic voice sounded, deep and guttural, like the skin was missing from his voice box.

“I didn’t think anyone was here.” Harry answered snuggling up tightly to Draco, laying a kiss to the underside of his chin.

Harry felt very, very affectionate towards Draco and he basked in the feeling of the full bond. His Dracken was not even close to thinking about rejecting Draco now. In fact the merest whisper of rejecting Draco caused his Dracken to hiss deeply in displeasure.

“I’m here, my love, Blaise has gone hunting. I wanted to go as well but he rationalised that one of us had to stay with you because you got upset if you were on your own. He decided to hunt because he knew what you liked best; not that staying here is any hardship on me, just that I wish to prove myself capable of providing for you.”

“You don’t need to do that.” Harry said even as his Dracken stated firmly that yes Draco did need to do that at some point.

“I’m going hunting for dinner, seeing as it’s near enough lunch time now.”

Harry smiled and allowed Draco to carry him into the living room and settle him on the settee, before lifting his head and sitting down, replacing Harry’s head in his lap where he proceeded to comb his fingers through Harry’s untameable hair, tugging out the knots and tangles that had formed during his ten days of continuous sex, massaging his scalp and settling Harry down.

Harry fell asleep quickly under the ministrations and only woke up when a large thump made him nearly jump out of his skin.

“Be quiet!” Draco hissed, but it was too late, Harry was already awake.

He peered over the back of the settee, using the cushions to pull himself up enough to see what was going on. Blaise had laid a still twitching buck on the floor of their living room and Draco was now in his face hissing at him for waking him up.

“Stop it!” Harry demanded sleepily. “It doesn’t matter that the thump woke me up, the smell coming off of that would have woken me up anyway. I’m too hungry to ignore it.”
Harry’s stomach backed him up by clenching and rumbling loudly, making Harry almost double over in hunger pains.

“Eat Harry, Prezioso.” Blaise encouraged, gently leading him to sit in front of the still spasaming animal.

Harry unsheathed his claws and skinned an area of the animal’s side before he cut out a lump of fresh, skinned meat, his fangs sliding from his gums as he tore into the tough meat, sucking the still warm blood from it before happily diving back down to strip flesh from bone with his teeth.

Harry ate until the ache left his belly and then he offered Blaise and Draco some of his food. Neither of them declined his invitation as they both sat and began feeding him lumps of warm meat, before gulping down their own.

Harry lay back against Blaise when he could no longer eat another bite. Blaise had also stopped eating, but as the bigger dominant who needed more food than the both of them, Draco was still happily foraging in the skeleton of the buck, stripping lone bits of meat from the remaining bones.

“Do you feel better, Mio amore?”

“Yes thank you, love. I feel so much better, though I am sore. Did you use the cream again?”

Blaise smiled and pecked his forehead gently. “Of course, I wouldn’t leave you in pain.”

“But I am still in pain. Why did you and Draco have to take me at the same time?”

Draco and Blaise shared a look that set his teeth on edge; he looked between them and then frowned.

“What? Did I say something wrong?”

“No. Harry, how much do you remember of the last ten days?” Draco asked cautiously.

“I didn’t remember everything right away last time; it took an hour or so for my mind to catch up and even then the memories are still fuzzy and I’ve obviously got some missing somewhere. Why, what “It is not what you did, Innamorato, it is what happened during your heat.” Blaise told him softly.

“What happened?” Harry asked a clenching in his gut that told him he wouldn’t like it.

“There is someone who we have locked up in the wardrobe, love.”

“Excuse me, what?” Harry asked. “Who have you locked in the wardrobe and why?!”

“It seems that…well, Mio Amore, it seems that…”

Blaise seemed unable to form the words that he needed and Harry took a deep breath to stop himself from snapping, something told him that it wouldn’t help anything.

“What Blaise is trying, and failing very spectacularly to do, is to say is that a Dracken joined us during our heat period. Neither I nor Blaise attacked him or felt the need to attack him; we were at ease with him, as if he was supposed to be there. We have no idea how he came to join our heat and until we can determine what happened and that he is not a danger to you, he will remain in the wardrobe.”

Harry had a sudden remembered moment of a huge, thick set man ramming his equally large and thick cock into his body and his stomach clenched as his blood seared with pleasure which ended with his cock giving a feeble twitch, too spent from the ten day sex-a-thon to do much more.

“I mated with him.” Harry realised with a jolt. He had three mates. Three not two.

“We want to make sure that he is actually a mate and hasn’t coerced you into mating with him.” Blaise stated, wrapping an arm around him.

“Does it matter if he coerced me or not? He’s still my mate.”

“We can kill him if he coerced you.” Draco put in lightly as if he were talking about clothes shopping and not killing another man.

“Won’t that have an effect on me?”

“No.” Blaise put in carefully. “If he were your only mate I would worry for you, but he isn’t, you have Draco and I also.”

“The fact that you might not have even needed him as a mate also counts in favour of killing him.” Draco added just as easily and lightly as before. “It means that your Dracken won’t miss him if we eliminate him.”

“Right can we stop talking about killing him like he’s nothing more than a pesky mosquito, please?!” Harry stated suddenly. “And we can’t leave him locked in the bloody wardrobe! Not only does he need to eat and more than likely needs the bathroom, I actually need to get to my clothes!”

“Why?”

“Why what?!“ Harry snapped back at Draco.

“Why do you need to wear clothes? I am very much enjoying the view.”

Harry threw a rib bone at Draco, who caught it and snapped it like a twig. Harry crossed his arms over his chest and scowled. Blaise kissed him and pulled him into his arms.

“Professor Snape is coming up to take the Dracken away to question him along with Elder Trintus, and they will find out one way or the other what happened, Mio Amore. Veritaserum does work on Drackens after all.”

Harry chuckled a bit at that remembering his fourth year when Snape had threatened him with the same potion. He snuggled into Blaise and he didn’t so much as twitch when Draco cuddled up against his back, sandwiching him between the two of them. He felt safe and loved and protected. He could get used to this. Now if only he didn’t have an unknown dominant Dracken, who he was somehow mated with, locked in his wardrobe then everything would be perfect.

A/N: So which side of the Marmite effect are you on? Do you love the twist, or hate it? If you don’t let your opinion be heard I don’t know what you think so I can’t gauge your reactions so let me know what you think, even if it’s a one word review or a PM, I don’t mind, just talk to me.
Harry chuckled a bit at that remembering his fourth year when Snape had threatened him with the same potion. He snuggled into Blaise and he didn’t so much as twitch when Draco cuddled up against his back, sandwiching him between the two of them. He felt safe and loved and protected. He could get used to this. Now if only he didn’t have an unknown dominant Dracken, who he was somehow mated with, locked in his wardrobe then everything would be perfect.

Harry groaned as he lounged on the settee later that night. It was seven at night and Harry had just finished eating the soft tender doe that Draco had hunted for their dinner.

He felt so full that every slight movement that he made caused his belly to feel like it would rupture.

Harry groaned again and rolled over into a more comfortable position for his belly. Perhaps he had eaten just a tad too much meat, but he hadn’t wanted to hurt Draco’s feelings by only eating a bit of the doe that the blond had so proudly displayed to him.

Harry had been asleep when Snape had come to take away the dominant who had somehow become his third mate. He was a bit put out because Draco and Blaise seemed to know who it was, but they weren’t telling him anything. He knew that he would find out sooner or later, because the man was his third dominant mate, but he would much rather it was the former over the latter.

Snape had come to take Blaise away for ‘questioning’ over an hour ago now and Harry was left to wrap around Draco, who was sitting on the floor beside the settee, rubbing soothing circles onto his back.

The portrait door opened and Blaise walked back in looking disgruntled. Harry peered at him and asked softly. “What happened?”

“Not a lot, Mio Amore. Draco, Professor Snape wishes for your presence.”
Draco nodded. “Take over for me here, Harry has a stomach ache.”

Blaise settled beside Draco and those smaller hands took over the soothing pattern. Harry sighed softly; he had such amazing mates who were so good to him. His Uncle had been wrong after all, he had found, not one, but two, absolutely wonderful men to settle down with, men who loved everything from his messy hair to his little toes.

“Is it looking bad?” Harry mumbled a while later, his eyes closed in pure bliss as Blaise rubbed his back and sides gently, lovingly.

“It depends on what you think is bad, Bello. It is looking like the Dracken did not use any coercion to become your mate and that you called out to him and he answered your call. It is looking like he is a legitimate mate of ours, though how it is possible; we are still trying to work that out.”

“Is he at least nice?” Harry asked, wondering how he’d deal with this new man if he was nasty and cruel.

“Nice looking or nice mannerisms?” Blaise asked.

Harry opened his mouth to answer nice as in kind, but stopped himself; he instead considered the question seriously before deciding that he wanted an answer for both.

“Both.”

“He is very handsome and very strong.” Blaise answered. “From what I know of him he is a nice person and would make a good mate.”

“So there is no reason to kill him?”

“None at all at the moment, Prezioso.”

“Good because I think that even if I wouldn’t go insane or anything from losing a mate, I think it would hurt something deep inside of me if we had to kill him.”
Blaise sighed and stilled his hands for a moment before resuming his slow circles.

“A Dracken never really gets over the loss of a mate, innamorato. Professor Snape is proof enough of that. He could have taken another mate by now if he had wished, but when we have lost the ones we love so dearly, it is always hard to think of replacing them with someone different. You would likely feel the death of this new mate for years to come, even after being mated for such a small amount of time, but you would get over it eventually, with Draco and I with you and the children we would give you, that would be sufficient in distracting you from his loss.”

“Can we please not talk like we have already set the execution date please?” Harry asked as his stomach bubbled a bit in disgust.

“Of course, Prezioso.”

They fell into a comfortable silence, Blaise’s hands still rubbing his back and sides and Harry thinking about how everything had changed, wondering how things could have gone so terribly wrong even when the entire heat period had been planned out and prepared for.

Harry had been taken down to the dungeons by both of his mates when Draco was finished with his questioning; apparently it was his turn now.

Harry sat opposite Elder Trintus and Professor Snape and allowed three drops of clear liquid to be placed carefully onto his tongue. He swallowed and looked at the two men in front of him, waiting for their questions.

“Alright, Harry dear, do you remember what happened during your heat period?” Elder Trintus asked gently.

“Yes.” He replied monotonously, aware of what he was saying, but he had absolutely no control over what he said, it was a frightening feeling, it was like his mind had gone blank and the answers to the questions that he was asked just fell from his mouth of their own accord.

“Do you remember sending out a call during your heat?”
“Yes.”

“Can you tell us why you sent out this call?” Snape asked.

“I wanted my mates to give me children.”

“So you let out a call to your mates demanding to give you children?”

“Yes.”

“When did you first notice that another dominant had joined you in your heat?”

“I didn’t know the time during the heat period, but it was early on, some when during the first night. It was definitely within the first few hours of me being on my heat.”

“Did you feel at all uncomfortable or upset with him present?”

“No.”

“Did you feel like pushing him away or getting away from him at any point?”

“No. It felt like he should have been there, like I wouldn’t have been complete had he not been there. I was confused and distressed before he arrived.”

“Now this question is very serious, Harry, did you kiss or touch any unmated Dracken in the time frame of you accepting Draco Malfoy as your second mate and then going onto your heat period with him?”

“Yes.”
“Do you remember who these Drackens are and what you did with them?”

“Yes.”

“Would you care to tell us, please, sweet one?”

“Henley and I kissed and hugged. Nasta and I cuddled and I used to kiss his cheek and he used to kiss my hair or hand. Arsenio kissed my hand. Jensen licked the back of my ear. Declan kissed my temple. Maximilius and I snogged out by the lake just before he told me that I was emitting mating pheromones…”

“Stop there for me, Harry. You and Maximilius shared a passionate kiss together just before he informed you that your Dracken was rejecting Draco?”

“Yes.”

The two older Drackens shared a look that Harry didn’t like and something clicked in his mind.

“My third mate is Max, isn’t it?”

“I’m afraid so, Harry dear.” Elder Trintus informed him gravely. “Do you remember at any time after the kiss with Maximilius if he ever acted differently around you? Possessive, jealous? Perhaps he didn’t like anyone touching you or if he wanted all of your attention on himself?”

“Yes. We shared a picnic the day I got out of the hospital wing to celebrate, he was acting possessive then, he didn’t like Nasta, or anyone else, touching me and he growled a bit when they did touch me.”

“Dear oh dear.”

“It isn’t all that bad.” Harry reasoned. “I like Max and he would make a good dominant.”

“You have accepted him completely, as you have Draco.”
“Yes, I believe so.”

“Harry is Blaise your mate?”

“Yes.”

“Is Draco your mate?”

“Yes.”

“Is Maximilius your mate?”

“Yes.”

“All three of them completely? Not half, all of them.”

“Yes.”

“You don’t feel like rejecting them?”

“No.”

“Remarkable.” Elder Trintus said in awe. “Your Dracken accepted Maximilius as your mate through the passionate kiss that you shared when you rejected Draco, then you overpowered your Dracken and took Draco back as a mate, the result is you have essentially mated with them both when you should have only mated with Maximilius. Drackens do not ever take back dominants that they have rejected, usually because the reason they rejected the dominant in the first place is something that they could never forgive.”

“They are both my mates aren’t they?” Harry asked as he pulled a face at the bitter tasting antidote that Snape had dripped onto his tongue.
“Yes, Harry my dear. After questioning all four of you it is very clear that all four of you are mates.”

“Does that mean that I don’t need to search for another mate now?” He asked with hope in his eyes. He saw the answer in the way that Elder Trintus’ eyes and face softened in sympathy. “I still need another mate? Are you kidding me?!”

“You have only partially mated with Draco and Maximilius, together they make up one mate, you will still need a grounding mate.”

“How is it possible that two people only make up one? That doesn’t even make any sense!”

“You rejected Draco, Potter. Then you accepted another mate to yourself in the time where Draco was no longer your mate. You then ignored your new mate in favour of fighting your Dracken to seal Draco to you once more. They are your mates and you are their submissive, no one can break you apart or take them away from you now, but their bonds were messed with during the time from their acceptance to the heat period that you just experienced. You accepted them both as mates and you mated with them both during the same heat period, your Dracken sees them as only one mate, so you need a fourth mate now or your Dracken side will be unstable.” Snape explained as simply as he possibly could.

“But this fourth mate will definitely be the last one now, yes?” Harry asked desperately.

“If you don’t have any more dramas like you have displayed in the last two months then yes. This mate will be your last one.”

“Thank god.” Harry sighed in relief. “Where is Max by the way?”

“Explaining to the Headmaster why he was passionately kissing one of his students on the grounds of the school without a chaperone present.” Elder Trintus answered.

Harry went pale. The Headmaster could be very protective of his students and of himself especially. Harry saw the man as more than a school Headmaster and he was sure that the Headmaster saw him as more than a favourite student. Their meeting could turn ugly.
“I would suggest, Mister Potter, that you return to your rooms and allow the Headmaster to speak to Mister Maddison about his improper actions.” Snape drawled in his most silkiest voice, the one that warned Harry not to disobey or his body bits would end up pickled and floating in jars.

Harry nodded uncertainly and he hoped that Max even wanted to speak to him after the Headmaster was through with tearing him a new arsehole.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Harry was nervously pacing at ten o’clock that night. Max still hadn’t come to their rooms, even though he had been assured that the older Dracken did know where his rooms were located.

The Headmaster had lost him his third mate! It had been two hours; surely the Headmaster would have been finished with Max by now! What was he going to do if his mate rejected him?

“Calm down, Harry love.” Draco told him calmly. “I’m sure he’ll be here.”

“You want him here?” Harry asked looking to Draco hopefully. “You don’t mind him? I mean he did practically almost ruin your bond.”

“He’s your mate now, Harry, there is nothing that I can do or say to change that.” Draco replied diplomatically.

“But do you hold it against him? Are you going to snub him or give him the cold shoulder? I can't live with a bunch of mates who can't even stay in the same room as one another!”

Blaise wrapped his arms around him and pulled him down onto his lap. “Hush, Mio Prezioso. Neither of us are going to snub Maximilius. Your Dracken chose him and we have no say in who you mate to or how many mates you actually end up having, it must be your decision. We are going to live with whatever you decide, Innamorato. We love you.”

Harry smiled and looked for confirmation from Draco who nodded his head seriously.

“We don’t have to like it, Harry, but we will live with it. I don’t mind that he interrupted what was supposed to be my bonding heat; I got more than enough turns with you without him or Blaise. I just don’t like how all of this has happened. He came to us when we were at our most vulnerable.”
“Most vulnerable?” Harry questioned.

“Harry, during heat is when a Dracken is in his, or her, most vulnerable state. We are almost completely unaware of everything that happens around us, we are powerless to stop anything that might happen because we are so focused on you and your pleasure, there is only one thing on our minds when we are on heat, you and your pleasure and conceiving children with our submissive, everything else is meaningless.” Blaise explained.

“Are you saying that…that a gang of hostile people could come in and we wouldn’t be able to do anything?” Harry asked horrified.

“That is exactly what I am saying, Bello. There have been many cases of Drackens being injured or killed whilst they have been on a heat period, one submissive and her three dominants burnt to death when their house caught fire and they were caught in a period of heat, they just burnt to death because none of them could break the focus of the heat, I doubt they even knew the house was on fire in the first place.”

“That’s horrible!” Harry exclaimed.

“Such is the weakness of a Dracken. The second and last time a Dracken is at their most vulnerable is when a submissive is giving birth. If the dominants aren’t near the submissive, or they are taken out, then the submissive is helpless against the opposing force.”

“God help us.” Harry whispered out as he turned to cuddle into Blaise.

“Perhaps it is time we went to bed, we need to recover our energy for when we return to classes tomorrow and we have done little sleeping in the past ten days.”

“But Max…”

“Knows where we are, Prezioso. He will find us when he is ready.”

Harry didn’t like it, but he couldn’t deny that he was bone tired as a yawn almost dislocated his jaw. He nodded sullenly and let Draco and Blaise lead him to their platform bed. It was bigger than the last time he had seen it, much bigger.

“I enlarged it so that Max could actually fit into it with us.” Draco told him. “I had to extend the end of it as well, honestly how a man grows to be six foot eight I’ll never know, he’s almost too big to be natural.”

“He’s a Dracken, he grew with his inheritance.” Harry told Draco.

“We don’t grow much in height, Mio Amore. Otherwise we would all be near enough the same height and we are not.” Blaise told him with a smile. “We swell with muscle and we gain a few inches maybe, but for Max to have become six foot eight, he must have already been six foot five or six in height at fifteen, before he had his inheritance. He was always destined to be very large.”

Harry frowned as he crawled into the bed. He closed his eyes, but he was still awake long after Draco and Blaise had fallen asleep. They had forgotten one very important fact of new bonds. He wouldn’t be able to sleep without Max near him.

Sighing softly, Harry rolled out of the bed and padded down the stairs. He was going to be exhausted come tomorrow, but no matter how tired he was, he couldn’t fall asleep and he didn’t have any more Dreamless Sleep potions left over from when he had needed to sleep near Draco and couldn’t because he didn’t trust him.

He could have gone to ask Professor Snape for some more, but Harry doubted that the man would want to be woken up at two in the morning just for him to ask for a potion. Madam Pomfrey could also give him a sleeping potion, but again Harry didn’t want to pad all the way down to the hospital wing, wake her up just to ask for a potion, there was no reason two of them needed to have disturbed sleep after all.

Sitting on the settee, Harry curled himself up and sunk deep into his thoughts. Everything had turned upside down. Just seven months ago he had been a human boy looking forward to going back to school for his sixth year. Then on his sixteenth birthday everything had changed, he had changed. He had turned into a labelled dark creature, a Dracken and not just any Dracken, a bloody rare male submissive Dracken.

Then he had come to school, concealing his new and alarming species status and almost two months later he had mated to someone that previously he had never even spoken to. Everything had happened so fast, too quick, not enough time for anything to sink in.

Before he could even get used to Blaise, he had been separated from him, which had hurt him deeply inside, to parade around a damned house with a hundred other dominant Drackens all intent on groping the skin off of him whilst his actual mate looked on, neither of them able to do anything about it.

Then he had learnt that he needed to do it all over again just to get pregnant, something which he still hadn’t been sure he wanted. Hell he was sixteen years old! He remembered what his Aunt had used to say about teenaged pregnancy, only she had been slagging off Mrs number forty-eight’s granddaughter, who had gotten pregnant at fifteen. The scandal it had caused the entire of little whinging had been enough to drive poor Mrs Huddson and her Husband to move house. But Harry remembered the awful things that people had spat at Mrs Huddson, calling her a bad Mother for not raising her daughter up properly enough to teach her granddaughter, calling the little granddaughter a slut and a whore. Aunt Petunia had been on her high horse for months and months, saying that she had waited until she had married before partaking in sexual activities. Harry had valued his life back then so he hadn’t voiced aloud his opinion that she had had to wait until she was married because no one other than Vernon Dursley was that desperate.

Now all he wanted was a baby, but he would still be a teenaged Mother, his baby’s Father would still be a teenager, Harry’s back straightened then, unless the baby’s Father was Max, then he would be a sixteen year old Mother whose baby would have a thirty-one year old Father. Oh hell.

There had to be a rule or something against that somewhere. Did he even want a baby right now? It would interfere with his school work, he still needed to complete another year of schooling before he graduated, hell how many kids did Blaise say he could have? He’d be overrun with them and the school definitely wouldn’t be the best place to raise kids, how the hell did other Drackens manage? He couldn’t be the only one that was overwhelmed. But then he remembered that nearly all Drackens were scented out at birth and they were raised knowing what would happen, they had sixteen years to get used to the idea, he had had literally overnight to come to terms with being mated and then he had had a second mate thrown on top, then there was that drama of his Dracken rejecting Draco, then he had apparently accepted Max as a mate and then forced Draco back into being his mate and now he had three of them and there was a high possibility that he was already pregnant with one of their babies and fucking hell he needed a break.

This wasn’t how he saw his life. This wasn’t how it was supposed to be! His life should have been calm now, blissful now that Voldemort was dead and all his Death Eaters were either dead or in Azkaban. He may have lost Sirius in the Department of Mysteries, but he had also gotten rid of Voldemort there too.

He didn’t know what that beast had hoped to accomplish by possessing him but it really hadn’t gone his way when Harry had forced his love for his friends upon him. Harry could still hear the screams of agony, of rage and pain. Voldemort had been seared to death by Harry’s intense love for his friends, for Sirius and Remus as his parental figures, his love for Dumbledore as a mentor and perhaps as an eccentric Uncle or Grandfather.

Voldemort had curled up as his flesh had flayed around him, the remaining parts of his soul hidden all over Britain burning and turning to ash through the love that they just couldn’t understand, that they had never been shown nor felt before.

It was sad really that a grown man had never known an ounce of love from anyone in his life, it was even sadder that that lack of understanding for such a simple yet complex emotion such as love had killed such a terrible man. Harry hated knowing that it was the strength of his love for those around him that had ultimately killed the one who had taken so much from him.

It was fitting really though when he thought about it. His Mother had stood in front of him, had given her life to save him through her absolute and heart deep love for him and Voldemort had killed her regardless of her pleas. Fifteen years later he had killed the one who had taken her life so mercilessly, so emotionlessly with the burning love that he held for her and his Father and for everyone around him. Maybe it was fates way of redeeming to him everything that he had lost, by giving him X amount of men to love and be loved in return as well as cared for and cherished and allowing him to have babies so that he could have the family that had been so cruelly ripped away from him at such a young and tender age. He had been struggling to survive all his life and now that he had actually survived against all the odds, he was at a loss as to what to do.
“Harry?”

Harry startled badly and looked to the portrait door where the huge, formidable form of Maximilius Diadesen Maddison stood, filling the stone archway completely.

The large man rushed forward and fell hard onto his knees in front of Harry, who was frozen on the settee.

“I am so sorry, Harry. I didn’t mean for it to happen, I couldn’t control myself, I couldn’t stop even though I knew what I was doing would frighten and confuse you. I felt you go onto heat and I knew I had to be there, but I barricaded myself in my room to keep from running to you and scaring you, but when you started calling to me, I had to answer your call, you were my mate, I had to answer you when you called.”

Harry had never heard the fun loving Max in such distress, he was holding Harry’s hands in both of his own, looking imploringly into his eyes and he was on his knees begging to be forgiven, but Harry didn’t know what needed to be forgiven, Max hadn’t done anything wrong in his opinion. Their Drackens had acted on instinct, like they were supposed to, that wasn’t Max’s fault.

Harry leant forward and smiled as his Dracken practically made him purr at the contact with his third mate. Max wrapped those huge arms around him and Harry could hardly believe that he had thought that Draco’s arms were huge. Max’s had to have been twice the size.

“Max.” Harry sighed happily. “You couldn’t stop yourself, I know that. I couldn’t stop myself from calling out. I wanted a baby, I wanted my mates, so I started calling and I couldn’t stop myself. I don’t blame you, you are my mate and I’m glad that you joined us on our heat period. You needed to be there…we wanted you to be there.”

Max was, for once, speechless and he just held Harry in the curve of his body lowering his head to smell the soft scent that came from Harry’s tufty hair.

He suspected that Harry was pregnant. There had been an eighty percent chance that he had conceived during the last ten days and the affectionate way that Harry was behaving towards him seemed to be a big indication that he had conceived. He had heard that a Dracken who didn’t have any children and had not conceived whilst being on a fertile heat turned violent and aggressive towards their mates. This would never happen again once they’d given birth to their first child as the Dracken only wanted a child, the submissive would only get aggressive if they didn’t have any children from their mates, once they got what they wanted, they would calm right down.

Harry had fallen asleep in his arms and Max didn’t know what to do. He had never imagined that he would be mated to this beautiful, kind and unique boy in front of him. He barely knew Blaise and he knew even less about Draco. Would they accept him into their bed? It would be disconcerting to go to sleep and then wake up in the morning and he was suddenly in their bed with them.
Biting his bottom lip, Max slid Harry into his lap and pushed his arms underneath the tiny body; he lifted Harry up into his arms and carefully slid onto the settee and lay down, his legs hung off the end of the settee at the knees, leaving his lower legs to dangle in the air.

Max carefully, slowly, gently moved Harry to lay lengthways down his body and cuddled him on his chest. It was uncomfortable for him, very uncomfortable and nigh on painful, but as Harry snuffled in his sleep and cuddled in closer to him, he realised that he didn’t give a flying fuck that he was going to be stiff and have cramps and pins and needles all through his legs tomorrow, he was very happy right where he was.

He was a mated man now, a mated man with a submissive and two other dominants and a possible clutch of children on the way. It was complicated and this…relationship needed work, it needed a lot of work and effort and it would be so hard, but Max couldn’t for one minute think of a time in his adult life that he had ever been happier than he was at the moment. He had a submissive mate of his own at last, he was actually mated and not just to any old submissive either, he had somehow managed to get the most amazing, beautiful and kind submissive that he had ever had the good fortune to meet to choose him as his dominant mate. He had never been as in love as he was right now with anyone before. He held Harry closer and he placed a kiss to his smooth forehead. He was the luckiest man in the world. He was mated and he was mated to sweet Harry, the boy who had been so kind to him and everyone else, the boy who had eaten the biscuits that he’d made and gifted to him with obvious enjoyment, the boy who had chosen him to become his dominant no matter how messed up the process had actually been. They were mated now and nothing could break them apart now.

Chapter Nineteen – Repetitive Renditions

Harry woke up to very feral, hostile growling. He blinked and found his vision obscured by the most beautiful, bright blue wings that he had even laid eyes on. He touched the stunning equally bright blue scales and the owner of said wings and scales shivered.

Harry peeked over the top of those wings, standing up to do so as they were so large and he looked between the juncture of Max’s neck and his wing. Draco and Blaise were standing opposite, Blaise looked tired and exasperated, Draco was the source of the hostile growling.

“W’as going on?” Harry slurred sleepily.

“Draco believes that Max stole you from our bed last night so that he could turn you against us.” Blaise explained with a small shake of the head.
“I would never turn against you!” Harry stated sharply. “I love each and every one of you exactly the same, Draco. How could you accuse me of something like that?”

“He is just jealous and feeling a bit insecure so he is lashing out.” Max told him, his eyes never leaving Draco. “My presence interrupted what was supposed to be his bonding; his Dracken is looking for reassurance that I am not replacing him.”

It was in that moment that Harry truly realised that Max was, in actual fact, thirty-one years old. He was older and knew a hell of a lot more than him, Blaise and Draco put together. It reassured him and he draped his arms around Max’s neck and nuzzled the skin and strong muscle there with his nose.

“Max is not replacing you, Draco, but you have to understand that he is my mate as well. I have three mates that all need my time and attention and it will be much easier on all of us if we can all get along, it means I don’t have to separate you all. It wouldn’t be fair if I was sitting here in the living room with Max and Blaise and you had to be placed in the bedroom because you can’t behave when around the other mates, Draco.”

Max was practically melting under Harry’s ministrations to his neck. Such affection and love, he had been missing out on so much. He had never realised that being with a mate could be like this.

Harry climbed out from behind Max and went to Draco, standing on his tiptoes to press a kiss to Draco’s forehead, his arms going around his neck.

“I love you, Draco and I always will. The nightmare of me rejecting you is over and it will not ever happen again. We are bonded now until death do us part. Though don’t you go dying on me either.”

Harry gave a small smile and dropped back down on his feet to press a kiss to Draco’s pale pink lips. Draco wrapped his arms around Harry’s waist and dropped his nose into Harry’s hair.

“Max didn’t steal me from the bedroom either. I couldn’t sleep because I didn’t have Max with me and I didn’t have any more sleeping potions left over, so I came out here so I wouldn’t wake either you or Blaise up with my restlessness. Max came in about an hour later. I must have fallen asleep then.”

“You did.” Max reassured him with a smile. “I fell asleep under you.”

“He didn’t even want to use magic to expand the settee.” Blaise smirked. “He thought that wiggling his wand out of his pocket and waving it around would wake you up.”

Max went a very faint pink, but he did nothing else to show his embarrassment as he waved Blaise off with a grin.

Harry chuckled as he hopped up to wrap his legs around Draco, whose arm almost automatically slid under his bum to support him.

“Do we have lessons today? Actually what day is it?” Harry asked.

“It’s Tuesday today, we should really have gone back to lessons yesterday, but due to the drama it was probably for the best that we didn’t.” Blaise answered.

“So we do have lessons?”

“Yes, in an hour or so, but breakfast first yes?”

Harry looked to Max then, his face scrunched up as he tried to figure out what the thirty-one year old man was going to do all day.

“I’ll be going to work, Harry. I’ve been flooing to and from the Dracken compound from my workplace for these last couple of months. I get off at four.”

“Last lesson ends at five and then we have dinner.”

Max grinned as he moved to kiss Harry’s cheek and, grinning even more, he kissed Draco’s forehead. Draco who growled threateningly, but couldn’t do anything else because he was holding onto Harry.

“I’ll meet you back here after your dinner.” Max told him.

Harry leant forward and gave Max a hug and a more passionate kiss on the lips before Max left for work.

Harry wiggled to be put down and he bounced off to have a shower and to get dressed. He was “I’m not going to spend an hour getting ready, Draco.” Harry insisted. “We don’t have the time and I have nothing else I need to do.”

“Not an hour then but half an hour at least.”

“I already spent twenty minutes getting ready, I won’t spend another half an hour getting ready, I wouldn’t know what to do!”

“Let me do it for you then.”

“No.”

Harry scowled as he held both Draco’s and Blaise’s hands walking into the Great Hall. People stared, people pointed and whispered, but Harry didn’t care. For the first time in his life, he didn’t care that people were pointing and whispering about him. He had Blaise and Draco and Max, why should he care what other people thought of him when he had his three mates?

Harry sat down and ignored the glare that he received from Theodore Nott, who had not given up on getting his hands on Blaise. Harry would have skinned him alive if he had thought for a moment that the human was a threat.

Harry loaded his plate full of meat and happily ate until his heart’s content. Though he was glad that both Blaise and Draco had hunted the night previous, this meat was just a tad too cooked for his current tastes, but thanks to the two raw meals he had devoured with his mates, he could handle the cooked meat, even though he didn’t really want it.

“Please tell me that you aren’t dying.” A voice demanded.

Harry peeked over his shoulder and grinned at Ginny, whose joyful, child-like face tried to take attention away from the concerned eyes that belied her expression.

“I’m not dying.” Harry answered with a smile. “Madam Pomfrey has contained the illness and I should be fine soon enough.”
“She did say he might have one more really bad bout of it before it was all out of his system though.” Blaise answered quickly and Harry looked at him confusedly.

Harry could have slapped himself as he remembered that he still needed another mate. He didn’t feel like he needed one, in fact he felt so content with the three that he had that he had actually forgotten that he needed a fourth mate, but Elder Trintus had explained before he had gotten Draco as a mate that he would feel like he wouldn’t need another mate, even when he did need one because his Dracken side would only recognise the amount of mates he needed to get him a clutch of children, not how many he needed to be completely healthy.

“I can hope can't I?” Harry answered, only Draco and Blaise understanding the double meaning to his words.

He didn’t want a fourth mate, hell he hadn’t wanted a second mate! Now he was stuck with three and soon to get a fourth, yet he didn’t see it as a hardship. He saw his three gorgeous mates and felt like the luckiest person alive, he didn’t want a fourth mate but as soon as he had them, he would love them so much that he wouldn’t be able to think of living without them.

It really was a terrible part of being a Dracken, yet if it gave him the unconditional love of four men and a horde of children who he would love until his dying breath; he wasn’t going to bitch about it… too much at least.

“Do you think you’ll be fit for our match against Hufflepuff?” Ginny asked.

“No idea. Maybe, maybe not.” Harry answered, knowing that there was a huge chance that he would be pregnant for the Hufflepuff match and unable to play. It was why he had thrown himself wholly and completely into the match against Ravenclaw, because he knew that it was very likely that it would be his last ever match.

He sighed and placed a hand over his belly, imagining a child growing there.

“Oh dear Merlin.” Ginny breathed, she grabbed his arm and tugged him out of the Great Hall and away from Draco and Blaise.

“What, are you having protected sex?” She asked seriously.

Harry blushed to the roots of his hair. “I…that is…don’t think it’s any of your business, Ginny.”
“This isn’t the time for virgin cuteness, Harry! It’s just occurred to me that you’ve grown up in the Muggle world, you wouldn’t know!”

“Know what, Ginny?”

“Wizards can get pregnant, Harry.” Ginny told him. “If you’ve been having unprotected sex with other wizards you could be pregnant, you have to get yourself checked over by Madam Pomfrey, right now!”

Harry let himself be dragged to the hospital wing, knowing all the while that Madam Pomfrey would use the extra sensitive spell used for detecting very early Dracken pregnancies. He didn’t know what he wanted the results to be. He knew that there was an incredibly high chance that he was already pregnant, he only needed two mates to get pregnant and even though his Dracken only saw Max and Draco as one, he in actual fact had three mates. Yet he didn’t want to be pregnant at just sixteen! He was too young to properly care for a baby! He didn’t even have a full education yet! He didn’t have a house for his baby to live in; he didn’t have the skills he needed to look after a baby and he didn’t have a job!

“What have you been doing this time?” Madam Pomfrey asked with a long suffering sigh.

“He’s been having unprotected sex, Madam Pomfrey. He didn’t know about male pregnancies so he didn’t think he needed to use protection spells.” Ginny stated matter of factly whilst Harry blushed beside her.

Madam Pomfrey knew immediately what the problem was. She gave a long look to Harry before bustling around and getting him to hop onto a bed. She handed him a large red coloured book and Harry stared at the title. ‘Your Baby and You: What you can expect from a Male Pregnancy.’

“I don’t know if I’m pregnant yet!” Harry gasped out indignantly.

“That book contains the incantations for contraceptive charms and the names and ingredients for different potions that you can use to help you. It also has all the information you will need on looking after yourself during pregnancy and how to properly care for a newborn baby if it turns out that you are pregnant.”

“Can we please get on with it?” Harry begged.
Madam Pomfrey nodded her head curtly and waved her wand over his belly gently and then more vigorously. Harry felt her magic seep through his skin and touch something within him, something that made his gums and fingertips ache as his fangs and claws tingled to be released.

It took nearly all of his will power to keep his wings and scales from bursting out from his control. He clenched his hands to stop his claws from coming out and he breathed deeply against the urge to attack Madam Pomfrey, to protect his baby. He knew the results of the test before Madam Pomfrey had even read the results of her diagnostic charm…he knew before anyone had to say anything. He was pregnant.

“Well you are already pregnant, Mister Potter. Take that book and read it thoroughly and come back for a check-up in exactly two weeks.”

“When did I get pregnant?” Harry asked. “I mean, exactly when?”

“It is impossible to tell you exactly when, but I can tell you that you are only eleven days pregnant.”

Harry quickly worked it out. He had gotten pregnant on his second day of the heat, after Max had joined them. Oh hell, he was screwed. Three potential Fathers, three potential Fathers who would love nothing more than to sit him in a soft chair and never let him get up again.

“So which of your men did you have sexual relations with eleven days ago, Harry?” Ginny asked innocently, but her eyes gleamed as she put emphasis on the word sexual relations, implying explicitly that she meant which of your men thoroughly fucked you eleven days ago.

Harry blushed and went slightly light headed from the rush of blood to his head. He looked from Ginny’s eager, salacious face to Madam Pomfrey’s sympathetic, yet expectant look.

“All of them.”

Ginny giggled. “Harry you dirty, naughty boy.”

“Please read the book carefully, Mister Potter.” Madam Pomfrey told him. “And please come back to see me if you have questions, if you feel like you need to talk or if anything feels amiss. If I don’t see you before then, I want to see you in two weeks’ time for a check-up.”
Harry nodded his understanding and he let Ginny lead him out of the hospital wing.

“Merlin, Harry! You’re pregnant, you’re going to have a baby! You have to tell Mum! She’ll be so excited, we all know that she sees you as her youngest son; she’ll be getting her first grandchild from you! She’s been on at Bill and Charlie for years now, it drives them nuts, you can take the pressure off of them, they’ll love you forever.”

“I…I don’t know, Ginny. When the papers get a hold of the story I won’t be able to move a foot without being hounded.”

“But what happens if the papers get a hold of the story and Mum still doesn’t know.”

Harry went white and nodded, changing direction up to the Owlery. He called Hedwig down who nuzzled the side of his face and his hair with her beak and tongue.

Ginny handed him a piece of parchment whilst Harry dug out one of his self-inking quills. Then he was stuck, he didn’t know what to write.

“Hurry, Harry, we don’t have much time before lessons start.” Ginny urged him.

“Allright alright.” Harry conceded, putting quill to parchment and writing a quick but informative letter to Mrs Weasley.

“Hedwig, take this to Mrs Weasley and only Mrs Weasley.” Harry told her. She nipped his ear affectionately before flying out of the Owlery and leaving Ginny and Harry to near enough run to their lessons.

Harry didn’t see Blaise or Draco for the next three hours, but that was fine, he stayed with Neville, Dean and Seamus.

At lunch Harry made his way to where he saw a shock of platinum blond hair and he wrapped his arms around Draco’s shoulders, kissing the back of his neck.

Draco pulled Harry around his body and sat him in his lap. Blaise leant forward and gave him a soft, lingering kiss and Harry sighed.

“So, Potter, was what Weasley shrieking about this morning true? Are you pregnant?” Pansy Parkinson asked conversationally.

“I had hoped to tell my lovers first, before anyone else but as that is shot to hell now, yes it’s true.” Harry answered, ignoring Blaise’s hand clenching on his and Draco’s arms squeezing around his middle.

“Well I suppose this is an impromptu ‘welcome to the circle’ meeting.” Pansy answered.

“A what?” Harry asked.

“You are a Half-blood, Potter, yet you have a Pureblood Father, this mistake of your Father’s can be forgiven only once, because his Pureblood runs through your veins. If it was diluted anymore, you would not be accepted into the Pureblood circles and neither would your children. The only way for the Potter line to be seen as Pureblooded again is if you marry into a Pureblood line and produce a child. The hardest part for you would have been finding a respectable Pureblood who was willing to impregnate you.”

Harry was about to tell Pansy to shove her welcome meeting up her bony arse, that his Father hadn’t made any sort of mistake by marrying his Mother, when Draco clamped a hand over his mouth.

“We accept your welcome and look forward to socialising with you in the future.” Draco answered formally.

Pansy nodded and turned away. Draco took his hand away from Harry’s mouth, who glared at him furiously.

“I know you don’t care about the Pureblood social circles, Harry, I know your Father didn’t make a mistake by marrying your Mother, because then we wouldn’t have you here now, but if I have any hope of my parents accepting you, it’s easier if you can be claimed as a Pureblood.”

Harry let out all the breath he had been holding and he sighed instead. He smiled and patted Draco’s cheek.
“If it makes you happy I can put up with it.”

Draco smiled, truly smiled then and Harry’s heart missed a beat. He pressed his lips to Draco’s and wrapped his arms around him.

“I feel left out.” Blaise told them with a small smile.

Harry chuckled and reached forward to kiss and hug him as well.

“Why did you have to be so greedy?!” A scream yelled from a few seats down.

Harry looked to the screwed up face of Astoria Greengrass and blew out a breath in a huff.

“If you had stuck to Zabini and not been so greedy as to steal Draco away from me I’d still be betrothed to him!”

“Stop screaming, Astoria. You’re making a scene.” Draco told her coolly.

“No! You should have been mine! Because of you I’m now betrothed to some idiot from Spain!”

“We were lightly betrothed and it is very likely that I would have found someone to marry before I ever hit twenty-five. If it hadn’t have been Harry, it would have been someone else. If you didn’t want to be betrothed to the gentleman from Spain that your Father picked out for you then you shouldn’t have signed the contract with him.”

“It was either sign the contract or be disowned!”

“You made the decision for yourself, Astoria.”

Harry shook his head and turned away from the spectacle of a fourteen year old girl throwing a full blown tantrum and began eating his, very thick, steak. It had been very quickly flash fried and was bloody and red in the middle, but it was cooked and to Harry it took away all pleasure that he could have taken in a raw piece of meat.

His unhealthy side orders of seasoned potato wedges and a thick peppercorn sauce had people looking at him curiously. It was hard not to notice someone who made it a point to carry little cucumber sticks around in a plastic tub and ate nearly every fruit and vegetable in the vicinity suddenly tear into a steak with not even a salad in sight.

Harry didn’t care though; the crisp lettuce leaves and the ripe cherry tomatoes just weren’t appetising to him at the moment and he couldn’t bring himself to even try to eat them. He didn’t even want them on his plate.

Blaise’s hand did not leave his stomach and Draco growled almost inaudibly every time he moved to get out of his lap. The overprotectiveness had started and it would be several months, and a birth, before it abated. He was going to kill all of his mates out of frustration before several months passed, he was sure of it. He could already feel his killing urges heighten and it hadn’t even been an hour since his mates had found out. This was going to be a seriously stressful time for all of them, but especially for him.
Chapter Twenty – Overprotective Prats.

Harry growled as he was carried up the stairs by Blaise, who had snatched him from Draco’s lap and had refused to put him down on his own two feet.

“You know, I’m no expert on pregnancy, but isn’t the baby in my stomach and not my feet? What can walking possibly do to the baby?” He demanded.

“What if you fell over, mio amore?”

“Really? Tell me when was the last time that I’ve fallen over walking? Oh wait, it’s never happened!”

“Pregnancy will skew your sense of balance.” Draco told him, walking a little in front to ‘make sure no boisterous first year knocked into him’.

“Forgive me, but doesn’t pregnancy only affect the sense of balance in the last trimester? I’m eleven days pregnant! Not even two fucking weeks!”

Blaise’s hand did not leave his stomach and Draco growled almost inaudibly every time he moved to get out of his lap. The overprotectiveness had started and it would be several months, and a birth, before it abated. He was going to kill all of his mates out of frustration before several months passed, he was sure of it. He could already feel his killing urges heighten and it hadn’t even been an hour since his mates had found out. This was going to be a seriously stressful time for all of them, but especially for him.
Blaise suddenly stopped and Harry turned to look in front only to have his vision blocked by a very well defined chest. Looking up he smiled as he came face to face with a dripping wet, half naked Maximilius.

“My, is this treat all for me?” Harry asked salaciously, exaggeratedly roving his eyes over Max’s exposed body.

“I heard you shouting in distress from the rooms, are you alright?” Max asked him, concern and worry glinting in his blue, blue eyes.

“Yes, only I wish to actually walk for myself and I’m being denied!” Harry growled testily.

Max carefully picked him out of Blaise’s arms and held him to his own chest, the front of Harry’s robes getting damp from the water still clinging to Max’s chest.

Harry blushed an incredible shade of red when Max started sniffing all over his body.

“What are you doing?!”

“Blaise and Draco are being protective of you, it is logical to assume that you have been injured in some way.”

“We should take this into our rooms before someone sees us and we let our biggest secret out of the bag.” Draco told them.

Max carried him easily and it made Harry frown. He had been gaining a lot of weight due to his new diet, but it couldn’t be seen at all in how his mates carried him like a rag doll. He knew Drackens didn’t gain super human strength, they kept their own strength but it was amplified tenfold in their Dracken forms and a sudden burst of adrenaline could give them the appearance of super human strength, but Harry was a very nice, rounded weight of seven stone ten pounds. It wasn’t the average for his age, but he wasn’t starving or wasting away either.

Max sat on their settee and he held Harry in his nearly naked lap, still sniffing around his shoulders, moving steadily lower. Harry wondered if he’d be able to smell the pregnancy. Would he be able to smell the baby growing inside of him?

Max made it to Harry’s side before a new scent had him pausing and sniffing about for injuries. What he was doing would look vaguely stupid, or sexual, to outsiders, yet he had always been a man who cared very little for other’s thoughts or gossip mongering.
The new scent didn’t smell sharp like an injury would; it was sweet and a little bit cloying when it reached the back of his throat. Was this an illness? Was Harry sick? He had smelt injuries before, on himself and on others, but never sickness.

He travelled in a line across Harry’s belly to the other side, following the sickly sweet smell. It smelt a little too sweet, like rotting rubbish, or death. Max swallowed heavily. Was Harry dying?

He moved down lower, to Harry’s abdomen and the smell was stronger here. So strong that it left a faint taste on his tongue. He sniffed deeply and his eyes widened as he realised what it was that he was actually smelling. A baby. Harry was pregnant with a youngling.

His arms closed automatically around Harry’s tiny body, holding him carefully, gently yet solidly to protect him from the outside world. Draco and Blaise’s actions became more understood, they had been protecting their little mate from losing the baby. The very thought of losing one of his children made him feel like vomiting as a growl tore its way out of his throat.

“Don’t you start too!” Harry snapped, bopping him on the head with the ends of his fingers.

“You’re pregnant.” Max stated obviously, but he wanted verbal confirmation of what he had just discovered through scent alone.

“Eleven days pregnant, not even two weeks! The baby isn’t even the size of a haricot bean yet! So let me go!”

Max let him go and he let Harry slide happily from his lap to sit beside him. He then stopped both Draco and Blaise from rushing to take his place in holding and protecting him.

“Harry is right. We need to curb our desires to coddle him, we will only end up smothering him, or possibly dead if he gets frustrated enough to lash out. It is very common for submissives to kill one or more of their dominants during pregnancy. We must be careful, though this does not mean that we won’t still punish unacceptable behaviour, Harry.” Max warned him, giving Harry a sharp look.

“I wasn’t expecting anything less.” Harry intoned innocently.

Max gave him a look and Harry laughed happily. He stood up and stretched, a smile coming to his face as one of Max’s large hands cupped his flat belly.

“There’s nothing there to feel yet!” Harry complained, but there was no heat to his words.
“It doesn’t matter if the child isn’t physically seen yet, it’s just the knowledge that our first baby together is here, growing under my hand.”

“Who says it’s your baby?” Draco cut in arrogantly.

Max looked at him with a single raised, chestnut eyebrow. “This child is from our submissive, from our shared love. It doesn’t matter who fathered the baby, I speak for myself and the majority of all dominant Drackens when I say that I will love this baby as my own, regardless of who actually fathered it.”

Harry hugged Max gratefully, so happy to know that his children wouldn’t be ignored or shunned by his mates just because they were from another man. He didn’t want any of his children to have even a fraction of the pain and loneliness that he had felt from his own childhood.

Draco growled and Harry looked at him with a cocked head. Draco was glaring at Max and Harry sighed. He had hoped that Draco would be gracious enough to accept any mate that he chose, despite their age. True he hadn’t really chosen Max like he had his first two mates, but it didn’t matter, Max was now a mate and Harry loved him.

Harry broke away from Max and gave him a loving kiss to those gorgeous lips before walking up to Draco and dragging him into their bedroom. He stood under the platform that held their now absolutely massive bed and hopped up on the low chest of drawers there. Draco’s hands automatically jumped to support him or catch him if he somehow fell. It made him growl lowly and bat those hands away from him.

“What’s wrong, Draco?” He asked, pulling Draco into a hug with his legs.

“I don’t know.” Draco replied looking apologetic. It didn’t suit that aristocratic face. “I’m a naturally jealous and selfish person. I’ve had everything I’ve ever wanted handed to me on a silver platter. I really have grown up with a silver spoon in my mouth, Harry. My parents, they tried for years to have a baby, they had lost hope of ever having one when only a couple of months later my Mother was diagnosed as pregnant by the family Healer.”

“They spoilt you.” Harry put in; nodding at the sort of logic that he could see there. The elder Malfoy’s had thought that they would never have a child; it was only natural that the only child they did manage to have was given everything that he had asked for and then some. He could understand that.

“Spoilt doesn’t even cover it, Harry, not really. I would have been spoilt if my parents had conceived me on their wedding night. It took them five years and help from all sorts of fertility and conception potions to get me. Even I can see that they ruined me, but they didn’t care, Harry. My Mother was perhaps the worst, but Father wasn’t too far behind. They love me dearly.”

“So why are you so worried that they’ll disown you, Draco?” Harry asked gently. “They love you so much; they had to try for five years just to get you, why would they disown you for this?”

“Because I’m not human anymore!” Draco told him desperately. “I’m not human, I’m not a Pureblood. I’m a half-breed now and I’ve grown up listening to their comments about Muggleborns and squibs and half-breeds, the contempt in their voices, the things they said…”

“But they love you, Draco.” Harry told him. “You might not be human anymore, but you aren’t a half-breed. Half-breeds are classed as a baby born of a witch or wizard who has had sex with a magical creature. Neither of your parents slept with a magical creature to conceive you. Dracken blood is in the family lines. It seems to me that it’s a hereditary inheritance. The Dracken blood ‘chooses’ who it wants to be manifested in. It chose you, Draco; out of the entire Black family it chose you and me. How many Purebloods in this school have a link to the Black family? How many have Black blood in their veins and haven’t been chosen to be Drackens. Your parents should be proud.”

Draco looked shifty and more than a bit guilty.

“You still haven’t told them.” Harry stated quietly, feeling a bit hurt that his mate was ashamed of him.

“It isn’t you, Harry.” Draco assured, picking his chin up and kissing him lovingly. “I love you and I could never be ashamed of you, but it would be too hard to tell them that I’m in a permanent relationship with Harry Potter without explaining everything else. That I’m sharing my Husband-to-be with two other men is also going to rake up their curiosity, like I’ve said I’m a jealous person, they won’t understand.”

Harry nodded and smiled. He put his arms around Draco and held him close.

“You need to tell them some when, Draco. We have a baby on the way. A baby that could very possibly be yours. How upset will they be if a Malfoy Heir was born and they hadn’t even known that you were seeing someone?”

“Mother would be devastated. A new child into a family is a gloating step for the old lines. It means that our family would be secured for another generation, that our family has grown in both prestige and power. She would love to rub the other ladies’ faces in her new grandchild.”

“Come on, love.” Harry coaxed. “Let’s get back to Blaise and Max. I understand where you are coming from, but you can’t deprive your Mother of her chance to gloat over her grandchild and please, please try to get on with the others, for me?”

Draco sighed and picked him up from the chest of drawers, carrying him back into the living room despite Harry batting at him and demanding to be put down.

Harry’s voice stopped short when he saw Max and Blaise cuddling on the settee, Max’s mouth over Blaise’s throat.

“Did I miss something?” Harry asked a little worriedly, looking from the cuddling couple to Draco, who didn’t look surprised.

Max moved his mouth to show the purple-red mark he had made on Blaise’s neck.

“Dominant Drackens need to establish a ranking order, Harry.” He explained calmly. “We fight to find out who is the most dominant within the family group as the most dominant of us will have added duties to the mateship and will make any and all hard decisions if it’s needed.”

“You are dominant to Blaise.” Harry stated, bobbing his head a bit to show his understanding of what was being said. “How do you know about this when I don’t?” Harry asked Draco.

“About a month ago, after the first time I had sex with you, I had the obsessively strong urge to mount Blaise and show him that his place is below me. I tried to ignore it, but when he started attacking me, I let out my instincts and fought back. My teeth automatically went to his throat and I bit down enough to bruise him. We went back to normal after that.” Draco shrugged. “Blaise explained what had happened afterwards and that was that.”

“So, you and Max are more dominant than Blaise, what does that mean for Blaise?”

“Nothing, Prezioso. It is just the order of your dominants; the most dominant of your mates will make most of the decisions needed for the mateship and he will keep all the other dominants in line if it’s needed. He will also always take you first during the heat period. It is mainly used to stop dominants from killing each other during the heat period to get to you.”
“Oh. I didn’t think about that.” Harry admitted.

“You didn’t need to before now.” Max told him. “You only ever had Blaise and then just Blaise and Draco, and as your previous mate it was always going to be Blaise that took you first. By the time I had gotten to you from my rooms in the grounds, both Blaise and Draco had already taken you, so it didn’t really matter.”

“So if you’re both more dominant that Blaise, who is the more dominant out of you two?” Harry asked, looking between Max and Draco.

“We haven’t had the urge to prove who is more dominant yet, so we haven’t yet fought for the order position, but it will be some when before your next heat.”

“Can I watch?” Harry asked with a naughty grin. “You and Blaise together looks sexy and hot.”

Max and Blaise looked at each other and then kissed and Harry swallowed, his cock giving a small twitch.

“I didn’t think that my dominants could be together as well.” He stated through a dry mouth when they broke apart after a lengthy snog.

“Oh we can be together, Harry.” Max told him with a wink. “We are, after all, still hot blooded males.”

“It’s also another reason for the order.” Blaise told him a bit breathless, but otherwise still his composed self. “The most dominant mate is dominant to the other mates. If Max and I were to have sex, he would automatically top me, it stops squabbling during the heat.”

“You will have sex during the heat? When I am literally too blind to see you?” Harry demanded.

“Only one, maybe two people can take you at one time, Harry.” Max explained. “There are three of us, soon to be four. The heat affects us too, we feel like we are dying unless we are having sexual intercourse with someone. It’s why we are so furious and frantic with you, because if we aren’t, we feel like we will die. Four of us can’t have you at once, so we will take each other to stave off the pain of the heat.”
“You won't actually die will you?” Harry asked.

Max chuckled. “No. The heat just makes us feel like we are dying. It’s a completely mental thing. Like when you’re on heat it feels like you are burning, am I right?”

“Yes.” Harry answered rubbing his chest in the remembered pain of feeling like he was being burnt alive.

Draco immediately sniffed at his skin, pushing apart his shirt to lick at the skin of his chest.

“I’m alright. It’s remembered pain of our heat together.” Harry told him.

Max looked at him. “Is it really that bad? I’ve never known a submissive who would talk about it.”

“I thought it was like having a fever.” Blaise confessed.

“It’s much worse than that. It feels like I'm actually being burnt alive, like the bed has been set on fire and I’m burning with it, and it feels like only the touch of my mate will help cool me, but it’s a lie. Your touches make me feel hotter, like I'm being roasted from the inside out. My head and chest always feel worse than anywhere else. I can't think, can't breathe, I can barely see…I can only feel and pray that it will end. I always feel so weak, so drained the longer the heat goes on.”

“I knew that was true.” Max stated. “That a submissive gets weaker the longer the heat goes on. It’s why we, as dominants, are always up before you and have showered, dressed, cleaned up and hunted for ourselves and for you by the time you have woken up.”

“How do you get stronger during the heat when I get weaker? I mean you don’t eat, you don’t drink, the same as me, so what makes you stronger?”

“We feed from you, Harry.” Blaise told him. “We feed from your sexual energy; we drink from your skin, from your release, from your mouth. You keep us strong so that we have enough energy, enough strength, so that we can give you children.”
Harry went pink, but refused to otherwise let those words and their meaning bother him. Instead he wormed his way onto the settee, in between Max and Blaise, compacting himself until he fit in the tiny gap between their bodies.

“Comfortable?” Max asked him with a grin when Harry finally stopped moving after wiggling his bum to find a solid place to sit.

“Almost.” Harry answered, gesturing for Draco to come and sit beside Blaise.

“Now I’m comfortable.” He answered once he finally had all of his mates around him, touching them in some way.

Harry fell asleep like that, only to wake up when Max moved his thigh from under him and stood up. Harry made a small, disgruntled noise and he was hushed and cuddled by who he assumed was Blaise from the smell under his nose.

Another thigh, not as bulky or big as Max’s, slid under him and he was resting again against two mates, but his third was no longer stroking his arm, but he was missing completely.

He let a small whine trickle from his throat and he was shushed again, soft, soothing noises lulling him back to sleep. He snuggled down and pressed his nose against a soft shirt, inhaling the soothing scent of his mate before he lost himself to sleep.

The next time he woke up was to the smell of fresh meat and blood. His eyes snapped open as his stomach grumbled…very loudly. He was starving and he let out a jaw-breaking yawn before slipping to his knees and falling onto the already skinned carcass of a large mammal. Because it had already been skinned for him, he didn’t need to waste time cutting the skin off of it, he could just lower his mouth to the animal and let his fangs come forward and tear into the tough meat.

It was a new animal that he had never tasted before. It was richer, earthier than a deer, which was quite sweet due to the berries and fruit in its diet, but it was tougher than a stallion, which was quite tender. He really had to chew on this animal, but the taste alone made up for it as he got a warm chunk of meat and a mouth of warm, musky blood.

A hand stroking through his hair had him looking up to Max, whose mouth was smeared with the blood of his kill. Harry leant up and kissed him furiously, full of tongue, teeth and fangs. He tasted older blood under the blood of the new animal, Max had already fed on something before bringing this animal back for him and Draco and Blaise.

“Eat.” Max demanded his voice deeper and more feral.

Harry let out a little mew of agreement, before lowering his face to the animal and tearing off a strip of meat.
Harry was forced to eat for longer than he normally did by an observing Max, who nudged him twice to go back to eating after he had sat back away from the animal. His stomach had distended until he really did look pregnant and he burped, falling backwards, feeling sick.

“Eat.” Max encouraged him, pushing his shoulder to roll him towards the skeleton of the animal.

“Can't.” Harry gasped back. “Too full. Going to be sick!”

Max eased him up gently and held him on his lap, cooing towards him and rubbing gentle circles on his stomach.

Harry burped again and coughed a bit as bile burnt his throat. He had eaten far too much. He buried himself in Max’s shirt and nuzzled it, pulling the fabric with his teeth and rubbing against it until he laid still and let his body go boneless. Max only just caught his body and his head before pulling him up and making a sound between a growl and a coo. Harry responded instinctually and mewed back, letting his head flop to the side to offer his nose and cheek to Max, who licked over both with a sure swipe of his tongue.

Harry let Max cuddle and touch him, licking over his face before nipping the tip of his nose. Harry yawned and before he could finish the action, Max was up and walking him to the bedroom. He was tucked up in bed and with a soft kiss to the head he was left alone whilst Max went to assumedly pick up the bones and remaining organs of his kill.

Chapter Notes

A/N: For those of you who don’t want the dominants together and will refuse to read this fic anymore if I put it in. We say goodbye here, I will not apologise for taking my story somewhere that I wanted it to go from the beginning, I am comfortable with writing two dominants together, if you can't handle reading it, that’s your hang up not mine, I think love and the act of making love is a wonderful thing, no matter who shares it.

Chapter Twenty-One – Violence and Baby Blues.

Daily life for Harry had turned into a waking hell of being carried and escorted everywhere. His mates refused point blank to leave him alone and as February melted into March, winter moved into spring and then, as April bloomed from March, it took all of his control and concentration to keep from unleashing his claws and fangs and ripping all three of his dominant mates to pieces.

He was going through a very bad stage of any pregnancy. Morning sickness. Though why it was called that was beyond him as he was sick from morning to the afternoon, then it abated only to come back with a vengeance in the evening. He was eating mainly light soups, dry toast and dry crackers. Ignoring that the crackers and wholegrain toast were his grain intake, signalling that he had gone into the second stage of his breeding cycle, which was coming around very late due to his different dietary needs caused by his pregnancy.

He wasn’t even thinking of his heat as he had grown a slight protrusion around his belly area, making Ginny scream and begin to rest her hand and ear on his belly whenever she saw him. This led to whispers and talk of his pregnancy and his ‘controversial’ relationship with three men, one of which was the ‘foreign student’ who was only here to observe the British and their education.

Harry didn’t deny that he was pregnant when he was asked, but he did snarl and fling himself bodily at those who dared to ask him such a thing to his face, only to be held back by one of his mates. The students of Hogwarts never knew how close they came to having their eyes scratched out by his claws.

Mrs Weasley had sent him a very long letter that included how happy she was, how proud she was and how she wanted to hold her first grandchild, because naturally he was one of her seven sons. She had included useful hints on what foods she had found were better to be avoided during her six pregnancies, useful potions to help him and spells to make him more comfortable when sleeping. She had also told him that she had immediately started knitting for the baby and not to bother wasting his money on buying blankets, shawls, cardigans, jumpers, socks or wraps because she had everything covered. He had also been made to verbally swear to a letter that he would tell her the gender of the baby as soon as he knew, so that she could start using colours rather than neutral whites and yellows.

Ron had become relentless now that he perceived that he had ‘ammo’ over him. He would shout out nasty names and call his baby a bastard because Harry wasn’t married to any of the potential Fathers, which was like a cardinal sin to Purebloods. But Draco had scathingly remarked that Ron had no right to quote Pureblood rules as he was a born blood traitor. Ron had gone scarlet and had started whistling through his teeth in anger like a boiled teapot.

Hermione had dragged him away but not before giving Harry a curious look that he knew all too well. It was her, ‘I know that you are hiding something and I will find out what it is’ look. It frightened him. If she did manage to find out that he was a Dracken, then his life in Britain could be over. His life could be over period if he couldn’t get himself, his children and his mates out of the country in time, it caused an icy pit to form in his stomach and he found himself looking for Hermione more often than normal, checking to see what she was reading, making sure that she didn’t know his secret. When he spotted her in the library on the Marauders Map, which Blaise and Draco found pretty damn awesome, he sent one of them to go and check what she was reading, which was very often as was normal with Hermione because she was always in the library.

They had tried to complain, but as he had shouted at them, it wasn’t only his secret, if Hermione found out about him, then all of their lives were pretty much ruined and they would have to claim asylum in Australia, a country that none of them had ever been to, or in South Africa, a country that Max had only visited once with his family whilst on holiday for two weeks. They all had a substantial amount of money, but if Hermione went to any of the authority figures in the Ministry before the four of them knew about it, then their accounts would be instantly frozen and they would be forced to leave the country and enter another one illegally and knutless.

This put undue stress on Harry and his baby, which was developing faster than a human baby and as a result it was absorbing more of his stress which was directly affecting the baby’s development.

When he had been told that he was potentially harming his baby, he had tried to chill out and relax, but the fear that they would be caught and the icy pit in his stomach only grew the more time that passed.

Max had even suggested that they just kill Hermione and make it look like an accident to try and help alleviate Harry’ stress and worry but Harry had shot the idea down before any of them had had a chance to properly explore it. Not only would Dumbledore know, but Drackens killing humans had been what the Ministry had black listed their species for in the first place, killing Hermione would only be proving them right and Harry refused to do it, no matter how much peace of mind and comfort it would bring him.
Blaise walked into the living room with his arms laden down with perhaps twelve books of varying sizes, Harry thought that maybe they were to help him decipher the book that he had given him for Christmas and turned back to snuggling with Max, until Blaise dumped every single book straight into the fire and let them burn, Harry watching on in curiosity and a bit of wonder that maybe his mate had finally gone insane.

“Were those library books?” Draco asked from his place doing his homework at the kitchenette table, which had been expanded to a six seater table complete with chairs after it was confirmed that there would be five of them all together living here.

“Yes, that was every single library book that contained even a mention of Drackens.” Blaise answered happily. “Granger hasn’t looked at them nor has she checked any of them out.”

Harry grinned. “Madam Pince is going to hunt you down, skin you alive, eat your fleshy bits and then wear your skin as a cape to warn off other students when she finds out what you’ve done to her babies.”

Blaise and Max laughed at the mental image whilst Draco rolled his eyes and went back to his essay.

“She won’t know, I kind of asked her for every book on Drackens, for reference reasons of course, asked if her prized pupil Granger had checked any of them out, then when she had answered in the negative and had given me every single book, I sort of Obliviated her.”

Harry started roaring with laughter and clutched at his rapidly swelling belly through his pyjama top. It got bigger daily and the students were noticing. There was a lot of debate whether or not it was what happened normally with a male pregnancy or if it was just something purely Potter, the defeater of Voldemort and breaker of the rules of the impossible.

“Did you do it correctly?” Max asked with a look of seriousness, which was a rarity.

“Of course, she displayed light confusion and I told her that she had been docking points off of a couple of Gryffindor second years for being too noisy.”

“Thanks for that last bit.” Harry told him dryly, stretching out his pyjama covered legs.

“She only took ten points from them, Harry. Well ten points each and it turned out there were five of “You do know that Gryffindor will get those points back in Quidditch don’t you?” Harry boated proudly.

“You’re not playing.” Draco growled from across the room.

“I know I'm not playing, Draco. But I have been training my team still.”

“You still have the captaincy?” Max asked interestedly.

“Yep, due to unforeseen complications, i.e. my pregnancy, I'm unable to play for my team, but I am allowed to coach and captain my team from the side-lines, which I’ve been doing happily. My team is unstoppable!”

“You haven’t played against Slytherin, oh wait, you did and you lost! I caught the snitch half an hour into the game.” Draco smirked from the kitchenette.

“I wasn’t there then nor was I coaching my team.” Harry replied snootily. “I still think Blaise’s timing had something to do with Quidditch.”

“Because I obviously knew that the submissive that had been driving me mad for nearly two months was you, Potter.” Blaise put in with a gentle nudge.

“You knew him before the first meeting?” Max asked curiously and with a mischievous glint in his eyes that informed them that he already knew the answer.

Harry sighed. “Well we did promise to never keep secrets from each other so, yes. I didn’t even know the law, Blaise had been a Dracken for a little over a year, so he knew, but he couldn’t find me and my scent drove him mad.”

“An understatement if ever I heard one.” Blaise cut in. “I would follow the scent only to hit dead ends and I was getting more and more frustrated, I felt like I was losing my mind.”
“So in the end you didn’t even care about the law?” Max guessed. “I can understand that.”

“When I found him on Halloween night, I had to have him; he was so beautiful, in his full glory and eating from a doe that he had just killed himself, suckling on her blood and tear chunks from her. He was so sexy and exuded such power that nothing else mattered, I advanced on him and he ran. I followed and finally caught and claimed him. It was the most exhilarating thing I’ve ever felt.”

Max sighed and looked wistful. “It used to be like all the time.” He told them. “None of these rules and regulations, no waiting and no meetings to showcase us. It was all just pure instinct. The nearest dominant to the submissive lucked out, for everyone else it was just tough. If two or more dominants were near a submissive then it was a free for all, the submissive’s instincts would tell them to run and the dominants would give chase, fighting each other off in the process. But now submissive numbers have fallen so dramatically that the Counsel just decided to rip apart our instincts and give us these ‘meetings’ instead. I envy you, Blaise for getting the chance to experience a proper claiming.”

“Good for him.” Harry pouted. “I thought he was going to kill me, I was terrified out of my mind.”

“The submissives usually are.” Max told him, pulling him in closer for a cuddle. “The instincts turn a dominant feral and that usually means aggressive and violent. A submissive would feel the aggressive energy and would assume that the dominant means to harm or kill them and it triggers the flight reflex and starts the chase as the submissive tries to get away.”

“Speaking of flight, I want to go somewhere where I can use my wings without the fear of being seen. I haven’t flown with them once! I want to try it.”

“After the baby is born…”

“Why do I have to wait until the baby is born?” Harry demanded.

“I won’t risk having you fall from any height; you stay firmly on the ground.”

Harry growled in anger and frustration and stuck his suddenly there claws into Max’s thigh. The reaction was instantaneous as Max’s hand slipped into his hair and yanked his head back at an unnatural angle, keeping pressure on it to keep him from moving.

Max held his neck there by his hair as he struggled and cried, never doing anything else, not even touching him anywhere else, Harry struggled, tried to pry Max’s fist from his hair and threw an absolute fit, but in the end he stopped and just remained with his head back with tears streaming down his face. After a few minutes of his silence and acceptance of the punishment Max’s face appeared in his sight.

“Say you’re sorry, Harry.” Max encouraged him gently.

“I’m sor...sorry.” He sniffled sincerely.

Max carefully released the pressure on his neck bit by bit, unclenching his hand and bringing his head up slowly so it wouldn’t crick or stiffen up from the movement and then he was being cuddled and kissed again.

Harry let the punishment stand without a word, he had deserved it. Max had only been looking out for him and the baby and he had sunk his claws as deeply into his leg as he possibly could out of anger and frustration. He looked down to the four holes in Max’s trousers, which were soaked in blood. He felt wretched for doing it now, but he had felt so angry before, they had been stopping him from doing anything, he couldn’t even walk! He had been frustrated for days now and it had finally bubbled over and he hated himself for not being able to keep control.

He stood up and Max tried to pull him back down, but Harry just tugged at Max until he stood up. Harry led them to the bedroom and pulled Max up the stairs to their bed and popped the button on Max’s trousers, pushing at them. Max’s hands covered his and pulled them away.

“If you’re about to offer yourself to me as an apology then you can stop where you are. I didn’t punish you to get sex from you, Harry.” He said softly.

“I’m not.” Harry answered, pulling his hands away and pushing Max’s trousers fully from his body, displaying the four very deep puncture marks in his upper thigh.

He used as much strength as he could muster to tackle Max onto the bed. Max fell back against the pillows startled, but caught Harry before he could land on top of him and sniffed around his belly to make sure that the baby was unharmed.

Harry let him and when Max was assured the baby was fine, Harry moved his mouth down to the four wounds and started licking at them. The taste of Max’s blood tingled on his tongue, tasting strongly of iron and the musk of magic.

“Oh you wanted to tend to my cuts.” Max sighed in relief and understanding. “I should have thought of that first, but most dominants do punish their submissives just to get sex from them, I think it’s a vile way to treat the one you’re supposed to love.”
“I didn’t mean to hurt you.” Harry stated almost inaudibly. “I was so angry; I didn’t even know that my claws were out. I’m sorry.”

Max ran his fingers through Harry’s hair, twitching every now and then as Harry’s little tongue lapped at his leg like a little kitten, tickling his leg hair and dipping into the punctures that he had made to clean them. Hell, it was so erotic and felt so amazing that he was having a hard time suppressing his growing erection.

This wasn’t supposed to be sexual; he had to enforce his rules. No sex immediately after a punishment, he would not punish his submissive to get sex from him. He was better than that, he had been raised better!

But damn if it wasn’t hard, damn if Harry didn’t look so sexy and cute licking at his leg, cleaning and healing the wounds that he had made through anger.

He needn’t have bothered worrying so much as Harry soon stopped moving with his head pillowed on his thigh instead, it took Max a few moments to realise that Harry had fallen asleep cleaning his cuts. He smiled lovingly as he carefully scooped Harry up, pulling back the covers of the bed and laying Harry down in the cool, clean sheets. He tucked Harry in and laid a kiss to the plush, pink lips of his mate, making sure the duvet was firmly around his little submissive before pulling on a pair of pyjama bottoms and going back out with Blaise and Draco to finish his paperwork for the evening.

Harry woke up surrounded by his mates, all of them holding him and cuddling him close. But he was going to be sick and he was going to be sick now. He scrambled up to try and get to the bathroom, but he didn’t even make it out of the bed before the first wave of vomit shot up his throat and flooded his mouth, he retched over the side of the bed and kept retching as his stomach clenched repeatedly until he couldn’t breathe.

A hand on his back rubbed up and down, another hand on his stomach rubbed in circles as his hair was brushed out of his eyes and pulled back and away from his mouth. He heard the tap in the bathroom turn on, as his third mate got a glass of water for him to sip on and a damp wash cloth to clean up his mouth and chin.

Harry took in a gasp of air as the retching stopped for a moment before it started again and he dry heaved a dribble of yellow bile onto the sharp, sweet smelling pile he had already made. He did so again before he finally calmed enough to take a sip of water from the glass that Blaise was offering to him.

He dry heaved a final time, bringing up another dribble of bile before he coughed and let his body collapse onto the bed and calm down. He took in deep breaths, his recent inability to draw in breath making him greedy with the air. He sipped at the water until a warning roil in his belly told him that anymore and he would be vomiting again.

“I hate being pregnant.” He warbled pathetically as he was soothed and touched by his mates. Lying against Draco passively as Blaise gently and attentively washed his face free from sweat, tears and lingering flecks of vomit with the warm washcloth.

“It could be worse.” Max told him.

“How?” Harry asked bitingly.

“You could be pregnant for nine months like humans are, at least this pregnancy will only last seven if you carry to full term.”

Harry sighed. “Thank whoever’s up there for small mercies.”

Harry let himself be carried down the stairs and into the living room, being settled at the kitchenette table as Max happily started cooking breakfast as he had done every morning since he had become a mate.

Harry loved his cooking and so did Blaise and Draco, so it became part of their routine that they would eat breakfast in their rooms before they went to lessons and Max flooed out to work. It had the added bonus of giving them more time together before they had to separate without the gawkers that going to the Great Hall offered to them.

On the menu for the morning were omelettes. Fully loaded omelettes that Harry couldn’t touch, much to his ire, as Blaise and Draco moaned around mouthfuls of fluffy eggs, cheese and bacon. Harry was given dry toast and lightly seasoned scrambled eggs with a side dish of sliced banana.

He smiled gratefully at Max who didn’t take that Harry couldn’t eat his usual breakfasts to heart and happily gave Harry what he needed.

Harry ate as much as he could and sipped on his raspberry leaf tea, which just didn’t come up to par with his favoured honey tea, but settled his stomach better.

He had double Potions first thing and Blaise had finally managed to get him to understand some of the basics, with copious input from Max and Draco, who formed a sort of Potions pact and always talked shop when Draco had Potions homework or Max had a particularly complex recipe to work out before he started mass brewing it.

Draco found Max’s work interesting and fascinating, anything to do with Potions made Harry feel lost and confused, so he happily sidled away to find something else to occupy him, unless it was the both of them ‘watching him’ because Blaise wasn’t around, then no matter how hard he tried to leave them to their talks, they followed him.

The two of them were talking shop at the moment. Draco asking about Max’s next mass project, which was a very strong sunburn salve. The chemists around Britain were asking for the salve ready for the onslaught of people who went out in the sun and forgot their suntan lotion. Max explained that the busiest time for this particular potion was actually May and June, when people thought that because it wasn’t super-hot and that it wasn’t properly summer yet, that they could forgo wearing it.

At ten to nine Harry kissed Max goodbye, who also kissed Blaise and got Draco into a headlock to kiss his forehead, before he moved over to their fireplace, which Dumbledore had had connected to the floo for this very purpose, so that Max could floo off to work and he did so today in tears of laughter to the growls, snarls and death threats from Draco who was scrubbing his forehead and painstakingly putting his hair back into place.

Harry held Blaise’s hand on the way down to the dungeons, Blaise walking twice as slow as normal, which made Harry clench his teeth in agitation, but he bit his tongue on this instance, it could always be worse, he could be being carried down to the dungeons instead.

Harry filed into the dungeon classroom and Draco snatched him away with a smirk sitting him on a stool and sitting next to him. Harry had a little giggle at the look on Blaise’s face when he realised he would have to partner with Theodore Nott. His once best friend who had apparently had a huge crush on him and was trying to force him out of seeing Harry. His latest argument was that he, Harry, was obviously just a common whore because he had three men on the go at once. Blaise had been so furious, but Harry had just laughed and told an anger reddened Theo in absolute seriousness that he was thinking of getting another man to join his growing harem.

Theo had gone a blistering shade of red, as both Blaise and Draco had laughed and promised him anything he wanted, even if it was another man.

Professor Snape charged into the room as he always did, his robes billowing out behind him like a cape and the most sour expression he had ever seen gracing his face. Harry felt a bit of fear from the man in that instance. Now that he knew a bit more about the man as a Dracken he had to wonder if this was the time of year that his mate had gone missing.

“Mister Potter, due to your inappropriate actions in your spare time, you are excused from this lesson as the potion fumes that will be created today will likely mutate the child that you carry. You will go next door into my office and write a ten thousand word essay on why school children should not indulge their carnal desires and disrupt my lessons with the by-product.”

Harry stood up and stooped to pick up his backpack. He kissed Draco’s lips lovingly because everyone was looking at him and turned behind him to give Blaise a full on snog with an obscene amount of visible tongue because he liked the colour Nott’s face and neck went when he did so.
“Today, Potter!” Snape snapped at him.

Harry happily walked into the Professor’s office, though he felt more than heard the growls and tension that emanated from Draco and Blaise as he went out of their sight.

He looked around at the cosy room and sighed. It was just like the Professor’s personal rooms, warm, earthy and relaxing. Done in natural, forest colours and tasteful furniture. There wasn’t a piece of parchment waiting for him to write his mega long essay, instead there was a note over a book with Professor Snape’s spiky writing on it.

‘Potter – Read this book during lesson time, I will quiz you after the lesson.’

Harry sighed and briefly wondered if he could get away with pretending that he hadn’t seen it, before he discarded the idea and picked the book up and made himself comfortable on the brown leather settee, it wasn’t like he had anything else to do for the two hour double period.

The book turned out to be very interesting, it wasn’t very thick, but it was a male submissive Dragcen’s detailed account of his pregnancies and the subsequent births. The book was over three hundred years old as the date claimed that the book had been written in sixteen-eighty-three.

The submissive, Robert, and his three mates, Alfred, Harvey and Gretchen, had had twenty-two children, seventeen had been from Robert and Gretchen had had five, but Robert had explained that even though Gretchen was a woman, she was still a dominant and still didn’t feel very comfortable being pregnant and that all times after the first had been accidents, but he firmly mentioned that he loved all of his children.

Only three of their children had been Drackens, two dominant boys and a submissive girl. Eighteen had been magical and only one had been a squib, their youngest, conceived when they were very elderly and nearing the end of their fertility. Robert debated in the book whether or not this had some part to play in his youngest child’s lack of magic or not, but he had never found out.

Robert noted key moments in the baby’s development in the womb and Harry was startled to realise that he had already missed five key moments and that four of those times when his baby was taking in the most from him, he had been stressed and anxious.

He dived into his bag to get out a quill and some parchment and noted down the rest of the key development periods in case Professor Snape didn’t let him take the book away with him. He was determined not to damage his baby further by messing up the development areas of his baby.

Robert had then gone on to describe, in all its gory detail, the births of his children and how he had done it safely. He wrote of how panicked he had been on his first birth, how he had been so nervous he had been sick, but as he was sitting in his nest, safely away from everyone, including his mates, he mentioned how instinct took over when it was time for the birth, how he just knew what to do.

His claws had stabbed into his own side and ripped apart his stomach, before he had plunged both hands into himself and pulled his firstborn free. He had clamped the cord with the ties he had brought with him, sliced it with his claws and wrapped the baby in a fur that one of his mates had given to him. He had then ripped out the placenta, taking a moment to notice if all of the fingers were attached, before picking up the two litre bottle filled with all three of his mates’ blood and he had drained it. The slice in his stomach had been gone when he had looked back down, leaving him to focus completely on cleaning and feeding his child with the bottle of milk that he had also brought with him.

Robert had made a list of must haves for a male submissive birth and Harry quickly noted the things listed down. Things including umbilical cord clamps, a large bottle of the blood of ALL bonded mates, bottles and milk, nappies, wipes and then optional things like sleepsuits for the baby.

Robert had been just as nervous on the birth of his second clutch, because he had been carrying the full five children that a Dracken pregnancy could give. He had noted that his previously thirty-three inch waist had expanded to fifty-six inches, he had been unable to walk since his fourth month and by the sixth month he had been unable to go to the bathroom on his own and needed help doing almost everything. He had been unable to find the highest, safest spot to make his nest so he had instead, through desperation, made the nest in the bed that he was confined to and he had banned his mates from coming near it.

Harry grinned as he tried to picture himself banning Blaise, Max and Draco from their bedroom as he made a nest out of the duvet, pillows and odd socks within his reach. He laughed and went back to the book, desperately hoping that he never had five in one go.

The birth had gone near enough the same as the first, only Robert had had to take more time to pull out all five babies, clamp and cut their cords, wrap them up and then pull the placentas from his body. He had drained the two litre bottle of blood his mates had given him and when he looked back down he had noted a thin, pink scar where his claws had opened his womb up. He had taken too long to drink the blood to heal himself, but Robert had also wrote down that he didn’t care that he had one measly scar, the operation couldn’t have been rushed and if it had been, he might have inadvertently hurt one of his children or himself even further.

Harry enjoyed reading of Robert’s difficulty in looking after his now six children as his mates went out to work to feed him and his babies. Joanne, his first and oldest child was two years old and he had five newborns. Harry admired how Robert handled everything, how he juggled feeding, cleaning and changing all of his children and still found time to play with and teach Joanne and to get a decent meal on the table ready for his mates return from a hard day at work. Robert confessed that he cut corners by staying up late or by waking up a bit earlier to prepare the meal by cutting up a few vegetables or marinating some meat, by dusting and wiping down the kitchen counters in the night so he didn’t wake his children or his mates and didn’t have to do it the next day.

Harry was awed at how dedicated Robert was to his family and to how things were done three hundred years ago. Robert didn’t just want to clean his house and look after his children and get all the cooking done on time for his mates, he was expected to do it and that he had been punished by his most dominant mate for not getting dinner on the table on time because he had lost track of time playing with Joanne made Harry appreciate his mates all the more and made the few punishments that he had gotten so far seem like petulant arguments.

Harry continued reading the book, through the birth of every child Robert had had, the birth of Gretchen’s children which was more like a human birth than a Dracken one, in the sense that Gretchen had let all of her mates surround her, even letting Robert lie with her in the bed with a Healer present to oversee everything. Then came the tear stained page that documented Robert’s youngest child’s death through old age, as he had aged human quick and had no magic to expand his lifespan, the heart rendering news of the one-by-one death of his mates, through the ups and downs of Robert’s life until the very last page, where one of Robert’s children had left a moving message about her love for her Mother and how all of them would dearly miss him and their Fathers. Robert’s death day had been a hundred years previous. He had lived well passed two hundred.
Harry placed the book down and checked the time. The double period would be over in ten minutes. He carefully organised his notes and read through them again, making sure that he was prepared and ready for the quiz that he was about to get from Professor Snape.

Draco rushed into the room before the bell and concentrated immensely on sniffing every inch of his body, from his armpits to his toes, from his intimate places to the nape of his neck. Blaise joined them halfway through and started his own sniffing and licking. They both stayed kneeling in front of him hands on his bulging belly, licking over and around his bellybutton.

“If you are quite finished.” Professor Snape intoned dryly.

Harry went pink cheeked that the Professor had witnessed his mates searching him for injuries. It seemed such a private thing for him to have witnessed, invasive, Harry felt violated and he clung to Draco as Blaise stepped in front of him and hissed at the Professor, who raised an eyebrow, but said nothing and made no move towards them.

Blaise stepped away and Draco let him go and Harry was embarrassed by his actions, but refused to otherwise acknowledge what he had just done.

“Are you going to quiz me now?” Harry asked.

“No, Potter. I told you that I would quiz you to ensure that you actually read what I had left for you, I knew that once you looked at that first page and realised what it was you were actually reading that you wouldn’t stop reading.”

“I finished the book. I even took notes.” Harry stated proudly as he thrust his fist full of parchment at Professor Snape, who took them off of him and checked over them.

“All of the important facts are noted, well done, Potter, you have proved that you can actually follow instructions.”

Harry beamed, refusing to take the compliment as the criticism that it was meant to be.

“Thank you, Professor and thank you for letting me read the book.”

“You need all the help that you can get your hands on to help you through your upcoming birth, your mates can only help you so far as none of them thus far have any knowledge on a male submissive birth and they won’t be able to help you during the actual birth because you won’t let them near you during it.”

“Nasta told me the basics, but this book just went into so much detail.”

“Harry, we have to get to Ancient Runes or we’ll be late.” Blaise told him gently.

“I have a free period next.” Harry answered softly.

Blaise blinked and Harry saw the panic creep into his eyes. Both he and Draco had Ancient Runes, but Harry had a free period, where he had used to go with the both of them and sit in on their Ancient Runes lesson and the Professor had let him, he didn’t actually have to go.

“I will watch over him. I also have a free period and I can use it to see how much of this book Potter has taken in.” Professor Snape told them both. “I will get him to you at lunch.”

It took a bit more prodding and some convincing but both Blaise and Draco ran from the dungeons to their Ancient Runes lesson with a note as to why they were late, signed by Professor Snape.

This left Harry alone with the sour and lonely older Dracken who had tragically lost his mate so long ago and it seemed that it was close to the anniversary of their death. Harry prepared himself to ask about the older Dracken’s mate, even though every bone that held an ounce of self-preservation was screaming at him to not say a word. Harry had always ignored that instinct anyway.

“Sir? Can I ask you something…?”

It took a bit more prodding and some convincing but both Blaise and Draco ran from the dungeons to their Ancient Runes lesson with a note as to why they were late, signed by Professor Snape.

This left Harry alone with the sour and lonely older Dracken who had tragically lost his mate so long ago and it seemed that it was close to the anniversary of their death. Harry prepared himself to ask about the older Dracken’s mate, even though every bone that held an ounce of self-preservation was screaming at him to not say a word. Harry had always ignored that instinct anyway.

“Sir? Can I ask you something…?”

Harry watched as his Professor clenched his hands so tightly that the knuckles went bone white. He was afraid for a moment that Snape might charge at him and hit him.
“My ‘submissive’ went missing and subsequently died, Potter, not that it’s any of your business.”

“What happened, Sir? Was it Dracken poachers?” Harry asked rubbing his belly as a little flutter made him feel like he had swallowed a live butterfly.

Snape sighed sounding worn out and exasperated. “It’s not any of your business.”

“I know, I just wanted to know if there was any danger that I might do the same thing and leave Draco, Max and Blaise. I don’t want to, but with the way I feel now, I don’t think your submissive would have left you lightly.”

“He didn’t want to leave, but he felt that it was his duty to.” Snape replied after a long stretch of silence in which Harry thought that he was going to have his head hexed off.

“A mate’s duty is to look after their dominants and their children!” Harry stated suddenly, harshly.

Harry covered his mouth with his hands and ducked his head. “I’m sorry. I don’t know where that came from.”

“That was your inner Dracken, Potter.” Snape told him. “It knows that you can’t leave your dominants because of the baby you carry. You need your dominants to keep the baby healthy; you should have at least taken blood from them by now.”

“I haven’t.” Harry admitted, before a burst of remembered flavour on his tongue reminded him that that wasn’t strictly true. He had tasted Max’s blood, true he had been cleaning the wounds he had made, but he had still licked and then swallowed Max’s blood.

“Your face says a different story.”

“I stuck my claws into Max’s leg. I was punished for it, but afterwards I felt such a need to clean his wounds myself that I licked them.”
“Taking in blood at the same time.”

“Yes.”

“You likely struck him out of desperation for blood for your baby.”

“But I’d eaten a bear only a few days before.”

“A bear?” Snape asked incredulously, Harry had never really seen Snape so dumbstruck before.

“Max’s favourite prey animal. When he hunts he Disapparates, to Canada I think, and then he brings back a bear for me; he even skins it for me first so I can just start eating right away, without having to skin my meal first. I’ve had three bears now since he became my mate.”

“Well, needless to say, you need your mate’s blood to keep your child healthy, not animal blood, not even human or another Dracken’s blood, though the latter will keep you sustained for a short while until you can get to your mates.”

“Oh. Maybe I should go about it better than just digging my claws into them.”

“That would be advisable, Potter. Most submissives take blood during intercourse.”

Harry went pink and coughed to try and drown out the word intercourse that came from his Professor’s mouth.

“I…we haven’t…”

“You are pregnant, Potter; do not try to tell me that you and your mates haven’t had sex.”

“Not recently!” Harry squeaked out. “Not since my last heat when the baby was conceived, they won’t even hear of having sex, they think it will kill the baby.”
Snape sighed and rubbed his temple. “How could I have forgotten the firstborn protectiveness?” He asked rhetorically.

Harry just sat on the settee and swung his legs a bit, avoiding looking at his teacher, who he was actually having a conversation with about his sex life.

“You will likely find yourself going celibate until your next heat. Your mates will be very reluctant to copulate with you when pregnant until maybe your second or third clutch. They will be stubborn and pigheaded and will likely listen to nothing you say, so I suggest that you bite one of them and then start suckling, if they try to punish you, tell them that they are being bad dominant mates and that they’re abusing you. That will at least get them listening to you, then you can explain that the baby needs their blood. They will then try to force you to drink every drop of blood in their bodies, take as much as you need, but not a drop more as too much blood at one time can damage the baby. I would think that three large mouthfuls from each of them would suffice, though if you only have one of them to hand, then six or seven mouthfuls will do.”

“Why didn’t the book explain this?” Harry asked, blushing more. Robert had needed to feed off of something a hell of a lot more personal than blood.

“Different submissives are drawn to different needs. Where Robert needed his mates sexual ejaculate, you need blood more during the first few months. You will likely move on from this when you hit the second trimester.”

“That’s at the end of this month!” Harry croaked.

“Then you had better start filling up on blood before your mates wonder for you sanity when you start sucking on them like straws.”

Harry almost swallowed his tongue and it took several harsh coughs to get his breathing back and even then he could no longer meet his Professor’s eyes.

“I…we…can we talk about something else?!”

Snape actually let out a chuckle and stood up from his place in his armchair. He went to his desk and opened a drawer. He pulled something out and then came back and sat in his armchair. He looked at the piece of metal that he had pulled out of the drawer before handing it to Harry.

Harry took it and realised that it was an oval photo frame. In the photo was a very beautiful man with soft, curly black hair and glowing grey eyes. He was still in school and was wearing Slytherin robes, opened to show his white button down shirt, silver and green tie and black trousers. He was a slender boy and looked quite fit, like he played Quidditch or another sport. He was laughing and then waved happily to whoever was taking the picture.

“Is this your mate?” He asked. “He’s beautiful.”

“Yes, that photo was taken in his sixth year, my seventh. We had just mated.”

“He looks so happy.”

“He was, until your Godfather got involved.”

“Sirius?” Harry asked, brushing aside the painful lump in his throat.

“Yes, that’s his younger brother, Regulus Black. Sirius was very protective of him, even though they were in different houses; he didn’t like that Regulus was seeing me.”

Harry had a horrible feeling that he knew what was going on and he didn’t like the picture that was being painted.

“Your Father, of course, got involved once Sirius did. They believed that it was their mission in life to get me and Regulus away from each other. Regulus finally had enough and attacked his brother, told him to leave him alone and to never contact him again. Sirius blamed it all on me and the pranks they pulled on me turned more sinister, the worst of which was when Sirius sent me down the tunnel after Lupin on the full moon after Regulus told him to never come near him again. Your Father did save my life, but I am not foolish enough to believe that he did it for my benefit, he knew that Lupin would have been executed like an animal if he had managed to kill me and Sirius’ life would have been over as he would have been expelled and his wand snapped as an accessory to murder, your Father was set to lose his two very best friends if he stood by and did nothing.”

“I'm sorry for what they did.”

“You shouldn’t have to apologise for your Father’s or your Godfather’s mistakes, Potter, you weren’t even a glint in your Father’s eye when he chose to get involved in something that didn’t concern him.”
“What happened to Regulus? Why was it his duty to leave you? Please say that that wasn’t Sirius’ fault too.”

“No. Regulus was far too stubborn and strong willed to ever let something someone said influence him or his decisions; he was a Slytherin through and through. He died in nineteen-seventy-nine, when he was just nineteen. I have no idea why he died, only that I feel it in my heart that he is dead. On the day that he died, we had fought the night before, I was angry at him so I ignored his concern and worry. He left that day and he never came back. Half an hour after he had left, I realised my mistake, realised that as his dominant he shouldn’t be somewhere that I didn’t know about. I tried to find him, I looked for years for a hint of where he went that day, but I found nothing. No one saw him, no one had heard from him. Sirius was apoplectic with rage that his brother had died and that I had let him die. He tracked me down and cast the killing curse on me, but thankfully he was tackled by Lupin and his shot missed. The way I felt then I would have just stood there and let that curse hit me. Now I feel that it is the least that I can do for my mate to find out what happened to him, to find out why he died, to perhaps find his body and bury him in the empty grave that I had bought for him.”

“You didn’t...didn’t even find his body, Sir?” Harry asked softly.

“No. I have had no closure for more than twenty years. Regulus’ death is still a mystery to me and I have sworn that I will find out what happened to Regulus before I join him in death.”

“If I died, I wouldn’t want my mates to join me.” Harry said softly. “I’d want them to carry on and live their lives. I’d want them to be happy even if I couldn’t join in with their laughter and joy. I wouldn’t want them to waste their lives grieving for me, Sir, because I just want them to always be happy, even if that meant they took another mate in my place and forgot about me.”

“You are too selfless for your own good, Potter.” Snape told him with a gruffer voice. “You and Regulus were much alike in that aspect. He tried to keep himself and Sirius happy, but he realised that his brother would never even try to get on with his chosen mate. I had felt like the biggest, bestest man on the planet when Regulus chose me from a hundred of other Drackens, but if he was still alive today, I would have rathered he’d chosen another.”

“He loved you, that’s why he chose you. I loved Blaise, even before I realised that I did. I had subconsciously chosen him as my mate before I even knew I had a choice, then I chose Draco and even though he hurt me and humiliated me, I still loved him. Max came to me during my heat, but I loved him and had for a while. Just like I love…oh hell! I think I just figured out who my fourth mate is...hell!”
“Your grounding mate?” Snape asked.

“Yes. Damn, well at least this time it was bloody easy.”

“Language!” Snape chastised him and Harry rolled his eyes.

“I have to go tell the others!” Harry got up, placing a steadying hand on his belly as he did so.

Snape grabbed his elbow and began escorting him out of the room. Harry rolled his eyes again, but more exaggeratedly.

“Don’t roll your eyes at me, Potter! Don’t you remember what happened the last time you wandered the dungeons alone? You are more vulnerable now.”

Harry had a flashback of steel arms around him and a mouth against his ear whispering ‘You won’t be able to resist me when I have given you a baby.’

“You make an excellent point. Can we go now?”

“Yes, it is almost lunch time, but speaking from a dominant’s point of view I would keep the knowledge that you love another man that you are not mated to, to yourself. They will not appreciate your epiphany of your fourth mate and they will likely try to kill him.”

“Who said anything about it being another man, Professor?”

“Please, Potter, do not insult my intelligence. Anyone who has half a brain cell can see that you love your own gender and hold no flame to the fairer sexes.”

Harry pouted and followed by his Professor’s side until he reached the Great Hall, where Professor Snape dropped him off at the empty Slytherin table and made his way up to the Head table.

Harry was still pouting when Blaise and Draco rushed into see him unharmed and nibbling on a piece of unbuttered bread. They held him and kissed him and when he snapped at them to let him eat; they finally sat down and served themselves some beef stew.
Harry unhappily ate his bread and tried to eat a bit of vegetable soup, but when it threatened to make a reappearance, he stopped and pushed his bowl away. He instead listened as Blaise recounted what had happened during Ancient Runes.

When lunch was over he went with Blaise to Transfiguration as Draco went off for Arithmancy. As the day passed he was beginning to feel more irritable and snappy. Twice at dinner he went to bite Blaise’s fingers and twice he had the back of his neck squeezed.

He had forced down some steamed rice and stir-fry vegetables, before he made Blaise and Draco take him back to their rooms. They were unhappy with him and it showed. Blaise walked with his hand clamped over the back of his neck and Draco was carrying him, holding him tightly to his chest, not the comforting embrace that he usually used.

Max took one look at their faces and put down his quill and paperwork.

“What happened?”

“Harry’s in a bitchy mood.” Draco stated and went to the kitchenette after placing Harry down on the settee to make himself and Blaise something to eat.

Harry’s tenuous self-control snapped and his wings burst from his back as he unsheathed his claws and fangs, hissing deeply at Draco, who turned around and growled back, his voice so deep it settled like a stone in Harry’s stomach.

It was the first time that he had let his wings come out in some months and his once pure white wings that had first speckled with amethyst, had now gained silver scales, deep black scales and bright blue ones, they looked gorgeous and distracted Harry enough to coo and pet over them.

Max laughed at his actions and pulled him over to cuddle with him, nuzzling the scales that had taken on his deep blue and black colour.

Harry took one look at Max’s strong neck and sank his sharp teeth and curving fangs deeply into the muscle. Max gripped his hair and forced his head back, using a finger to guide his four fangs out of his neck so that he wouldn’t accidentally tear a chunk from him.

Harry screamed and thrashed, but Max just held his hair tighter and bent his neck back further. Harry relaxed and huddled down, curling in on himself.

“Say you are sorry.” Max coaxed gently.

“No!” Harry screamed deciding to take Professor Snape’s advice. “You’re bad dominants! All of you are bad, abusive dominants! You don’t deserve me or the baby!”

All three of them stopped like Harry had spoken some secret dominant freezing word. They looked like statues and Max had let go of his hair so fast that Harry had toppled from the settee.

“We are not bad dominants for punishing you when you deserve it.” Max spoke slowly, like he was assuring himself as well as the other two dominants of that more than he was telling Harry what was fact.

“You’re punishing me for taking what I need!” Harry yelled at them. “I need my dominants’ blood to feed the baby! Do you want my baby to die?! Is that it?”

Harry was momentarily blinded by colour when all three rushed to him at once, sniffing and petting, licking and gently sucking at his skin, spending time gently tonguing his elbow that had bruised when he had fallen from the settee and nuzzling his stomach to ensure that the baby was alright.

“Get off! I don’t want you near me!” Harry yelled, batting at them, though not very hard, he just wanted them to fully understand that he was upset that they hadn’t let him explain himself before punishing him, assuming that he had bitten Max and gone for their fingers just for the sake of hurting them, not the actual reason of keeping his baby alive.

Max pulled him into his lap gently and placed his mouth to the freely bleeding marks on his neck, making encouraging noises.

“I don’t want your blood now!” Harry hissed, pushing him away and twisting away from Max, whose blue eyes flashed his hurt before a steel resolve took them over.

“You will drink blood from one of us.” He stated sternly.

“I want Blaise’s blood.” Harry answered stubbornly.

Blaise immediately slit his own wrist with his claws and held the bleeding arm to him; Harry reluctantly lapped at the excess blood before he sealed his mouth over the slice and suckled. He listened to Professor Snape and decided that he wanted all of their blood tonight. He took three mouthfuls from Blaise, before digging his claws into his own arm and offering it to Blaise.

Blaise took a quick mouthful before the cut was gone completely and his own wrist started closing. Harry turned to Draco next, who willingly offered his arm for Harry to bite. Harry did so and swallowed three mouthfuls. He repeated his actions of digging his claws into his own arm and offered it to Draco. Harry giggled a bit as Draco’s tongue tickled more than Blaise’s had.
Harry lastly turned to Max, whose neck was plastered in blood as he hadn’t bothered to staunch the bleeding. Harry’s tongue lapped at his neck like a kitten and he wrapped his arms around Max, who didn’t respond.

When Harry offered his bleeding hand to his oldest dominant, Max didn’t take it.

“I deserve to bleed for not realising what you were doing, for not understanding what you really wanted and for punishing you without hearing why you bit me.”

“You don’t deserve to bleed to death for a simple mistake.” Harry told him softly. “You realise now why I did what I did, why I sunk my claws into your leg before, why I snapped at Blaise’s fingers and why I bit your neck. I didn’t realise until today that I was subconsciously trying to get blood from you all for the baby. None of us realised what it meant, none of us realised that I needed blood. We all made that oversight, not just you.”

Harry dug his claws into his hand again and held it up to Max, who licked so gently at him that Harry had to smile. Both of their wounds closed and they were left hold each other and cuddling close.

Harry fell asleep in the middle of the pile of bodies, warm and cosy and feeling so loved and happy that he glowed. When he woke up the next morning, he was naked, wrapped up in Draco’s arms, Max cuddled close on the left side and Blaise cuddled under Draco’s arm on the right. All of them were naked.

It gave Harry the chance to see his mates in all their naked glory with the sunlight filtering down from the skylight, his mind not clouded with lust or the fire of the heat, his gaze not obscured by the darkness of the night. He liked what he saw.

Blaise was still an olive skinned French-Italian god, covered in sinewy muscles and lean flesh, his light brown nipples erect to the cold air as he shifted closer to Draco for warmth in his sleep.

Draco was as white as the sheets on the bed, with broad shoulders, sculpted muscles and two light pink nipples. Where Blaise had a spattering of dark hair over his chest and belly, Draco was completely hairless and smooth. His defined six pack drew Harry’s attention next and he kissed it. Draco was muscled all the way down to his calf muscles.

Max was a new and unseen treasure. Broader than Draco, so muscled that he looked bulky and a gorgeous layer of tan skin covered everything. Max was again hairless until Harry reached his arms and legs. His chest was bare leaving his two dark pink nipples stranded on his pectorals.

All three of his mates had a soft, thin trail of hair from their bellybuttons to their groins where the trail met up with their pubic hair. Each one was a different colour. Draco’s was, of course, white blond like the rest of his hair, Max’s was chestnut brown, like the thick hair on his head and Blaise’s was black.

Harry traced his fingers through those lines of hair and each one of his mates snuffled, groaned or shifted in their sleep. Harry chuckled and got up from his place on the bed. He went to the bathroom and emptied his bladder, washed his hands before jumping in the shower.
His stomach started grumbling loudly and it was with a sudden realisation that he wasn’t feeling nauseous this morning. He was ravenous and he quickly finished up and got out of the shower, drying himself off and thanking god that today was now a Saturday and he didn’t have any lessons to go to.

His reflection in the mirror stopped his hunt for food as he checked his bump in the mirror. He had never stood in front of a mirror naked whilst he was pregnant and he turned to the side to see his bump better. It was bigger this morning, much bigger than it had been last night. The skin moved and he let out a shocked yell.

Thumps, a crash and a lot of growling preceded all three of his naked mates barging into the bathroom. Harry sniggered at their dishevelled appearances’ and sleep tousled hair.

“Please tell me that you didn’t yell just to get us up, Prezioso?” Blaise said around a yawn.

Reminded as to why he had yelled he looked back to his reflection and rubbed his belly.

“You are much bigger than you were yesterday.” Draco observed.

“I know. It moved.”

“The baby?”

“I saw my skin move, like a ripple but obviously it was caused by the baby.”

Max came and cupped his belly with both hands. Harry looked into the mirror and felt his throat clog with emotion as he looked to the two naked reflections, he saw his own wide eyed, misted face and then he saw Max’s looking at the baby bulge cupped in his hands with such adoration and love.

Harry wanted to remember this moment forever as he leant backwards and kissed the underside of Max’s jaw. All of the violence and temper from yesterday forgotten and forgiven and in this moment Harry was happy.

A camera flashed and Harry turned around with a snarl on his face to glare at Draco who held the camera that Harry had taught all three of his mates to use the week before ‘ready for when the babies arrived.’

“It made a good picture.” He told Harry.

Draco held it out of reach and ran from the bathroom laughing. Harry growled and stomped after him, not even trying to run after him with the added swelling of the baby.

“Give me that camera!”

Max laughed and he and Draco played keep away, tossing his camera between each other as Harry stomped and sulked. Blaise pulled him into a kiss and held him gently.

“Let them have their fun, Mio amore. They don’t mean any harm.”

“But I’m naked.” Harry pouted.

“No one else will ever see it. We won’t let them see you so vulnerable, but you two did make a good picture.”

Harry sighed but the debate was ultimately ended when his stomach roared loudly. Max, still grinning, moved to the kitchen and began boiling the kettle to make their morning teas, and a coffee for Blaise, who didn’t understand how they could drink watery leaves.

“Can I have a proper breakfast please?” Harry asked. “I wasn’t sick this morning and I feel fine. That blood last night really is a miracle cure.”

Max grinned and pulled Harry’s head forward to lay a kiss on his forehead. Max liked kissing a lot, no matter if it was a passionate one, a quick peck or a lingering kiss on a random body part.

“Of course you can, if you feel you can eat it, I’d be happy to make it.”

Harry smiled happily and sat down on Blaise, who was closest to him. Blaise wrapped his arms around his waist and laid his head on Harry’s shoulder, ignoring that they were all still naked.

“Ti amo.” He whispered.
Harry grinned and twisted his head to give Blaise a kiss.

“I love you too.”

Harry leant over and gave a kiss to Draco without letting him ask for one. Draco didn’t need to beg for his affection like a kicked dog.

Max happily served them their teas and coffee. Harry grimaced at the red tea he was being forced to drink for the baby. It wasn’t too bad, but it definitely wasn’t his honey tea.

Max sipped on his plain old white tea, whilst Draco took his black, neither took their tea with sugar. Blaise and Draco talked together with an occasional comment from Max as he expertly cooked them breakfast. Harry remained quiet and just observed them all, talking and interacting like best friends, like the family that they were going to become.

Last night seemed to have done them wonders for tolerance with each other, they were all dominants, but if they gave enough effort, they could love one another, Harry was sure of it and he couldn’t wait until they all loved one another like a large, but real family. A family that loved unconditionally, a family that loved without judgement, a family who loved with, not only their hearts, but their bodies and souls as well. That would be completely perfect.

Chapter End Notes

Another little peek-a-boo for you, only better! Chapter Twenty-Three is called The Fourth and Final. Here is a sneak peek:-

“Do you have any sort of indication of which person you’d like?” Elder Trintus asked. “Most submissives just know which Dracken they’d like when picking a grounding mate.”

“I have a very good idea.”

“Well then, let’s start there. Who do you want?”

“I don’t think he’s here.” Harry answered as he once again scanned the hall for the man he loved. “He might have gone to see the submissive in New Zealand, which means he doesn’t want me and thinks I’m too much of a bother.”

The thought caused him a sharp pain in his heart as he bit his lip and turned away from the other dominants, hiding from their heated gazes in Draco’s shirt. He didn’t want them undressing his pregnant body with their eyes.
“We can call him back from New Zealand Harry dear. Who was he?”

“No.” Harry shook his head for emphasis. “If he left then he didn’t love me enough to stay, I don’t want him resenting me for dragging him back when he doesn’t want to be here.”

“Many of those who left only did so because they thought they didn’t have a chance with you dear.”

“Then he should have had more faith in me.”

StarLight Massacre. X
Harry was dreading his heat as it dawned so very close. His mates wouldn’t even touch him; he was going to be so sore as he hadn’t had sex at all in the past two months. Not since his February heat.

He had continued to grow steadily until it looked like he had swallowed a Quaffle. His mates had taken to sleeping with at least one, if not both of their hands on his bump.

He still hadn’t told them that he had a very large idea of who his fourth mate was, after what Snape had told him, he was slightly afraid to just announce that he loved another man, at least if he went through a sort of mating process then they had a better chance of accepting it.

He was going to have to have his meeting soon though; Elder Trintus had warned him that if he didn’t have all of his mates with him by his next heat period then he wouldn’t be able to claim anymore mates. He would be doomed to live his life without his grounding mate and later on in life, when he’d had a few clutches of children, his wild magic caused by his Dracken inheritance would turn him insane and he would slaughter his own children.

Ginny had started to channel her Mother. She came up to him at odd times during the day to give him a sandwich or a pasty, telling him that he needed to eat more for the baby. In fact everyone seemed to be doing that, even Dean Thomas did it once, until Harry had been sick on his robes because he had overeaten, then he had never offered him another morsel.

School work was becoming more taxing on him as he grew and he became so tired that he was barely making it through each day. The baby was growing too quickly and was sapping so much energy from him that sometimes he didn’t feel like getting out of bed. It was his price to pay for having a pregnancy that only lasted seven months; his baby had a hell of a lot of growing and developing to do in such a short amount of time. Two months less than a human pregnancy hadn’t seemed like anything to him before, but he was beginning to understand that those two extra months would have let him have an easier time of his pregnancy, it would have let his baby grow at a more reasonable rate instead of ballooning every other day.

Lavender Brown, Parvati Patil and Parvati’s twin sister from Ravenclaw, Padma had come up to him when he, Blaise and Draco were in the library and worriedly asked about his illness. Harry had forgotten that he had claimed he had a very deadly reoccurring disease that would explain why he disappeared for ten days every two months when he was on heat and why he disappeared for X amount of time when he went to find himself another mate.

The three girls were worried about the illness’ effect on his growing baby and Harry sadly claimed that he had been told that there was a high possibility that his baby would be born early.

“Oh not premature!” Lavender gasped. “You’ll have a little prem baby! Oh they’re tiny, my baby brother was a prem baby but he died in hospital.”

Harry wrapped his arms around Lavender and held her as she cried about her baby brother’s death from some years ago, telling him that she didn’t want him to go through what her parents had when they had lost the baby.

“I’m sure my baby will survive, Lavender, it’ll be a magical baby after all and it will have the best magical treatment that money can buy.”

“Oh. I know, but it was so sad that he died, I always wanted a brother and I was so excited, he would be eight now if he had lived.”

“I’m sorry for your loss, Lavender, I am, but I won't let that happen to my baby, illness or not.”

“Okay enough with the heavy talk.” Parvati nudged them with a grin. “Tell us what it’s like to have three absolutely gorgeous men sleep with you every night.”

“You know what, Parvati? I’ve never been happier. I love them. I know there are people that are saying that I can't possibly love them all, that there must be one that I like more than the others or that there’s one that I pay more attention to, but that just isn’t true. I love all of them, each and every one of them, I have so much love to give that I'm thinking of getting one more.”

Harry nudged them with an excessive wink. They giggled and they started a running tally on a piece of parchment about who would be good for him.

“Don’t forget that we have visitors this year.” He encouraged. “I’ve had my eye on a few of those tall, strapping men, I think Blaise and Draco are all I can manage from my own age group or from Hogwarts, I want someone a bit more mature.”

“Ooo! He want’s older, Lav.” Parvati giggled.

“What about Professor Drios?” Padma asked, looking dreamily into space, obviously fantasising about their Defence teacher for that year.

“I am not going to ask a teacher out.” Harry stated firmly. “No teachers.”

“You spoil all our fun.”

Harry chuckled and left them to their list before he went and found Blaise down the next isle of the library.

“They like Professor Drios?” He asked, looking absolutely disgusted.

“They also loved Lockhart and would lick Professor Trelawney’s shoes, but they are my friends, so watch your mouth.” Harry grinned, kissing said mouth.

“Why should I watch it when I have you to watch it for me?” Blaise smirked.

Harry rolled his eyes and waddled off, going to the table where Draco was sitting looking over his essay critically.

“I’m sure it’s perfect, love.” Harry told him, easing into a chair, smiling as Draco’s hands immediately jumped to help him even as his eyes didn’t leave his parchment.

“I’m just making sure that it is befitting of a Malfoy to submit.”
Harry snorted delicately and nudged Draco, who nudged him back, looking over at him with a smirk.

“Speaking of Malfoys, have you told your parents yet?”

The guilty look on Draco’s face gave Harry the answer. He sighed.

“You know, you’ll really want to tell them soon, love, before someone else does. It’s only a matter of time before the media gets hold of the story that I’m pregnant from a harem of men that includes my once school-boy rival, the prestigious Pureblood Draco Malfoy. Don’t you think your parents would rather hear the truth from you rather than half-truths and speculation from the morning paper?”

Draco sighed and pulled a fresh piece of parchment towards him and dipped his quill into his ink pot. Harry lent over and as soon as he saw the Dear Mother and Father at the top, he kissed Draco’s cheek in pride and eased himself to his feet again to go and bother Blaise. Draco’s letter was too important to be disturbed.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Later that day Harry was lying on his back in front of their fireplace. He was trying, and failing very spectacularly, to track the last footsteps of one Regulus Black, which was harder than anything he had ever had to do before and he was getting nowhere fast, where was Hermione when he actually needed her?

He wanted to help Professor Snape find closure, if one of his mates had died and he had had no idea why or how, or if they had suffered or not, then he would have liked someone to help him.

Though Professor Snape didn’t seem the type to ask for help, nor to accept it if it was offered, so he was doing this on his own, though it was very frustrating. After another half an hour he let out a frustrated yell which brought his mates attention to him from their places around the room as he threw the book that he had been carefully studying at the opposite wall.

He lay back on the rug and scowled as he had gotten nowhere. He knew now why Professor Snape was always so sour and angry. He would be too if he had to feel this level of frustration every day and it wasn’t even his mate that had gone missing!

“Are you alright, Diletto?” Blaise asked.
“No. Stupid books.”

“If your homework is giving you trouble maybe I could help.” Max told him, putting his quill down and pushing his paperwork away to make a space for Harry.

Harry rolled onto his hands and knees and crawled with his scowl to Max and flumped down at the coffee table, by Max’s legs.

“That would have been sexy if that scowl hadn’t been on your face.” Draco informed him.

Harry stuck his middle finger up to his blond mate who chuckled amusedly in answer. Max stroked his fingers through Harry’s hair and tugged gently; tilting Harry’s head back so he could lean down and give him a kiss.

“What were you stuck on love?” He asked.

“It wasn’t homework, though I do need help on my History of Magic essay. I don’t know how people can find enough knowledge in what Binns says to actually write an essay on it. It’s not like he can read them anyway, he’s a ghost! He can’t pick up a piece of parchment, so it’s just a stupid waste of time! I’d rather be sleeping.” Harry grumbled under his breath as he dug in his backpack for the half-heartedly attempted essay.

“Are you tired love?”

“Yes.” He admitted.

“Would you rather take a nap? You can if you want to. No one is going to stop you; in fact I’d encourage it.”

Harry hefted himself onto the settee, with Max supporting him, and he lay down with his head in his oldest mate’s lap by a way of answering Max’s question.

Max smiled down at Harry adoringly and started combing through Harry’s hair. It took minutes for him to slip off into sleep and Max pulled his paperwork back towards him and remained aware at all times of the precious person sleeping in his lap, who was pregnant with his child. Regardless of whether or not that child was his by blood, the baby would be partly raised by him; he would consider the baby his no matter who had fathered it.

It was two days later when Harry and all three of his mates were back in the Hell Hotel. They were amused at his nickname for the house, but as Harry pointed out it had been hell on earth for him to put up with the hundred odd dominants that were living in it.

Only there weren’t a hundred dominants there this time, no. There were less than fifty sitting or standing in front of him in the main room.

“Please tell me that they didn’t all kill each other off.” Harry said to Elder Trintus, who chuckled amusedly and patted Harry’s expanding belly with such a look of joy on his face that Harry couldn’t bring himself to tell the man not to touch his baby, though he wanted to and subtly moved away and into Blaise.

“No, dear boy, no. A new submissive has been revealed in New Zealand, many of the dominants left to see her. They believed that you were too much of a hassle.”

Harry chuckled weakly, but inside he was quite put out that they had left just because they found him a hassle, if they had wanted some ditzy airhead, who would obey their every command then he was glad that they had gone, but it was quite a big blow to his confidence to know that there were people who thought that he was too much of an irritation to stick around for him. He didn’t think that he was that bad really or maybe he was and he just didn’t realise it.

He turned to look at his three mates and found himself wondering if they thought that he was too much of a bother, did they regret mating with him. He bit his lip and placed a hand over his swelling belly. Did they regret having him and the baby?

“We don’t think you’re a hassle, Prezioso.” Blaise told him softly.

“Of course you’re not. Those others probably know that they have absolutely no chance at you because you deserve so much better than them, that’s why they left.” Max assured him.

Draco came forward and wrapped his arms around his waist and kissed him lovingly.

“We love you; we don’t care if you’re occasionally bitchy because we know that we can be too and that at the end of our bitch fits you’ll still love us. No relationship is perfect, if we actually look at ours we have four, soon to be five men, one of whom is pregnant, and we’re living together in close proximity, we are bound to get on each other’s nerves at times because we’re all different and have different likes and dislikes, it isn’t something to hate or see as bothersome, we should love our faults as much as our perfections. None of us are perfect, though I do admit that I come pretty damn close.”

Harry chuckled and kissed Draco deeply.

“Thanks, Draco.”

Draco just flashed him a quick up tilt of the lips and held him gently.

“Now Harry, have you thought how you want to do this dear?”

“No, not a clue. I’ve been too busy with the baby to even think of anything else.”

“Well we don’t have too much time, you go on heat in a few days am I correct?”

“Yes.” Harry admitted.

“Well then, let’s get going with this meeting, you need your mate before your next heat and this is the only mate that you can fully choose, my dear. No overwhelming instinct from your Dracken side, no input, just you.”

Harry smiled at that. He already knew who he was going to choose. He had probably loved him from the get go. He didn’t really want to drag this meeting out. He was tired of this house, tired of all the pushy dominants, tired of being here and putting up with everything. He wanted to be back in his rooms sleeping with all of his mates around him, doing their own thing. Blaise working on his translations, Max doing his paperwork for the clinic and Draco holding him as he slept whilst the blond read a book.

It was his idea of bliss at the moment and he really didn’t appreciate any sort of interruption into his quality time spent with his mates. His schoolwork and lessons, and Max’s work, already cut into the precious time that they had together without these infernal meetings as well.

But it couldn’t be helped, not really. He needed to get this mate before his next heat or he put his entire family at risk. This was his last ever meeting, his last ever mate, he would only ever have four of them now, to be sealed off one heat after his next one. Just two months and a couple of days and he would never have to have another mate meeting in his life. Unless all of his mates died that is, but he wasn’t going to even think about that.

“Do you have any sort of indication of which person you’d like?” Elder Trintus asked. “Most submissives just know which Dracken they’d like when picking a grounding mate.”

“I have a very good idea.”

“Well then, let’s start there. Who do you want?”

“I don’t think he’s here.” Harry answered as he once again scanned the hall for the man that he loved, ignoring how Elder Trintus made it sound as though he was picking a raffle prize. “He might have gone to see the submissive in New Zealand, which means that he doesn’t want me and thinks I’m too much of a bother.”

The thought caused him a sharp pain in his heart as he bit his lip and turned away from the other dominants, hiding from their heated gazes in Draco’s shirt. He didn’t want them undressing his pregnant body with their eyes.

“We can call him back from New Zealand, Harry dear. Who was he?”

“No.” Harry shook his head for emphasis. “If he left then he didn’t love me enough to stay, I don’t want him resenting me for dragging him back when he doesn’t want to be here.”

“Many of those who left only did so because they thought they didn’t have a chance with you, dear.” Elder Trintus tried gently.

“Then he should have had more faith in me.”

His mates looked at him with sadness and just a hint of anger in their eyes. They didn’t like seeing him so upset, especially not with the baby growing inside of him. That someone had caused Harry this sadness caused their anger to rise. A person could be hurt, could be made to pay, where if a situation had upset him, well you couldn’t really hurt a situation or an inanimate object, not that Blaise hadn’t tried when Harry had bumped into a plinth holding the bust of some long forgotten witch called Felda the Fortuitous, she wasn’t very fortuitous when Blaise smashed her and her plinth into smithereens.
“I hope I’m not too late.” A strong voice asked.

Harry looked up at the sound of his voice. The voice he loved but scarcely ever heard. He ran from the top platform ignoring his other three mates shouting at him not to run and to be mindful of the baby and he flung himself into his arms, their mouths met in an explosive kiss before they broke apart and Harry held him tightly.

“Oh god, Nasta. I didn’t think you were here.”

“I would never have given up on you.” Nasta whispered back to him. “My brother has been ill these past few days; I have taken to visiting him after work. I am sorry if you thought I had left.”

“Is he okay?”

“He is fine. Just a bit unwell, but my Dad is out of the country on work business and I didn’t like to leave him alone.”

“Will you accept me as your submissive mate? Three other mates, baby and all?” Harry asked a bit bashfully.

Nasta smiled and held him to his chest strongly. “I’d have accepted you a hundred other mates, baby and all.” Nasta answered.

“Well this meeting was very straight forward.” Elder Trintus explained with a smile as the other dominants screamed and shouted in rage at not being picked.

Henley ran up to him and pulled him into a hug.

“I’m happy for you, Harry. Look at you! You’re going to be a Mommy!”

“Mummy Henley, Mummy.” Harry corrected through a beaming smile at the younger boy.
Henley batted the air as if he could bat away Harry’s words. “Who cares about difference in spelling and pronunciation? They both mean the same thing, you have a baby! Congratulations!”

“Henley!” An older man yelled over the roars of the other dominants.

“My Dad.” Henley answered the unasked question. “He wanted to drag me straight off to New Zealand three days ago when the new submissive was made known, but I had to see you one last time, Harry. To remind you that we are still friends and that we both have owls! Write to me sometime and maybe one day, when I’m all grown up with a submissive and children of my own we can meet up again.”

Harry smiled through his tears. “I’d like that, Henley. I’d like that a lot.”

They embraced for a long time and Henley gave him a peck to the lips before he ran off with a wave as his Dad yelled his name again, even louder that before.

“I’m really going to miss him.” Harry said to no one in particular.

Nasta wrapped an arm around him and led him back over to the platform where his three other mates presided over everyone, watching from the high ground so that they could see him better and have a better vantage point should anyone try to hurt him.

Harry accepted the hug from Blaise as he reached the dais and he let his mates meet Nasta, though they already knew of him and had met him as well during the picnic to celebrate his release from the hospital wing, this was the first time they were meeting him as a fellow mate.

Harry had thought that maybe it would be awkward being in such a small, closed space with four other men, but it wasn’t. Nasta was so silent that it was almost as if he was part of the furniture.

He lounged on the settee with Harry laying on him, his back to Nasta’s chest and Max sitting next to them doing his paperwork. Blaise sat down on the floor doing his translations, with help from Nasta, who knew more languages than Harry had known existed.

Draco was lounging on the second settee that had been expanded from the armchair that it had originally been because really, one three seater settee and an armchair wasn’t enough for all of them to sit on. So now they had two three seater settees and all of them were happy and comfortable, especially Harry as Nasta’s hands on his belly familiarised themselves with the baby that he would have a hand in raising.
Draco and Max were talking quietly to each other as Blaise’s quill made soft scratching noises against the parchment as he took notes from the book Harry had gifted to him for Christmas. It was so peaceful that Harry wanted to stay in the here and now forever.

Nasta moved one of his hands from his belly to play with his hair as the other one stroked the skin of his bare belly with fingertips. Harry purred under the attention, which made all of his mates look at him with amusement for a moment before going back to what they were doing.

Harry had thought that he was sleepy, but he wasn’t, he was damn well aching for his mates, he wanted sex, but he knew Max, Blaise or especially Draco wouldn’t give it to him. He looked up at Nasta who had his eyes closed, but was still rubbing his belly and playing with his hair. Nasta was his best bet, but how did he get Nasta to have sex with him, without the other three barging in on them? The bedroom was under a strong silencing charm in case their ‘activities’ were overhead by someone walking passed their rooms. It would cause awkward questions if the sounds of sex and screaming were heard when he was supposed to be severely sick. Plus having sex with Nasta would not only let him see Nasta in his full glory for the first time, but would help loosen him up for his heat which was due any day now. He needed this.

“Nasta?” Harry asked softly.

Nasta’s eyes opened immediately and looked down at him, his gorgeous hazel eyes questioning him.

“I’m sleepy; can you take me to the bedroom?” He asked around a huge, faked yawn.

“Of course.” He answered and slid from the settee, taking Harry with him.

“Night lovers!” Harry called out to the other three, who either snorted in amusement or in Draco’s case, rolled their eyes.

Nasta carried him into the bedroom, and Harry made him shut the door behind him. Harry grinned as he was carried up the stairs and placed on the bed, Nasta pulled his clothes from him to dress him in pyjamas, but Harry had no intention of letting himself be redressed once he was naked.

“I’m too warm for pyjamas.” Harry protested, rolling onto his stomach on the bed and refusing to cooperate. He made himself look as winsomely sexy as possible. He knew he had succeeded when Nasta swallowed heavily.

“At least put your boxers on.” Nasta tried with a thick voice.
Harry shivered and he just knew his pupils had blown wide in lust, his mouth parted on a small sigh.

“Give me a back rub and I’ll wear them.” Harry compromised, having no intention of wearing his boxers before he got what he wanted. “The baby is lying heavily on my spine.”

Nasta climbed gingerly onto the bed and sat away from him, using just his fingertips to rub the centre of his back, never going too low and not going any higher.

“You’ve never given a back rub before have you?” Harry asked.

“No.” Nasta answered after a lengthy pause.

Harry looked behind him and smirked as he saw Nasta’s eyes pinned to his bum. He was really going to get what he wanted tonight.

“I’ll show you how, come here.”

Harry sat up and pulled Nasta to lie where he had just vacated. Harry tugged his shirt off, much to Nasta’s protest.

“How do you expect me to give you a back rub if you’re wearing a shirt?” Harry demanded as he straddled Nasta’s thighs. “It doesn’t work properly through clothes!”

Harry began to give the most sensual, provocative back rub he ever given before. With Draco or Blaise or Max he gave them purely to make them feel better, to ease the tension in their backs and shoulders, now, not only was he putting more tension into Nasta, he was doing it purposefully to get sex.

He ghosted his fingertips over Nasta’s sides as the heels of his hands cracked the vertebrae in Nasta’s spine, loosening the skeleton and making the man underneath him go boneless. He dipped his fingers as low down Nasta’s back as he could without completely shoving his hand down the back of Nasta’s trousers and he loved what he felt and what he saw. Nasta was well muscled, the muscles under his skin were solid; it was like touching rock through a sheet of silk. Max was big and bulkily muscled, but he still had a squishy layer between his skin and muscles that made him great to cuddle with and even though Max was taller by two inches Harry would put money on Nasta coming out top in a fight between them.

Harry grinned and scooted up to straddle Nasta’s bum. Nasta had an amazing bum. Nasta let out a low moan and Harry knew that he was so close to getting what he wanted. He had to work fast if he didn’t want to be interrupted. It was just gone nine o’clock in the night. It was Sunday night; they all needed to be up in the morning. Max was in work, Harry, Blaise and Draco had lessons and Harry didn’t know about Nasta, but he didn’t matter as he wasn’t going to interrupt them having sex, he was going to be participating. He had about two and a half hours at most to get Nasta to fuck him.

“I think I feel better now, Harry, why don’t you go off to sleep?” Nasta was breathless and his voice had gone so deep Harry barely recognised it.

“I’m not done.” Harry protested.

Nasta rolled from under him and pinned him to the bed. It seemed accidental as the look on Nasta’s face as he realised their new position and Harry’s lack of clothes was priceless.

“I…I think it would be best if you put on your boxers now, Harry.”

“I said I’d put them on if you gave me a back rub. I ended up giving you one, so no boxers.”

Nasta looked as if Harry had shoved an entire lemon down his throat whole as he swallowed so painfully that Harry could hear it. Nasta licked his lips and Harry smiled salaciously.

“I suppose it wouldn’t work to add please onto the end of the sentence?”

“No.” Harry whispered as he pushed himself up to kiss Nasta full on the mouth. Nasta responded immediately, wrapping his arms around Harry and pulling him up higher to get a better angle.

Nasta broke the kiss with a strangled sound as he turned his head away. “I can’t. You’re pregnant, the others will kill me.”

“Having sex won’t kill the baby and they’ll have to go through me first. Nasta I need to feed the baby on sex, on my mates ‘sexual ejaculate’, the baby will die if you don’t feed me.”

Nasta nodded understandingly. Harry knew that as his oldest mate at thirty-seven Nasta knew a lot about Drackens and Dracken pregnancy. Nasta knew that the baby needed blood and semen and Nasta smashed his mouth against his lips and kissed him desperately, trying to climb down Harry’s throat with his kisses. Harry moaned and clung to Nasta’s muscled body. How long had it been since Nasta had last had sex? From his actions Harry was guessing that it had been a while.

Nasta pulled Harry forward until he was straddling his lap, letting him feel the hardness that pressed against the fly of his trousers. Harry let out a little gasp and clung tighter to Nasta.

“You have teased me beyond what I can handle.” Nasta told him seriously. “I’m going to ruin you tonight. You will beg for hours before the end.”

His mate gently tipped him backwards until he was once more lying on his back on the bed. Nasta expertly shoved down both his trousers and boxers before kicking them off after unbuttoning them. He had definitely done that before.

Harry looked down and swallowed. Nasta was solid and the tip of him was curling up to reach just below his belly button. He wasn’t as long as Max or even Blaise, but he was thick. Harry amended his previous thought of doing this so he wouldn’t be so sore when he was on heat. He wasn’t going to be able to walk for a week. Nasta could be charged with carrying a lethal weapon.

Nasta licked along his side and Harry giggled and squirmed a bit as it tickled him. Nasta moved up to lick and suck gently on his ear and Harry let out a breathy moan. He hated how his ears were so sensitive. Nasta chuckled and tongued his ear which earned him a louder groan.

Nasta moved his mouth in a soft line to Harry’s jaw, nibbling on his chin, which Harry had never had done to him before, but he found out that he liked when he gasped and pressed his hips up into Nasta’s stomach on reflex.

Nasta breathed heavily for a moment and Harry wondered if he was still having doubts on what he was about to do, but he said nothing as Nasta’s mouth dipped to suck on his Adam’s apple.

“Nas!” Harry moaned out in surprise at the pleasurable jolt that gave him.

The look on Nasta’s face was alien. Harry could see pride, determination, ego, love, adoration, lust, pleasure and something darker that he didn’t recognise but made things low down tighten and made a shiver tingle up his spine and raise the hairs on the back of his neck. Harry rather thought that a lion would look at an injured gazelle with that dark look.

Nasta lowered his mouth to Harry’s and the kiss was so gentle, so loving that Harry believed that he had imagined that dark look in Nasta’s hazel eyes, until he pulled back and that look was still there.

Nasta touched, caressed, played with and kissed every single inch of his body and Harry was a moaning, writhing mess at the end. He didn’t care if the others came in. He would be fucked today or he’d kill them all. He writhed as Nasta’s tongue dipped into the indentation in his ankle, tonging it, before sucking on his ankle bone. Several places that Harry would never have thought would be a sexual turn on had turned out to be very, very sensitive places. Nasta had found them all. Every single erogenous patch of skin, Nasta had worked like a musical instrument, making Harry beg for him several times over.

“Please, Nas! Please!” Harry begged. It hadn’t worked the first several times, he didn’t believe it would work for the next several, but he had to try, his body was dripping with sweat, he was so hard it felt like his cock was being crushed, his balls were so tight they felt like they would split, his hair was a complete mess where he had rubbed it back and forth along the pillows, he had thought his usual messy hair was bad, but he could feel it now, sticking up in odd clumps, sweat slicked and stuck to the back of his neck and his forehead and cheeks.

Nasta moved his mouth back up his leg, sucking a bruise onto his inner thigh. Harry moaned and writhed and Nasta still ignored him. Harry didn’t think he had spoken two words since they had started, but Harry hadn’t really expected anything different, he was near silent in everything he did, why would he suddenly be a noisy bed partner?

Nasta’s mouth moved to lick the skin between his balls and entrance and Harry screamed, moving his hands from the crumpled bed sheets and clenching them in Nasta’s black hair, tugging and twisting as tears fell from his eyes in pleasure and frustration.

Nasta moved his mouth slowly upwards and caught one of his balls into his mouth and sucked on it, his hand fisting tightly on the base of his cock to stop his orgasm. Harry yelled and his legs twitched as his back arched from the bed in a dry orgasm, but it wasn’t the same, he felt no relief and he sobbed.

Nasta released his abused ball from his mouth and instead lapped at the tip of his cock, dipping into the tiny hole there, tonguing it, nibbling it, Nasta seriously had a tongue and teeth fetish.

He worked down his cock with his mouth until he reached his own hand before he licked a slow stripe back up to the tip and Harry’s entire body spasmed with another dry orgasm, still prevented from any real relief by that tightly gripping hand.

“Please!” Harry begged again.

Nasta’s mouth moved down again and Harry sobbed as he thought that he was going to take his balls back into his mouth, but Nasta bypassed them, his mouth going down further to lick around his entrance.

Harry screamed and writhed from just a few flicks of Nasta’s tongue against his skin. He thrashed his head from side to side, screaming wordlessly as Nasta pulled on his hips to reveal more of the skin that his tongue was teasing.

Nasta turned his head slightly and Harry stopped breathing at the first touch of teeth, he took in a deep gasping breath and let out a pleasured scream when Nasta started nibbling and tonging him.

“Please, please, please!” Harry chanted as he writhed and pulled and twisted and wriggled, unable to keep still under the onslaught of such overwhelming pleasure.
Nasta’s tongue pushed into his body and Harry’s eyes snapped closed, his neck arched backwards and his mouth opened on a breathy gasp. He didn’t have the thought to beg anymore; he could only feel and let out reflexive gasps as Nasta probed deeper and started flicking his tongue inside of him.

Nasta pulled back and started nibbling on his entrance again, nipping and then licking the spot to soothe the pain, but Harry barely felt any pain, he was too hyper aware of every single touch to his body. He tossed his head again and sobbed and tugged on Nasta’s hair, not caring that a few strands came off in his fists.

Lips against his had his eyes opening slowly to see the handsome face of his exquisite torturer. Nasta broke away to the side and a tongue came out to lick the trail that his frustrated tears had made. Lips and tongue against his eye forced Harry to close them and then that tongue and those lips were all over his eyelids, gently licking, softly kissing.

A thick finger probed at his entrance and Harry let out a soft moan as it pressed inside, stroking his insides and curling to run fingernails along his silky inner walls. Nasta pulled it out and then pushed it back inside in an imitation of something that Harry had been wanting for what seemed like years.

Nasta pulled his finger all the way out and when it pressed back in, it was accompanied by a second finger. A tear escaped from his closed eyes before he could squeeze it back and it ran down his cheek to fall off the side of his face.

Nasta licked the trail that the tear had made and he kissed his eyelid before moving down to kiss the length of his nose and he licked the tip before he kissed him full on the mouth, full of teeth and tongue and Harry barely noticed the third finger splitting him open as he pushed his hips down to encourage them to move within him.

Nasta spread his three fingers as wide as he could against Harry’s clenching walls and Harry arched from the bed, biting through Nasta’s lip and tasting blood. He lapped at the wound and sucked it very gently to soothe it.

Nasta pulled his fingers free and Harry opened his eyes to see Nasta’s hazel eyes centimetres from his, the loving look in them bringing a smile to Harry’s face.

Nasta rubbed his swollen belly, brushing fingertips over the growing baby within and he stroked it firmly.

It had been a distraction, Harry realised as the thick, blunt head of Nasta pressed against the place his fingers had been moments before. Harry swallowed as Nasta pressed into him slowly, carefully. Harry quivered and choked out a small sound partway between a sob and a moan.

There was a painful burn at the site of penetration, but it wasn’t unbearable, he could live with a slight burn after the endless teasing and torment that he had just endured.

When Nasta was fully seated, he just stopped. He did nothing but remain fully inside of him, arched over the baby bump, his cheek pressed against Harry’s as he panted into his ear like he had run a mile.

“Move, Nas! Please move, love!”
It was the first time that Harry had called Nasta ‘love’ and it caused the large man to thrust inside of him reflexively and groan when he heard it.

Harry gurgled as Nasta hit the small ‘O’ shaped bundle of nerves that caused his eyes to white out. Nasta kissed him gently and pulled out slowly.

“Please! No more teasing, Nasta. I can’t take any more teasing.” Harry begged.

Nasta pushed slowly into him again, but he did something with his hips that threw Harry’s head back in absolute pleasure and had his legs jumping around Nasta’s waist as if pulled by strings.

Nasta did it again and again and again, rolling his hips in such a way that Harry couldn’t get his breath back, his back arched fully from the bed and it stayed arched as he writhed and gasped and screamed. One of Nasta’s arms slipped around his back to support him, his large hand cupping a bum cheek and pressing their lower bodies together tighter as he continued to roll his hips as he thrusted into him, pounding into his prostate and turning his vision white.

Nasta was thrusting so slowly, so gently, but that little roll of the hips that he added had Harry’s orgasm building faster than if he had been thrusting into him as hard and as fast as he could. It wasn’t just sex, it certainly wasn’t fucking. It was lovemaking and Harry wrapped his arms around Nasta and kissed him with everything that he had left in him. His vision exploded into a mass of colour and his body jerked and clenched when his orgasm hit him, but Nasta kept thrusting slowly and lovingly, adding his little hip roll, looking like a belly dancer as he sort of sucked in his stomach and used the momentum to push his hips forward to thrust his cock into Harry’s prostate.

Harry pushed his hips back onto Nasta as his overly sensitised body began building another orgasm as Nasta continued to roll his hips into his body, gaining a bit more pace as it seemed that Nasta’s own orgasm was coming to a climax.

Harry let out a broken sob as he quivered and writhed in Nasta’s hold, his legs curling over Nasta’s back, trying to curl into his chest, but unable to due to Nasta’s body. He slipped his hands into Nasta’s hair and tugged mindlessly as his second orgasm in only ten minutes wound tighter and tighter in his gut.

Nasta let out a breath of air next to his ear and he started pushing harder, losing some of his finesse, becoming more fevered and desperate to reach the end goal of ultimate pleasure.

“Nas! Nas!” Harry cried out, moving his hips against Nasta desperately, tugging on his hair, digging his heels into his back and biting at his mouth.

Nasta did one more hip roll and Harry stiffened as his second orgasm ripped through him, tearing a scream from his throat as his hands went to grip Nasta’s shoulders, his nails biting into the skin and leaving little half crescent cuts that welled with drops of blood, but weren’t deep enough to spill over the skin.

Nasta stilled inside of him and a white-hot wash of fluid had Harry writhing and twisting, tears falling from his eyes as his body took the pleasure with a little sting of pain. His abused prostate hadn’t wanted that last hit.

Harry lay in Nasta’s arms relearning how to breathe, listening to Nasta suck in deep breaths, his chest heaving with the effort. It took them a long time to recover from their lovemaking session and as soon as he was able to move, Nasta moved down and sniffed and licked around the baby bump.

Harry was too used to this behaviour from his dominants that he didn’t even try to tell Nasta that he could feel the baby moving, that he knew that the baby was fine. He just let him sniff and lick to his heart’s content until he gave a parting kiss to the roundest part of his belly and came back up to kiss Harry gently, giving light, lingering kisses to his lips as Harry just lay on their bed using all of his concentration on breathing.

Nasta carefully, slowly, eased himself out of his body and even that small movement brought a round or writhing to Harry, who ended up cuddled tightly to Nasta’s chest as his oldest lover held him, back to chest and cupped his swollen belly.

“How did you do that roll thing with your hips?” Was the first thing that Harry asked when he had gotten his breathing right and gotten his brain to focus on anything else.

Nasta nuzzled the back of his head and licked the back of his neck. Harry thought that he wouldn’t answer the question, but he had learnt with Nasta that he could answer a question ten minutes after it was asked, even if the topic had moved on. Time was something that Nasta didn’t really care for, it seemed that he took everything slowly and nothing was rushed, not even sex. He took his time to think things through before he answered.

“Practice.” Nasta answered his voice tight and a bit defensive. “You didn’t expect me to be a virgin did you, Harry? I’m thirty-seven.”

Harry laughed; his voice was raw and a bit hoarse. “Of course not, I was just wondering if it was a learned talent or something you had always done.”

Nasta went back to nuzzling his hair with his face, inhaling deeply and Harry yawned. If he wasn’t tired before, then he bloody well was now. He held onto Nasta’s arms that were wrapped around him, holding them closer. He yawned again and closed his eyes, he was asleep within minutes.

Chapter Notes

Last Time

Nasta went back to nuzzling his hair with his face, inhaling deeply and Harry yawned. If he wasn’t tired before, then he bloody well was now. He held onto Nasta’s arms that were wrapped around him, holding them closer. He yawned again and closed his eyes, he was asleep within minutes.

Chapter Twenty-Four – The Trouble Brews

Harry was woken up what seemed like only a few minutes later by a bellowed roar. He blinked languidly as a blast of wind ruffled his hair and his sluggish mind couldn’t put any pieces of the broken puzzle together.

The warmth at his back and sides was gone and Harry blinked again, something was telling him that this was important, but he was so tired and his pillow was so soft and comfy and the bed was warm and inviting.

A strangled yell had Harry looking about for the source of the noise, his befuddled mind becoming a bit clearer, a bit sharper. He climbed out of the bed with a bit of effort and he peered over the banister that was the only safety measure on the platform that held their bed.

Three of his mates were down on the bedroom floor. It looked like a free for all as they all seemed to be attacking Nasta. It was then that Harry realised that it looked like they were attacking Nasta because they were actually attacking him. He let out a yell of rage and knelt on the banister, keeping a death grip on the top in the unlikely event that he slipped.

“Oi!” He yelled. “Fucking stop it!”

The three on the floor looked up at him and they stilled like statues.

“Harry, get down slowly.” Max told him as he stood framed in the doorway, looking like he had run from the living room when he had heard the roar of rage, but now he was approaching under the platform, looking ready to catch Harry in the very unlikely event that he would fall.

“No!” Harry screamed as he saw that Nasta had a black eye and a busted lip. “Leave him alone! If you want to hit someone then hit me you big bullies!”

“He tried to kill the baby!” Draco hissed. “He was trying to kill the baby because he knows that there is no chance that he is the Father!”

“Don’t be so stupid! The baby is fine! I can feel the baby moving. Nasta was gentle and slow, he didn’t take me like some animal!” Harry yelled. “What do you think is going to happen when I go on heat in a few days? Do you think you can control yourselves? Do you think you won’t completely rip me in half because I haven’t so much as been stretched in two months! Nasta was doing what I asked him to do. Help me in preparation of my heat. He was gentle with me! Now stop it or all of you are going to be kicked out of these rooms! I won’t have bullies sleeping in bed with me!”

“Just climb down carefully, Harry and then we’ll talk.” Max coaxed, using his best soothing voice.

Harry huffed and slid his knees back until his feet touched the carpet and he stomped down the stairs. Blaise had come to meet him, probably to stop him from ‘falling down the stairs’ but Harry wasn’t having any of it as he twisted away from Blaise and went to Nasta, digging his magically appeared claws into his hand and offered his blood to Nasta, who licked his hand with slow, sure strokes of his tongue, looking like he was making love with his hand.

Draco growled, but stopped when Harry sent a nasty glare at him.

“How dare you do this!” Harry hissed at them. “What were you thinking?! We have only just reconciled the argument over the baby needing blood and now you want to start one over the baby needing semen as well?”

“What?!” Draco asked, surprise in those silver eyes. “The baby needs semen as well?”

Harry knew that Draco wasn’t pretending, not only because Malfoys never pretended at having a lack of knowledge, but because Draco had only been a Dracken for a month before he himself had become one and for five months out of that time Draco had been denying what he was where he had been trying to find out everything he could on his new species.

“The baby needs all bodily fluids that a dominant mate can give. Blood, sweat, tears, saliva and semen. Blood, saliva and semen are the top needs.” Nasta stated factually, dabbing the blood from his chin from his now healed lip. “The baby will wither and die like an unwatered flower if these needs are not met.”

“Then we owe you an apology.” Blaise stated, looking a bit sheepish, holding out his hand to help Nasta from the floor.

“It’s fine. I knew it would happen before Harry and I made love, the firstborn protection is too strong.”

“The what?”

“Snape mentioned something like that.” Harry remembered.

“It’s the level of overbearing protectiveness a dominant feels for his or her firstborn child. You three have no idea who is the Father of Harry’s baby, so you all feel it.”

“Draco seems to be feeling it the most, does that mean anything?” Harry asked.

“It isn’t likely that it means that he is the biological Father.” Nasta answered slowly, understanding what Harry had meant, a thoughtful look crossing his face. “It could be that he just feels more protective towards you and the baby or it could mean that he is a very jealous person and doesn’t like anyone excessively touching you or the baby.”

“Probably the latter.” Harry answered with a soft smile.

“How old are you?” Draco asked Nasta suddenly.

Harry sighed in exasperation. “Not this again, Draco! I thought that you had agreed to at least give the mate I chose a chance?”

“I’m thirty-seven.” Nasta answered as if Harry hadn’t spoken.

“He’s going to be forty in two, three years!”
“Three years.” Nasta stated. “My birthday was the third of February.”

“That submissive, Robert lived well into his two hundreds!” Harry snapped. “I don’t think a couple of years between all of us is going to matter when we’re two hundred, Draco!”

“We are more likely to reach three hundred and fifty now.” Nasta informed them. “With our improved diets, advanced medical research and our stronger genes we are living longer than ever.”

“Holy fuck, how many kids can we have in three hundred and fifty years?” Harry asked, looking down at the one baby he was currently growing and placing his hands on it.

“A moot point, Harry.” Max told him. “We lose fertility the older we get. You won’t be able to get pregnant past the one hundred and fifty mark.”

“Fine. I’ll rephrase the question, how many kids can we have until I’m a hundred and fifty?”

“I suppose that would depend on how big the clutches are.” Max answered thoughtfully. “We could have anything from twenty to over fifty children.”

“My god, we’ll never survive!”

Max chuckled, but it was Nasta who answered his melodrama. “You won’t get pregnant directly after giving birth. It will take a while for your hormones to settle down again and for your body to repair itself enough to carry another clutch. It could be between one and five years before you conceive a second clutch, though some submissives do conceive again after only a couple of months’ recovery.”

“That sounds a bit better, but what if I’m not ready? What if I have this baby and then realise that I can’t do it? What if I can’t look after it? I’m sixteen; I don’t know how to look after a baby!”

“I’m sure you’ll do fine.” Max soothed, but to Harry it seemed like he was brushing his worries under the carpet. “You’ll make a great Mum.”
“How about we all attend a Mother and Baby class?” Nasta compromised when it looked like Harry would explode. “None of us have any experience with children, unless any of you have younger siblings or a love child hidden away?”

When all three of them shook their heads Nasta looked back to Harry. “Do you think you’d like to go, Harry?”

Harry nodded immediately. “I don’t want to be thrown in at the deep end. Unlike Robert I am still in school, when he first got pregnant all he had to deal with was housework and cooking, I have to juggle the baby between school work and find a way to fit the baby between all of our schedules. This isn’t going to be fair on the baby! Being passed around from unfamiliar face to stranger and back again! Not one of us can spend more than a few hours with the baby during the day, it’s not right.”

“I haven’t taken a holiday from work in four years.” Nasta told him seriously. “I’m due perhaps a year and a half off from work. I’ll look after the baby during the day whilst you are in lessons if you so wish.”

“But there is no way it can possibly be your baby.” Draco pointed out, perhaps a bit harshly.

“Draco, if the baby turns out to be Blaise’s, what would you do?”

“What do you mean what would I do? Nothing.”

“So you would be unwilling to get up in the middle of the night to feed the baby? You wouldn’t change the baby if it needed to be changed or you wouldn’t play with the baby during the day? Would you even acknowledge the baby?”

Draco went pink with anger and clenched his fist. “Of course I would! The baby comes from Harry! I would love that baby as if it were my own!”

“As would I.” Nasta answered. “It doesn’t matter if there is no way that the baby could be mine, I’ll see the baby as my own regardless, as would you. I am willing to take all of my holidays in one sabbatical if it helps ease the worry and stress from you all.”

“If the baby is mine then I can get eight months paternity leave.” Max spoke up. “You three can’t really take a break from school; you need the best possible results to get the best jobs and taking any amount of time out of your schooling is counterproductive. So if the baby is mine, I get eight months straight off, then Nasta can take his one and a half years off to take over when I have to go back to work, that way the baby will be over two years old at the end and you three would have graduated. We’d be settled down in a house and we could work out our hours to fit in with each other.”

“You…you aren’t going to stop me from working?” Harry asked a bit tentatively. “I mean, you won’t make me stay at home to look after the children?”

“No. If you want to work, Harry, then we aren’t going to stop you, this isn’t the nineteen hundreds any more. We don’t expect you to throw away all of your schooling to sit at home and look after the children, not if it isn’t what you want to do.” Max told him seriously.

“I don’t think any of us would like the children to have hired help to look after them, but there are five of us, not all of us are going to be working exactly the same hours or work on the same days, I’m sure it will all work out for all of us to have a job and the children to have one of us at home with them at all times.” Blaise put in.

“I don’t want a full time job or a career or anything.” Harry added. “To be honest I never thought I’d live this long what with everything going on, so I never thought about what I’d like to do when I graduate. But a part time job sounds alright; I’ll just work a couple of hours a week, just something to get me out of the house once in a while.”

“What do you mean you never thought that you’d live this long?” Max demanded. Ignoring for the most part everything else Harry had said.

“Well I did have a madman after me, Max.”

“He’s dead. The papers said that you killed him last year.”

“Not all of his followers were caught.”

“Do you know something that we don’t?” Draco asked. “Have you been threatened? Have any of them made contact with you?”

Harry sighed and walked to the wardrobe to get out a dressing gown as he was getting cold standing around naked. He tugged it on and melted into the soft fluffy robe, he eased himself down onto the large square shaped settee that was a new addition to their rooms, added by Max, who knew charms that Harry hadn’t known existed, like conjuring a settee from thin air.

The settee was squishy and purple to match the rest of the room, when asked why they had chosen the colour purple for the bedroom Harry and Blaise had looked at each other and blushed deeply, refusing to answer, making the others think that something raunchy had happened. It was shaped like a square with one of the sides missing, three long seats attached by two corner seats and Harry loved every inch of it.

The others all sat around him, ignoring that they had room to actually sit with some semblance of personal space, preferring to sit grouped around Harry and the growing baby.

“Have you been threatened?” Draco reiterated, his patience running out.

“No. I haven’t heard from any of them, but just the knowledge that they are out in the wide world somewhere is enough.”

“We won’t let anything happen to either of you.” Nasta swore sincerely, placing a hand on his bump.

It was then that Harry noticed that Nasta was still naked and didn’t seem to care at all. He was lounging around, ignoring the ‘subtle’ glances that he was getting from the other three dominants. Harry went a bit pink cheeked and let out a small giggle, smothering the rest of the laugh that wanted to slip out.

Nasta raised an eyebrow and smirked as the other three suddenly felt a bit more embarrassed that one of them was sitting naked between them. It should have been the other way around, Nasta should have felt embarrassed sitting naked in a group of dressed, or at least covered in Harry’s part, men, but he wasn’t, he was completely confident and relaxed.

“Find something funny?” Nasta inquired with his eyebrow still raised.

“No.” Harry answered even as his grin swallowed his face.

“A lesser man would take offence and insecurity from you laughing at their naked body.”

“But not you.” Harry tacked on the unsaid words.
“Not me. I am not an insecure man; I know you are laughing at the situation that I have inadvertently caused, not directly at me.”

Harry snuggled into as many of his mates as he could manage, lying down, face up, on Nasta’s lap to reach Max and stretching his legs out over Blaise and Draco. He pressed a hand against his bump and sighed.

“You need to put on some more weight.” Nasta complained. “Your arse is like a bony dagger.”

Harry huffed and wiggled around, getting a small gasp of pain from Nasta and a snort of laughter from Max.

“Next time you can carry a clutch around and see how you like it.” Harry whined. “Let’s see how much weight you can put on whilst puking up everything you’ve eaten.”

“I was only teasing, cariad.” Nasta told him with a smile.

“Cariad?” Harry questioned the unfamiliar word.

Harry rolled his eyes and lay back down, moving his bum until it was cradled in Nasta’s lap so his ‘bony arse’ wouldn’t cause his mate pain. He yawned as all the excitement and adrenaline poured out of him and his exhaustion came back tenfold.

“I think it’s best if we all just went to bed.” Harry told the others, they all looked at each other and Harry sighed. “Whoever has a bloody problem with sharing a bed with me and everyone else can sleep on the fucking settee, I’m going to bed.”

Harry hefted himself up and started climbing the stairs. Max swept his legs from under him and carried him up, nuzzling him with his chin as he went.

Harry was too tired now to complain and when he was placed on the bed he shrugged his dressing gown back off and he ignored the burning gazes that he could feel roving his naked body. He turned and glared at every single one of his mates, who were grouped around the bed waiting for him to settle before they climbed in with him.
“All of you keep your hands off.” He stated seriously. “I’m now too tired to do anything other than sleep, so the first person to try anything is going to be sleeping on the floor.”

Blaise chuckled as he stripped himself bare and climbed in with him, wrapping his arms loosely around him and burying his face in the back of his neck.

Harry could feel every inch of Blaise’s naked body pressed against his naked body. His tension grew, before he sighed and melted into the warmth of Blaise as his first mate didn’t move to touch him sexually.

Nasta, who was already naked as the day he was born, climbed in front of him and wrapped his arms around both Harry and Blaise, who made no move or noise against the action. Perhaps Blaise was the least dominant of all of his dominants and just didn’t care?

Max didn’t so much as climb into the bed as he rolled into it with a groan. He slipped an arm under Nasta and his other arm could reach all the way over to touch Blaise with room to spare. Harry was just drifting off when he realised that the bed hadn’t dipped for a fourth time.

He sat up as much as he could with three men wrapped around him and looked to Draco, who was stood at the end of the bed, watching them all.

“I don’t think I can.” The blond told him with a panicked look at the three other naked men.

Harry sighed and fought his way out of the mass of bodies and crawled to Draco, too tired to get up and walk.

Harry took Draco’s head into his hands and kissed him, pulling until Draco was pressed against his chest and Harry had the blond’s head cradled in his arms, his nose buried in Draco’s silky blond hair.

“It’s okay, Draco. No one is going to touch you in a way that you don’t expressly permit.”

“Before you I’d never even thought of being with another man and I have never let anyone penetrate my body. When you go on heat in a few days, if I’m not top dominant I could…could…”

“You could be penetrated by one of the others for the first time.” Harry answered softly, understanding exactly what the problem was now.
Draco nodded in his arms.

“Is it the thought of another man being inside you that’s the problem, or the pain you think it will cause?”

“Both.”

“Well, I can't really answer to the first as I’m a gay submissive, I love having another man inside of me, loving me, bringing me pleasure, but for the second, when on heat, there is no pain. The haze of the breeding cycle just washes away all inhibitions, all pain, all thought. I feel a slight sting, maybe a small burn and then nothing. It’s after the heat when the pain of the heat becomes apparent and as you aren’t going to be fucked continuously for ten days by four men all drastically different in length and girth I think it won't be as bad for you.”

“We can help you prepare if you are wary about it.” Max hedged cautiously.

Draco’s head snapped up and Harry turned around to see the other three looking at them from the pillows. Harry grinned at the sight they made, but as his arms were wrapped around Draco he could feel the blond stiffen up.

“You don’t have to answer that right away.” Harry told Draco quickly. “Just think about it, we have a day or two before the heat starts, but know that no one is going to think anything of you if you say yes, not me and not them.”

“It would be hypocritical of me if I did.” Blaise put in. “Seeing as I am going to be bottoming to all three of you.”

“Either Max or I are going to be bottoming to the other.” Nasta stated factually. “There can only be one top dominant as there can only be one submissive in one family unit. All mates in between have to be flexible switches.”

“Flexible switches?” Harry asked with a grin.

“Someone who ‘switches’ from the dominant to the submissive role and back again.” Nasta explained to him with a loving look. “A switch is never fully dominant and never fully submissive, but both.”
“That sounds like fun.” Harry stated lecherously. “I want to be a switch.”

Max laughed and gently pulled Harry to press a kiss to his forehead.

“You are too adorable, Harry.”

“No I’m serious; I want to be a switch.”

“Then who would be our submissive?” Nasta asked him. “Do you really want to add a woman to our family?”

“Another male submissive?”

“Harry you are the first male submissive in over a hundred years and you are the only one. Any other submissive would be female.”

“Erg.” Harry grimaced in distaste.

“That’s what I thought.”

“Would you let me try topping though?” Harry asked them all seriously.

“If you really wanted to try it and if it was only on the odd occasion, I would let you top me, Bello.” Blaise told him. “Just for you to try. I honestly don’t mind.”

Harry grinned widely and snuggled up to Blaise, kissing him before peeking over a shoulder to see Draco undressing before climbing in behind Blaise.

Max stretched himself out again and slipped his arm back under Nasta and let his other arm wrap around all of them, Draco included. It spoke volumes on how far they had come when Draco did not moan, bitch, hiss, shout or even move away from Max’s hand.

Harry had a feeling that Max was the most dominant of his mates, but he didn’t say anything. Draco hadn’t fought Max for dominance, Nasta hadn’t fought Max for dominance and Nasta and Draco hadn’t fought for dominance, but then neither Nasta nor Blaise had fought each other yet, but Harry didn’t think it mattered as he rather thought that Blaise was submitting to the others on purpose and for a reason that had nothing to do with size or ability and had everything to do with sex and Blaise’s enjoyment of being topped.

When Harry woke up he was in a completely different position to when he had fallen asleep. He had somehow rolled over Nasta to lie on Max’s chest and Blaise was now being held tightly to Draco’s chest, the blond’s large arms wrapped tightly around the smaller dominant’s stomach. Nasta was lying on his back, one arm under Blaise and Draco’s heads and his hand cupping Draco’s pale shoulder and his other hand was holding tightly to Harry’s thigh.

Harry smiled tiredly at his family and lowered a hand from Max’s hair to cup his growing belly. He was two months pregnant and looked like he was four. Though he had decided that being pregnant suited him well. He liked the added weight and loved how when he was pregnant none of his bones were visible through his skin. He couldn’t see his ribs or his collarbones and his hipbones weren’t as prominent as they once were.

A sudden lurch in his gut reminded him that he had awoken early for a reason and his eyes widened at the familiar sensation of vomit climbing his throat which got him moving. He scrambled from the bed, probably kicking and elbowing every mate he had in the process and darted down the stairs, actually jumping the last two and he collapsed halfway to the toilet on the cool marble floor of the bathroom and puked what seemed like everything he had eaten in the past week.

It took what seemed like hours, but could only have been moments before he felt arms wrap around him, supporting him and soothing him.

He was moved to the toilet bowl and held upright so that he could make good use of it by heaving again. He heard a cleaning spell, obviously one of his mates getting rid of the sick on the bathroom floor, and the bathroom tap running.

Tears streamed down his face as another violent wave of vomit forced its way out of his mouth. He coughed and spat out the remnants, taking in deep lungfuls of air and leaning back against whoever it was behind him.

His tears were brushed away, his face was gently wiped with a warm washcloth and his face was peppered with little kisses from all of his mates, who were surrounding him, comforting him, helping him as his stomach clenched again and his mouth was filled with yellow bile.

He choked and spat the bitter tasting liquid into the toilet and sobbed as his throat and stomach burnt. His mouth was wiped gently again and Harry opened his eyes to see concerned silver looking at him. Harry tried a weak smile, but it lost all of its effect when he dived for the toilet again to let another trickle of bile out of his mouth.

He heaved in as much air as he could, before attempting to control his breathing by slowly breathing in through his nose and then out through his mouth. He slumped, exhausted, into Nasta’s arms and snuggled himself in as tightly as possible.
Blaise had a blossoming red mark on his collarbone, obviously from where Harry had been scrambling to get out of the bed and had hit him with a flailing fist. Harry kissed it gently, even as his eyes were still streaming with tears. He sniffled and huffed in more air, trying to calm himself down.

“I won’t insult you by asking how you feel, but I will ask if your stomach has settled down a bit.” Max said, crouching down on his haunches beside him.

Harry didn’t trust himself to speak so he just shook his head and leant forward to fold his arms on the toilet seat, his head hanging down into the bowl. His stomach clenched and he heaved again, a large hand rubbed him firmly on the back.

Harry once again collapsed bonelessly against Nasta and sobbed. If it was one thing that he absolutely hated about being pregnant it was the morning sickness.

Harry shivered as his body, soaked in a cold sweat, was stuck on the cold of the freezing marble bathroom. He became overly aware that he was curled up naked on the bathroom floor and the vomiting didn’t help him any either.

Blaise came into the bathroom with a pile of clothes and Harry smiled weakly, but gratefully at him as he was slowly and carefully dressed in the clothes which had been warmed with a charm.

“Do you feel ready to move now?” Max asked him softly.

Harry nodded and was manoeuvred into Max’s arms as Nasta stood up, unfolding his legs and rubbing out the pins and needles.

“Sorry.” Harry forced out of his raw and abused throat.

Nasta bopped him gently on the head and smiled.

“You have nothing to be sorry about, I chose to sit on my own leg, you didn’t make me.”

Harry smiled tiredly as he was carried into the living room where Draco was making a bed on the settee; he was placed down in the nest bed and covered up with a warm, thick blanket. Harry opened his mouth to complain, but he thought better of it. He felt better being in the little made up bed and the blanket was warm and cosy. Instead he nuzzled his face into it and relaxed back, letting the warmth of heating charms lull him back into a light doze.

He heard his mates go and have showers, get dressed and Max pottering around in the kitchenette preparing breakfast. It must have only been about five in the morning, anyone else would have been shouting and complaining about being woken up so early, but his mates were making sure that he was comfortable and going about their routines as if it was seven in the morning instead.

He remembered what waking his relatives up with his nightmare induced screams had meant. He winced as he remembered the meaty fist coming towards his face to shut him up.

“Are you alright, Diletto?”

Harry opened his eyes sluggishly to see concerned indigo eyes watching him from the other settee. He nodded and closed his eyes again. He opened them again and looked back at Blaise.

“I want ginger biscuits.” He said as carefully as he could through his throat.

Blaise nodded and made to stand up when a tin of ginger newts went flying through the air at Blaise. He caught them on reflex but only just before they connected with his nose. Blaise glared at Max who was whistling cheerfully, innocently in the kitchenette.

Harry let out a soft chuckle as Blaise snorted and pulled the lid off of the tin and handed it to Harry. He smiled in thanks and placed the tin on his lap and selected a ginger newt and bit into it. He chewed it twice as much as he normally would have so that it wouldn’t irritate his throat as he swallowed and just as he had finished his first biscuit and was picking out a second, Max appeared and passed him a cup of a cloudy, pale red liquid. Raspberry leaf tea with real raspberry juice.

He sipped at it and felt his belly settle down a bit more. He nibbled another biscuit and kept breathing and as all of his mates sat down at the kitchenette table to eat the large meal that Max had made for then, leaving him on the settee to rest with his tea and biscuits. He already felt much better.

He lay against the arm of the settee and closed his eyes. The next he knew, a loud crash had him shooting upright with a startled shout and caused all of his mates to appear from wherever they had been within moments. He looked on the floor and saw the upturned tin and the broken, scattered biscuits that it had once held. He had fallen asleep and the tin had slipped to the floor.

“I liked those biscuits.” He said with a small pout.

“I’ll get you some more on the way home from work.” Max told him, coming around the settee and started picking up the broken biscuits.

“How are you feeling?” Draco asked him.

“Better now. Those biscuits helped, I feel a bit wobbly though so maybe some blood a bit later on wouldn’t be a bad idea.”

All of them nodded as if he had said something more interesting than he had. He stretched and yawned before pushing the blanket from his body and sitting up. He pulled up the jumper that Blaise had dressed him in and rubbed his baby.

“Are you feeling sick again?” Blaise asked.

“No, just saying hello to my sweet baby.” Harry stated as he looked down on his belly with such a soft look.

Nasta smiled and leant over the back of the settee to lay a hand on his protruding belly. He brushed his fingers against the skin and leant right over to press a kiss just above his belly button.

Harry giggled a bit as Nasta’s hair tickled him, but he pulled Nasta’s head to kiss his temple, before swinging himself up off the settee and stretched until his back popped and his knees buckled a bit. Four sets of hands went to catch him, but Harry had straightened up again before they touched him.

“Are you alright?”

“The next person to ask if I’m alright is having my foot in their mouth. I’m fine now, thank you.”

Blaise chuckled and wrapped an arm around him, leading him out of the living room and back into the bedroom so that Harry could shower himself before lessons started.

It took Harry a bit longer than normal to shower himself and get ready for school with his knees still shaking and his entire body feeling tired and weak, but he managed it with just ten minutes to spare.

Max was fretting that Harry had only eaten two biscuits for breakfast and was refusing to leave for work, muttering about making Harry a good breakfast that Harry wasn’t even sure that he’d be able to eat without it making a reappearance.

Nasta finally dragged the larger man away, muttering about Mother Hens and overprotectiveness. Harry let Draco and Blaise pull him in the opposite direction before class started. They had Transfiguration and they were going to be late.

They finally made it and incurred the wrathful glare of Professor McGonagall from the front of the class.

“You gentlemen are five minutes late, I trust you have a valid excuse?”
“I’m sorry, Professor, it’s my fault.” Harry told her, not even having to fake the waver in his voice. “Morning sickness hit me hard this morning, Draco and Blaise refused to leave me until I stopped being sick.”

Professor McGonagall’s stern look softened slightly as her severe blue gaze slid to his protruding belly, before quickly coming back to his face.

“Take your seats.” She instructed them before turning back to her lesson.

Harry was helped into his chair by Blaise; unfortunately it was right behind Ron and Hermione’s desk. Draco was forced to sit three rows behind them, on the opposite side of the classroom. He wasn’t happy about it either.

Harry spent the lesson forcing himself to keep his eyes open as the exhaustion of being woken up so early caught up with him. It didn’t help that wayward spells from the table in front of them kept darting past his head either. Blaise blocked them all easily, but that wasn’t the point. Harry growled as another jet of magic sailed past his head.

“Stop it, Weasley!” Blaise hissed venomously.

“Or what?!” Ron burst out loudly, loudly enough to draw Professor McGonagall’s attention.

“Mister Weasley! Ten points from Gryffindor for disrupting my lesson! Any more disruptions and you will serve a detention with me tonight!”

Harry grinned and squeezed Blaise’s thigh under the table. He yawned and turned back to his toad that he was trying to turn into a clam shell. Blaise had turned his toad into a very pretty shell and back again, watched by Professor McGonagall before he transfigured the toad back into a shell and gifted it to Harry, who was wearing it like a brooch to pin his robes together.

Professor McGonagall saw this, but said nothing, her lips softening slightly into a rare smile as she tried to get Millicent Bulstrode to transfigure her toad into a shell without leaving the legs on it.

Harry finally managed to turn his toad into a shell, using the last of his energy to do so, he ignored that his shell was apparently covered in the toad’s skin still, at least it wasn’t breathing like Tracy Davis’ or croaking like Seamus’ shell.

The bell rang and after the homework assignment had been noted down, Harry stood to leave with Blaise and Draco.
“Mister Potter, may I see you for a moment.”

Harry waved Blaise and Draco off, helped along by a very stern glare from Professor McGonagall, before he approached her desk and forced himself to remain standing.

“I cannot help but notice your level of exhaustion today, Potter, are you quite well?”

“Like I said, Professor, I had a rough morning. I love being pregnant, but I hate morning sickness. I was up very early with my lovers, but I didn’t really eat anything so I'm running low on energy.”

“I believe it would be beneficial for you to take a day off, Potter. I will write a note for you and if you would, please go and see Madam Pomfrey.”

“But…” Harry knew it was futile by the glare he received. He sighed and he just couldn’t stop thinking about how his four mates would react knowing that he was in the hospital wing.

He exhaled and nodded his head. He trudged out of the Transfiguration classroom, ignoring the miserable second years grouped outside the doorway waiting for Professor McGonagall to allow them into her classroom.

Harry walked past their curious little faces and made his way up to the first floor where the hospital wing was located. He walked in and immediately saw the bloodied face of one Ron Weasley. It didn’t take a genius to figure out what had happened and Harry sighed in exasperation, but at least Draco and Blaise hadn’t beat the shit out of Ron in front of him.

“Harry, dear. Are you alright?”

“Professor McGonagall sent me up here to get a check-up.” Harry answered softly, trying to keep his voice from carrying over to Ron.

“Alright dear, hop up on this bed whilst I finish up with Mister Weasley, then I’ll get to you. I take it Minerva has given you your next lesson off.”

“The whole day, Madam Pomfrey.”
The Matron nodded and walked into her office to find another potion or salve or something for Ron’s face, leaving Harry and Ron alone for the first time since they had broken off their friendship almost exactly a year ago.

Chapter Twenty-Five – Overload

Harry lay back comfortably on the bed that he had been instructed to sit on, relaxing his shoulders back so that they weren’t so tensed and he pretended as best as he could that Ron wasn’t in the same room as him.

“Just defeating the Dark Lord wasn’t enough for you then, was it!” Ron demanded when he realised that Harry was ignoring him, pretending that the bed he was sitting on wasn’t occupied. “You had to try and get more fame by shacking up with as many people as would have you!”

“Just the men.” Harry answered stoically. “If I had ‘shacked up’ with the women who asked to have Ron went a brilliant red. “Hermione and Ginny wouldn’t touch you! You’re just a slut, you’re dirty!”

“Oh Ginny would touch me.” Harry stated innocently enough, remembering the hug that she had given him just that morning. “Hermione just wishes she could touch me.”

Sure he was being more than a little mean and a tad cruel, but he had had it right up to his neck of Ron being a complete jackass to him, surely people couldn’t blame him for being a little mean after just being called a dirty slut by his once best friend.

“No she doesn’t! Neither of them like you!”

Harry made a noncommittal noise in the back of his throat, angering Ron further.

“Just look at you! Pregnant at sixteen? No one gets pregnant at sixteen unless they’re stupid sluts!”

“You have no argument to call anyone stupid. I heard Crabbe actually beat you on a History of Magic essay, how proud are you of that?”

Ron went from red to purple quicker than Harry could blink. He wondered where the hell Madam Pomfrey was and what was taking her so long.

“He obviously had help from that slimy, filthy ferret! He and that dirty immigrant are going to be thrown out of Hogwarts as soon as people find out what they did to me!”

“More like they’d be given a medal for what they did. It’s just too bad they couldn’t break your jaw too, to stop you from speaking.”

“You’re nothing but a traitor!” Ron hissed at him, so angry that he couldn’t get enough air to shout. “Fucking two Slytherins and two men old enough to be your Father!”

Harry had no answer to that. His Father, if he had still been alive, would have been thirty-six as of March, Nasta had turned thirty-seven in February.

Ron took his silence as more ammunition and carried on, hurting Harry more than he would ever let the redhead know.

“I mean if you had wanted a Father figure there are better ways to get them than going around shagging men that are the same age!”

“That wasn’t why I chose a relationship with them.” Harry said quietly. “They are so much more mature than boys my age. I mean, hell Ron, look at you? Who would want you as a boyfriend? Lazy, stupid, mean, untalented, you can't even fly a broom! I don’t know what a smart, pretty woman like Hermione sees in you, but you can be sure that as soon as we graduate and she gets an amazing job and starts meeting intellectual people of a like mind who she can actually hold a conversation with and respects her for her brilliant brain, she’ll leave you too!”

Harry was panting harshly when he finished and a sharp pain in his gut had him clutching his side. He was so angry that he was almost vibrating with energy.

“You lost all of your friends because you are so nasty, even Seamus and Dean are at least giving Draco and Blaise a chance! You are going to lose Hermione as soon as she realises that she doesn’t have to be stuck with you because you’re the only one who will pay attention to her. It’s you who is going to die the sad, lonely old man, not me! I have a family now, I have four loving men who are willing to do anything for me and I am having a baby! As soon as we graduate, we’re officially bonded, we’re getting married and we are going to have lots of children to come! I have a family now and you’re going to be left with nothing if you carry on being petty, prejudiced and mean!”

Ron charged at him and Harry threw his arms around his belly as Ron’s fist caught the bottom of his ribcage, knocking all of the air from his lungs, the second punch caught his fingers holding protectively over his bump, but the third hit his side very hard and a searing pain had him screaming. Ron stood back, blinking stupidly as if he hadn’t realised what he was doing. He just stared as Harry rolled around on the bed.

Another sharp pain in his side had Harry gasping and curling his legs over his stomach as the pains became worse.

“Get Madam Pomfrey!” He bit out between clenched teeth. He hadn’t actually expected Ron to do anything of the sort, but the redhead ran the full length of the hospital wing and charged into the Matron’s office.

“Mister Weasley! I know you are in a bit of pain but really, charging in here is ridiculous, I have only been gone for ten minutes as I flooed Severus for a potion for Mister Potter, surely you can wait another couple of minutes!

“Something’s wrong with, Harry!” He screamed at her.

Poppy Pomfrey was taken aback for all of three seconds before she rushed out of her office to see Harry rolling around on the bed, clutching at his stomach.

“Oh heavens!” She gasped. “Weasley, go and get Professor Snape, he is in his office.”

Ron ran from the room as Poppy began trying to stabilise Harry as best as she could with her limited knowledge of Drackens.

Severus flooed directly into the hospital wing via her office not five minutes later and had not brought Weasley with him, assumedly so the boy wouldn’t overhear anything that he wasn’t supposed to.

“What happened?” He demanded as he cut his own wrist and forced Harry to latch onto the wound.

Once Harry had tasted the sweet blood, he sunk his teeth and fangs into the skin to hold on as he suckled like a newborn kitten.

“I don’t know, I left Misters Potter and Weasley alone whilst I flooed you for the Dracken health potion, I left them for ten minutes, the next I know Weasley comes bursting into my office and I came out to find Harry like this, what is going on, Severus?”

Severus didn’t answer; he just stared at Harry with pain in his black eyes, watching as Harry writhed in agony even as he continued sucking at his blood, making small noises of pain against his arm.

“I believe this must be Mister Weasley’s fault.” He finally answered. “Dracken pregnancies are very brittle and delicate; the slightest knock could cause a miscarriage. It’s why his mates are so protective of him and are very violent towards those who so much as brush up against their pregnant mate.”

“Severus, are you saying that Mister Potter is having a miscarriage?!”
“I am hopeful that the blood will help. You need to get Albus, Poppy. He needs his mates.”

Poppy rushed off and Harry looked up at Professor Snape with fearful, crushed emerald eyes. Severus looked away; he couldn’t stand to see those eyes looking at him with that expression. The same expression that Regulus had worn when it had been confirmed that their unborn baby was no more, that Regulus had had a full miscarriage. He had never forgiven James Potter to this day for bumping into Regulus and starting the miscarriage, accident or not.

James Potter had died before he had gotten any real retribution on the man for causing the death of his one and only child, he had contemplated killing Potter’s child to force him to feel the pain he had, but he couldn’t bring himself to do anything to harm Lily. Sweet, beautiful Lily who had been rounded with child, so happy, bright and exuberant. He had had the perfect chance and he had watched it pass him by.

Then Potter had come to Hogwarts and he had another chance, no matter how small or petty, to avenge Regulus and the child that they had lost. He had tormented Harry, had unfairly punished him, had bullied and belittled him at every opportunity and then it had turned out that the boy was a Dracken.

Severus believe that it was fate. Mere chance had taken Regulus and their unborn daughter from them, fate had made Harry Potter a Dracken and once again a Dracken was going to lose a baby because of another’s actions, because of their ignorance and cruelty.

Poppy came bustling back into the hospital wing, Albus a step behind her. The elderly man sat on the bed and wrapped an arm around Harry.

“What happened Harry, my Boy?” He asked sadly with a warm hint of anger.

Harry, who had stopped feeding so ferociously and had just been lapping at the oozing blood, pulled his blood stained mouth away.

“He hit me!” Harry cried. “He hit my bump. I tried to cover as much of it as I could but he found a gap.”

“Who hit you, Harry?”

“Ron.”

Albus nodded and stood back up, urging Harry to go back to sucking Severus’ arm.
“I will inform Mister Zabini and Mister Malfoy at lunch after their lesson ends. Mister Maddison and Mister Delericey have already been informed that they are needed back here at the castle and should be here as soon as they are able.”

“You have to keep them away from Ron, Sir. I don’t like him, in fact I’m beginning to hate him, but I don’t want him dead and I don’t want my mates being in trouble for hurting or killing him either.”

Albus nodded and walked out of the hospital wing, heading in the direction for the Grand staircase, ready to meet Ron and head him off.

Severus took his arm away from Harry and handed him a vial of light grey potion. Harry dipped his tongue into it and screwed up his face and shuddered at the vile taste. Severus gave a tight smile.

“Down it in one go is the best.” He instructed and watched as Harry threw it all back and gagged. “That should give us a few more minutes, the sooner your mates are all here the better, you need a cocktail of sorts, of all their fluids.”

Harry looked horrified.

“It sounds unpleasant and it is, at least taste wise, but your baby has no chance without it.”

Harry started softly crying and he held onto his bump, which was jumping about under his hands. He couldn’t lose his baby, not because of Ron.

Max arrived first and he came charging into the hospital wing, sweat beading on his forehead and his massive chest heaving. His eyes went to Harry and before Harry could even say hello, Max was on him, holding him, petting him, licking him and sniffing him. When he reached his stomach he remained there, sniffing and licking for longer. He let out a rage filled roar, sounding more like a wounded rhino before he wrapped his arms around Harry’s waist and pillowed his head very lightly on his belly.

The bell rang signalling lunch time; it wasn’t even three minutes later when Blaise barged into the hospital wing, Draco following close behind him.

They took in Max wrapped around his belly, gently stroking it and the tears in both of their eyes. It didn’t take a genius to figure it out and they both screamed and roared.

“What happened?” Blaise, the more lucid out of the two, asked.

“I’m having a miscarriage.” Harry informed them. “Professor Snape and Madam Pomfrey are doing all they can to stop it and stabilise the baby again.”

“Is this his fault?” Draco asked his eyes wild and his voice very distorted.

Harry had no idea that Draco might have been referring to anyone other than Ron, so he nodded his head yes.

“I’ll kill him. That filthy, fucking mongrel knew that it would kill the baby! I told you that’s why he did it!”

“What happened?” Nasta asked as he jogged onto the ward, looking as if he had been rolling around in a pig pen he was so covered in dirt.

Draco threw a punch at him before anyone could do or say anything and Nasta flew backwards into the door. He growled wildly as his black and gold wings burst violently from his back.

“What the fuck was that for!!” He demanded.

It was the first time that Harry had ever heard Nasta cuss, it was also the angriest that Harry had ever seen him, including that time he had crippled the tree after hearing what Dominic and his Grandfather had planned to do with Harry and his child.

“You know what you’ve done!” Draco yelled back and before Harry could tell them to knock it off, Nasta had moved quicker than their eyes could follow.

Draco went sailing through the air and crashed into the bed on the other side of the room. Nasta had leapt on him before Draco could find his feet again and Nasta started hitting and he didn’t stop.

Max held tightly onto Harry and didn’t let him go. He shushed him and soothed him and tried to turn his head away so that he couldn’t watch, but he had to. For god’s sake two of his mates were killing each other on the floor of the damned hospital wing!

“They’re fighting for dominance.” Max whispered to him. “Let them work it out.”
“I didn’t realise those fights were so violent.” Harry quivered. “You and Blaise didn’t have a mark between you.”

“Blaise willingly submitted to me without us having to resort to violence, he did the same to Draco and the same to Nasta. Blaise really isn’t a fighter, though he has proven that he will kill to protect you. Draco is a fighter, so we must actually fight to prove who is more dominant to whom.”

“I don’t like it.”

“You don’t have to like it, Harry love.” Max told him softly, brushing his hair from his eyes, acting for all the world that two men weren’t beating each other to pulps behind him.

It was near enough a one-sided fight as Nasta threw Draco across the room again and stood breathing heavily, panting with bloody fists. Draco got up and screamed in rage and humiliation as he flew back at Nasta, who caught him and slammed him into the ground, lying on Draco’s legs, pinning his arms with his own and laying his teeth heavily over Draco’s throat.

“He knows how to fight.” Blaise commented as he edged around the two pinned men and sat down next to Harry, stroking his cheek.

Nasta stood from the ground and yanked Draco up with him. Draco’s head remained bent, blood running from the teeth marks in his neck, he didn’t look up and didn’t acknowledge anyone.

“Want to share with the rest of us what the hell that was about?” Nasta demanded.

Draco growled and Nasta seized his wrist and pulled it up to his mouth, laying his teeth over the vein in his wrist and biting down, not enough to break the skin, but enough to warn Draco not to test him.

“You caused Harry to have a miscarriage!” Draco snarled.

Harry blinked as he heard that and as pandemonium broke out around him, mainly consisting of all his mates shouting at one another, he screamed long and loud. The silence was deafening as he stopped when he ran out of breath, he glared at all of them.
“It wasn’t Nasta’s fault!” He shouted over them. “Just stop it! STOP IT! I’m here, lying in a bed, about to lose our first baby and all you idiots can do is squabble with one another! Don’t you think that maybe, just maybe, I’d like some comfort!”

Max immediately pulled him up and onto his lap, wrapping his absolutely huge arms around him, burying Harry’s head in his soft shirt. Harry heard his mates cooing and crooning at him from outside Max’s arms and he lost it. He broke down and he started sobbing, then full out crying. He couldn’t lose his baby, he just couldn’t.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Lucius Malfoy sipped on his cup of tea as he perused the morning paper. It was a load of drivel like usual, but he was still expected to comment on certain articles or understand what was being said if someone else mentioned an article.

His Wife was sitting beside him in the family dining room, eating a half an orange with a tea spoon whilst occasionally sipping her own white tea.

An owl they both recognised swooped into the dining room and landed regally on the back of Narcissa’s chair, all Malfoy owls had been taught to never land on tables.

“I wonder if Draco has something more interesting to say than this waste of ink.” Lucius stated folding the newspaper in half as Narcissa untied the, unusually lengthy, letter.

“It seems that our Draco has more to say than most months.” Narcissa told her Husband as she cracked the wax seal and shook out the roll of parchment, which was a lot longer than usual. “I hope he is alright.”

“If it was anything serious he would have floo called us from Severus’ office, dear.” Lucius reminded her.

Narcissa nodded her head and silently read the letter. Her eyes widened, her mouth parted, her eyebrows rose into her hairline and all the while Lucius sat patiently and watched her facial expressions and body language.

When she was finished, she folded the letter in half sharply and kept hold of it, looking at him with a strange, maniacal glint in her eyes that was more common from her dead sister, Bellatrix Lestrange.

“What did Draco have to say?” Lucius asked.
“I think we are going to need a bigger family dining table, dear.” Was all she said, going back to her orange.

Lucius looked at the four seater, solid oak, square table and matching chairs critically. Narcissa loved this table; it was why he had bought it in the first place, why would they suddenly need a bigger table when it was just the two of them and Draco?

“May I ask why we need a bigger table, dear?”

“Our Draco has fallen in love. Hard by the sounds of it.”

Lucius blinked before regaining his composure. “Draco has fallen in love?” He repeated his Wife’s words. “That may explain his sudden desire to break the contract with the Greengrass’ did Draco mention who he had fallen in love with per chance?”

“No. He didn’t mention any names, but he wishes for us to meet them.” Narcissa stated casually.

Lucius Malfoy narrowed his eyes at his Wife’s games. “Them, Cissa?”

“Yes, them, Lucius. Draco has gone and fallen in love with three other men.”

Lucius Malfoy choked on the air he had breathed in and he coughed sharply to get his breathing back under his control.

“Let me see his letter.” He demanded when he could speak clearly, holding his hand out for it.

“One of the men is currently pregnant, possibly with Draco’s child.” Narcissa told him before handing over the letter and going back to her breakfast.

Lucius read his son’s words with an ever growing level of shock. The way that Draco spoke about his…partners, Cissa was right; he had fallen in love and he had fallen hard. Draco explained about one of his partners being pregnant and that there was a one in three chance that the baby could be his and he made it a clear point that he would not be abandoning his partners nor his possible child.

Draco wanted them to come to Hogwarts at their first possible convenience, preferably during a weekend so that their visit didn’t disrupt his lessons. He was being so casual, so cavalier about being with three other men. It would have shocked him if Draco had announced he had been with one man, let alone three. He spoke of marriage and bonding after he graduated.

Draco had never shown any homosexual tendencies before, all the questions in the usual puberty talk he had had with Draco when his son had been thirteen had been asked about when a man loves a woman, what a man does with a woman, how a man loves a woman. Not even a passing curiosity about how a man loves another man.

He and Cissa had been preparing themselves for an eventual daughter-in-law after Draco had graduated; instead they had gotten three son-in-laws and a possible grandchild shoved onto them. Draco had only been in school for seven months, he had written the letter to dissolve the betrothal contract between the Greengrass’ only three months ago. How could everything have changed in such a short amount of time?

Lucius rubbed a hand over his face in weariness and sighed, he took a sip of his tea and finished the letter, folding it over and placing it on the table in front of him. He was going to have to pay a little visit to Draco to meet his son’s future spouses and his possible grandchild. He had to make sure that his son wasn’t making the biggest mistake of his life.

“It seems you are right, dear. We do need a bigger table.”

“So I just have to down it?” Harry asked his face scrunched up in absolute disgust.

“Yes it isn’t that bad?” Max tried placating him weakly.

“If it isn’t that bad then why don’t you drink it?” Harry demanded, holding out the glass beaker to Max.

It was filled to the brim with a thick, oddly coloured goop. It was a reddish purple colour and it was the knowledge of what it contained that had Harry very hesitant to drink it. It contained all four of his mates’ fluids. Spit, sweat, semen, tears and lots of blood. Snape had wanted them to give urine as well, but Harry adamantly refused to drink anything with anyone’s piss in it, his own mates or not.

“I…well…I…it won’t have any benefits for me to drink it, will it?” Max told him, carefully pushing the beaker back at him.

All four of them had had to wank themselves off into a plastic cup and it had been a struggle to get themselves erect with the knowledge that their baby could be dying as they sat around pleasuring themselves, so they were all being very careful with the glass beaker. It had actually been easier to get their tears than their semen; usually it was the other way around.

“Potter, just down it now or your baby will die!” Snape snapped at him.

Harry’s face fell and his expression became crushed. It was the expression that he had been wearing for an hour now and it destroyed everyone who saw it. Harry took a huffing breath to gather his courage, if it would save his baby, he would have even drank his mates’ piss. He’d do anything for his baby.

He took another great breath and put the beaker to his lips and before he could think too much about it, he started drinking it down in large, hard gulps. He didn’t breathe in or out until he had swallowed the last drop of the thick concoction.

He took in a deep breath as he finished and he got a lingering taste on his tongue. It was not a pleasant taste and he gagged. His stomach clenched and he burped a bit and spat out what had come up from his stomach. He was thankful that it wasn’t a lot, he couldn’t drink that again. He just couldn’t.

He lay against the pillows and waited for something to happen, anything, but nothing did and tears welled up in his eyes.

“It didn’t work.” He warbled.

Nasta lowered his face to his belly and sniffed and licked gently. He touched lightly, ghosting his fingers over Harry’s skin.

“The baby is still there and the baby is still attached to you.” He stated.

“It worked?” Harry asked brightening up and trying to sit up only to be held down by Blaise.

“Don’t move just yet, Prezioso. It would be best if you kept as still as possible.”

Harry nodded, laying his hands over his belly and rubbing gently.
“I can't lose my baby.”

“We will do our utmost to keep our baby, love.” Max told him seriously.

“Do not move, Potter. I mean it. I will tie you down if I have to.” Snape stated sincerely, his dark eyes glinting.

“I’m not moving.” Harry stated laying more fully on the pillows and Draco’s thigh, who was sitting behind him.

Draco had several red marks on his inner thigh where Harry was ‘punishing him’ for attacking Nasta without asking for the full story first.

Harry pinched Draco’s white skin again, watching it flush and turn red, the muscle underneath jumping at the slight pain.

He had told his mates what had actually happened and that Ron had hit his stomach and it had nothing to do with Nasta having sex with him.

His mates had gone tearing through the castle looking for the redhead, but they hadn’t found him and Harry had screamed for them in distress as the pain in his stomach had hiked up beyond what he could handle. They had rushed back and apologised for turning feral and for leaving him and for not being able to find the person responsible for his condition. Harry had waved it away and sent them all to provide him with the fluids he needed.

“You’re responding well to the fluids.” Snape told him, waving his wand carefully over Harry’s abdomen, keeping his gaze on his mates at all times so that he wouldn’t be caught off guard if they suddenly attacked him for coming too close to Harry and the baby.

“How long before I can start moving again? I’m hungry.”

“Give it another hour.” Snape told him.

“I can go and hunt for you if you’d like.” Max told him softly.

“I don’t want meat and if I can’t move I can’t sit up. I’ll end up choking.”
“I have a potion brewing for you, Potter. It’ll postpone your heat for a few days, you can only take it twice in a row, so you have a week.”

“You will still feel like you are on heat. You will still burn with the need for your mates, but I cannot guarantee your baby’s survival if you have sexual intercourse, especially not with the roughness of the heat period, within the next few days. You should be going on your heat tomorrow, correct?”

“Yes.” Harry answered in a small voice. It was bad enough that he felt like he was burning to death for ten days whilst on a heat period, but for him to feel like he was being roasted alive when he wasn’t going to have sexual gratification caused a spike of fear inside of him. He could be feeling like he was stuck in a furnace for seventeen days. It was too long; hell ten days was too long!

“Can I just take it the once?” He asked. “Until the baby is assuredly safe and not in imminent danger.”

“I am hopeful that yes you can.” Snape answered. “I am brewing a double dosage just in case the baby has not stabilised at the end of the first dose.”

Harry nodded and curled up carefully. He closed his eyes and let the voices of his mates lull him to sleep. He was exhausted after the overload of emotions and by everything that had happened. He just wanted to sleep and wake up to find all of this had been a terrible nightmare.

Chapter Twenty-Six – Nightmare or Reality

Harry couldn’t believe it. He couldn’t breathe, couldn’t get enough air into his lungs as he gasped and choked. His beautiful baby had died. He had lost the baby.

He looked down to his stomach; it was flat again where he should have been round with child. He shivered in the warm air. He was cold, so cold.

Madam Pomfrey bustled around him, telling him that he had gone into shock and that he should try to breathe normally before he started to hyperventilate. He couldn’t. How could he calm down and breathe normally when his baby was lying dead next to him, wrapped in a white towel that was speckling red with blood. His blood, not the baby’s. His little baby had been covered in his blood when it had come out of him.

His baby was perfect. A tiny little body, small features, all ten fingers and ten toes, thick, dark hair that looked like it might have been inherited from the Potter side of the family. Pale white skin that was so soft it had no comparison. He had just had to touch his baby; he would never get the feel of that skin from his memories now, not ever.

His baby was perfect in every little way, except for one thing. His baby wasn’t breathing. No one had moved his baby from beside him. His baby was lying on a small table, wrapped tightly in the towel, right beside him. He could reach out and touch his dead baby if he wanted to. He didn’t. He wanted to be brave and hold his child, but he couldn’t.

A small giggle pushed its way up from his throat, he sat in the hospital bed giggling and then the tears came. He eased from giggling to sobbing and then full out crying as tears soaked the collar of his shirt in moments.

He reached out and touched the towel, it moved. It slipped sideways and the perfect head of his perfect baby was revealed to his horrified eyes. He sobbed some more, feeling as if his heart would rip itself to pieces in his chest as he touched that thick, dark hair. It looked coarse, but it was baby fine, silky, just like his own.
He screamed and buried his face in his hands, hands that were now covered in blood from the baby’s body. He cried out in distress, calling for his mates. Then he remembered. He remembered the anger, the pain, so much hurt and rage.

He looked down on the floor of the hospital. Legs poked around the bottom of the bed frame, Draco’s legs. A slack face stared up at him from just past those long, lean legs, eyes wide in shock, glassy in death. A large, powerful body with bright blue wings that was oozing thick blood into a large puddle on the floor.

Harry screamed and threw himself away from Max’s body. He jerked and shot up, tearing his mind away from the image of Max lying, bleeding and dead on the floor.

Arms wrapped around him and Harry gasped in huge lungfuls of air as he clung to the soothing, familiar scent of pine and disinfectant. He sobbed and buried himself even further into the tight hold, his head and back being stroked lovingly.

“Shh, Harry, it was just a dream.” Max’s voice whispered gently.

Harry huffed as he tried to breathe; he looked around him, to the three hospital beds that had been pushed together. To Blaise lying curled up on the other side of Max. To Nasta who was lying on his back, facing away from them and Draco, who was lying on Harry’s other side, one of Nasta’s arms pushed under his neck, their legs entwined, but no other part of their bodies touching.

Harry brought a hand to his belly, too scared to look just in case his bump was no longer there, that his baby was no longer there. He let out a great, shuddering breath and looked down at his bump when he felt his ballooned stomach. It was still there, exactly the same as it had been yesterday, though maybe just a tad bigger.

“You had a nightmare about the baby dying didn’t you?” Max asked him softly, his own, massive, hands coming down to hold his over the baby bump.

Harry nodded his head slowly as he looked to their hands placed protectively over the baby.

“The baby died. I killed you all in rage. I killed all of you and the baby was still just as dead, lying next to me on a table wrapped in a bloodied towel.”

Max pulled him in to a tight hug, holding his head tightly as if he could squeeze the dream out through his ears if he held on tight enough.

“I had a similar dream only both you and the baby had died and I killed all of the others. I’d bet that all of them are going to have a variant of the same nightmare tonight. Our Drackens are reminding us what is at stake, reminding us that we can't be careless and that the baby is fragile and the pregnancy is delicate. This can never happen again, Harry."

Harry wrapped his arms around Max and held on. He couldn’t believe that it had been a dream; it felt so real, so life like. Even now he could believe that his dream had actually happened.

He let go of Max and let him lie down and sniff and lick at the bump. After the dream he had just had he wished that he could sniff and lick at himself as well, if only to assure himself that the baby really was alive and well in his belly.

Max stayed where he was, his tongue pressed very low down on his abdomen, like his tongue was a finger and he was checking a pulse. He found out that that wasn’t too far from the mark actually.

“The baby’s heartbeat is normal.” He told Harry, stroking the place where his tongue had been.

“Is that where the baby’s head is?” Harry asked, placing his hand next to Max’s.

“Yes. The baby fell asleep as you were lying down, it was flat then, you’ve sat up now so the baby is upside down.”

“Should I lie back down?” Harry asked a small frown on his face.

Max chuckled deeply and shook his head. “The baby doesn’t mind at all, Harry. If it was uncomfortable, it would move itself.”

Harry nodded a bit uncertainly, he couldn’t wait to start those parent and baby classes that Nasta had signed them all up for.

Harry’s stomach gave a small gurgle of hunger and Max moved as if it were a gunshot. Harry latched onto his arm.

“I don’t want you to go hunting. I’m too near my heat, even if I do have to delay it for a few days. I need fruit.”

“I’ll go up to our rooms and get you some from the kitchenette.”
Harry shook his head. “I don’t want you to leave.”

“You need to eat, Harry.”

“So I’ll just call a house elf.” Harry answered, rolling his eyes. “Dobby!”

A loud crack which had Harry darting to look at his three sleeping mates preceded an old and ugly house elf entering the hospital wing, grumbling and muttering darkly. Thankfully Blaise and Draco slept on, Nasta’s eyebrows scrunched up and he cautiously sniffed the air, making a low grumble in his chest before he rolled closer to Draco and slept on.

“Master Harry Potter called for Kreacher.” The poisonous, oily voice greeted.

Another, quieter pop and a little figure dressed in an overlarge jumper jumped onto the pillowcase clad Kreacher, yelling and scuffling.

Harry scooted until he was sat behind Max, who growled and tugged Harry behind him more firmly. The little squeaks and squeals were shrill, but not loud enough to wake up the three deeply sleeping men. Again Nasta sniffed the air and again he let out a deep rumble, which Blaise answered with a grunt and they slept on.

“Stop it now!” Harry hissed. “There are three people trying to sleep here!”

“Master Harry called for Kreacher.”

“No! Mister Harry Potter sir called for Dobby! Not Kreacher, you’s should be going back to the kitchens!”

“Kreacher is Master’s house elf, you belong to no one!” Kreacher dug in hurtfully, making Dobby’s ears droop.

“Dobby is a free elf! Dobby likes being free and Dobby gets paying now.”

Harry rubbed at his eyes tiredly.
“Oi!” He called out a bit louder. “Stop arguing and keep it down!”

Max wrapped an arm around him and pulled him out from behind his back and onto his lap.

“Harry Potter called for Dobby?” Dobby asked bowing.

“Kreacher is Master Harry Potter’s elf!” Kreacher screamed out.

Harry looked behind him to see Nasta blinking his hazel eyes open slowly. He looked first to Draco who was wrapped in his arms and then further over to see Blaise lying on his own on the farthest bed and then he sat up, panicking lightly as his eyes darted around before settling on him and Max wrapped up in each other’s arms.

“I had a nightmare.” He told them and he crawled over to them and wrapped his arms around Harry’s head, pulling him forward to kiss his forehead, before lying on his stomach to lick and sniff at the baby belly.

“That I and the baby had died and you had killed the other three dominants.” Harry elaborated softly.

Nasta nodded against his stomach and rubbed the skin of his leg with gentle fingertips.

“Max had the same dream and I dreamed that the baby was dead and I had killed all of my dominants in a rage.”

“Our Drackens are reminding us what is at stake if we are reckless and careless with the baby.” Nasta said softly. “The baby is too vulnerable. We could have lost the baby, Harry; we could have lost you and the baby because we weren’t careful enough.”

“We’re going to resolve that, I promise.” Harry answered, running little fingers through Nasta’s hair.

Harry turned back to the two house-elves looking as though they wanted to beat themselves senseless.
“I need lots of fruit.” Harry told them. “I also want a mango and red berry smoothie, Dobby. Kreacher, lots of raw, red meat please. I don’t want it, but my mates certainly do want it, cook it lightly please, I don’t think I could handle it totally raw. Is that alright with you?”

Nasta nodded against his belly and Max pulled him forward to kiss him. “We can handle a bit of cooked meat, Harry, if you are going to be sick if it’s raw. That would be the bigger problem, you vomiting now could dislodge the placenta and kill the baby.”

Harry swallowed and held a hand over his belly. He had fallen asleep last night with the knowledge that his baby was still thriving in his womb. Then that nightmare had nearly ripped his heart to pieces and he had woken up afraid and hurting.

Dobby popped back into the room first with a huge basket full of fresh fruit and a tall glass full of a dull purplish coloured goo. It reminded Harry very forcefully of the concoction that he had had to drink yesterday, but the smell of mashed mangoes drew him to the glass regardless.

He gulped down the first quarter of the glass before slowing down a bit, before finally putting the glass on the side. He opened the basket and happily dove through the delights of fresh strawberries, blueberries, blackberries and the more exotic papaya, passion fruit and dragon fruit.

Kreacher came just as Harry was devouring a whole kiwi laden down with what looked like a half cooked side of beef. It was much bigger than the poor house elf and Harry automatically reached forward to steady the half a cow.

Max took it from the both of them and conjured four plates and using his claws he cut large chunks of meat from the bones. Harry turned away.

“Thank you both.”

Dobby squealed and popped away. Kreacher said nothing as he left with a loud crack, Harry considered it a win that he hadn’t said anything about Mudbloods, traitors or mentioned Walburga Black.

Harry returned his attention to his mates when Blaise shot up with a gasp and scanned the surrounding area, his eyes resting on him and Harry crawled over to Blaise as he moved towards him so they could hug and start the process of assuring the recently awoken male that the baby was completely fine.

“Ero così preoccupato, Prezioso.” Blaise murmured holding him tightly. “Ti amo, non posso perdere o il neonato.”

“Blaise, I can't understand you love.” Harry whispered.
“He’s saying that he was worried about you, that he loves you and doesn’t want to lose you or the baby.” Nasta translated.

“Does he always revert to Italian when he’s upset?” Max asked curiously.

Harry nodded. “And when he’s angry or scared as well. He seems to lose the language barrier in his panicked mind.”

Blaise held his head gently and pulled Harry into a deep, toe-curling kiss and sat on the bed stroking his hair, down his neck, all the way down and over his bump.

Harry lay against him and let him, also allowing Max to pop a blueberry or a grape into his mouth every so often. Nasta was the only one not eating and Max seemed to have come to a realisation as he tore into another cube of fresh meat. He didn’t look too happy about his sudden epiphany either.

“What is it?” Harry asked looking between the two of them worriedly.

“Nothing, love.” Max told him gently, passing him another handful of blueberries.

Harry looked at them both suspiciously through narrowed eyes, something was going on between them and he was going to find out what it was.

They were all distracted though when Draco started making deep noises and moving around in distress. Harry crawled over to him and lay down in his arms as he started twitching. Silver eyes snapped open and, with a gasp like a diver resurfacing from the water, Draco’s arms wrapped around him tight.

“It was just a nightmare, Draco. It wasn’t real. The baby and I are fine and Max, Nasta and Blaise are fine.” Harry soothed lovingly, petting Draco’s silky blond hair.

Draco heaved in another breath before slipping down the bed to nose at his stomach. Harry pulled his shirt out of the way so that Draco could have skin to skin contact with the baby bump and he let his blond mate do as he pleased.

When Draco had finished licking and sniffing, Nasta handed a plate full of meat to the blond and watched him eat a few pieces before he finally started eating himself. Harry wondered what the significance of it was as Draco and Blaise didn’t seem to notice or care, but Max was looking even more disgruntled.

Harry didn’t ask. Maybe their dominance instincts were awakening and they would have to have their dominance fight soon. He hoped that he wasn’t there to see it. Nasta beating Draco to a pulp yesterday had been about all he could stand. He loved all of them and the very last thing that he wanted to see was them fighting and hurting each other.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X
Marianna Lychorinda sighed as her body prepared itself to go onto heat. She had wanted to go and visit her son, Blaise, at his school for a while now, but she was very busy at the moment and her newest Husband, Josiah Lychorinda, was not too happy with the news that he would have to take six days off from work because she was going on heat.

Humans just didn’t understand Drackens; it was what Marianna had ended up killing most of them over, especially if they dared to lay a finger on her precious child. Only one of her previous Husbands had ever been stupid and suicidal enough to hit her darling Blaise and he had died a horrible, painful death. He had begged for days for her to kill him, but she had been so angry and seeing the handprint on her four year old son’s face had kept the anger and rage raw and growing.

She didn’t regret killing Pasqual, but she did regret torturing him as she had. At the time instinct and rage had taken away her inhibitions, had stripped all rationality from her mind. Now, years later, she looked back upon Pasqual with regret, sorrow and shame. He had needed to die for smacking her baby, but he needn’t have died so painfully, nor so slowly. She should have just snapped his neck and been done with him, but at the time such a thought would never have passed through her mind, it would have been too easy a death for one who had touched her son.

She smiled fondly as she thought of her son, her one and only child. The only child that she would ever have now that she had taken to sleeping with humans after her beloved mate, Maximiliano Enzo Zabini had died. She had killed him whilst pregnant with their first child. It had been a terrible time for the both of them.

Her instincts had shrouded her normally quick and sharp mind, she didn’t need Maximiliano to help her with her pregnancy, she could do it all herself. Her child didn’t need anyone other than her to look after it. They had shouted at each other, she had thrown things at Maximiliano and he had showed such amazing strength and patience with her. Most dominants in that situation would have punished their mate regardless of pregnancy; it just wouldn’t have been tolerated. The behaviour of the mate would have driven all thoughts of the pregnancy from the dominant’s mind.

Maximiliano had taken everything she had thrown at him, all of her harsh words and her takeover of his bed and bedroom, including the en suite bathroom. He hadn’t been allowed near her and she had gone through her pregnancy alone.

Then one day, when she was five months pregnant, Maximiliano had had enough, his patience had come to an end and he had barged into the bedroom and he had tried to force her to submit to him. Tears came to Marianna’s eyes as she remembered perfectly how she had fought back, how she had fought him whilst protecting their growing child. She had wrapped her fingers around his neck and had snapped his spine in two. He had died before he knew what she was doing, he had died before he hit the ground, he had died before she could reconsider her actions, died before she could tell him how much she loved him, died before she could do anything to take it all back.

Blaise had been born only three weeks later, her early labour being offset by the death of her mate. He looked so much like Maximiliano. She had wanted to name him after his Father, but she couldn’t bear to call him Maximiliano, not when the memories were too raw and painful, the rage that her baby brought up in her would have overflowed if he had had the same name. How dare he look so much like her dead mate!

She couldn’t bear to name him at all; Blaise had spent the first month of his life nameless until she had finally found the courage to name him Blaise Mariano Zabini. Blaise because it was the name that Maximiliano had wanted for their first child, whether boy or girl and Mariano after herself, there had been no doubt in her mind that his last name would be Zabini.

She loved her son so dearly, her only living link to her mate Maximiliano. She would give Blaise anything and everything to see him happy, but the one thing she couldn’t give to him was a mate. He had to do that on his own and it frightened her. What if his mate wasn’t pretty enough, wasn’t curvy enough, wasn’t kind enough. What if Blaise got stuck with some submissive slut that had already slept with a human, forever barring her Blaise from being a Father?

Then in October Blaise had sent her a letter, a letter that she had been dreading. He had found a mate. He was so young as well. Normally a submissive went for mates in the eighteen to twenty-five age range, true Blaise was seventeen, but he was only just seventeen, she had sent him a birthday card and four owls worth of shrunken presents on the twelfth of October, the letter she had gotten back had been the one telling her that her baby had a fully bonded mate.

She had thought, had hoped, that he would be out of school before he found a mate. Blaise was too intelligent to drop out of school for a mate.

She needed to pay him and his mate a visit. Ooh, what if they had already conceived? She could already be a Grandmother! Marianna patted her thick, dark brown hair and applied a little lipstick ready for when Josiah joined her in the bedroom. She couldn’t wait to be a Grandmother, but she could have waited a few more years for her son to finish his education first.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------

Harry wasn’t released from the hospital for two days. His mates all had to work or go to classes, but they worked in tandem with each other so that he was never left alone.

Blaise and Draco stayed with him on their free periods, Max came on his lunch break and Nasta took the graveyard shift at the Dragon Reserve so he could be there all day and go to work whilst the other three were sleeping next to him.

When he was finally released Harry felt like sighing in relief. He hated the hospital wing, nothing against Madam Pomfrey, but he really did hate Healers and all hospitals. It was likely the smell but then Max smelt of the disinfectant he used before he handled any ingredient when making potions and that smell didn’t bother him at all.

Draco carried him from the hospital wing and the others walked as if they were the royal guard. It annoyed Harry, but he would put up with anything to keep his baby safe, though he did suggest that they not be so obvious about what they were doing. They ignored him.

Draco sat on the settee in their living room and he held Harry on his lap as the other three scouted the room for ‘dangers’. Harry sat still and rolled his eyes and tutted.

Once the rooms were clear of dangers Harry was allowed to do as he pleased, as long as it didn’t involve leave the room that his dominants were in that was. He hoped that this behaviour didn’t last until the end of his pregnancy because he could quite easily see himself ripping his mates’ legs from their knee joints so that they couldn’t follow him everywhere.

At dinner time, Harry allowed Max to carry him down to the Great Hall. The entire student body knew that he had been in the hospital wing for the past three days because of problems with his baby and as all five of them walked into the Great Hall and sat at the Slytherin table, Harry was accosted by Lavender, Parvati, Padma and Ginny almost immediately after he’d sat himself down.

“Harry, are you alright?” Ginny asked.

“How’s your baby? Is the baby alright?”

“Did you have a miscarriage?”

“Girls!” Harry cried out. “Calm down. I’m fine, the baby is fine. There isn’t anything to worry about any more.”

Draco growled and the blond’s hand clamped around his thigh, Harry looked to Draco to reprimand him or ask what the hell he had done wrong when he saw all of his mates were growling and looking in the same direction.

Harry looked the same way, behind Ginny and Lavender was Hermione. Her head was down and she didn’t look at him as she timidly handed him an envelope and a small wrapped box that was flat, about the size of large book.

“What is this?” Harry asked as he opened the envelope. Inside was a get well soon card. His heart almost stopped.

Harry opened the wrapped present and inside, wrapped in tissue paper, was a beautiful hand knitted cosy-toes. It was white and hand embroidered with silver stitching that made up a beautiful vine and leaf design. There was lace carefully stitched onto the front to make a pocket for the baby’s hands and it was all fleece lined on the inside to keep the baby warm.

“I…I…this is amazing, Hermione.” Harry managed to stutter out. “Did you make it yourself? It’s beautiful, thank you.”

“Does this mean that you’ve finally come to your senses?” Ginny asked her in a harsh tone.

“I think it means that Hermione has gotten better at knitting.” Harry put in trying to lighten the mood.
Hermione gave a wry smile and shuffled a bit on her feet.

“I’ve been knitting that since I first heard that you were pregnant.” She told him softly.

“You’ve really put a lot of effort into this, Hermione, I love it and I’m sure the baby will as well.”

“I didn’t know if I should give it to you or not. Not after the rumours.”

“The baby is fine. It was touch and go for a day or so, but Madam Pomfrey and Professor Snape finally managed to stabilise the baby.”

“What happened?” Parvati asked.

Harry looked to Ginny and Hermione and sighed. He shook his head and looked over to the end of the Gryffindor table when Ron was watching them all with a red face and a clenched fist. Obviously his bout of helping in the hospital wing had been about all his mentality could handle.

“What did he do?” Ginny asked through gritted teeth having looked to where Harry was and seeing her brother.

Harry had decided he wasn’t going to say anything, he didn’t want his mates getting upset again, but they had other ideas.

“He decided that it would be a good idea to punch Harry in the stomach when he was already in the hospital wing because of stomach cramps.” Blaise bit out forcefully. “Harry almost lost the baby twice because of that fool!”

Ginny went a red so spectacular that she put her robes and her hair to shame.

“I can’t believe that he would do such a thing!” She hissed. “Just wait until Mum finds out!”

Ginny stomped off, presumably towards the Owlery to send a letter to Mrs Weasley. If he hadn’t of been so shocked he would have told her not to. Dumbledore had already sent a letter of warning to Mrs Weasley, this would be Ron’s second warning, if a student got a third, they were expelled.

There was no doubt in his mind though that if he had fully miscarried the baby then Ron’s wand would have been snapped right then and there, followed by his neck by his mates and possibly by himself. No one hurt his baby, much less killed them and get away with it.

“But…but you’re alright now?” Hermione asked hesitantly.

“Yes, just a few lingering bruises, the baby is completely fine. We’re all going to take a week or so off now to just relax and to let the baby reaffirm its place in my womb. I’ve got all of my homework assignments for the next week, so don’t worry about my school work.”

Hermione closed her mouth with a small click and she smiled a bit sheepishly.

“I’ll just go now. I just wanted to give you that and to make sure that the baby was alright. I can’t understand why Ron would hurt an innocent baby, but I’ll have a talk with him. We both know he has a temper.”

Harry nodded but said nothing else. It was true. Ron did have a temper, they both did which was why it had been a bad idea to put them in the hospital wing together and then leave them alone. Not that it was Madam Pomfrey’s fault, she hadn’t really understood how bad things had gotten, how much Ron and Harry had grown to dislike each other when last year they had been the bestest of friends.

Harry laid his face on the cosy toes and nuzzled it a bit. It was super soft and he could just imagine carrying his baby around in it from place to place. He smiled; he had found another item to bring with him into the nest when he went into labour.
A/N: This chapter was originally called Raging Inferno, but after the week I’ve had and the damn trouble it’s given me, I changed it. I’ve been so exhausted you’re lucky to get this at all.

Last Time

Chapter Twenty–Seven – Death’s Door

Harry grinned as he watched Max and Nasta act like little children. The thirty-one year old and the thirty-seven year old were wrestling each other around the living room floor like toddlers, but there was a reason in the childish madness.

They hadn’t had their dominance fight and Harry could feel the first touches of heat come upon him. Had he not taken the potion his heat would have come to him in the afternoon, which differed from all of his other heats which had taken place some when in the middle of the night.

Max and Nasta were rolling around the floor wrestling with one another to try and bring out their Drackens to fight for the top spot of the family. They had told Harry to go into the bedroom so he didn’t have to watch, but how the hell could he give up watching two grown, supposedly mature men, rolling around the floor with each other?

He chuckled again as Nasta pinned Max to the carpet and smirked down at the larger man gloatingly. Max brought a knee up to Nasta’s stomach and winded him, rolling until he was on top and was smirking gloatingly down at the older man.

Harry chuckled and moved Blaise’s hand more firmly over the baby bump which they were all delighted to see had grown. A growing bump meant a growing baby; a growing baby was an alive baby.

Draco was at their feet with his homework spread out on the table, he chuckled every now and then at a particularly rough move, but other than that his entire focus was on his homework and massaging Harry’s leg, which was draped over his shoulder.

“I don’t think it’s working.” Harry told them as Max came close to having his head cracked open on the corner of the coffee table.

“It should!” Max puffed as he gripped Nasta’s arm and tried to dislocate it.

“Any form of violence should be taken as a challenge.” Blaise told him.

“Maybe you’re both top dominant.” Harry hedged carefully.

“No such thing!” Max told him, panting as he got a good punch into Nasta’s gut.

“A single family cannot have more than one top dominant; it would ruin the balance of the family and fights would be an almost daily occurrence.” Nasta stated calmly as if he wasn’t rolling around on the floor. “The top dominant has the last say in every family related decision. It stops fights and squabbles among the other dominants.”

“Well you’re out of time; I can feel the heat coming on. If this isn’t resolved soon, then it will be too late. What will happen then?”

“No idea.” Max told him as he took his heavy work boot to Nasta’s shin.

Nasta growled and took a fistful of Max’s thick brown hair and yanked on it.

“You fight like girls.” Draco snorted. “At least my fight was bloody and violent; yours looks staged, like a cover picture for a dirty magazine.”

Harry giggled and rubbed his foot along Draco’s defined abdominal muscles.
“The instinct to fight just isn’t coming!” Max sighed in frustration.

“Maybe it would if you try to actually have sex with each other.” Harry put in slyly. “One of you has to top, maybe you’ll find out that way.”

“You dirty little boy; you just want to have a free show.”

Harry let out a fully belly laugh and sat grinning at the two men on the floor.

“Well it would work.” Harry told them. “You can’t both fuck the other; one of you is going to have to be the top partner and the other the bottom partner.”

“As skewed as Harry’s logic is and no matter how lascivious his motives are, I believe he is right in a way with what he is saying.” Blaise stated. “One of you would have to dominate the other in order for you to have penetrative sex.”

“I should be the top dominant! I’m bigger.” Max growled as he shoved at Nasta.

“Please! That’s like me saying I’m the oldest so I should be top dominant.” Nasta answered wrapping his arms around Max and flipping him over onto his back.

“Older or not, it would be easier to have sex if I was the top!”

“I’m older so I should have that toy. But I’m bigger so it should be mine!” Blaise whispered bringing a round of laughter from Harry and an amused snort from Draco.

“Maybe you’ve already figured out whose top dominant but don’t realise it.” Draco told them.

The two older Drackens looked at each other and Nasta smirked and Max growled.
“That’s it isn’t it. You already know. So why the hell are you trying to force yourselves to fight?!” Harry demanded a touch of anger coming through in his voice.

“Maximilius won't accept that I am dominant to him without a fight.” Nasta stated with a grin.

“You are not dominant to me!” Max bellowed raising a fist to punch Nasta, who blocked with his forearm and rolled until he was on top of the other man yet again.

“I am dominant to all of you!” Nasta growled back, seemingly only just losing his patience.

“How did this happen?” Harry asked. “When did it happen?”

“In the hospital wing, when we woke up from those bloody nightmares.” Max scowled.

“When we were eating.” Nasta elaborated when Harry looked ready to explode. “We were all hungry, but my Dracken wouldn’t let me eat. A top dominant is not allowed to eat until all those subordinate to him have started eating. I have to provide for all of you, even though it isn’t really needed as you can all hunt for yourselves.”

“But, what moment made your Drackens realise that Nasta was top and Max wasn’t?”

Max gave an elegant, one shouldered shrug that could have meant anything and nothing.

“No idea, I certainly haven’t acted submissive to anyone.” He answered.

“Maybe it’s because you cook, which is typically a female, or in this case, submissive thing to do. Maybe it has nothing to do with how dominant you’re acting, but how submissive you are being by doing something that a hundred years ago would have been considered a submissive’s job.” Blaise put in disarmingly.

“So because Maxie cooks, Nasta’s Dracken saw him as submissive because of long forgotten domestic roles from centuries ago that have absolutely no bearing on current lifestyles or stereotypes?” Harry stated confusedly.

Blaise shrugged and flipped his head to one side that Harry took to mean ‘maybe’.

“Huh. Oh well, that settles that, now we just need Max and Draco to fight it out and then all the violence can stop.” Harry chirped happily, but his face fell when a sudden thought hit him. “Wait, if Nasta’s Dracken sees Max as subordinate because he cooks, won’t Draco’s Dracken do the same?”

“Oh no. No, no, no, I will not be subordinate to two other dominants!” Max hissed. “Not because I actually know how to cook and feed myself!”

“Maybe we should buy you a pink, frilly apron to wear as you cook.” Draco goaded.

“Stop it!” Harry growled. “I won’t have you kicking up a fuss or a fight near the baby, we almost lost this baby once, I won’t risk our baby again. Fine if you are play wrestling on the floor, but if it’s going to be real then you take it outside!”

All of them settled down at the reminder of how close they had come to losing their first baby. Harry placed a loving hand on his bump and rubbed it. He was coming up to three months pregnant, he was now in the second trimester, had he been pregnant as a human, he would only just be reaching the middle of the first trimester. But as his Dracken genes knocked off two months, every trimester only lasted two and a third months instead of three months per trimester.

Harry was moved onto Blaise’s lap as the three oldest of his mates tried to settle on the same settee, a difficult feat as neither Max nor Nasta were small men and Blaise was no stick.

“Why don’t you just enlarge the settee?” Harry asked as Max shifted around to try and fit his large thighs into the small gap that Nasta had left him.

“An item can only be enlarged so far.” Draco told him from the floor. “It has to do with the dimensions of the original size of the item.”

Harry shook his head looking puzzled. “But the bed has been enlarged three times.”

“The first time we enlarged it only a little bit, Harry.” Blaise told him indulgently, stroking his exposed belly where his shirt had ridden up the bump. “Just enough to fit Draco in with us. The second time we needed to enlarge it more as Max is a lot bigger than all of us, but it still wasn’t more than twice the bed’s original size. When Nasta joined us, we enlarged it to its maximum and it is a good thing that that bed was a super king size to begin with or we would never fit all of us inside it, one of us would be sleeping on the floor every night.”

“I was never any good at magical theory.” Harry sighed.

A tap at the window had Draco sighing at the distraction to his homework, he picked up his wand from beside him and gave it a casual, almost elegant flick and the living room window sprang open and admitted the brown feathered, black speckled owl into their rooms. It landed on Max’s arm and he greeted it like an old friend.

“This is Jasmine, she is a childhood friend.” He told them as he stroked her.

“Is she yours?” Harry asked, crawling from Blaise, over Nasta and onto Max’s lap to stroke the soft feathers on Jasmine’s breast.

“Yes, she was a present from my parents when I got into Salem’s Academy of Magic, I have another owl, Esmeralda, she was a graduation present. I sent a letter to my brother in America; I’ve been eagerly awaiting his reply. His Wife is expecting my first Niece.”

“You never said you had a brother.” Harry turned to speak to Max, but his attention was caught by a sharp nip on his finger and he soon went back to cooing and paying attention to Jasmine.

“One brother and three sisters.” Max told him. “Caesar is twenty-nine, Julinda is twenty-seven, Talia is twenty-six and Alayla is twenty-three. I’m the oldest and only me and Caesar are Drackens.”

“Do you only have the one Niece on the way?”

“Yep. Juda is married to a man named Laurel, they don’t have kids yet, I’m not even sure if they’re trying. Laurel is a businessman first and foremost; I don’t think Juda sees him more than twice a month.”

“I couldn’t cope with seeing you for only twice a month.”
“Lucky for you that I’m not a businessman then.” Max told him with a smile.

“I love you too, Maxie.”

“I told you only my granddad calls me that.”

“Your grandparents are still alive?” Draco asked interestedly.

“Yours aren’t?”

“No. On my Father’s side, my grandfather Abraxas died from Dragon Pox before I was born. My grandmother Amorette died when I was five. My grandfather on my Mother’s side, Cygnus Black died the year before I was born. Grandmother Druella died when I was seven.”

“I have never met my paternal grandparents.” Blaise told them quietly. “They blamed me and my Mother for my Father’s death, they still do in fact. They refuse to have anything to do with me. I asked to see them when I was eight and they refused to even come and meet me to see what I looked like. I look a lot like my Father according to my Mother. I wrote them letters when I learned how to write, but they came back unopened. Their logic was that if I had never been conceived then my Father would still be alive.”

“So they blamed you? An innocent child!” Max asked outraged.

“Apparently so.” Blaise sniffed indifferently, if it bothered him that he had never met his Father’s side of the family, then it didn’t show, but still Nasta threw an arm around him and cuddled him in close.

Blaise fought for a moment until he realised that it was futile to fight against Nasta’s strength and muscle and he relaxed against him instead.

“I think everyone knows what happened to my family.” Harry said sadly. “I don’t know what happened to my paternal grandparents but I know from the potion I used to find out where my Dracken inheritance came from that my grandmother Dorea died in nineteen-seventy-seven, three years before I was born. If my maternal grandparents are still alive, then I’ve never met them and I didn’t even know what their names were before that potion.”
“Don’t you have Muggle relatives?” Max asked.

“Yeah, my aunt Petunia was my Mum’s sister, her Husband Vernon and my cousin Dudley.” Harry breathed in deeply to quell feelings of panic and quickly changed the subject. “What about your family, Nas?”

“My Mother died when I was born, she died giving birth to me. My Father brought me and my older brother, Sanex up. We had a sister, Angharad but she died from a spell gone wrong when she was twenty. She’d be forty now if she had lived.”

“You told me before that your Dad never let you drink coffee or carbonated drinks.” Harry said with a smile.

Nasta looked at him tenderly and kissed him.

“I can’t believe you remember that.” He answered with a small shake of his head. “It’s true. My Dad always told us that if we wanted to drink something to the equivalent of acid then he would make it easier for us and just give us a bottle of bleach and a straw. He was very… protective after Mum died. He wouldn’t let us eat anything unhealthy, drink anything unhealthy, he made sure that we did at least an hour of exercise a day, pushed us at everything we did, encouraged us to be our best and our fittest.”

“He didn’t want his children to die.” Harry put in softly, touching Nasta’s cheek.

“No he didn’t. He’s a Dracken as well, family means everything to him. When Mum died giving birth to me, he could have so easily turned on me, blamed me for her death, his own submissive mate, but he did no such thing. Angharad told me that he had practically ignored Mum’s dead body as he rushed to me first, cleaning me off and wrapping me up.”

“He knew that his Wife was already dead.” Max said gently. “He didn’t want the son that she had died for leaving with her.”

Nasta shook his head and scrubbed his hands roughly over his face. “I’m the only one of my siblings who is a Dracken, Mum and Dad should have had more than three children, plenty more, but when Mum died, Dad refused to take another mate, even though the Counsel have offered numerous times to let him go back to the submissive meetings. He’s always refused.”
“I thought all dominants had to go.” Harry stated confusedly.

“After a dominant has gotten a mate, even if that mate dies, we lose the urge to go to submissive meetings.” Max told him. “If the dominant wants another mate, they can petition the Counsel to be let back in on the submissive meetings or the Counsel can ask if the dominant wants to be let back in on the meetings.”

“I wouldn’t want another mate.” Harry said sadly. “If all of you died, I would never take another mate.”

“With submissives it’s different.” Nasta stated his tone conveying his disgust. “You might be forced to take another dominant as you are a submissive and there are too few to how many dominants there are.”

“I wouldn’t want one; I will not be forced to live my life with a man I feel nothing for.” Harry stated stubbornly.

“It’s a moot point as none of us are going to die.” Blaise told them surely.

“My Dad never wanted another mate either after Mum died. He told the Counsel to shove their meetings where the sun doesn’t shine and carried on raising me and my siblings.”

“Why does the Counsel petition some dominants, not all of them?” Harry asked.

“My Dad had three young children, one of which was a newborn Dracken. They were...concerned that a dominant male alone could not raise three babies and that he needed a submissive’s help, as if any sixteen year old would have accepted a twenty-six year old mate with three kids.”

“I might have if he was a kind and considerate mate.” Harry told him.

Nasta let out a startled laugh and pulled Harry into a kiss.
“Am I going to have to worry about introducing you to my Father this summer?” He asked teasingly.

“Oh no, I’d much rather have his youngest son.” Harry grinned. “Am I going to be in any trouble with him for stealing his youngest son from his overprotective hands?”

“No. My Dad will love you. He’s been…distressed lately because I hadn’t found a mate at thirty-seven.”

“He thought that it was too late for you to be happily mated.”

“He believes that if a dominant hasn’t been chosen by a mate by at least thirty then they’ll be stuck with unworthy mates, like Miette Solange.”

“I keep hearing that name.” Harry said with a smile looking to Blaise.

“You were old enough to go to the Solange meeting in Toulouse?” Max asked.

“Yes, it was my first and only meeting before Harry, I didn’t stay for long. I left just after she announced that her ideal mate would be forced onto his hands and knees to boost her onto her horse so that she could go riding every Wednesday and Saturday afternoons.”

“I left before that, when she said that her mate was expected to wake up before her every day and serve her breakfast in bed.” Nasta growled. “I barely know how to cook and I will not be treated like a servant.”

“I left after that, breakfast in bed I could handle, but when she said that she would expect her dominant mate to be at her beck and call at every hour of the day. She expected us to give up our jobs.” Max shook his head. “I love my job too much to ever give it up completely.”

“How were you going to support her then?” Draco asked.

“Miette comes from old money, her family is filthy rich, the entire front garden path was made from gold nuggets.”
“She got what she deserved. A fifty-eight year old dominant and no children.” Blaise stated.

“It doesn’t seem common for a submissive to have more than one mate, why does Harry have four?” Draco asked.

“Because he is so powerful.” Nasta told the blond. “Only powerful submissives need more than two mates. That Harry need’s four is a testament to his power.”

“I am not powerful!” Harry sulked.

Max chuckled at him and kissed his pout away. “You are.” He said lovingly. “You’re just too modest to see it.”

“Why am I the one to get four mates? Not that I don’t love each and every one of you, but it’s not you lot that are going to be fucked raw in a few days’ time.”

“I might be.” Blaise told him casually. Harry turned to him questioningly. “I am the lowest dominant of the family group, just above you in the…’hierarchy’ for lack of a better word. I am going to be fucked just as much as you are.”

Harry let out a soft giggle, before covering his mouth as if he had uttered a foul swear word. He removed his hand, opened his mouth and giggled again. He shook his head and grinned.

“I can’t wait to see that.” He managed to say through his large smile. “This is payback for the first two heats that I’ve barely survived thanks to your prowess.”

Blaise grinned back at him and bopped him on the head gently. Harry turned back to Jasmine when she squawked and began petting her again.

“Didn’t you have urgent news on your Niece?” Harry told Max, who blinked and then smiled, tearing open the letter and reading quickly.
“Amelle, Caesar’s Wife is about ready to give birth.” Max told them. “Before I mated I was going to go and stay with my brother, my entire family is going to be there for the birth, but I can’t leave now, I don’t want to.” He added when Harry opened his mouth.

“She is going to be your first Niece.” Harry started angrily. “She…”

“She will still be there after your heat and after our baby is born.” Max stated firmly. “I won’t leave you.”

“We can visit in the summer holidays.” Harry offered.

“At which point you will be five, six months pregnant.” Max deadpanned. “You won’t be up to travelling longer than it takes to get from the bed to the bathroom.”

“I’m not lazy!”

“You will be when you are heavily pregnant.” Nasta soothed gently. “The baby will be siphoning off nearly all of your energy as it grows impossibly bigger and develops vastly quicker in a very short space of time. If you try to push yourself, you may collapse and lose the baby. I can tell you that it is a lot harder losing a baby when you are a month from giving birth than when you are only a month pregnant.”

Harry deflated and let all of his breath out. “I wouldn’t hold it against you if you wanted to go and see your Niece, Max, even if it was only for a day or two. I’m sure Nasta, Draco and Blaise can cope with looking after me for a few days. I’m not that hard to handle.”

Max still looked unsure so Harry kissed him and kept his hands on the back of his neck, playing with the thick, brown hair.

“What if I made a promise to stay in bed and not move a muscle until you came back?”

“Like any one of us would believe that.” Draco told him with a roll of his eyes. “Honestly Harry, you can’t stay in bed when you’re ill or injured, how are you going to manage it when you’re neither.”
Harry huffed and pouted, turning away from Draco and looking back up at Max.

“I don’t want to keep you from your family.”

“You are part of my family now and you carry my baby, Amelle carries my brother’s. I know where my loyalties lie and I know where I want to stay.”

Harry let it drop, but he made a mental note to pick it up when he was alone with Max and didn’t have the others to put in ‘helpful’ comments.

Harry threw another cushion at Blaise and screamed. His heat had hit him and he was in agony. He couldn’t keep still; he kept writhing and rolling on the floor in front of the fireplace. He called to his mates who were standing around him all of them utterly distraught at his tears.

A lick of fire curled up his spine and Harry screamed again, arching from the floor, writhing in utmost anguish feeling as if his skin was melting from his bones. How the hell did this help the baby any more than having sex?!

“Please try and stay still.” Max begged. Harry threw a cushion at him this time.

Harry had thought that his mates would go and have sex without him, but they hadn’t. They were all hard and ready for sex and they were all suffering as an hour passed and their erections weren’t relieved.

Harry was torn; on the one hand he didn’t want his mates to suffer, on the other hand he didn’t want to be the only one to have to suffer for something that hadn’t been his fault. He didn’t want to be left alone to deal with this pain as his mates went and fucked each other.

He screamed as fire tore through his belly, his own erection was as solid as rock, he had tried to relieve himself, but it didn’t work, the fire only got hotter the more he stroked and he had soon let go, still as hard as a rock and unrelieved.

“Please! Please!” He begged hoping one of them would help him.

None of them did. They couldn’t even touch him to sooth him as it made the flames within him sear his skin. He had to survive three days of this, perhaps more if the baby hadn’t stabilised enough at the end of those three days.

A sweet scent filled his nose and Harry turned his head towards it, his fangs bared as he saw Nasta had dug his claws into his forearm. His oldest, most dominant mate came towards him and knelt by his head, taking care of Harry’s wings spread out on the carpet and without touching him, he offered him the bleeding arm.

Harry latched onto it and his lips felt like they would blister where they touched Nasta’s arm, but the blood was cool going down his throat and into his stomach as he swallowed convulsively.

Snape had told them when he had delivered the potion that they would have to feed Harry blood as where Harry could go ten days without eating on his heat, the baby certainly couldn’t. However getting blood, sweat and semen for sustenance during a heat period was incredibly easy, but when he was stuck in this flaming inferno, not fully able to go onto heat and not able to leave it either, the last thing that he wanted was blood, sweat or semen. He wanted ice, lots and lots of ice.

Nasta tugged on his hair and Harry let go of his arm to hiss, fully intending to go back to his meal, but Nasta had already moved his arm away and the coolness of the blood in his stomach heated up until it felt like lava.

“Please! Help me, please! I can’t take it anymore.” He sobbed.

The four men exchanged sad glances; it broke their hearts to see Harry this way. He was naked and flushed a delicate pink, but the sight didn’t arouse them at all, not when Harry was crying his heart out, wailing, screaming and sobbing at them to make it stop.

“Please Harry, it’ll be over soon.” Draco whispered, looking devastated, his usually pale face had gone a greyish colour.

“How long...long has it been?” Harry panted out, wiping imaginary sweat from his forehead.

Draco grimaced. “An hour and a half.”

Harry wailed sharply and rolled onto his side, his back to them, crying incessantly as the raging fire grew. He couldn’t take much more of this.

Harry hadn’t slept for three days. Nasta hadn’t either, as the top dominant he had remained by Harry’s side, though never touching him, at all times.
Max, Draco and Blaise got a couple of hours sleep every now and then so that when the actual heat started they wouldn’t be too tired to perform, thus causing Harry more agony in the long run.

Harry had a very, very thin blanket covering his lower body as Snape cautiously lowered himself next to him amid growls and snarls from the other four dominants, who did not like Snape being so close to their pregnant mate, their pregnant mate who was on a heat period no less.

Snape didn’t speak, he quickly cast spell after spell, careful not to touch any part of Harry’s body and he nodded tightly, his body aching with tension as he cast a final spell.

“The baby has stabilised enough.” He announced carefully, knowing that there was a possibility that the five feral Drackens might not even be able to understand what he was saying. “There is no need for you to take any more potion, as soon as this dose wears off you’ll be fine to follow your instincts.”

“Go away now.” Max growled harshly, threateningly. Showing no acknowledgement whatsoever that he had heard or understood a word that Severus had said.

All of their minds had been lost to their feral Drackens during the last three days and thought didn’t come easy to them anymore. All they saw was a widowed dominant near their pregnant mate and his presence would no longer be tolerated.

Snape eased up slowly and he backed away. He knew that if he had so much as brushed Potter, then he’d be dead. If Potter had so much as gasped or made a noise of distress when he was so close, he would have been held responsible and torn to pieces.

“Remember to keep feeding, Potter.” Snape commented, not entirely sure if the Drackens could hear or understand him, but he took Maximilius’ vocal threat as a sign that at least one of them wasn’t too far gone to understand him, before backing out of the portrait door, Blaise and Draco stalking him and hissing at him all the way. Severus slammed the portrait door shut tightly, trapping the feral Drackens inside their rooms and he cast a small ward, to prevent them from leaving for the next several hours…they’d lose interest in trying to reach him after a minute or two, but just in case he cast a relatively strong ward. He was grateful that the baby had stabilised so that he didn’t have to go back in another three days to see to Potter again, after what he’d seen today, he wasn’t entirely sure that he wouldn’t have been attacked as soon as he showed up to check on Potter and his baby. Now he could just leave them all to get on with it.

“How long until it wears off?” Harry slurred weakly, too tired to even move.

“How long until it wears off?” Nasta informed him quietly, his eyes pinned to the portrait door in case the threat came back.
“I feel so drained.”

“Do you want some more blood?” Blaise asked his voice no longer silk like and smooth, but rough and distorted.

“Just a bit, but I can't sit up to take it.”

It was Draco’s turn to open a vein for him and he did so gladly, holding his bleeding arm over Harry’s mouth, making sure not to touch any of the bare skin, letting his blood flow freely into Harry’s mouth.

Harry swallowed, letting the excess drip onto his face before he opened his mouth for another mouthful, he swallowed that and then turned away, indicating that he didn’t want any more. The blood cooled him for all of three seconds and gave him a small energy boost. He couldn’t wait until his bloody heat actually started.

Nasta used the thin blanket that had been covering his dignity in front of Snape to wipe the blood from his chin and cheeks, being obsessively careful not to touch him skin to skin.

“It will all be over soon.” He soothed. “You won't have to have another heat now until after the baby is born.”

“I’m dying!” Harry wailed as another burst of heat clenched his body and made him twist in agony, using energy that he didn’t have.

All of his mates were around him then hushing and soothing him and Harry didn’t even have the energy to cry anymore. The fire had eaten away all of his tears, he had none left to cry with, instead he dry sobbed.

Two hours passed like years. His mind was barely clinging to sanity at the end and he didn’t care how much more pain it brought him, he gave into his desires and clung to his mates. He buried his face into their skin, soaked in their scents, ignoring the pain and blisters he could feel on his skin but couldn’t see.

He felt red raw, surely his skin couldn’t have survived such heat? But his skin was perfect, just a little pink flushed, his pale body scales highlighted by an inner light and red-rimmed from the heat, he shook his head in despair, his skin shouldn’t just be pink! Heat like he was experiencing did not just pink up the skin! It melted it, it burned, blistered, seared, why was his body betraying his mind?!

“Harry? Maybe it would be better not to touch us.” Max said softly or as softly as he could when it sounded like his throat was full of razor blades.
Harry wailed and clenched his arms around the body that he was holding, he couldn’t even recognise them through touch anymore, his brain was boiling in his head. He was going to die.

“You are causing yourself more pain.” Nasta growled, as someone tried to pry his arms away.

“If I’m going to die then I’ll die holding my mates!” Harry sobbed.

“You aren’t going to die, the potion will wear off soon, just twenty more minutes and then just seven days until you come off of your heat period.”

Those hands succeeded in pulling Harry free and he cried. There had been no doubt in him that his mates would have gotten him free, they were too strong and he was weak, so weak, he couldn’t even sit up on his own anymore.

“Please!” He begged.

Someone sighed roughly, sadly. “How long?” The same voice growled.

“Sixteen minutes, give or take a minute.” Another voice answered. Harry couldn’t make sense of anything now, he could hear the words, but he couldn’t understand them.

“Perhaps it would help to prepare him now, when we are not totally lost in the heat haze to do so. It would help prevent his skin from splitting on initial entry. The scent of blood always makes us treat him rougher.”

“Won’t it cause him more pain? You’ll be touching him.”

“It’ll hurt to touch him regardless; the only difference is that he can be distracted with sex.”

“You are hoping to distract him with it now.”
“It may work.”

Harry lay still and breathed deeply, heavily as he let the conversation float over him, not taking in anything other than the voices of his mates.

A touch on his naked body caused him to wail as the fire within him shot to the place where his mate was touching, charring his skin and surely scorching his mate as well. The hand glided down his sweat soaked skin and Harry screamed as it moved to his more sensitive places, the fire following in its wake.

A touch at one of his most sensitive places brought a gasp to his throat, which never left his mouth as he choked on it. A finger pressed into him delicately and Harry couldn’t breathe, it pushed all of the way in and it was slick and cool. He pressed back onto it and tried to breathe past the obstruction in his throat. That finger touched deeply within him and the coolness spread. He found a burst of energy and used his legs to wrap around the upper body of the one touching him, locking his knees just under his mate’s armpits.

“That’s it, Harry. Forget about the pain.”

“Please!” He begged a touch of breathlessness to his voice as that finger touched his prostate.

Two fingers carefully moved to stretch his muscles, leaving coolness behind, but everywhere else was burning pain. His cock especially was throbbing with its own level of heat that was unmatched by any other part of his body.

“Not long, Harry, just seven more minutes.” Someone soothed.

Harry turned his head to the side and almost screamed out loud as he saw Draco and Blaise had given into their desires as his sexual heat grew closer.

Draco had Blaise pinned to the floor on his stomach, both arms twisted behind his back and held strongly as Draco’s legs covered Blaise’s to keep them from moving. It looked rough and they were both snarling and snapping at each other, Draco’s cheek had a cut on it and Blaise’s shoulder was bleeding thickly, like Draco had bitten down on it repeatedly. It made him glad that he wasn’t a dominant, sex that rough just wasn’t appealing to him, yet he couldn’t take his eyes off of them as Draco moved impossibly faster within Blaise and roared.

A jab against his prostate forced his eyes closed as he let out a small mewl, he opened them again to see Draco pulling out of Blaise and collapsing next to the unmoving brunet. Harry was worried for a fraction of a second before Blaise rolled onto Draco and snuggled up.

Harry swore that if they were too tired to fuck him because they had fucked each other first he would carve them up with his claws. It was fine if they were practising, but with his heat imminent, he wanted them fully able to fuck him before they became too tired.

“Less than a minute, Nas. Have you finished?”

A grunt from low down his body had Harry looking down to see Nasta lying on his stomach, his black and yellowish gold scaled wings canted backwards to keep them out of the way whilst he was happily playing with his sensitive bits, Harry had barely noticed as he had watched Draco and Blaise, he knew that that would change the moment that his full heat hit him, he wouldn’t be able to think of anything else but the mate who was pleasuring him, but he was glad that he had gotten to see at least two of his dominants’ fucking, when he went on his full heat, he wouldn’t remember seeing anything else, he would only be able to remember the feel of his mates touching him, he’d only remember seeing them, everything else would be a red tinted haze.

Harry felt the exact moment when the potion blocking his pheromones wore off, Nasta moved so quickly, grabbing his shoulders and surging inside of him in one smooth movement. He would be eternally grateful for the preparation.

His spine bowed forwards and his neck snapped back, his hands shot out to clutch at Nasta’s shoulders as Nasta’s hands slid to support his upper back. Nasta had none of the finesse that he had used before, the heat and the lust filled cloud had turned him raw and passionate.

Harry was lifted onto Nasta’s lap forcing him deeper, a set of lips kissed up and down his spine and Harry realised that Max was behind him. Too many hands and mouths were on him, he quivered and got out a half gasp as he was stroked and caressed by his lovers.

Another cock pressing into him forced a small whimper from his throat, but it was swallowed by a pair of lips he recognised as Draco’s. Max sucked on his neck as his stretched entrance was traced and soothed with a tongue that could have only belonged to Blaise.

There were too many hands touching him, too many mouths kissing and licking him, too many teeth nipping and biting at him, he screamed and clenched around Nasta and Max as he orgasmed, Nasta roared with him, a warm gush of fluid filled his insides. Nasta pulled out and fell back, leaving Max to push Harry onto his stomach and thrust inside him as he pleased.

Harry ended up with his face in Nasta’s groin and he happily started licking him. It was the first time that he had ever given a blow job that he remembered. His mates didn’t push him to do anything and they didn’t seem to want to ask for it either. He had no idea if he was doing it right, but he didn’t care, he was enjoying tasting his oldest mate.

Nasta started grunting and getting hard under his tongue, though if it was from what Harry was doing or because the heat was affecting him, Harry had no way of knowing.

He moaned as Max released inside of him, but before Harry could even contemplate taking a small rest to get his breath back, the six foot eight inch man had been replaced by Blaise. Nasta sat up and made a vicious grab for Draco, who snarled and crawled under and out of Harry’s kneeling body and started pinching his nipples, keeping Harry in between him and Nasta, who in his lust fogged state, didn’t bother chasing Draco, but instead dived on Max and man handled the huge man to lie on his back, it did not look like an easy feat.

Harry’s attention was caught by Draco, who lay on his stomach and crawled under his body again, taking his cock into his mouth and swallowing around it. Harry screamed. Blaise squeezed his hips, leaving bruises and he moved faster, Draco increased his pace and sucked harder, Harry’s entire body clenched and he let out a silent scream as he orgasmed down Draco’s throat.

Blaise was pulled off of him by Nasta, who seemed to have made it his life mission to fuck all of them into oblivion in the shortest space of time possible. Draco rolled around his body and pressed into him roughly, Max appeared a moment later to take Draco’s mouth into a bruising kiss, hunching that huge body over Draco’s back.

Draco pulled out of him with a displeased hiss; Max had tried to guide himself into Draco, who apparently wasn’t going to take the others lying down.

Max snarled and went crawling after Draco, leaving Harry alone on the floor, burning with pain and feeling abandoned and unsatisfied. The red haze slipped from his eyes as he wasn’t touched, he could see the living room again, could see all four of his mates, but the pain built up so high that he thought that he would pass out and die.

He let out a displeased whine, which grew to a distress call filled with his pain. It was answered by a furious roar from Nasta, who was glaring at Max and Draco. He moved away from a sated Blaise and pulled Harry into a hug; a moment later he had pushed himself into Harry and began kissing him.

Draco had either retained his human mind, or he was so terrified of bottoming to Nasta and Max that he was not going to let them near him. He had once again scuttled away from Max and lay down in front of Harry, his bottom firmly to the floor, as he pushed into Harry alongside Nasta.

Max hissed deeply and went to lay kisses over Nasta’s back, getting a cuff around the head when he went too low for Nasta’s liking. Max was so hard that he was solid, his cock a painful looking red that was leaking over the carpet, he moaned partly in pain as he tugged on himself.

Harry sat up, ignoring the groans that came from Draco and Nasta as they were forced to move with him, Harry tugged Max closer and took him into his mouth deeply, pulling back immediately as he gagged and was almost sick, it wasn’t the taste which had bothered him, even though it was a bit unpleasant, Max was too long and thick to take too far into his mouth without him gagging.

He tried again more carefully, taking in a bit at a time, staying near the reddish head and using a lot of tongue instead of trying to kill himself with it. Max didn’t seem to mind; in fact he hunched over Harry’s head and was letting out soft sighs and little moans of pleasure.

Blaise pulled himself over from where he had been lying sprawled on the floor, he was hard again and he draped himself around Draco’s neck, not trying to penetrate the blond, but trying to add to the pleasure of the heat.

Max released first and Harry pulled away coughing as his mouth was flooded with bitter tasting cum. He swallowed a bit, but the rest dribbled over his chin and was gently wiped away by Max, who used a cushion from the settee to clean him.

Draco followed with a screech and he fell backwards, being caught by Blaise who carefully lowered him to the floor and began sucking one of the blond’s pale nipples.

Harry was left with Nasta, who was now in his element. After getting off the first couple of orgasms, Nasta had gained steel control over his body and was very happily waiting until Harry released to do the same.
Harry could feel the pressure building inside of him, could feel the proverbial coil tightening with every hard, fast thrust inside of him, every stroke to his over sensitised body, every kiss to his bruised lips. His orgasm hit him with the force of a charging bull, he screamed his release to the ceiling, his back and neck arched, Nasta’s hands holding him gently as he orgasmed with him as his body clenched around Nasta too tightly for the older man’s control to withstand.

The five of them lay in a heap, breathing heavily, chests rising and falling rapidly as they rested just a bit before the next wave hit them. Harry closed his eyes and slowed his breathing down, trying to suck the air deeply into his body to feed his starved muscles.

A touch to his side had him opening his eyes to see love filled indigo. He loved Blaise’s eyes and he hoped that when he had a baby with his first mate, that no matter if they had a baby girl or a baby boy, that they took Blaise’s eyes.

Blaise slid into him with ease and moved slowly and carefully. Blaise always was the most gentle at first, then he picked up pace and his thrusts became long and deep. A sudden urge for sustenance had Harry shooting upwards and sinking fangs into the side of Blaise’s neck, removing his long, pointed teeth from the four holes that he had made, he sealed his mouth over them and sucked hard and quick from the wound until the urge abated and he licked clean the four puncture marks he had made.

He kept his arms wrapped around Blaise and moved with his mate and bounced on him as Blaise thrusted. He mewed as a hand squeezed him bum, it was too large to be anyone’s but Maxie’s and he knew that his other mates had recovered enough from their short, but revitalising rest to carry on with the remaining six days of, nearly continuous, sex.

When Harry next woke up he felt terrible. He let out a soft groan and rolled onto his side before his eyes widened as he felt a twinge in his abdomen. His bladder was beyond full and moving had put too much pressure upon it.

He bolted upright, but fell back when pain shot up his spine. His bladder ached to be relieved and he moaned in agony. He tried to get up carefully, shifting his arms to lift his upper body, but this turned out to be a huge mistake because as soon as he crunched up his stomach, his bladder released without his say so.

Once he had started he couldn’t stop himself and he felt tears of humiliation prick at his eyes. His face burnt bright red in embarrassment…he had wet the bed for the first time since he was about six years old and even then he had only wet himself because the Dursleys had forgotten to let him out from the cupboard under the stairs to use the bathroom.

The tears fell over his eyes as he just sat in the wet patch that he had accidentally made. He couldn’t move and he sobbed in distress. A moment later his mates were around him, asking him what was wrong, though it didn’t take them too long to figure out from the strong smell of urine.

Nasta sighed and sat on the edge of the bed and wrapped an arm around him as Harry curled into himself in mortification.
“There is nothing to be ashamed of, Harry.” He said softly. “The best of us have accidents and you are pregnant which has put a lot of undue stress upon your bladder.”

“I’ve never had this problem before.” He wailed in shame, his neck and ears burning along with his face.

“You’ve never consumed so much liquid while on a heat period before.” Max told him with a reassuring smile. “We already almost piss ourselves when we wake up off a heat as it is, Harry, with the amount of blood you consumed when you were on your heat it was inevitable that you would wet yourself before you reached the bathroom.”

Harry sniffed and hugged himself. Nasta put his other arm around him and hugged him tightly, kissing his hair.

“Let’s get you cleaned up, Harry. How about a nice hot bath whilst Draco and I go hunting?”

Harry sniffed again as his stomach rumbled loudly. He nodded his head and let Nasta pick him up and carry him to the bathroom, uncaring that Harry’s naked legs and bottom were soaking wet from where he had been sitting in the large patch of his urine.

Nasta run a bath and put Harry’s favourite scented bubble bath under the running water. He tested the temperature and turned off the hot water tap and ran the cold. When the temperature was perfect he sat Harry in the water and left him to wash with a kiss.

Harry smiled at Nasta’s retreating back. He loved his mates so much and they obviously loved him enough to carry him even when he was sopping wet with his own piss. He picked up a washcloth and dipped it in the water before he started scrubbing himself, particularly hard when he reached his legs and bum. He didn’t bother washing his hair; he didn’t want to put the dirty, piss water on it. He’d have a shower before he went to bed.

He got out and wrapped himself in a towel and he padded barefooted back into the bedroom. He could see from the floor that the bed up on its platform had been stripped and recovered with different sheets, duvet and pillowcases. It wasn’t blue anymore, but a dark red. Blaise and Max must have done it whilst he was in the bath.

He didn’t bother getting dressed, he always managed to get blood on his clothes when he ate a fresh meal, he’d stay naked and get dressed afterwards.

He went into the living room and smiled as Max and Blaise were cuddled up on the settee together. Max grinned at him and gestured for him to come and sit between them. There wasn’t enough room to fit a doll between them, let alone his pregnant frame.

“I’m not going to fit.” He complained.
Max chuckled. “You will, come here.”

Harry didn’t bother arguing, he was hungry and he was still tired. His bum hurt a lot as well and his spine and his hips, but he had found out why they hurt when he was in the bath, they were covered thickly in dark bruises.

Max picked him up and placed Harry partly on his lap, partly on Blaise’s. Harry smiled; they hadn’t wanted him between them, but on their laps.

They both threw an arm around him and held him. They kissed his neck and shoulders, rubbed his growing belly, which he had been startled to see had grown significantly over the week when he couldn’t remember anything but burning, sex and toe-curling pleasure.

Blaise leant over him and pressed a lingering kiss to the widest part of his belly and stroked just beside his bellybutton. He kissed his belly again and Harry chuckled, bopping Blaise’s head.

“That tickles.” He said when Blaise shot him a questioning look for bopping his head.

Blaise chuckled deeply and kissed his belly a final time, gave it one final stroke, before leaning back further into the settee and kissing the back of Harry’s neck instead as Max licked at his shoulder. Harry moaned and then shoved both of their heads away.

“I am far too hungry, too tired and way too sore to do anything with you, so stop it.”

“We have missed you, Prezioso.” Blaise told him. “You were asleep for a day longer than we were.”

“What?” Harry asked softly, turning his head to look at Blaise over his shoulder.

“It’s perfectly normal for a pregnant submissive to sleep anything from twelve to thirty-eight hours longer than their dominant after a heat period. With the delays at the start of your cycle I’m not surprised that you slept for twenty-six hours longer than us.”

Harry sighed and yawned widely. He had been asleep for about two days, he felt as if he hadn’t slept in a month.

“You can go back to bed as soon as you have eaten, love.” Max told him, pushed the tufts of hair out of his face gently.

“Am I really not going to have another heat now until after the baby is born?”

“That’s right. Submissives only go on a heat period to get pregnant, which you already are, or to fully bond to a mate, of which you now have all the dominants that you need. So no more heat until after the baby is born.”

“Thank god. I don’t think I’ll survive another heat when I’m pregnant.”

“We’ll be able to tell if you’re pregnant now by your heat cycles.” Max told him with a smile. “If your heat comes, you aren’t pregnant, if it doesn’t come, you’re pregnant.”

“Ergh, like a woman’s period.” Harry grumbled.

They both laughed uproariously at him and Harry crossed his arms and scowled.

“What’s so funny?” Draco asked as he came into the living room carting a dead boar on his shoulder.

Nasta followed him in with the biggest buck that Harry had ever seen. They deposited their kills on the floor and Harry was urged to eat immediately.

“Harry has likened his heat cycles to a woman’s menstrual cycle.” Max answered Draco as he folded his huge body onto the floor and began eating after a stern glare from Nasta.

“Isn’t that what they are though?” Draco asked as he sat on the settee watching everyone else eat. The bloodstains on his cheeks and chin told them that he had already eaten his fill. “Only every two months not every month.”

The two older Drackens started laughing and Nasta sat down next to Harry and began skinning meat for him so that he could eat faster and without using so much energy while he was still so tired.

“I don’t bleed!” Harry groused as he accepted another chunk of meat off of Nasta.
“Harry doesn’t have eggs either. Or ovaries or a uterus…”

“Or a vagina.” Harry insisted sternly, which brought tears to his mates’ eyes.

“Really he doesn’t even have a womb.” Max said after he had calmed down. “We call it a womb for lack of a better word for it, but it’s more like a…”

“Like a sac.” Nasta answered as Max struggled for words. “It just holds the forming baby and Harry will have to split the sac to get the baby out, a bit like a womb, but it’s thicker as Dracken babies are very…rumbustious as they reach six months gestation.”

Harry placed a hand on his belly and frowned. If his baby was going to start bouncing around inside of him then he’d much rather be more stable in his pregnancy. He hoped to god that nothing ever happened to his babies ever again.

If he had the maximum amount of babies he could have over a hundred and fifty years, then there was a possibility that he would lose one or two clutches, but he didn’t want to, he hoped, he prayed that he never lost a baby. His heart would shatter into miniscule pieces if it ever happened and a part of his broken heart would always be lost forever, gone with his lost child.

Chapter Twenty-Eight – Revenge

It was Saturday and Harry was still recovering from his heat, which he had only woken up from yesterday. It was the seventh of May. He had fucked his way through Easter and the beginning of the new month.

Mrs Weasley had sent him an egg the size of Quaffle and all of his mates had given him an egg or chocolate of some kind. He shared it all with them in one big indulgence fest, except for his chocolate fudge bars, those were his. Though he was glad that he had been given more, he only had one bar left from his post Quidditch injury stash. It was amazing how quickly eighteen bars of chocolate had become one. Now he had five and he was content with them…for now.

Mrs Weasley had also given him the first of the baby things that she had knitted. Cute little booties and socks, knitted bibs and shawls, blankets and hats all in a soft, pure white had filled the lined box she had sent along with his Easter egg.

Hermione had also told him that she was knitting things for him as well. Between her and Mrs Weasley he was going to be able to open his own hand made baby clothing store.

Hermione seemed determined to make it up to him in any way possible, even giving him her homework to help catch himself up after his ‘bout of illness’ for the last twelve days. She was trying her hardest to get along with his mates, but Draco completely snubbed her, Blaise was only a little better, Nasta remained silent around her and Max only grunted now and then when she spoke to him. It was disheartening and it filled Harry with sadness. He had known it would take a while for them to forgive her treatment of him, but he hadn’t thought that they would be so…so, he couldn’t even think of a word to describe how they were acting, but it was rudeness mixed with hostility or, if not outright hostility, then definitely unfriendliness.

Harry was now three months pregnant and it showed. A lot. Max and Nasta had both gone off to work, though why they both had to work on a Saturday was beyond him. Max said that he had a very volatile batch of potion on stand-by that he needed to finish and Nasta had told him that a Dragon still needed care on a weekend as much as a weekday and that he had been called in to cover a friend’s shift who had had to be taken to the hospital with burns all down his side.

Blaise and Draco were arguing with Hermione and had been for the past hour. Harry was sick of it. He got up and walked out of the portrait door without a backward glance. The three were so wrapped up in their little argument that they didn’t notice him going.

Harry wandered to the hospital wing and got a check-up from Madam Pomfrey, who told him that his baby was thriving and was as healthy as could be, but he himself needed some more potassium, they had deduced that it had been his recent bout of morning sickness that had lowered his potassium levels, so with a banana in one hand, Harry set off around the school again.

He wandered aimlessly for a while before he decided to pay the Headmaster a visit. He hadn’t had a talk with the elderly man in a while and if he needed anything at the moment he needed to talk.

He finished his banana just as he knocked on the door to the Headmaster’s office (after eventually guessing correctly that the password was fudge flies.)

“Come in.” A firm, yet gentle voice commanded.

Harry happily peeked around the door and smiled as Dumbledore pushed aside his work and stood, his arms flung wide as if greeting his favourite child.

“Harry! Come in, my boy, sit down, do you have time for a cup of tea?”

“Yes please.” Harry answered happily as he took the seat right in front of the Headmaster’s desk, plopping his banana skin into the waste basket by the side of the desk.

“Would you like your honey tea, or perhaps some chamomile? Madam Pomfrey is in quite a fret over your continued sickness.”

“My honey tea, please, sir. I haven’t had it in a while and I miss it. Plus I was only sick a little bit yesterday. I went to see Madam Pomfrey before I came and she said that the baby and I are fine, I just have a small dip in my potassium levels, which is why she gave me a banana to eat.”

“Yes, I have been watching your progress from afar; your little one seems to be doing exponentially well, I must say.” Dumbledore told him as he waved his wand to summon a china tea set and began flicking his wand to bring the water to a boil before he pottered around making the teas.

“I’ve gained weight as well. I’m not sure if it’s entirely because of the baby either. The amount of food my men are feeding me.” Harry shook his head. “I’ve put on nine pounds in a week. I knew I shouldn’t have eaten anymore of that boar.”

Dumbledore chuckled gently as he placed a steaming cup of delicate yellow coloured tea in front of him. Harry immediately wrapped his hands around it and soaked up the warmth. He blew on the outer rim of the china cup and took a small sip, relaxing more as the familiar flavour comforted him. The both of them sat in comfortable silence, each sipping their tea and basking in their companionship. Harry sighed as he realised that he hadn’t had any relaxation since before his heat. Not really. He had been on edge and tense all throughout the time when he thought that he was going to have a miscarriage, he was agitated and frightened as he approached his heat knowing that he would be experiencing a lot of pain, he had been in immense pain when his heat had hit him with it being delayed for three days and he had been fucked raw for the next six days of his heat. He had slept deeply for two days after his heat and immediately when he woke up the tension and a lingering soreness had flooded back into his body. Now that his mates were all acting so hostilely towards Hermione, they had little time to smile and laugh around him and it made him sad and withdrawn.

“Is there something you want to tell me, Harry?” Dumbledore asked softly, sipping on his own white tea.

Harry sighed again and put his cup down. “I made up with Hermione again. She never wanted me to get hurt and was sickened when I told her what Ron had done to the baby.”

“Yes, I was quite delighted when Miss Granger came to her senses, but I can tell that this is not what’s bothering you so deeply.”

“My men don’t like her. Nasta won’t speak at all when she’s in the room, which isn’t really unusual, but he at least says something now and then! Even if it’s an odd comment, now he’s like a living statue or a mute! Max just mumbles, Blaise answers in short, clipped monosyllables and Draco is downright rude and mean. Hermione knows how she treated me was unfair and wrong and she is really sorry, I just want them all to get along.”

“It will likely take some time for them to adjust to her, Harry. Mister Malfoy especially as he has such a…rocky past with her, I believe it was she who punched him in third year?”

Harry looked down to his lap. “Yeah, she did. He was being mean about Hagrid and Buckbeak so she hit him. We laughed about it back then, but it must have really humiliated him to be hit by the girl he liked teasing so much.”

“Not to mention a knock to his ego and pride. It is likely he still holds some animosity or anger towards her from this incidence. Or it could be something as simple as habit. Perhaps Mister Malfoy is so used to teasing and baiting Miss Granger that he falls into the same habits as he used to.”

“Maybe, I just don’t like it. They were arguing when I left, they didn’t even notice me leave they were all so busy ripping each other apart. I don’t really blame Hermione for giving as good as she gets, but she’s encouraging them to carry on and the more she gets wound up and reacts the more Draco and Blaise are going to do it.”

Dumbledore nodded gravely and refilled their tea cups, floating the teapot over their cups with an eased and practised movement of the hand that spoke volumes of how often he had done it over the years.

“I wish they’d get along, I think if they looked past all the anger and animosity or whatever the hell they hold against each other then they’ll get along. They are all smart, intelligent people who can hold a decent conversation and have intellectual debates with each other. I guess it was too much to hope for, I mean I knew it wasn’t going to happen overnight, but I guess I hoped that all of them would have been a bit more adult than they are showing they are. They’re acting like…like…”

“Teenagers, Harry. They are acting like teenagers and I think that sometimes you forget that that is exactly what you are. You are just sixteen years old, Harry, don’t be too hard on yourself, or on them. You have always been a very mature person, my boy and with the proof of your impending parenthood I believe that you have decided to adopt a very adult view of things and therefore can’t see why Misters Malfoy and Zabini and Miss Granger, who are near enough the same age as you, act the way they do.”

Harry frowned as he played with his tea cup before raising it to his lips and taking a long sip.

“Maybe you’re right, Professor. Maybe it is me that’s the problem.”

Dumbledore sighed heavily and patted one of Harry’s hands gently.

“That isn’t what I had meant, Harry. There is nothing wrong with being mature or being an adult in some situations, especially not with your baby on the way, but I believe you need to cut loose once in a while and remember that you are only sixteen. Misters Malfoy and Zabini and Miss Granger act the way they do because it is all they know, they have always acted the same towards one another, so they don’t know how to act differently or, possibly, they don’t want to act any differently. You are still only children and you still have a lot of life left to live and a lot left to learn. Don’t be too hard on them all or yourself for that matter.”

Harry smiled and helped himself to the tin of ginger newts.

“Thanks, sir, I think this talk has helped me realise a few things.”

“And that, my dear boy, is why everyone should listen to an old man’s wheezing waffle every now and then.” Dumbledore told him with a wink.

Harry laughed and stayed grinning in his seat. He spied his favourite chess board and looked to Dumbledore with a challenge in his eyes.

“Do you have time for a game of chess, sir?” He asked innocently, knowing the old man would love nothing more.

“I believe I have enough time for a few games, Harry. More tea?”

Harry stayed with Dumbledore, talking, playing chess and drinking tea until two in the afternoon. They had had a plate of sandwiches and a pitcher of pumpkin juice brought to them by a very enthusiastic house elf for lunch and Harry finally felt that he had relaxed and unwound due to his stress free morning with the Headmaster.

Max had flooed into the office at just gone two and he had smiled happily at seeing Harry, who had lost spectacularly at chess fourteen times in a row and had laughed every time.

Harry had hugged Max tightly and given him a happy, welcoming kiss.

“I thought you didn’t get off until four?” Harry asked with a wide smile at seeing Max earlier than he had hoped.
“I finished all the batches before I thought I would. I did the last two simultaneously so I could get home quicker.” Max answered, picking Harry up to give him a proper, squeezy hug.

Harry held him back just as tightly and savoured the moment when Max was being affectionate and loving. As soon as they reached their rooms, he would close himself off again because of Hermione and Harry didn’t like it.

“I will see you again soon, Harry.” Dumbledore told him with a smile, waving his wand and banishing the chessboard and pieces back to the shelf from whence they came.

“Of course, sir. Thank you for putting up with me for the entire morning.”

“It was no trouble at all, Harry; I enjoy your company very much.”

“Well, time to face the fire.” Harry sighed.

“What did you do?” Max asked with a frown.

“Left the rooms without telling anyone.” Harry answered casually.

“You WHAT?!” Max bellowed.

“I left the rooms without telling anyone.” Harry repeated his eyes glaring daggers at Max, daring him to try and punish him for it. “They didn’t even notice me leaving, Max! I didn’t sneak out or trick them, I just stood up, walked right to the door and I left! They didn’t notice me bloody leaving!”

“Were they asleep?” Max asked weakly.

“No, Draco, Blaise and Hermione were too busy shouting and screaming at each other, I went for a check-up with Madam Pomfrey and then came here to unwind. I’m stressed, Max! All the fighting and screaming is making me tense, there is no way that can be good for the baby.”

Max sighed and pulled him into a hug. He nodded his goodbye to Dumbledore and steered Harry out of the room, he picked him up before Harry had a chance to put a foot on the first stair and carried him down.

“I guess we all owe you an apology. She treated you like dirt, she ignored you and hurt you, chose her little boyfriend over you. You might have forgiven her easily, Harry, but we…we can’t forget the pain we saw on your face, the hurt you went through because of her actions.”

“So you’re making her feel like dirt because of how she treated me?”

“Perhaps not dirt, but we want her to remember what she did to you, we wanted her to know that we are not as easily forgiving as you are.”

“I think she gets it now. You’ve started hurting me in your quest to hurt her.”

Max nuzzled the side of his face and carried him into their rooms to see destruction. Every chair had been flipped over, all of the fabrics had been torn, the glass coffee table looked like it had been thrown at the opposite wall and the door leading to the bedroom was splintered.

In the middle of the mess Blaise lay huddled up crying and Draco was nowhere to be seen. Max rushed to Blaise and fell to his knees beside him. Pulling him onto his lap and holding him.

“Are you alright?” Max asked.

“We lost him! We lost, Harry. We’re terrible dominants!” Blaise cried.

“No you’re not.” Harry said softly.

Blaise shot up and took his head into his hands hard. For a split second Harry thought that maybe Blaise was going to snap his neck, but his mate reined back the pressure he was exerting and pulled him forward into a kiss instead.

“Where have you been? We have been searching for you for hours.” Blaise told him.

“I went to get a check-up and then went to see Dumbledore. Max found me and then he brought me
“It’s easily fixed, love.” Max soothed him, pulling out his wand and giving it a complicated wave.

Everything flew together and mended itself. Glass flew back into the picture frames and reformed the coffee table, all the fabrics knitted back together, the door creaked back into solid wood again, fitting itself back on its hinges and within ten seconds everything was perfect again.

Max put him down on the settee and steered Blaise to sit next to him.

“Where is Draco?” Max asked.

“Searching the forest, we checked all over the castle and couldn’t find Harry, so we thought he might have been outside.”

“No one can be found in Dumbledore’s office.” Harry told Blaise. “Not even a Dracken. It’s where Dumbledore hid Ron after he hit me so that you couldn’t find him and kill him. Max, can you go and get Draco please?”

Max nodded and left to go hunt down the errant blond leaving Harry with Blaise.

“Why did you leave?” Blaise asked, rubbing the tears from his face.

“You were all shouting and screaming and yelling and I couldn’t take it anymore. I was clenching my hands so tightly that my fingers were cramping. My stress levels are through the roof, Blaise. I need rest and relaxation and I’m not going to get it if the rooms that I am living in become a shouting ground for violence and snide comments.”

Blaise sighed and ran a hand through his layered black hair. He tugged on it harshly before dropping his hand to his lap.

“Please tell me that you at least went somewhere protected. Did you spend the entire day with the Headmaster?”
“Near enough, yes. I went to get a check-up first, the baby’s thriving by the way, then I went to Dumbledore’s office and stayed there until Max came home. He brought me straight here, not that I think anyone would have attacked me with a six foot eight, muscle bound thirty-one year old man carrying me.”

Blaise smiled and held him carefully and gently, he seemed to be holding back on something as his muscles twitched every now and then.

“Whatever you want to say or do, just do it.” Harry told him with a sigh.

Blaise immediately leant down to the baby bump and began sniffing and licking at it. Harry smiled, he should have known, if he was out of their sight for just a moment they sniffed and licked him, but he had screamed at all of them the last time they had done it, but to be fair he had only gone to the bathroom, it wasn’t likely that there was an enemy hiding in the toilet waiting to pounce on him as soon as he was free of his dominants.

Draco burst into the room and Harry thought that he was going to be punished from the look on Draco’s face, but the blond dropped to his knees and held him tightly.

Draco’s white blond hair was dishevelled and covered with twigs, he was covered in dirt and leaves and he had a few scratches on his face and arms. Harry felt like crying for putting them both through hell, but he held himself together, he instead started picking the twigs and leaves lovingly from Draco’s hair. He stood by what he had done, he couldn’t take the animosity anymore, that sort of atmosphere definitely wasn’t good for the baby and he would not put up with his mates behaving in such a way anymore.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Harry giggled as Blaise tickled him. They were both on the floor, Harry on his back and Blaise leaning over him. It reminded Harry of when it was just the two of them in these private rooms, acting all lovey dovey, the overhanging need of a second dominant had been an imagined nightmare that they’d pushed aside as the two of them rolled around their floor acting like lovers.

Now Max was laughing at them from the kitchen and Draco was smirking and chuckling now and then as Harry let out rather sporadic and babyish sounding giggles as Blaise caught a particularly sensitive, ticklish spot and Harry thought that it was so much better now than it had been before, he had a family now, a proper, large family and it was only going to keep on growing with the introduction of their children.

Nasta walked through the door at ten to six in the evening, covered in mud and what Harry suspected was Dragon dung, a livid burn going all the way down his arm and a disgruntled look on his handsome face.

He stopped when he saw Harry and Blaise on the floor, Harry’s cheeks a flushed red colour from his laughter, his eyes streaming with happy tears and the widest smile on his face. Blaise caught his sides again, just below his ribcage and Harry writhed around the carpet as he giggled uproariously.

Nasta chuckled and shook his head as he shut the portrait door to their rooms. He went straight through to the other end of the room and stopped as he reached Harry and Blaise.

“I’d hug and kiss you, but I’m afraid I’d get you filthy.” He stated as he grinned down at them. “Hugs will have to wait until I’ve had a shower.”

Harry grinned up at him before spotting the burn and all happiness washed away with worry and concern.

“Your arm?”

Nasta grimaced. “A rampaging Ironbelly bull decided that he was going to be unfriendly. The idiots got too close to his nesting female and as a senior handler, I had to step in to help them. It’s the first time we’ve introduced Ironbellies to the Welsh reserve and we’ve only got him on loan for the breeding season. He’ll be going back to the Ukraine in a few months, after his eggs have hatched.”

“Are you going to be okay? Do you need a hospital?” Harry asked, rolling over and looking up at Nasta with a face crumpled in worry.

Nasta smiled softly and used his only, partially, clean hand to cup Harry’s chin and cheek.

“I’ll be fine, cariad. It will most likely be gone by tomorrow morning. We are Drackens; burns hold little worry for us. Our scales absorb the heat and convert it to energy.”

“But…” Harry gestured to the burn desperately.

“I wasn’t in Dracken form so my scales were under my skin; unfortunately my skin took a bit of a hit because of that, but like I said, Harry, the damage will be repaired before tomorrow morning.”

“Go and have a shower, you smell.” Max told Nasta shooing him from the living room slash kitchenette and away from his cooking.
Nasta chuckled and did as he was told, caressing Harry’s cheek before going to have his shower.

“Do you think you can handle a full meal today, Harry?” Max asked him from the kitchenette counter where he was happily frying vegetables in a pan.

“Maybe. I’d say yes, but the last time I did I was sick over the floor.”

“I’ll give you a full plate then, but if you can’t eat it don’t force yourself. Remember what Poppy said, forcing yourself to eat is more detrimental to you and the baby than not eating at all.”

Harry smiled and nodded his head. He shuffled on his knees to Draco and collapsed next to the blond and snuggled into him. Draco threw an arm around him, still absorbed in his latest book. Harry made himself comfortable before he spread his legs and let Blaise lie between them, his arms and head pillowed on Harry’s chest, his body arched over the baby bump, so he was touching it, but put no weight upon it.

Nasta came out wearing his pyjama bottoms and nothing else. He was dry, but his black hair was still slightly damp. He collapsed on the settee that Draco was leaning against with Harry pillowed on him and Blaise pillowed on Harry and rolled onto his side so that he could watch them all.

Harry’s hands were carding through Blaise’s thick hair and the older boy had pushed Harry’s shirt up slightly away from his hips and was tracing small patterns onto the skin of Harry’s hip and lower abdomen with his fingertips. Draco had a book in one hand and his other was holding around Harry’s neck, his fingers dipping under his shirt collar and rubbing lightly at the skin of his upper chest.

The noises from the kitchen made him smile as the five of them were the picture of family bliss. All they needed were a few children playing on the floor, perhaps in front of the fire, a toddler sleeping on a cushion somewhere and Harry rounded with another child. But then Harry already was rounded with child.

Nasta looked at Harry’s belly which was stretching his baggy tee shirt. Harry would need bigger clothes soon and he made a mental note to ask his mate if he would like to spend the Hogsmeade weekend coming up the week after next getting some maternity clothes for wizards.

“Alright you lot, foods up.” Max called, serving the plates onto the kitchenette table.

Blaise got up first and hoisted Harry from the floor; Nasta rolled to his feet and caught Draco by the elbow when the blond’s knee gave in on him because he had been sat on it for so long.

“Thanks.” The blond grunted, shaking the blood back into his leg before making his way to the table.
and sitting down next to Harry, who was sitting opposite Max. Blaise sat next to Max, opposite Draco and Nasta climbed onto the chair that had been moved to the end of the table so he wouldn’t be the only one eating up the other end of the table.

They all ate their food, but subtly kept an eye on Harry to see if he was struggling with his food. He wasn’t and seemed to be demolishing the plate of food in front of him. Nasta hid a smile behind his fork. It seemed the worst of Harry’s nausea had passed and it was a good thing too, Harry was too skinny as it was without throwing up everything that he was eating as well.

“God I’m full.” Harry whined a while later as he held his bulging stomach, his dessert bowl empty in front of him.

Max smiled happily. He loved that people liked his cooking. He loved cooking and he loved food, but most of all, he loved seeing those he loved so dearly love his cooking.

“Ergh.” Harry groaned as he tried to move.

Nasta chuckled and scooped him up and carried him to one of the settees. He sat him down gently and kissed him before flumping down next to him.

Harry wrapped his arms around Nasta’s injured left arm and kissed it lightly, laving the burn with the tip of his tongue.

Nasta laughed deeply and moved his arm away from Harry and threw it around his shoulders instead, pulling Harry to lean on him. Harry started licking at his nipple instead, which Nasta didn’t think was an improvement.

“You’re sinful.” Draco told Harry as he walked past to pick up his book, before settling himself next to Nasta, which Harry felt a small amount of smugness over. Draco was getting more comfortable with the older two.

“Harry, do you know what happens on the fourteenth of May?” Max asked as he finished washing up with Blaise and came to sit on the other settee.

“Umm…no?” Harry stated confusedly as Blaise and Nasta both gasped. Draco looked as puzzled as Harry felt; it was nice to know that he wasn’t the only one ill informed.

“The second Saturday of May is the day when all Drackens in Britain meet up and sort of mingle with each other. As there are so few of us it gives us a chance to meet up.” Blaise explained. “My Mother takes me every year. You will get to see Dracken children for the first time.”
“Don’t they look just like other children?” Harry asked.

“Yes, but they aren’t regular children. Decades ago the meeting was used as a chance for parents of Dracken children to set up betrothals between their children.”

“Of course Dracken betrothals have since been abolished.” Nasta stated.

“Do I have to go?” Harry asked in a small voice, looking to his pregnant belly.

“You don’t have to go, but my parents will be there.” Max told him. “It would be nice to introduce you. My Mother and my Fathers will love you.”

“Fathers?” Blaise questioned.

“Yep. I have two, my Mother needed two dominants.”

“Why do you only have one brother and three sisters if your parents are Drackens?” Harry asked.

Max looked suddenly very sad and terribly angry and Harry huddled in closer to Nasta. Max immediately looked apologetic.

“Don’t be afraid of me, Harry; it isn’t you I’m angry at. I…nineteen years ago my Mother…she got…she was captured, by Dracken poachers. She was pregnant, very heavily pregnant and they ripped the baby from her. A family friend who is no longer living exchanged her and the baby for a lot of gold. The baby died almost immediately, but what they would have done to my little brother it was almost a blessing that he died quickly. They took their anger out on my Mother who refused to unsheathe her wings so they could scale her. My Fathers only just got to her in time. She was nearly dead and it took her months to recover and even longer to get over the mental and emotional pain she felt. She never went onto a heat period again and she never fell pregnant again. The Healers said she was traumatised and put her through therapy. It didn’t work. Turned out that her womb had been heavily scarred when the poachers had pulled the baby from her. She was devastated at the time, but she’s better now, much better, she’s waiting anxiously for grandchildren.” Max smiled softly and looked pointedly to Harry’s growing belly. “Of course my brother, Caesar, and his mate, Amelle, got there first, so she’s very busy fawning over them both and their daughter when they have her, but naturally you’ll be included in that too.”
“Am I going to be mobbed?” Harry asked when he could speak through the lump in his throat, trying to ease the sadness and tension in the room.

“More than likely. Just be warned I get my height and body build from my biological Father, Myron, he’s about six foot ten and wider across than both me and Draco together.”

Harry looked at Max and at Draco and tried to imagine a man that was the same width as the both of them and two inches taller than Max. He gulped, he was glad he didn’t have that man for a mate, he’d be flattened.

“I’ll go.” Harry said softly. He wanted to meet such a brave woman who had carried on living after such a terrible experience. He had felt like dying when he had found out he was having a miscarriage, but to have his baby ripped from his womb as he was strapped down and unable to stop it. He felt sick.

“My Dad will be there with my brother.” Nasta stated. “They only stay for an hour or so though. My Dad never liked parading us around like trophies; he would have rathered lock us away from the rest of the world.”

“My Mother will be there. She loves the parties and the mingling.” Blaise said. “Her newest human lover might not be there, Josiah is…strange when it comes to socialising.”

“As my parents aren’t Drackens and have no idea that I’m one yet, they won’t be there,” Draco said.

“I thought you told them?” Harry demanded.

“No, I told them that I was in a relationship with three men and possibly had a baby on the way. Telling your parents that you are a now a magical creature is not something you put in a letter, Harry. Imagine if it went astray? No, I’ll tell them in person. My Father will likely come at his next convenience; I know he is busy at the moment with the new bill that he is trying to oppose, it’s currently trying to be passed through the Wizengamot. It isn’t likely to be this weekend or even next. He will send an owl to forewarn me of when he and Mother are visiting.”

Harry nodded. He felt nerves grip his stomach. He was going to be meeting three of his mates’ families next week all at the same time. He hoped he didn’t make a fool of himself and that he proved to them that he was worth their sons. He wouldn’t like to think of what would happen if he didn’t make the mark in their eyes.

It was Friday the thirteenth. Harry had rolled his eyes so many times today at the Muggleborns and their superstitions. One first year had burst out crying when a fifth year’s all black pet kneazle had stalked her through the school or the third year who had jumped all over a poor Pureblood first year when he knocked over the salt shaker at lunch.

He was dreading tomorrow. They had gotten special permission from Dumbledore to leave the school grounds to go to the party, which started at five in the evening and lasted until midnight. Harry doubted he could last until midnight, not with how early he had been going to bed lately, but he had promised himself that he was at least going to meet all of his mates’ families, no matter how nervous or frightened he might be.

The others were trying their hardest to calm him down and comfort him, but Harry believed that the only way he wasn’t going to be frightened anymore was when he actually came face to face with these people. When he was put on the spot he could perform exceptionally well, but let him have a big build up to worry and fret over and he freaked out like a little kid.

Harry kissed Draco goodbye and walked down to the Herbology greenhouses, his last lesson of the day. Draco had Arithmancy and Blaise had Charms. It was one of the only lessons that they didn’t have together, but now that Harry was speaking to Hermione again, he sat next her in class instead of being on his own.

Hermione was refusing to speak to Ron because of what he had done to Harry in the hospital wing and Dean and Seamus told him that she had chewed Ron out publically in the Gryffindor common room for daring to hit a pregnant person, man or woman. It was then that it had become common knowledge that Ronald Weasley of Gryffindor had hit a pregnant man. He was targeted for stray spells in the corridors, the butt of jokes and the tester for pranks. He was tripped up, pushed down, his book bag split about several times a day and he found himself with bruises where people punched him in the crush to and from lessons. He had only ended up in the hospital wing twice and both times were the fault of Draco and Blaise. Though there was no evidence and no proof except that they laughed it up in their private rooms with Max. Nasta just scowled at them disapprovingly and called them all childish.

Harry smiled and sat beside Hermione, ignoring the glare he got from Ron, who unfortunately was opposite them. Luckily though the table was big enough that he wasn’t anywhere near arms reach and he was out of ear shot if they talked quietly enough.

“How are you, Harry?” Hermione asked.

“Alright. The baby kept me awake half the night by lying heavily on my bladder, I kept having to get up to use the toilet, but other than that, I’m fine. How are you?”
“A bit tired. Nothing like the reason you’re tired though. I was up late studying.”

“Hermione, it’s May!” Harry complained.

“The exams are less than a month away!” Hermione replied scandalised.

“Two months! Exams are at the end of June, not the beginning.”

“No, first through to fourth years are at the end of June, fifth years are the two weeks before them and sixth and seventh years start their exams the last week of May and carry on through the first week into June, Harry!”

Harry blinked. He hadn’t known that though perhaps he should have guessed from how engrossed both Blaise and Draco were in their studies. Draco read a book a day and Blaise had even stopped his work on translating the book that Harry had given to him for Christmas. Harry had thought that perhaps Blaise had hit a dead end or a brick wall, but it made sense if he had stopped to focus entirely on the exams.

“Oh.” He said softly.

“You haven’t been revising have you?” Hermione asked.

“No, I doubt I’d have the time anyway. Between homework, my illness and the baby, I haven’t had much time for anything else and most of my free time is spent napping or eating.”

“Oh, Harry. I’ll come to your rooms tomorrow and help you.”

“That might not be a good idea, Hermione.”

“I know your boyfriends don’t like me much but…”

“No, it isn’t because of that. I told them to get over themselves and to accept you, it’s that Max and Nasta have the day off tomorrow, we were going to go baby shopping.”
“I thought you agreed that you didn’t need any clothes?”

“Clothes no, but the baby will need a cot, a changing table, a bath, a pram, I need maternity clothes as well as mine are getting a bit too tight and all sorts of stuff, but I think Nasta mentioned getting the maternity clothes on our next Hogsmeade weekend.”

“Oh. I didn’t think of that.”

“Do you need any help?”

“Nah, the men have it covered. We’re meeting up with their families as well. I get to meet the in-laws.” Harry mock shuddered as Hermione hid a giggle behind her pruning shears.

“I’m sure they are perfectly nice, Harry.”

“Yeah, nice. Max is the oldest of a brother and three sisters and Nasta has an older brother. He’s the baby of the family.”

“Isn’t Nasta the oldest of your boyfriends?”

“Yeah, he’s thirty-seven. His brother is thirty-nine and his Dad is fifty-nine, nearly sixty.”

Hermione giggled and snipped away another leaf from a flowering fanged freesia that Harry immediately froze with his wand and placed in a vial and then sealed with another tap from his wand. The leaves were used in potions so they had to be careful to snip far enough down the stem to make a good potions ingredient, but not too far down to ‘injure’ the plant. Or rather Hermione did as Harry had cut too far down on his first try and the plant had started screaming in agony and tried to sink it’s fangs into his hand, now Harry was in charge of freezing the potions specimen and sealing it up.
“Surely they won't be too bad? I’m sure they’ll love you, everyone loves you.”

Harry snorted. “I’ll be sure to tell Voldemort that when I see him next.”

They both snorted into their flowerpots and started laughing as quietly as they could so they didn’t attract the attention of Professor Sprout.

The lesson ended and Harry walked out of the greenhouse with Hermione, Lavender and Parvati. He was holding under his bump as his back was starting to ache from the hour long lesson standing up.

“God I hate Herbology.” Harry groaned.

“Hey!”

Harry looked ahead with an apologetic smile at Neville, who was turning around to face him with another wizarding plant tucked under his arm in a pot; Dean and Seamus were with him.

“Sorry, Neville. It isn’t the actual lessons that I hate, but the standing up for an hour. It kills my back. Potions would be the same if I was allowed in on those lessons.”

Harry grinned as he remembered his latest potions class which he had spent in Professor Snape’s office sleeping on the very comfortable brown leather settee.

“How did your seven thousand word essay on the Insomnia potion go?” Dean asked with a large grin.

Harry pretended to sigh and kick up a fuss about how ‘unfair it was’ that he had to ‘write all those essays’ just because he was pregnant.

“It does seem a bit unfair, but at least you’re learning something, even if you can't do the practical side of things by actually brewing the potions.” Hermione told him.

“Nah. I have Draco do the essays for me so he can use them as practice for the exams.”

They all burst out laughing, except for Hermione who frowned.

“Harry, you should be doing those essays, how are you supposed to get a good mark in your Potions exam otherwise?”

“I’m already going to fail, Hermione. I can’t do the practical exam. I asked Professor Snape not to put me in for the oral or theory exams either.”

“Why?!” Hermione asked scandalised.

“Because without the practical exam I have no way of getting above a ‘P’, Hermione, the practical counts for fifty percent of the marks and I can’t sit it. I’ve already put my name down to do my potions exam at the Ministry after the baby is born.”

“You…you have?”

“Yep. As if Draco would ever let me not get a N.E.W.T mark in Potions.”

“He’s just a slimy Slytherin git!”

Harry turned to see Ron glaring at him from just behind him. Harry sighed. He didn’t want to deal with this.

“What’s the matter? Come to hit Harry and his baby again?” Lavender snarled aggressively, as she placed a hand over Harry’s belly.

Ron looked ashamed for all of three seconds before his face heated up.

“That’s a Death Eater baby!”
“How dare you!” Harry hissed. “All guilty Death Eaters were rounded up and put to trial, the remainder of those scum are on the run and in hiding! They can’t even show their faces or they’ll be arrested!”

“But the Malfoys are…”

“They were acquitted by the courts of all crimes!” Harry snarled fiercely. “There was overwhelming evidence that proved that Voldemort was holding the lives of Draco and Narcissa Malfoy over Lucius Malfoy’s head. Under the Wizardry Conduct Code of fifteen-forty, section four Lucius Malfoy was within his rights to attack, curse or kill anyone he saw fit to protect the life of his only named son and Heir as the Head of the only remaining bloodline of the Malfoy family.”

“They were still Death Eaters!”

“And so was Snape but he was also acquitted of all crimes, both in the first war and in the second! The world isn’t black and white, Ron. There were genuine people who were cursed, coerced, blackmailed and forced to do Voldemort’s bidding. The sooner you realise that the better!”

“That baby is doomed before it’s even born.” Ron hissed nastily. “It has two Death Eaters for Fathers and Merlin knows what those other two old men are like! They’re perverts! Paedophiles! You are after all only sixteen and they’re how old? Forty?”

“Stop it, Ron!” Hermione screamed with tears in her eyes, but Harry saw red.

He couldn’t control himself after hearing Ron call Draco and Blaise Death Eaters and Nasta and Max paedophiles and he couldn’t stop himself as his instincts demanded that he defend his dominants’ honour. He forgot all about magic and his wand and instead he launched himself at Ron and punched him several times before the redhead knew what had hit him.

Ron fell to the floor and Harry rode his body all the way down still hitting as much of him as possible, trying to cause Ron as much pain as he was feeling on the inside from his words. He ignored the shouts and screams; he just kept hitting that nasty, lie spewing mouth with his clenched fist, ignoring the blood and blocking any attempt Ron took to hit him back.

Someone shouted above all the rest of the crowd that had gathered, but they were further away. That same person swore when he didn’t stop, Harry heard pounding footsteps that covered the distance to where he had Ron pinned on the floor over the wet grass and then the same person shouted a spell that hit him in the back and he fell forward, into blackness.

Harry woke up and blearily looked around. He was in the hospital wing again…he recognised the ceiling. He sat up and looked around, he was definitely in the hospital wing, only there was a floating yellowish green orb hung in mid-air next to him. He rubbed his eyes to make sure that he was actually seeing what he was looking at. The orb was still there floating next to him like a ghostly tennis ball. He stared at it and even as he watched the orb went a little bit greener.

“Madam Pomfrey?” Harry called out hoarsely, his throat was very dry.

There was the sound of flat soled shoes on the smooth, tiled floor and Madam Pomfrey poked her head out from around her office door.
“Oh, Mister Potter.” She cried out as she bustled to him. “You’re boys have been so frantic.”

“How long was I out?” He asked with a frown. The last thing he remembered was hitting seven shades of shit out of Ron.

“Overnight dear, it’s Saturday morning.”

Harry’s stomach jolted. He was going to the party today. He was going to meet his mates’ families today.

“Am I well enough to go?” Harry asked.

“Maybe around midday, dear, but not right now. You had quite a tumble.”

“The baby?!” Harry asked quickly, pressing a hand to his belly hard.

“Perfectly fine, Harry. This observation orb has been monitoring the baby. The brighter the green colour the healthier the baby.”

“Not to worry, Harry, if the baby was in any danger the yellow would darken to orange and then turn to red. Red is the stillborn or miscarriage zone. I believe that the slightly off green colour is due to the fact that you haven’t eaten anything yet.”

Harry nodded and accepted the bowl of porridge that Madam Pomfrey had made for him to eat, keeping his eye on the orb, hypnotised by the colour changing, getting a deeper, darker green with every bite he took.

He put the nearly empty bowl aside when a wave in his belly threatened to make him sick.

“What happened, Madam Pomfrey? The last thing I remember was Ron calling my mates paedophiles and I just started hitting him.”
“Well, Professor Drios saw the fight and he tried to stop you, when you didn’t listen he hit you with a very powerful stunning spell. He didn’t realise who you were, or that you were pregnant, your back was to him, but he is very apologetic. He would never have hit a pregnant student with a powerful stunning spell otherwise, they can be quite dangerous, but I have triple checked and your baby is fine. Professor Drios aimed at, and hit, your upper back, not anywhere near your baby.” The matron assured.

“What about Ron?”

“You did quite a number on him, but I fixed up the worst of the cuts and bruises. He was released an hour after he came to the ward. You on the other hand were out for the count. Professor Drios is known for his very powerful stunning spells. It was decided to keep you stunned and let you sleep it off naturally so we, Professor Snape and I, could observe your baby for any signs of damage more sufficiently.”

“Please tell me that my mates aren’t chasing the Professor around the school?”

“No, after the initial wave of anger and fury, Professor Dumbledore managed to get them to realise that it was a simple mistake and after being assured that there was absolutely nothing wrong with you or the baby, they saw fit to forgive Professor Drios.”

“That’s a first.” Harry grumbled wondering how much of their forgiveness was Professor Dumbledore’s doing.

“Well he was very sorry, Harry and he did absolutely no harm. In fact he might have saved your baby, your pregnancy is so delicate, Harry, that any vigorous or even a very sharp movement could detach the placenta. I’ve been reading up on Dracken pregnancies for you and apparently the reason for this is your abnormally thick sac lining which holds and protects the baby, the fingers of the placenta can’t grip in deep enough to keep the placenta stabilised because of how thick the lining is and if you make a sudden, violent movement, the fingers just come loose and then detach.”

Harry sighed. “I couldn’t stop myself from hitting him. He had offended me, had shamed my mates, I had to get retribution, I had to take revenge, I couldn’t let him get away with calling them paedophiles and Death Eaters.”

“No, Drackens are very prideful creatures, Harry. The moment he cast a doubt over them, you had to answer it, regardless of anything else. Your mates understand that, I understand and so does the Headmaster. Then, even those who know nothing about your creature heritage know why you did what you did; he did say some very vile things according to the witnesses.”
“Am I in trouble?”

“No dear, Mister Weasley got a month in detention for the vile slander he uttered and for intentionally baiting a pregnant man into a fight to go with the two months he got for punching you in this very ward.”

“I didn’t know he had gotten detention.”

“Well did you think he’d get away with hitting you and not have a punishment?!” Madam Pomfrey demanded. “No! He got two months’ worth of detentions, had his flying privileges’ stripped from him and he is not allowed to visit Hogsmeade. We have the full backing of his parents, who sent him a Howler the week you were on your heat period. I believe he received four of them. One from his parents, one from his brother Bill, one from his brother Charlie and another from his Aunt Muriel who was particularly disgusted, I also believe that his twin brothers, Fred and George sent his sister Ginny a package that she has been using to prank him, but of course no one can prove it.”

Harry smiled. He remembered the last time Ron had gotten a Howler from Mrs Weasley back in their second year. The Howler from her was almost punishment enough, almost. But to get four of them? He would have loved to have seen the reception that had gotten.

“So Ron has another month of detention thrown on top of the two months he already had? But Madam Pomfrey there is only two and a half months left of the school term.”

“Mister Weasley has already served some of his detentions, but I believe that Professor McGonagall is going to make a note of the outstanding detentions at the end of the year and the remaining detentions will start up again on the second of September.”

Harry smiled. He liked knowing that Ron was being punished, that not even the teachers would have let Ron get away with hitting a pregnant person. He just couldn’t wait until the papers got a hold of the information. The headlines would be spectacular and the number of Howlers Ron had received so far would pale to how many he’d be sent from the great British public; however he knew there would be a few ‘congratulatory’ letters thrown in there, after all not everyone liked him and not everyone was going to like his choice in lovers.
Harry had been picked up from the hospital wing by Draco, who had been the first of his mates to wake up and come and visit him. He had admitted to not being able to sleep very well. Madam Pomfrey had let him go early instead of keeping him until midday when she was assured that Harry and the baby, whose observation orb had gone a solid, bright green, were perfectly fine and healthy.

Harry had sat cuddling and talking with Draco on the settee until Max had stumbled blearily into the room, half-dressed and yawning, ready for his morning tea. He had scooped Harry up as soon as he had laid eyes on him with a happy yell which had brought Blaise and Nasta running.

After assuring his mates that he and the baby were fine, being backed up by Draco who had Madam Pomfrey’s word of honour as a medi-witch that Harry and the baby were fighting fit, they had stepped back and allowed him to breathe as Max happily started on breakfast.

“Croissants!” Harry answered happily, before anyone else could say anything.

“Croissants it is.” Max grinned. “Blaise, get the conserves, Draco, get the cutlery, Harry, lay out the napkins, Nasta, plates please. Get a move on people we have a lot to do today.”

Harry grinned as he brushed around Max’s bum, making sure to touch as much of it as possible, to get to the drawer where he kept the fabric napkins. Max had sorted out their little kitchenette to his liking near enough on the same day he had arrived here, Harry thought it was adorable, but he didn’t dare tell Max anything. He had told Blaise instead who had snorted in amusement.

Fresh croissants usually took eight or nine hours to make from scratch, but Harry watched as Max took shortcuts by using magic. He flicked his wand very often when cooking and Harry recognised cooling charms when he saw them. It wasn’t even half an hour later when a very large plate piled high with warm, fresh from the oven, croissants was placed in the middle of the table.

“There’s more if you want them, but I couldn’t get any more onto the plate.” Max told them with a grin as he took one of the pastries and smeared it with raspberry jam.

Nasta waited until everyone had a croissant before taking one himself and Harry noticed that he waited until everyone had taken the first bite before doing so himself. Nasta had been waiting for Harry, who had spent a lot of time covering his own croissant very thickly with honey.

“You’ll rot your teeth if you keep eating that.” Draco told him shaking his head.

“Then I’ll pull them out and drink Skele-Gro.” Harry answered rolling his eyes.
“That stuff tastes absolutely vile, Harry.” Max warned him.

“I know. I had all the bones in my right arm removed when I was twelve. I had to take a beaker of it every four hours until all thirty-three bones were grown back in my arm.”

“How did you manage to remove all the bones in your arm?” Nasta asked him, a deep frown on his face. “It’s very difficult to remove bones and only a specialist at St Mungos would be able to extract a demolished bone to have it replaced.”

“It’s a funny story. It was during a Quidditch match, I got hit by a rogue bludger that snapped my arm at the elbow. We had a terrible fraud as a defence teacher who insisted that he fix my arm himself. I told him that I would rather keep my arm broken and go up to the hospital wing to have it fixed by Madam Pomfrey, but he wouldn’t listen to me, he wanted to show off to the crowd that had gathered around us. A long story short, he said a made up spell that could have been anything and it actually vanished all of my bones and I had to spend the entire night with stabbing pains running up and down my arm as the bones grew back. I’m sure a couple of teeth won’t hurt any more than having every single bone in my arm re-grown.”

“So that’s what happened to you. Some Hufflepuff was banging on that you had tried to do it yourself and dropped your wand onto your arm and made all the bones disappear.”

“How the hell can you believe that?” Harry demanded of Draco. “Obviously she was a Lockhart lover and thought that he could do no wrong.”

The blond shrugged and took another bite from his croissant, chewing and then swallowing before he spoke again. “Us Slytherins didn’t really care, you’d won the match and that was all we were interested in at the time.”

“Lovely people you Slytherins.” Harry sniffed, but let out a giggle when Blaise poked his side with a finger.

“Do we have apricot jam?” Harry asked as he searched for it in the twelve or so jars on the table, getting slightly panicked when he couldn’t see it.

“We should have.” Max told him.
Harry pouted when he couldn’t find it, his heart rate spiking just a tad. He got up only to be ushered back down. Max went digging through his jar cupboard and brought out the aforementioned jam from the back.

“Must have missed that one.” Blaise shrugged.

Harry happily spread the jam onto his croissant, smeared honey over it and bit into the pastry.

“Please tell me that that wasn’t your first food craving.”

Harry frowned. “It might have been. But then it could have been that I just really wanted apricot jam.” Harry shrugged and took another bite.

“Just don’t start eating anchovies. I hate anchovies.” Draco shuddered.

Harry chuckled. “I hate them too, so don’t worry about that.”

“I never knew you didn’t like anchovies.” Blaise said. “I thought you told me all of your likes and dislikes over Christmas.”

“I did. I hate all seafood and shellfish. An anchovy is a fish. Fish come from the sea, seafood.”

Max burst out laughing and had to cough a couple of times as he inhaled a piece of croissant.

“What?” Harry demanded.

“I fed you all smoked haddock last week. A haddock is a fish; fish come from the sea, seafood.”

Harry giggled, turned it into a chuckle before shaking his head. “I like haddock and salmon. Not sure if I like cod, I’ve never had it, but every other fish is gross.”
Max shook his head. “I’ll be sure not to give you any other seafood then. Though perhaps you could try cod?”

Harry shrugged. “I’m up for trying it all again if you want me too. It might have been my Aunt’s cooking that made it taste bad.”

Max smiled happily at him and Harry felt like melting. He liked making his mates feel happy and if eating seafood made Max happy, then Harry was willing to give it another try, though he was sure he didn’t like anchovies, or prawns for that matter, or octopus. He shivered at that last one, definitely not octopus.

---

“I’m uncomfortable!” Harry whined as he pulled on the waist of his new dress robes. Max had bought them on the way home from work yesterday. They were a beautiful forest green colour and made from lambswool and cashmere. They were super soft and very comfortable, except that they showed off his bulging belly to the max, which meant that they were very tight and constricting around his bump.

“I think you look gorgeous.” Blaise complimented from where he was checking himself out in the mirror, his own dark blue robes were made from crushed velvet.

Draco came out of the bathroom dressed in robes made of silvery-grey silk. Harry rolled his eyes at the extravagance, but he had to admit that Draco looked good.

Nasta wore dress robes made of simple black cotton, but they were cut in such a way that made them look like they had costed a thousand Galleons when they hadn’t, only a really experienced tailor could have pulled that off. Max looked stunning in woollen dress robes the same colour as his eyes, which also matched his scales when he unsheathed his wings.

“What time is it?” Max asked as he fastened the cuffs of his dress robes with fancy cufflinks. Harry had also been made to wear cufflinks. He missed his old dress robes which had been made with teenagers in mind and hadn’t needed any cufflinks, fiddling about or other fancy accessories.

“Nearing half five.” Nasta answered, trying his shoelaces. “Are we all ready?”
Various grunts and murmurs echoed around the room. Harry didn’t bother answering. All of his mates had taken the time to dress him in the robes, groom him and make sure he looked perfect. This was the first time that Harry was going to be going into the Dracken circles and a submissive was a huge source of pride to a dominant, so he understood that he had to look good to make his mates look good, but he hated being uncomfortable or fussed over.

“Come on then.” Nasta said as he stood and took Harry’s hand. It made him feel more like a child and less of a lover, he didn’t like it.

Harry pulled his hand from Nasta’s and wrapped an arm around his waist instead. It felt better and Nasta didn’t question him, but draped an arm over his shoulders. It made the situation feel more intimate and Harry smiled, much happier now.

They were taking a Portkey and Harry swallowed as his heart accelerated. He hadn’t touched a Portkey since the end of the Tri-wizard tournament when he had touched the cup to bring him and Cedric’s dead body back to Hogwarts. He felt sick and he held tightly onto Nasta.

“It’ll only last a moment, Harry.” Draco added, holding his other side.

Harry nodded and touched a finger to the embossed piece of paper that was Max’s invitation to the party. Max, Nasta and Blaise had all gotten one, but as the Dracken circles didn’t know about Harry or Draco, they didn’t have an invitation. But after tonight they would be getting one every year, not five invitations, but one, addressed to all of them, because they were one family and Harry was going to let them all know that these men were his and no one could take them from him.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Harry landed with a bump and would have gone straight to the floor if it hadn’t have been for Draco’s arm curling around his back and Nasta’s steadying grip around his waist.

Harry stood back on his feet and looked around. They were in a very elaborate and extravagant room. The solid gold carvings on the archways, the solid marble flooring, the pure ivory pillars, Harry had never seen such a waste of money in all his life.

“Where the hell are we?” He asked.
“The Dracken Counsel meeting halls.” Blaise answered him.

“Huh, so this is where I could have had my dominant meetings. I think the hell hotel was the better choice personally.”

His mates snorted and ushered him out of the room to where a tall man stood with a book on a pedestal; he looked like the Maître d’ for a restaurant. He looked first at Max and Nasta and obviously recognised them as he smiled and greeted them politely before looking down his book to check them off, then he looked to Blaise and nodded with a smiled greeting, checking him off without ever asking for a name, then he looked at Draco and frowned.

“I have never seen you before.” He said carefully, trying not to offend him.

“Draco Malfoy. I came into my inheritance last June.”

“Ah! Your first gathering.” The man made a happy note in his book and then his eyes fell down to him.

Those eyes widened as he realised that he was a male submissive and then his gaze dropped even lower, taking in the exposed bump. His eyes rose to meet Harry’s again and he swallowed.

“Please try not to drool over our mate, David.” Max growled out testily. “I’d hate to have to rip your tongue from your mouth.”

“N…name please.” The man, David, asked, trying and failing to keep his eyes on Harry’s, his gaze kept trying to go lower than was polite.

“Harry Potter, this is my first meeting too.”

David let out a dramatic little gasp and held his quill out from his body as if it would act like a shield to Harry’s words.
“Please tell me they aren’t all going to act like this?” Harry asked, turning around to address Max and Nasta.

“They had better not.” Draco growled jealously.

Nasta rolled his eyes and wrapped an arm around Harry and led him across the corridor that was filled with more gold, silver, marble and what looked like crystal tables, through a set of double doors that led to a huge, cavernous room where soft music was playing and the gentle hum of voices were heard.

There were about one hundred and fifty people in the room, all mingling about, talking, hugging like old friends. There were children running around and toddlers playing in a corner crèche as their Mothers happily boasted to friends and acquaintances about their children nearby. There were four, subtly armed, guards stationed around the crèche, Harry blinked at them and couldn’t help but stare at the level of protection the babies had.

Harry stuck close to Nasta as he walked through the crowd of people, but no one paid him a second glance. Any and all looks were for his dominants. Harry didn’t like that, it made his gut twist.

“Maximilius!” A woman called out happily.

Max groaned softly under his breath. Harry smiled as the elderly woman embraced his mate as Max was obviously uncomfortable, but Harry’s eyes narrowed when the woman gestured a younger, slighter woman over. No, not a woman, a girl. His eyes flashed dangerously.

“Max honey, this is my youngest daughter Gretchen. Sixteen next week, she’s about to get her inheritance. The meeting will be held at Joshua’s and my home, please come?”

“You don’t know if Miss Gretchen will be a submissive yet, Gertrude.” Max answered smoothly, never taking his eyes off the woman in front of him, not even giving a passing glance at the woman’s daughter.

“Of course she will, Max! Look at her! Small and slight of build, she’s dark haired, you always did like dark hair.”

“He’s taken!” Harry hissed aggressively wrapping an arm around Max’s and moving to stand in front of him as if his five foot five inch frame could hide Max’s six foot eight inches from the lustful gazes of Gertrude and her daughter Gretchen.
“Maximilius, did I hear right? You have found a mate at last?” A man appeared and put an arm around the woman Gertrude.

“I have, Joshua. This is Harry.”

“A male submissive?” The man, Joshua, cried in shock. “But there hasn’t been a meeting for a male submissive in centuries!”

“Harry has been the first in a long while.” Max answered tightly, he obviously didn’t like these people.

“Well you really are a lucky sod, mind it did take you twenty years to get a mate.” Joshua ribbed. “He is a gorgeous little thing isn’t he?”

Harry growled at being called little and a thing in the same sentence and bared his teeth.

“Feisty as well. You do know how to pick them. Then he is pregnant, it can be expected. Do your Fathers know? They didn’t mention it when I asked after you earlier. They didn’t seem to think you were coming, they actually said that they hadn’t heard from you.”

“I have been busy settling in with my mate and his other dominants; I didn’t know if I was coming tonight.”

“But you have come.” Gertrude cut in. “Are you sure Gretchen cannot tempt you, Max?”

“I am a happily bonded man!” Max stated harshly, still not looking at the young girl, who looked very put out by his pointed disinterest.

Gertrude looked sullen and then she brightened up as she caught sight of some other poor bastard that she dragged Gretchen over to meet.

“Pay no mind to Gertie; she’s desperate to find a good, stable mate for our Gretchen. She’s our only unmated child now.”
“Yes, well if you don’t mind, we’ll be going to find my Fathers.” Max intoned dryly.

He didn’t even give Joshua the time to answer before tugging Harry in the opposite direction.

“Poisonous sharks the lot of them!” Max growled.

“At least you have Harry to defend your honour.” Draco smirked.

“I didn’t like the way she was looking at him!” Harry hissed at Draco. “Bitches the both of them!”

“I think someone is a little jealous.” Max smiled

“Like you weren’t jealous of that David prat practically eating me with his eyes! I don’t like it here.”

“You might as well get used to it.” Blaise told him. “Everyone’s going to be trying to get someone for their son or their daughter. I did tell you that the main purpose of these meetings a few decades ago was to betroth Dracken children to one another; the purpose hasn’t been dropped entirely.”

“I thought it was illegal now.”

“It is illegal to betroth a Dracken to another Dracken, that doesn’t mean that parents can’t give their kids a…shove in the direction of the dominant that they want their kid with.”

“Disgusting.” Harry sneered. “I don’t care what any of you say, our children will have properly planned out meetings and will choose whomever they want as long as they treat my baby right, if they don’t then I’ll skin them.”

Max grinned and bent to kiss Harry’s head. A group of older women cooed and giggled at them and Harry felt his face heat up without his permission.

“Nas!” A voice called out and Harry was all ready to dive in front of Nasta and protect him from some idiot who wanted his oldest mate for their child when he saw who had actually called out to Nasta.

Harry stopped dead and just looked at the man who looked like an older version of Nasta, only with very noticeable mistakes. Where Nasta’s eyes were a light hazel colour, with hints of green and gold, this man’s eyes were darker, more of a true brown. Nasta’s hair was black, this man’s hair was a dark shade of brown and where Nasta was six foot six, this man was six foot four.

Nasta embraced the man and they held each other for longer than a polite or friendly hug. Harry didn’t feel at all threatened by the display.

“I haven’t seen you in ages! Where have you been?”

“I have been very busy lately.”

“I’ll say. Dad isn’t best pleased with you. Why aren’t you in New Zealand? There’s a meeting over there isn’t there? That’s why all of the unmated dominants aren’t here. Please tell me you didn’t walk away from another mate, Dad’ll kill you.”

Harry smiled. This was Nasta’s older brother? He acted like he was younger; no wonder Nasta was so unconcerned with having Harry meet with him.

“I never went at all, Sanex.”

“How did you not go? It’s virtually impossible to resist the submissives call.”

“Unless I’m already mated.”

Harry took his cue and cuddled up to Nasta’s side. He grinned up at Nasta’s older brother.

“Hi.”

“Oh my giddy aunt. You got a mate! A pregnant mate! Ha! Dad is so going to kill you.” Sanex grinned happily before striding off through the crowd presumably to get Nasta’s Father.
“Killed if you haven’t got a mate, killed if you do, you’re screwed, mate.” Max grinned patting Nasta on the shoulder, Nasta smiled, before a small chuckle slipped from his lips.

“Why is your Dad going to kill you?” Harry asked.

“Because I haven’t written or been to see him in a while. That and he isn’t going to be pleased that I have gotten you and not told him.”

Max snorted. “I’m going to go and see if I can find my Fathers, I’d rather not watch you be chewed out by yours, no matter how funny it might be.”

Harry chuckled, but stopped when he saw the man that was cutting his way through everyone else to reach them.

“Yeah, I'm going to go find my Mother.” Blaise stated.

“I'll go with you.” Draco chuckled and the both of them shot off.

“Cowards.” Harry hissed.

“Nasta!” The man growled pulling his mate into a forceful hug that looked like it would break bones on a normal human. He held and touched as much of Nasta as he could, subtly sniffing him for injury or illness, Harry smiled at the display, it was so sweet.

Harry noticed that Nasta’s Dad was about the same height as Nasta at six foot six, but he was a lot broader than his son. Nasta got his muscles by hard, manual labour on the Dragon reserve, his Father looked like he had weightlifted a lot in his youth and now either he couldn’t be bothered or didn’t care about building his muscles anymore, but he was still a big man, a big, muscly, intimidating man.

“Sanex is going on about you having a pregnant submissive. I know it can't possibly be true, you would never have gotten a submissive pregnant without telling me that said submissive actually existed first.”
“I wasn’t lying!” Sanex burst in, appearing at Nasta’s elbow, facing Harry, who was standing back, just watching. “See, there he is, Dad.”

Nasta’s Father turned and looked at him. He roved his gaze all over him and settled on his protruding belly that was wrapped in Harry’s thin arms.

“Sanex get the boy.” Nasta’s Father ordered before he dragged Nasta by the arm through the crowd.

Sanex took his hand gently and began pulling him after his Father and Nasta like he was a little, lost child. Harry kicked him hard and strode after the two other Drackens, leaving Sanex to hobble after him.

Nasta’s Dad had gone into a private room down another corridor at the back of the meeting hall. Nasta embraced him as he walked through the door and held him gently and protectively.

“Where is Sanex?” The man growled.

“Limping his way down the corridor. He touched me without my permission!” Harry growled, glaring at Nasta’s Dad. He wasn’t liking this man or the way he treated Nasta at all.

“You hit my brother?” Nasta asked.

“Technically I kicked him.”

Nasta chuckled and kissed him. Sanex hopped into the room scowling and rubbing his shin.

“Kid has a hell of a kick on him.” He grumbled.

“Enough of this. When were you going to tell me that you were mated, Nasta?”

“Tonight.”

“Don’t you think that I would have rathered know before tonight? Say when you first got your mate,
“or when you got him pregnant.”

“Technically I didn’t get him pregnant.”

“Explain this to me, Nasta.”

“Harry has three other mates. I was the fourth. Harry got pregnant with the other three, so really there is no way this baby can biologically be mine.”

“You needed four mates?” Sanex asked in awe.

“I thought you said your brother was thirty-nine, not twelve?” Harry asked Nasta, who chuckled.

“You’ll have to forgive him, he’s human and he’s been spoilt beyond ruin.”

“So have you.” Sanex defended.

“So when exactly did you mate?” Nasta’s Father asked interrupting the sibling argument.

“April.”

“Only a month ago?” Nasta’s Dad asked with a hopeful hint in his voice.

“Yes.”

“Before or after I was ill? Why didn’t you mention it when you came to visit?” Sanex asked.

“It was after you were ill and I didn’t mention it because I had no idea at the time that Harry was going to choose me.”
“Of course I was always going to choose you, I loved you from the moment I first met you and I love you more and more each day.” Harry answered, kissing the underside of Nasta’s jaw.

The look on Nasta’s Dad’s face gave Harry hope that the man actually wasn’t a bastard and had just been shocked and surprised to find his youngest son mated and a soon to be Father. He looked so happy as he watched them kiss and cuddle.

“We haven’t been introduced.” He said holding out a hand. “I’m Aneirin Delericey.”

Harry looked at the hand before he gave an internal shrug of the shoulders and hugged the man around the middle. “I’m Harry Potter.”

“Harry Potter? As in the Harry Potter?” Sanex asked excitedly.

“Ask for an autograph why don’t you, Nex.” Nasta stated with an eye roll.

“So he is the Harry Potter?”

“You’re an idiot.” Nasta said affectionately.

The door opened and a bored Draco wandered in and right up to Harry. Aneirin pulled Harry behind him and growled. Draco hissed back and bared his fangs.

“Dad, it’s alright. This is Draco, one of our other dominants.”

“You’re liking them young aren’t you, Nas?” Sanex grinned.

“I chose Nasta not the other way around.” Harry defended hotly, the fight with Ron yesterday still fresh in his mind and the comment about Max and Nasta being paedophiles.

Sanex roared with laughter and even Nasta managed a small smile.
“He’s teasing, Cariad.”

“He isn’t very funny.” Harry scowled.

“I am happy to know that even though you are submissive that you will defend my son, even if it is from his own brother.”

“Don’t encourage him.” Draco bit out harshly. “He defends us enough and yesterday he ended up in the hospital wing because he was defending our honour. He needs to stop doing it.”

Nasta smacked the back of Draco’s head almost casually and Draco’s head dropped to his chest. He growled, but didn’t pick his chin back up. Nasta left Draco for a moment before he gently pulled his head up.

“You’re the top dominant?” Aneirin asked.

“Did you expect anything else?” Nasta grinned.

“Course he’s the top dominant if he’s the biggest and oldest out of a bunch of baby doms!” Sanex stated.

“He’s the oldest, but he isn’t the biggest.” Harry told them.

“Harry has also mated with the son of a very good friend of yours, Dad.”

“Maximilius Maddison.”

“Never Myron Maddison’s oldest?”
“The very same.”

“My word. Never would I have believed Myron and I to be related through a bond. Ha! This is going to tickle him something fierce. Where is he?”

“Max went to go and find his Dads, Draco where is Blaise?”

“Still looking for his Mother.” Draco answered.

“Blaise? I have heard that name before.” Aneirin said with a frown.

“Zabini. He’s the son of Marianna and Maximiliano Zabini.”

Nasta’s Dad laughed happily and shook his head.

“A fine collection you’ve got yourself, Harry.”

Harry frowned. “They’re not a collection, they’re my mates.” He told the man seriously.

Everyone started laughing at him and Harry huffed and walked away, wandering back into the main meeting hall. Draco followed him; Nasta stayed with his Dad and brother and started talking about everything that had happened in the last couple of months.

“Where are we going?” Draco asked.

“Away from those hyenas!” Harry sulked.

“Harry!”

Harry looked around at the sound of Blaise’s voice and felt his eyes widen at the absolutely massive woman beside him. She was taller than her son and more muscular than him, but they shared the same slender body. Despite all of her muscles and her height that would have most ordinary men running in the opposite direction, she still managed to look stunningly pretty in a violet dress and matching high heels.

Her slanted eyes were a pretty purplish-blue colour, lighter than Blaise’s deep indigo, that almost matched her dress and shoes perfectly, her nails were painted blue and the clutch purse she held, of course, matched everything else. Her thick, dark brown hair was curled and twisted into an elegant knot on the top of her head, leaving a few curly tendrils to fall down and soften her, slightly square, face.

“Bello, this is my Mother Marianna. Mother this is my mate, Harry.”

“This is the beautiful boy that I’ve heard so much about? Blaise I am disappointed in you.”

Marianna’s voice was a dark, seductive, yet oddly husky sound with the barest hints of a French accent, but it was the words that made Harry’s face fall. She didn’t like him.

“Honestly, Blaise, I know you have a way with words so I find myself at a loss as I did not think for a moment that you would underestimate your own mate’s beauty by such a considerable difference. He is not merely beautiful, he is completely stunning.”

“I did tell you that Harry was breath-taking, Mother. When I first saw him it was as if someone had punched right through my chest.”

“Yes, I understand more now what you meant. He sort of makes your breath catch in your lungs doesn’t he?”

Harry frowned in puzzlement. What the hell was going on? Draco wrapped an arm around him in silent support before leaning down and whispering in his ear.

“They are always like this. They always have been, just ignore them.”

Harry chuckled lightly and was soon found in Marianna’s arms as she hugged the life out of him.

“Careful of Harry’s baby, Mother!” Blaise stated quickly.
“I know I know, Blaise! Honestly, you’d think I’d never been pregnant before.”

“Yes, but forgive me for mentioning it, Mother, but you do have a tendency to forget your strength, do you remember my kitten, Hernandez, do you remember what you did to Hernandez when I was eight?”

Marianna harrumphed and flicked her hair and turned her back on her son playfully.

“I know an insult when I hear one. Come on, Harry darling, let’s go and get you a drink and leave these two cretins to themselves.”

Marianna shuffled Harry away from Blaise and Draco who were grinning. Harry pouted and followed Marianna to the bar that ran the entire length of one side of the room. There were four large men and two slender women working behind it.

One of the large men grinned and winked at him and Marianna growled at him. He paled and took a deep breath.

“I apologise.” He said in a deep voice. “I didn’t realise that you were a couple.”

Harry choked and coughed to try and get his breathing back to normal. “We’re not a couple!” He burst out when he could breathe properly.

The poor man behind the bar went red in the face and seemed to be dying of embarrassment on the spot.

“I…I’m sorry! I meant no offence.”

“None taken, your name is Adrian isn’t it? Nathan and Lisa’s son. Just be wary of my claws the next time you start flirting with my pregnant son-in-law.” Marianna hissed.

“Yes Ma’am.” Adrian gulped. “I…drinks! What can I get you?”
Harry chuckled at Adrian. He looked so embarrassed and so uncomfortable.

“I’ll have a champagne and Harry will have a sparkling grape juice.”

Harry didn’t mind someone ordering his drink for him, because he had absolutely no idea what this place served. He accepted the tall champagne flute filled with what looked like alcohol, but at Marianna’s urging, he took a small sip and found it really was just grape juice made to look like champagne. Probably so the pregnant submissives didn’t feel left out.

“Oh! Excuse me, Harry, Josiah came after all!” Marianna stated happily and excitedly as she gracefully weaved through the people towards a short, thin, balding man who looked to be wearing an entire jewellery store on his person.

Harry decided to wander around a bit. Max had told him that he would be perfectly safe at this meeting. Not only were there going to be Counsel Elders here, Dracken children and Dracken couples, but there were also dominant Drackens acting as security who would step in immediately to help if he got into any trouble, which wasn’t likely as nearly all unmated Drackens were in New Zealand. The only ones that weren’t were the Drackens who had either been rejected by the submissive or had left of their own free will or hadn’t been able to make it over to New Zealand.

This wasn’t a place for arguments or fights, this was simply a peaceful meeting for all the Drackens of the Northern hemisphere to meet up and exchange words, catch up with each other and hear the latest news on who was mated to whom or who was pregnant with whom. It was essentially a social gathering.

Harry found himself gravitating towards the corner crèche where all the little toddlers were clambering over padded walls and poles, jumping into ball pits and playing with stuffed toys. He stood close by one of the armed guards so he wouldn’t be accused of trying to take a child or hurting or attacking one. The last thing he wanted was for the Drackens to call him a paedophile. It was bad enough that Ron was falsely accusing Max and Nasta of it because they were in a relationship with him.

“You know you can get in with them.” The guard told him with a knowing smile.

“They aren’t my children.” Harry said as he drew his attention to the guard from two little girls braiding a third’s golden coloured, waist length hair, they all looked about four.

The guard snorted lightly in amusement. “It doesn’t matter. These kids love having a willing adult to play with.”
Harry looked at the guard pointedly. He snorted again.

“We’re here purely just to put the parents at ease and to discourage anyone from trying to remove these kids from the crèche. We had some dozy, drunk dominant try to take an armful of kids a few years back. He thought they were his own, but that’s beside the point. The Counsel decided to put guards on the kids after that, just in case.”

“So are those guns real?” Harry asked, eyeing the weapon concealed under the guards open blazer.

“Yep. But we only get to fire them in extreme cases, like if someone tried to steal away a kid that wasn’t theirs on purpose.”

“Why do Drackens even need guns?” Harry asked curiously. “Why don’t you just rip the kidnapper to pieces with your claws or use magic?”

“Because cutie, when you’re up against someone who also has claws and magic it’s not really an advantage. The kidnapper could outweigh us by a hundred pounds, or he could be a better fighter or be better at offensive spells.”

“So the guns give you an advantage over them?”

“Exactly right. Now go help those little girls put those beads in, they look like they’re having trouble.” The guard encouraged.

Harry smiled and climbed carefully over the mesh net fence, being helped and told off simultaneously by the guard for not asking for help over the fence after the man realised that Harry was actually pregnant.

He approached the little girls cautiously and sat down with them at their tiny table and chairs set, they were having trouble with the beads and the girl with the long, golden blonde hair was whimpering in pain with a shine of tears in her big blue eyes as the other girls tried to force the beads onto her plaits.

“Hey, do you need help?” He asked with a smile.

He had expected them to scream, to say no, to run away, to tell him to go away, to call him a stranger, or something similar, but he did not expect one of the little redheads to clamber right onto his lap and give him a fistful of brightly coloured beads.

“They won’t go on!” She told him with an adorable little pout.

“They hurt!” The little girl with blonde hair whined, her plaits all ruffled up with odd strands of hair sticking out where the other little red head had tried to force them on.

“Come here.” Harry said gently as he eased himself and the redhead on his lap to the floor and he began undoing the plaits. “Let’s redo these all nice and pretty again.”

The two little redheads helped him undo the plaits and then redo them until they were perfect again.

“Now the trick with these beads is to use the special wand.” Harry told them.

“Mummy said we aren’t supposed to use wands!” The redhead on his left told him with a gasp.

“But this is a special wand.” Harry answered as he dug through the bead box until he found the applicator for the beads. “Here.” He said showing them the yellow plastic wand. “You pick which bead you want.” Harry smiled as the redhead on his right thrust a bright pink bead at him. “You slide the bead over the tip of the wand, all the way down. You pick the plait you want it on and push it through the little hole.” He said as he put one golden plait into the hole as gently as he could. “Then you hold the bead between your fingers and pull the wand, which pulls plait out, threading the bead onto it. See.”

“It works!” The little girls squealed and began examining the bead on the end of the plait.

“I want this glitter one next!” The blonde haired girl exclaimed thrusting a clear yellow bead at him filled with silver glitter.

Harry showed the girls how to use the wand again, taking one of the redhead’s little hands and letting her do it with him holding her hand and the wand. He did the next bead, a pretty pearly purple one, holding the other little red headed girl’s hand and the next one, a livid orange. Then he let the little girls carry on, even digging out another bead applicator, only this one green so that they could both put beads in the blonde girl’s hair.

Once they ran out of plaits to put beads onto they all looked so put out. The little redheads had their hair perfectly coiffured into loose rolls that were pinned to their heads with hairpins. Harry could just guess that their Mother had told them not to spoil their hair.

“Why don’t you put beads into my hair?” He offered smiling softly as their faces lit up. He had to dig another plastic applicator out of the box for the little blonde girl, this one was red.

Their fingers tugged and pulled and twisted his hair and Harry grimaced now and then when strands came loose from his scalp but he otherwise ignored the small bites of pain as the little girls laughed and giggled happily as they put small plaits on every inch of his head, putting up to four beads on each one until he looked like a reject from an arts and crafts factory.

“Marisa, what are you doing to that poor man?” A woman said with a wide grin as she stepped over the mesh fence, addressing the blonde haired little girl who was twisting a bead tightly into a plait on the top of his head.

Harry got a good look at the guard who had helped him over the fence, the man had lingering traces of laughter on his face and his eyes were still crinkled in an effort not to burst out laughing again. Harry was glad he found it amusing; he probably looked so comical it was a wonder that those in the proximity hadn’t wet themselves yet.

“Making him pretty, Mummy! Isn’t he so pretty?”

“Yes, I dare say he is.” The woman answered, chuckling lightly behind her hand. “I do apologise if these girls have coerced you into doing this, they could wheedle the secrets out of a man with no mouth.”

“It’s alright. I saw that they were struggling to put beads into your daughter’s hair so I decided to help, then they ran out of plaits and I offered them my hair to play with.”

The woman chuckled lightly. “That was very brave of you; I wouldn’t have done what you have.”

“Janine? What have those girls been doing?” A man asked as he gaped at Harry from over the mesh fence.

“My Husband.” The woman told Harry, before turning to him. “Our Marisa and her friends are making him pretty. Rory honey.”

“Pretty? Dear, don’t you think you should stop them?”

“All done!” One of the redheads exclaimed proudly.

“Too late, darling.” Janine answered.

Rory shook his head in exasperation and wandered away. Harry chuckled as Janine and the little girls giggle. Janine took hold of Maris’s hand.

“Come along, Marisa, Auntie Judith has arrived and wants to see you.” Janine said as she pulled her daughter over to the fence and stepped over it waving at Harry, leaving him with the two red headed girls who had picked up baby dolls and were playing a game they called ‘Mummies and babies’ They had tried to give him a doll and a fake bottle, but he had declined and told them, before they started crying, that he already had his own baby to look after and pointed out his large stomach.

“I hope they aren’t being too much of a bother.” A red headed woman that could only be their Mother stated, stepping over the fence with the help from another guard as her heavily pregnant belly was as exposed as Harry’s, it seemed to be a trend to show off their baby bellies.

“Not at all.” Harry smiled back.

“I quite like it. I’m not sure if my mates will agree, but then it’s not their hair.”

The woman laughed joyously and Harry found himself smiling.

“Who are your mates? I haven’t seen you around so this must be your first gathering.”

“It is. I turned sixteen last July. My first mate is Blaise Zabini…”
“Oh Blaise? He’s a lovely gentleman. He’s been coming here for years with his Mother, Marianna. I only met his Father, Maximiliano, a handful of times. It was so sad how he died, but it was always going to happen, one of them was always going to kill the other. It was a tragedy when Marianna came into her inheritance as a dominant Dracken. She had shot up that year to six foot and had gained a lot of muscle, her parents tried to back out of the betrothal then, they had a feeling that she would be a dominant, but of course the betrothals were final and permanent. Theirs was one of the last, when the Elders saw what happened, how Maximiliano died so horrifically by the hands of a pregnant Marianna, well. My mate says that it was lucky that Marianna caught Maximiliano off guard or it could have been her and Blaise that had died.”

Harry sucked in a breath. Blaise had told him that his Father had died when he was a few weeks old, not that his Mother had been pregnant with him when she had killed his Father. Hadn’t Blaise told him that he took comfort from knowing that his Father had held him? But if what this woman was saying was true, then Marianna had lied to her son. If what this woman was saying was true, then Maximiliano hadn’t even seen his son, let alone held him.

“Who is your other mate?” The woman asked, dragging his attention back to the conversation.

“I… the next one was Draco, then Max and finally Nasta.”

“You have four mates?” The woman asked in awe and slight sympathy. “I don’t recognise the first two, but the last. Well it’s hard to forget such an unusual name as Nasta. Aneirin Delericey always did have a strange taste for strange names, the only relatively sane name in that family was their daughter, Angharad, that was a tragedy as well, she died so young, but it was Lowri who named Angharad, Aneirin named the boys, but of course he had to name Nasta as Lowri died before she could name him.”

“Draco’s new to the scene as well. His inheritance was a month before mine, but perhaps you’d recognise Max more if I told you his full name was actually Maximilius?”

“Maddison? As in Myron Maddison’s only son?”

“Max said he had a brother.” Harry said confusedly.

“Yes, but Ashleigh, Maximilius’ Mother needed two dominants, Myron and Richard. Caesar is Richard’s son and Maximilius is Myron’s.”
Harry swallowed. The way people spoke of Max’s Father. Such tones of respect and pride and awe. Harry was wondering for the first time, just what had he gotten himself into.

“Julia?”

Harry and the red headed woman looked up to the caramel haired woman stepping over the fence to come and greet them. She was huge and muscly, obviously another dominant female, but like Marianna Zabini she retained an air of femininity about her as she navigated her way through the strewn about toys in her high heels.

“Sarah, what’s wrong?” The red headed woman, Julia, asked.

“My Father wishes to see his granddaughters before he leaves. His arm is playing up again and he wants more potion.” The woman, Sarah, answered with a sigh.

“Okay. I’ll go and grab the girls.”

Harry turned to the table the little red headed girls had been sat on to find them gone; they had obviously ran off some when whilst he had been talking to Julia.

“What happened to your hair?” Sarah asked as she seemed unable to hold her tongue after staring at him for over a minute.

“Our girls happened.” Julia answered as she came back tugging a little girl in each hand.

“He looks pretty doesn’t he, Daddy?” One little girl stated.

It was Harry’s turn to stare as the woman Sarah, was referred to as Daddy.

“I see from the look on your face you’ve never met an all-female couple?”
“I…I just…I…um…” Harry trailed off and scratched the back of his head in embarrassment.

“No need to panic, it is quite rare, not as rare as an all-male harem though.” Julia told him as she leant forward and kissed Sarah passionately, Sarah’s arms coming around Julia to cradle her gently and to stroke her bump, just like his men did to his bump. His hand automatically went to it and stroked it.

“How do you…how did you…?” Harry gestured helplessly at the bump.

“Get pregnant?” Sarah finished for him and grinned as he nodded. “Quite simple really, all we…”

“Sarah! Should we be telling a sixteen year old male submissive how all-female couples get pregnant? He is obviously gay himself and I don’t think he’d appreciate it.”

“Nonsense, Julia love, he’s obviously curious and it’ll be a learning point for him.” Sarah answered before turning back to Harry. “It’s really just a creative use of fingers.”

Harry choked and spluttered at hearing that and his face lit up like a beacon.

“We need to mingle our juices so I get my juices onto my fingers and insert them into Julia as far as I can and rub up by her cervix. Her juices mix with mine and her Dracken magic does the rest. It does take a couple of tries though. Where you male submissives get pregnant on your first or second tries, it takes us three or four tries to get a baby and where you can get pregnant on your heats, we can’t, the heat is too instinctual, to rough and primal, we need our minds and thoughts to get pregnant and that doesn’t happen on a heat which is why each of our children is precious to us.”

Harry wished the floor would open up and swallow him whole. He didn’t think he had ever been so embarrassed before in his life. He couldn’t get the mental images of the two women in front of him inserting their fingers into places he had never seen, or ever wanted to see, to get a baby. He felt like puking to get rid of the images, but he didn’t want to hurt the women’s feelings, nor cause a scene.

“Have you scarred the poor boy enough now? Natalie and Kayla are getting tired and we still have to find your Father.” Julia snapped, stomping away towards the mesh fence. Sarah jogged after her in her high heels in time to support her…Wife? over the fence.

Harry wandered over to the fence and the same guard that he had been talking to before placed his “Your hair looks like it has clumps of clay stuck in it.” He snickered.

Harry chuckled and tugged on the tight beads. He’d take them out as soon as he was sure that the three little girls who had put them in were gone. He could see Natalie and Kayla being hugged by a very elderly man and Marisa’s head of blonde plaits with their brightly coloured beads were bouncing on her Father’s shoulders.

Harry couldn’t see any of his mates anywhere and he wondered where they had gotten too. He wandered back to the bar and ordered another sparkling grape juice, listening to others conversations and being dragged into odd talks and being given advice by elderly Drackens before he got away and wandered around the room, dodging children, who were starting to lose their energy and activity as it neared eight o’clock in the night and he kept to the edge of the room as much as he could.

“What the hell happened to your hair?”

Harry turned with a large smile as he recognised Max’s voice. He was standing tall and proud next to a man that could have only been his Father, they were easily the tallest men in the room and Max hadn’t been kidding about how broad his Father was, he wouldn’t fit through most normal doors.

There was a smaller, slighter man beside them, he was very good looking and had a soft smile, but a livid scar going down from his chin and over the front of his neck, like someone had taken a blade and had tried to cut his head in two from the neck up, Harry had no idea how the man had even survived.

There was a group of women with them, a blonde haired middle aged woman who had both of her arms through Max’s Father’s and the man with the scar, an older woman who was arm in arm with an older gentleman and three younger women who all bore some resemblance to each other. Harry realised then that he had walked right by their family reunion.

“You don’t like it?” Harry asked in a light, teasing way. “I was thinking of making it permanent.”

Max chuckled and gently pulled him into the circle of his arms, his hands splaying over his baby bulge and bringing his family’s attention to it.

“Is this your submissive, Max?” The blonde woman asked. “Harry?”

Max nodded with a smile, bending down to kiss him happily.
“So Maxie was telling the truth, you are in fact pregnant.” The older man stated with a smile. Harry heard Max’s voice filled with love and respect in his head telling him that only his grandfather called him Maxie and Harry realised exactly who he was talking to.

“Three months. My first baby.” Harry answered with a soft smile.

“Yet Maximilius tells us that already you have almost lost the baby twice.” Max’s Father, Myron, Harry remembered, stated with a raised eyebrow. The man wasn’t at all impressed with him.

“Yes.” Harry answered sadly. “A student at the school I go to punched my side when I was two months pregnant and the second time I leapt on him and punched him back for daring to insult my mates. That was yesterday.”

“Now Max did not tell us that.” The woman on Myron’s arm stated. Harry deduced that she must be Max’s Mother, Ashleigh and the other man must be Richard if what Julia had said was true.

“You never gave me the chance to, Mother, before you all started assuming the worst of Harry.” Max answered tightly as he held Harry tighter.

“Perhaps we were a bit too quick in judging him, but he is being a bit reckless isn’t he?”

“Ashleigh dear, you know that once a mate is insulted that that insult has to be answered.” The older woman stated firmly. “It must have been something particularly vile and vulgar to have a pregnant submissive react in a way that could have endangered his child.”

“He called Max a paedophile.” Harry informed them and there was almost instant outrage.

“That is preposterous!” Max’s grandfather burst out furiously.

“Absolutely untrue!” One of the younger women stated angrily.

“Completely outrageous!”
“You see now that I couldn’t let that bit of slime get away with calling Max such a horrible thing. I had to retaliate, I didn’t even think about it.”

“I never asked if you got a good hit on him.” Max grinned at him.

“I bloodied him up pretty bad, it took Madam Pomfrey an hour to fix the damage and someone said that he had to have Skele-Gro because I knocked out two of his teeth and broke his nose.”

“Good on you, lad.” Max’s grandfather complimented. “Next time you go for the eyes, they are not as easy to fix.”

“Grandfather!” One of the young girls replied with a shocked voice, she had Max’s thick, chestnut brown hair, the hair they shared with their Father.

“I apologise for such talk in front of you, Alayla dear, Harry.”

“Oh I don’t mind.” Harry grinned. “I like the useful tips I’m getting, some are very creative. One man over by the bar told me to aim for the back of the neck; apparently a good hit there will snap the spine in two and if it doesn’t kill them immediately, it’ll disable them.”

“So you have been speaking to people then?” Max asked surprised.

“Oh yes, I met a lovely couple, Julia and Sarah, who decided to torture me with the information on how Sarah got Julia pregnant.”

That brought a round of laughter and Harry relaxed back into Max. His family wasn’t bad at all, despite his initial thoughts of his Father, Myron.

“Are you going to tell us the story of how you managed to achieve this?” Max asked as he tugged lightly on a bead.

“I saw three little girls in the crèche who were having trouble putting beads into their hair, so I decided to help them out. When they ran out of hair to put the beads on they looked so upset that I offered them my hair to use instead.”

Max chuckled along with his family.

“Well they certainly made use of every strand of hair you have, Harry, how long are you keeping these in for? I don’t think I’ll be able to sleep next to you if you have a head full of hard plastic.”

“Probably until the girls leave. I can still see Natalie and Kayla. I don’t want to hurt their feelings, but you do know that my hair is going to be even worse than usual when I take them out?”

“It can’t be any worse than it normally is.” Nasta answered as he appeared at Max’s shoulder and gave Harry a kiss to the cheek before fingering the beads.

“One of the other mates you told us about is Nasta Delericey?” Myron Maddison demanded.

“You got a problem with that?” Harry demanded back, glaring at the impossibly huge man who looked taken aback by his aggression.

Max’s grandfather laughed happily. “He’s like a blast of cool air on a scorching hot day.”

“How many mates do you have, darling?” Ashleigh asked, making no secret of how hungrily she was looking at his baby belly.

“Four.” Harry answered his eyes still glaring holes into Myron’s deep black. Max got his eyes from his Mother.

“Dear Merlin.” Ashleigh gasped. “I only have these two and they fought like cat and dog for three weeks after I had chosen them.”

Harry snorted. “Five months down the line and mine are still fighting.”

“Still? But surely they know their order by now.”
“Oh they do, some of them just don’t want to accept that order.” Harry answered with a pointed look up at Max, who growled lowly.

Nasta cuffed the back of his head and Max’s chin went to his chest with the reprimand, like Draco’s had. Nasta pulled Max’s head back up gently and all was forgiven and Max looked a little bit sheepish at having growled in the first place.

“You are not top dominant?” Myron asked sending an astonished look at his son. “You, my only son, are subordinate to another man?” Myron actually smacked Max’s head like Nasta had; only his was meant to hurt where Nasta’s had been a light clip to reprimand.

Harry snarled and tried to launch himself at Myron, but was picked up and held kicking, scratching and snarling by Max, who looked faintly shocked at his behaviour.

“You touch him like that again and I’ll tear your face off with my teeth!” Harry spat.

“Harry, love. It’s part of how I grew up. My Dad has always given me physical discipline.”

“He shouldn’t hit you just because you aren’t the top dominant!” Harry hissed. “He has no idea how it happened, why or if there were any extenuating circumstances! He just assumed that you lost a fight and that’s that! Closed minded dick!” Harry spat at Myron, who was actually looking at him with budding respect in his eyes.

Max’s grandfather was beside himself as he started laughing so hard he had to hunch over his knees. Two girls jumped to support him, but he pushed them aside.

“I’m fine Julinda, Talia. Absolutely fine. Maxie, I adore your little mate and I would be highly offended if you did not bring him to my next birthday party.”

“Grandfather, your birthday is the twentieth of August, Harry will be nearly seven months pregnant at that time, I don’t think he’ll be able to go.”

“Just get me a wheelchair.” Harry stated. “I’d love to go. Your grandfather is great!”
Nasta chuckled softly next to him whilst the others all roared with laughter. Blaise and Draco appeared with Marianna and her newest Husband Josiah.

“There you are.” Blaise sighed with relief. “When I heard that Mother had left you on your own.” Blaise shook his head.

“What in the name of Merlin did you do to your hair?” Draco asked looking horrified and slightly sick. “I know I told you that anything would make it look better but I didn’t mean for you to go out and prove me wrong!”

“I take it these are the final two of your foursome?” Max’s previously silent second Father, Richard asked. His voice was hoarse and slightly strangled, as if the blade that had sliced his neck had also sliced his voice box.

“Yes, Blaise and Draco.”

“I, of course, recognise the son of the lovely Marianna, but correct me if I’m wrong, but aren’t you the only son of Lucius Malfoy? I had no idea that Dracken blood ran in the Malfoy family.” Max’s grandfather commented.

“It doesn’t.” Draco replied. “My Mother is a daughter of the Black family, Harry and I get our Dracken blood from the same ancestor.”

“How odd. Usually our Dracken blood repels those of close blood.”

“We aren’t close.” Draco stated with narrowed eyes. “Cygnus Black was my great-great grandfather and Harry’s great grandfather. Two separate family lines created, separated and diluted through marriage many times over.”

“Ah, that explains it. I knew there was no way for blood relatives to be mates. Our Drackens just won’t allow us.”

Harry squirmed to be put down and Max reluctantly set him on his feet, but kept an arm around his shoulders and kept himself between him and his Father, as if Harry would suddenly charge and attack the older man.

Harry leant on Max and yawned subtly behind his hand. It was nearing nine o’clock now and all the playing with the little girls, all the mingling and talking and walking and shouting had taken a lot out of him. He was exhausted.

A little girl with blonde hair attacked his legs and Harry smiled down at Marisa, crouching down to be on eye level with her.

“I have to go home now because it’s past my bedtime.” She told him sadly. “Thank you for helping me with my beads and for letting me bead your hair, you’re very pretty.”

Harry chuckled and hugged the little girl tightly.

“I’ll see you around, Marisa.” Harry told her, smiling as she ran off waving, taking her Father’s hand and disappearing.

Before he could get up or anyone could say anything he was attacked again by two little red headed girls. He fell onto his bum and waved away Max and Nasta, who had both stooped to pick him up again, almost automatically.

“We have to go now. Granddaddy isn’t very well.” One little red head stated.

“Will you be here next year?” The other asked.

“More than likely.” Harry told them happily. “Maybe next year you can put beads in my mate’s hair, Draco would love it.”

“I would not!” Draco hissed, looking petrified at the very thought, his hand subconsciously jumping to his hair to touch it, to make sure it was all still in place.

Harry laughed and hugged the two little girls’ goodbye as Sarah called to them.

“Bye Natalie, bye Kayla.” Harry waved from the floor.
When they were gone Max picked him up off the floor, dusted him down, his hand remaining a little too long on his bum to be anything other than intentional and setting him on his feet again.

“Well you certainly made an impression on those three little girls.” Ashleigh told him happily.
“You’ll be a great Mother, Harry sweetie.”

Harry blushed and to his horror he started feeling teary eyed. He kept his eyes wide so the forming tears wouldn’t fall and smiled to dispel any suspicion, happily moving to hug Max’s Mother, who held him back just as tightly, her hands stroking his belly reverently.

Max was bursting with pride as Harry snuggled back into him and Myron and Richard looked to their exuberant mate as if they had never seen her so happy before, Harry didn’t know but maybe she hadn’t been so happy since she had lost her baby boy.

“Can I take those beads out now?” Draco asked as if he couldn’t help himself.

“Sure, they’re starting to give me a headache anyway; some of them are way too tight.”

Harry stayed leaning against Max as Draco began gently and carefully taking out the beads and listened as everyone around him got to know one another, Nasta’s Dad Aneirin wandered over and he and Myron spoke like old friends, both happy that their sons were mated at last, to the same person nonetheless, and Marianna, Blaise’s Mother happily spoke to Ashleigh, Kimberly (Max’s grandmother) and Alexander (Max’s grandfather.)

Draco moaned at the state of his hair, which was stuck together in odd, twisted clumps even though the beads and plaits were gone, his hair had gone wavy and it was so messy he looked like he had stuck his wet finger into a plug socket, every strand stood on end as if glued up straight, everyone laughed at the sight and even Harry grinned, though he couldn’t see it for himself.

It happened so suddenly that he had absolutely no warning. A very sharp pain in his abdomen had him doubled over with a cry before he could stop himself, clutching his bump.

“Harry? Are you alright?”

“What’s wrong?”

“What happened?”
“Did those girls hurt you?”

“Is it the baby? Was it the fall?”

Harry felt his eyes widen as a familiar pressure built between his legs. He was going to piss himself right here in front of everyone. He squeezed his legs tighter together.

“Is there a bathroom here?” He asked desperately. “The baby just kicked my bladder in half.”

“I can’t move.” Harry bit out tightly, using all of his will power and concentration on holding his wee in just a little longer.

Someone scooped him up and began half walking, half jogging with him. The chest against his side and the arms around him let him identify his carrier as Max.

A door opened and Harry was set on his feet and he happily half fell into a cubicle and relieved himself without even closing the door, which made Max chuckle.

“Feel better?” Max asked with a grin as Harry zipped up his black trousers after the longest wee on record.

“Much better.” Harry replied with a happy grin as he washed and dried his hands.

He placed a hand over his belly and he could feel small movements against his hand. He excitedly grabbed Max’s hand and placed it over his belly, slightly to the side of his bellybutton.

“Is that…?”

“Our baby moving. Yeah.”

Max grinned and happily pulled him off of his feet into a long, very passionate kiss. A cough broke them apart to see a flushed dominant Dracken in the doorway, he was grinning in a knowing way and Harry went a deep red.

“I…it’s…it’s not what it looks like!” He stammered out, making himself sound guiltier.

The other Dracken just grinned wider. “Sure it’s not.”

Harry buried himself in Max’s shoulders and wailed in mortification. Max hissed and stormed out of the bathroom, shoving the other dominant aside as he went past. Harry did not remove himself from Max’s shoulder and instead snuggled up tighter and hid a yawn against Max’s skin.

“What’s this about?”

“Just a bit. It’s been a busy couple of hours.”

“Just rest for a bit. No one will think anything of you, especially not my family, they’d be more horrified if you let yourself collapse due to exhaustion and I’d probably get another smack off of my Dad for letting it happen.”

Harry hissed sleepily and Max chuckled at the cute sound. Harry heard gasps and demands for what was wrong with him from his mates and their families. He smiled; it felt nice to be loved by so many people, people that he could call a family.

“Harry’s fine.” Max assured. “He’s just tired. The baby is being very active and it’s taking it out of him.”

“I can’t believe I’m going to be a grandmother.” Marianna stated, though her voice was soft and happy.

“My Caesar is giving me a granddaughter, now my Max is giving me another grandchild, I am so happy.” Ashleigh sniffed, her voice conveying her immense pride, but also her sadness at not having any other children of her own. “Both of my boys are finally mated to wonderful people and are starting families, our family is expanding. We have two new arrivals, a new submissive son-in-law and three new dominant son-in-laws; I could cry I’m so happy.”
Harry listened to the conversations going on around him as it happily went from pregnancy to what the new arrivals would look like, to guesses on if he would have a baby boy or a baby girl, how soon the baby would come into the world and plans to get him everything his baby needed.

At some point Harry really had fallen asleep because the next thing he knew someone was tucking him up in bed, duvet up to his chin. He blinked open his eyes and saw Draco leaning over him with a soft, adoring look on his face; he smiled when he saw Harry was partially awake.

“Go to sleep, love, you need it.” Draco coaxed.

Harry leant up as much as he could and kissed Draco full on the mouth, he fell back into the huge bed and snuggled into his pillows before he fell right back off to sleep. He was joined an hour later by Nasta and then by Blaise. Draco came half an hour after Blaise and finally Max’s huge body dipped the bed as he enclosed all of them in his arms and held them as they slept peacefully.

Chapter Thirty – Revealing Poses

The end of school exams were a complete torture for Harry, who had to sit still for two hours at a time, fiddling with his bulging robes, he still hadn’t gotten maternity clothes, which Hermione berated him for, but he pacified her by telling her stories of his ‘boyfriends’ families.

He was wearing one of Draco’s shirts today, yesterday he had been able to fit into Blaise’s, today he had popped off four buttons as he tried to squeeze his stomach into the fabric. Tomorrow he’d probably have to steal one of Nasta’s shirts, if he ever had to borrow Max’s clothes he wouldn’t be getting out of the bed anyway as his stomach would be bigger around than he was tall.

He was currently in his History of Magic exam and he had finished as much of the paper as he was ever going to, but he really, really needed a wee. He was bouncing his feet so vigorously against the floor that his bulge was jiggling. He crossed his left leg over his right, before setting them both on the floor again and crossing his right leg over his left. Draco was one row over and three desks in front of him, he kept looking behind him in concern as Harry let out soft whimpers that only he could hear. Blaise was all the way on the other side of the hall, right at the back; Harry couldn’t see him even when he turned around to look.

“Mister Potter.” A silky voice whispered in his ear so no one else could. “What is the problem?”

Harry looked into the deep, dark tunnels of Professor Snape’s eyes and swallowed.

“I really, really, really have to go to the toilet.” He answered his voice showing his strain.
“Can’t you hold it in?” Snape sneered.

“No!” Harry hissed a bit louder than he had meant to, the surrounding students looked at them and Harry flushed. “The baby is lying on my bladder, Professor; I’ve done as much of this exam as I possibly can. If I don’t get to a bathroom soon then I’m going to wet myself right here on this chair.”

Snape sighed heavily and tugged him out of his chair and down the aisle to the doors of the Great Hall. Snape escorted him all the way to the nearest bathroom and made sure he got there intact and before he wet his trousers, before he left him to go back to the exam. It still had an hour left.

Harry released his bladder and washed his hands. He hated how much his bladder was affected by the pregnancy, sure he knew that as the baby grew inside of him it would put pressure upon all of his organs, but he needed a wee every hour, every half hour on some days, it couldn’t be healthy.

Harry was on the first floor when he decided to go and visit Madam Pomfrey for a check-up. He was only four months pregnant. He couldn’t believe it, it seemed like a year had gone past since he had first found out, but it was only just the end of May and he had gotten pregnant on the eighteenth of February. He’d be giving birth on the twenty-fifth of September if his dates worked out accurately and he carried to full term.

“Harry dear, are you well? Shouldn’t you be in an exam?” Madam Pomfrey asked concernedly as she caught sight of him coming towards her.

“Professor Snape escorted me out because I was about to wet myself…again.” Harry added a bit bashfully.

“You have wet yourself before?” Madam Pomfrey asked as Harry hopped up onto an examination table without being asked to.

“Yeah, when I woke up off of my last heat period I wet the bed.”

Madam Pomfrey nodded understandingly and waved her wand over him.

“Ah, your baby is in fact resting its head upon your bladder.”

Harry sighed. “I had expected something like that, though I thought the baby might have been kicking it instead.”
“You have a mild urinary tract infection as well, Harry; I’m going to recommend that you drink cranberry juice until it clears up.”

Harry groaned. “Just what I need. A bloody infection.”

Madam Pomfrey smiled and patted his knee. “It’ll clear up very soon, unfortunately there isn’t a potion made to clear it up safely from a pregnant persons viewpoint, silly really as it’s usually pregnant people who get them the most.”

“So the baby is completely fine?”

“Of course, dear. You haven’t had a bump or a knock have you? I can do a scan if you wish.”

“A scan?” Harry questioned puzzled.

“It pulls up a picture of the baby in your womb, dearie me I should have probably offered one a month or so ago, but with the flu outbreak in the younger years it completely slipped my mind.”

“I’ll get to see my baby?”

“Yes, it’ll be like seeing a photograph, Harry.”

“Can you do it please?” Harry asked, slightly breathless and a touch of excitement and nerves warring in his tone.

Madam Pomfrey pulled up his shirt and rested her wand flat on his belly, the cool wood was smooth, but unbalanced as his rounded stomach threatened to topple the thin piece of wood to the floor.

Madam Pomfrey chanted a short, Latin phrase under her breath and the wand immediately heated up, it felt like a very thin hot water bottle. Harry swallowed as a 3D picture of a mass of grey, black and white showed above his belly, emanating from the side of the wand.

“Well, this probably looks very confusing and not much like a baby at all, but I promise you, that is “Your baby. The black bits are your body, this mass of grey here is the placenta, the grey line is the umbilical cord and the white space is your baby.”

Harry looked hard at the picture, but all the colours blended together until his eyes hurt and his head throbbed. He still couldn’t see his baby.

“Don’t look so hard at it, Harry, sort of step back and look glancingly, almost squinting, but not quite.” Madam Pomfrey instructed.

Harry did as he was told and as soon as he stopped looking for his baby, he saw his baby. Well the general outline at least. He could make out a head, a torso and even a tiny little foot.

“Oh, dear god.” He breathed reverently as he stared at the picture. He went to reach out and touch the picture, but it flickered as his hand went through the light beams.

“Would you like to try and see what the gender of the baby is, Harry?”

“Yes. Oh, but maybe I should wait until my mates are here to see as well. I really want to know, though!”

“It’ll be our little secret.” Madam Pomfrey winked. “If you come back later today or tomorrow, we can act like we don’t know.”

Harry laughed. “Were you by any chance a Slytherin when you attended Hogwarts, Madam Pomfrey?”

“I was a Hufflepuff dear, even at eleven I just cared so much about others and I had started trying to heal animals by that point, of course I didn’t start using magic to heal witches and wizards until I was sixteen.”

Harry smiled. “Okay, give me the gender.”

Madam Pomfrey smiled at him and twisted the wand on his belly, moving it all over until she found the baby’s legs, which were completely splayed giving Harry a good laugh.
“Looks like baby knows that Mummy wants to know if they’re a boy or girl.” Madam Pomfrey teased.

“Which is it, Madam Pomfrey? You seem much more able to make sense of this picture than I can.”

“Well, Harry, it seems that you’re having a baby…”

Mrs Petunia Dursley of number four, Privet Drive hummed lightly as she swept through her perfect home with a duster.

Something crinkled underfoot and she picked up her soft soled shoe and saw a broken crisp on her carpet, peeking out from under the settee. It must be the freak playing mind games with them, Duddy had been in school all year like a good boy and neither she nor her loving Husband, Vernon ate crisps.

She got the hoover out from under the stairs, trying not to look at the small nest of blankets that still remained there, nor the two broken plastic toy soldiers that the boy must have stolen from Dudley or the babyish drawing folded up and hidden on the end of the shelf that she had taken out and looked at almost every day for the past thirteen years. She would have dearly loved to rip it up, but she could never bring herself to do so. More of the freak’s magic tricks. It was all rubbish, just reminders of the freak that she loved to loathe, but she couldn’t move a single thing out of place. She grew angry yet again at the situation that had been forced upon her.

How dare Albus Dumbledore try to make her and Vernon take in the little bastard! How dare he try to appeal to her sense of family when it was he who had refused her entrance to that blasted school! When it was he who split up her and Lily when they were just children. How dare he!

That boy could have gone to any number of people, he didn’t have to come here and ruin her life! Wizards were always ruining her life! First that Snape boy, then Dumbledore and then Potter and now Harry too! How she wished she had gouged out those large green eyes when she had the chance, how she wished that when she had found the little bastard on her doorstep fourteen years and seven months ago that she had put him straight in the wheelie bin for the rubbish men to take away.

It wasn’t fair that she had been made to take in the brat, his Father had been rich, he had gloated enough at her and Vernon’s wedding about how wealthy he was and how much he could provide for sweet, darling Lily. It was always about Lily! The woman was dead and she still couldn’t get rid of her! She saw Lily in that little brat, the way he would glare at her from under those abnormally thick eyelashes just like Lily used to and with Lily’s eyes no less, the way he fiddled with the buttons on his clothes, how he scuffed his trainers on the floor, even the way the little brat ate reminded her of Lily! She couldn’t sit at the same table as him when she was eating; she couldn’t look at him period! She hated him, she loathed him, she would kill him if she knew absolutely that she’d get away with it! She should have done it long ago, before he went into that freak world, before he got the protection from the freaks.

Petunia was in a foul mood as she cleaned her home and prepared dinner for when her Husband came home from work. She spied in the neighbours gardens as she pegged washing onto the line, noticing with a critical eye that the leaves on Mrs number six’s potato plants had gone yellow.

She was still in a very bad mood when Vernon came home from work at five. Her Husband could tell immediately that there was something wrong and he held her at arm’s length, looking her over for injury.

“Are you alright, Petunia?” He asked, letting her go when he couldn’t see any injuries and shrugging, with effort, out of his driving jacket.

“The freak has been playing his tricks again, he put crisps underneath our settee, it couldn’t have been us and Dudley is away at school.”

“I’ll make a note to punish the boy when he gets home for the summer.” Vernon assured her. “That abnormal freak won’t get away with sullying our home.”

Petunia smiled. She could always count on her Husband to back her up. They both hated the freak, they both just wanted to be normal and live a normal life with their normal son. That little abomination had put a stop to their visions and plans of normality when she had opened her front door on that cold, November morning to find the bastard wrapped in a heated blanket on her doorstep. Oh why hadn’t she just popped him in the wheelie bin? It had been a bin day; she could have been rid of him forever! No one would have known, no one in the neighbourhood had known she’d had a sister, let alone a Nephew, she could have denied all knowledge of ever having the boy to those freaks, but she had hesitated a bit too long and she had had to dart into the house as quick as lightning when Mister number seven from over the road had come out to go to work. She had been stuck with Potter ever since.

Petunia served up dinner and sat at the table with her Husband, watching as he gratefully ate the food that she had lovingly cooked for him whilst she picked and pushed most of her portion around her plate. She had a bad feeling in the pit of her stomach that had nothing to do with the food she was eating.

Petunia had been right to worry, at ten o’clock Vernon sat down to watch the news and as she brought him a cup of tea and a plate of biscuits, an owl shot through the partially open living room window. It had a letter clamped in its beak that it dropped on top of Vernon’s head before it swooped back out again.

Petunia looked at the letter in disgust, the boy wasn’t even here! What were those freaks doing writing to her and her family! They wanted nothing to do with them!

“Burn it, Vernon!” She snapped, it was one of the only times she had ever ordered her Husband to do anything.
Her Husband bent to pick up the letter, but as his hand brushed the antique paper that those freaks used to write on, it shot up into the air and started speaking, loudly.

Dear Dursley residence,

On behalf of the staff at Wizardry Genetics and those of the Ministry of Magic, it has fallen upon me, as it is my duty to inform you that your Nephew, Mister Harry James Potter, of number four Privet Drive, Surrey, is currently four months pregnant with a magical baby. I would like to express my congratulations to you for this happy, momentous occasion and hope you have many happier times with your new expanding family.

Yours Sincerely,

Brenda Larking, Wizardry Genetics, Great Britain branch.

The letter floated down to lay peacefully on the side table, but Petunia’s ears were still ringing from what she had heard. The brat was pregnant? As in he had a baby growing inside of him? He was such a FREAK! He was never coming into her home again, she didn’t want Dudley exposed to such a heinous thing as a pregnant man, what would the neighbours think when they saw the brat? They would be the talk of Surrey let alone Little Whinging!

The brat could stay at Kings Cross station all on his own, they were not going to pick him up, she didn’t care if he was pregnant, he was a freak and he carried a parasitic abomination. With any luck the rough crowd in London would find him and beat the freakishness out of him. It would be nothing he didn’t deserve, but he was never, ever coming back into her home. Never.

Harry grinned all the way to his private rooms and he couldn’t stop. He knew that Max was home, but Nasta was in work and Blaise and Draco were still in the History of Magic exam.

He placed a hand over his stomach where his baby was growing, his beautiful, amazing baby. He smiled lovingly down at his bump as he tapped the keyhole on the portrait door with his wand and walked through to see Max asleep on the settee.

Harry smiled at his biggest mate and kicked his shoes off and padded towards him in his socks. Max was deeply asleep and his wand was lying on the coffee table. He had likely used a spell to set it to wake him up in an hour when the exam finished.

Harry kissed those sleep slack lips and watched as Max mumbled a bit and pressed his lips together before they went slack again. Harry smiled happily and took the thick blanket from off the back of the settee and threw it over Max to keep him warm, he took his wand into the bedroom and placed it on the bedside table to keep it from waking Max up, his biggest mate hadn’t been sleeping well lately, he had a chest infection and found it difficult to sleep. Madam Pomfrey had given him potions to take, when Harry had worriedly dragged Max to see her, but even with their help it would take another day or two to shift the mucus from his lungs.

Harry instead picked up the photo album he had of his mates and sat on the other settee and flipped quietly through them. Looking at the pictures of him and Blaise on Christmas Morning, pictures of him and Blaise rolling around the floor, Draco sitting elegantly on the floor, looking as regal as if he had been sitting on a solid gold throne. Henley was in there as well, waving energetically from the photo, brushing his floppy hair from his eye with a small scowl before he went back to waving and smiling. Nasta sitting moodyly on the rock by the lake, though he only looked moody to an outsider, Harry saw the thoughtful look on Nasta’s face, Harry knew that Nasta pulled that face when he was thinking deeply, Nasta wasn’t moody at all, he was just quiet and thoughtful.

Max’s huge body took up most of the next photo, his wide grin showing off his bright white teeth as he laughed uproariously at something someone had said. The next photo showed a sleeping Harry and Draco cuddled up on the rug in front of the fire together. Harry touched his sleeping face and smiled, he looked so happy in these photos, he hadn’t really had a reason to be so happy before.

Arsenio and Jensen were in the next photo, standing side by side, Jensen was shirtless, as he usually was, showing off his solidly muscled chest and tight cobblestone abs. Harry remembered how much Jensen had cared for his body, it reminded him of Nasta a bit, only Nasta didn’t work out for eight hours a day and count every calorie he ate. Where Nasta’s healthiness came from his Father’s fear that he would lose his children, Jensen’s obsessive healthiness came from his very real childhood fear of becoming overweight like his own parents.

Arsenio was just as Harry remembered him, scarred, greying, harsh looking and severe, but he had been one of the kindest men that Harry had met at the hell hotel. Harry hoped that he found a submissive to call his own, one that would treat him with all the love and respect that Arsenio deserved.

Harry flipped the page and came face to face with Elder Trintus, Harry smiled. The man had written to him twice since the mate meetings had ended, asking how he was and how the baby was doing.
He hadn’t gone to New Zealand; he couldn’t have because he was still chaperoning Harry’s meetings at the same time, one of the man’s friends, Elder Midate, was the one helping the new submissive, Anabel, find her dominant mate.

Harry continued looking through the album, encountering pictures here or there of Hermione, or Ginny, or Neville, even one of Luna Lovegood had found its way into his photo album. He stopped on one particular picture and went red. It was the picture of him and Max standing naked in front of the mirror; Max’s hands were caressing his bump, looking at it avidly with love and adoration. His own face started off looking at the bump, love written all over his face, before he looked up into the mirror and looked at the sight the two of them made, he went wide eyed as he looked to the expression on Max’s face before tilting his head back and kissing the underside of Max’s jaw. The picture then went back to the beginning and Harry turned the page reluctantly, no matter how mad he had been when Draco had first snapped that photo, he loved it now.

The next picture was of Harry rolling around the floor with Blaise again, being tickled mercilessly.
Harry had had no idea that this picture had been taken, which was why his face was screwed up in happy giggles as he squirmed helplessly against Blaise’s fingers.
The last picture in the book was of all four of his mates sleeping, cuddled up together in bed. Harry had woken up early the other day, squirmed out from between Blaise and Draco, had gone to the bathroom and had come back up ready to climb back into bed with them, only to find that his warm spot in the middle of the bed had been filled in and that Nasta and Max, who were on the outside holding Blaise and Draco tightly, had scooted closer together so that there was no gap between any of them, probably to preserve body heat as the duvet had disappeared onto the floor some when during the night.

Harry had sleepily picked up the camera from the bedside table and snapped a couple of pictures, before he tugged the duvet from the floor and covered all of his mates up before he crawled under the duvet and huddled up against Nasta’s back, slipping his legs between Nasta’s to keep them warm and curling his own body around the baby bump to keep his belly warm.

Harry put the book down and smiled, he couldn’t wait until he had pictures of his baby to put into the album. Fred and George had even sent him a baby book. It was one of the only presents that Harry had ever gotten off of them that wasn’t a prank item, not that he didn’t love their prank items, he did, but this present was just so amazing and thoughtful that he had sent them an embarrassing, gushy letter on one of his more emotional days.

The door to their rooms burst open with a loud bang, startling Max from his sleep so violently that he started coughing roughly and startling a small scream from Harry, whose wings had burst from his back in a shower of blood and they stayed stiff and flared.

Blaise and Draco were in the door and Harry was so thankful that it wasn’t anyone else and that his secret was still safe. He held one hand to his bump and the other to his heart.

“What the hell are you two playing at?!” Max demanded as he stood up, looking large, threatening and intimidating.

Max went to Harry and picked him up cooing and crooning softly, stroking the soft, leathery skin of his wings until they drooped and relaxed and he was able to tuck them back into his body, but not before Harry noticed that he’d gained Nasta’s yellow-gold scales too.

“You could have put him into premature labour!” Max hissed angrily, his voice rougher and hoarser than usual due to his chest infection.

“We were worried about him!” Draco hissed back. “He was taken out of the History exam and we couldn’t follow.”

Max turned to look at him before he started the age old process of licking and sniffing every inch of him. Harry tried to stop him, but Max gripped his hair tightly as a warning not to do anything else, but Harry was worried that breathing in deeply would delay Max’s lungs from healing.
“I’m fine!” He protested, standing completely still. “I just needed a wee before my bladder burst in the Great Hall! Professor Snape took me to the nearest bathroom, that’s all.”

“Then you came here?” Max asked and snarled when Harry looked shifty.

“I went to see Madam Pomfrey first, okay?!”

“So there was something else wrong?”

“No! I just didn’t think it was normal to be almost wetting myself every other hour!”

“Did she tell you if anything was wrong, Prezioso?” Blaise asked softly, calmly, trying to keep the peace.

“I have a mild urinary tract infection. It’ll clear up in a few days of me drinking cranberry juice.”

Max petted his hair lovingly and pulled him into a hug, collapsing his big body down onto the settee and breathing deeply, his chest rattling as he did so. Harry was very worried and he rested his head over Max’s chest, listening as every breath was a struggle.

“Please be okay soon, Max. I don’t know what I’d do without you.”

Max snorted in amusement and cupped his cheek in the palm of one hand. One of Max’s hands could palm the entire of his face and the tips of his fingers could almost reach the top of his head if the heel of his hand was placed at his chin, Max had huge hands.

“I’m going to be fine, you sound like my Mother, she wants to visit soon with my Dads, she wants to make sure that I’m well. It’s not like I’m thirty-one or anything.” Max rolled his eyes.

Harry smiled and pushed Max until he was lying down again and lovingly covered him up again. Max grinned, albeit a bit weakly, but still a semblance of his normal mischievous grin.

“I could get used to this.” He laughed.
Harry smiled and tucked the blanket around him more firmly, kissing his brow and going to the kitchenette to make a cup of tea.

“Harry, Draco and I have to go; we have an Ancient Runes exam.” Blaise told him seriously as Draco anxiously looked at the clock.

Harry rushed to kiss them both goodbye, wishing them good luck and even Max shouted a ‘good luck’ after them, coughing as he did so because he had shouted too loudly.

Harry made the tea and gave a cup to Max as he knelt down in front of the settee, sipping on his own ginger tea, he was feeling slightly nauseous and ginger seemed to help a lot.

Max finished his tea and Harry gave him a tablespoon of his potion before tucking him back up.

“I’m a grown man!” Max complained even as he obediently held the blanket up to his chin.

“I’m going to baby you until you’re better.” Harry informed him seriously. “You had better not move.”

Max chuckled. “Healer Potter, now all you need is the uniform, perhaps the sexier version that the Naughty Wizard magazine offer to owl order.”

Harry’s cheeks went pink and he lightly bopped Max on the head. “You’re lucky you’re sick or I would have kicked your arse.”

Max pulled Harry onto his chest and pulled the blanket from under him and tucked them both in on the settee.

“Hey! I’m not sick!”

“You have a urinary tract infection. I have a chest infection, we both have infections, we’re both sick.”

“I’m not sick! You are, you have potion to take and I don’t, I just have to drink cranberry stuff.”
Max smiled and kissed him softly. “Then come be my teddy bear so I’ll feel better.”

Harry rolled his eyes but cuddled up to Max. He was quite sleepy; he had been up with Draco and Blaise early this morning to get to the exams on time. He was glad they were almost over.

Albus Dumbledore smiled charmingly at the woman and two men in front of him. Harry had told him that one of his mates was sick and that his family wished to come and see how he was doing. He didn’t stand in their way, he just led them down to Harry’s rooms, he knew exactly how protective Drackens were of their children.

He tapped the keyhole of the portrait with his wand and met a sight that made him chuckle. Wrapped up and peacefully sleeping on the settee were Harry and Maximilius, Harry snuffling quietly as he slept and Maximilius’ laboured breathing were the only sounds in the room besides the merry crackling of the fire.

“This is where I leave you gentlemen, lovely lady.” Dumbledore turned and strode back to his office leaving Ashleigh, Myron and Richard to sit on the only free settee and watch as their son and their new son-in-law slept together.

“He looks so peaceful.” Ashleigh whispered.

Max grunted in his sleep and Harry took in a deeper than usual breath, using his legs to push himself closer to Max, who subconsciously wrapped his arm around Harry tighter.

“Well at least Maximilius knows that we are here now, even if it is subconsciously.” Myron stated a small smile touching his devastatingly handsome face as he watched his only son snuggle with his pregnant son-in-law.

“They had better both have clothes on under that blanket.” Richard croaked, eyeing the blanket distastefully.

“I really don’t think they would have sex when Max has a chest infection, love.” Ashleigh told her younger Husband.
“I doubt Harry would feel much like sexual contact either with that baby coming up to five months.” Myron grunted thoughtfully.

Ashleigh smiled and carefully knelt down beside her son and his youngest lover. She pulled the blanket tighter around their necks and tucked them in properly. Harry made a small noise and one beautiful, bright green eye opened to look at her.

Harry sat up on Max’s stomach, rubbing the sleep from his eyes, the blanket had moved showing that the both of them were fully dressed, Max in pyjamas and Harry in a school shirt and trousers, he even had his tie still neatly knotted at his throat. Or he did have until he noticed it and carelessly tugged it loose until the knot came undone and then he discarded it over the back of the settee.

Myron frowned at his actions, but Richard let out a quiet, but harsh chuckle. Ashleigh just smiled. Harry climbed off of Max and covered him back up carefully, watched critically by Max’s parents. Harry didn’t even spare them a glance until after Max was tucked in and had been kissed twice.

“You truly love him.” Ashleigh breathed reverently.

Harry gave her a sharp look. “Of course I do.”

“I didn’t mean any offence, Harry.” She told him, well aware of his pregnant state and a remembered conversation the other day with Max about how volatile Harry’s temper had become. “I just think that it is starting to sink in that my son has finally found someone to love who loves him in return.”

Harry smiled and gave a look over his shoulder to Max, who made a deep noise in his chest, like a rumble only rougher because of his chest infection. Max’s Dad, Myron, rumbled back soothingly and the crease between Max’s eyebrows eased, leaving his face smooth and unlined again.

“I keep telling him that he’ll get wrinkles if he keeps scrunching his face up like a disapproving granny, he never listens.” Harry said sadly, shaking his head.

Max’s other Dad, Richard, let out a startled laugh and grinned happily. Harry noticed that it was almost the same grin that Max had and that made him like Richard all the more.

“I…Harry, please feel free to say no if I’m being too personal, but may I touch your belly?” Ashleigh asked, she could barely take her eyes off of his baby belly and it made him want to wrap his arms around himself and hide his baby away, but this was Max’s Mother. She was going to be family. She had already started to become family, Max and he were practically married, all they needed was the official ceremony.

“It’s alright if you don’t want to let me, Harry dear, Amelle never let anyone other than Caesar touch her.”

Harry sighed and went and sat on the woman’s lap, trusting that his very light frame wouldn’t crush the legs of a Dracken and wrapped her arms around his belly. Ashleigh looked so happy, so delighted as she cooed at, touched, caressed, hugged and swayed with his belly, it was as if he wasn’t there, like the baby wasn’t attached to him and had already been born.

He yawned and rested his head in the crook of Ashleigh’s neck and shoulder; he fell asleep with Ashleigh still stroking him.

“He’s a trusting little thing isn’t he?” Richard spoke up after Harry snuffled lightly and tried to curl around Ashleigh tighter.

“It’ll make him the perfect target for anyone who wishes him harm.” Myron said with a hint of worry in his voice as he looked at the miniscule boy in his Wife’s arms. Harry had met them twice and yet he fell asleep within moments in their presence.

“He trusts you because I do.” A sleep slurred voice broke through their conversation.

Max pushed the blanket off of himself and swung his large body into an upright position and rubbed his face vigorously.

“How are you feeling, Max honey? On your last floo call you sounded terrible.”

“I feel better, the Healer thinks that it’ll take another day to clear up, Harry’s been making sure I’m well rested and up to date with my potion.”

“He does rather like being the little Mother hen doesn’t he?” Richard asked with a smile towards his oldest son, because by blood or not, he had raised Maximilius along with Myron and Max was as much of his son as Caesar was and the same went for their three daughters and Myron fully agreed with him too.

Max rolled his eyes and went to make tea for everyone.
“Tell me about it, this is the first time I’ve gotten up in two days. I can feel my muscles melting away under tender love and care.”

Myron smirked at his son as he yawned and made tea for everyone; he handed out the cups and carefully placed two teacups on the coffee table in front of his Mother.

“Your cup is the yellow one, Mum, the blue one is Harry’s. He won’t let anyone touch his favourite cup; it’s the only odd cup I’ve allowed in my kitchen.”

“Did you allow it or were you bullied into it?” Myron asked with a knowing look.

Max grinned unashamedly. “I’d do anything for Harry, even put up with an odd cup.”

“It is a very pretty cup.” Ashleigh commented at the very delicate royal blue designs on the bone china cup.

“It was his Mother’s favourite cup given to him by a friend of hers; I think he takes comfort from touching something that she had.”

“Poor thing, no wonder he clings to maternal figures, he’s still just a boy himself. He needs a maternal figure or two in his life.”

“I’m sure his Aunt was enough of a maternal figure towards him.” Max told his Mother soothingly.

“I was surprised to hear that you had actually bonded with Harry Potter of all people.” Myron told his son. “Though it is a very huge honour to our family to be joined with the defeater of the Dark Lord, Voldemort.”

“I didn’t even think that Harry Potter would become a Dracken.” Richard added. “The blood was within his family lines, but it was very diluted, after three generations and no Dracken manifestation, I think the Elders ruled the Potters out of ever having Dracken blood. It just goes to show that it doesn’t matter how far back the blood goes, if the Dracken genes chose you, you are going to be a Dracken.”
“Well said, my love.” Myron said, pulling Richard into a kiss.

“So, Max honey, have you found out what sex the baby is yet?” Ashleigh asked excitedly.

“No Mum, not yet.”

Ashleigh sighed and stroked Harry’s hair. He was so young; it had been years since she had even been near a Dracken of his age. She had missed it. She couldn’t wait until Amelle gave birth, but the woman didn’t like her. Amelle thought that she was unstable and unfit to be near Dracken children. She hoped that Caesar would rein in his submissive, but he had said that he didn’t want to hurt Amelle whilst she was pregnant, that he would try after the birth.

She desperately hoped that Harry would let her see and hold his baby. She wasn’t dangerous, what had happened to her was a travesty, a tragic incident that she hated remembering, she loathed the beasts that had taken her baby son, Theodric, from her, had taken Myron’s second son from him. She hated herself for letting it happen, but after months of therapy and years of support from her family, she had come to realise that there had been nothing she could have done, she had been snatched by a trusted family friend when she had been sleeping, she wouldn’t have been able to move or defend herself anyway, she had been only a week away from nesting and birthing. Myron and Richard had been too late to save their baby son, but they had saved her, her Husbands’ regretted not getting to her in time to save their littlest boy, but they would have been destroyed if they had lost her as well.

Harry squirmed in her arms and once again a big, beautiful emerald green eye opened and spied the blue teacup. He leant forward and Ashleigh made sure to support his weight as he snatched up his cup and drained almost half of it in one swallow.

Ashleigh had never seen Max wear that look before and it clenched her heartstrings, her boy was finally completely happy and content.

“You should still be asleep!” Harry told his older mate bringing smiles to the elder Drackens.

“If I sleep anymore you might as well just put me into a coma.” Max complained.

“If it’ll keep you from moving I will!”
Richard let out a wheezing laugh and coughed lightly, which seemed to agitate his scar as he touched it with an annoyed frown.

“It’s alright, love, just breathe.” Myron soothed, taking out a small bottle of potion from his pocket and handing it to the other man. Richard un-stoppered the bottle and took a gulp of whatever was inside.

Harry didn’t ask. It was obviously a very private thing between Max’s family, but he was dying to know how Richard had gotten the scar on his neck, he was burning to know how the man had survived.

Harry looked at the clock on the wall and noticed that Draco and Blaise would be finished with their Ancient Runes exam within the hour.

“Please don’t tell me it’s time for my potion as well.” Max begged.

Harry realised with a thump that Max should have taken it five minutes ago and he jumped up and fetched the bottle and a tablespoon from the counter. He handed them both to Max who pouted.

“I have to do it myself now?” He whined.

“You’re thirty-one!” Harry pointed out incredulously. Max just blinked up at him and Harry huffed and took the bottle and spoon back from Max, poured him a spoonful and fed it to his biggest mate all the while his family laughed at them from the settee beside them. “You’re like a big baby.”

“We’re going to have one of those as well.” Max grinned happily, pushing up his shirt to press a kiss to his swollen stomach. “Think of it as practice for when the real baby arrives.”

Harry rolled his eyes but couldn’t keep the smile from his face as he put the bottle back on the counter and placed the spoon in the sink.

“When are Draco and Blaise getting back from their exam?” Max asked as he stretched his body.

“In about forty minutes.” Harry answered.
“Why aren’t you in the exams honey?” Ashleigh asked.

“I never took Ancient Runes. I did have a History exam this morning and that almost killed me, I wouldn’t have made it through a second exam today without falling asleep.”

“Are you well?” Myron asked looking him up and down and getting that look in his eyes that his mates did when they were trying to restrain themselves from licking and sniffing him.

“I have a small infection, nothing to worry about.” He added quickly as the elder three Drackens gasped. “It isn’t anything that will harm the baby and it’ll be gone in a few days.”

“Do you have any instincts towards the baby, Harry?” Ashleigh asked and Harry cocked his head in puzzlement. “As in any inclinations towards the baby’s gender.”

Max rolled his eyes. “Mother is desperate to know the gender of our baby; she wants to know if she’s getting two granddaughters or a granddaughter and a grandson.”

“Well I found out the gender this afternoon as well.”

“What?” Max asked with a frown. “You found out the gender without any of us with you?”

“It was a spur of the moment thing. I went to the hospital wing about the infection thingy and Madam Pomfrey told me that she could give me a scan of the baby, then she said she could tell me the gender, I wanted to wait for all of you, but that meant waiting until tomorrow and I was just itching to know! I was so excited. I got pictures, look.”

Harry dived on his book satchel and pulled out a large pile of scan photos that Madam Pomfrey had given to him. He handed them to Max, whose grin had come back tenfold as he looked at the pictures.

“This is so amazing.” He said. “I can't believe it, this is my baby. My baby.”

“Please tell us, Harry!” Ashleigh burst out. “Please tell us what the gender is?”
Harry grinned and pulled a photo to the top and pointed something out to Max, who started laughing and hugged Harry tightly.

“I can't believe it.” He said again.

“Please, please, please?!” Ashleigh was practically vibrating between her two mates and they gave her looks of amusement, but they also had hints of curiosity in their eyes, of course they wanted to know the gender of their second grandchild.

“You’re getting a grandson, the baby’s a boy.” Harry revealed with a grin.

Ashleigh actually squealed as she dropped to her knees and nuzzled Harry’s baby bump.

“And what a boy he’s going to be.” Max chuckled as he looked at the picture of his son with his legs spread, his genitals clearly on show.

“Oh I didn’t want to say anything, but I had really hoped you would have a boy. I’ll have a granddaughter and a grandson now.”

“I wonder who will give birth first.” Myron mused aloud.

“I thought Amelle had already started nesting.” Harry asked confused. “I’ve still got three months to go.”

“Amelle has built her nest and is currently preening in it. She hasn’t gone into labour yet.” Max told him. “It could be weeks still before she goes into labour.”

“But she’s still six months pregnant and I’m only four.”
“Blaise’s Mother, Marianna, went into labour at five months.” Max reminded him. “True there were very extreme circumstances, but I wasn’t kidding when I said Draco and Blaise could have caused you premature labour this afternoon.”

“What happened?” Myron asked harshly.

“They burst into the room when I was sleeping and Harry was lost in thought, they startled him pretty badly, I reprimanded them for it.”

“I thought you weren’t the top dominant?” Richard asked softly. “Where is Nasta?”

“I’m standing in for him as the top dominant as he’s currently at work, he’ll be home around sixish.”

“You make a good top dominant.” Harry assured Max with a grin. “If only Nasta knew flower arrangement or sewing.”

Max burst out laughing and Harry giggled lightly, trying and failing to turn it into a chuckle as he was too amused.

“I feel I am missing something.” Myron stated.

“Nasta’s Dracken side automatically saw me as subordinate to him through instinct.” Max told his Dad with a sigh. “Our Drackens had already worked out the dominant order before we even knew it. Though I knew immediately when I just started eating before everyone else that I wasn’t going to be the top dominant, Nasta was the one who was forced to wait until everyone had started eating until he could, all because I know how to bloody cook!”

“The dominant order was made over you being able to cook?” Richard asked.

“Yeah, stupid isn’t it? I could have had that Delericey in a fight, but the order was sorted before I even had a chance to fight him.”

Harry snorted. “Seemed like he was kicking your arse from where I was sat when you tried to force yourselves to fight.”
Max picked Harry up and started tickling him and Harry burst out laughing.

“No! No! Stop it!” Harry cried as tears of laughter rapidly filled his eyes before they fell down his face. “I’m sorry, you were winning!”

Max stopped tickling him and sat back on the settee, holding Harry tightly.

“Between you and Blaise the baby is going to have a squirming fetish.”

Max and Richard both started laughing, Myron scowled and Ashleigh let out a tinkling laugh. Max started coughing violently and immediately Harry and Max were surrounded by three protective parents, all clamouring to help Max through his coughing fit.

“I’m fine, I’m fine!” Max assured once he had stopped coughing and had gotten his breath back. “Bloody infection. Hell I can’t get any of the big diseases but I can get a poxy infection? How is that fair?!”

“If you were taking care of yourself you wouldn’t have gotten it in the first place.” Myron lectured as he rubbed Max’s back firmly to ease the spasaming.

“I am taking care of myself! I swear it was that potion I had to brew, I couldn’t breathe properly when I was making it, I never can when I have to make that bloody potion.”

“Then stop making it!” Ashleigh berated sternly.

“I have to make it, Mum. It’s my job.”

“But it affects you so badly, sweetheart.”

“I’ll be fine in a day or so.”
“You make sure you floo call us and tell us if you’re better or not or we’ll be coming back to check on you.”

“You make sure you floo call us and tell us if you’re better or not or we’ll be coming back to check on you.”

“Mum, I’m thirty-one!”

“Mum, I’m thirty-one!”

“And I’m forty-eight and your Granddad Thomas and Nana Sophie still come and check on me when I’m sick.”

“And I’m forty-eight and your Granddad Thomas and Nana Sophie still come and check on me when I’m sick.”

Ashleigh pulled Harry into another hug, petting his hair and rubbing his stomach gently, kissing his cheek with a goodbye and a promise to come back to see him later on in the week.

“I have to go out and buy all little outfits for my new grandson.”

“I have to go out and buy all little outfits for my new grandson.”

“You have to go out and buy all little outfits for my new grandson.”

“Mum, Harry has enough baby clothes; we have three boxes of the things.”

“Mum, Harry has enough baby clothes; we have three boxes of the things.”

“Mum, Harry has enough baby clothes; we have three boxes of the things.”

“Not little boy things!” Ashleigh stated viciously as she latched onto her mates and began dragging them out to a shopping district.

Max laughed at the expressions of horror on his Fathers faces. He held Harry tightly as the portrait door shut behind his parents. He had never understood the whole excitement thing women had over shopping and sales, he kissed the top of Harry’s head lingeringly before going to make them some more tea. He would be thankful for the fact that he was mated to a man and not a woman every time his Mother and sisters dragged their Husbands to go shopping, he would laugh it up as he got to sit at home and lounge around with Harry, who hated shopping and made up any excuse to avoid it, even if he had to get the necessities. It was Draco they had to watch when it came to clothes shopping, the blond dominant could shop any woman’s feet off and still have energy to spare.

Chapter Thirty-One – Nesting Instinct Disasters.

Harry and Max shared secret little smiles with each other when Draco and Blaise finally showed up after their exhausting exam. They were both too tired to notice their secretive behaviour and as Blaise had fallen asleep on the settee that Max wasn’t occupying and Draco had immediately buried himself in his Transfiguration notes neither Harry nor Max saw this as much of an accomplishment, not that they wanted the other two to see them anyway, they wanted to wait for Nasta to come home before spilling the news that they were having a baby boy.

They had decided, only just, to tell the other three together that they were expecting a baby boy right before Draco and Blaise had come back from the exam; they were still waiting on Nasta, who had yet to return home from work, he was an hour late.

“What if something has happened to him?” Harry demanded worriedly as his three other mates ignored his worries which had been getting worse over the past hour.

“I’m sure the Dragon Reserve would have let us know by now if he had been eaten by a dragon, Harry.” Draco deadpanned.

“You think he was eaten by a dragon?” Harry asked a touch of panic in his voice. “How many dragon keepers a year are eaten by the dragons?!”

Max sighed and picked him up from where he had been pacing a hole in the carpet and sat him on his lap, holding him gently, but tightly enough to prevent him from getting up again.

“Nasta has not been eaten by a dragon, Harry.”

“You thought I had been eaten by a dragon?” An amused voice asked.

Harry ripped himself from Max’s hold and flung himself at Nasta, holding him tightly even as his oldest lover picked him up and sniffed and licked at his belly.

“Thank Merlin you’re back, he hasn’t stopped with the worst case scenarios since five past six.”
“One of the pregnant Welsh Greens laid her eggs, the guys needed an extra pair of hands to safely count how many eggs were laid.” Nasta explained with a note of confusion. “You’ve never worried so much before, Harry, this isn’t the first time I’ve been late home, what’s wrong?”

“Do submissives feel more clingy the closer they get to birth?” Blaise asked curiously. “It seems the closer he comes to giving birth the closer he wants to be to us.”

“I am not clingy!” Harry refuted even as he clung tightly to Nasta’s neck.

“I think he just missed Nasta a lot.” Max said in amusement. “He’s been dying to tell us all something since this afternoon, but when I asked what it was he said that all of us had to be together before he could tell us.”

Harry and Max had had a heated discussion before Blaise and Draco had come back from their exam that it would be better for Harry to tell the truth about the visit with Madam Pomfrey and about the scan, but leave out that he had told Max first. Max knew that Harry had only told him because he had wanted his Mother to know, that if his parents hadn’t come to check on him then he would have been told with the other three.

“Oh?” Nasta questioned, raising an eyebrow at Harry.

“Yeah. I went to the hospital wing earlier…”

Harry didn’t get any further before he was being sniffed and licked. Harry batted at Nasta, but for all the good it did he was tickling the man with a feather.

“Nasta! I’m fine! Bloody hell, you’d think I was dying or something.”

“You’re not are you?” Draco asked worriedly.

“Of course I’m bloody well not! I have a small infection…” Harry raised his voice as three out of his four mates started speaking at once. “That has not brought any complications to the pregnancy, is not harming the baby and is not harming me! It’s a small urinary tract infection and will disappear in a few days.”

“Is that what you had to tell us?” Nasta asked softly.

“No. I had a scan of the baby.”

“Really? Did you get pictures?” Max asked in faked, but realistic enthusiasm.

Harry grinned and took out a pile of photos from inside his pocket, he had removed all photos that showed the baby’s gender and had put them in his other pocket and he grinned as he happily made his mates sit on the settee and flipped through the pictures one at a time.

“Merlin, the baby is beautiful.” Blaise breathed reverently.

“I did.” Harry said with a grin and he immediately held the attention of three of his mates.

“Well?!” Draco demanded a glint of pride and eagerness in his eyes.

Harry grinned wider and pulled out his favourite photo. He flipped it right side up and watched with Max as the other three took in the picture of their little boy, his legs spread, his arms flung wide, his genitals on happy display. Nasta was the first to chuckle as he took in what was being shown. Blaise managed a smirk and Draco just stared.

“Is that our son being an exhibitionist?” Draco asked.

“Yes, yes it is. Isn’t he amazing?” Harry breathed.

“As long as he doesn’t act like that in public.” Draco groused.

Harry chuckled. “He’s a baby, Draco, when he’s born he won’t have enough strength to push open his swaddling blankets let alone remove his sleepsuit, bodysuit and nappy.”

Nasta snorted in amusement and pulled Harry into a kiss. “Our son is adorable and I’m sure when he’s a toddler and running around our rooms naked refusing to put his nappy back on that we will remember this picture fondly.”

“I can’t wait until he does that.” Max confessed. “Imagine the pictures we could embarrass him with in front of his mate!”

Harry rolled his eyes at Max’s enthusiasm. “No one is going to embarrass my babies.”

“Come on, Harry! He might be the only baby to act like this, we have to make it last.”

Harry smiled softly and looked at the picture of his baby displaying himself. He took out the photo frame that he had dug out to fit the picture and he placed the picture inside the frame and he proudly placed it on the mantel piece above the roaring fire. Now his mates knew that he was having a baby boy, everyone could know, starting with friends and family members.

“At least you have something to write home about.” Harry told them.

“Dad’ll be ecstatic.” Nasta told him. “Just watch him because he has a tendency to become a mother bear when he’s around newborns.”

Harry smiled happily. “Alright. Hop to it then, I want friends and family to know before everyone else.”

“Are you going to tell your family?” Max asked curiously as he called Esmeralda to him and made a show of copying some of the scan photos to send to his ‘unknowing’ family.

Harry blinked. “Why would I do that?” He asked curiously.

His mates just looked at him and Harry felt a strange pulling sensation take over his stomach. He had said the wrong thing.

“Because they’re your family, Harry, surely you’ve told them that you’re pregnant?” Nasta exclaimed.

“They’re Muggles, I didn’t even know that wizards could get pregnant, how do you think they’ll react?”

“Just tell them that you’re a magical creature capable of giving birth or you could send them a pamphlet about male pregnancy.”

Harry could imagine the reaction that would get. A magical pamphlet on male pregnancies in the Dursleys household? Harry wondered if they had moving pictures of men giving birth. “Yeah that’ll work. Hello Uncle Vernon, Aunt Petunia, just so you know I’m a humanoid dragon now and you know what else, I’m pregnant and I’m going to have a baby this September, just so you know. Aunt Petunia would likely faint.”

“After all the lectures you gave me on telling my family about my inheritance and you haven’t done the same?” Draco demanded.

“My family are Muggles, Draco.” Harry sighed. “If I just told them that I was a Dracken, they wouldn’t understand like your family would. Muggle men can’t get pregnant, they’d freak out.”

“But you have to tell them.” Max insisted. “They’re your family.”

“We’ll go and visit them this summer.” Blaise assured, trying to soothe the panic in Harry’s eyes but it increased tenfold.

“No we won’t.” Harry stated stubbornly.

“I know it’ll be difficult for them to understand at first, Harry but they do deserve to know that their Nephew is going to give birth to a baby boy.” Max stated assertively

“I said no!” Harry screeched, turning on his heel and stalking to the bedroom.

He could only imagine how Uncle Vernon would react when Harry and four men turned up on his nice, normal doorstep to tell him that he was expecting a baby boy in September. His Uncle was more likely to try and hit the ‘freakishness’ out of his stomach with a baseball bat than accept the baby with open arms. Bloody hell, why was his life so complicated? What had he ever done to deserve everything he went through? He hadn’t asked to be related to the Dursleys, it wasn’t his fault they didn’t like him or his magic. He had tried to get on with them, had tried to do everything they asked, but it was an impossible task. The list that planned his entire day just got longer and longer the older he got. He exhausted himself to the point of collapse trying to finish the list because he knew that he would go hungry if he didn’t finish it, but if he did actually manage to finish the list and gulp down his meagre dinner that was usually a thin slice of bread or the over boiled and soggy vegetables from the Dursleys dinner that Dudley hadn’t touched, the next day there were several more things to do on the list and he went hungry when he found it impossible to finish it.

He had only really been hit a handful of times by his Uncle and a few times by his Aunt. But each one stood out vividly in his mind because of the circumstances leading to him being hit and how long it took him to recover from each one. Aunt Marge had only hit him twice, once with her walking stick when he was five and once when he was nine. Dudley had always hit him and it would probably always be his first reaction when seeing him, it was all his vile cousin knew. Harry was adamant that he would not be going to the Dursleys whilst pregnant, nor would he ever endanger his baby son by taking him to the Dursley residence after his birth. He didn’t care what his mates said or what measures they used to get his son or himself to go and ‘visit’ his so called relatives, he would never go back there now that he didn’t have to.

Draco came into the bedroom and sat next to him on the settee underneath the platform that held their bed. The blond sat close to him and wrapped an arm around his shoulders, pulling Harry to lean against his body. A light kiss was pressed to his temple and Harry sighed.

“There’s a reason you don’t want to go and see them or tell them about the baby, isn’t there?” Draco asked softly.

“We’ve never gotten on, Draco. They just never understood magic or me. Anything different in their nice normal world was very unwelcome to them. I still remember when Mister Weasley blasted their fireplace across the living room.”
Harry sighed as he remembered the summer after that incident when he had seen them again. Uncle Vernon was still banging on about it, making up some story about the fireplace not working properly since the ‘freaks’ had destroyed it and he had demanded an address so he could send a bill to Mister Weasley for the nice, new fireplace that he had had to buy and have installed before Harry had come home from Hogwarts. Harry had refused to give the address…that was one of the times that stood out to him as he had been hit very hard for refusing to allow Uncle Vernon to bill Mister Weasley by telling him the address.

“I’m afraid of what they would do if I turned up heavily pregnant with four men. Uncle Vernon doesn’t think very kindly of same sex relationships.”

“Well surely they can be reasonable.” Draco tried to soothe. “They wouldn’t hit you or anything just because you’re in a relationship with four men and certainly not when you’re pregnant even if they don’t approve.”

Draco would never know how close to the nail head he had come, because he was afraid that that was exactly what Uncle Vernon would do and Harry sighed tiredly.

“I don’t know, Draco. I don’t know what they’d do and it’s that that is keeping me from going. I will not endanger my son in any way just to appease my mates.”

“We would never ask you to, Harry, but they’re your family, you’ve grown up with them. It…it escapes me that they would turn on you just for your choice in sexual partners.”

“How can you say that when you had a Wife already lined up for marriage?”

“That’s different. I’m a Pureblood; I have an obligation to my family, to my blood, to my line to provide a healthy male Heir to carry on the family name. Your family are Muggles, you have different last names, they already have a son to carry on their name, why would they care about your sexual orientation?”

“Because same sex relationships don’t fall into their views of normal, Draco. They’re homophobic and they wouldn’t accept it, family member or not, it’s an irrational hatred, it has no logic.”

Not to mention that they already hated him because of his magic. Harry sighed, why was his life so complicated?

Draco sighed and pulled Harry in tighter, wrapping his other arm around him and kissing Harry’s cheek.

“I’ll talk to the others, love. You don’t have to go, not when you’re pregnant at least, we’ll leave our son with someone and then go and speak to your relatives if you are so unsure of how they’ll react, but you should know that not one of us would let them hurt you, pregnant or not.”

“I don’t want to see them, Draco. I was ecstatic when Dumbledore told me that I didn’t have to go back, that I’d be spending the summer with my mates and with my child. I’m happy knowing I don’t have to go near them. We tolerated each other at best, we don’t like each other, we’re too different to ever see eye to eye.”

“I don’t understand your reasoning, but I’ll respect it, Harry. But I’m not sure the others will understand, especially not Max. He’s very big into family and he won’t understand at all why you wouldn’t want to go and see them to tell them the amazing news.”

“I know, but what can he do? Drag me kicking and screaming whilst I’m heavily pregnant?”

Draco smiled and stood up, pulling Harry to his feet and into a searing kiss.
“I think the rest of us would have something to say if he did try that, love.”

Harry smiled. He felt better with Draco’s support. At least it wouldn’t be just him against his mates whilst pregnant, he still had Draco and possibly Nasta and Blaise as well, but Harry already knew that Max wouldn’t understand. His entire family adored him and he loved them right back. His Father, Myron, cuffed the back of his head now and then, but Max had assured them that his Father had never actually hurt him and had never made him bleed. A distinct difference between Myron and Uncle Vernon, Harry thought dispassionately, remembering all the times he had bled and been ignored or been hit and made to bleed. He had never been loved or cared for before now.

The next week flew by, with the exams over for the sixth years and the Professors busy with the younger years Harry, Draco and Blaise were often left to their own devices as Max and Nasta went off to work.

Their days were spent mainly lounging around their rooms, talking, joking, playing and doing their own thing. Harry was often joined by Ginny and Hermione, much to Draco’s displeasure. Ginny and Hermione would gush over his expanding belly, Hermione giving him more knitted items and it was just as the school was about to give out for the summer that Harry felt the urge to organise his collection of baby clothes.

It happened quite suddenly as well, he had gone to the bathroom and on his way back to his mates in the living room, he had seen the several large boxes filled with baby clothes and little things that he already had and he had the urge to sort them out. He had folded himself down onto the carpet and tipped out the first box, beginning to make piles for shirts, trousers, bodysuits, sleepsuits and socks, measuring them against each other to see if any were larger or smaller and putting them in their own separate piles if they were. It had taken fifteen minutes for his mates to get worried and come looking for him. Surely he couldn’t still be in the bathroom after nearly half an hour? They had found him on the floor surrounded by baby clothes.

“Harry, what are you doing, Cariad?” Nasta asked softly, kneeling down to look him in the eye.

“I realised that none of the clothes are sorted out. I don’t know what I have and what I don’t have, what if I don’t have enough bodysuits or enough cardigans?”

“Nesting instincts.” Max had stated to the others with such a wide grin on his face that it made Harry pause for a moment.

Harry tipped out the third big box and smiled as he saw the cosy toes that Hermione had knitted. He placed it in its own pile, it was the only one he had and the only one he would ever have. He loved it. Harry looked at the piles he had and noticed that the majority of it was blinding white, there were a few pale lemon pieces and a few in sage green, but he had hardly any blue.

“I want blue things.” He stated suddenly. “It’s all too white. I want more things in blue.”

“Mrs Weasley is knitting as fast as she can in blue, Harry love.” Max told him.

Harry just looked up from the pile of bibs he was holding and lowered an eyebrow in puzzlement.

“I want them now.” Harry insisted. “Everything has to be ready, everything needs to be perfect.”

“I’ll get you some on my way home from work tomorrow, Cariad, is that soon enough?” Nasta asked gently.
Harry wanted to snap that no it wasn’t soon enough, he wanted them right now, damn it! But he took a deep breath and nodded his head. He wasn’t going to be unreasonable, he still had several large boxes to sort through and he still needed to sleep, tomorrow wasn’t that far away after all.

Harry happily spent the next day writing out little recipe cards with Max’s delighted help. He didn’t even look at the clothes once. He had decided that when his baby was weaned, he was not going to feed his baby mass produced sludge in a jar. His baby would have completely organic, homemade food.

He enjoyed spending the day with Max, debating on the best food to give their baby, the best way to cook it and in what quantities the baby needed the food. Harry sent Draco and Blaise out to buy a food processor from a Muggle shop. Neither were happy at all, but when Harry had started crying, they had rushed to go and buy it for him.

Nasta brought home two carrier bags full of baby clothes when he got home from work and Harry happily snatched them from his mate and went digging through them. Nasta had brilliant taste in clothes, Harry observed with an approving smile at what Nasta had bought.

It was when Harry pulled on his oldest pair of jeans and his baggiest jumper that the four others began to really worry as Harry got down on his hands and knees with a bucket of soapy water and a sponge and he started manually scrubbing the skirting boards.

Max and Nasta wrote to their parents and the very next day Ashleigh, Richard and Myron were back in their son’s living quarters along with their youngest daughter Alayla, watching as Harry happily and vigorously scrubbed the inside of the kitchen cupboards having turfed all the food out onto the floor, much to Max’s dismay.

“He…he just won’t stop!” Max breathed in horror. “It was a civil war just getting him into bed last night. He starts the minute he wakes up and we have to wrestle him to bed at night, he has had an extra room tacked onto our bedroom, he says it’s going to be the baby’s nursery, he’s had us repaint it twice already and there isn’t even any furniture in there yet.”

“He’s just nesting, Maximilius honey.” Ashleigh told him as she watched Harry indulgently, remembering her own instincts.

“Caesar never had this trouble!”

“Amelle never had the urge to clean.” Ashleigh answered. “Some women, or men in this case, feel the urge more strongly than others. I had it quite mildly on you, Caesar and Julinda, just a bit of sprucing up here and there and making sure everything was where it was meant to be, but with Talia and Alayla, your Fathers weren’t even allowed to wear shoes in their own home.”

“Does this mean that he’ll be building a nest soon?” Alayla asked as she watched her oldest brother’s partner use both his hands to get out a particularly stubborn spot of grime that only he could see.

“Possibly, but some pregnant people feel the urge to nest as early as their fourth month, it doesn’t necessarily mean that he’s going into labour or that he’s anywhere near giving birth.”

“I would get him to where he is going to be giving birth soon though.” Richard suggested his voice cracking and changing pitch halfway through his sentence, but the others were so used to it that they ignored it, Richard got upset when it was mentioned.

“He’s due in September, he’ll be here when he gives birth if he carries to term.”

“I don’t think he will carry to term.” Myron observed as he watched his little son-in-law pitch out all of Max’s carefully organised jars and tins with a swipe of his arm so he could start on the next
“Why not?” Blaise asked curiously from his spot on the floor trying to decipher a particularly hard translation in the book that he was reading, the one that Harry had gotten for him. Nasta was over his shoulder an equally puzzled frown on his face, his lips moving silently as he tried to figure out the words written down on the page.

“Harry is very slender and the size of his waistband seems to indicate that he is reaching the point where he is going to be too big for his frame to support him.” Myron explained as everyone looked to Harry’s belly, which was pulling tight against the jumper he was wearing, which was also gaping at the neckline, showing a thin, pale shoulder and a lot of neck and chest and had had to be rolled back several times so his hands were free to do his cleaning.

Harry had ballooned in the last few weeks until he found it difficult to sit down and stand up without help and stairs were a serious problem as he could no longer see his own feet.

“So you think he’ll have a summer baby?” Draco asked as he sipped his tea, his current novel closed and resting on the arm of the settee as he gave his attention politely to their guests.

“Almost definitely.” Myron answered. “If he hasn’t given birth by August I’ll eat my own wings.”

“Harry’s birthday is the thirty-first of July. I hope we can celebrate it before he goes into his nest.”

“Talia and I have a bet going on who will give birth first, Harry or the bitch.”

“Alayla! Language young lady!” Ashleigh chastised.

“Sorry Mum, I meant to say Harry or Amelle, but the truth will always come out.”

Richard started laughing and sent a secret wink at his youngest daughter, whilst Myron frowned at the both of them disapprovingly.

“You were brought up better, Alayla.” He said sternly. “We didn’t teach you this sort of language and Richard you should know better than to encourage her.”

“I’m with family aren’t I? It’s not like I’m in public saying it and Amelle is a bitch. I don’t know what Caesar saw in her.” Alayla defended.

Richard just shrugged and grinned cheekily at his lover, who gave out a long suffering sigh and quickly looked at Harry when the tinkling of smashed glass cut over their conversation. Harry had started on a new cupboard.

“Harry! That was my only bottle of vinegar!” Max complained half-heartedly as he leapt up to see what Harry had broken this time.

“Sorry! I accidentally kicked it.” Harry called back from deep within the cupboard.

Max unhappily waved his wand to vanish the glass shards lest Harry injure himself on them and he waved it again to clean up the spill of acrid smelling vinegar before it made Harry feel sick.

“Why do you have to clean my cupboards?” Max asked for the fourth time that day. “I keep them very clean and well organised. I’m going to have to start all over again.”

“Keep the top cupboard free.” Harry called out as Max went about filling the cupboard Harry had finished with.
“Dare I ask why?” Max groused.

“For the baby bottles and food jars.” Harry replied.

Max sighed and conceded that it was a good idea and unhappily moved his herbs and spices into the cupboard that housed the tins.

“I never thought I’d see my big brother Max so whipped that he’d rearrange his kitchen.” Alayla grinned.

“I’d rearrange everything if Harry wanted me to.” Max stated, but it wasn’t a happy statement, it would kill him to put everything in a different place than what he was used to, but he would do it nonetheless.

Harry crawled out of his current cupboard and over to Max to give him a long, lingering kiss.

“I’m sorry I’m messing everything up, but the cupboards need to be clean and I need the top cupboard for the bottles and things. I don’t mean to be a pain in the arse, but I won't have any part of this place dirty.”

Max sighed and cuddled Harry tightly, kissing that tiny nose making Harry giggle. Max let out an amused snort.

“You’re too cute sometimes.”

“I am not cute!” Harry defied venomously.

Max grinned wider and kissed Harry’s cheek softly. “Get back in your cupboard.”

Those words had an effect than none of them could have possibly imagined as all at once Harry’s face drained of blood and he went paler than a sheet, his eyes wide and horrified, showing too much white, and he didn’t seem to be breathing.

“Harry?” Max questioned, placing a hand over Harry’s forehead. “Has the nausea come back? Speak to me, Harry!”

Nasta was there then picking Harry up, who flinched violently, his muscles tensed and quivering as Harry took in a harsh, rasping gasp of air, letting it out shakily before stopping breathing again.

“Harry?” Nasta asked, trying to get Harry’s green, green eyes to focus on him. They didn’t, Harry seemed to be looking right through him, caught up in something that only he could see.

“Get Madam Pomfrey!” Max ordered Draco and Blaise, who were gone in seconds.

Harry was caught in a flashback of remembered pain and neglect. How many times in his life had he heard the phrase ‘get back in your cupboard’ or ‘go to your cupboard!’ The lonely days and longer nights that he had spent alone in isolation, listening to the happy family beyond the door, watching TV together, playing games, eating a family meal whilst he had been locked in a tiny cupboard, his stomach aching in hunger, his arms throbbing from cleaning every inch of the house and his little heart breaking as he begged yet again for someone to love him. Cut off and denied any social contact or even the barest bit of human decency.

Madam Pomfrey was yelling as Draco carried her into the room. Max would have broken down crying in laughter as it looked like Draco had just picked her up and ran through the school with her with no explanation at all, except Harry was still pale, still trapped in whatever was happening to him and he was still not responding to them. The situation was too serious for laughter or jokes at the moment.

“What is the meaning of this?!”

Madam Pomfrey immediately turned into the medical professional that she was as she turned to where Harry was still being held by Nasta and she cast a spell on Harry to see if he was being influenced by any outside sources and her test came back negative. She cast a number of other tests and sighed.

“From what I can tell Harry is having a memory flashback. Can you remember what was said or what happened?”

“He was cleaning the cupboards; he’s been having nesting instincts for the last week.” Nasta informed as he cradled Harry’s quivering form in his arms, trying to give his submissive mate any shred of comfort that he could.

“I was joking around and I told him to get back in his cupboard, he went like this just after.” Max added.

“It is likely that that comment had some effect on Harry’s delicate mental state, he is caught in a memory that possibly links to that sentence.”

“Will he be alright?”

“I believe he’ll be just fine once he snaps out of the memory. Just lay him down and let him sort through what he needs to, it could be completely unrelated to that comment or something similar but not exactly the same, he could be remembering a childhood punishment of being sent to his bedroom that he hasn’t thought about in years.”

“But why would this happen?” Ashleigh asked, indicating to Harry.

“It could be a side effect to his pregnancy, it could be a surprising link that Harry wasn’t expecting, it could be anything that has caused this flashback.”

“Is there anything we can do?”

“He should snap out of it on his own, but if he doesn’t within ten minutes, put him under a sleeping spell.”

“He hasn’t eaten.” Blaise fretted.

“He should be fine overnight, just give him a big breakfast if he isn’t feeling sick.”

“Thank you, Madam Pomfrey.” Blaise said softly as he watched Harry sadly as he saw her out distractedly.

It took only three, very tense, minutes for Harry to take in a huge, gasping breath and to shake his head as if clearing it. He blinked languidly as he peered about, being faintly shocked as all of his mates clamoured around him and began asking him how he felt.

“I…I’m fine, I feel fine. Why, what’s wrong?” He asked confusedly.

“You had a memory flashback.” Draco explained cautiously, as if the mere mention of it would send Harry back into the flashback.
“Oh.” Harry frowned as he realised what had happened. He swallowed and hoped he could play it off as something other than a fear of being locked in a cupboard.

“I don’t think you should go back near the cupboard, Harry.” Max said seriously.

“No, I was done anyway. I need to wash the walls next.”

“How are you going to wash the walls? You don’t reach halfway up them.”

“I’m a wizard.” Harry told them slowly. “I’ll just levitate the sponge.”

“Not today you won’t.” Nasta exclaimed strongly. “You can start cleaning again tomorrow, but for the rest of today you need to rest.”

“I was only caught in a memory, Nas. It’s not like I fell over or hurt myself.” Harry complained even as he made himself comfortable on the settee, he didn’t want to be punished, least of all in front of Max’s family.

“Just to be sure.” Nasta told him as he picked up the blanket from the back of the settee and covered Harry with it, tucking him in and laying a loving kiss to his brow.

Harry sighed, but snuggled down in his little bed and he let his body relax. His mates had no idea why he had had his little memory meltdown, they weren’t asking questions…yet and they seemed to be more worried as to how he was now than to what had caused his little meltdown in the first place. He just hoped it stayed that way, he had hidden too much from them, had hidden everything away, he had kept it all a secret for too long to have them find out now. He couldn’t let them find out about what the Dursleys were really like.

Harry sighed, but snuggled down in his little bed and he let his body relax. His mates had no idea why he had had his little memory meltdown, they weren’t asking questions…yet and they seemed to be more worried as to how he was now than to what had caused his little meltdown in the first place. He just hoped it stayed that way, he had hidden too much from them, had hidden everything away, he had kept it all a secret for too long to have them find out now. He couldn’t let them find out about what the Dursleys were really like.

Harry was nervously sitting on the settee that he so loved, a cup of ginger tea in his hands. He had had a bout of sickness that morning and he was hoping that the ginger would calm his unsettled stomach down a little.

His nausea was more of a nervous thing than a pregnancy thing. It was the fifth of June, Draco’s seventeenth birthday, and the elder Malfoys had held off their visit until now so that they could see their son on his coming of age birthday whilst Lucius Malfoy tied up some loose ends in work.

Max was sitting with him, Nasta opposite, as they had both taken the day off of work for Draco’s birthday, something which had touched the blond as he had woken up to a pile of presents and breakfast in bed courtesy of Max.

When Draco had gotten a note with a solid gold and diamond wristwatch that his parents would be coming to see him and his chosen partners in person that afternoon he had looked at all four of them with dread. They had naturally asked what was wrong and Draco had told them. It was only Harry that was worried. Blaise didn’t need to worry about a thing, he was Pureblooded and he had known the elder Malfoys for years, Max’s Father, Myron was a very big political figure in the wizarding world and had met Lucius Malfoy on several occasions, along with Max, whom the blond seemed to at least tolerate if not like and Nasta was a Full-blooded Dracken, though his family claimed Fae and Valkyrie blood over Dracken as Faes and Valkyries were still legal in Britain, but he was still a Pureblooded magical creature that could stretch back generations, it was only Harry who was a Half-blood and the elder Malfoys didn’t know that he had been invited back into the Pureblood circles…not yet.

Harry swallowed and took a shaky sip of his cooling tea, laying a steadying hand on his baby bump. He was now very, very big and walking had become a slight problem. Max was teasing the others by saying that the baby couldn’t be anyone else’s but his from the sheer size of the bump that Harry carried: Harry knew that most of the bump was water weight and that the baby would be lucky if he was five pounds in weight. Not that Harry was complaining about having a baby that was five pounds, it was better than having a baby so small that he wouldn’t survive, but he had hoped for a seven pound baby, which with his body size had probably been too much to ask for.

A smart, curt knock on the portrait door had Harry letting out a small ‘eep’ and crawling, with difficulty, over Max and huddling into his other side, the one farthest from the door, as Draco strode purposefully to the portrait door and swung it open.

Harry caught a glimpse of two people with long blonde hair and ducked behind Max again. Max chuckled and threw a casual arm around Harry’s neck and held him closely, protectively as Draco greeted his parents, who remarked on how well he looked.

“I have been very happy these past few months.” Draco told them with a genuine smile which seemed to surprise them.

“I…I don’t think I have seen you smile that way since you were six years old.” Narcissa Malfoy exclaimed in slight shock.

“I have reason to smile now, Mother.” Draco bowed his parents into the room and the elder Malfoys stopped as they surveyed the three other men in the room. None of them looked pregnant at all.

“If you would like to introduce us, Draco.” Lucius Malfoy drawled slowly as he surveyed the room with narrowed eyes. If any one of these men were tricking his son into a relationship he would hold no reservations over teaching them a lesson with a few select curses. No one messed with a Malfoy and absolutely no one messed around with his only son.

“Of course Father, Mother. You no doubt remember Blaise?” Draco indicated the tall, slender man.

Lucius Malfoy nodded in polite acknowledgement whilst Narcissa offered a pale hand, which Blaise took, bowed over and kissed the back off like an old English gentleman as Harry watched. Oh shit if there was a certain protocol to this then he’d be completely stumped.

“This is Nasta Tabrien Delericey.” Draco indicated next to Blaise, where Nasta rolled to his feet in such an elegant, graceful move it caught Harry’s breath in his throat.

“Delericey?” Lucius Malfoy questioned in calculated surprise. “Your bloodline has creature blood in it.”
“Yes it does.” Nasta answered shortly, but politely, not elaborating.

Nasta stuck his hand out to Mister Malfoy and the older man stared at the appendage for a fraction of a second, before his own hand inched forward and curled around Nasta’s larger one. They shook hands before Nasta turned and took Mrs Malfoy’s hand and kissed it briefly.

“Draco dear, you said that one of your…partners was expecting a baby and that was some months ago.” Narcissa coaxed as she looked at the three men before her, trying to find one of them which could possibly be pregnant, they all looked so big, so muscled and from Draco’s letter his partner should be at least five, six months pregnant by now. None in this room looked the type to be a male carrier.

“Yes, five months pregnant with a baby boy.” Draco’s voice was so proud, so happy.

“Where is this five month pregnant partner, Draco?” Lucius asked.

Draco indicated the third and final man, he was the biggest, most muscled and his perfectly flat stomach was crunched by his posture as he sat curled in the settee. He was not five months pregnant.

“Just what is going on here?” Lucius hissed in icy fury. Whichever one of these men had cursed his son into believing he was going to be a Father to a non-existent baby was going to pay.

“This is Max and Harry.” Draco introduced.

“You have named the child Harry?” Narcissa asked warily.

“What?” Draco asked confusedly. “No, we have yet to name the baby. Harry wishes to wait for the birth before we name him.”

“I believe Mister Malfoy, Mrs Malfoy, that my position has caused some confusion.” Max explained deeply as he stood to his feet. “I am Maximilius Diadesen Maddison.”

“Myron Maddison’s oldest son.” Lucius nodded stiffly. “I recognised you from the last time we met.”
Max smiled a bit forcibly as he turned and indicated the heavily pregnant boy-man behind him. “This is Harry.”

“Draco, you said you only had three partners.” Narcissa pointed out as she tried to come to terms with having four sons-in-law and no daughter-in-law, not even three sons-in-law anymore, but four.

“When I wrote that letter to you and Father, Mother, there were only three; Nasta joined us not too long after I sent the letter.”

“Is that Potter?” Lucius demanded through partially gritted teeth, his hands flexing as more and more twists confused him and angered him.

Draco swallowed as he realised that things weren’t exactly going to plan. He knew that his parents would be shocked and probably angry over him having Harry Potter as a sexual partner, but he had hoped that said Harry Potter being pregnant, possibly with the Malfoy Heir, would be enough to at least make them think about the idea first.

“That is my pregnant partner.” Draco answered coolly. “Harry may be carrying the Malfoy Heir and even if he isn’t this time, he’s the only one who could possibly do so as I refuse to be with another. I’m happy with Harry; happy with all of them, Father and you won’t take that away from me.”

“I think your Father is just shocked, dear.” Narcissa Malfoy cut in delicately as she laid a hand on her Husband’s shoulder. “We were terribly shocked to hear you were in a relationship with three other men, to find out that three has now become four and that the last person we would have thought you would be in a relationship with is Harry Potter.” Narcissa shook her blonde hair. “I think we may need some time and perhaps some Earl Grey tea to get our heads around the idea.”

Narcissa sat herself primly on the settee adjacent to the one that Harry was sitting on with Max and Lucius regally sat next to her, diligently avoiding even so much as looking in Harry’s direction. He talked politely with Max about his Father, whilst Blaise and Narcissa talked about how his Mother was doing with Josiah, her new Husband, it seemed that he was the longest running Husband to date, except for Maximiliano.

Draco served the tea, making sure to give Harry his in person and give him a loving kiss to the lips as his parents watched, though nothing obscene or too lingering. Draco’s hands did however linger on his large stomach, caressing and stroking it.

Harry smiled and indicated with his eyes the photos on the mantel piece. Every one of his mates had had a photo taken with Harry and his pregnant belly and in the opposite side of the photo frame was the most clear of the scan photos. Max had thought it a brilliant idea to take his to work to show off, he had come home laden down with so many presents from his work colleagues that he had fallen over the rug and split open his chin. Nasta had mended the split in minutes and had decided, with a small smile, that his would remain on the work desk in the corner of the room that he had taken over. Blaise’s was on the bedside table and Draco’s was on the mantel piece, Harry had gifted his picture of his pregnant self and the scan photo to Mrs Weasley, who had written back a tearstained letter thanking him profusely.

Draco took the photo down and handed it to his parents, Lucius Malfoy stared at the happiness he could see in both boys as his son held Potter in his arms and hugged that large stomach to himself. He tried not to think that that belly could be carrying the future of his line.

“The baby looks adorable, Draco.” Narcissa commented as the silence stretched for longer than socially acceptable. “Are you having a hard pregnancy, Pot…Harry?”

“I don’t know. This is my first pregnancy.” Harry replied snidely.

Draco sighed as if he had known it was coming. But really what had he expected? Harry thought. Narcissa was making more of an effort than her Husband, who had yet to look at him, but it wasn’t much more effort, it was clear to him that she would prefer all of the other three to be with Draco than just him on his own.

“Harry is having a relatively easy time of his pregnancy, Mother.” Draco told her, sipping his own tea, trying to salvage the situation. Too bad Harry was now in a vile mood.

“You try sticking your head down the toilet every morning and see what an easy time you have of it! Not to mention the miscarriage scare, yeah I’m having a breeze with it!” Harry hissed. Max placed a hand on the top of his head, his fingers spread, not yet clenching into a fist, but giving him a warning to watch his mouth.

“I am sorry to hear you are still suffering from morning nausea.” Lucius told him smoothly, looking into the depths of his tea cup. Harry’s hands clenched in anger.

“I’ll just bet you are.”

Max’s hand closed into a tight fist, pulling his hair tight to his scalp and Harry’s fingertips ached to reform into claws, to swipe at his mate until he let go. He was however still considerate of Draco, who had yet to tell his parents that he and his…partners were all magical creatures, though Nasta was already out as a magical creature, just the wrong one.
Max picked him up and he was carried through to the bedroom, Harry remained silent as he glared sullenly at Max’s shirt. There was a triangle wedge of flesh showing at the top of the shirt where the top two buttons were undone. Max had an amazing chest.

Max sat on the bed and cradled Harry like a baby so they were looking at each other.

“What’s wrong, Harry? Why are you ruining Draco’s chance at getting his parents to accept all of us?”

“Because I don’t think they will accept me. You, Nasta and Blaise have no problems; the baby has a better chance at being accepted than I do.”

“And that makes you jealous?”

“It makes me sad and upset, so I hide it behind anger.”

Max sighed and held him closer.

“I don’t like being rejected, Max. I hate not being accepted, it makes me think back to…”

Harry cut himself off abruptly as he realised what he was about to say, what he had been about to admit. He took in as deep a breath as he could, held the almost painful amount of air in his lungs, before blowing it out in a harsh sigh.

“Back to when, Harry?” Max asked him, looking at him with a piercing gaze from those gorgeous blue eyes. Harry hoped that when he and Max had a baby, that that baby would take Max’s eyes.

“To primary school.” Harry partially lied quickly. It hadn’t been what he had been about to say, but it was still true, he hadn’t been accepted in primary school.

“What happened?” Max asked softly, coaxingly.

All of his mates had been trying to pry information from him since his major mess up with the cupboard incident. It had made them realise that they knew next to nothing about his home life or his family and that didn’t sit right with them at all and they had begun asking questions. Hard, awkward questions that were difficult to answer without downright lying to them, something which Harry had vehemently decided not to do.

“I was the little odd kid.” Harry answered eventually. “Small, shy, a bit of a geek really. I liked reading and often spent a lot of time in the library. I only went there in the first place because they poked fun at me because of my hair and my glasses.”

Max smiled softly, he loved the photo that Harry had shown them of an eleven year old Harry arm in arm with the traitor Ron and the girl Hermione, who was growing on him slightly. She was a bit like a fungus, always there, always noticeable, but not always appreciated. But he had gone on a tangent, Harry had looked so sweet, so shyly endearing in his large, baggy jumper, round framed glasses and cheeky grin. He would have loved to see Harry in those glasses, but Harry had told them that he had happily snapped them in two when he had come into his inheritance. He supposed that after fourteen years of being practically blind and dependant on them had empowered Harry when he no longer needed them to see.

“Children can be very cruel without really meaning it.” Max told him gently. “Blunt to the bone and as unforgiving as a scorned woman.”

Harry huffed out a breath and smiled. Max was relieved to see that smile. He hated seeing Harry upset, and hearing that his tiny mate had been bullied in primary school pulled at every protective tendon in his body. Though it was long past and he knew that he couldn’t really attack a bunch of kids for past mistakes, he still longed to do so.

Harry knew just how cruel children could be; he had spent his life living with the biggest, meanest, cruellest kid in Surrey. Dudley and his friends had made his childhood a nightmare that couldn’t be escaped by simply waking up.

“I used to love, yet hate school all at once. Once upon a time I used to love learning, used to love reading and writing, yet I hated the other kids with their jeers and taunts, their kicks and punches. One girl used to always pull my hair, a boy used to bite me every time he saw me and a different boy used to take my glasses off of me and hide them so I couldn’t see. I retreated into myself, into books, but once the other kids realised that I wasn’t hiding in a far corners of the playground and was actually in the library, they tattled on me because we weren’t allowed in the library during break times. I was banned from the library and it was about then that I just stopped caring. I didn’t care about learning anymore; I didn’t care about books or school. It wasn’t long after that I found out I was a wizard and I got to come here. My mind set didn’t really change though. I mean it was interesting to learn magic and to practice spells, but my passion for reading just never flared again, now I’d rather burn a book than read it.”

Max held Harry close as his heart ached. That Harry had been driven from his love of reading by other children saddened him. He twisted his body around and reclined against the pillows. He let Harry wriggle around until the entire lengths of their bodies were pressed together. He picked up a book from the pile on the shared bedside table accidentally knocking something that belonged to someone else onto the floor, really there weren’t enough bedsides for them to have a table each, but it was a nice, fleeting thought. Max sighed as he rolled with a complaining Harry, reaching down to pick up what he had knocked off and replacing it on its precarious position on the corner of the bedside table.

Harry was confused as to what was happening until Max opened the book to the first page and started reading aloud. He smiled and chuckled softly so he didn’t disturb the story. He settled down to listen as Max’s deep voice read the story, his voice changing tone or pitch as he spoke the lines of the different characters, his tone inflecting excitement or sorrow at the situations and Harry hoped that this wasn’t just a one off experience.

He fell asleep holding his belly. Max stopped reading as the soft sleeping noises reached him. He bookmarked the page and just lay on the bed holding Harry as he slept peacefully. He entertained the thought of joining Harry in sleep but a commotion from the other room pulled a sigh from his throat.

He rolled Harry onto his other side and gave him the body pillow that Harry now needed to sleep properly on his side due to the baby bump. He tucked Harry in and jogged as quietly and as quickly as he could into the living room as the ruckus grew louder.

“What is going on here?” He demanded as he looked from Draco to his Father, who were both red faced and angry. “Harry has just fallen asleep. He and the baby need to rest.”

“Excuse me for disturbing precious Potter’s sleep after finding out my only son is a creature!”
Lucius Malfoy breathed harshly.

“That is my mate you are speaking ill of.” Max growled.

“All of you?” Narcissa breathed, pressing a hand to her breast, looking at Blaise in particular.

Blaise shrugged. “Mother is a Dracken as well. My father was too.”

“My entire family are Drackens.” Nasta spoke.

“My Mother and Fathers are, only my brother and I are Drackens out of my siblings.” Max stated a tad harshly.

“But my son. My son!”
"I am sorry that I wasn’t born human enough for you, Father, but I am what I am. You knew, you knew when you married Mother that there was a chance that I could be a Dracken. That any child you had with her could be a Dracken, or really any other number of creature as it seems the Black family had them all at one time or another. Harry and I get our Dracken blood from the same ancestor, Cygnus Black. You knew that there was Dracken blood in the Black lines before I was even conceived so don’t act like it’s a surprise to you now!"

“You gave no indication that you were a magical creature!” Lucius hissed. “A year, an entire year that you have known where I have not!”

“Is that all that is bothering you?” Nasta asked softly, before anyone could say anything else.

“Yes it bothers me! My son was a magical creature for an entire year and he didn’t see fit to tell me!”

“In his defence Draco didn’t know how you would react.” Max stated as he strode forward and placed a supporting hand on Draco’s broad shoulder. “He was afraid of disownment and abandonment when he had no other place to go. It was only since he found us and he became part of our family and was assured a place to stay should things take a turn for the worse that he grew enough courage to tell you.”

Lucius Malfoy looked about fit to burst when Narcissa placed a calming hand on her Husband’s shoulder.

“I think it best if we left to calm down; we expect to see you this summer, Draco darling.” Narcissa held up a hand when it looked like her son was about to speak. “I know your…mate, is pregnant and that Dracken pregnancies only last a maximum of seven months, but we still expect to see our son. You should have known better than to have thought we would disown you over this, it isn’t like you are a diseased creature like a werewolf or a vampire. Drackens are a perfectly acceptable creature to have in a blood line, as you have said we knew there was a chance that you could be a Dracken, but when you displayed no signs of having a creature inheritance after your sixteenth birthday we thought that we knew that you hadn’t had one, to hear now that you had hid such an important and large part of your life from us hurts, Draco. We need time to come to terms with what has happened and the large amount of information that has been bestowed upon us; I hope you enjoy the rest of your birthday.”

Draco watched as his parents left his private rooms and he swallowed back the emotion that was trying to build up in the back of his throat. He felt blank, empty, like something should have been there but it wasn’t. Max wrapped his arms comfortably around Draco and kissed his neck.

Draco bit his tongue to stop any sound from coming out of his mouth and almost lost his grip on his emotions when Max turned him around and held him to his chest, there were only three inches difference in their heights, but at that moment Draco felt about two feet tall and Max seemed huge and safe and comforting.

Nasta held him from behind and Blaise wormed his way into the middle with him, holding him just like the only other time his best friend had had to hold him, when the Dark Lord had threatened to kill his Mother and Father when his Aunt Bellatrix and her Husband had taken refuge in their home.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Harry woke up groggy and uncomfortable; he hated sleeping during the day. He crawled out of the bed, keeping a death grip on the bedside table when he stumbled slightly.

He made his way down the narrow stairs on his bum, he didn’t want to risk walking, from there he went into the bathroom first to do his business and to wash his face a little and then from there he went to the living room.

“Why didn’t you call one of us?!?” Draco demanded as soon as he walked through the door. “What if you had fallen down the stairs?”

“I went down on my bum.” Harry said, still too groggy to fight or argue as he collapsed onto Blaise and curled around his lover.

Blaise smiled and kissed him gently. “Did you have a good sleep, Mio amore?”

Harry nodded and snuggled in tighter as Blaise wrapped his arms tighter around him, before diving back into his discussion with Nasta about languages. Blaise was very impressed by how many languages Nasta could read, write and speak in.

“It was my Father’s fault.” Nasta said fondly. “He works out of the country often and when we were little he took us with him, I was always very interested in foreign languages, I wanted to know what everyone around me was saying. Dad told me that if I wanted to know so badly then I should take the time to learn the language.”
“So you did.”

Nasta nodded with a small smile on his lips. “Since I have gotten older, I’ve grown a certain… preference for obscure or ancient languages. Ones that are hard to learn or are not well known or used.”

“I can speak fluently in French, which is my first language…”

“I thought Italian was your first language?” Harry piped up from his place tucked under Blaise’s arm, lying against his chest.

“No. French is my first language, though really I learnt French and English at the same time, but I learnt the French words first as that was where I was living. It was only when I found out my Father and his family were Italian that I asked my Mother to teach me. My reasoning was that if they knew that I was committed to them enough to learn their language then they would come and meet me, but they never did. I doubt they even know I learnt Italian just for them.”

Harry moved his arms to wrap around Blaise and held him comfortingly.

“It’s alright, Blaise. At least you can actually use the languages you know. Unlike me. The only other language I know and it’s completely dead and no one else can even speak it or understand it.”

“What do you mean?” Nasta asked with an expression of eagerness on his face. “Do you know an obscure language, Harry?”

“Oh it’s definitely obscure, rare, ancient and very little known.”

“What is it?” Nasta asked, almost on the edge of his seat, leaning towards Harry with such a look on his face that Harry couldn’t bear to tease him anymore.

“I can speak Parseltongue. You must have heard that I’m a Parselmouth?”

“It isn’t well known, Harry.” Blaise told him as Nasta looked like he would either faint or possibly orgasm.
“You can speak Parseltongue?” Nasta asked weakly.

“Speak it, hear it, understand it, I don’t know if I can write it though, but then I’ve never tried.”

“You mean you can speak with snakes?” Max asked as he popped over to them with a tea tray of cups for them.

“Yes. I got it from Voldemort when he attacked me as a baby. Dumbledore and I had hoped that when he died, the ability would disappear with him, but it didn’t. I guess once you’re a Parselmouth, you’re always a Parselmouth, I mean it’s very hard to forget it once you know it.”

“Please teach me.” Nasta begged. “I’ll be an attentive student; I swear I’ll learn to the best of my capabilities.”

“I don’t know if I can.” Harry replied sincerely, looking at Nasta’s devastated face with a pain in his heart. “I didn’t even know that I was a Parselmouth until I was told. It sounds like English to me, but I can definitely try to teach you.”

Nasta’s smile was sun shaming and Harry felt his stomach clench as he carefully eased himself up and moved to sit next to Nasta, only to be pulled down onto his mate’s lap and cuddled and kissed. Harry chuckled and kissed Nasta’s stubbled cheek.

“Here, Harry.” Max handed him a cup of honey tea, exactly how he liked it and Harry kissed Max gently.

“Thank you, Maxie.”

Max rolled his eyes fondly at the nickname. He went back to his kitchen that was perfectly organised once more after Harry had demolished the cupboards; only the top cupboard was left empty for Harry to store the baby things in when they came back after the summer holidays, which would be starting next week.

Harry hadn’t felt any more urges to dismantle anything or organise any more baby clothes, he was feeling mellow and calm. Like he had all the time in the world, like there was nothing he needed to do, so he was taking advantage of it and doing nothing.
“Right, Nas, before we even start, the first thing I need is a snake. I’ve never been able to speak it without a real snake.”

“You want us to let a real snake near you and the baby?” Draco asked.

“Not a venomous one. Just a real snake or a picture that looks life like, just something that looks like a bloody snake.”

“I have a snake in my lab.” Max answered. “I use the shed skin in my potions.”

“That one will do.” Harry said with a smile.

Max grinned and with a blown kiss to them all he left the room and went to go and get his snake. Harry would always appreciate that his mates would do such things for him. He vowed that he would return the favour for them.

Max didn’t take long at all and within twenty minutes he was back, holding a small carrying case. He put it on the coffee table and opened it, extracting a small, dull brown snake.

Harry held it and cooed at it until it sleepily opened his eyes, they were a bright yellow.

“Hello there.” Harry cooed ignoring the gasps and jumps his mates gave as he started hissing.

“You are not the same as me.” Was what the little snake replied, his tongue flicking in and out rapidly, tasting Harry’s scent.

“No, I can just speak to snakes.”

The snake coiled around his wrist and began exploring him, his dry scales rubbing against Harry’s smooth skin.

“This is amazing.” Nasta breathed as he listened and watched, taking in how Harry’s mouth and tongue moved when he was speaking.
“It seems very difficult to speak.” Blaise commented. “Almost unnatural in the way your mouth moves.”

Harry cocked his head to the side. “I never noticed before, it’s as natural as breathing to me.”

“I wonder if the baby will gain the ability of Parseltongue.” Draco put in. “The ability is supposedly passed down through the genes, but you didn’t gain the ability through genes, so would our children?”

“Huh, I’m not sure. We’ll have to wait and see.” Harry replied as he laughed at the snake, who was insulting the loud, fleshy mammals.

“What is it saying?” Nasta asked interestedly.

“He.” Harry corrected. “He’s very funny really, in a sarcastic way. He thinks you’re all loud, fleshy mammals.”

“I supposed it would be impossible to understand Parseltongue, but I would be content to just learn how to speak it, other’s wouldn’t know that I can’t actually understand the language, you are probably one of a handful of Parselmouths left in the world.”

“I think that it was just me and Voldemort who were the only ones in Britain.” Harry stated as he played with the little snake, yawning before taking a deep drink of tea.

Nasta cuddled him and his hands rested on his baby bump, smiling widely as the baby fluttered against his palms.

One hand came up and rested over Harry’s lips as he talked and Harry gave a part annoyed, part curious look to Nasta.

“It’s how I pick up languages so quickly. Feeling the movement of the mouth as the person speaks, it is a trick toddlers use to pronounce words properly. I use it so I can feel how the mouth moves on each syllable so I can recreate it.”

Harry turned back to conversing with the snake, Nasta’s hand over his mouth, not restricting his breathing, not even pressing hard, but it was there, touching his mouth. Harry tried not to think too hard on how many people’s mouths Nasta had placed the same hand over.

It took an hour until Nasta felt confident enough to try speaking just one word and Harry strived his absolute hardest to stop his laughter as the one word came out mangled and indistinct.

“How did I do?” Nasta asked.

“Open what?” The small brown snake asked irritably.

Harry grinned, before giving his undivided attention back to Nasta, whose mouth worked exceedingly hard to form the one, single, simple word.

Nasta once again failed to grasp the one word, but he seemed determined to get it right as he once again had Harry say ‘open’ with his hand over his mouth.

“There are no complicated sounds in Parseltongue.” Harry said. “It’s all soft, flowing words, no matter how harsh they may sound.”

Harry grinned as inspiration struck and he peeled Nasta’s hand from his mouth and pressed his lips lightly to Nasta’s once again saying ‘open’.

“I want to learn Parseltongue as well.” Max informed him as he watched them with burning eyes as they remained lip locked, speaking against the other’s lips.

“Open.” Harry hissed against Nasta’s mouth.

“Open.” Nasta hissed back, slightly sloppily and a tad imperfect, but Harry threw his arms around his oldest mate and kissed him in pride.

“Well done, Nasta!”

Nasta grinned in pride and self-accomplishment.
“It didn’t sound the same as what you said.” Blaise stated curiously.

“It was never going to.” Nasta replied. “I am not a natural speaker and Parseltongue is one of the most difficult languages to learn along with Mermish and Gobbledegook. You have to be a born Parselmouth to be a true speaker; I am merely imitating what Harry is saying, I could never hope to understand the meaning of the words. What did I actually say, though?”

“Open.” Harry shrugged.

“Why open?” Max asked.

“It was really the first word I learnt after finding out that I was a Parselmouth. Well apart from the whole duelling club, snake incident, which I never got to thank you for, Draco.”

Draco grinned unapologetically. “You can blame Professor Snape for that. He is the one who taught me the spell and he’s the one who told me to use it during the duel.”

Harry huffed and he settled himself back to straddling Nasta’s lap, who was very happy to have him there. Harry pressed his palm against the burning length of cloth and Nasta’s breath caught in his throat.

“You are a creature of infinite burning, carnal desire, Mister Delericey.” Harry stated all uppity and correct.

Nasta laughed and snuggled into his neck. “You’re adorable, Harry. I know you don’t like to think you are, but you really are.”

Harry huffed again and stood up, flicking Nasta’s ear. “To think that I was going to give you a blow job as a reward for learning your first Parseltongue word.”

Nasta’s grin fell away quicker than it had come. Harry laughed.
“Oh hell, who am I kidding, you can still have one.” Harry stated with a wink and he fell to his knees in front of Nasta, who seemed to be having trouble breathing.

Harry flicked open the button of Nasta’s trousers and lowered the zip, tugging them down to the floor, ignoring the protests from his other mates as he parted Nasta’s boxers and pulled him free of the cotton fabric.

For all his bravado Harry was nervous as he tentatively pressed his lips to that burning length. He had only really give one blow job before and it had been during the heat, he had no heat period now and only his nervous, rambling mind. He calmed himself as he run his lips over the silky soft skin.

Harry ignored as Draco sat close on Nasta’s side and that Blaise had taken up the other side. Max hung over the back of the settee, holding Nasta’s head, running his own lips over Nasta’s face and neck.

Harry let his tongue flick out briefly and Nasta gasped in a great, sucking breath. Max attached his mouth to Nasta’s Adam’s apple and sucked, bringing a moan from that strong throat. Blaise began tracing the skin of Nasta’s stomach, moving his jumper out of the way to bunch up around his nipples, which he started playing with.

Draco was looking uncertain, slightly afraid as if the male body would arch up and eat away his eyes just for looking. He raised a strong, pale hand and lightly rested it on Nasta’s thigh. Nasta made a small sound and raised one hand to fist Max’s hair and lowered the other to fist in Harry’s.

Harry had gained a bit of confidence and was lovingly running his tongue up and down that expanse length, licking every inch from base to tip, around the head and over every vein. Nasta made short, grunting groans as he moved his body to press himself more firmly against Harry’s lips.

Harry carefully moved his mouth over the tip and opened it to Nasta’s length. He moved his mouth slowly down, sucking softly, loving how Nasta moved under his mouth, the noises he made as Harry sucked and licked.

“Oh fuck, Harry.” Nasta groaned his already deep voice turning into a gravelly growl.

Harry stopped less than halfway down Nasta when his gag reflex threatened to having him puking his guts into Nasta’s lap.

He stayed where he was, letting his tongue pleasure Nasta more than the tightness of his throat as he licked and suckled sloppily, drooling more than a bit.

It didn’t take long for Nasta to orgasm and Harry swallowed a mouthful before he let the rest trail over his chin. He wiped his mouth just before it was claimed furiously by a set of soft lips and a rough chin.

Harry beamed up at his mates and the sent a sly look to Draco, who had barely touched Nasta at all, only a few brushes against Nasta’s thigh. He had promised to make Draco more comfortable around them all and true Draco had become far more comfortable when sleeping in a bed with them and cuddling with clothes, but sex was still unchartered territory.
Harry pulled Draco to him and kissed him lovingly.

“Do you come gift wrapped?” Draco asked huskily.

“I’m sure I could turn a bed sheet into a bow around my body if you want to unwrap me.” Harry purred seductively, watching as Draco’s eyes went a deep grey.

Harry kissed Draco passionately as he was pulled up from the floor to straddle the blond’s lap. Max had shifted over so that he was behind Draco and Blaise had gotten up and moved until he was the other side of Draco.

Harry felt the tension grip at Draco as he realised that he was encased in men on all sides and kissed him softer, stroked that blond hair away from those lust darkened eyes.

“We love you, Draco.” He whispered. “Let us show you how very much we love you.”

“I don’t think I’m ready.”

“You are ready, Draco, you just won’t admit to it, my love.” Harry replied. “None of us are going to hurt you, we want to pleasure you and I’m sorry, but I can’t have sex until after our son is born, I have to make do with hand and blow jobs and watching my lovers make love to each other. I don’t like seeing you left out when we play, I don’t want you to be left out.”

“Just try it, Draco, if you don’t like it, then we promise that we’ll stop immediately, but just try it first. Hell, I bottomed to Nasta.” Max pointed out. “I’d never bottomed to anyone before then, the heat washed away most of my nervousness, but I remember the pain of first entry, it felt like a little pinch, just a small burning pain before the pleasure started, Nasta really is an amazing lover.”

“I lost my virginity to Blaise and he was gentle as well, but the first entry really was like a pinch now that I think about it. It burns, but that’s friction more than anything.”

“But you both lost your virginity during the heat, I can’t bring myself to do it with the numbing of the heat, how can I possibly do it without.” Draco said.
“Actually Harry and I had sex before the first heat, Harry didn’t want his first time to be, oh what was it, Harry? ‘Fuelled by instinct without your free will’”

Harry chuckled. “Yeah. I had no idea what the heat would feel like or what it would be like, it turned out to be nothing like I was expecting, but still. I wanted to lose my virginity at a time when I could remember it perfectly, not numbed or blurred by the heat.”

“You are thinking too much about it, Draco.” Nasta soothed. “It will be the most wondrous, pleasurable sensation you will feel.”

“I don’t see youbottoming to anyone.” Draco mumbled.

Nasta laughed deeply. “I am no virgin, Draco. To either women or to men. I would bottom to each and every single one of you if you asked for it. I am not shy and I am very comfortable in my skin and in my masculinity. Bottoming to others is no hardship and it doesn’t bother me in the slightest.”

Draco swallowed and seemed to be internally debating with himself. Harry kissed him gently.

“If you don’t want to do it, Draco then don’t feel like we are pressuring you, this is your birthday, it’ll be your present, you can have any one of us however you like.”

“Except for Harry.” Max added sternly. “No sex for you until after our baby boy is born.”

“Don’t keep reminding me, my balls are so swollen through lack of sex that they’re bigger than a snitch.”

That broke the tension and they all started laughing.

“I’ll try it.” Draco announced as they were wiping their tears of laughter away. He sounded braver than he looked. He looked paler than usual, but he also looked determined, as if he were going to face his deepest fear.
Nasta scooped Draco up and carried him shouting and raving to the bedroom. Harry got carried behind them by Blaise, who kissed and laved his neck with his tongue.

“This is a momentous occasion.” They heard Nasta saying. “Losing your virginity to one of us demands a bed, not a settee, no matter how comfortable, and certainly not the floor. We will do this properly in a bed or not at all.”

“Have you decided who gets the honour?” Harry asked with a grin, settling himself on the bed in the perfect position to see everything.

“No, I guess I don’t really care, I just want this first time over and done with and I’ll either do it again or it will never be spoken of again.”

“Nasta it is then.” Max grinned, settling himself on the pillows and pulling Draco between his legs.

“What?” Draco demanded confusedly as he was forced backwards onto Max’s naked body.

“I’m here to comfort you and to distract you.” Max answered as Harry struggled to get his trousers off, he wasn’t used to the severely elasticated waistline.

Blaise helped Harry remove his trousers after he had removed his own clothes, his tanned, olive toned skin bared to the room, it looked glorious.

Harry kissed Blaise like he could drink him down. Ignoring Nasta who was stripping beside the bed, watching all of them with such love as Max tugged on Draco’s cock with a large, firm hand, making the blond groan and grunt.

Nasta crawled onto the bed with a bottle of lubricant and he lay down between Draco’s legs, licking his inside thighs and over his perineum. Draco made a soft noise of pleasure and Max shifted Draco’s head with his free hand and kissed him furiously.

Harry gasped at the sight and tugged on himself, moving when Blaise plastered himself to his back, licking at his neck. Blaise had always had a thing for his neck from the very first time they had met, hell, they had even mated over a lick to his neck; it was a special thing between them.

Draco almost screamed and the both of them looked over to see Nasta had three fingers buried deeply inside the blond; it made Harry’s mouth go bone dry and caused his breath to hitch as he scooted over and laid a kiss to Draco’s stomach. He kept his mouth pressed to alabaster skin, moving it towards his bellybutton, poking his pink tongue out to lick in and around the only indentation on Draco’s stomach.

Draco let out his breath in a long, gasping sigh as Harry continued licking and sucking. Blaise joined him and they both licked and sucked on Draco’s stomach like piglets to their Mother.

Blaise blew a raspberry against Draco’s stomach that made Harry laugh. Harry blew his own and then Blaise did again. Draco was writhing under their mouths and a quick look at Nasta showed his tongue licking around Draco’s entrance. Harry shivered; he remembered exactly how that felt and he envied Draco in that moment.

Nasta reached for the lubricant again and coated his hand. He run it up and down his swollen cock and gave a look to Max over Harry and Blaise’s heads. Max reached past them and gripped Draco’s length again and tugged on it. Harry reached over and began licking the very tip, having his chin bumped by Max’s hand on every up stroke.

Harry watched as Nasta pressed gently and so very slowly into Draco, who let out a grunt of pain. Harry slipped his mouth down further and sucked hard. Draco let out a part shriek, part growl as one of the blond’s hands slipped into his hair and pushed him further down, thankfully Max’s hand, which was still stroking, prevented him from going down far enough to choke him or cause him to gag.

Blaise pulled him free from Draco and kissed him, before he took his place at Draco’s cock. He pushed Max’s hand off before pushing his mouth down and over Draco completely. Harry watched wide eyed as Blaise gave a proper blow job to Draco, taking him all the way down and making Draco scream along with Nasta, who had found an established rhythm and Max who was twisting Draco’s nipples.

Harry smiled and moved to kiss Draco’s lips. He pushed his tongue into Draco’s mouth and swallowed the moans, screams, and growls. Draco’s claws ripped through the bed sheets as he clenched them into fists, tearing at them in mindless pleasure as Nasta started panting heavily above him.

Draco let loose a scream and convulsed on the bed, Harry had never seen anything so breath taking in all his life.

Blaise pulled off of Draco with a pop and swallowed obscenely, wiping his mouth with the back of his hand before turning to Harry and kissing him deeply, pushing him back and lying on top of him. Max tapped the top of Blaise’s head.

“No sex with Harry.” He reminded gruffly as he looked to be rubbing himself shamelessly against Draco’s back.

“Actually Madam Pomfrey said no penetrative sex with Harry, she said nothing about him not having sex. He wanted to top one of us, I’m thinking tonight can be a night of discoveries.”

“Oh fuck.” Max exclaimed as he rubbed more insistently against Draco.

Harry grinned naughtily as Blaise quickly prepared himself and then lubed up Harry making small, impatient noises. Harry tried to copy what his mates had taught him and he planned to go slowly, but Blaise’s long legs wrapped around his back and yanked him forward harshly.
“My belly gets in the way.” Harry complained after moving around a bit awkwardly.

Blaise grinned and twisted so Harry was on the bottom and he was sat straddling Harry, his cock still buried deep. Harry’s eyes closed of their own accord as he was gripped in hot, tightness. He made a small sound in his throat at the feeling of being encased fully for the first time, but Blaise didn’t give him even a minute to adjust as he began using his legs and hips to fuck himself on Harry.

“Fucking hell.” Max cursed.

Harry turned to the side to watch them. Nasta had finished and he was breathing deeply to recover. Draco had twisted around much like Blaise had done and he had impaled himself on Max. Nasta crawled over to them and began licking around Harry’s thigh.

Harry made a soft sound and arched himself, sinking deeper into Blaise who gasped with a sound that ended in a growl.

Nasta’s mouth moved down and he burrowed his head under Harry’s leg and moved both him and Blaise until he could lick at Harry’s entrance. Harry screamed and moved his hips faster.

Harry couldn’t last very long, but he felt some of his ego return when Blaise orgasmed just a moment after him. A hoarse cry from beside them signalled Draco and Max’s orgasms.

Nasta moved them until all of them were cuddled closely together. Harry was in the very middle, Blaise was on one side and Draco was on the other. Nasta cradled Blaise to his chest, hand resting on Harry’s belly. Max was spooning Draco, his arms wrapped around all of them.

“That was fucking amazing.” Harry commented when he felt that he could speak again.

Blaise chuckled seductively. “How did you like being on top?”

“Eh. I like being fucked better, but it was one hell of a ride. How did you find it, Draco?”

“I prefer fucking, but hell I don’t know why you always complain after sex.”

“Wait until the morning.” Harry grinned, turning over and snuggling into his pillow, smothering a yawn.
“You can apply the cream tomorrow; you won’t have the soreness for long.” Nasta assured him as he brushed Draco’s hair out of his eyes before replacing his hand on Harry’s belly, the baby was still.

Harry closed his eyes feeling sated, happy and blissfully boneless. He gave a final yawn and he was asleep within minutes. One by one the rest of his mates followed suit, all of them cuddled together under the duvet.

A/N: This chapter is longer to hopefully make up for the lack of chapters I’m providing you with. I threw in the sex scene for good measure to please my reader gods and goddesses. I have tomorrow night off! Yay! I’m going out with my three bestest girls and I’m going to have a damn good time and unwind a bit. I stuck to my promise and told my boss to shove his overtime up his pee hole, so hopefully I can now get back on track with my sleeping patterns.

Thanks to for being my 3,900th reviewer! Almost at 4000! How absolutely amazing!

RaeNSesshy4Life: No, Drackens have no problems with werewolves, nor vice versa as demonstrated in the very first chapter when Remus picked Harry up to drop him off at Kings Cross station.

Solomon: Severus had a love who he then lost. He doesn’t want anyone else.

Cassie616: Max is my favourite and really he was supposed to be the only OC mate, but Nasta grew on me, and everyone else. I love the colour blue, it’s why I made Max’s eyes and his scales blue and gave the colour to Harry.

bookworm19065: Harry’s birthday is on the 31st of July, Draco is the 5th of June, Blaise is the 12th of October, Nasta is 3rd of February and Max is the 19th of September. The family trees are at the end of chapter thirty.

WyrdSmith: I apologise if my answer came out pissy, it was unintentional. I didn’t think your question was pissy either, I took it as a serious question and gave it a serious answer. Magical diagnostics are limited, unless looking specifically for something then it won’t be found, a bit like a blood test. If you test blood for drugs, you just look for drugs not anything else.
TinksVamps: Nah, we can’t have the doms going and getting themselves executed. A Dracken attacking another Dracken can be covered up because of the counsel; a Dracken killing humans is an automatic death sentence. Harry won’t let them do it and I’d like to think that the doms would rather keep their family alive and together for Harry and the baby.

sneaky lunatic spy: Sorry, I didn’t mean to miss you out! It happens sometimes. No I made Petunia find a crisp because really if it was a nut or something she could have just picked it up and dropped it in the bin, it had to be something that would crumble so she’d have to go in the cupboard under the stairs for the hoover and see Harry’s shelter for the first ten years of his life at the Dursleys. A crisp or a biscuit or something was really the only things that would work; it was coincidence that it ended up being a crisp. The tea is supposed to be amazing here, but I wouldn’t know as I don’t like tea, I much prefer coffee, however my older sister lives on tea, it’s about the only thing she’ll drink, so I assume it must be pretty damn good if she drinks it like I drink coffee.

Kaynz Addams or Goddess Loki: It isn’t really Max’s fault. He was joking around, playing like he usually does. How was he to know that telling Harry to get back in the cupboard would cause such a terrible reaction in Harry? He was expecting Harry to poke his tongue out at him or to flip him the bird, not have a memory flashback. He doesn’t know Harry was raised in a cupboard for ten years so had no idea that his statement would cause anything other than amusement or a brushoff.

jaidnan: I’ve been trying to find a way to shorten the hyphenated last name, but I’m afraid there is no way to do it. So yeah, all the baby girls will be called Delericy-Maddison-Malfoy-Zabini-Potter’s and all boys after each male has an Heir to their lines will have the hyphenated last name, though they won’t get the baby boys like distributing a deck of cards. When Harry gets pregnant it’s a lottery on what gender the baby will be.

Reader no name: Harry is cleaning not because of his upbringing but because he wants absolutely everything to be clean and perfect for his son’s arrival. Most pregnant women feel the urge to clean, paint or to organise baby clothes, it’s called nesting, hence the title of the chapter.

Maskyourdreams: Nope. I have no FanArt or pictures. I’m a terrible drawer. Couldn’t draw a circle if it was halfway done, I’d mess it up somehow. Someone offered to do some art for the story, but I haven’t heard anything since. I have never read a fic that has actually made me want to read it again; I can never, ever find the rare good stories. I look through the recently updated, the search engines and even the communities, but I haven’t found anything that had truly caught me, half of the stories that I’ve alerted I end up deleting when I see as I’ve grown tired of either the plot or the writing style, but you definitely don’t sound strange.

FaerysWing: No, the baby is developing at an accelerated pace. At seven months, full term for a Dracken, the baby would be at the same point as a nine month human baby, that Harry’s baby will be born before seven months would be the equivalent of a human birthing a baby at seven months pregnant, just a tad premature, nothing serious like the severely premature babies that are in neonatal wards.

cammie: Draco and Blaise are still growing. Men don’t really stop growing until they are twenty-five, after they reach twenty-five, then they won’t have any body altering spurts of the like. So yeah, they are still growing, still getting broader, but the inheritance gave them a major kick, so if they do get any taller, it won’t be more than a few inches at most.

pucks: Kreacher is the only one who knows what happened to Regulus, just like in canon, but as Harry has never had the locket; it’s going to be a while before he gets through to Kreacher. Harry has not yet been hit by the inspiration to ask the Black family elf about Regulus’ disappearance as the connection hasn’t yet been made. He doesn’t realise that Kreacher knows about Regulus’ disappearance yet.

Dim sim: It should really, properly be either amore mio or il mio amore. But truthfully I only wrote it as mio amore because it sounds better in an English written story, not very considerate of the Italian language on my part, but I’ve butchered entire languages for less, just ask my Welsh teacher. Besides my Grancher is from Sicily and he calls me, my sister and cousin ‘la mia ragazza’ which means my girl in Italian. I think it also depends on if you’re from the North or South of Italy, they have different pronunciations.

baka_onna2003: Nope, the Drackens are complete from my imagination. Or at least the information about them is. The appearances of them were, to my knowledge, created by Beautiful Kaos. The next chapter will be out most definitely before Christmas, hell I think another six/seven chapters could be up before Christmas.

marie curie: Harry was human before his sixteenth birthday. He was born a Dracken but the genes don’t manifest until he’s sixteen, so until then he acted and reacted like a human. With the inheritance he has probably grown just a tad more aggressive. He might be a submissive, but he hasn’t turned into a doormat, he’s still stubborn, still rash, but more violent. He’s more likely to claw someone’s eyes out. I don’t think I completely understand what you mean by the whole punishment thing. Blaise grips the neck and squeezes, Max tugs on the hair until the neck is forced backwards at a painful angle, Nasta bites and Draco spanks. All of them have the responsibility of punishing Harry; it depends on who Harry has offended/shouted at/hit/hurt/insulted etc. If Harry has done a general thing that needs punishing then it will fall to Nasta as he is the top dominant of the family. If he isn’t there, then it will be Max as the next top dominant. Does that explain better?

As always thank you to everyone who had read, reviewed, alerted, added to their favourites and to everyone who has added me to their C2s!

Chapter Notes

Last Time

Harry closed his eyes feeling sated, happy and blissfully boneless. He gave a final yawn and he was asleep within minutes. One by one the rest of his mates followed suit, all of them cuddled together under the duvet.

Chapter Thirty-Three – Going Home

The school term was coming to an end and with it Harry’s anxieties were building. Did the Dursleys know that he wasn’t going to their house with them? What if they showed up on the platform and made a scene about him and his mates?

Blaise handed him a cup of ginger tea and a handful of ginger newts because he had thrown up that morning, again it was more than likely due to nerves than morning sickness. He hated not knowing what was going to happen.

Since that night where they had all joined together and Draco had finally come to trust them all everything had become peaceful and just amazing. They were all getting on so much better and Max was so happy as he watched them all interact, he was happy that everyone was happy. Max put everything he had into family, whether it was his blood family or his new mated family and seeing all of them relaxing with one another gave him a huge feeling of peace.

Harry smiled as he watched Nasta run an affectionate hand through Draco’s hair, only for the blond to glare at him and try to ‘fix’ the out of place strands. Only a month ago Draco would have growled, bitched and tried to swipe at Nasta for doing the same thing and before then none of them would’ve dared to touch Draco’s hair.

“Is your house ready?” Nasta called out to Max, who was unsurprisingly in the kitchen cleaning up the mess from lunch.

“I’m not a messy person, what are you trying to say?” Max asked back with a grin. “Of course the house is ready.”
It had been decided that they would all be going to Max’s house for the summer holidays. Blaise’s Mother had been enthusiastic to have them all in her house in France, but Blaise was worried about them getting intimate and forgetting silencing charms and he had admitted with a blush that his Mother often forgot silencing charms as well.

Draco’s parents had been coolly polite to them all, they hadn’t shunned Draco at all, but neither were they overly accepting, so none of them even suggested they stay with the elder Malfoys. Nasta had a small, one person apartment that barely fitted the six foot six inch man let alone more than two people, so his place was out, which only left Max’s beautiful, modest house.

The Dursleys had been brought up as a place to stay, but Harry had stemmed his panic and had patiently pointed out that they were Muggles; that he was a pregnant male so he wouldn’t be able to go outside at all due to the unknowing Muggle neighbours and that the Dursleys lived in a small, four bedroomed suburban home that wouldn’t fit all of them, the baby and the Dursleys. Harry had also expressed his doubt at anything bigger than a carrycot, let alone a crib fitting in his childhood bedroom, which brought Harry’s mind back to his cupboard and his Uncle’s last threat before he left for Hogwarts that come the summer he would be back in it.

Max lived in a three bedroomed house in near enough the middle of nowhere. His next door neighbour was three miles away on either side and there was a beautiful orchard that surrounded the back of the house. Or so Harry had been told.

Max had bought it for the privacy it offered if he wanted to walk around in his full Dracken glory or just go flying. They were hoping that Harry would give birth at Max’s and not in September when school was in session because Harry could nest from anywhere between a day to a month and a half before he actually gave birth and taking a month off of school was going to be one hell of a hardship.

Amelle had yet to actually give birth, even though she was still in her nest. Max had told them that Caesar was having one hell of a time giving her fresh food to eat as she tried to gouge out his eyes and throat every time he approached her nest. Max had explained that Amelle didn’t recognise Caesar as her mate, that she was reacting purely instinctively to the presence of another Dracken to protect her nest and her baby.

Harry hoped to god that he didn’t remain in the nest for as long as Amelle had, scratching and spitting at his mates as they tried to feed him enough to keep him strong enough to deliver his baby. He wanted to go in his nest, preen a bit, have his baby and then come back out again. He didn’t want it to last more than two days at the most, but he knew realistically that it could take an average of four days to a week for his body to be prepared enough to birth after he started nesting.

Harry sighed and pushed it from his mind, there was no use thinking about it now. He still had at least a month and a half yet before he started building a nest.

“I can’t wait until the exam results are out.” Draco said a bit randomly as he sat reading a book, but seemingly unable to focus on it.

Harry grinned at the confession, before they had all swapped roles that night Draco wouldn’t have dared admit his excitement over such a little thing, it just wasn’t how he was brought up, but since that night everything had changed and Draco was coming further and further out of his shell.
“Don’t worry, everything will be fine. You’re too intelligent to have anything less than straight Os.” Nasta comforted easily as he bent down and kissed the top of Draco’s head.

Draco batted him away amid chuckles from Nasta as he once again got every strand of silky, baby fine, blond hair back in place.

Harry felt a small push to his midsection and placed a calming hand on his bump, rubbing soothing circles to relax his baby.

“Are you alright?” Max asked as he appeared over the back of the settee.

Harry took that large hand and pressed it where he could feel the baby moving around.

“He’s active today.” Max commented as he rubbed lightly.

“I’d rather he be active during the day that at night when I’m trying to sleep. He’s been very good actually, though I think he’ll be a morning person.”

“How can you tell?” Draco asked.

“He lies still during the night, but every single morning he never fails to give me a good kick to wake me up, it’s like he knows instinctively when the sun is rising and he knows it’s time to get up. Sometimes it’s just the one kick to let me know he’s awake, but more often than not he bounces around and I have to get up.”

Max chuckled right next to his ear and Harry shivered. He couldn’t wait until his son was born so he could start having sex again. He had enjoyed topping Blaise, but he didn’t really fancy doing it all that often, he just wasn’t that keen on it.

“What time are we leaving?”
“Tomorrow morning.” Nasta replied. “About seven o’clock so make sure you’ve packed everything.”

“Can we just leave our school stuff here? Obviously taking our homework, but everything else can stay can’t it?” Harry asked. “I mean, these are our rooms, we’ll be coming back to them next term.”

“That might actually be a good idea.” Nasta agreed. “But make sure you have all of your other stuff packed and don’t ‘accidentally’ leave your homework assignments here either because I will floo back just to get them and I won’t be happy about it.”

Harry grinned as he knew that Nasta didn’t mean for him to pack anything. His mates were now very, very overprotective of him and their baby boy and he had actually been forbidden from doing any heavy lifting, which meant anything heavier than a paperback book. There was to be no bending over, not that he could anyway with the size of his stomach, he wasn’t allowed to sit down or stand up unaided, which again was nearly impossible without help so he didn’t mind that rule. Then there was standing up for longer than a couple of minutes, which was alright by him again as his feet were now very sore and sometimes they swelled if he was stood up for too long, which normally got him a foot rub from Blaise which was actually quite nice and he absolutely was not allowed to go up or down the stairs, he had to be carried, which was the only rule that Harry had a problem with really as he had tried to maintain as much independence as possible and he could still shuffle down the stairs on his bum, he just couldn’t get up them.

He got revenge on his mates though during the middle of the nights when their baby boy was sleeping on his bladder and he needed to get up for a wee. He shook one of them awake, going through them all in turns, to carry him up and down the stairs to the bathroom. They didn’t complain, but they were groggy and a bit ill-tempered the next morning.

All Harry had to do as he watched his mates pack up the belongings that they were taking with them was supervise. He made sure all of the baby clothes were packed up carefully and that all of the things he needed were in the suitcases that Nasta had brought home from work yesterday. Max had been flooing their things to his house all day and it was with a heavy heart that Harry looked at their bare rooms.

They were barren, barely anything in them at all. It looked like it had never been inhabited and a small pang of pain resonated through his body. These were his rooms; they shouldn’t look like he had never been here.

“What’s the matter, Harry?” Draco asked concernedly as Harry looked around with a lost, hurt expression on his face.

“These are our rooms, ours, they shouldn’t look like this, all bare and clean and tidy.” Harry murmured softly.
Nasta blinked before his eyes widened. “Harry, are you attached to these rooms?” He asked seriously.

“Of course. Me and Blaise moved into these rooms just after we mated, I lost my virginity here, I had my first proper Christmas with Blaise here, all of you joined us in these rooms and we all made love here for the first time. These rooms are special, symbolic really, these are my rooms! I hate seeing them like this, they don’t feel right.”

“Oh hell.” Max cursed, cottoning on to what Nasta had been getting at. “You’re attached to the rooms!”

“So?” Harry bit out hotly. “Forgive me if some of the best times of my life were in these rooms; forgive me if I like living in these rooms with the four men that I will spend the rest of my life with…”

“No, Harry, you’re attached to these rooms whilst you’re pregnant. There is a possibility that you will try to get back here by any means necessary when you feel ready to birth. That you will try to nest here because you are so attached to these rooms.”

That stopped Harry short and he looked around him. He loved these rooms, he really did, but they were so impractical to give birth in, there wasn’t a high place for him to build a proper nest, there wasn’t enough coverage to hide him from predators, no place for him to give birth to his child safely, no these rooms would not do, he would have to find somewhere else.

Harry gasped and covered his mouth with his hand as his eyes went wide. He was searching for a place to nest! He couldn’t be ready to give birth yet, it was too soon! Far too soon!

“Harry? What’s wrong, are you going to be sick?”

He shook his head mutely. He peeled his hand away from his mouth and looked at the four men in front of him, his body shaky and pale.

“I’ve just realised that I’m looking for a suitable nesting place.” Harry answered. “I want to build my nest.”

All of their eyes widened and almost simultaneously looked down at his bulge. Max shook his head.
“It’s too soon.” He said.

Harry shook with fear, what would happen to his baby son if he nested too early and gave birth too early?

“It’s alright, Harry.” Nasta soothed. “You can’t stop your instincts; do you want to nest here?”

“No. Not here. There’s not enough coverage, not enough height, it’s too open to predators, I don’t want to nest here.” Harry answered.

“That’s something at least.” Nasta sighed in relief.

“We’ll get you to my home soon, love, we’ll see if you can find a more suitable place to nest there.” Max told him, giving him a tight, reassuring hug.

“I think I need to sit down.” Harry told Max a bit breathlessly.

Immediately the backs of his thighs were seized and he was pulled up into Max’s arms, being held securely and easily before he was placed carefully on the settee. A glass of water was given to him and Harry sipped it. He felt better for it.

“Why do I want to build a nest now? I have a month at least before I start nesting.”

“No one really knows what time they’ll start nesting, Harry.” Max answered. “My Mum only nested for a week with Talia, but she nested for three solid months before she gave birth to Alayla. It differs with the pregnancy, how many babies there are, when you’re going to go into labour, there are far too many factors to clue in to even attempt to make an accurate guess.”

“But I’m only four months pregnant!” Harry pointed out with fright.

Max hugged him again and kept hold of him, rubbing his back soothingly with a large hand.

“And if you nest for two months you’ll be six months pregnant. That’s perfectly acceptable.”
“I don’t want to nest for two months.”

“This could all be for nothing.” Nasta told them then and Harry looked at him aghast.

“I don’t mean we could lose the baby, but you could just be searching for a place to build a nest, it doesn’t mean that you will actually build it right then and there and then climb straight in. I’ve known submissives to scout out an area for weeks before deciding if they want to build a nest there or not.”

“So I could just be looking for somewhere to nest?” Harry asked hopefully.

“It is very possible.” Nasta answered with an adoring smile, kissing his forehead before going to make a tray of tea, getting himself a mango and orange smoothie whilst he was at it.

“What do you guys want for dinner?” Max asked. “I’m going to go visit the elves to get stuff for dinner and breakfast tomorrow.”

“Courgette.” Harry replied immediately without realising why he had said it. He had only had courgette once in his life and he hadn’t liked it much.

Max raised an eyebrow and Harry blushed.

“I must say I enjoy your food cravings, Harry, much better than the horror stories that are floating around, your cravings seem somewhat normal besides the fact that you ate a raw parsnip at three in the morning.”

“Don’t forget the craving he had for crushed peas on toast.”

“That was actually really nice.” Harry grinned. “I’d eat that again.”
That brought chuckles from the four other men and Harry smiled as he petted the baby bump.

“What baby wants, baby gets.” Harry commented. “Can you get me vanilla ice cream whilst you’re with the elves please and a banana yoghurt?”

Max nodded as he stood up. “No pickles? No shallots or pickled onions? No sardines?”

Harry pulled a face. “No. Just the ice cream, yoghurt and courgette. Oh and something with potato.”

Max grinned and bowed before leaving. Harry curled up on the settee and sipped at the honey tea he had been given by Nasta just watching Blaise and Draco argue over the exam paper.

Nasta sighed and took the exam papers from them and bopped them both on the head with them.

“There is no use arguing over a question you have already answered.” Nasta told them. “The results will be out very soon and then you can argue over who had what right, until then pipe down and let Harry rest.”

“Oh I’m fine.” Harry answered. “I was quite amused.”

Nasta’s lips twitched slightly into a smile before he frowned sternly at Draco and Blaise, or he tried to as his smile kept trying to slip back on his face.

Harry rolled his eyes and thought, just to himself, that he was glad that Max was not here. Max would have made the entire situation worse and would have laughed happily as Draco and Blaise’s argument escalated into a fight, it was why Harry felt happier having Nasta as the top dominant over Max, Max just wasn’t serious enough, wasn’t mature enough to diffuse fights between them all and a quarter of the time it was Max who started the fights in the first place.

The talk of the devil walked through the portrait door holding a basket and grinning like a loon. Harry rolled his eyes and snuggled back down in to the settee.

“I got you your ice cream, Harry.”

“I don’t fancy it now.” Harry answered. “The tea has made me sleepy.”
Max grinned and placed the frozen tub on the counter, where it would remain frozen due to the spells woven around it.

Harry nodded before he called Draco over to him. “Take me to the bedroom please, Draco. I really just want to sleep for a bit in a proper bed.”

Draco helped him up and knew better than to carry Harry without his express permission. Harry got tetchy over any slight to his independence even when his mates meant well, but he wanted, needed, to keep any and all semblance of independence that he could, even if it was just walking to the bottom of the bedroom stairs before being carried to the top.

Harry didn’t even get himself undressed as he fell onto the bed fully clothed like a starving man would fall onto food. He curled up on the edge of the bed and fell asleep, he was still awake enough to hear Draco sigh before he felt his limbs being manoeuvred out of his clothing and his body shifted into the centre of the bed and up towards the pillows. He neither cared nor woke up fully over it; he fell deeply asleep before Draco had finished pulling on his pyjama bottoms.

Nasta gently stroked Harry’s face to wake him up later that day. He watched with a soft smile as Harry’s beautiful eyes fluttered open, those gorgeously thick, black eyelashes dancing on pale cheeks as Harry fought with his eyelids to wake up.

Harry made a soft, sleepy noise as his body moved lightly over the sheets before burrowing deeper under the duvet. Nasta stroked his cheek again, patting it lightly to coax Harry more into wakefulness.

“Hmm?” Harry moaned, blinking a bit so just a peek of those emerald green eyes showed.

Harry yawned and stretched that lithe body like a cat, his very out of proportioned belly looking like a last minute addition. When those sleep misted eyes and that gorgeous smile turned fully to him Nasta felt like he had been punched in the gut. He doubted he would ever get over how stunningly gorgeous Harry truly was, he was blessed to have such a mate as Harry and the others.
“Did you sleep well?” Nasta asked when he could breathe properly once more.

Harry nodded, that smile still on his face.

“I feel much better now.” Harry’s gentle voice washed over him and Nasta savoured it.

The noise of the living room as Max, Blaise and Draco fought, argued, debated and just plain conversed was much more than he was used to. Hell he had been living on his own for eighteen years, seeing his Dad and brother occasionally as he lived his life on his own as a man, as an unmated dominant, with a very demanding job at a dragon reserve. He was used to the peace and quiet, of the silence of truly being alone in his small apartment.

He was slowly getting used to the noise and the activity around him, but it was a process that was hitting him quite hard as he had liked living in peace, he liked the silence, but for all that his mates brought to him, for all the shattered peace and the noise, he had never once regretted chasing so hard after Harry. No matter if he never got a single moment of peace again in his life, he loved all four of them, five if he included the baby as well, and the love of those four very special people, was more important to him than any measure of peace and quiet.

“Nasta?” Harry questioned softly.

Nasta looked to him with an apologetic smile, seeing Harry’s arms lowering from where he had been silently asking to be picked up. Nasta wound his arms around Harry and just held him, holding him tightly, breathing in the faint smell of chestnuts that was always wrapped around Harry like a second skin. He pressed a kiss to Harry’s face and just looked at his beautiful mate, who looked back, happy and pleased, if a bit confused.

“I love you, Harry. I love you so very much.” He said so sincerely his eyes blurred slightly with the burn of tears.

Harry’s skinny arms wrapped around his neck and held him tightly.

“You know I love you, Nasta.” Harry said, slightly shocked at Nasta’s behaviour. “I think I always did love you from the first time I saw you, you were so different from all the others, quiet and peaceful, not boisterous and demanding, I loved you for it then and I still love you for it now.”

“You shouldn’t do though, you and your Dracken should be angry at me. The baby isn’t mine. I have failed to give you a baby and that alone should make your Dracken angry at me.”
“But I'm not. I love you and I'm certainly not angry at you because this baby isn’t yours, there will be others. I’m just happy to have any baby, I don’t care who’s it is.”

“The other three have proved they are capable of giving you a baby. I haven’t, not yet.”

“I think it’s because you love this baby so much, Nas.” Harry told the older man, thinking deeply. “You love this baby even though he isn’t yours; you have proven to me and my Dracken that you’re going to be a wonderful Father, not just to your own children, but to all of them, no matter who the Father might be. I respect that greatly about you, that you love me enough to accept any and all children I have regardless of who the biological Father might be. I love you all the more for it, which is why I will never be angry at you for not getting me pregnant in the first place, because in your eyes, I carry a baby that is as much yours as he is mine.”

Nasta crushed Harry to his chest and just hugged him, holding him and touching him. He never knew he had needed reassurance until Harry had given it to him, hadn’t known that he had been seeking comfort from his mate until it had been given.

“How long does it take to get Harry for dinner?!” Max yelled from the living room. “All my hard work slaving over an oven is going to be ruined if you don’t shift your arses!”

“We’re having a cwtch! Give us a minute.”

“A cutch?” Harry questioned.

Nasta smiled lovingly at him. “A cwtch. It’s a Welsh word. It doesn’t really have an English translation but it’s basically a long, lingering hug, like cuddling, only better and longer.”

Harry chuckled and went with it as Nasta started rocking him slightly, still holding him lovingly to his chest. Harry felt safe and warm and loved and he yawned sleepily again as he was wrapped up completely in Nasta’s arms.

“I think I like cwtching.” Harry admitted.

Nasta laughed full-throated, which made Harry swallow heavily in desire.
“We had better get to the others before Max storms a palace coup and kidnaps the Prince and his child to force feed his cooking.”

Harry laughed and let Nasta pick him up to carry him to the others, who were eating a wonderful meal whilst looking worriedly at an angry looking Max.

“About time! Do you know how long I spent on this?” Max asked.

“I’m sorry, Max, I couldn’t get up.” Harry fibbed to save from embarrassing Nasta. “I’ve been so tired lately.”

Max’s look of anger lessened into something more resembling concern.

“Are you feeling alright?” He asked concernedly.

Harry nodded as he sat at the table and happily picked up his fork and ate heartily, chewing slowly more for Max’s benefit than for his own, he would love nothing more than to just scoff the lot without even tasting any of it before curling up in front of their lovely warm fire, but Harry really did appreciate Max cooking for them all instead of taking the long trek down to the Great Hall and eating what the house elves had prepared. Harry thought that maybe Max would take it as the ultimate insult if it was even suggested that he take a day off from cooking so they could eat the house elf food.

Harry noticed the potatoes and the courgette that had been placed on his plate and he smiled secretly to himself as he ate them first. The courgette was a strange, nearly new taste, he had only been given courgette once as a very young child because Dudley had had a fit about it being on his plate, Aunt Petunia had tried to placate him by saying that she was going to put it in the bin but this had made Dudley scream all the harder at the thought of putting any food product, even fruit and vegetables, in the bin, so Aunt Petunia had quickly shoved the handful of green, cucumber looking like vegetables at him and told him to eat them quickly. Having not eaten that day, Harry had shoved as much into his mouth as he could, chewed minimally before swallowing quickly. He had learnt this technique without choking mainly for the sake of survival as his Uncle had enjoyed teasing a hungry Harry with food, whether it was forcing him to watch as he ate food and snacks, putting a plate of food in front of him and telling him not to touch it, or giving him food to eat before snatching it away after a few mouthfuls that left him even hungrier.

Harry looked at his plate full of food and to Max, who was eating his own food, laughing at something Blaise had said but Harry had missed it by being so lost in thought. No one was watching him eat; none of them were looking to see how much he had eaten before snatching his plate away. They loved him and they fed him because they wanted to, not because they felt obligated to, just purely because they wanted to. They didn’t tease him with food and he was allowed to eat what he wanted when he wanted it.

Harry blanched as he realised that it was actually sinking in that the Dursleys had never really loved him. After all of these years, after all of the abuse and torment he had suffered at their hands and only now, after fifteen years, was it sinking in that they had never loved him, that he had still been clinging to some small shred of hope that deep down they had loved him and he had finally realised that they never had, it hurt, it actually hurt.

“Harry, are you alright? Don’t you like it?” Max asked.

Harry realised that he had stopped eating, that all of his mates were looking at him. All of them looking concerned for him, just for him, that they loved him and they were concerned about his welfare and his happiness. It was too much and he just started crying out of the blue. Deep, body wracking sobs that hunched him over and put his face nearly in his food as fat tears raced down his cheeks quicker than he could blink.

He was clamoured, all of his mates moving to hold him, to comfort him, to protect him. They loved him and his own relatives never had, the Dursleys couldn’t even bring up the basic human emotion to give him the basic of human needs and comforts. He hadn’t even had a proper bed, he had never owned a pillow, he hadn’t even had a bedroom until he was almost eleven. Now he had all of that and more, much, much more.

Harry screamed and cried and sobbed until he was left exhausted, still letting out continuous huffs of emotion as all of his tears were dried up and his sopping wet face was gently wiped by a soft cloth by one of his mates.

“Please, Harry.” Someone exclaimed sadly. Harry vaguely recognised Blaise’s voice.

“Max’s cooking isn’t that bad.” Draco exclaimed. A loud thwack made Harry let out a weak, watery chuckle as he watched Max glare at a sulking Draco.

“Are you feeling better, Prezioso?” Blaise asked softly.

Harry pushed the cloth that Nasta was dabbing his face with and run his sleeve everywhere over his face and under his chin, getting rid of every trace of his tears, but his face still felt sore and puffy. He nodded and huddled down on the settee.

“Do you want to talk about it?” Max asked.

“You don’t cry like your heart has been ripped from your chest for no reason, Harry.” Nasta told him.

Harry just shook his head and rolled from the settee and crawled to the thick, fleecy, fur rug in front of the fire and curled up on it, huddling around the warmth and closing his eyes. He fell asleep with his four mates watching him with mounting concern and a lot of suspicion.

Harry was unhappily sitting on the train ready to go back to London. He didn’t see why they couldn’t just floo to Max’s house, especially in his condition, but apparently Max knew how to drive and he liked driving, so his car was waiting at Kings Cross Station.

Blaise and Draco had decided to spend the first two weeks of the summer with their families so they wouldn’t miss the birth later on in the summer, if indeed Harry gave birth in the summer and not in September when he was actually due, leaving Harry with Max and Nasta, not that that was a hardship, but Harry would miss them both immensely.

Harry sat between them, holding one of their hands in each of his own over his son. He was cuddling and kissing them, soaking them up and holding tightly onto the little things like how they felt in his hands, how they smelt, how they sounded when they breathed.

Harry was almost in tears again as London came into view and the train started to slow down. He kept a death grip on both Blaise and Draco and refused to let them go when Marianna Lychorinda and her Husband Josiah came into view and certainly not when the elder Malfoys appeared. Harry held onto the both of them and sobbed. He had thought that he had cried all of his tears yesterday, but more welled up and ran smoothly down his cheeks.

“It won’t be for long, Harry.” Draco promised as he held Harry and kissed him gently, brushing the tears away with his thumbs.

“Max and Nasta will keep you company until we come back.” Blaise promised. “It isn’t like we can’t visit you during the day. We’ll still come and see you.”

“Really?” Harry asked.

“Of course.” Draco assured, kissing him again.
“We have to be off, Draco.” Lucius Malfoy said stiffly.

Draco breathed deeply and kissed Harry passionately, Harry kept his eyes open and on the elder Malfoy’s, who looked very displeased at the public show of love and affection.

Blaise hugged Draco, Nasta kissed him and Max smacked his shoulder in a ‘manly’ show of affection. Harry thought it was rather stupid to hit the one you loved, but he didn’t say anything as he got one last hug from Draco before he was gone.

Blaise was next to leave after a nearly tearful goodbye. Blaise had been his very first mate, he could be the Father to his baby, it didn’t seem right to be saying goodbye to him. Blaise should be coming with them to Max’s home. He should have been there with them. Harry just didn’t seem to be able to control himself as he hiccupped a bit as he swallowed back his tears. His emotions were out of his control and saying goodbye to his mates dug deeply into him and his Dracken…it was wrong, he was pregnant, they should be coming with him to protect him. It wasn’t right.

Max held him at his side as Blaise walked off with his Mother and step-dad, the station full of people, who were pointing and staring at his large stomach, making him self-conscious and left him feeling like a freak. If he was anyone other than Harry Potter then they wouldn’t have even given him a second glance. Hermione ran up to him and hugged him, distracting him from the giggling, sneering people around him.

“I missed you on the train, Harry, but have a good summer! I’ll see you next year if I can’t come around this summer to see you.”

Harry hugged her back and waved as she jogged off to her parents. Nasta led them out of the station and through to the Muggle platforms. It was here that Harry was swept into a hug that almost broke his back.

“Oh, Harry dear!” Mrs Weasley’s voice surrounded him as she spoke into his hair.

“You look so well!” The kindly woman commented as she held him at arm’s length, looking him up and down, but lingering on his belly.

“Hi, Mrs Weasley, thanks for the Christmas presents! I loved my new jumper and those mince pies were fantastic!”

“Aww, ickle Harry is so sweet.” A voice that made him grin sounded.

“Sickly sweet I’d say, Forge.”
“Fred! George!” Harry cried as the twins converged on him and hugged him tightly. “I’ve missed you both. Hogwarts just isn’t the same without you.”

Harry looked at the twins, both sporting brand new, green, dragon hide jackets.

“I hope for your sakes that the dragon whose hide made those jackets is still alive.” Harry whispered. “Nasta will tear you limb from limb otherwise.”

“Please, Harry.”

“Give us some credit for having hearts. Have you forgotten that Charlie is our big brother?”

Harry grinned as he remembered the kind, very handsome young man with the shiny burn marks. Charlie and Nasta would get on fantastically well.

“I liked Charlie.” Harry stated.

Fred and George wolf whistled and made a ruckus which caused Max and Nasta to look their way from their spot talking to Mrs Weasley about Harry had really been and if he was eating and sleeping. Harry noticed Bill and Ginny were also there. Mister Weasley and Ron were nowhere in sight.

“Harry dear, you must come around this summer. I insist. Bill and Charlie are home; having you there will make me feel like the entire family is home.”

Harry smiled happily at being included in the woman’s family. “I’d love to, Mrs Weasley. I always love going to the Burrow, it seems more like home than anywhere else.”

Mrs Weasley blushed in pleasure at the praise, but Max and Nasta shared a glance. Nasta had shared his suspicions from long ago with the other dominants yesterday afternoon when Harry had cried himself to sleep on the rug. He hadn’t forgotten the comment that Harry had said, almost offhandedly, out by the lake before he had even become a mate, before Max had even been a mate, about him not having anyone to care for him.
They had spoken at length and it all came back to Harry being abused, or at the very least neglected, as a child. Yet there wasn’t a hint anywhere that Harry had lived with abusive or neglectful people. If he did then no one knew about it, was it possible to hide such a thing so well and for so long?

Questioning the Granger girl had brought about nothing. She had been confused, she had questioned them back, before she had told them that Harry lived with Muggles and that they weren’t always accepting of magic, but as far as she knew, Harry was perfectly fine and safe with them. If the Granger girl knew nothing, then no one else would either.

They had talked about seeking Dumbledore’s help because Harry told that man practically everything that happened in his life and he went for afternoon tea quite often, but then they had reasoned that if Harry had ever so much as hinted that he had been abused then Dumbledore would have removed Harry from the household immediately.

They just didn’t have any proof other than the way that Harry acted or reacted sometimes and it just wasn’t enough to accuse anyone of child abuse. They needed hard evidence that Harry had ever been abused, or for Harry to come out and tell them himself, and if it turned out that anyone had ever laid a hand on their precious submissive then they would make sure that that person, and all involved, were prosecuted.

“Hurry up, boy!” A loud, ruddy faced man shouted across the station. “We haven’t got all day!”

Max looked to where the big, beefy man was looking and was surprised to see Harry shrinking back into the twin Weasleys. He nudged Nasta, but the silently observant man had already noticed and took large steps to Harry and wrapped him in a protective embrace. He was enraged to feel Harry quivering in his arms.

The beefy man went puce coloured and seemed to swell with anger as his small, piggy eyes narrowed as he advanced on them menacingly. A thin, horse-faced woman with thin blonde hair, who looked like she’d rather be anywhere else but here, was stood behind him, cradling a very fat, blond haired whale in her bony arms, trying and failing to shield him from the view of the ‘wizards’.

“I suggest you step away from them.” Max hissed loving how the man swung towards him, taking in his six foot eight inch height and the broad swell of his shoulders and biceps before backing away.

“Now see here. I am merely here to pick up my Nephew.”

“You seem to be misinformed. He’s coming home with me.”

“And just who are you to think that you can take the boy away from his family!”
“You are not his family!” Mrs Weasley hissed.

“I happen to be his lover.” Max stated loudly and clearly, gaining curious glances from passers-by, who turned and craned their necks to try and see what was going on.

The large man went purple in his anger and he glared furiously at Harry who was cuddled safely in Nasta’s arms. Those eyes roved over Harry’s body and stopped on the baby bulge.

“So it’s true. You did your freaky voodoo and got a baby.”

“I was born with the natural ability to conceive a baby!” Harry snapped.

The man glared harder and he took a threatening step forward, his arm rising almost subconsciously, as if it had become a habit, but with one small, half step forward from Max, he had the man stumbling backwards, away from his pregnant submissive.

“We’ll be in touch with you.” Max said coldly. “As for now, I am taking my lovers and our child home and you will not try to contact Harry, you will not go near him or the baby or I’ll take great pleasure in killing you.”

“Are you threatening me?!?” Vernon Dursley asked loudly and pompously, making people stop and stare.

“Yes. Yes I am.” Max answered softly. “If I find out that you have laid so much as a fat finger on Harry, you’re dead.”

“What have you been telling those freaks, boy?!” Vernon hissed at Harry, who was whiter than white, his eyes too wide with something akin to sheer panic.

“Nothing!” Harry squeaked out quickly.

“Nothing my foot! You’ve been lying again haven’t you? We took you in, gave you shelter, clothes, food and this is how you repay us? By telling lies to other freaks like you!”
“He is not a freak!” Nasta hissed deeply, holding Harry tighter, having to make a conscious effort to stop himself from exerting too much pressure on Harry and hurting him. This vile man was almost admitting that he had abused, and still was, abusing Harry. It made his teeth ache to rip out his throat.

“Can we go, please?” Harry asked in such a small, unsure voice that Nasta picked him up and held him properly.

“You haven’t seen the last of us; we’ll be back in touch with you soon.” Max repeated as he placed a hand on Harry’s spine, stroking gently. “You won’t get away with hurting him.”

“Harry dear, come and see us this summer. You have an open invitation, whenever you want to, just pop over, even if it is just for dinner. Your lovers are welcome as well, of course.” Mrs Weasley told him as she continued glaring at the family of three in front of her.

Nasta nodded and turned on his heel, walking a wide circle around the vile, decrepit people who had dared hurt Harry, just to ensure that they wouldn’t try anything else, he didn’t want to tempt his very frayed self-control, he’d tear them apart right here in this station if they touched Harry now.

“Mum!” He heard the very fat boy whine like a small child. “Where’s the freak going? I thought he was coming back with us, Piers is sleeping over tonight! We wanted some entertainment!”

“Not now, Diddy!” The woman shushed him quickly, sending a fearful look to the two men that were claiming to be the lovers of her sister’s pregnant spawn.

Max flexed his fingers before he clenched them tightly into fists as his claws ripped through his fingertips. The smell of blood wavered his control and he breathed shallowly and quickly so the scent of the blood didn’t rob him of every ounce of control he had.

He, and Nasta who had also overheard the comment, wondered just what sort of entertainment those boys wanted from Harry tonight and why it was being allowed by his parents. Max couldn’t help but wonder if it was a threat of physical violence towards Harry or something else. If he ever, ever, found out that Harry had been sexually abused by them then he wouldn’t be able to stop himself from ripping them all into pieces. Not sweet, happy Harry who smiled at them all so lovingly, so beautifully. Harry who was now huddled into himself, as pale as a ghost and quivering in fear of these three people.

They made it to the car and Nasta slid into the back of the five seater car and belted himself and Harry in as he held tightly onto the door handle. He was afraid that if he let go then he was going to charge back into that station and do something incredibly foolish now that Harry was out of harm’s way and was no longer in his arms, anchoring his Dracken down.

Max started the car and gripped the steering wheel so tightly it creaked under his hands. He pulled out of the train station parking and he drove off quickly before he could change his mind and sink his fangs into the fat Muggle that had hurt his mate so badly. One thing was certain though, when they got home, Harry would tell them what he had had to endure at the hands of those people, one way or another, Harry would tell them everything.

Chapter Thirty-Four – Revelations from Reluctant Lips

The drive to Max’s home had been silent and tense. Neither of his mates had said a word and Harry hadn’t wanted to say anything either. He had felt that maybe he should say something just to cut the growing tension, to diffuse the situation, but he hadn’t known what to say, so he had remained silent too. He had kept his head down, looking at his growing bump as he tried to ignore the almost silent growls that Nasta, who was sat next to him, was letting out every couple of moments as his mind wound him up, riling his Dracken side.

Harry had been escorted straight into the house with a mate on either side of him for his protection and he got a small chance to look around the beautiful, fully detached house that seemed to be stranded in the middle of nowhere. Harry nervously looked around the bright, open and spacious house as he was escorted straight to the first door in the hallway and into a lovely living room. Max really did live in a very beautiful house, but Harry couldn’t bring himself to properly see or appreciate it. Not when he was sat on a comfy settee with both of his older mates stood over him, staring down at him, and demanding to know how the Dursleys had treated him during his childhood.

Okay, so they weren’t actually demanding anything from him, they were asking softly, pleading with him, saying that they only wanted to help, but it felt like they were demanding something very deep and personal and Harry huddled up a bit more. He didn’t want to tell them, he didn’t want to drag it all up, not when he already felt so confused.

Max knelt down in front of him and gently picked up his restlessly twisting hands, holding them in his own, warm larger ones. He bent his head over them and laid a kiss to his skin and Harry bit his lip to stop it from trembling, even as his vision went wobbly with tears.

“Harry, my love, please, just answer us this, did they ever hurt you in any way?” Max asked him
Harry let out a great, shuddering breath as his welled up tears made him blind, but he would not let them fall, he had shed too many tears already, the Dursleys didn’t deserve to have any more of his tears than he had already given them. But he had decided long ago that he wouldn’t outright lie to his mates, yet he couldn’t even turn the question around or twist it because he had been hurt both physically and emotionally by the Dursleys. He let out a choked, dry sob instead as he realised that there was nothing else for it, he would have to give them an inch and he would have to put his trust in his mates. He loved them and he trusted them and he would have to hope that they still loved him after this as he choked on his emotion and he inclined his head.

Both Max and Nasta held onto their decades’ worth of control by the skin of their teeth, Max’s hands flexed and twitched, but he calmed himself enough so that he didn’t tighten them at all around Harry’s tiny, pale hands which were still clasped in his own.

Nasta came and sat beside Harry, holding him soothingly, offering him comfort. Max made sure not to move to the other side of Harry, he made the conscious decision to stay in front of him and closer to Nasta so that Harry didn’t feel like he was being surrounded, trapped or blocked in. He made sure that Harry knew that still had an escape route if he needed it, even if it was a subconscious gesture to keep him calmer as neither he nor Nasta would have stopped or obstructed Harry in anyway if he tried to get away from them.

“We guessed that you were at the very least being neglected.” Nasta broke the silence with words barely above a whisper. “You acted very strangely at times, there were some rather odd comments that you made and you were obviously unhappy where you lived, but Harry, how bad did they treat you?”

Harry floundered as he tried to answer his mates, but he had absolutely nothing to say, he had nothing to compare his treatment to, how badly had they treated him?

“Perhaps that is an unfair question.” Nasta spoke again, understanding that Harry was trying to answer, but didn’t know how. “Maybe a better one would have been to ask if any of them have ever hit you.”

Harry sucked in a deep breath and looking down at his knees, he nodded his head minimally. Max’s hands almost crushed his own before his largest mate got himself back under control and loosened his hold, rubbing his thumbs gently over his hands in silent apology.

“Was this a…normal occurrence?” Nasta asked, stumbling, rightfully so, over the word normal.

“No.” Harry answered hoarsely, finding his voice. “I was only ever hit if things were really bad.”
“And things didn’t get very bad that often?” Max asked, failing to keep the slight hope from his voice.

“No. I’d have had to have done something very bad to be hit, though not with Dudley.”

“What do you mean?” Nasta asked him, swallowing back the urge to unsheathe his fangs.

“Dudley used to hit me for fun.”

“Which one was Dudley?” Max asked in forced calm.

“My cousin.”

“The very fat, blond…boy?”

“Yes. He’s always been overfed.”

“Where you haven’t.” Nasta observed as he looked to Harry’s still relatively skinny frame, despite the baby bulge.

Harry’s lips quirked into a wry smile. “I wasn’t allowed to eat if Dudley was still hungry.”

“When did they start holding back your food intake?”

“I think I was about seven when Dudley started complaining that he wasn’t getting enough to eat. Of course my portions were then smaller and Dudley’s were bigger. I was slowly staved and Dudley grew to the size of a baby killer whale. I’m not entirely sure of who had it worse, him or me.”

“Do you get enough to eat now?” Max asked, seemingly unable to stop himself from fretting.
Harry lifted his head and he smiled softly. He leant forward to kiss Max reassuringly, taking comfort for himself from his mate’s lips.

“I get more than enough now, these past few months I’ve eaten better than I ever have in my life. Whilst at Hogwarts I have never been short of food, I’ve often found myself unable to eat too much without the risk of feeling very sick, the pregnancy is both a curse and a blessing when it comes to food.”

Harry sighed and sagged in the seat. He felt drained and he had only really spoken about the withheld food, not even the weeks of being locked in his tiny cupboard with a slice of bread every other day and a beaker of tap water.

He hadn’t been hit often, or at least Aunt Petunia and Uncle Vernon hadn’t hit him often, but when they had, Harry shook his head; he didn’t want to go there.

“Harry, this…well it isn’t really much of a surprise because we had fleeting suspicions before now, but it truly is a shock to hear the truth, you are so sweet and kind, you don’t seem to have let what has happened to you sink in, which isn’t really a good thing.”

Harry went to angrily reply but Nasta silenced him with just a look, carrying on from where Max left off.

“It’s a bad thing, Cariad because if you haven’t let it sink in, if you are denying that it has happened, then you can’t get on the path to recovery. You need to take in everything, reopen your scars and let them bleed anew, let it all out of you, only then will you begin to heal.”

“I don’t want to open the scars.” Harry whispered.

“It will be painful, Harry, for all of us, Draco and Blaise included when you tell them, but it needs to be done.”

“Why?” Harry asked stubbornly.

“What if something sets you off again?” Max asked as gently as possible. “Like how you reacted back in our rooms when you were cleaning? We still don’t know what set you off or why and we have been walking on eggshells to ensure that it doesn’t happen again, but we can’t stop it from happening again, Harry, if we don’t know what will set you off. What if you have an…episode, when you are caring for our son? What if he gets older and says something that sets you off on a trip down memory lane and he’s left unsupervised for several minutes?"

Harry swallowed and moved a hand to protectively cover his son who was happily bouncing gently around in his abdomen.

“It was the comment.” Harry said, painfully quiet.

“What comment, Harry?” Max asked. “The one I made about you getting back into the cupboard?”

“Yes.”

“Why did that one comment send you into a flashback of your childhood?” Max asked. Harry had been expecting that follow up question, but it still made him flinch.

Harry braced himself for the coming tidal wave, but he sent out his little finger to test the waters, if his mates couldn’t handle the cupboard, then how could he ever expect them to handle anything else that had happened to him during his childhood?

“For as long as I can remember I’ve lived in a cupboard.”

The look on Nasta and Max’s faces brought the slightest of wry, humourless smiles to Harry’s lips as he played with the hem of his shirt to give his hands something to do as he extended a tiny inch of trust in his beloved dominant mates.

“When I was bad or my relatives just didn’t want me around anymore they used to yell at me to get back in my cupboard and not to come back out until I was told to. I had to crawl into my cupboard and shut the door on myself and then I was locked in.”

“You stayed in a cupboard?!?” Max asked in horror, his voice rising uncontrollably. Nasta placed a soothing hand on Max’s shoulder, a silent warning to watch what he said and did and to keep control of himself and his tone.

“Harry, they actually kept you in a cupboard? Where was this cupboard? In their front room? The kitchen?” Nasta asked much more calmly than he felt on the inside.
“The cupboard under the stairs. It was out of the way and large enough to hold me until I was almost eleven.”

A large vein in Max’s temple throbbed furiously as he ground his teeth together in an effort to control himself, when this failed he bit sharply into his own lip. The wash of fresh blood, his own blood, and the sting of pain helped him keep his anger in control.

“Almost eleven?” Nasta asked, his gorgeous hazel eyes, darkened in anger to an almost brown colour, narrowed as his own anger at the treatment of such a young child overflowed his emotions.

“Yeah, after I started receiving my Hogwarts letters, which were addressed to ‘the cupboard under the stairs’ they thought that the wizards were watching them so they moved me into Dudley’s second bedroom.”

The vein that had started to sink back into Max’s head jutted out once more, throbbing an angry red colour. He had to take his hands away from Harry’s so that he could clench his hands into large fists without hurting Harry.

“Your cousin had two bedrooms and you lived in a cupboard?” Nasta asked, his eyes almost going true brown in his anger, not the light, goldish-greenish hazel that Harry so loved staring into.

“To be honest he needs two bedrooms to fit his bulk.” Harry tried joking as he was getting very, very uncomfortable and nervous. He scratched the back of his neck and breathed out a bit shakily as he looked to the two angry men in front of him. He had never dealt well with angry people and he had some incredibly bad memories of people being angry with him, or even just around him…after all Uncle Vernon had been a very, very angry person by nature.

“Don’t Harry. Don’t try and make light of this. What those…people have done is a terrible, awful thing; I won’t be able to control myself if you start joking about how they treated you.” Max stated seriously.

“I don’t know how else to react.” Harry confessed, shifting restlessly. “I’ve never had to tell anyone about any of this before, no one has actually been close enough to me to notice anything amiss or if they do they play it off as a one-time thing. No one really cared.”

“I’m sure they would have if you had told them.”
Harry shrugged inelegantly. “Ron and his brothers pulled bars from my window when I was just twelve. They told Mrs Weasley and she didn’t do anything, so I just brushed it off. No one wanted to look deeper, no one wanted to bother with me. It was easier for them to just see the surface, the happy boy they wanted to see and nothing more.”

“What bars?!” Max demanded at the same time Nasta asked “You told someone and they did nothing?” looking horrified.

“It was the summer after my first year in Hogwarts.” Harry started softly, taking a hand from each of his mates to comfort himself. He played with their fingers, stroked their skin, anything to not have to look up at them, to see their faces or their anger darkened eyes.

“I had just turned twelve that day and a house-elf came to see me. His name was Dobby.”

“The house-elf you called in the hospital wing. Are we about to hear how that unlikely friendship struck up?” Max stated thoughtfully.

“Yes, but in the beginning Dobby and I weren’t really friends.”

“Why not?”

Harry sighed and he knew that the lengths to which Dobby had gone through to ‘keep him safe’ would not go down well at all.

“He kept trying to kill me.”

“What?!”

Harry jumped at the bellowed word and was soothed almost immediately afterwards by both of his oldest mates. Max looking particularly apologetic after his outburst.

“In Dobby’s mixed up mind what he was doing was perfectly logical.”
“Was he following his Master’s orders?”

“No. He was going almost directly against his Master, who was funny enough, Lucius Malfoy, Draco’s Father. Dobby believed, truly believed that he was helping me, keeping me safe, but in those attempts he tried to get me killed twice and almost got me expelled twice. He truly thought he was saving my life, but when I freed him from Lucius Malfoy’s enslavement we struck up an odd sort of friendship.”

“What does this have to do with bars on your window?” Max asked.

Harry sighed. “One of Dobby’s attempts to stop me from going back to school was smashing a pudding in a giant crystal bowl on the kitchen floor when my relatives had guests over, Muggle guests. Not only was I almost expelled because of the under age use of magic restriction, but my Uncle lost his big business deal and he blamed it on me. I hadn’t told them that I couldn’t do magic outside of school, so when the letter turned up and so kindly informed them that I wasn’t allowed to do magic outside of school, my Uncle lost it. He said that he was going to lock me up and that I was never going to be allowed back to Hogwarts. He fitted bars over my bedroom window and I was locked in my bedroom day and night. Much like I was in the cupboard, but at least the bedroom was much bigger and I could walk around.”

“Like a prison.” Nasta hissed.

“I suppose, but I’ve never seen inside a prison cell so I wouldn’t know. I was allowed out to use the toilet at about midday and that was it.”

“What about meal times?” Max asked.

“My bedroom door had a cat flap in the bottom so I could be fed.”

Max and Nasta looked so horrified to be hearing this and Harry ducked his head to look at his hands, which still held one of each of his mate’s hands.

“It wasn’t that bad.” Harry hurried to explain. “The worst part of it was the boredom.”
“You are seriously misguided if you think the worst part of your treatment was boredom, Harry.” Nasta told him, looking murderous. “The fact that they actually had the sheer level of cruelty to lock you up all day every day, not feeding you properly or even giving you the basic human right of bathroom facilities is horrifying. Even Azkaban gives their prisoners twenty-four hour access to a toilet.”

Harry shifted uncomfortably and let go of his mates’ hands to hold his bump between his hands, cradling his baby as best he could whilst his son was still inside of him.

A large arm around his shoulders squashed him into a broad body and Harry held onto that body for dear life as he choked back another stifled sob. He had been too young to understand the overwhelming level of neglect that he had been shown by his relatives, too naïve to realise that his treatment was actually considered as abuse. He knew that he had never been treated particularly well, but he tried not to think about it, he had always just put it all out of his mind and enjoyed what he could of his freedom whilst he was at Hogwarts. Why would he want to ruin the best days of his life by thinking of the Dursleys? Why would he spoil Christmas by thinking of his treatment at his relatives’ house? Why would he darken Easter by talking of his punishments? He just wanted to forget, pretend that none of it had ever happened, was that such a terrible thing?

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Harry had claimed tiredness and had refused to speak another word despite Max and Nasta’s best efforts, they had even brought their unborn son into their argument and that had made Harry angry, that they dared suggest that he would ever hurt his son, unknowingly or otherwise!

When he hadn’t been shown to a bed because Max was trying to keep him talking about his relatives Harry had slid onto the living room floor and had curled up on the patch of carpet in front of the fire, his back to his mates.

“Harry, please love.” Nasta begged. “It’ll be better to get everything out in the open. I know it’s hard for you, especially after so long of no one doing anything about it, but, love, please talk to us.”

Harry stayed silent. He had said all he was going to today and nothing, not even the threat of a punishment from his mates was going to get him to talk anymore.

Harry heard Max sigh deeply and he was scooped into his biggest mate’s arms. Harry lashed out and kicked and swung punches, but Max shushed him and held him as still as possible.

“If you won’t talk, Harry, then we had best get you to a bed before you get a crick in your neck from sleeping on the floor. We don’t want to ruin all the hard work Blaise put into rubbing the knots from your neck the last time you fell asleep on the floor, do we?”
Harry stayed silent and he felt like an ungrateful wretch, but he didn’t want to talk anymore so he was going to have to put up with feeling like a brat as Max laid him down on a wonderfully soft bed, removing his shoes and undoing the zipper of his trousers so that he was more comfortable. He was covered with a thick duvet and kissed on the side of the head before Max turned to leave the room.

“Max?” Harry called back.

Max was by his side before Harry blinked; looking down at him with a saddened expression, but there was still love and adoration in those blue, blue eyes.

Harry sat up and kissed Max firmly on the lips, pouring his love for the man in front of him into that one kiss.

“I can't talk about it anymore.” Harry told him. “I just can't. I don’t want to break down in this condition.”

Harry indicated the baby bump, Max’s hands jumped to cup his bulge and Harry smiled sadly.

“I never really understood how bad things were. I don’t think about it much during the school year, I have never had flashbacks before and it did scare me when I was stuck in my own memories. I always knew I was treated differently, but it wasn’t until I was older that I actually understood that I was being treated badly, that I was being abused. I think it was made worse by the adults around me too, if they ever noticed that anything was amiss then they never said anything and that pushed me to be closed lipped about everything. I felt like if they didn’t say anything, then I shouldn’t say anything either. I don’t mean to be a brat, but I can't speak any more about it, I just can't.”

“You aren’t a brat.” Max told him exasperatedly, moving a hand to cup his cheek. “I think Nasta and I knew when we started asking you about it that you weren’t going to spill everything in one afternoon, we know that it’ll take time, but what we have already heard has made us dread what else could have happened to you. These people obviously have no limits if they are willing to lock a child in a cupboard under a set of stairs and starve him. This dread is going to eat away at us and the worst possible scenarios are going to be floating around our heads until the entire truth is out and we can either put our fears to bed, or some of our worst nightmares are going to become a reality.”

“You promise you won't treat me any differently?” Harry asked a touch of fear in his suddenly young voice.

Max was reminded with a stab to his heart that Harry was only sixteen. He was often so mature and acted much older than he was that it was so very easy to forget that he wasn’t actually an adult yet, that he wasn’t fully grown up regardless of how he acted in a situation.

“Would we ever treat you any differently?” Max asked him with a small flick to that little nose. “Everyone has different, difficult trials to get over in their lifetime; it’s just cruel that yours came so early in life. True you have been through some horrific things, but they weren’t your fault, why would we treat you any differently for something so out of your control?”

Harry broke down and started sobbing on Max’s chest, taking comfort from those large arms that wrapped tightly around his back and the soothing smell of pine that always surrounded Max.

Max rocked Harry until the mentally exhausted boy fell asleep in his arms. He carefully extracted Harry from him and laid him back down, oh so gently. He covered Harry back up and eased himself carefully to his feet. He watched Harry sleeping for a minute or two, just to make sure his beautiful mate hadn’t been disturbed by his weight leaving the mattress. He bent down and kissed Harry’s soft cheek.

He couldn’t help but wonder if his mate had ever been hit harder than any child should. Harry had said that he had been hit by his…relatives, but how hard had those hits been? Had they caused any damage? Physical marks? Or had they just been sly slaps that stung for a bit without leaving a mark to be seen? He tried to keep the images of a battered Harry from his mind, of that beautiful, perfect face swollen, bruised and bleeding because someone had battered him, but he failed.

His claws and fangs ripped themselves out of his skin and gums with such force that he almost cried out. He breathed deeply and slowly to dispel his anger, but he knew that he had lost when his wings unfolded themselves from his spinal cord and pushed out of his skin in a burst of blood and shiny blue and black scales.

Resigned to walking around in his Dracken form for a couple of hours until he calmed down enough to control his Dracken attributes, Max left the bedroom before he accidentally woke Harry up. He went back into the living room and Nasta jumped up when he saw that he was in his Dracken form, sniffing deeply to scent out any threat.

“There isn’t any danger, I lost control.” Max admitted.

“I almost did when I heard your conversation. I can't believe he thought that we would treat him differently or that he thinks himself a brat just because he couldn’t bring himself to speak any more about what he went through.”

Max flumped down beside Nasta and scrubbed a hand through his hair, being very mindful of his claws. He smiled in remembrance of when he was a newly turned Dracken and had had a temper tantrum over something so insignificant that he couldn’t even remember what it was about now. His Dracken form had exploded out of him and he had been in so much pain that he had crumpled to the floor. His Mother and Fathers had held him and rocked him as he cried in agony.

Once he had calmed down and had sat in the circle of his Dad’s arms he had done the same thing, he had pushed a hand through his over long hair to get it out of his soaking wet face and as a result, he had gouged four deep rivets into his scalp with his claws. His Mother had been screaming at his Father to get him to the hospital as he sat on the floor bleeding profusely from his head, but his Father, ever the calm one in crisis situations had taken him from his Dad and had held him tightly to his front and urged him to bite his shoulder and drink his blood. The four deep marks hadn’t even scarred.

Max smiled and let himself indulge a little as he leant on Nasta and let the older man calm and soothe him. He was glad that no one else was there to see it though. Harry wouldn’t have done or said anything except perhaps worm his way between them and join in the cuddle, but Draco and Blaise were still too young to understand that being a dominant didn’t mean they had to be strong and tough twenty-four seven. They would see him as weak and challenge his position in the hierarchy and the last thing he wanted was to have dominance battles with them when he had only wanted a bit of comfort. He couldn’t wait for when they were older and more mature and realised that there was more to weakness and strength than bravado and icy exteriors.

Nasta wrapped an arm around him and kissed his forehead. The older man was enjoying the peace and comfort of the silence that Draco and Blaise being absent created. Not that he didn’t love them, he did very deeply, but their arguments and debates and childish fights gave him no end of headaches.

Max closed his eyes and let out a huff of breath, shifting a bit until he was more comfortable against Nasta.

“This is nice. I usually hate the silence of this place because it reminds me of how alone I am, but silence when I know there are people here is so peaceful.”

Nasta smiled and he relaxed back against the settee, soaking up the warmth of the large body next to him and the peace of the atmosphere. Neither of them were going to think about what Harry had gone through, neither of them were going to ruin the mood and the moment by mentioning it or speculating on what else could have happened to Harry in his childhood. They would speak about it when they had knowledge of everything that Harry had ever been subjected to, of everything those people had ever done to him. But for now they just wanted to enjoy some peace and quiet before hearing any more about Harry’s life or before Draco and Blaise came to visit and ruined it by inciting one of their many arguments. The next one would probably be over whom got better marks on their exams, neither of the older two were looking forward to that inevitable argument.

Chapter Thirty-Five – Homecoming Welcome

Max almost leapt out of his skin when the fireplace burst out green flame and one by one his family emerged from the fireplace.

He massaged his heart even as Nasta shot up, his black leathery wings with their bright yellow-gold scales burst from his back as he shot to stand in front of him as if he needed protecting.

“Well your reaction time is outstanding.” Max heard his Grandfather’s voice compliment. “Though your shielding skills are something to be desired, I can still see my Grandson’s head and shoulders.”

Max chuckled. “That can’t be helped now can it, Granddad? I’m a head and shoulders taller than he is.”

A tall, gorgeous man stepped out of the fireplace, a very large smile on his face, his light brown, almost blondish hair clinging to his face in overlong tendrils, his bright brown eyes glinting happily.

Max rushed right around Nasta and embraced this man tightly, even going so far as to tuck that head of blondish-brown hair under his chin.
“Caesar, what are you doing here? Not that I haven’t missed you, but what about Amelle?”

Caesar grinned happily up at his big brother; he had missed his entire family as he had been over in America with his mate and her family.

“Amelle’s family are watching over her, I swore her Father and brothers to an oath that they would die before they let anything happen to Amelle or Eleonora.”

“Eleonora? You finally beat Amelle’s idea of calling the baby Gem Bear into the dirt then?”

“I had to. I mean…Merlin, Gem Bear Seppen?” Caesar shook his head in disgust. “She’s settled on Eleonora and her Dracken likes it too, so it seems that our daughter will be Eleonora Dahlia Seppen.”

“I would have thought even with Amelle’s family you would still watch over her, she’s so close to birthing now.”

“Nah, she’s actually not. She’s still preening; she’s damn enjoying it as well. But I had to come and see my big brother when I heard that he had actually gone and gotten a submissive mate for himself, finally! Four other men as well.” Caesar waggled his eyebrows and Max shoved his brother away with a grin.

“Well we know who your favourite is.” A lovely looking woman with blonde hair and the same bright brown eyes as Caesar. “You walk past all three of your sisters to hug your brother and don’t even spare us a courtesy hello, thank you, Maximilius.”

“You know I love you, Julinda, but I haven’t seen Caesar in almost a year, I saw you last week.”

“Don’t make it sound like such a hardship to see me.” Julinda teased.

Max chuckled and hugged Julinda tightly, making sure to rein in his strength so he didn’t break his human sister in half.
“How is Laurel?”

Julinda snorted harshly and folded her arms across her chest. “In a wand making convention in Sweden. Never mind that this weekend is our sixth year anniversary.”

“You should divorce him.” Richard said firmly to his only biological daughter, his brown eyes, which both of his children had inherited, hard as flint.

“I’m not going to divorce him, Daddy.” Julinda sighed as if this conversation were an old one.

“Where are the other three of your supposedly gorgeous harem?” Caesar asked interestedly.

“Gorgeous harem?” Max questioned with a raised eyebrow.

“Alayla told me that you have a harem of exceptionally gorgeous men, she got to see them at the Dracken meeting and I want to see for myself to validate her claims, so where are they? All I see is your ugly mush and one gorgeous man.”

“Draco and Blaise are visiting their parents and Harry is sleeping, he’s had a rough afternoon.”

“But I’m only here for a few days! I wanna see them all!” Caesar whined.

“You will. Draco and Blaise will be here soon enough to visit and Harry won't sleep for much longer I don’t think.”

“Why won’t Harry sleep for much longer?” A sweet, sleepy voice asked.

Max turned and grinned at the sight of a sleepy Harry, his eyes closed as he rubbed at them with the one hand, the other holding onto the wall to keep himself upright, wearing just a pair of very over large boxer shorts.

“Are those mine?” Nasta asked incredulously. “How the hell did you get my boxer shorts?”
“I robbed them from your suitcase.” Harry admitted. “I broke the waistband to the ones Draco gave to me.”

Max scooped Harry up and held him tightly, kissing him passionately. Caesar wolf whistled and Harry startled and looked around before going a gorgeous shade of pink and trying to huddle in on himself to cover his body. He always got self-conscious when his belly was exposed.

“I know there’s a reason you are going around wearing just a pair of shorts other than enticing my son. What is it?” Myron asked not unkindly.

“I… I was too hot wearing anything else. I would have gone naked if my morals would have let me, thank god for morals.” Harry answered looking around at all the people looking at him. “I’m just going to get dressed.”

“Nonsense.” Myron exclaimed. “If you’re too hot then you’re too hot, don’t make yourself uncomfortable for us.”

Harry didn’t want to say that he was more uncomfortable staying in a room with them in just a pair of boxers that were only staying up due to his very large waistline, so he huddled in Max’s arms and looked around, his sight stayed on a new, but almost familiar face.

There was a new man standing with Max’s family, he looked so much like Richard that Harry knew him to be Max’s younger brother, Caesar. Harry wondered just what the hell this man was doing here when his nesting mate was about to give birth to his daughter. Harry would have had a fit if he found out that any of his mates had left him unprotected during his nesting period.

“I don’t think your little one likes me, Max, he hasn’t stopped glaring at me for the past two minutes.” Caesar told his older brother, who stopped his conversation with his Grandmother and looked in surprise at Harry.

“Sorry Harry, this is my brother Caesar, he isn’t a threat to you or the baby.” Max introduced as Caesar stepped forward, his hand out for a shake.

Harry snarled a bit at Caesar who took a step back in surprise. “He really doesn’t like me.”

“What’s wrong, love?” Nasta asked, coming closer.
“He’s just left his pregnant mate! He’s left her!”

“Amelle is fine, Harry. Her family are around her.” Max explained.

“It doesn’t matter.” Harry pouted before looking to Max and Nasta. “If any of you even think of leaving me alone in my nest I will wear your decorated skins to your funerals.”

Alexander Maddison started laughing heartily and he sat happily on the settee. “He’s so creative!” He praised.

Harry grinned at Max’s Grandfather and squirmed to be put down. He forgot all about just wearing a pair of shorts and went and sat with the man who held his hands like he was a delicate woman, but the creative glint in his eye stopped Harry from saying anything.

“How would you decorate their skins, Harry, sweet one?”

“With their wing scales of course.” Harry grinned promptly.

“If you could stop talking about torturing and killing us, that’d be great.” Max told them sardonically as he rolled his eyes.

“Spoil sport.” Harry stated with a grin.

Alexander chuckled and patted Harry lovingly.

“How is my great-Grandson tonight?” He asked, lowering a hand to the exposed, bare bump.

“Surprisingly still. Usually he’d be kicking into my kidneys right about this time.”

“Has he been active today?” Richard asked concernedly.
“Yes. He’s just not active now. I have his kick chart that the nice woman gave to me; he’s kicked me hard twelve times today.”

“I’m glad I don’t want kids.” Julinda said looking at him with pity.

“I want to be a Grandfather too you know.” Richard told his daughter, put out by her continued declaration of remaining Motherless.

“What the hell is Eleonora?” Caesar asked. “I am your son aren’t I? Please Daddy, don’t tell me Mommy slept with the milkman after all of these years! My heart won’t be able to bear the pain!”

Harry started laughing and he couldn’t stop. The faces Caesar had pulled, the tone of voice he had used to inflect the words he had said, the over dramatization of his actions made him laugh until tears streamed down his cheeks and his lungs shrivelled up from lack of oxygen as he couldn’t breathe.

“He’s just like you.” Myron remarked dryly to Richard, who was laughing so hard no sound was coming out of his mouth. Myron didn’t sound overly happy at the thought of Caesar being just like Richard either.

Nasta finally started rubbing Harry’s back to calm him down so he could take in a deep breath before he suffocated himself. Harry did so and remained pink cheeked, wet faced and huffing out bursts of laughter.

He calmed himself down and held his arms around his chest as he swayed with the remnants of his laughter, chuckling at odd moments.

Max smacked Caesar on the back of the head to shut him up, his grin almost splitting his face in two.

“You’re a moron.” He commented fondly.

“So are you, or do you forget the…”

The rest of Caesar’s sentence was muffled by one of Max’s large hands as he covered his brother’s lower face, his cheeks oddly red.
“Are you blushing?” Harry demanded. “What the hell happened to make you blush?”

Max went even redder and he stammered a bit before he stomped on Caesar’s foot.

“This is all your fault; you were sworn to the secrecy of the Gilted Quill!”

“The what?” Nasta asked interestedly.

Max went impossibly redder and Harry chuckled as Caesar went red cheeked as well. They looked like a couple of guilty, naughty school boys, very tall school boys.

“It was their little boy club when they were kids.” The other blondish-brown haired woman, this one the only one of Max’s siblings to have Myron’s jet black eyes, said with a nasty grin at her brothers. She put on a high pitched, imitation of a child’s voice. “No girls allowed!”

“Talia!” Max whined. “Stop humiliating me in front of my mates!”

“It was so cute.” Kimberly Maddison, Max’s Grandmother, sighed adoringly. “They used to run around with this beautiful little quill edged with real gold. One of Myron’s best quills, not that he would ever take away their ‘club symbol’”

“Of course not.” Myron stated with an evil little smirk. “I would never deprive my little boys of their gilded quill club symbol.”

“Oh Merlin, let the floor open up and swallow me whole.” Max grumbled.

Harry chuckled and went to hug Max, only to find himself stuck on the settee unable to get up.

“A little help please.” He said as he waved his arms about, trying, and failing, to get to his feet.

Nasta chuckled quietly beside him and gave him a gentle push to his feet. Harry went to Max and cuddled him tightly, still laughing at finally seeing Max get his feathers ruffled. Max was so laid back that it was nearly impossible to embarrass him, he either laughed it off or was completely unbothered by it, to see him actually embarrassed enough to blush tickled Harry.

“Have you searched for a nesting place yet?” Ashleigh asked Harry, looking unashamedly at his bared belly.

Harry actually half turned his baby away from her before he caught himself and stopped, standing still. He breathed deeply and pushed away his instincts which urged him to hide his baby away from Ashleigh. He turned around fully in Max’s arms to look at Ashleigh dead on, his instincts would not rule his life, he was in control here, no one else, not even his own Dracken instincts would overthrow his control, he already let go during the heats without doing so when he wasn’t on heat as well.

“No.” Harry replied, forced casually.

“I would have thought that it would have been the first thing you did once you got here. What is more important than scouting out the area that you’ll give birth in?” Myron asked a tight note to his voice which let Harry know that Myron at least had seen his small movement to turn away from his Wife.

“Something came up and then I fell asleep. I’ll scout out an area when I’m ready to!” Harry hissed.

“Calm down, sweet one.” Alexander urged him. “We wouldn’t want anything untoward to happen to you or the baby. Myron stop harassing the little one!”

“I was not harassing anyone, Father.” Myron replied calmly even as those black eyes glinted towards Harry.

“There was an…altercation at the train station.” Max broke the awkward silence that had fallen over them.

Harry twisted violently in Max’s arms and glared up at his biggest mate with livid emerald eyes. Max sighed as Harry glared at him and his family all looked at him in alarm and askance. He had never kept anything from them, nothing in his entire life, until he had mates. He understood that this was Harry’s secret, Harry’s pain, but the more people that knew of what Harry had gone through then the less likely that one of his family members would send Harry into a flashback of his abused childhood.
“Give us a moment.” Max told his family as he plucked Harry from the floor like a doll and carried him back up the stairs to the bedroom, Nasta following them like a silent, disapproving shadow.

“What the hell do you think you’re doing?!” Harry hissed out as soon as the door was closed. “You’re not allowed to just tell whomever you please about…about that!”

“I know, Harry, but they’re my family. I can’t keep anything from them, let alone something this big. They’ll be here practically every other day anyway, they always are, what if they say something to set you off? If it can be avoided surely that’s healthier for you and the baby?”

“No!” Harry exploded. “No it isn’t healthier for either of us!”

Nasta held him from behind and pressed a kiss behind his ear. “I can understand where Max is coming from Harry.”

Harry opened his mouth to shout hell at the both of them but Nasta’s hand lightly covered his mouth.

“If one of Max’s family members were to say something to inadvertently hurt or upset you, I doubt either of us would forgive ourselves. More importantly with you so close to giving birth, I doubt we would forgive the particular family member for causing you distress. Max loves his family very much, Harry, it would hurt something deeply within him if he were to fight with his family, as it would hurt me if I was so angry with my Dad or brother as to hurt them because they had upset you.”

“I…I don’t want them to know!” Harry burst out with tears in his eyes, stubbornly refusing to let them fall, feeling like a selfish burden for making them chose him and his painful secret over telling their own family members. “It’s embarrassing and humiliating! That I couldn’t and still can’t protect myself from three Muggles.”

Nasta moved so quickly that Harry couldn’t even prepare for when he was spun around to face his oldest, most dominant mate who was looking very serious and very grave.

“Never say that again!” Nasta growled. “What those people did to you is in no way your fault, Harry! You were just a child, how can a child protect itself from the cruelty of two fully grown adults?”
“Where do they live, Harry?” Max asked calmly that belied the manic glint in his blue eyes.

“I’m not going to tell you that!” Harry replied astonished. “You can’t kill them! All of us would be exposed as creatures and we’d all be executed! Do you want me to be executed? Do you want the baby to be executed?”

“The baby wouldn’t be executed, they’d test him to see if he’s a Dracken or not and then they’d either put him in an orphanage or extradite him to Australia or South Africa.”

“Oh and that’s better is it? Is it?!?” Harry demanded shrilly.

“They’d have to catch us first.” Max ground out between his teeth unwilling to let it drop just yet.

“Oh so you can all run ahead of me, just leave me and the baby behind because I can barely walk let alone fucking run! Not to mention what would happen to your families! You’d be out as Drackens so they’d test them as well; it’s not just us you’ll be exposing! It’s not just our lives that you’ll be ruining.”

Max screamed into his hands. “I just can’t bear the thought of those people abusing a child and getting away with it!”

“Who says they have to get away with it?” Nasta asked calmly, rationally. “They abused a minor in their care, there is no reason that we can’t go through legal channels to punish them. Not everything has to be blood and death; I think a long, slow suffering in the most under budgeted prison we can find is a much more fitting punishment.”

Max’s eyes gleamed as Nasta craftily planted the images in the wound up Dracken’s head.

“Hello?! I’m pregnant! I can’t testify and I know enough about legal jargon from my Aunt’s Law and Order TV shows to know that if we have any hope of shoving them behind bars then I’ll have to testify. I can’t turn up at a Muggle court room pregnant!”

“Harry love, by the time we put in the accusation, the Muggles answer it and a court date has been set our son will be six months old.” Max replied.
“We’ll wait until after the birth of our boy if it makes you feel better.” Nasta soothed.

“You do both know that my Dad, Richard, is a barrister don’t you? I’ve grown up hearing about the ins and outs of the courtroom.”

“He’s a barrister, really?” Harry asked a tad hopefully.

“Course. He would be able to represent you if you wanted; he’d get them the longest, harshest sentence possible.”

“Only one of us can accompany, Harry.” Nasta stated factually. “I’d lean more towards Draco as he is the nearest to Harry’s age. If two thirty-something’s show up then the courts could claim that we are taking advantage of a minor.”

Max grunted. “I’ve already been accused of paedophilia once and that was more than enough. I have no want of a court to do it.”

“I am of legal age to give sexual consent!” Harry reminded them.

“It won’t matter, you’ll be going to a court to face down child abuse charges, if the judge, jury and media see that you have two thirty year old men as lovers they’ll twist it into something vile and unsavoury.”

Harry sighed. “I don’t want to do it alone.”

“You won’t be alone, love, we’ll be in the courtroom, we just won’t be able to claim a relationship with you, we could just be friends. Draco will be your lover, it’ll be better if there is just the one of us anyway, Muggles are strange about homosexuality, so the less male lovers you have, the happier they’ll be.”

“Lucius Malfoy is also a very prominent political figure, when the wizarding world gets a hold of it he’ll be better suited, along with my Dad, Myron, to protect you from any backlash, any media interference, that sort of thing.”
“Lucius Malfoy won’t help me! He hates me.”

“He doesn’t hate you; he just needs some time to sort through his thoughts. Child abuse is a very, very serious thing, Harry and Lucius Malfoy will be itching to take his wand to those people.”

“We really have to tell them, don’t we?” Harry asked in a small voice, looking to the bedroom door and the stairs that led to Max’s family.

“We don’t have to, but I would like it if you’d allow me to.” Max replied slowly and diplomatically. “They won’t think anything differently of you, Harry; they’ll admire you for your strength to admit what you went through more than anything else.”

“How will they react?” Harry asked nervously.

“With righteous outrage on your behalf.” Max assured. “My Mum and grandparents especially will be devastated.”

Harry sighed. “I don’t think I could tell it again.” He admitted sadly.

“With your permission we could tell them all we know about the situation.”

Harry nodded slowly, half regretting it, even as he knew his mates would never have agreed to just leave the Dursleys alone, to just keep the past in the past.

Max had been right, of course, about his family’s reaction. They had been livid, had shouted, sworn, questioned and Myron had clenched his hands so tightly that his fingernails had bitten into his skin and caused him to bleed. Richard had already started to take notes and was pressing the parchment with his quill so hard he was leaving stab marks all over it as his hand shook terribly.

Harry sat on the settee with Max’s youngest sisters, who were both holding him comfortingly and crying on his behalf as he sat dry eyed, but feeling like a rung out towel. Max’s oldest sister, Julinda was furious and was making choking motions with her hands, her brown eyes far away.
Ashleigh was being cradled in Myron’s arms, even as the huge, broad Dracken was standing as stiff as a board, those black eyes pinned to Harry, looking at him like he dearly wished to check him thoroughly for any marks or bruises, even though Max had told them that Harry’s inheritance last summer would have wiped away all physical evidence of his past abuse.

“What I’d do to those beasts if I got my hands on them.” Alexander said for the seventh time making a violent gesture in the air.

“Now dear, calm yourself.” Kimberly soothed her Husband. “Our dear Richard will make sure they get what’s owed them, won’t you, Richard dear?”

“Of course, Kimberly. Those vile monsters will not walk away from this.” Richard rasped his voice so tight it had to be painful for him to speak.

It seemed that when Richard got emotional, or angry, his throat closed off and with the scar running the length of his neck from his chin it made it very painful for the man to breathe and he had choked for air several times since he’d been told already.

Myron had given that small bottle of potion to his mate and watched critically as Richard had sipped from it, but it didn’t seem to be helping overly much. Harry was so insanely curious that he had had to bite his tongue twice to keep the question in his mouth.

Harry sighed and Talia wrapped her arms around him tighter, kissing the side of his head and rubbing against him like a cat. He smiled and snuggled her back, chuckling silently at it turned into a competition on who could rub the other for the longest.

“What on earth are you doing?” Alayla asked them with a laugh.

“I hope you aren’t trying to steal my pregnant mate from me, Talia.” Max grinned as his sister went tomato red.

“Oh course not, I’m trying to make him happy again.” Talia answered primly, looking pointedly to Harry’s smile.

The floo flared green and before Harry could blink he had several people in front of him, several pairs of wings flared.

He heard Max laugh and the second tallest Dracken strode forward, his blue wings bobbing behind him and he embraced someone that Harry couldn’t see through the wall of wings, though he did find out that Myron’s wings were black on black, he has wings as black as his eyes with his scales done in an endless onyx colour. Richard’s wings were a pale, pastel orange colour and his scales were the happiest, brightest sunshine yellow he had ever seen, even brighter than Henley’s, which had been more of a lemon colour.

Alexander’s wings on the other hand were a deep, almost black, green and were dotted with paler green scales.

Max walked through them all with his arm around a very unsettled looking Blaise. Harry forced his body out of his seat, using his legs to push himself forward, almost stumbling in the process, to wrap his arms around Blaise’s neck.

“Now he is gorgeous.” Caesar exclaimed, nudging his brother. “Have you had that yet?”

“Don’t be crude and vulgar!” Myron reprimanded strongly, following through with a smack to the back of Caesar’s head. “Your Mother and sisters are in the room!”

“Sorry Dad.” Caesar replied meekly, rubbing his sore spot, before he grinned and went back to examining Blaise.

“Bit on the small and slender side for a dominant.”

Blaise snarled and held Harry tighter; Harry could feel the tension in Blaise’s body and he went up on tiptoes to kiss it away. They ended up kissing passionately for several minutes.

“How come I never get a kiss like that?” Max whined.

“You can’t keep yourself from talking long enough.” Harry answered quickly, setting off a round of laughs.

Harry laughed happily as he cuddled with Blaise, who had come for a short visit to see if he had settled in alright. They kissed and cuddled and talked quietly as Max and his family talked about every topic on the planet.

“I’m going to go use the bathroom a second.” Harry told everyone as it looked like he was going to have a parade follow him through the house. “I’ll be five minutes!”
“The bathroom is the second door on the left from this room.”

“I thought it was upstairs?” Harry questioned. “It was beside the bedroom that I woke up in.”

“This house has an upstairs and a downstairs bathroom, love.” Max told him with a smile.

“Ah. Right, I’ll only be a sec!”

Harry waddled slightly to the bathroom and groaned as the pressure lifted from his bladder. He wasn’t as bad as when he had the infection, but he was still weeing every other hour.

He washed his hands and dried them on the towel, but he couldn’t bring himself to let the towel go. It was so soft and fluffy. He rubbed his face on it and he smelled it. It smelt like Max’s body. He clenched the material in his fists and looked around him. He eased himself out of the bathroom and looked up and down the hallway. He went the opposite way from which he had come and found an absolutely huge kitchen. It was bigger than the living room and it was a pristine white. Harry just knew that this room was where Max usually entertained his guests.

He spied the back garden and pushed open the back door. It was now twilight and it was getting dark. That meant it had to have been about ten in the night. Looking around he caught a small glimpse of the orchard that Max had promised was out back and dashed towards it as fast as his bandy legs could carry him.

He inhaled deeply and patted the ground around him with his hand. He stood up and knew that these trees would not support his nest. He needed bigger trees if he were to use one. Harry looked back at the house and it was then that he saw a vantage point; there was a flat section of roof amidst the sloping tiles. It was high enough that he could see any predators coming for his children, it was strong enough to support his nest and it was wide enough that he wouldn’t roll out of it.

Unsheathing his wings Harry didn’t even think about it as he moved them for the first time, taking just a few moments to find the right rhythm and speed before he was in the air, using his shoulders to control his direction.

He landed on the flat space and looked at it. It was bigger than he had initially thought, which was just as well as it would give him more room for his nest. He swatted at the decaying leaves, pulling out his wand and banishing the mud and dirt. It would be the perfect nest. He could see for miles around him, no one would be sneaking up on him or his baby. He wadded the towel in his hands and placed it delicately to an edge that only he could see. He looked at the towel and preened a bit in pride. He would have to find more things to build his nest with, but for now, he was done. He had scouted the perfect area and had started to build, it wouldn’t be long now.
I will be posting the side story to this fic, entitled The Rise of The Drackens: The Scaled Bits, very soon. It's full of little one-shots to help understand the mates better and where they've come from and what they've gone through as well as missing scenes that were edited out of the original chapters. I hope you like them.

Chapter Thirty-Six – The Nest

Harry had only just landed back on the grass and tucked his wings back into his skin when Nasta came barrelling out of the house, scooped him to his chest and began licking and sniffing every inch of his body.

He sighed and held on tightly to Nasta’s shoulders as he was carried back into the house and into the living room, where only the women remained. All of the males had vanished and Harry had a pretty good idea of where they had gone if Nasta was this wound up. He had taken too long coming back from the bathroom, his mates had gone looking for him and found the bathroom empty and they had panicked and gone hunting for him around the house.

“Oh, Harry darling, we were so worried when you didn’t come back from the bathroom after twenty minutes and then when Maxie told us that you had gone…” Kimberly Maddison exclaimed, faffing over him.

“I only went outside for some air, I felt a bit stuffy.” He lied smoothly. No one was to know about his nest, not even his mates.

“Are you still too hot?” Ashleigh fretted.
“Just a bit.” Harry answered as he fought with Nasta to get his arms free.

“Keep still.”

Nasta’s voice was guttural and slightly feral and Harry stilled immediately as he felt sharp teeth graze his bare shoulder in a warning for what was to come if he didn’t obey.

Harry let Nasta sniff at his skin, lick him and gently suck at him until his dominant was assured that he was still perfectly well and in peak health. Nasta sat down and lingered for a very long time around his bump, even using his hands to gently press and stroke his skin.

“You found him?”

Harry looked up at Max’s relieved face and cocked his head. Max seemed to be more in control than Nasta, but as the top dominant shouldn’t Nasta be the calmer one? Some aspects of being a Dracken still confused the hell out of him.

“He’s more wound up because he’s the top dom.” Max answered the question in his eyes. “Not that I wasn’t worried, because I was, I thought I was having a heart attack at just a little over thirty, but his Dracken dictates that he is the one responsible for the submissive and all subordinate dominants, so he’s more wound up because he had his Dracken in his ear harping on at what a terrible person he is for losing you.”

Harry hugged Nasta tightly and kissed the underside of his jaw.

“You aren’t a terrible person, Nasta, I only went to get some air. I would have called one of you if I had known it would upset you, but I stayed on Max’s grounds, I barely left the back door, I was never in any danger.”

“What if you had fallen?” Nasta forced out harshly, his throat sounding like it couldn’t get human words out.

“I wouldn’t have fallen, there were no stairs.” Harry said lightly, kissing Nasta lovingly.

Blaise rushed into the room and after seeing Harry he fell at Nasta’s feet, laying his head on Harry’s thigh.
“I was so worried, Mio Bello.” He exclaimed tightly.

Harry run his fingers through Blaise’s hair and tugged at a freshly cut, neat section of hair.

“You’ve cut it.” Harry pouted.

“My Mother always cuts my hair in the summer. She says a respectable boy can’t go around with a scruffy mop of straw for hair.”

“Thanks for that.” Harry replied dryly, tugging at a clump of his own hair that stuck in the opposite direction to all the others and would possibly reach his shoulders if it ever lay flat.

Blaise chuckled and kissed Harry’s chin. “I don’t believe that, Mio Amore, I just get my hair cut to keep her happy.”

“Speaking of cut hair, how long has yours grown now?” Max asked.

Neither of the older two had been happy when it had emerged that Harry had cut his hair in a rebellious act against his two dominants. But they were actually more angry with Blaise and Draco for putting Harry in a position where he felt the need to do something so drastic as to cut his hair than at Harry himself for actually cutting his hair. Nasta had nastily told them that at least it was his hair that Harry had cut and not his own body to get their attention. He had then regaled them with a gruesome story of a lazy dominant who couldn’t be bothered to look after his mate and the mate in question had sliced her own wrists in a desperate hope of getting her dominant’s attention. She had died alone and cold on their bedroom floor. The dominant had been executed by the Counsel for gross neglect of his submissive. Harry still shivered at that story, he couldn’t imagine how desperate and hungry that young girl had been for her mate’s attention, he couldn’t help but think that if she had had two dominants and not just the one bad dominant then maybe she would still be alive. That thought made him very sad.

“I don’t think it’s grown at all.” Harry replied with a shrug.

“You’ve cut your Dracken hair?” Myron asked in astonishment.
Harry wondered at what point during his cuddle fest with Nasta and Blaise the other males had come back in, then decided that he didn’t actually care if they saw him cuddling and kissing with his mates and he focused on the question asked.

“Yeah. In a, how did you phrase it, Nas? A rebellious act of needless violence against the wishes of my dominants for attention that should have been freely given.”

Myron pinned Max with a glare and Max dodged the smack to the head, proving that he was more than capable of moving out of the way of his Father’s smacks if he wanted to, and he held his hands up.

“WOAH! Wait a second, Dad; it was before I was even a mate! It was Blaise and Draco’s oversight, not mine or Nasta’s, we put them right when we joined the mateship and found out what had happen.”

Myron nodded but he didn’t apologise, not that Harry was expecting him to as he hadn’t actually hit Max, but it still ruffled Harry’s feathers that the man hadn’t apologised for going to hit his son, Harry’s mate.

“What did you boys do?” Alexander directed at Blaise, who was the only one of the two dominants involved here to question.

“It was just after Draco had joined our mateship. Harry really dislikes violence, yet Draco and I foolishly tried to settle our differences in front of Harry, who didn’t want to see us fighting. He threatened to do a lot of things if we didn’t stop immediately, but we were too riled up to stop as we are both relatively young Drackens, we couldn’t stop, not even as Harry begged us. We selfishly immersed ourselves in the fight that we were engaged in and it was only when Harry threatened to cut his hair that we were able to pull ourselves from the fight and focus on him instead of ourselves.”

“If you managed to regain control of yourselves and give your submissive the attention he needed then why did he still cut his hair?” Myron asked with a dangerous edge to his voice.

“Blaise calmed me down and I was about to throw the scissors down when Draco insulted me. I got so angry that I just clenched my hand and my hair fell away.”

“Can I see it?” Caesar asked. “I’ve never seen a submissive with hair shorter than mid back length. Is it shoulder length? You’d look cute with shoulder length hair.”
“You misunderstand, I didn’t just trim it.” Harry told them and he smiled a bit at their horrified faces. “I cut all of it off, every last bit. I put the scissors to the base of my skull and I cut, I had barely any hair left.”

“At least you didn’t give yourself a bald patch.” Max said with a grin. After the seriousness had been dealt with and Blaise and Draco had understood that gravity of what they had done, as Harry could have just as easily cut his body and not his hair, Max had pitched a laughing fit about it. The larger man loved playing with his tiny tufts of silky hair.

“You love it like this.” Harry grinned.

“It’s amazing, your hair in human form is thick and soft, but your Dracken hair is so smooth and silky, it feels wonderful to compare the two textures, one like velvet the other like solid water.”

Harry chuckled and pulled his Dracken form from within himself, he felt his hair recede into his head until it was shorter than his human hair and Max plunged his hands into that thick softness, putting his nose into it and inhaling deeply.

“Chestnuts.” He whispered. “You always smell of chestnuts.”

“Except for the one time that he smelt like coconut.” Nasta reminded him with a grin.

Harry blushed a bit as he remembered that he had had a clumsy moment and knocked all of Max’s hard made coconut milk drinks over himself. He had smelt like a coconut for a week afterwards.

“Well it does look nice.” Talia complimented as her parents stared at the haircut in stunned silence.

“I like it.” Harry grinned. “I’m going to keep it this way, not that it’s grown any since I cut it.”

“It doesn’t grow because you don’t want it to grow.” Alexander told him simply.

“Really? That’s so cool; it saves a hell of a lot of money on haircuts as well.”
Harry blinked as he remembered Aunt Petunia shearing his hair off with the kitchen scissors until he was nearly bald, leaving just a covering of spiky stubble and four inches of hair in the front to hide his scar. He had looked so ridiculous and he had cried himself sick in his cupboard as he spent a sleepless night torturing himself over going to school the next day.

His hair had grown back without him noticing some when during the night and even though he had been punished for it, even though at the time he had had no idea of how he could have possibly made his hair grow back overnight, he had been so happy to have his hair back that he hadn’t cared. Was it a wizard thing? Or was it a Dracken thing? His hair had always stayed the same really, until Aunt Petunia had taken him to the barber’s and had it cut, but then his hair always grew back on the walk home until by the time they got back, it looked like he had never been. His hair never really grew when it was left alone, but when it was cut; it grew back exactly the same.

“Harry, love?” Max coaxed him gently.

Harry looked around and sighed heavily. He was on Nasta’s lap being surrounded by his three mates, Max’s family all around him looking concerned. He had slipped into his memories too much and had been unaware of the outside world. He could have kicked himself; his mates were already so very worried without him doing shit like that!

“I’m fine.” He stressed, even as he knew they wouldn’t believe him.

“What was it about this time?” Nasta asked. “What caused the flashback?”

“My hair.”

That confused the whole lot of them, but none more than Blaise, who was looking severely puzzled. Harry touched his smooth chin and kissed him.

“You and Draco have missed a great deal.” Harry sighed.

Blaise lowered an eyebrow in question. “We’ve been gone for a few hours, what could we have possibly missed?”

“My relatives came to pick me up from the station.”
“Ah, so they know that you’re pregnant now. Did they not take it very well?”

Max snorted and looked like he didn’t know what to do or where to look as he had the most fierce glare on his face and he didn’t want to direct it at anyone.

“They were never going to take it well, Blaise.” Harry sighed.

Blaise quirked up an eyebrow in question, but Harry sighed and turned away. Today was never going to end.

“He has a right to know, Harry.” Nasta coaxed him gently.

Harry nodded his head, stood up and walked out of the room. He couldn’t deal with the situation. He wanted to go back to bed but it was only when he tried to pick his foot up to climb the stairs and couldn’t that he remembered that it was impossible for him to get up the stairs by himself.

He sunk down onto it instead and sniffled as he felt the burn in his eyes and in the back of his throat which signalled a crying fit coming on. He closed his eyes and squeezed the tears back.

How did it come to this? He had been happy without them knowing; now not only did his mates know, but Max’s family knew, if Max’s family had been told, Nasta would tell his Dad and brother. Blaise would confide in his Mother and possibly even his step-father and Draco, Draco would tell the world in his rage. He had felt better when they hadn’t known.

A small fluttering in his belly had Harry moving his hand to his bump in an almost reflexive movement, patting his own belly as he started humming quietly under his breath. He kept the humming soothing and light, full of his love for his baby and not including any of his current dark thoughts or feelings.

Max dropped down beside him, his huge hands covering Harry’s own as the large man leant into him, resting his head on Harry’s.

“I fear we’ve pushed you too hard. For that we are sorry, Harry.” Max whispered, afraid to ruin the soft humming.

Harry stopped his humming and turned to Max, his tears still threatening to fall. Max sighed painfully when he saw them and he moved his hands to cup Harry’s cheeks, moving his thumbs to brush those unfallen tears away gently.
“It was great before you all knew.” Harry warbled, trying to control himself and failing. “I never told you because I’ve never wanted to speak about it. I wanted to forget about it, I was never going back, it was all over. I could carry on with my life, I could be happy. Then I had that damned flashback to my poor, neglected childhood and that was it, I knew from your faces that day that you weren’t going to let it drop, that none of you were going to accept anything less than the truth. I knew my happiness was going to shatter around me.”

“Why?” Max asked looking at him hard. “Why would your happiness shatter around you? Did you think that we wouldn’t love you any more if we found out?”

“No. I know you all love me, I’m secure in that knowledge, but I knew that when you found out I’d have to talk about it, that I’d have to relive it all again. I was never happy there, Max. Never, not even once and I knew that once I started talking about all of those painful memories and the fear, the loneliness and the unhappiness I felt back then that I’d feel it now as well. The happiness that I had found, that I had made for myself would crumble around me under the onslaught of such memories.”

“Oh, Harry.” Max exclaimed wrapping large arms around him tightly, not saying anything else, just holding his little lover.

“I can’t talk about it, Max, I just can’t. The things those people did to me, the things they said, I don’t want to relive those times, I don’t want to go back to how I used to be…please.”

Max’s arms tightened around him and he squeezed his eyes shut to stop the burn in the corner of his eyes from forming his own tears as he listened to Harry begging him not to make him speak about what he had gone through.

“You have to talk about it, love, not all at once and it was perhaps a bad idea to push you to tell Blaise as well as my entire family in such a short amount of time, but I can’t begin to think on what you went through, what you must have felt as your own relatives hurt you and neglected you like they did, I know I wouldn’t be able to cope alone if anyone did those things to me, I would have had to tell someone.

I’ve grown up knowing that I can go to all three of my parents for anything. I know that they will listen to my fears, my worries and my dreams without judgement or ridicule. That they will guide me through the toughest of challenges and be there for me whenever I need them to be and even when I don’t. I’ve come to learn that no matter how old I am, or how old I’ll get, they will always be there to help me, to listen when I need them to, to protect me from all the dark and dangerous things in the world, even if I am fully able to do it myself because that is what loved ones do. To learn that you never had that growing up, that you couldn’t rely on those who were supposed to love and protect you makes me feel sick and light headed.

If anyone deserved a loving family growing up it was you, Harry. You are so special, so kind and so full of love that it’s hard to believe that you never had any growing up. It hurts all of us to know what you’ve been through, it hurts us deep inside our chests, it squeezes our hearts because child abuse is so terribly wrong that it brings tears to our eyes. Hurting a child goes against every fibre of my body and I ache with the knowledge that one I love so deeply has been hurt in such a way, I just want to help you, Harry, but I’m making it worse by pushing you. You can’t do this on your own, but pushing you to tell us everything in one huge onslaught isn’t going to help you and it isn’t going to help us to help you either, so you tell us in your own time what happened, but know that we will never let you keep it bottled up inside for long, know that no matter what time of day or night that you decide to tell us, we will hold you and love you through it, because we are your family now and that’s what families do.”

Harry had tears streaming down his face as he fell onto Max’s chest and sobbed his heart out into the soft shirt. He took in deep, gasping breaths and cried until his throat felt like it would tear.

More hands on him alerted him to Nasta and Blaise joining him and Max on the stairs and he huffed a bit, trying to stop his tears, but gave up when more kept coming. A drop of wetness on his forehead finally broke through his ball of comfort wrapped up in his mates’ arms against Max’s chest and he looked up through tear blurred eyes at Max, who was silently crying himself.

That alone is what gave Harry the power to finally calm himself down enough to stop his tears and to stop the great, huffing breaths. He slowed his breathing until he was breathing normally, only a small hiccup now and then breaking his slow and even breaths. He rubbed his face with his bare arm before reaching up and swiping at Max’s tears.

Max smiled at him and it was a sad smile as if even though he was smiling, he didn’t really feel happy.

“I’m glad to have you as my family.” Harry said softly, his voice a hoarse croak after all of his sobbing.

Max crushed him back to his chest and just held him, one hand on his back, the other the back of his head, stroking his hair softly as he rocked them both slowly.

Nasta laid his head between Harry’s shoulder blades and he felt Blaise on his left side. It was at moments like these that he wanted all of his mates around him and he felt the loss of Draco like a stab to his stomach and he wished that his blond lover were here to hold onto him as well.

Max let out a weak, watery chuckle.

“Look at us all here acting so soppy.” He broke away from the hug and brushed away his own tears.
“I’m going to make us all hot chocolate, we deserve a treat.”

Harry grinned and pinched at Nasta’s thighs, they were so solid that he couldn’t even get a purchase on the skin, let alone any fat.

“Yeah I can see that, look at the size of them!” Harry teased. “Mine however.”

Harry grabbed a handful of flesh and jiggled it about.

“Come off it.” Blaise said with a laugh. “That’s all pregnancy weight; it’ll fall off you when our son is born.”

Harry patted the baby bulge in pride. “Either our boy is going to be ten pounds born or I’m going to be keeping some of this weight for myself. It wouldn’t surprise me, after all not only am I eating more now that I’m pregnant, but Max is such a genius cook that I can’t help but gorge myself on his delicious meals.”

Max wrapped an arm around his shoulder and nudged him lightly, even though he had a faint blush on his neck from the praise.

“No lie there.” Blaise added. “Our son will be the size of a house before he’s three.”

“If I carry on I’ll be the size of a house before he’s born.”

“That’s not true.” Nasta said seriously as they walked into the kitchen. “You’ll be a small shed at best.”

“Just more of me to love.” Harry replied, shrugging a shoulder. He let out a surprised giggle when Blaise latched onto him and tickled him, digging those slender fingers right into his ticklish sides.

“I think you need a bit more flesh before you even get to kitchen chair stage.”

“Kitchen chair stage?” Max questioned as he pulled down four very large, tall mugs.

Blaise nodded seriously. “It’s where you get so big your body fat eats a kitchen chair.”
That made all of them laugh and Harry wiped tears away. “I think Dudley surpassed the kitchen chair stage when he was fourteen.”

“It looked like he had.” Nasta said darkly before he swiped the large bar of chocolate Max had uncovered from one of his cupboards and snapped a large chunk off for all of them.

They all watched Max mix ingredients into a large jug, pouring in hot milk and mixing it with melted chocolate and cocoa powder before pouring it into the mugs and adding whipped cream on top of them, sprinkling the cream with cinnamon and topping it off by shaving off curls of the chocolate bar with a small chocolate grater.

He handed them the tall mugs and watched as they took their first sips. Harry actually moaned at the taste, whilst Blaise sipped his consideringly, Nasta just sipped it once before draining almost the entire mug.

“Why have you never made these before?!?” Harry demanded.

Max shrugged. “They’re a comfort drink that I usually make in the winter to stave off the cold when I’m fed up of coffee and want something a little more luxurious than tea.”

“I say he’s been holding out on us.” Blaise stage whispered to Harry.

Harry nodded seriously. “I think he should be forced to make us these when we demand them.”

“I’d do that anyway.” Max protested.

Harry and Blaise looked at each other with grins, then to Max. Nasta chuckled deeply.

“You should have just accepted the ‘punishment’.” He told the younger, but bigger man. “Now they’ll think of something else.”

Max smacked himself in the face and groaned. “Damn my treacherous mouth.”
Harry and Blaise teased Max until Nasta was laughing uncontrollably. Harry was happy in that moment, but there was a sense of shadow at the very corner of his mind, an awful, looming knowledge that sometime soon, he would have to tell all of his mates everything that he had had to go through in his childhood. He didn’t like it, but that didn’t matter because he would be forced to tell them whether he liked it or not, he just couldn’t wait for everything to be over and done with and for them to never speak of it again.

Blaise had been told of what had happened to Harry by Nasta whilst Harry had been comforted by Max on the stairs. Blaise had gone home that night reluctantly as Harry climbed into bed with Nasta on one side of him and Max on the other. Max had the biggest bed that Harry had ever seen and that included the magically enlarged one at Hogwarts.

Draco had come over the next day and he had been told by Max whilst Nasta tugged Harry upstairs for a lengthy bath together. They had heard Draco’s yells, screams and destruction even though they were on the opposite side of the house. All of them had known that Draco would take the news the worst, his temper was inconsolable.

Harry had been dried and dressed by Nasta, who held him tightly as they walked down the stairs. Max was in the kitchen supporting a swollen and bloody lip. He smiled wanly at them even as Harry gasped in surprise.

Nasta deftly sunk a single claw into his own arm and held it out to Max who smiled thankfully and sealed his mouth over the bleeding cut. When he pulled away, his lip was healed.

“I sent Draco home. He was in no state to see you, Harry.” Max told him. “I told him that he couldn’t come back until he was calm and thinking rationally.”

Harry nodded silently and sat down on Max’s lap. He kissed the place where the cut had been and rested his head against Max’s chin.

“I can’t believe he hit you.”

“It was only because I stood in his way of going to see you. I knew you wouldn’t have wanted to see him like that, he was too angry and he wasn’t thinking properly.”

Max cuddled him and kissed the space of skin between his temple and his cheek, beside his eye, and he nuzzled him gently.
“I couldn’t have him shouting who knows what at you whilst you’re pregnant, hell I wouldn’t let him do it anyway. He was angry and he was in no fit state to see you, pregnant or otherwise. He was looking for a target to unleash his anger upon and I feared that it would be you, so I made myself his target.”

“He still shouldn’t have hit you. I’ll speak to him about his anger problems.”

“We can put him in for anger management classes.” Nasta suggested. “He might resent it, but if it helps him with his anger problems then I really don’t care. He can’t go around hitting us just because he’s angry.”

“I’ll speak to him about it.” Max said as he rubbed his head against Harry’s. “If he refuses out right then we’ll have to think of something else.”

“If he does refuse then I’ll speak to Severus.” Harry put in. “If anyone can sort Draco out it’s him.”

Harry was so unused to just lounging about all day every day that it took him a week before he stopped waking up at half six every morning to start chores he didn’t have. He had no classes and no endless list of chores to do; he didn’t ache from exhaustion at the end of every day and he was so well fed that he really had gained weight that he was sure would stay on after his son was born.

Max and Nasta still had to go to work, but there was always someone in the house with him. Blaise came over often and even Marianna came to visit him and her first grandchild. Nasta’s brother, Sanex, had shown up a couple of times and together with Caesar they had almost burnt the carpet from Max’s living room floor and had almost set the settee alight.

Myron had hit Caesar until Harry thought the man had gone unconscious, but he had just curled around his Father’s feet begging for forgiveness for his stupidity.

Myron had forgiven Caesar by hugging him and giving him a kiss to the forehead, but Myron had then been unable to stop himself from holding on tightly to Harry and licking and sniffing at him. Harry then realised exactly how close to hurting him that Caesar and Sanex had been with the stupid stunt the two older, more childish men had pulled. He had been sitting on the settee that had almost gone up in flames, very close to where Caesar had aimed his wand, a few inches over and he would have been hit.

Harry had fallen asleep on Myron and had woken up on the man when Nasta flooed home. When told of what had happened, Nasta had immediately jumped on him and after assuring himself that he and the baby were fine, he had yanked his brother away and Harry knew no more, but Sanex had come back in looking thoroughly reprimanded and had apologised once again with his disapproving younger brother looking on.
Harry had been sneaking away from his mates in the dead of night, every night now and he stashed ordinary household items into his roof top nest. Neither of them had noticed a thing yet and Harry wanted to keep it that way. He had warded his nest so thoroughly that nothing was going to get into it. He had tested it out the next time that it had rained and he had sneaked away as soon as he could to find the roof puddled with water, but his nest and the area around it was bone dry and warm and cuddly.

He had wadded it up with more towels, his own, too small, Weasley jumpers from past winters that reminded him of how loved he was at the Weasleys, he had stashed away a couple of Nasta’s trousers and so far the older man hadn’t noticed them gone, but Harry was sure that he would notice as soon as he ran out of clean ones. He had even robbed the front parlour rug, so far it hadn’t been noticed, but as Max liked to lie on it when he wanted to relax, Harry was sure it would be the first thing that was noticed missing, that or the curtains from one of the empty bedrooms which he had also stolen away in the dead of night.

Tonight he creeped out of the bedroom and out to the back garden where he had stashed a large pile of leaves in the orchard and a very, very soft blanket that he had found under Max’s bed. He would use it to wrap the baby in when he was born.

Harry dried the leaves with his wand until they were almost curling at the edges from the heat before he levitated them after him as he unleashed his wings and flew expertly to his nest. He felt the wards around his nest shiver as he passed through them and immediately he was bathed in warmth and comfort.

He dumped his pile of leaves outside of his nest and used them to make a ring around it, pushing them up tight against the smaller ring he had made from towels. The curtains were spread out on the floor and the rug was on top of them, layering up to create softness and warmth.

He laid the blanket carefully to one side, bunching the edges until they made a soft cradle shape, his baby would be swaddled and placed in this blanket before being wrapped up tighter again after he had birthed him.

He needed to build the walls of his nest higher to keep out any chill winds that would make his baby sick, he would also need to layer the floor some more, perhaps that warm duvet that Max had would help. He would snatch it tomorrow night now; he was running out of time. If he stayed any longer then he would be caught, he just knew it.

He glided down to the ground and landed softly, hurrying back into the kitchen and locking the back door quietly. He heard feet on the stairs and knew that he had been noticed missing. He quickly grabbed a glass and filled it with water that Max kept in a filtered jug on the work top.

He gulped some down just as Max padded into the kitchen. His biggest mate let out a relieved sigh and run a hand down his sleep filled, yet panic alert face.

“I found him.” He called out, obviously for Nasta’s benefit as the older man flew into the kitchen and let out his own sigh of relief.

“I only needed a drink.” Harry feigned innocence, looking at them a bit unsurely.
Max melted and strode to him, holding him against that large, muscled chest tightly.

“Of course you’re allowed a drink, Harry, but I keep tumbler glasses in the bathroom for this, so you don’t have to struggle to get up and down the stairs. We were worried.”

“I forgot about that.” Harry lied with a bashful look. “I went down the stairs on my bum and I was going to crawl back up them.”

Nasta shook his head with a smile. “What are we going to do with you?”

“You can take me back up to bed if you want to.” Harry grinned, smothering a yawn with his hand.

“With pleasure.” Max answered, putting the empty glass in the sink and picking him up to carry him back to bed. Harry was asleep before they even made it to the top of the stairs.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

It was Blaise who first noticed that something wasn’t quite right. He had taken a wrong turn to the bathroom and had ended up in the empty, disused bedroom where Harry had been robbing most of his nesting material.

“Didn’t your spare bedroom have fabrics?” He asked as he came back down.

“Huh?” Max eloquently asked as he was immersed in a battle of chess with Draco, who was winning.

“The spare third bedroom is missing every stich of fabric.”

Max looked up then and raised an eyebrow. “Of course it has fabrics, I made sure before you all came here for the summer.”

“Well it doesn’t have any now, there’s no bedding, no curtains and a section of carpet is missing.”
“What?!" Max demanded. “That carpet cost me a fortune!"

He stood up and Harry huddled down and covered his face with his book as Max stormed through the upper level of the house. Max let out a strangled yell and a loud thump was heard, like Max had either gone to his knees or had hit something.

Max stormed back down the stairs and immediately grabbed a handful of floo powder.

“I’m going to kill Caesar; he knows how much I love that carpet!”

Harry let out a silent sigh of relief and he felt his arms go weak. His nest hadn’t been found. He refused to feel bad about Max blaming his brother when his nesting place was in jeopardy.

“Why the hell would Max’s brother steal all the fabric in Max’s spare room?” Draco questioned. He had refused anger management classes, but had accepted talking to Snape about the problem, he had felt awful for hitting Max and had beat himself up for days before coming to apologise.

“You’ve only met Caesar once. Trust me he’d do it just to piss Max off.” Blaise answered.

“Why the spare bedroom though? Why not the Master bedroom?”

“Probably so that Max wouldn’t notice right away and give him time to hide it all.” Harry answered; sticking so close to the truth that not even his eyes would give away his lie.

Nasta took that moment to floo home very early from work. He had another shiny, raw looking burn that covered the entire one side of his leg, shown by the borrowed shorts that he was wearing. His ruined, still smouldering, jeans were thrown over the crook of one arm. It was obvious why he was home so early and Harry whimpered in worry, Nasta gave him a reassuring smile.

“I’m fine. Remember the last time? This burn is the same, just bigger. It'll be gone by tomorrow, the afternoon tops; you forget that I’ve had a million of these burns throughout my career.”

“What caused it this time?” Draco asked concernedly.
“We got a new buck all the way from the Russian reserve. He’s so ferocious that only the experienced handlers are allowed near his enclosure.”

“I thought the enclosures were only for sick dragons.” Harry said questioningly, recalling something that Charlie had told him at the Quidditch world cup.

Nasta looked at him with a prideful smile and Harry flushed a bit in happiness.

“Usually they are, but after this particular dragon ate four baby dragons, one pregnant female and sliced up another buck; we sedated him and quickly put him in an enclosure until we can figure out what the hell to do with him.”

“He ate four baby dragons?” Harry cried out as he unconsciously moved to protect his baby.

Nasta saw him and chuckled. “No one is going to eat the baby, Harry, even if we are part dragon.”

“What breed is he?” Blaise asked.

“Ukrainian Ironbelly. He’s the first one to ever come to the Brecon Dragon Reserve as a permanent addition and not just come to us on loan for the breeding season. It’s why we agreed to take him in, but he’s decided to be a massive pain in the arse.”

Harry giggled and Nasta looked at him with a grin. He flumped down beside him and tucked him under an arm that was soot stained, like it had gone too close to a flame, which was actually much too close to the truth for Harry’s comfort.

“Where’s Max?” Nasta asked looking around as if he had just noticed that Max wasn’t there.

“He went to kill Caesar.” Blaise replied helpfully.

Nasta cocked an eyebrow in silent question.
"He stole all of the fabrics from Max’s spare bedroom and cut out a section of carpet. Apparently Max loves the carpet and he has gone to chase his brother all around their parent’s house."

"Sometimes I wonder if I’m the only sane one in this family.” Nasta sighed.

Draco snorted. “Says the man who comes home with half his leg looking like a pan roasted drumstick.”

Harry giggled again, joined by Blaise, who slid into Max’s vacated seat and made his chess move for him. Draco grinned as he turned back to face his opponent and made his move, which took out Max/Blaise’s knight.

Harry went back to his book and Nasta soaked up all the peace he could whilst it was being offered, he closed his eyes with his arms around Harry, the only sounds were of Draco and Blaise moving pieces, cursing as they lost a piece or cheering as they made a good move, Harry turning a page and his soft, almost inaudible breaths. It was quiet, peaceful, but it wasn’t silent and Nasta thanked every deity out there for that. The peace he could handle, welcomed it even, but he never, ever wanted to hear the silence again, the lonely silence where he could hear his own heart beating in his empty, one person apartment. He never wanted to go back to that ever again.

The floo turned green and spat out a foul looking Max. He took a deep breath and surveyed them all looking at him. He smiled a bit tightly, but genuinely.

“Caesar swears blind that he never stole my carpet, like that little weasel wasn’t guilty right from the off.”

Max then noticed Nasta’s leg and the look of horror on his face brought a sigh from Nasta’s lips.

“I’m fine. It’s already been treated at the Reserve; I’m in no pain whatsoever. It’ll be gone and healed by tomorrow, but I have been given the week off to ‘recover’ from my injury.”

Max nodded and clapped his hands together happily. “Who’s for an early dinner?” He asked rhetorically as he immediately went for the kitchen without waiting for their answers.

Harry breathed easier knowing that his nest hadn’t been found, that none of them had any idea that he was even building a nest. Caesar was going back to Amelle in America in two days, one if the rest of today was discounted. Hopefully Max would carry on thinking that his brother had ripped up the carpet in the spare room when really it had been him to make his nest more comfortable. Max could have the segment of carpet back once he was finished with it, it would slot right back into place, but Harry also loved that carpet and he had wanted it for his nest, surely Max would forgive him for it, it had gone to a good cause after all.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------

Draco hadn’t been allowed to stay for much longer than it took them to eat dinner, his parents had expected him home, but Blaise had been allowed to curl into bed with them as his Mother knew exactly how hard it was for all of them to stay apart from each other.

Harry shot awake at three in the morning, his Dracken instincts taking over as he crawled out of the bed, but it was so warm in the bed and tonight had been unseasonably cold. The duvet would make a brilliant addition to his nest. But his mates would know that he had taken it, they would catch him if he just took the duvet from their bodies as they slept, but he wanted it for his nest! What to do?!

Harry silently moved to his hiding place and uncovered the tea towel that Draco had wiped his hands on. It had lingering traces of Draco’s scent on it. He pulled out Max’s oven gloves, which the big man was bound to miss that very morning and the freshly laundered bathroom mat too.

He rushed as fast as he dared down the stairs and out into the back garden, he flew up to his nest and placed his new items into it without arranging them, he would be missed sooner rather than later on this cold night, his missing body temperature would rouse the other men.

A gust of wind had Harry holding his pyjamas tighter around himself, he wasn’t dressed to be outside, he hadn’t even put shoes or socks on and his bare feet were like ice.

He glided down to the grass and shivered as his feet started burning with the cold. It felt like he was standing in snow and not on wet grass.

He made it back into the house and locked the back door again before he crawled up the stairs on his hands and knees, his bump rubbing across each stair as he went. He crawled into the bathroom to wash his hands and feet from evidence of his nightly trip outside, his feet were muddy from the wet ground and his hands were filthy from landing heavily on the roof. He sent up a prayer that he had remembered his wand to remove the filthy footprints that he had left on the kitchen floor.

He cleaned himself off, but when he went to stand he went very dizzy. He caught himself on the sink before he could injure himself or the baby by hitting the floor. His stomach clenched and he knew a moment before he did that he was going to be sick.

He retched into the toilet and he couldn’t stop, he shivered as a wave of cold gripped his very bones and made his eyes roll into his head. He let out a distressed call, noting that it was higher pitched and more shrill that usual, before his head bounced on the tile floor, knocking him unconscious. The last thing he heard were roars and the splintering of heavy wood from the bedroom.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------
Chapter Thirty-Seven – Blind Panic

Nasta shot up from the bed as soon as the first vibrations of Harry’s distress call reached his ears. He heard the shrill, panic stricken call a fraction of a second later and his wings burst from his back in a shower of blood, his claws ripped from his fingers and his fangs tore through his gums as he ran faster than he ever had before to reach Harry that little bit quicker.

He heard the bedframe behind him splinter and took a moment to look over and see that one of Max’s bright blue wings had taken half a bedpost with it when its owner had shot up in the bed.

He wrenched the bathroom door from its hinges and threw it behind him, even though it had been halfway open already and it was then that he saw Harry, slumped on the floor, his lower legs trapped under his body. He had most probably been on his knees and had fallen backwards onto them when he lost consciousness. He took in the vomit in the toilet and it didn’t take a genius to figure out that Harry must have woken up with an upset stomach and had passed out on the bathroom floor.

Nasta carefully scooped Harry into his arms as Max brushed past him to get to the airing cupboard to find a clean flannel. The large man wetted it under the tap before he dabbed at Harry’s sweat soaked and vomit flecked face as Blaise flushed the toilet of its contents.

The lot of them were calming down now that no intruder had been found harming their submissive, now that they understood that Harry’s panic had most likely come from vomiting so violently that he had passed out.

Max led the way back to the bedroom and snatched his wand from the bedside table, giving it a casual wave and repairing the bed with a soft incantation. Blaise pulled the duvet back onto the bed and folded a corner so that Nasta could lay Harry down carefully before the smaller dominant covered Harry up and tucked him in.

“We’d better call a Healer.” Nasta sighed as he run an adrenaline shaking hand through his black
“Harry has a bad bump on the back of his head, probably from hitting it on the tile floor when he lost consciousness.”

“We can't risk anyone finding out that he’s a Dracken.” Max fretted. “A Healer could figure out what he is in a minute flat with a simple blood spell!”

“We could always call the Healing Halls for the on duty Healer.” Nasta pointed out quietly.

“They’re for serious emergencies.” Max answered.

“They’re there for whomever needs them.” Nasta corrected. “We can’t go to a normal Healer with this and I’d much rather that Harry be seen by someone.”

“Madam Pomfrey already knows.” Blaise offered instead.

“But where does she go for the school holidays?” Max asked wringing his big hands together as he looked, stricken faced, at their little lover unconscious in the big bed.

“I…I don’t know. She must live somewhere though; surely we can find a floo address.”

“Unless she’s taken herself off of the floo network for a summer of peace.” Max answered.

“You stop being so pessimistic.” Nasta ordered of Max. “You calm down.” He directed at Blaise. “If anyone will know where she is, it’s Dumbledore and as Headmaster and close friend of Harry’s he gave us his floo address. We’ll ask him and if that fails, then we will call the Counsel.”

Nasta left the other two to care for Harry, or rather just watch over him as there wasn’t much else they could do, as he trekked down to the living room and made an urgent floo call at half past two in the morning to the Headmaster of Hogwarts.

--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------

Harry woke up with a groan. He was in bed and covered with at least two duvets and another three or four blankets. He was sweltering hot and every inch of his body was coated with sweat. He was sticky and uncomfortable and the only thing he wanted was a nice, long shower so he could feel clean again.

He shoved the mountain of blankets off of himself and cupped his baby bulge, though to cup something indicated that it was small and fit in the palms of his hands, his bump did no such thing. His baby boy was either so big he was making Harry look like a whale, or he really liked his room to move about as Harry looked utterly ridiculous no matter what his mates said to contrary.

Putting his feet onto the floor, Harry carefully padded to the bathroom and stripped off the fleecy pyjamas he was wearing, they were his winter pyjamas, entirely too hot to wear in the middle of July! He hopped right into the shower and started washing the gelled sweat from his lower back.

He didn’t stay in there too long, just long enough to wash his body clean and to give his hair a quick shampooing. He dried himself and dressed himself back into the fleecy pyjamas, the only clothes he had because he had forgotten to pick any up in haste to reach the shower.

He was feeling very tired again, like he had only slept for an hour or so when he knew it was probably more than that. He shoved several blankets off of the bed and found their main duvet. He rubbed it against his face and a feeling that he recognised all too well by now came over him. He had to get the duvet to his nest. It had to be there, it smelt like all of his mates, all their scents mingled together.

He could hear voices downstairs, he couldn’t go down that way, he’d be caught and his nest found out. His gaze went to the window and he slid it open easily. He climbed out and let himself fall before unsheathing his wings and fluttering them to rise again. He landed on the roof with the duvet and he threw it into his nest, which had grown considerably, to sort out later when he had more time to do so, the house was awash with activity and he couldn’t risk being caught.

He flew back into the window, tucking his wings in at the last possible moment, but he miscalculated and he caught a wing bone against the window frame and he tucked himself up and rolled on the floor biting his lip to keep in his scream of agony. Hell that had hurt! That had hurt so fucking much! It felt like he had been shot.

He shut the window and crawled to the bed and lay down in it, tucking just the one blanket over him as he rocked himself slowly as the pain tapered off to a lingering soreness and he fell asleep quickly, thoroughly worn out from his quick and sporadic flight to his nest.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Max tilted his head as he heard a thump from upstairs, no one else had seemingly heard anything, he couldn’t smell anything out of place, but he couldn’t just let it drop, what if something was wrong?

He looked around the kitchen and noticed with a sigh of irritation that Caesar and Sanex were missing. If they were ripping up anymore of his carpet he’d gut the both of them. A loud laugh had him looking over to his Dad and Aneirin Delericey, who were thoroughly enjoying themselves.

He caught Nasta’s eye and indicated that he was going to check on Harry. He jogged up the stairs; he heard Caesar and Sanex giggling like children in the living room. If they had done anything to Harry…
The bedroom door was open and he felt his large body clench like a giant fist. He pushed it all the way open and saw Harry still fast asleep like Madam Pomfrey had said he would be, but the blankets that were bringing up his core temperature were in a large pile on the floor.

He growled and went about covering Harry back up. It was as he was tucking Harry back in under all of the blankets that he realised that the main duvet was missing. He checked under the single blanket that had remained on Harry, under the bed and in the wardrobe before realising that it was missing. If this is what Caesar and Sanex were giggling about he'd break their little bodies. They knew as well as the rest of them that Harry needed to remain warm!

He stalked to the living room to find it abandoned with no sign of the missing duvet. He went into the kitchen and again the two were missing.

“What’s wrong?” Nasta asked him, noticing his agitation and growing anger, which brought everyone else’s attention to him.

“What are Caesar and Sanex?” He hissed.

“They decided to floo to Sanex’s apartment.” His Mother told him. “Why?”

“They decided to strip Harry of all of his blankets and steal away the main duvet before they left.”

“They did what?” Nasta growled leaping up and pacing, his fists clenched.

“I can’t see them doing that.” Kimberly stuck up for the missing men. “They know how sick Harry got, they know that he needs to remain warm, they wouldn’t do something to deliberately harm Harry or to hinder his recovery.”

“As much as I hate to say it, my brother wouldn’t have done anything to make Harry sicker and I don’t think Caesar would have either, he has his own mate, a pregnant mate, he knows how dangerous uncovering Harry would be.” Nasta answered after he had calmed down and thought more rationally about the situation once his Dracken had been pushed to the side.

“I wouldn’t have thought they would have either.” Draco answered. He got on well with both of the other men and he couldn’t see anyone in this house doing such a thing to Harry.

“They were giggling in the living room as I went up to check on Harry, a bit convenient that they left before I came back down.”
“This is the second time that you have accused your brother of stealing something, Maximilius.” Myron said in his guttural voice from the kitchen table. “First the curtains and section of missing carpet that Caesar swears blind that he never took and now your duvet, have you ever stopped and considered that perhaps it is Harry stealing these things, all of them fabrics, to build his nest?”

Max blinked. “We would know that he was building a nest, he’d tell us.”

Myron chuckled and he was joined by both of his mates, Aneirin, Kimberly and Alexander.

“You have a lot to learn, Maxie.” Alexander laughed at his clueless grandson. “A submissive will not tell their mate that they are building a nest until it is completed. It’s a territorial thing. Harry’s nest is his. It’s his sanctuary, his birthing place, his creation. Even when he tells you he has a nest he will not tell you where it is and you will certainly not be permitted entrance to it.”

“What if we stumble upon it by accident?” Blaise asked.

“If by some slim chance you actually do find his nest before it’s completed then Harry will destroy the old nest and start building another one in a different location, this can be quite dangerous as no place will ever be as perfect for his nest as the first place he starts building it. If he has nested close to your home, in your boundaries then he is safer than if he hadn’t, if Harry can’t find another suitable place on your grounds then he will search for one elsewhere, without the protection of the wards you have around your home.”

“So you really think that Harry is building a nest? He was fast asleep still when I went up to check on him.”

“I’m not saying he definitely is.” Myron answered diplomatically. “Just that he could be, which is a better explanation for your missing fabrics than Caesar and Sanex stealing them. But remember that whatever you boys do, you do not speak about this within earshot of Harry. You definitely don’t become foolish enough to outright ask him, you don’t follow him if he goes off on his own, just leave him be. If you ‘accidentally on purpose’ find his nest, he will still move it and he will be angry about it, very angry.”

“That goes for everyone in this room, Caesar and Sanex when we see them next as well.” Alexander warned. “It doesn’t matter who stumbles upon his nest, if it is found, it will be moved.”
Everyone nodded seriously, but Max felt burning curiosity build inside him. Was Harry building a nest? Where the hell was it? Was it in the orchard? Perhaps the small cave that he had found a month or so after he had moved in? He was so curious to find out, as was everyone else, but he swore he would not go looking for Harry’s nest if he was building one. Harry would tell them as soon as he was finished, long before he would give birth, that he had a nest. He would hunt for it then when Harry wouldn’t move his nest if they found it.

But by the looks on Blaise and Draco’s faces he would have to watch them, he caught Nasta’s eye and nodded to their two younger subordinates. Nasta nodded back, he had seen the looks on their faces as well, they would both watch the younger two and stop them if they even so much as started scenting for Harry’s nest.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Harry groggily slipped down the stairs on his bum, moving slowly and keeping a death grip on the banister rungs to balance himself out and to stop him from toppling down the stairs headfirst.

He reached the third from the bottom step and hauled himself up using the banister, his feet firmly on the bottom of the stairs. He let out a heavy sigh and straightened up, heading for the kitchen and the gorgeous smells emanating from it.

Max was happily cooking at the oven, stirring a large pot of something, he was wearing a dark green apron, Harry smiled at that. Nasta was sitting in a chair at the table, a bunch of paperwork around him. Blaise was once more translating his book, he looked extremely frustrated as he bunched up a piece of parchment in his hand and thumped it on the table top repeatedly.

Harry looked to Draco, who was looking back at him. Relief shining through those silver eyes at seeing him standing there. Harry wondered how long he actually been sleeping for.

Draco stood up and drew attention to himself but the blond didn’t care as he rushed around the table and scooped him into a large bear hug. Harry laughed and held onto Draco tightly. He loved the affectionate side to Draco, the side he had never seen when they were younger. Harry supposed that the blond had gotten the soft side of himself from his Mother, who had seemed to enjoy holding her son close. Where ever Draco had gotten it from Harry was certain that it hadn’t been from his Father.

“You’re awake!” He said happily.

Harry hummed in agreement, nodding his head. “Who decided to bury me alive in blankets?”

“Madam Pomfrey and Severus Snape did.” Max answered as he watched them with a grin. “Your core temperature dropped to thirty-three degrees Celsius.”

“That is a serious drop in temperature for a Dracken, Harry.” Nasta told him. “Because our core temperatures are averagely higher, we can’t drop below thirty-five degrees without becoming very sick. That you are heavily pregnant with a child makes the situation a lot more dangerous than if you hadn’t been pregnant.”

“Oh. Why did my temperature start to cool down?”

“We don’t know. Severus suspected extreme exposure to the elements, but Madam Pomfrey believes that the combination of vomiting and the cold bathroom air, not to mention the freezing bathroom tiles you were lying on caused your body to go into shock, lowering your core temperature.”

“Is the baby alright?” Harry asked, cupping his belly again feeling the fluttering movements inside.

“The baby was never in any danger, Harry, you were. You could have slipped into a coma.”

Harry shivered feeling cold right through to his spine that he was sure was the gravity of what he had just been told, but he was wrapped in a thick blanket and settled onto Nasta’s thick thighs nonetheless as Max served up five bowls of steaming soup and a basket of freshly baked bread that was still warm.

Feeling famished Harry ate as quickly as he could without choking, making sure to keep his arms and elbows from knocking Nasta’s arms so they could both eat before the soup went cold.

After the soup Max served them Spaghetti Bolognese, this time being accompanied by slices of garlic baguette. His mates watched him in slight awe as he polished off his food and Max gave him a second plateful, which he again ate everything, doing his best to clean the plate without resorting to licking it clean with his tongue.

Max chuckled happily as he pulled a searing hot black cherry crumble from the oven and gave Harry a big spoonful, covering it with warm custard and watching as his mates, his family, ate the food he had spent the afternoon making and cooking for them. True he liked cooking for himself and he often had his family around for odd lunches, but cooking every meal day in day out for people who enjoyed it, for people he loved and who loved him, it just felt right. He couldn’t wait until they had a house full of kids that he could feed and perhaps teach to cook as well.

After his second bowl of crumble Harry began feeling sleepy again. He turned in Nasta’s lap and snuggled into his blanket tighter, curling up as best as he could against that large chest, he drifted into a light doze. He could feel the movement under and around him, he could hear the soothing voices of his mates around him, it was relaxing and comfortable.
One small word ruined that peace and contentedness, one small word had his eyes snapping open and alertness flooding into his body. He looked at Blaise who had mentioned the word and he could hear his heart beating a thousand times faster, they couldn’t know, surely they couldn’t know.

“What did you just say?” He asked, his voice sounding groggy even though he felt wide awake.

“I didn’t mean to wake you Harry.” Blaise told him apologetically. Harry didn’t want to hear apologies.

“What did you say?” He repeated.

“I was just asking the others if maybe you had told them if you had felt the urge to build a nest yet.”

“Oh. No I haven’t.” Harry lied, settling down. They didn’t know. He breathed a bit easier; they didn’t know they were just curious. Curiosity he could live with, as long as they didn’t find out about his nest.

“Go back to sleep, love, I’ll make sure the others remain quiet.” Nasta soothed, rubbing his back lightly, pulling him back to sleep.

As soon as Nasta was sure that Harry was sleeping again he glared at Blaise.

“That was an incredibly dangerous thing to say! You were told not to mention it within earshot of him! His Dracken will pick up any mention of you-know-what, no matter how small!”

“I didn’t realise.” Blaise defended himself. “I thought that if he was asleep it would be alright.”

“Well it’s not. No one mentions it at all from now on, we can't risk him overhearing us or mistaking something we have said as a threat to his ‘special place’. From his reaction just now we can guess that he has started building one and he is extremely protective of it, we can’t risk him moving it, no one goes looking for it, no one mentions it, Harry will tell us when he’s finished, until then we leave it be.”

The three other dominants nodded and went back to their various tasks, Blaise translating his book,
Max was washing and putting away the dishes, Draco was practising a spell, using a book he had placed on the far side of the kitchen as a target and Nasta was watching Harry sleep, one hand on the baby bump that was growing inexorably as Harry moved into his sixth month. He hoped desperately that all of their plans didn’t go to waste and that Harry didn’t start nesting before his seventeenth birthday in a week and a half’s time. It was a race now to reach Harry’s birthday before Harry finished his nest. They had put a lot of effort into it to make Harry feel special. The birthday party was also doubling up as a baby shower sort of party at Mrs Weasley’s insistence; she wanted to gift Harry all of the baby clothes and things that she had knitted for him in one go. Nasta just hoped that Harry wasn’t too overwhelmed by it all, nothing brought on the start of a labour quicker than a surprise party, except perhaps a vindaloo curry.
Harry giggled with Blaise as they threw yet another parchment ball at Draco, who grunted and twitched in his sleep. The big blond had fallen asleep on the settee after admitting to a restless night of worrying over his exam results. It made Harry dread this time next year when their final N.E.W.T results would be winging their way to them in the beak of an official owl. These exams were like practice exams for next year exams, they didn’t really matter, if Draco was like this over mock N.E.W.T exams, then what was he going to be like with the real thing.

Blaise used his wand and a whispered incantation to levitate several parchment balls that had accumulated around Draco to hover over the sleeping blond, Blaise cancelled the spell and the parchment balls fell harmlessly onto Draco’s sleeping form which once again twitched from the onslaught of light, crumpled up balls.

Harry smothered a giggle and had to give up as he turned to hide his face in Blaise’s chest, one of his mate’s arms coming to hold him more securely against his body.

“What do you think, Mio Bello, does Draco look better covered in parchment?”

Harry didn’t trust himself to speak; he just nodded his head against Blaise’s chest, biting a fist to keep from waking up the source of their amusement.
Blaise scrunched up another piece of parchment and threw it gently through the air. It sailed up in an arch before landing with a dry scratching sound on Draco’s pristine hair. The blond made a small sound and slept on.

Harry peeked out from Blaise’s shirt and twitched his wand to levitate the parchment balls that had either missed their target because they had been laughing too hard to properly aim or had fallen off due to the alarming amount of parchment balls that had covered Draco’s lower body and the settee.

Harry moved the balls to hover over Draco’s face before he lowered them to gently rest on the blond’s head, covering him nearly head to foot in parchment.

Harry choked back a laugh and snatched a piece of parchment that hadn’t already been scrunched up and started folding it like he had used to do in Primary school to make a crude aeroplane. He launched his plane at Draco and it swirled through the air before miraculously landing in the pile of balls.

Harry and Blaise cracked up and tried muffling their laughter with each other’s sleeves.

It was this scene that Nasta walked in on. He looked to the two of them having silent hysterics on one settee, to Draco covered in parchment balls and the lone plane on the opposite settee.

“Do I even want to know why you have buried Draco in parchment?”

“We thought we’d make his dream of being eternalised on parchment come true.” Harry answered immediately, before he and Blaise shared a look and broke down.

“Somehow I doubt that this is what he meant.” Nasta replied though his lips twitched to form a smile.

“Words can always be misconstrued by people who hear what they want to hear.” Harry pointed out innocently.

“And that is what causes arguments and misunderstandings.” Nasta told them. “Draco is not going to be happy when he wakes up to find you have covered him in parchment.”

“Nah he’s a good sport.” Blaise answered with a grin. “He’ll see the funny side of it.”

“Stupidity doesn’t suit you, Blaise love.” Nasta said back before leaving the room to their laughter, he shook his head; it was nice to see them having a bit of fun and for the house to be filled with laughter, he just wished it wasn’t at Draco’s expense, the blond could hold a grudge like no other, particularly if his hair was involved.
“How did you make that plane, Harry?” Blaise asked.

“I’ll show you!”

Harry got another sheet of parchment and folded it into another plane, he then flattened the parchment back out and got Blaise to fold along the lines that Harry had already made. Blaise still managed to cock it up but he did get a resemblance to a plane.

The older boy threw it and instead of swirling and floating through the air like Harry’s it launched like a spear at Draco and stuck straight up in the mountain of parchment. The both of them sniggered like children.

“We should have coloured it in to make a flag.” Harry said wistfully.

Blaise waved his wand and a small, crude picture of Harry and Blaise appeared on the plane. Harry couldn’t help it as he started laughing, loudly.

Blaise placed a hand over his mouth, but was laughing too hard himself to keep it there very well, the result was Draco bolting up right, wading through the hundred or so parchment balls that covered him.

“What in the name of Circe have you two been doing?” He demanded in a sexy, sleep roughened voice.

“Harry was helping me with my aim, you know for next year’s Quidditch season. I am the Slytherin Chaser and we have to be on top form, what with Harry possibly being ruled out it’s our only hope to win the cup for Slytherin a final time before we graduate.”

Harry huffed. “Don’t count on it, love. I’m still the Captain of the Gryffindor team, I’m going to be coaching them and Ginny is an amazing duel talent what with being a brilliant Chaser and Seeker.”

“She has nothing on you, love and you have beaten Draco by the tips of your fingers, she’ll be no match for our Seeker.”

“Maybe, but Draco has gotten bigger, broader and heavier since then and he’s still growing, what’s to say he won’t become too heavy to be quick enough?”
Draco stood up and shook the balls easily off of him as he stalked to Harry with a smirk and a predatory look in his eyes. Harry eeped and made to move off of the settee but Blaise held him gently, not that he could get off the settee without help anyway.

“I’m not sure I heard him correctly, Blaise. I thought he said that Slytherin had no chance because I was too heavy.”

“That is what, Prezioso said, yes.”

“Hmm, so I wasn’t hearing things brought on by my lack of oxygen at being buried alive in parchment.”

Harry couldn’t help the small chuckle that escaped him at the mention of Draco suffocating under the parchment.

“It sounds like he finds it funny as well. Hmm, what to do with him.”

“You could let me go?” Harry hedged hopefully. “I am after all heavily pregnant; it’s bound to mess with my mind.”

The two laughed at him and the sound sent shivers down Harry’s spine. Draco slipped onto the settee beside him and began massaging Harry’s arms and shoulders, laying soft kisses on his neck. Harry unconsciously bared more of it for Draco’s soft, dry lips.

“Shall we let him go, Blaise? He is heavily pregnant and it has messed with his mind.”

“True, but I think that our little Amore knows exactly what he is doing. I don’t think our child could be messing him up so much as to laugh at your imminent death.”

Harry chuckled again, but swallowed it as he realised that he was making things worse for himself as Blaise nuzzled his nose around by his cheek and ear.

“And still he laughs at the prospect of my death. I think we should teach him some humility.” Draco stated in a mock arrogant voice that was an echo of his younger years.
Harry actually giggled a bit as he heard it; it reminded him of the surety in Draco’s voice as he asked for his hand of friendship on their very first train ride. Draco had been such an arrogant, slicked up, knob back then.

Draco’s fingers danced over his sides and Harry squirmed and let out a shriek of laughter as he was tickled, writhing against Blaise as the older man held him strongly so he didn’t do the baby any accidental damage.

Nasta peeked in on them, drawn to the room by Harry’s shrieks, before shaking his head and leaving them too it, going back to filling out the transfer forms for the Ukrainian Ironbelly who was now a permanent member of their reserve. Sometimes he hated being a senior handler, he never had this much paperwork before he had made the senior team.

Harry rocked back against Blaise and gasped in pain as he knocked his shoulder against Blaise’s shoulder. Both of his mates were on him within seconds, pulling his shirt from him and sniffing and licking him. The both of them remained on his right shoulder, the same shoulder that had been attached to the wing that he had smashed against the window frame.

“Harry, your shoulder is bruised, what happened?”

“I don’t know, it just started hurting when I knocked it just now.”

“You must have injured yourself when you fell on the bathroom floor, can you remember if you knocked your shoulder against the sink whilst you were being sick?”

“No, I don’t remember a thing from that night. I don’t even remember getting up.” He fibbed.

“Come on, let’s get you to Nasta, you need to get this sorted, love.”

Harry was pulled from the settee and worried his bottom lip. What if Nasta realised what had caused his bruise?

“Nasta, are you busy?” Blaise asked as he peeked into the kitchen to see paperwork stacked neatly in piles and Nasta looking at him expectantly, quill poised over the parchment.

“I’m never too busy for you, Blaise Caru. What’s the matter?”
Nasta put his quill down as all three of the younger members of the mateship came into the kitchen and Harry was gently placed on his lap. His eyebrow went into his hairline in question.

“Sniff, just by here,” Draco instructed pointing to, but not touching, a place on the back of Harry’s shoulder, near his wing joint.

Nasta didn’t question them, he just did as the others bid him and he quickly found the scent of burst capillaries under Harry’s skin. Harry was bruised.

“What happened?” He asked as he stood up with Harry in his arms, reaching for the cupboard that Max kept all of his potions in. He took out the bruise salve and sat back down, placing Harry on the table top.

“I don’t know. I knocked it just now and it started hurting.” Harry replied.

“There isn’t a bruise on your back.” Nasta said confusedly, lightly pressing on the skin, he bent forward and sniffed again and he could clearly smell the bruise. “Are you wearing a glamour charm, Harry?”

“No.” Harry snorted. “Like I would bother to waste the magic, you’d smell the damage anyway.”

“Pull your wings out.” Nasta instructed with a light curiosity.

Harry did as he was told and pulled out his white wings with his multi-coloured scales. Nasta sniffed close to his shoulder and quickly found the bruise low down on his wing bone where he had knocked it against the window frame.

“It isn’t your shoulder that’s bruised, it’s your wing. Harry, how did you bruise your wing? Have you been walking around with your Dracken attributes on show?”

“Only a few times.” Harry replied, coming to the conclusion that them thinking that he had been walking around in Dracken form was a lot better than them finding out that he had been flying up to the roof and back down whilst four slash five months pregnant.
“You must have banged it against something.” Nasta shook his head and kissed the bruised area before smearing it with paste. “You’ll have to keep your wings out now for the rest of the day so the salve has time to work into your skin, it takes longer to be absorbed in Dracken form, so it’ll be a while.”

Harry nodded and after the salve was rubbed in, he scooted off the table and into Nasta’s lap. Harry kissed him happily and gave him a hug.

“Thank you for taking care of me.” Harry said sincerely. After the baby was born he’d tell them everything, the whole truth about him stealing their stuff, but for now it was too dangerous, he couldn’t risk them finding his nest. His nest was not to ever be compromised!

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

The first thing Max did when he got home was rush to Harry and sniff at the bruise salve on his wing.

“What happened?” He asked seriously.

“How the hell did you smell the bruise from over there?!” Harry replied.

“I didn’t. I smelt the bruise salve, I brew this potion twice a week, I can recognise the scent of it unconsciously. What happened, Harry?”

“I’m not sure. It only started hurting when I knocked it and Draco and Blaise found the scent of the bruise and Nasta found the actual bruise and he treated it. I don’t know how I got it.”

“You must have been in Dracken form whilst you done it, it’s on your wing.”

“I’ve been walking around in Dracken form. I love the freedom of it and I can feel the baby more. It makes me feel closer to him.”

Max smiled indulgently and laid his hands on the baby bump, laying the side of his face on the bump. He twisted his head and kissed it, just below Harry’s belly button.
“You are alright though?”

“I’m fine, the salve has numbed the dull ache that came from knocking it against Blaise and I can now no longer feel it.”

Max nodded and carried him from his curled up position on the settee and carried him into the kitchen where he could hear another argument between Draco and Blaise.

“Alright alright, what’s going on? Who killed whose Mother?”

“They were happily debating who the best author of the wizarding world is, Marco Jiliander or Penelope Vance.” Nasta said grumpsly as he tried to block out the two teens shouting in his ear as he finished his paperwork.

“It’s obviously Penelope Vance.” Draco huffed.

“Take it out of my kitchen, lads. I’m going to start dinner now and poor Nasta needs a break. I have both Vance’s and Jiliander’s books upstairs, they’re on the bookshelf in the bedroom, now go and debate whose better upstairs.”

“Neither of them are better.” Harry joined in. “Everyone knows that Peirce Braunton is the best author of the wizarding world.”

“Pierce Braunton? How can you read that drivel?!” Draco demanded.

“Take it upstairs!” Max demanded, shooing the two younger dominants out of the kitchen and shutting the door that led to the hallway. He kept Harry safely in his arms. “You shouldn’t make things worse!” He said, poking Harry’s nose.

Harry chuckled and happily let himself be set down in the chair opposite Nasta, as close as he could actually get and still have table space. Nasta’s paperwork stretched the entire side of the large, eight seater table.

Max placed a small glass vial down in front of Nasta and nudged him lightly.
“Take that, your headache will be gone in three minutes tops.”

Nasta smiled at him gratefully and downed the vial in one go. Harry grimaced along with his mate.

“How can you swallow all of that in one go?” He asked with his nose scrunched up.

“It’s better than sipping on it and suffering with the abysmal taste of the potion for longer. I’d rather knock it down in one and be over and done with it.”

Harry chuckled and happily watched as Nasta finished his paperwork and Max began preparing his work space for cooking. His biggest mate was sterilising all the work surfaces as if any germs would have gotten on it since he had last cleaned it after breakfast.

Max then prepared all of the ingredients for his planned meal and began cooking with a practised ease and a relaxed posture that spoke volumes of how much he actually enjoyed cooking. At the Dursleys he had liked cooking, it used to make him feel better to know that he could poison them so easily, or at the very least make them very sick, even though he had never actually done so. But Max, Max took cooking enjoyment to a new level; Harry had never enjoyed cooking as much as Max did.

“Are you excited for your birthday next week?” Nasta asked him as he finished his work with a stretch, finally putting his quill down and stoppering his ink bottle.

Harry made a face. “Not really. My birthday was never anything special and I’ve come to not expect much. I don’t really care; it’s just another day of the week for me. I’m only really excited because it’ll be my one year anniversary since I became a Dracken, if I had never become a Dracken, then I’d have nothing. No mates, no family and no baby. I’m not sure if I’d even have friends.”

Harry cupped the bump and looked down at that mention of not having his baby. He tried to imagine being without his mates, without his baby son. The thought seared through him like acid. It hurt terribly.

Nasta took his hands from across the table and tugged on them lightly until Harry looked at him.

“We love you, Harry. We love you and the baby. You were born a Dracken and no one can take that away from you. You have your family, you have us and we all have the baby. Nothing will ever change that.”
Harry smiled and bent forward to kiss Nasta’s mouth, he didn’t even care that the table top dug into his belly.

“Of course we love you.” Max said from the counter. “I think it’s safe to say that we all love one another very much by now. Even Draco has become more relaxed around us. I mean, he actually allowed himself to be taken by both Nasta and myself, that showed a great deal of trust and love, even if he didn’t realise it at the time. Lust alone wouldn’t have conquered his fear of having his virginity taken.”

Harry smiled and nodded. He was so happy himself that nothing could break his happy bubble. Not even the thought of the owls on their way to all students with their exam results.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Harry’s prediction came true. The next morning at breakfast three owls swooped into the kitchen through the open back door. It was an absolutely boiling day and the heat had already forced the five of them to wear shorts or loose trousers and vests. Harry was wearing a pair of small shorts and no shirt, his baby exposed and bare to his mates view. He was hitting his mates’ hands away from his body every now and then as they tried to get a cheeky squeeze.

Draco almost choked on his bite of toast and Blaise sat perfected still. Harry was the first to move as he removed the ties around all three owls’ legs, took the envelopes and watched the owls soar away. He found the envelope with his name on the front and he snapped the wax seal on the back and took out the sheaves of parchment inside.

Along with his book list and required items for his last school year, there was also a note from Professor McGonagall welcoming him back to Hogwarts because he had gotten the minimum requirement in his exams to enter his seventh and final year.

Harry grinned as he looked at his marks. They weren’t spectacular, but he had passed the majority of his classes!

“I take it from your face that you did well, Harry?” Nasta asked.

Harry handed his letter to Nasta, who looked at them with Max hanging over his shoulder, a backup pair of oven gloves slung over his far shoulder, he hadn’t missed his previous ones, he believed that he had put them in the wash and hadn’t gone looking for them yet, Harry was grateful.

“Well done, Harry.” Nasta praised him and Harry swelled under the positive encouragement. “No real failures, except History of Magic.”

“That was the exam that Professor Snape had to escort me out of before my bladder burst in the Great Hall, the one when Max had a chest infection.”

“So a failure due to extenuating circumstances. Well done, Harry, One T, one P, three A’s, three EE’s and two O’s is brilliant.”

“What did you get a T in?” Draco asked in horror.

“Divination because I dropped out last year. It’s an automatic T because I never took any exams.” Harry replied unconcerned. He was glad that he had dropped Divination; it meant he wasn’t in a lesson on his own with just Ron.

“Are you two going to stare at those letters like they’re Howlers or are you going to open them?” Max asked.

Blaise reached forward and plucked his letter from the table top; he snapped the wax and peeled open the envelope. He pulled out the sheaves of parchment and rifled through them until he came to the results. He read it through quickly, his eyes darting over the surface of the parchment, he read it through again only slower before his face split into a grin and he handed the parchment to Nasta.

“All Outstandings. Well done, Blaise. I told you that you wouldn’t get anything else.”

Draco was nearly colourless in his dread at finding out his marks, he slowly snapped the wax and shakily opened the letter, he read it through with baited breath and when he reached the end he let out a sigh of relief. He handed the letter to Nasta proudly.

“Again all Outstandings, as if there was any doubt you’d get anything else.”

“I have to go and show my parents.” Draco said as he scooped up all pieces of parchment and the envelope and walked briskly out of the room.

He jogged back in and gave Harry a kiss to the cheek before leaving again. Harry chuckled and took another helping of sliced oranges.

“‘My Mother would want to know as well. I’ll come back later.”’ Blaise said as he kissed Harry softly on the mouth, which was full of orange segments, before he hugged both Max and Nasta and then he followed Draco to the fireplace in the living room.

“Crazy the both of them.” Max said as he shook his head.

“They’re just excited to know that they have passed their exams and want to let their families know.” Nasta said with a loving smile.

“Like Max said. Both crazy.” Harry put in before swiping a handful of purple grapes.

Max laughed and clapped him on the back; Harry gave him a light glare as his handful of grapes went rolling around the floor.

“You’ll soon join our way of thinking when they both come back and start arguing over who has the best marks, who got the exact top of what subject and who answered the most questions to what degree.” Max reminded.

Nasta groaned and thunked his head on the table. Harry chuckled and patted Nasta’s head.

Nasta pretended to sob into his arms and Harry laughed. He ducked under the table; duck walked the small space between him and Nasta and climbed onto his lap.

Nasta held him tightly and laid his lips against his neck and kept them there as Max walked around them clearing off the table, leaving the fruit bowls for Harry to nibble on. The large man sat next to Nasta, behind Harry, and began trailing his fingers over his back making him shiver and squirm. He let out a giggle as Max’s fingers came too close to his side. Then Harry yawned and it was all over.

“It’s breakfast time!” Harry complained. “I’ve only just gotten up! I don’t want to go back to bed!”

“You’re tired.” Max told him. “The baby will be taking a hell of a lot of energy from you at this stage. You’re five months pregnant.”

“Yeah thanks, I never would have realised that.” Harry snapped sarcastically, indicating his swollen stomach.

Nasta sighed and stood up and Harry wiggled to be put down.

“Stay still, Harry. It’ll just be a short nap for you to recover your lost energy.”

“I’m not tired! I was just yawning!”

Nasta laid his mouth against his neck again, only this time Harry felt the graze of teeth. He stilled immediately.

“Why the hell am I being punished for not wanting to go to bed?! How is that a fair punishment?!” He demanded.

“Because we know you need the sleep.” Max answered as Nasta bit down a bit harder.

They had reached the bedroom and Harry was deposited on the bed and held down as he moved to get right back off of it. Nasta laid his teeth against his wrist this time and bit down sharply.

Harry’s Dracken came to the forefront of his mind and he huddled down in his skin, keening apologetically to his mate. Nasta took his mouth from his arm and tucked him in bed, kissing him gently.

“It seems unfair, Harry, but you do need the rest. I want you happy, of course I do, but I want you to be healthy more. I don’t want you collapsing, even if it means making you unhappy for a little while.”

“I’m not going to collapse.”
“You might.” Max answered. “Many pregnant submissives seem fine one minute and the next they’re on the ground with no idea what has happened to them, their unborn children injured. It happens nearly every year at the Dracken meetings, one submissive is too stubborn, too demanding, their dominant is weak to their mates wishes and whims and the next thing they are facing a miscarriage through their foolishness.”

“The weakness and dizziness can come on at any moment, Harry and it’ll be sudden too. You won't even have a second’s notice to prepare for it, you’ll just black out when your energy drops to nothing.”

“Won't I feel my energy dropping though?” Harry questioned, a little less angry than before.

“No. The baby will sometimes take large chunks at any moment, if you don’t have a large chunk left, you’ll pass out.”

Harry sighed and snuggled into the sheets. He wasn’t tired, but perhaps if he just laid here quietly for an hour they’d let him get back up.

He got a kiss to the cheek from them and they left him alone to sleep. He hadn’t meant to, but Harry found himself actually falling asleep in the peaceful, quiet warmth of the cocoon he had made for himself. He slept for two full hours before he wandered back out to the living room and he snuggled with Max and Nasta, who had been talking together on the settee.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Harry was woken up on the thirty-first of July to a kiss on every part of his face and a laden down tray being placed over his knees.

He stretched and yawned as he looked at them all happily. He was a man now. He was seventeen years old and the restrictions for underage magic no longer applied to him. He snatched his wand from the bedside cabinet from in between what looked like Max and Draco’s wands.

His first piece of manhood magic was summoning Blaise into a heavy, sloppy kiss. His first ever mate and lover was at the end of the bed and hadn’t been able to get close enough to kiss him without knocking the breakfast tray flying.

“I take it you like being seventeen?” Max asked with a grin.
“Only because I can use magic now.” Harry replied happily.

He spied the newspaper and just looked at it; he didn’t really read the paper any more, not since his fifth year when the Ministry had been writing all that shit about him.

“You’re going to hate it.” Blaise said with a grin as he unfolded the paper and showed Harry the front page.

It was an entire front page picture of himself looking all girly and shy with nearly shoulder length hair from when he was about fourteen and still nearly androgynous looking. Then Harry looked closer at the picture and he realised that it must have been from when he was fourteen because these were most definitely his tri-wizard tournament photos taken in that stupid little photo shoot, he didn’t think the media had any other pictures of him. The headline banner was ‘HAPPY SEVENTEENTH BIRTHDAY HARRY POTTER, OUR SAVIOUR.’

“Oh dear god.” He said horrified.

“There’s more.” Blaise said as he opened the paper to the next page where a collection of collage pictures were scattered, including baby photos of himself with his parents, personal photos of him with his friends, the tri-wizard photo was there again, there was a picture of him pregnant, several photos that looked to have been taken under a table or around a corner as he wasn’t even looking at the camera and in a box at the bottom was another headline ‘Potter’s Current Lovers’ and underneath were snapshot photos of his mates, he was in some of them, holding hands, sharing a kiss or a laugh. He saw red.

“What the fuck is wrong with these people?!” He shouted. “This…this is a blatant disregard for my privacy! How dare they!”

“My Dad is already on to the paper about it, he stopped around this morning to give us your presents from my family.” Max said. “He’s livid, especially as they included pictures of me, his one and only son, without my permission. He’ll bring them down single handedly.”

“Don’t let it ruin your birthday, love.” Nasta told him. “We told you so that you weren’t left out of the loop, but don’t worry about it. Eat your breakfast, open your gifts and we will spoil you today.”

“You spoil me every day.” Harry said with a grin as he wolfed down his food and started opening his small pile of gifts, making sure to read the tags so that he knew who to thank.
His small pile was soon demolished, only for Harry to realise that the small pile on the bed had only been from his mates, he had even more gifts from Max’s family, from Blaise’s Mother and from Nasta’s Dad and brother. He was surprised to see a small gift from Narcissa Malfoy, not so surprised that he didn’t even receive an acknowledgement from Lucius.

The Weasleys had gone overboard for his seventeenth and Hermione had really spoilt him rotten with her gifts. When he opened a strangely wrapped box that was from Luna Lovegood and Ginny he slammed the lid back onto it with a face burning like fire. He opened a corner and peeked inside just to be sure of what he had seen before closing the box again and refusing to let his mates see the box full of sex toys.

“What is it, Harry?” Draco asked curiously.

“Is it something naughty?” Max asked with a grin that split his face. “Can I see?”

Harry hugged the box close to his chest, not letting go as Max played tug of war with him and the box.

“No!”

“Pleaseee, Harry.”

Harry huffed and decided to get it all over and done with quickly as he shoved the box at Max.

“Here, just keep it away from me!”

“But you have to use them, Harry. It’s impolite to reject gifts.” Max said lecherously as he went digging through the box, laughing and winking naughtily as he sifted through the toys and straps and even pulled out a bright red, little pleated skirt that would show more than it covered.

“Oh you have to wear this, Harry.” Max said with a giggle that did not suit him at all.

“How about you wear it!” Harry pouted.
“But it’s just your size, love.”

Harry blushed so brightly that he was afraid he’d pass out from lack of oxygen. Nasta shoved everything back into the magically expanded box and shoved it under their bed.

“Enough of that, we can’t use them until after the baby is born anyway, there is no point in teasing him when he can’t even receive sex.” Nasta said as he fluffed up Harry’s pillow and directed him to lie against it and reminded him to breathe normally.

Harry got up and happily showered with Draco, who washed every inch of his body with a soft cloth. He was dressed and exploring his gifts more closely, leaving the box from Luna and Ginny under the bed where it was going to stay now forever.

The house was a myriad of activity as people came over and said happy birthday. Professor Dumbledore stopped over and gave him the biggest bar of fudge chocolate that Harry had ever seen. It was almost as tall as he was, almost as wide and was an inch and a half thick. It came with a small hammer to break chunks off. Harry thanked his Headmaster profusely as he used his new hammer to crack a corner of the chocolate off and happily floated into heaven.

“You had better not be eating that chocolate!” Max shouted from the kitchen. “I’m almost done with lunch!”

“I didn’t have much.” Harry shouted back as he stuffed another large chunk into his mouth. Blaise smothered a chuckle with his hand as Harry pushed more and more chocolate into his mouth before Draco took it off of him, warning him that he’d be sick if he carried on…or he’d choke.

After lunch Harry was very unhappily put down for a nap like a sleepy toddler and he protested vehemently until Max threatened to give him a sleeping potion. Again Harry actually fell asleep for an hour or so and when he woke up he felt better, if a bit groggy.

He slipped down the stairs on his bum, clenching the banister bars as he slowly went down the stairs. The house was quiet. It unnerved him.

He peeked into the living room and no one was there. His mates wouldn’t have left him alone; they wouldn’t have, not with him being pregnant. It was quiet so perhaps only Nasta was home.

He went into the kitchen and it took him several seconds for his brain to register the sudden noise and colour. He was wrapped up in someone’s arms and hugged and kissed and he started laughing as he realised that they had thrown him a surprise party.

Everyone was crammed into Max’s big kitchen, but still it looked too small, like there wasn’t enough space for everyone. He got a double hug from the Weasley twins, a handshake from Mister Weasley and a crushing hug from Mrs Weasley.

Ginny grinned at him from over the table and Harry blushed deeply. Charlie was there as well and he clapped Harry on the back. Harry laughed and hugged everyone he came into contact with. He was so happy.

“You’re finally seventeen, Harry, do you feel any different?” Myron asked him wrapping him up in a strong, safe hug.

“No. I feel the same only I’m so happy! I can’t believe you did this!”

“Of course we did.” Richard said scratchily giving him another hug and kissing his forehead. “We love you, Harry.”

“I love you too.” Harry answered back thickly. It was the first time that he had told a member of his mate’s family that he loved them and they held him tightly, Ashleigh hugging him from behind, giving him a three way hug that almost squashed him.

Max dug him out with a laugh. “We want the birthday boy still alive for his cake! We’re not allowed to touch it until the birthday boy has blown out the candles!”

“Of course you’d only want to save me so you can eat cake.” Harry teased. “Though if you had used Muggle candles you could have still eaten it because Muggle candles don’t put a protective barrier over the cake until the birthday boy blows them out.”

“That would ruin the magic.” Max said. “Besides it gives us reason to save you, can’t have you crushed by hugs can we?”

Harry laughed as he was placed in front of a cake that Max must have started making as soon as he went to bed, because it was not store bought. Harry could tell that just by looking at it.

He made his ‘birthday wish’ and then blew out the candles laughing happily as Max handed him a knife and let him cut the first slice out.

Harry was then given a second cake, this one pale, pastel blue with a baby on it that was wrapped up in a blue blanket so only the top of a pink, peachy forehead could be seen. It had no candles but he was urged to cut it anyway.
“The baby isn’t due yet, why does the baby get a birthday cake?”

“It isn’t a birthday cake.” Max replied affronted. “It’s a baby shower cake. The one birthday cake won’t be enough to feed us all, so instead of giving you two, you have a birthday cake and a baby shower cake.”

“A baby shower? Seriously?”

Mrs Weasley hefted a huge box wrapped in blue onto the table and Harry opened it to see so many little bodysuits, sleepsuits and onesies, all hand knitted. The majority of them were in baby blue, some in darker blue, there was a splash of green, some whites and yellows, a couple of bright reds and even a pair of knitted socks in a light purple.

Harry felt himself tearing up and he didn’t want to. He tried to swallow past the lump in his throat as he hugged Mrs Weasley tightly. When Ashleigh gave him another box filled with baby things, only the clothes were store bought and not hand knitted, the tears came as he pulled out little dungarees, corduroy trousers and soft cotton shirts. Mrs Weasley’s clothes were for newborn up to six months, but Ashleigh’s clothes were from six months to one year. They had spoken about it before hand and they had decided who was going to get what. Between the two of them and the size of the two boxes he wouldn’t have to buy any of his baby’s clothes until he was past a year old.

“Thank you so much. This is the best present I’ve had.”

“Because they aren’t for you.” Hermione said sadly. “You’re too selfless sometimes, Harry.”

“What about my present?!” Ginny demanded. “I thought mine would be the most appreciated.”

Harry went pink and tried to control himself as he thanked Ginny politely; he threatened her silently with his eyes with a long, painful death if she mentioned the present again.

Harry got Max to take both boxes upstairs and put them with the rest and Nasta carried him upstairs as he claimed to need the bathroom. Harry went into the bathroom and listened as Max and Nasta laughed in the bedroom before going back down stairs. Harry then stole into the bedroom and started packing up his school book bag with some sleepsuits, bodysuits and one of the thick, knitted blankets. He added several plastic, already sterilised, baby bottles with their tops and teats, the pot of powdered baby milk formula and the two litre bottle of water that he would send a heating charm at and boil to make up the milk for his baby.

He put in the umbilical cord clamps that Max had gotten from one of the small chemists that his potions stocked, iodine solution that Max had also gotten to sterilise his stomach area before he cut into it and added the plastic, air tight, box that he had to place the placenta in to be weighed after he had pulled it from his body.

All he needed now was his mates’ blood and his mates had promised to start making up a large bottle for him soon, he would have to steal it away and then he’d be ready for his baby to come. He would be prepared and ready, his nest just needed a little touch up and then he’d be ready to remain inside it and welcome his baby to the world. Just a few more things and everything would be perfect.

Harry stole out of the window with the book bag and flew to the roof. He dropped it into the nest and moved the scarf, that he had actually taken from Max’s sister Alayla because it was so soft and fluffy he just had to have it, into position, also moving the third duvet he had stolen to make the padding on the floor more comfy and his nest was completed. He put the book bag down and happily basked in the feeling of pride and completion that he felt at finally having his birthing place ready. He inhaled and nothing was amiss, the only scent around his nest was his own and the soft, lingering scents of his mates on the cloths and fabrics he had used to build his nest.

A strange feeling overtook him and he knew that he had to remain in his nest now that it was done, he wanted to start preening himself in preparation for the birth in his nest and he flew down to the ground and walked through the back door. Everyone stopped and looked at him.

“Harry honey, how did you get outside?” Molly asked him and Harry cocked his head.

“I need your blood please.” Harry asked of Nasta, whose eyes widened.

“Harry are you saying…”

“I need your blood please.” Harry repeated.

“Harry, why do you need his blood?” Hermione asked.

Max pulled out one of the largest thermos flasks that Harry had ever seen, it was clear. Nasta split his own wrist with a simple charm and he bled into the flask until it was a quarter of the way full before using his wand to seal the cut. Max cut his own wrist and bled into the flask until it was half full before handing it to Blaise and healing his own arm. Blaise bled into the flask before handing it to Draco, who filled the flask completely. Max took it back and put the clear thermos into a metal shell and twisted the top onto it to stop the blood from coming out and handed it to Harry.

“Thank you.”

“What is going on here?” Molly asked as she watched with wide eyes.
Harry didn’t even acknowledge her as he walked back outside, everyone following him. He took his wings out and before anyone could stop him he took off to the roof and landed in his nest, settling down and making himself comfortable.

His mates landed around the nest, not even trying to go inside it and they watched as he wiggled around in the soft bowl shaped nest.

“You built your nest on the roof? Seriously?” Draco asked incredulously.

“Are those my best oven gloves?!” Max asked as he spied the gloves making up the wall of the nest. “My rug…seriously, Harry, my rug?”

Harry hissed at him and covered the rug with his body.

“I’m not going to take it from you, but really? Did you have to cut out a section of my favourite carpet?”

“You can have it back.” Harry replied, his voice going deeper, rougher, different.

“As long as you don’t get birth juice on it.”

Nasta smacked Max’s head. “Birth juice? What the hell is birth juice?” He asked the biggest man.

“You know, birth fluids and blood and stuff.”

Nasta shook his head. “I take it that you aren’t going to be coming out?”

Harry shook his head vehemently as he pulled off his clothes and tossed them out of his nest before he lay naked in the nest, rolling around in it to affirm himself of where everything was.

“That’s just teasing, Harry.” Draco told him. “You know we can’t step foot in your nest and you’re sunbathing naked on the roof.”
Harry hissed at him and his claws and fangs slowly and painlessly came through his fingers and gums.

“He’s turning feral; it would be best if we didn’t speak to him or get too close from now on.” Nasta said as he backed away. “He doesn’t need anything now, he would have picked up enough food to last him a week or two and then we will have to start feeding him, but again we can’t get near the nest and the longer he’s in it the further away he will want us.”

Max nodded and jumped from the roof and landed where his family and Nasta’s Dad were telling Hermione and the Weasleys about Harry and them. It seemed to be going well; or rather no one had started screaming yet. Hermione was actually questioning them about their way of life and asking if she could get a notebook.

It seemed that Harry would have the baby before they went back to school after all. He couldn’t wait until they had their baby boy. It had seemed like forever since Harry had first informed them that he was pregnant, but he was only five months, he had at least two weeks in the nest before he gave birth. It was going to be boiling hot as it would be August, Harry would be cranky, feral and aggressive. It was going to be one hell of a month, but it would all be worth it as soon as their baby boy was born.

Chapter Thirty-Nine – Aggression

Harry lay on the comfy patch of his nest that he had built up with layers of soft fabrics, stroking his baby gently through the layer of his skin. He sniffed the air deeply again, checking it for danger, for any form of threat. There were Drackens nearby and he snarled, like he had done several times since he had reached his birthing place. He didn’t like that they were so close to him, but as long as they didn’t come any closer he wouldn’t have to defend his nest, though when he went into labour, that was a different matter entirely.

There were humans around as well, he could smell them as well, magic using humans, they could be a potential threat to him and his baby. He’d keep an eye out for them. He’d kill them easily if they came near him, the other Drackens were not so easy to kill, but he’d manage, for his baby he’d do anything.

He stroked the bump over and over as he rolled in the nest, getting his scent over everything, he could feel the baby moving inside of him like a trapped butterfly, it wouldn’t be long before he freed his baby from inside of him. Soon, but not yet.
Blaise was anxious and worried as he paced around Max’s kitchen, even knowing that Harry was only two floors above him, sitting on the roof, didn’t ease the worry he felt. Harry would stay outside now for two to three weeks and in that time he would be very vicious and violent towards them.

It was hard to carry on as normal when Harry was sitting on the damn roof waiting for his body to prepare itself for the birth of his baby. He already felt an overwhelming urge to remain as close to Harry as possible. He couldn’t go home; every time he tried he felt a tension run through his entire body, keeping him held here, near Harry, so he could protect his little lover when the need arose.

It was unlike anything he had ever felt before and he kept himself close to the older dominants to try and glean some comfort from their strong, silent calmness during this stressful situation. He didn’t want to be seen as the weak dominant of the group, so he refrained from voicing his unease aloud, but he couldn’t stop himself from huddling close to Max and Nasta, he even sought out Draco on the odd occasion for support, without seeming like he needed it. It was a fine line he played with, on the one side was nonchalance, and on the other was weakness. He missed Harry, he could cuddle with Harry all day and not be seen as weak, but Harry was on the roof and he tried to cut up anyone who got too close to his nest. He couldn’t wait for all this to be over, preferably before the stress of the situation killed him.

Hermione prided herself on being a very smart individual. She had refused to leave Harry’s boyfriend, Max’s house, partially through worry of her best friend, but more out of curiosity. She had never heard of Drackens before and to find out that not only was her best friend one, but two other class mates were Drackens as well, it puzzled her.

If Drackens were a common humanoid species that witches and wizards could come into on their sixteenth birthday then why weren’t they told about them at Hogwarts? Was it supposed to be covered in Care of Magical Creatures? Or perhaps History of Magic. She couldn’t recall a single time that she had read the word Dracken in any book from the library and she had been reading those books since she had first stepped foot into Hogwarts. Before she had befriended Harry and Ron she had spent every moment of spare time in the library reading any book that came to her hand to cover the loneliness that she felt and the acute isolation from her peers who ran around and played about like little children.

How many more Hogwarts students were actually Drackens? Were Drackens even a common inheritance to receive? Three students out of just under three hundred was a huge number in comparison to other magical creatures. There were no Veela at Hogwarts, except for the glancing visit from Fleur and her sister in fourth year, but Gabrielle had been underage and therefore hadn’t come into her Veela inheritance at the time of her visit. There were no Faeries or Fey at Hogwarts though she knew there was at least one in Durmstrang and there were no ‘diseased’ creatures at Hogwarts like werewolves or vampires.

Were Drackens native to Britain? Was that why three Drackens had turned up at Hogwarts?

Hermione knew that the Veela were protected in France and by French law, was that why all the witches and wizards with a Veela inheritance had been schooled in Beauxbatons? Was that similarly why all of the Fey were schooled in Durmstrang? Were the witches and wizards bound to get a Dracken inheritance living in Britain and schooled at Hogwarts because they were protected by British law? She needed more information but baring the explanation that she and the Weasleys had been given on Harry’s birthday, after swearing an incredibly powerful and dangerous oath not to out any of them, like she ever would have, she hadn’t had any further information. The house was milling with Drackens and people who were related to Drackens, who had grown up with them, yet they all seemed to be so busy.

She had managed to decipher that Harry was nearing labour, how they knew this she didn’t know, why they hadn’t called a Healer she didn’t know, all she knew was her best friend was sitting on the roof of one of his boyfriends’ house and he wasn’t going to come back down. Said boyfriends were preventing anyone from even going into the front or back gardens as they snapped and growled at everyone around them, even at each other!

She had watched in horror and part fascination as Malfoy took on the biggest of Harry’s boyfriends, Max, and they began beating the living daylights out of each other! It was terrifying to watch and it had only stopped when Harry’s oldest boyfriend, Nasta, ripped them apart from each other and threw them at opposite walls.

Hermione had tried to talk to the three older girls that were at the house, they were Max’s sisters and none of them were Drackens. In fact if Max’s Mother, Ashleigh, hadn’t have been a Dracken she would have wondered if Drackens were an all-male species of magical creature. The girls had answered a few questions as they painted the wall of a spare room baby blue in preparation for their Nephew and they soon became too harried and busy to pay attention to her.

The one man, Max’s second Dad, Richard, had all the patience in the world and he seemed to be making the preparations worse, she had watched as Max’s biological Dad, Myron, had picked the smaller man up and dumped him in a different room, twisting the other man’s ear and making Richard let out a strange keening sound.

Richard had sat on the chair that he had been dumped on dejectedly for three hours before Myron had come back and took him off the chair, kissing and holding him. It was so strange! But it was also fascinating to see into the cultures of another species, how they reacted and interacted with one another.

Hermione was also very curious about the livid scar that bisected Richard’s neck. How could anyone survive such damage to such a vital part of their body? Were Drackens incredibly strong skinned? Or could they heal massive damage like a blow to the neck before it had time to actually kill them? If the latter was true then they had to be super healers! Richard must have healed that neck wound within a few seconds or he would have died, the more she looked at the scar the more she noticed that it had been a perfect, deep slit down the front of his windpipe; it should have killed him in seconds but he seemed no worse for wear, only that scar and a damaged larynx. Whatever had caused that scar it had to have gone incredibly deep into the neck to have damaged the larynx and it made her all the more curious to know how Richard had survived, yet she had more tact than to just outright ask him, perhaps she should ask Max when he was a bit more level headed, or maybe one of the girls.

Remus Lupin sighed wearily as he finally stepped foot back onto British soil. He had spent some time travelling after finding a ‘mysterious donation’ in his practically empty bank vault. He had a feeling that Harry had been conspiring with Sirius.

He had first gone to France seeking information on lycanthropy. From there he had gone further afield to parts of Egypt and Pakistan; from there he had gone further into Asia and to parts of Transylvania. He had been gone for a little under a year and he was glad to be back. He had missed Harry.

He smiled as he remembered the boy he had taken to Kings Cross Station last September. He had seemed like there was a lot on his mind, but Sirius had only just died that June so maybe he was just grieving, either way he hadn’t had an owl from Harry so hopefully he had worked out what was bothering him at the time for himself or had asked someone else to help him.

Remus was on his way to Dumbledore’s private house, not many people knew where it was located, but he knew. He, a werewolf, a dark creature, was considered trustworthy enough to know where Albus Dumbledore lived when the summer holidays were in place.

He had Apparated to the little town and knocked on the front door, like any normal person would, he waved to the elderly couple crossing the street and they smiled back, not knowing how close they were to a feared creature whom they thought was merely mythological.

The door was opened and Remus was greeted happily by the elderly man and given consent to enter the house.

“Remus, my boy. How did your travels go?” Dumbledore asked.

“Well, though I overshot it a bit, I was hoping to be back when Hogwarts let out so that I could perhaps take Harry for a part of the summer. It isn’t right for a teenaged boy to be cooped up for so long in the same house. Plus I missed his birthday when I didn’t mean to; he deserves to be taken out.”

“I’m afraid that that is quite impossible, Remus.” Dumbledore told him softly and Remus grew angry.

“Why? He doesn’t need the blood wards anymore, Albus! Voldemort is gone! Vanquished by the very boy you are imprisoning in that Muggle house! The Death Eaters are few and far between, they wouldn’t dare come out of the little holes they are hiding in when every witch and wizard wants their head on a spike!”

“Calm down my dear boy! You have misunderstood.”

Remus was confused and he deflated, feeling a tad embarrassed that he had perhaps blown up on his old headmaster for no reason.

“Harry never went to the Dursley residence this year.”
“He…he never?”

“No. I believe he stayed at the house of a very handsome, young man this summer.”

Just like that Remus was angry again. “You let him stay in a house with an unknown person?! How do you know he isn’t a danger to Harry?”

“I have seen and spoken to Harry several times this summer, Remus, the boy in question is also staying at Hogwarts.”

“What’s his name?” Remus demanded.

“I believe it is Maximilius.”

“There are no Maximilius’ at Hogwarts, at least not any who are older than Harry, I would have remembered such a name, but anyone younger wouldn’t have their own house.”

“I believe that Max is thirty-one.”

“What is Harry doing with a thirty-one year old man?!” Remus exploded.

“It is my understanding that they are dating.” Albus replied mildly and Remus felt his blood pressure spike.

“Da…dating?” He choked. “There are fourteen years between them!”

“This is a classic example of age doesn’t matter, how many years are between you and Nymphadora? Thirteen?”

“I…that’s not the issue here!” Remus stated as his cheeks went red. “Harry has only just turned seventeen! He shouldn’t be with a thirty year old man!”
“But Harry is seventeen, Remus; he is considered a man now and he can do as he wishes.”

“Where is he? I have to speak with him; I have to see that this Maximilius isn’t harming him!”

“I’m afraid that’s quite impossible.”

“Why?!” Remus roared his patience at a dead end.

“Harry is currently pregnant.” Remus’s jaw dropped and his eyes popped in furious anger as every protective instinct inside of his body screamed for him to get Harry to safety. “I have been told that he is about to go into labour and doesn’t wish to be bothered.”

“Into…into labour? Just how pregnant is he?!” Remus asked when he could breathe unobstructed.

“Six months, he fell pregnant in mid-February.”

Remus mouthed wordlessly as he clenched and unclenched his hands so he wouldn’t put them around the elderly man’s throat and throttle him.

“You couldn’t have sent me a letter?! You knew how to navigate the anti-owl wards I had up, even if Harry couldn’t.” He demanded. “I would have immediately come home! He was underage when he met this man, I would have protected him!”

Albus sighed. “He didn’t need, nor want to be protected, Remus. Harry is deeply in love and is terribly protective of his son.”

“Son?” Remus croaked.

“Yes, he is having a baby boy some when in the coming weeks.”

Remus swallowed and collapsed back into a chair, putting his head in his hands and his hands between his knees and just breathed evenly.
“Sirius will have my head when I pass into the afterlife. James will slaughter me and Lily will make sure there is nothing left to find. I’ve allowed them to become grandparents at thirty-seven.”

“I’m sure Harry will disagree.”

“I wasn’t there for him.”

“You have been there for him.”

“I thought he’d be safe at Hogwarts.”

“He has been safe.”

“You call being seduced by a thirty-one year old and getting pregnant by said man safe?”

“It might not be Maximilius’ baby.” Dumbledore replied as he sipped on a teacup.

Remus felt his heart sputter in his chest. “What do you mean it might not be his baby? Who else’s can it be?! Oh please say he wasn’t…that he wasn’t…violated.”

“Nothing of the sort. But Harry has four current lovers, and there are three potential fathers to the baby he carries.”

Remus felt the world sway and grey spots danced in front of his eyes. What had happened to the sweet, innocent little boy he had spent a month with just last year, the baby faced boy he had seen off to Hogwarts last September? What had gone wrong?

“I want to see them.”

“Very well. But please control yourself, Remus, they are in a very emotional state as this is a very stressful time for them and they are very protective of Harry.”
Remus nodded as he made his way to the fire, following Dumbledore. He felt numb and sort of floaty, that couldn’t be a good sign.

He was pulled into the fire with Dumbledore and he heard the elderly man whisper something to the green flames before he was whisked away into the floo network.

Nasta felt his entire body pull into a stiff line as an unknown person came into the house. He snarled and found himself in front of the unknown man in an instant.

He had greying, light brown hair, a scared face and neck, blue eyes and a thin moustache. He was also a werewolf and Nasta would die before he let this man anywhere near his submissive, his child, or his subordinate mates.

His wings burst from his back and his claws and fangs followed as the man’s blue eyes flashed orangey-yellow before the blue settled back.

“Now now boys, calm yourselves. Nasta this is Remus Lupin, a dear friend and father figure to Harry. I’m sure he will be most distraught if you were to harm him.”

Nasta breathed deeply and he wanted to vehemently deny that his mate had anything to do with a werewolf, but he couldn’t. He knew that Harry was a very kind and caring person, he would probably befriend a manticore before killing it. It was something that he loved in Harry, that he was so indiscriminate about everything; if Harry had been at all prejudiced about his dominant’s ages during his meetings then he wouldn’t be mated right about now.

“What are you?” The man, Remus, breathed as he stared at his wings, fangs and claws.

“I’m a Dracken, werewolf.”

The man flinched and let Nasta know that he hadn’t just touched a nerve but he had hammered at it.

“That is enough.” Dumbledore chided firmly. “How is Harry today?”

“I went to visit him this morning; Blaise is with him at the moment. He is fine and is coping well.”
“Any sign of the little bundle of joy?”

“Not yet, but he has a week or two before he gives birth. He’s still preening.”

Max came barrelling into the room and Nasta caught him around the chest, flinging the bigger man backwards, using his body weight.

“Calm down.” Nasta soothed as he stroked Max’s head and neck, laying his teeth at the jugular vein to show how serious he was.

Max stopped struggling and panted heavily.

“Werewolf!” He gasped.

“He’s a friend of Harry’s.” Dumbledore assured.

Nasta stood back up and dragged Max up as well.

“You should still be sleeping.” Nasta chided the bigger man.

“I felt the disturbance in the wards as an unknown person was dragged in by a known person. I couldn’t take the risk of a threat harming Harry.”

Nasta kissed Max and led him to a chair to sit him down. The bigger man had spent the night with Draco, protecting Harry from afar. They couldn’t so much as come within five feet of Harry’s nest before their little submissive started snarling and sizing them up ready for conflict.

He hoped that Harry gave birth sooner rather than later because he did not envy whoever had to feed Harry when he finally ran out of food, but as it looked like Harry had stolen half the contents of Max’s cupboards, maybe he wouldn’t even run out of food at all while he was nesting. Though this was an almost impossible wish seeing as Harry was continuously eating in his nest. Then he didn’t really have much to do other than roll around, stroke his bump and eat. It must have been very boring for him.
Everyone sat around in the kitchen and the man, Remus, looked like his heart was failing as he lay against the table top and practiced breathing.

“Are you alright?” Max asked as he placed down four cups of tea, slipping a few drops of calming draught into three of the four cups. The one without the draught went to the Headmaster, who was already very calm and collected.

“I have just found out that the boy I consider a son is about to give birth and is in a relationship with four men, one of whom is a Dracken.”

“Actually all of us are Drackens, including Harry.”

The man started hyperventilating and clasped his teacup like a lifeline as he gulped it down like Vodka.

“How did Harry meet four Drackens?!” He huffed out as Max refilled his teacup. “Where is Harry anyway?”

“Harry’s on the roof.” Max replied helpfully.

“The roof?! Why, in all of Merlin’s polka dotted pyjama pants, is Harry on the roof when he’s six months pregnant?!”

“That’s where he built his nest.”

“His nest? His nest?! What nest?!”

“Harry’s a Dracken as well, when Drackens are ready to go into labour they climb into their prebuilt nests and they stay there until the baby is born, no one really knows why, but it has been speculated that it’s the dragon instincts in us.”

“James and Lily weren’t Drackens. How is Harry one?”
“The Dracken genes pick and choose which child they want to appear in. Harry’s Great-Grandfather on his Father’s side was a Dracken; his Father was a recessive carrier of the gene.”

“Which side did the genes come from?” Remus asked. “James’ Father or James’ Mother?”

“His Mother, I believe the Dracken in question was named Cygnus Black. The Black family is riddled with Dracken blood. Three members of the Black family have been Drackens, two of them this generation; the third was from the last generation.”

“Who?” Remus asked incredulously.

“Harry, obviously. Regulus Black and Draco Malfoy.”

Remus felt the room getting far too hot. Sirius couldn’t have known that his younger brother was a Dracken or he would have said something. Was that why Regulus always stuck so close to Snape when they were younger, like these men were sticking close to Harry?

“Is Severus a Dracken by any chance?”

“Yes he is.” Dumbledore answered. “I see you have made the connection between Regulus and Severus. They were mates as Harry, Max, Nasta, Blaise and Draco are mates.”

“Draco? Draco Malfoy?” Remus had heard the blond’s name in the list of Drackens, but he hadn’t for one moment thought that Harry would be mated to him. The two men opposite him said ‘mate’ like others said ‘husband’ there was an intimate inflection on it, a love that went deep between them, Remus swallowed. These men loved Harry, but he could not fathom that a Malfoy and Harry would willingly get on, he couldn’t believe that Lucius Malfoy would allow his only son into a relationship with Harry.

“Yes Draco Malfoy. Such a confused young man.” Dumbledore sighed and graciously accepted another cup of tea from Max, who was happy to be hosting again.

“Let me tell you that as top dominant of this family I will not accept anyone bad mouthing my subordinates nor my submissive.” Nasta said as politely as he could, he even managed to take the growl from his voice.
“I wasn’t bad mouthing anyone.” Remus said affronted. “I certainly wouldn’t bad mouth a former student of mine, though I find it difficult to accept that Lucius Malfoy is jumping for joy at this development.”

Max snorted. “Hardly. He has tried several times to break Harry and Draco up, not that we’ve told Harry, it upsets him and in his delicate condition it could cause more harm to him than is acceptable. Draco has snubbed his Father’s attempts to break us apart, though his Mother, Narcissa, seems fine with the relationship, though she was a bit startled at the beginning.”

Remus couldn’t even begin to imagine Lucius Malfoy ever being alright with his son in a relationship with Harry Potter, even if the man had been acquitted of all crimes, he had still been a Death Eater.

“So Harry’s alright?” He finally asked. “You treat him well.”

The two opposite him looked affronted.

“Of course!” The biggest one said his tone full of offence. “We love Harry and he’s perfectly fine. I’ve had my stomach almost torn out thanks to my love for him! Harry likes targeting the fleshy belly.”

“What?” Remus asked.

The man lifted his shirt and showed a covered area of flesh with blood spots.

“You’re bleeding through again.” Nasta pointed out.

“I know. I’ll change the covering in a bit.”

“What happened?”

“I got too close to Harry and he tore into me. My own fault of course, I should have known better, but I thought he was sleeping."

“Harry wouldn’t…”

“Harry is in a very primitive state of mind. He’s gone feral, as all submissive Drackens do when they go into the last stage of pregnancy. He doesn’t recognise anyone and he attacks everyone who goes near him as he classes them as immediate threats. He does this to protect the baby.”

“So he’d attack me if I went to see him?”

“You can see him, but you can’t get too close and he won’t understand a word you say to him. He can’t talk either, he grunts, hisses and growls and he communicates non-verbally too, though as he’s very aggressive at the moment, as he feels he’s being threatened by us getting too close to him, there’s a lot of baring his teeth and flashing his claws, all as a warning to back off.”

Remus sighed and cradled his cup, nursing the tea inside it to settle his nerves. This was too much, way too much and he wasn’t sure if his blood pressure could handle the strain of finding out Harry was a magical creature.

“Here take this.” One of the men, Nasta, said handing him a book. “It’ll give you some more information on Drackens, actual factual information, not the rubbish that is printed in mass produced books.”

“Thank you. When do you think Harry will be ready for visitors?”

“A few weeks I’d say. He’s only been in his nest for a week, he’s already run out of fresh food so we’re having to try and get close enough to him to pass him fresh meat, it’s how Max got cut up.”

“He’ll be alright?”

“He’s going to be fine, we’d hardly let him starve in there.” Max grumbled. “It would make my sacrifice yesterday for nothing.”

Remus nodded and finished his tea. He’d read the book, get as much information as he could, let himself absorb the fact that Harry was a Dracken, let his anxieties settle and then he’d come back when Harry was ready to see him, when he had already given birth to a son. He swallowed, James, Sirius and Lily would blow their heads right off of their necks if they knew that he’d allowed their baby to become impregnated at just sixteen years old.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Harry hissed deeply as one of the Drackens once again tried to come into his nest. The dead animal he was holding was thrown into his nest and Harry lashed out, sinking his claws into the soft, fleshy belly, dragging his claws through and the Dracken howled in pain.

Harry went to strike the neck only for another Dracken to come and take the injured one away. Harry flumped down as his energy waned. He couldn’t keep fighting like this, was that their plan? To wear him down until he fell unconscious due to lack of energy? Well he wouldn’t let them! He had ways of getting energy. He was getting energy from the sun, but the blinding rays could only give him so much energy; he was sleeping a lot more than usual as well. He pulled the dead animal that the other Dracken had dropped and tore into it, noticing curiously that it was already skinned. He fed until he couldn’t eat anymore and then he threw the remains out of his nest because he didn’t want it near him anymore.

It wasn’t too much longer after he had finished his meal and he was cleaning his hands and neck of blood when a ripping in his abdomen had him doubling over his belly. It was time.

Harry burst into a flurry of activity, preparing himself for birth as he spread his body out over the floor of his nest, and tearing open his backpack to reach the things his baby needed, the things he needed. He would free his trapped baby from inside him by any means necessary. He wouldn’t let his baby die inside of him.

A/N: The next chapter is the long anticipated birth!

I now have a profile on Facebook under the name StarLight Mass as Facebook wouldn’t let me use the name Massacre, I wonder why. The link is also in my profile because FF probably won’t let me put the actual link in my chapter, add me if you like to keep up to date and what not.

Welcome Baby Boy. Oh

Chapter Notes

WARNING! This chapter contains blood, gore, self-mutilation (non-permanent for medicinal purposes) and overbearingly sugary sweet cuteness later on.

A/N: The birth scene is not actually all that gory, well not as gory as the torture scene in chapter eleven, but it is very bloody. Harry is cutting himself open after all.

Dedicated to cyne, whose review helped me write nearly all of this chapter in one day.

Last Time

It wasn’t too much longer after he had finished his meal and he was cleaning his hands and neck of blood when a ripping in his abdomen had him doubling over his belly. It was time.

Harry burst into a flurry of activity, preparing himself for birth as he spread his body out over the floor of his nest, and tearing open his backpack to reach the things his baby needed, the things he needed. He would free his trapped baby from inside him by any means necessary. He wouldn’t let his baby die inside of him.

Chapter Forty – Welcome Baby Boy…Oh

Max grimaced as he peeled the covering away from his stomach. Harry had a hell of a reflex on him and he made a mental note to never get on his submissive’s bad side.

“How is it?” Draco asked as he sipped regally on a cup of coffee to wake himself up a bit more. He hated having the night shift, but he had lost the fight fair and square.

“Painful, I don’t think it went in too deep and luckily he hadn’t coated his claws in his venom, or I would have been in big trouble, but it still hurts and it’s bleeding quite a bit. This is the second covering I’ve had to change today. Harry must have an anti-coagulant in his claws.”

“Do different submissives have different properties to their claws?”
“Oh yeah, some submissives can kill you without ever having to secrete their personalised venom. Some submissive’s claws are inherently poisonous, some, like Harry, have anti-coagulants and can bleed you to death without having to cut too deep, some have extra sharp claws and some have wicked curved claws that are designed for maximum ripping damage.”

“Do any submissives end up killing their dominants?” Draco asked startled.

“Yep. But it is usually on purpose. Harry isn’t really trying to kill us, he’s just warning us away. Warning us not to come any closer to him, to his nest and his baby.”

“Why would a submissive kill their dominant?”

“Any number of reasons, but most are in defence of their children. If a dominant so much as verbally threatens a child, then the submissive will warn them off. If a strange dominant broke into our house and actually harmed one of Harry’s children then he’d be dead before he could apologise, no second chances, even if it was by accident. A submissive will kill the potential threat so they don’t have a chance to actually harm the child. Another reason I’ve heard of is if the dominant is abusive, because of the nature of dominants and submissives, with the dominant able to order around and control the submissive it would be very difficult for the submissive to get away from their abusive dominant, they would be forced to endure it and endure it and endure it and then one day, perhaps years later, they’ll just crack and lash out, often very violently and they won't stop until there is very little left.”

Draco swallowed. “Remind me to never piss Harry off.”

Max let out a throaty laugh, one which embarrassingly made Draco’s stomach clench and things a bit lower tighten and twitch. He hated that he was becoming sexually aroused by the other dominants, especially as it was only a damned laugh! Damn he had more control than this!

“Don’t worry, I don’t think Harry will kill any of us just because we piss him off, he’ll get stroppy and might shout and lash out with his fists, but he would never seek to kill us just for angering him. Just like none of us would ever kill him for getting stroppy or a tad bitchy now and then.”

“Do you need help?” Draco offered; though he wasn’t entirely sure why he had offered to do such a menial task as to change a wound covering, what if he got blood under his nails?

“Can you just get me a new covering please, Draco; my hands are a bit too bloody.” Max said as he indicated the blood on his fingertips.

“Sure.” Draco put his coffee cup down and went digging in the first aid box, pulling out the white covering. He ripped open the packet and pressed the new covering to the cleaned and sterilised claw marks, he held it there with one hand as he pulled out the surgical tape and secured it to Max’s skin, he never envied the bigger man when he had to change the covering and pull that sticky tape from the tiny hairs on his stomach.

“Thank you, Draco. Where are Nasta and Blaise anyway?”

“They went to feed Harry lunch, the little runt is eating more than we are.” Draco stated as he packed away the tape and threw the empty packet in the bin. He washed his hands thoroughly.

Max chuckled again and Draco cursed his libido. He was not some hormonal little girl, so he hadn’t has sex in a month or so, so he woke up every morning with at least three erections pressed into his body and his own erection throbbing. He was a Malfoy and he would control his own body!

All thoughts of sex flew from his mind when Nasta came in through the back door with a bloodied Blaise in his arms. Blaise had actually gone pale under his tanned skin.

“Oh, dear Merlin.” He breathed. “Did Harry do that?”

“Draco! Snap out of it and get the potions in the top cupboard. Max, get towels now.” Nasta snapped.

He laid Blaise on the kitchen table and Draco didn’t even mention that they had to eat off of it later, Blaise was more important; the table could always be washed…or replaced.

He grabbed the case of potions from the top shelf, only the strongest potions were kept up there and he knew then that it was serious.

Max came back with an armful of clean towels, he passed them to Nasta and opened the potions case, immediately administering the vials, rubbing Blaise’s throat strongly to help him to swallow. Blaise moaned in pain and Draco found his childhood friend’s hand, holding it and squeezing along with Blaise as pain seared through his body.

Nasta pressed the towels to Blaise’s stomach and they soaked through quickly. Harry had done some real damage.

“I thought he wasn’t aiming to kill us?” He gasped out as Blaise clenched his hand until the bones of his knuckles grinded together.

“Blaise got too close. I only just managed to get to Blaise before Harry tore out his throat.” Nasta explained as he calmly inspected the wound on Blaise’s stomach. “We need a Healer.”

“Loppy!” Max yelled.

A sharp crack filled the kitchen as a little house elf appeared dressed in a clean, rose pink, pillowcase. Her large brown eyes took in the scene before her with slight shock before she recovered herself and bowed to her Master’s grandson.

“Young Master Maxie called for Loppy?”

“Loppy get my Grandfather, get my parents and tell them to call Madam Pomfrey. Tell them it’s urgent.” Max ordered as he passed a topical paste to Nasta to apply to the wound which would hopefully help with the bleeding.

“Of course young Master, Maxie.” Loppy bowed and popped away again to do as bid.

“I hope she hurries.” Draco said as he watched as Blaise’s face went another shade paler.

Harry was bewildered as he pulled out the little bottle of brownish-yellow fluid. It was important; something in the deep recesses of his human mind told him that it was important. Did he drink it?

A pain in his stomach had him screeching out and several rumbling growls answered. He felt reassured by those grumblings and he didn’t know why. The Drackens that had been getting into his space for what seemed like ages were now very far away and Harry felt confident that his baby would be safe if he brought him into the world.

He couldn’t remember what to do with the little bottle so he put it back down; he accidentally knocked it over as another ripping pain made his body jump and twitch. The brown stuff went all over his hands and he had no time to do anything about it. He rubbed his belly to soothe his agitated baby, reassuring his baby that he was still there, spreading the brown liquid over the expanse of his belly.

It smelt awful, it made him sneeze twice and it was irritating his nose badly, why was it so important?
All it did was make his eyes screw up as he moved his claws to his belly, feeling around it gently, pressing delicately to feel where his baby was laying.

Another wave of pain struck him and he screamed, the high pitched sound startling birds from the trees. Those reassuring growls soothed him as tears cut down his cheeks without him noticing. How could something hurt so much with nothing physical to show for it?

Feeling for his baby’s head Harry carefully slid two claws into his flesh. It hurt and his body quivered with the need to move with the pain, but he held still, clenching his teeth together, the tips of his upper fangs biting into his bottom lip. He had to hold still or he could accidentally catch his baby with a deadly claw, a claw which was covered in his acidic poison. He could feel it numbing his skin where it touched, easing the sharp biting pain from where he was cutting.

Dragging in a deep, ragged breath, Harry carefully eased his two claws through the soft, meaty flesh of his belly, going through his body as easily as butter as his other hand continuously mapped out his baby’s body. His son had gone still, like he knew that this was a delicate part of the operation and that the slightest movement could ruin everything if he so much as twitched in the wrong direction.

Harry clenched his teeth as a fresh spark of pain almost had him jumping out of his skin as he spread his legs more and rebalanced himself on the balls of his feet. He continued cutting, knowing that every second counted as his nest flooded with blood.

He retracted his middle and ring finger claws when he reached the opposite side of his stomach, he inserted his index finger claw and delicately traced the bottom of the sac he could feel inside of him, he could feel his baby’s head through the thin membrane, pressing on it, wanting to be freed.

He felt for a safe place, even as the bad smelling brown liquid pained his open flesh, even as blood poured out of his body. He needed to be quick! Yet he couldn’t risk his baby’s life.

He felt a part of the sac that his baby wasn’t pressed down on and he inserted just the very tip of his claw into it and pulled. It was like a balloon had burst. A balloon filled with water as a clear fluid gushed out of that little rip, his claw tugging on the thin membrane, making it wider. He stopped when his gut clenched and his claw immediately, automatically retracted before he even knew what was going on, a moment later his finger touched something solid. His baby’s head. He had almost pushed a claw into his baby’s head.

Harry used his one hand to guide the baby’s head out of the slit he had made in the sac, his other hand pressing down on the top of his bump to expel the baby, he held his position as gravity also helped pull his baby out of his body.

He was shaking, blood coated thickly upon his lower body, hands and arms, his feet pooled in his own blood. Had he lost too much? He needed this baby out now, he needed the placenta out now, he needed to drink that bottle of blood now.

Harry ripped the membrane sac as he became frantically aware of how thickly the blood had plastered him, the membrane was thicker than he realised it had been and it had gotten stuck on his baby’s shoulders. He tore it and he let lose an almighty screech of pain as his body clenched tightly, even as his baby fell gently to the blood soaked, fabric padded ground, guided by his one hand on his baby’s head and shoulders.

Harry quickly clamped the umbilical cord and tore through it with a single claw; he wound the cord around his wrist and yanked it. The pain was unbelievable as he screamed until he felt his throat tear.

His baby was crying below him and Harry took reassurance from the sound, his baby was at least alive.

He dumped the placenta into the box and shoved the lid on it and he threw the entire box out of his nest, before he used a claw to take the entire top of the flask off and gulped down the lukewarm liquid. He would have preferred it hot. Hot blood straight from his mates’ veins, but this would do for now.

He drained the bottle of blood and threw it away, before digging in the torn backpack for the towels he had borrowed. He wrapped his baby in one and rubbed him vigorously to keep him warm and to stimulate his breathing. His baby stopped crying when Harry had finished and settled him over his heart.

Harry picked up another towel and began the slightly redundant task of cleaning the blood from himself, but as the duvet under him was soaked with blood every time he set a limb back down it was immediately covered in blood again.

Harry caught a corner of the duvet and pulled it up; he shifted himself to the blanket underneath and rolled the duvet up before flinging it out of his nest and down the side of the house. The blanket underneath it was also covered in blood, Harry rolled it up and it followed the duvet down the side of the house. Harry continued this until the fabrics were free of blood. He cleaned himself up and threw the bloodied towel out of his nest as well before he set to carefully cleaning his baby, taking extreme care with the clamped umbilical cord.

Harry dressed his baby, who was undeniably a boy, in a clean nappy and carefully maneuvered his little limbs into a bodysuit, before overlaying it with a sleepsuit before wrapping him in a blanket and placing him in the knitted cosy toes that Hermione had knitted and place him in the soft, cradle shaped mini nest that he had made to hold his baby as he cleaned up his nest and double checked everything was as it should be.

Once he was cleaned up and feeling a little less shaky, even if he was incredibly tired, Harry plucked his baby back up and held him against his naked chest. He inhaled deeply and smiled as the baby’s scent indicated that he was indeed a baby Dracken. Harry cooed to him and nuzzled his tiny little face.

His baby was bloated and swollen, red skinned and looked like he had been stung by a wasp and had had a bad reaction to it, but to Harry he was the most beautiful baby in the world. He held a tiny hand and kissed it, letting a soft rumble start in his stomach before ending in his throat.

His baby son made a small noise back to him and Harry moved onto his back, bringing his baby up onto his chest. He was still very, very sore and his stomach was still swollen and bumped, even if the bump was turning soft. Harry hoped it was gone soon, he’d had enough of seeing that bump when he was pregnant, he didn’t need to see it now that he wasn’t.

Harry held his baby tightly yet softly as the baby boy fell in and out of sleep on top of him, Harry knew that he should probably get some sleep as well, but he just couldn’t tear his eyes away from his son as he touched and stroked every inch of his baby, feeling the soft pink skin, the silky, baby fine, dark hair, those little lips, his tiny nose, but those eyes, those baby blue eyes that blinked at him, the way they were shaped, the baby definitely took the shape of his eyes directly from his Father.
Nasta smoothed Blaise’s hair from his face as he tucked him up more firmly in the bed. Madam Pomfrey had cleaned him up to the best of her ability, which thankfully was enough so they could feed Blaise their blood and heal the rest of him. He hated the fact that Harry’s anti-coagulant was not affected by the healing properties of Dracken blood.

Everyone that had come in the initial panic had left them in peace, had left to give Blaise time to rest and recover, to give the three remaining dominants room to look after and pamper him.

Blaise would be out of it for a while as he recovered, but the most important thing was that he would heal. Nasta sighed heavily as he laid a kiss against Blaise’s head and let him sleep, Max had given him a strong sleeping potion.

He left Blaise to sleep with a sigh and went back downstairs to the other two dominants.

“How is he?” Draco asked concernedly.

“Sleeping.” Nasta answered tiredly.

“I think this has brought home the seriousness of this situation.” Max said sombly. “We can't take stupid risks anymore, we need to feed Harry yes, but it’ll destroy him to come out of that nest and find out what he’s done to Blaise.”

“It was an accident.” Draco stressed.

“But will Harry see it that way?” Max countered and all of them slipped into silence.

A horrible scream broke them out of their thoughts and immediately all of them gave out a soothing rumble.

“Harry’s in danger!” Draco gasped out, making to run to his mate. Nasta wrapped both arms around him and held him tightly.

“He's not in danger.” Nasta growled back. “He’s just gone into labour, the baby will be here in less than fifteen minutes, we need to prepare.”

Draco nodded and calmed himself down; everyone had been running over ‘the plan’ for a week. He immediately set to his role in the plan, which was making sure that Harry had clean clothes to wear, that a fresh bath was ready for him, with sufficient warming charms to keep the water hot, because he had been up on the roof for two weeks without so much as a shower, and he made sure that every-thing was easily accessible because Harry wouldn’t feel like doing much after giving birth.

Max was setting out potions of all kinds for any sort of problem including a fever reducer, just in case, a strong antibiotic potion just to make sure there was absolutely no trace of infection, a blood replenisher, because he’d definitely need one, and a topical salve that would reduce scarring if Harry hadn’t taken the blood in time. He then set to making a hearty meal; Harry would most definitely be hungry when he came down from the roof.

Nasta was floo calling everyone to inform them of the situation and then he was going to make sure that the nursery was all ready and clean for their baby. He also took on Blaise’s job of making sure there was nothing out of place, because the last thing any submissive Dracken wanted to see was mess. They had been curbing their messy tendencies for a few days, so there wasn’t really much to put away, just a few odd books, a pair of shoes, Max had, of course, left his work case by the coffee table from where he had been doing his paperwork that morning and he flicked the corner of the rug back down from where it had been kicked up.

Harry wouldn’t have to worry about a thing, everything was ready for when he gave birth, bonded with the baby and then came down from his nest in a couple of hours’ time. All three of them gave periodical winces and soothing growls as a particularly loud scream or screech of pain met their ears. It was painful to listen to; no doubt it was even more painful for Harry to endure.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Harry snuggled his baby son, who was looking a lot less like he had had an allergic reaction to a bee sting and he was definitely a lot less water wrinkled.

Harry now had his son’s scent locked in his mind and ingrained in the deepest, most primitive part of his brain. He would be able to track his son to the ends of the earth, not that his baby son was going anywhere without him, not ever.

The Dracken scent that had surrounded his son had dispersed within the first half an hour, but the scent of himself and one of his mate’s remained on his son’s skin, his son’s biological Father.

Harry knew his time alone with his son was coming to an end, he could feel his mates’ restlessness like something thick on the back of his tongue. They were anxious to meet the baby, they were anxious to reconnect with him after however long it had been.

He sighed and finished feeding his son his first bottle, burped him awkwardly and a tad cack-handedly before he let out a small, questioning call. Immediately several strong answering calls cut through the soft day noises and the sound of rushing wind as three large bodies landed on the roof.

Harry smiled happily as Nasta entered his nest and pulled him into a big hug, being so very careful of the tiny body between them.

“It’s good to see you, Harry.” Nasta breathed almost silently as the others all crowded around him and the baby, sniffing and licking. “We’re so proud of you, cariad.”
“He smells like…” Max started as he inhaled deeply.

“I know.” Harry answered with a smile, but it faltered when he realised that someone was missing. “Where’s Blaise?”

Nasta, Max and Draco all shared a look and Harry grew frightened. Had Blaise left? Had he been hurt? Killed?

“Where’s Blaise?!” Harry demanded shrilly.

“He got injured, Harry love. He’s just sleeping.” Max said softly, cupping the back of his head and pulling him forward to rest against his chest.

“Injured how?” Harry asked, though he could take a guess as to how Blaise had gotten injured and he had a feeling that he had been the cause.

“It was an accident, Harry.” Draco assured him as he sniffed, licked and touched his baby in Harry’s arms.

“How did he get injured?” Harry repeated.

“Let’s get down off of the roof first, love, then we’ll tell you everything that has happened in the two weeks you’ve been up here.” Nasta said firmly, leaving no room for argument as he scooped Harry up and instead of jumping from the roof like Max and Draco did, he opted for the smoother way of flapping his wings before he took off. It was slower, but much safer and less jarring for a newborn baby.

Ashleigh huddled against her most dominant mate as the young woman in front of her shielded the small baby from her. Snarling as if she would suddenly up and attack her and the baby.

Amelle had finally given birth to her daughter, Eleonora Dahlia Seppen after spending nearly two months in her nest. Ashleigh thought it was a beautiful name, if only she was allowed to see the beautiful baby that the name had been given to. Eleonora was a few weeks old, she was a magic human if Caesar was to be believed, though Ashleigh prided herself on knowing her son and she knew he wouldn’t have need to lie about something like that.

Caesar was growling at his mate and trying to get his daughter from her, presumably to hand to her to show his mate that she meant the baby no harm, but Amelle had clamped her arms around her baby daughter and was not letting go.

“Stop it!” Ashleigh cried. “Caesar don’t force her, you’ll hurt the baby. It…it’s fine, really.”

Myron held Ashleigh closer to him and glared at his son’s mate. His Wife did not deserve this! She had been through a terrible ordeal, that didn’t make her deranged, unstable or dangerous! She had gone through therapy, she was fine, she wasn’t going to hurt a baby just because she had lost one of her own. The way this little brat was acting made his blood boil, but he calmed himself, he would never strike a woman, not even his own mate, his preferred method of punishment was a simple, sharp twist to the top of the ear. If his mate persisted, he held on as he twisted the ear. But the anger he felt at this woman and her treatment of his Wife, he wanted to curl up his large hands into fists and beat her.

Richard slid an arm around Myron’s bicep, as if he knew what his Husband was thinking. He was thinking similar thoughts, only his were more along the lines of boiling her alive in tar before coating her dead body in feathers and stringing her up for eternity so everyone would know that she was an eternal chicken, nothing but a lowly coward, unwilling to have a bit of faith in a good woman.

Richard hissed, but Ashleigh shushed him. She was being selfless, he could see how much it was hurting her, her first ever Grandchild, her first Granddaughter and she couldn’t even see her let alone hold her. It wasn’t fair. Caesar and Amelle had been here for two days and none of them had been allowed to see Eleonora, let alone hold her, Amelle was not letting go of her daughter.

“Amelle, we haven’t come half way across the world just to fight.” Caesar said strongly. “Our two week old daughter deserves to know her Grandmother!”

“No!” Amelle snarled viciously, turning tail and running to her and Caesar’s room, in his parents’ house that she had been forced to come and visit, slamming the door in her mate’s face and locking it. She whipped out her wand and warded the door so not even Caesar’s physical strength could open the door before curling up on the bed, her precious baby girl held safely in the curve of her body. She wouldn’t let any harm come to her baby, she’d die first.

“Mum, I’m really sorry.” Caesar sighed sadly as he walked back into the living room. He felt so ashamed of Amelle in that moment and he felt guilty for being ashamed of her.
“It’s alright, Caesar.” Ashleigh answered, going to him and hugging him to her. She hated seeing her children upset.

“It’s not though, I love Amelle, I do, but I hate the way she’s acting and no amount of punishment helps.”

“But it isn’t right, Dad!” Caesar answered sadly.

“She believes it’s right.” Myron reiterated.

“Mum! Dad!” Alayla came skidding into the room and almost toppled over her own feet in her haste, being caught just in time as Richard darted to catch her.

“Do be more careful, Alayla.” Richard wheezed out. Strong emotions, especially anger or sadness, always made the scar tissue on his neck tighter and made it more painful to speak.

“But Nasta just flooed us! Harry’s gone into labour; the baby will be here soon. He wants us to come around in a few hours to welcome the baby.”

“That’s if Harry lets me near the baby.” Ashleigh sobbed brokenheartedly.

Caesar let his Dad’s take his Mum from him, though all he wanted to do was hold her and make her feel better, he hated that his mate, his Wife, the Mother of his daughter, had done this to his her. He was going to step up his dominancy over her, Eleonora was his daughter as well and it wasn’t just Amelle who got to decide who saw their daughter and who didn’t.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Harry was led into the bathroom. He had refused to let go of his newly born son for a single moment, his mates hadn’t even held their son yet, as such he had decided to bathe with his baby, but he had allowed Draco to come with them and Harry allowed him to wash him from head to foot, because the blond didn’t trust him to do it himself properly and Harry didn’t much care for personal hygiene at the moment.

“What are you going to call him, Harry?” Draco asked gently, trying not to push as Nasta and Max had warned them that as Harry had only recently slipped out of his feral state, the slightest push could send him feral and aggressive again.

“I don’t know. I never really thought of names, even when I knew he was going to be a boy I never thought of names, does that make me a bad Mum?”

Draco chuckled and kissed Harry lingeringly.

“No, love. It just means you had other things on your mind. Though it would have been hard to pick a name when you had no idea who the potential Father was.”

“He’s so beautiful.” Harry breathed reverently as he just stared endlessly at the baby cradled in his arms.

“Of course he is, he takes after you, love.”

“Really? I thought he looked more like Blaise.”

“The eyes are Blaise’s, but that is definitely your nose and your mouth.”

Harry smiled up at Draco happily and kissed him again. He had missed them all so much. He couldn’t remember his time in the nest, or rather he could, but not clearly, it was the same on his heat period, he could remember bits and pieces, but nothing substantial. But he did know that he ached for his mates. He couldn’t believe that he had hurt Blaise so much. He had demanded to know what had happened and when he had been told he had gone straight to Blaise, the Father to his first child. Well, he had had to be carried as he was so very sore still, but Max’s potion was going to help with that as soon as he had had something to eat.

He had stroked Blaise’s face, looking for similarities between the man in the bed and the baby in his arms, he found them too. His baby was undeniably Blaise’s even without the initial scent of just himself and Blaise on the baby, which had now started to include the other three mates as they licked and rubbed themselves on the baby’s skin.

Draco had whisked him off not too long after that for a bath whilst Max finished up a late dinner.
Harry was dried and dressed in soft, clean pyjamas, the feel of fabric on his skin felt strange after two weeks without wearing anything but his skin.

The baby was dried so very carefully between them, taking such care with the umbilical cord and once again he was clad in a nappy and dressed up in a bodysuit and a sleepsuit, scratch mitts firmly on little hands and little hat pulled down over dark downy hair as he was slid once again into the cosy toes that Harry had taken to carrying his son around in.

Harry went into the kitchen only to be surprised to see Max’s entire family, including Caesar, congregated around the enlarged table, numerous chairs added around it as Max served them all food.

“Harry, sweet one, well done and congratulations!” Alexander Maddison, Max’s awesome Grandfather, called out, having been the first to spot him.

Everyone else turned to him and shouted out their own congratulations and Harry grinned, albeit a bit tiredly, but then he had cut himself open to birth his son only a few hours ago.

“So tell us, is Maxie the baby’s Father?” Alexander asked.

“No. Blaise is.” Harry answered as he was helped into a chair and tucked to the table with his son in his arms.

“Oh well, maybe next time then aye, Maxie? Maybe you should get in there quicker the next time around.”

Nearly everyone choked on their lasagne, except for Harry who started laughing and couldn’t stop.

“Oh ow! It hurts.” He whimpered, pressing a hand to the incision site.

“Eat as much as you can and then you can have potions to help.”

“Give them to him now!” Alexander chided. “You can’t blackmail the poor boy with pain potions to make him eat, Maxie. That won’t put meat on his skinny chicken bones.”

Max rolled his eyes good naturedly. “These potions can't be administered on an empty stomach, Grandfather. It'll make him sick and give him stomach cramps.”

Harry tucked into the first hot meal he had eaten in weeks and he couldn’t hold back the small moan that rolled out of his throat at the first bite. He had missed Max’s cooking.

“There’s appreciation for you, Max!” Caesar ribbed with a smile that was only fifty watts instead of his usual hundred.

Harry blushed, but as soon as his son made a small noise, all of his attention immediately diverted to the baby in the crook of his right arm. His son was still sleeping peacefully. Harry breathed a sigh of relief.

“Have you decided a name for my Grandson?” Myron asked even as he cut off another forkful of lasagne and placed it in his mouth; he’d never get over how good a cook his son was nor stop wondering where the talent had come from.

“No, not yet.” Harry answered back softly before biting into some garlic bread.

“Well hurry up, we can't go around calling him Baby forever.”

Harry smiled, which turned into a yawn, which made his eyes water. His energy was flagging quickly.

“Here, you have enough in your stomach to coat it for the potions.” Max told him as he studied how much he had eaten before passing over three uncorked vials of potion.

One was grey and watery, the second was green and marginally thicker that the first, but it tasted slightly better than the grey one had and the last was a dull yellow and had the same consistence of four-day-old, lumpy custard. It smelt vile, tasted worse and it slimed its way down his throat slowly. Harry hoped to every deity he had ever heard of that he never had to take it again.

“To bed with you, Harry boy!” Alexander shooed him and Harry chuckled, only a slight twinge in his stomach let him know that he really was going to be sore for a while.
“Are you leaving the baby down here with us?” Nasta asked.

Harry immediately shook his head. “He’s staying with me.”

His mates nodded understandingly, but Ashleigh looked very upset.

“Don’t let my presence influence your decision, Harry; I’ll leave if my being here bothers you.”

Harry cocked his head to the side and looked at the upset woman curiously. He felt the urge to shield his baby from her, to run and hide with his son so that this woman couldn’t see him but he shoved it down violently as he moved forward and slowly and carefully eased his son from against his chest and transferred him into a surprised, but elated Ashleigh’s arms.

“Why would you being here bother me? It never has before.” He asked as he stretched out his arms and rotated his shoulders to ease the ache in them, his son did get quite heavy after a while and not being able to move his arms as he pleased made his muscles stiff.

He turned and went to get a drink of water as Ashleigh cooed and kissed his son, giving them some space to prove that he didn’t mind her holding his son, her first Grandson, even if it hadn’t been Max who sired him. It looked like he wasn’t going to get an answer to his question.

His Dracken screamed at him to get back to their baby, to attack Ashleigh and get their son back where they could protect him, to hide from Ashleigh so she couldn’t find them, but he shoved the urge down even further. It screamed at him that she was a danger and Harry stubbornly refused to listen. Ashleigh was a lovely woman and she wouldn’t hurt his children, his senses must have been screwed from the trauma of his self-caesarean section, he’d asked Nasta about it later.

He finished his water and yawned widely behind his hand again. He hugged everyone, leaving Ashleigh for last so she could cuddle his son some more, before he hugged her and took his baby back, he waved goodnight and headed upstairs to bed. If Myron had hugged him tighter than normal and for longer than usual, nothing was said, if the loving, lingering kiss Richard had given to his forehead was out of place, no one mentioned it. Harry certainly noticed nothing as he laid his baby son in the bassinet by his bedside and climbed in beside Blaise, who was still out of it on sleeping potion and didn’t even know that he had a biological son who was sleeping just feet from him. Harry felt guilt consume him, he had done this to Blaise, he was a terrible mate.

Max washed the mountain of dishes as Draco saw everyone out safely. Nasta was drying and putting away the plates and cutlery next to him.

“We have a son.” Max said slightly awed.

“Is it just sinking in?” Nasta asked as he dried the last cup and placed it away, turning with the tea towel draped over his hands.

“I think it is. Seeing my Mum holding him, she was so upset because Amelle, Caesar’s Wife, wouldn’t let her near Eleonora.”

“She must be a real piece of work.”

“She is.” Max replied as he emptied the sink of water and dried his hands on the tea towel that Nasta held. “But I can't believe he’s really here.”

Nasta smirked and bent forward to capture Max’s lips in a kiss. They broke apart slowly.

“Harry has been nesting for how many weeks and you only just accept that we have a baby.”

“I think it’s just seeing him for the first time, he’s so tiny, so beautiful.” Max whispered softly as he pulled the tea towel from Nasta’s hands and threw it around his shoulders instead, using it to pull Nasta into another, more passionate kiss.

Their mouths worked against one another, their tongues stroking and pressing as hands moved to shoulders and arms, caressing and squeezing.

Max tried to take the dominant role by backing Nasta up against the countertop, but Nasta broke the kiss, hooked the backs of his thighs, twisted their positions around and had him sitting on the counter before he could even formulate a way to counteract Nasta’s moves.

He opened his mouth to complain, or perhaps to whine, but Nasta’s tongue was suddenly in his mouth and such amazing sensations took over his body as that tongue flicked against the roof of his mouth. He let out a small sound, meaning it to be in protest of his treatment, but it came out as a needy little moan instead.

Nasta’s hands squeezed the tops of his thighs and Max made another small sound, this one wasn’t even close to being a protest as he wound his fingers through Nasta’s ear length hair, knowing the older man hated having messy hair, but Max couldn’t resist running his fingers through the pitch black, floppy strands of hair.

Max pulled Nasta’s tee-shirt from his back; forcing it over the older man’s head and making him pull his arms out or suffer with cut off circulation to his arms as the fabric dug into his biceps. Max discarded the fabric and grinned at the glaring older man.

He pulled his own shirt from his body, but Nasta pushed him backwards just as his head came free of his shirt and the back of his skull thunked against the kitchen cupboard whilst his arms were still caught by fabric.

“Ow damn it! What was that for?”

“For trying to pop my arms off with my shirt.”

“So you bash my head against a cupboard?”

“Would you have rathered it if I had sunk claws in you?” Nasta threatened softly as he looked up at Max lustily, his dominance coming through and dragging a small sound out of Max’s throat. “I didn’t think so.”

They came together for another kiss, all teeth and tongue as hands explored the newly revealed flesh, pinching and twisting nipples and scratching nails over taut stomachs and sides.

Nasta removed one hand to undo the button on the top of his jeans, lowering the zipper and stepping out of the tight, restricting fabric, pushing his boxer-briefs down with them. He moved to Max’s jeans and undid them, but Max reared back when he made to remove them.

“You’re not seriously considering that we have sex here? On my kitchen counters?!?” He demanded.

“Harry and Blaise are in bed with the baby.”

“I have two spare bedrooms!” Max pointed out. “And two living room settees for that matter!”

“I don’t want to risk waking the baby by going upstairs and I’d rather not be caught in the act by anyone coming through the floo.”
“Silencing charms!” Max yelled out, even as his boxers went past his knees to join his jeans with Nasta’s on the floor.

“Don’t worry, I plan to use them.” Nasta chuckled darkly as he reached out a hand to where he had placed his wand on the adjacent counter, he waved it to silence the kitchen and cast another one to lube his hand. He hated using the conjured stuff, it just wasn’t as good a quality as store bought lube and it was used up quicker, usually before those using it had finishing needing it, but he was sure that Max could handle a bit of friction.

Nasta smeared himself with the excess lube, leaving what was on his fingers as he trailed them up Max’s leg.

“We are not doing this on my kitchen counters!” Max replied adamantly as he moved to get off the counter.

“Who says I’m giving you a choice?” Nasta answered as he pushed Max backwards, thrusting his tongue into Max’s mouth at the same time his fingers slid deep inside of him.

It was an awkward angle for him to work, but Nasta did his best. He was adamant that he would take Max here, if only because the other man didn’t want him to. Besides it was the only room in the house except for the nursery that they hadn’t christened yet, largely due to Max’s love affair with it, it deserved some love as much as the next room and as Harry had told them that if he so much as caught a sniff of sex in his baby’s nursery he’d kill them they had discounted the thought of christening the nursery very quickly.

Nasta methodically prepared Max whilst simultaneously distracting him with kisses and bites, strokes and odd squeezes. When he felt that Max was prepared enough he removed his fingers and pulled Max more to the edge of the countertop.

Max made a startled noise, but before he could say anything Nasta had already smoothed out the lube on himself and slammed himself fully into Max’s body. He buried his face in Max’s shoulder as the tight muscles clenched him tightly, he could feel Max hunching over his head, his breath on the back of his neck as his hands gripped at his shoulders to ground himself.

Nasta slipped his own hands from those strong thighs to wide hips and began moving slowly, spreading the lube so his passage was smoother, before he really started thrusting, biting into Max’s neck to leave his mark. He hadn’t had sex in a month, after getting sex regularly since that first time with Harry he felt positively starved, he had been spoilt by his lovers.

“Nas.” Max breathed out. “I’m not Harry, I’m not a submissive, I can take it harder.”
Nasta grinned against Max’s neck where the other man couldn’t see it as he took his lover at his word and slammed into him, pushing his hips that extra bit harder, inflicting that small bite of pain with his powerful thrusts that had Max rearing his head back and moaning as large hands clenched his shoulders tightly, giving him back some of that pain that had him biting his own tongue to keep from making a noise.

Nasta kept his thrusts powerful, but sporadic, not giving Max a chance to gain back his equilibrium, keeping his lover on the edge, alternating the length of his thrusts and the depth, loving how he made the other man writhe and rendered him unable to speak, as every time he opened his mouth to talk all that came out was a moan or a surprised gasp as Nasta either hit his prostate or caressed his manhood.

The erratic and irregularity of his thrusts had Max reaching orgasm much quicker than he usually would have and the alternate clenching of Max’s inside muscles and the harsh grip he had on his shoulders forced a pleasured grunt from Nasta as he kept thrusting, trying to stave off the inevitable for a little longer, but he lost out as one last thrust threw him over the edge and he released himself inside of Max with another grunt of ecstasy.

He remained inside of Max as they both caught their breaths before he pulled out slowly and carefully, twitching as Max writhed in pleasure as he did so.

“I’m going to be sterilising this counter all night.” Max whined tiredly.

Nasta chuckled. “Go to bed, Max.”

“I can’t believe all you can think about at the moment is the counters.” A guttural voice spoke up from beside them.

Nasta looked over to a partially naked Draco, who was sat in a kitchen chair lazily stroking himself through his pushed down boxers, his recent release on his naked chest and stomach through his opened shirt which was hanging off of his shoulders.

“How long have you been there?” Max asked, his cheeks flushing a bit.

“About the time you started having a hissy fit over having sex on the counters, you do know that I fucked Blaise on them about a week ago don’t you?”

“You did what?!” Max yelled. “Did you at least wash them down afterwards?”

“No. We were too tired to do so and the next morning you had already started breakfast, so we... thought it best not to say anything.”

Max mouthed uncomprehendingly for a few moments before Nasta took pity on him and kissed him.

“He’s teasing you, love. Draco, you shouldn’t say things like that to poor Max, he might have suffered from heart failure.”

Draco chuckled and wiped his hand on his discarded shirt, using it to also wipe up the mess he had made on his chest and stomach.

“You had better not have gotten anything on my table.” Max threatened.

Draco laughed this time, such a smooth, cultured sound, made sexy by the hint of a growl from his own pleasure.

“Give me some credit, Max. I’m a Malfoy. Malfoy’s don’t make messes like that.” Draco answered, picking up his clothing and smirking to the two watching men. “I’ll see you in the morning.

“Where are you going?” Max demanded.

“To claim the prized spot next to Harry in the bed of course. Blaise has one side, I want the other.”

Nasta shook his head and let out a chuckle. Draco had certainly become more confident in the last few months and it wasn’t the false confidence that he layered up as armour either, but a natural confidence that spoke of his comfort with them all.

“Going to claim the prized spot.” Max scoffed. “His ass is mine.”

“Be gentle with him, love, he’s new to bottoming, it’ll only be his third time, we don’t want to frighten him or scare him away. We can go easy on him until Harry goes into heat next, then his ass will be both of ours.” Nasta promised.

Max chuckled darkly before he kissed Nasta and scooped up their clothing. He could leave the counters until the morning, he was going to be the one making breakfast anyway, he wouldn’t soon forget what had happened on his counters, so he wasn’t likely to forget to disinfect and sterilise the counters before he started cooking tomorrow.

They cleaned themselves up a bit in the bathroom before they slipped into the bedroom, closing the door behind them. They each peeked into the bassinet holding their son, swaddled in a blanket and sleeping peacefully, before they shared one last kiss before climbing into the bed, Nasta behind a potion laced Blaise and Max behind Draco, who shifted around to get comfortable, Harry deeply asleep in his arms.

Max chuckled darkly before he kissed Nasta and scooped up their clothing. He could leave the counters until the morning, he was going to be the one making breakfast anyway, he wouldn’t soon forget what had happened on his counters, so he wasn’t likely to forget to disinfect and sterilise the counters before he started cooking tomorrow.

They cleaned themselves up a bit in the bathroom before they slipped into the bedroom, closing the door behind them. Chapter Forty-One – Five Men and a Baby.

Max groaned as he rolled over to the wailing baby right beside him. Why the hell had he picked the side of the bed that had the newborn baby on it? The newborn baby who would wake up every four hours for a feed.

He got out of the bed and scooped the screaming baby up to his chest and he wandered down to the kitchen before the baby could wake up anyone else. He did nod to Nasta first, who was watching him sleepily, indicating that he would take their son to get a feed. He might as well seeing as he was already up.

Blaise didn’t move from his spot, Draco rolled over and Harry made a small sound, blinking open his eyes and searching for his errant baby with sleepy, pain clouded eyes.

“Calm down, love. Max has him.” Nasta soothed in a whisper as Harry bolted upright in panic before recoiling in pain at the sudden, sharpness that had gone through his abdomen.

Harry nodded his understanding and rubbed his belly that had started aching as soon as the pain had receded from trying to sit up. His stomach muscles were on fire.

“You tore into your own body, it’ll be a while for you to heal completely, the blood and potions can
Harry nodded and turned to face Nasta, cuddling up to Blaise and reaching for Nasta on the other side of him.

Draco moved over to his back and pressed against him, keeping his body temperature up. They all fell asleep again quickly.

Downstairs Max held a suckling baby tightly, swaying slightly as his eyes drooped with tiredness. He moved, startled, when he almost fell asleep standing up. He had had little sleep the night before, maybe it had been a mistake to offer to feed the baby tonight.

He clumsily turned on the tap without taking the bottle from the baby’s mouth and put his elbow under the stream of icy cold water, his body shivering immediately as his arm broke out into goosebumps. He felt more alert, more awake, but he knew it was only a temporary measure until he could get back in bed.

The baby finished his suckling and Max hefted him over one of his bare shoulders and patted that tiny back as hard as he dared, which wasn’t very hard at all, he had handled plates with a firmer hand, but the newborn boy let out a small sound which might have been a burp, but was confirmed when a warm wetness slid down his back, the baby had spit up on him.

Max groaned in annoyance and gingerly removed the baby from his shoulder, grabbing one of the soft cloths from next to his oven gloves that Harry had bought especially for burping the baby, he could have kicked himself for forgetting to use the azure blue burping cloth, Harry had put one in nearly every room of the house before he had started nesting.

He wiped the spit up milk from the baby’s mouth and chin and threw it onto the floor to sort out tomorrow, he was too tired to deal with it at the moment. He carried the baby back upstairs after swaddling him back in his blanket and Max placed him back into the bassinet, taking note that the others were all fast asleep again.

He could feel the spit up milk sliding further down his back and he pulled a face before going to the bathroom to deal with it. He leant over the bath and ran the shower head over it, shivering as the water hadn’t had time to heat up and he was too tired, too impatient to wait. Max wiped the water off of his body before cursing as he had left his wand on the bedside table. He went back into the bedroom as quietly as he could, snatched up his wand and cast a drying and warming charm on himself before he sank onto the bed and scooted over to spoon behind Draco, he fell asleep almost as soon as his head touched the pillow.

Harry woke up at four in the morning, used to rising just before the sun came out and seared his eyeballs from his time on the roof.

He was happy to note that the bump had gone down some whilst he had been asleep, but there was still a considerable amount to get rid of, he made a mental note to remember to do some stomach toning exercises later to help shift the excess skin as his muscles slid back together.
Harry carefully extracted himself from the pile of bodies that he was in the centre of before he stretched and scooped the tiny bundle out of the bassinet and carried him down the stairs carefully and into the living room to snuggle a bit.

“I have no idea what to name you, love.” Harry whispered softly. “You’ll definitely have your Father’s name, but not as a first name, you need some originality and an identity away from your Father.”

The baby boy slept on peacefully, undisturbed by Harry’s spoken musings or the gentle rocking movements he made.

“I know I should perhaps let the others in on the naming, have a discussion or something, but you’re mine. I can’t explain it, I carried you for six and a half months, you’re mine, mine forever and I should be the one to name you. No one else.”

Harry sighed and sat back in the chair, staring into space, wondering about his son, about his mates and what to name the little baby in his arms.

“Perhaps I should name you after Blaise’s Father, I think he’d like that, but Maximiliano sounds a lot like Maximilius, I don’t want anyone to ever confuse your parentage.”

Harry sighed and stood up to go into the kitchen, there was a bassinet next to the kitchen table and Harry smiled happily at his mates’ thoughtfulness to put a bassinet in the room that they spent so much time in, this way his baby wouldn’t ever be too far from him.

Harry placed his son down carefully and looked around the kitchen, he spied the soiled burp cloth and grinned, someone had had a nasty surprise last night. He wondered if Max would mind if he made breakfast today, he was feeling a bit restless after spending so much time in his nest doing little else other than eating and lounging around and now that he didn’t have a baby to protect he was going to enjoy doing everything he had missed out on, like running, jumping, flying and having sex. Yes sex sounded absolutely amazing, but he’d have to wait for his mates, that and someone to take his baby for a few hours because he refused to have sex next to his baby and likewise he would not leave his son in a different room unattended, so sex would have to wait.

Harry peeked in the cupboards and the cold storage and decided that they were long overdue for a full English breakfast. Max refused to cook it, said that the grease that was left behind could plaster up wallpaper, but Harry had missed his fry-ups and he knew that both Draco and Blaise ate English breakfasts, even if Max didn’t and Nasta’s Dad would have rathered fed his son cyanide. It wouldn’t kill them to have a fry-up once in a blue moon and after spending over six months eating healthily he wanted something unhealthy and laden with grease to sink his teeth into.

Harry pulled out the disinfectant wipes, not taking any chances with his son in the room, and he wiped down everything. He pulled out everything he needed to make breakfast and set to work, stopping only to make up a bottle to feed his wailing son. He made sure to use a burping cloth to burp his son, though thankfully it wasn’t needed.

Harry was just plating up the first of the breakfast things with warming charms on them when Blaise groggily came into the room, he visibly startled at seeing Harry in the kitchen and it took him a moment to realise what it meant, when he did realise what it meant his eyes slid to the bassinet and the newborn it held.

“Morning, Blaise.” Harry greeted softly. “I’m so sorry I hurt you so badly. I didn’t mean to, I love you so much.”

Blaise came to him and held him strongly.

“I adore you, mio amore. I love you, Harry, with all of my heart. I don’t care about a little scratch as long as you’re alright. How long was I out to miss the birth of the baby?”

“Only yesterday evening and last night. I went into labour a few hours after I hurt you. I think it started just after I’d finished gorging myself on the food you brought for me.”

Blaise smiled and kissed him, Harry was the one who added his tongue into the kiss and Blaise reciprocated, wrapping arms around him tightly.

“I missed you, Harry love.” Blaise whispered as they panted with their faces inches from each other’s.

“I missed you too, Blaise. But come, come and see our son!”

Harry dragged Blaise over to their son and proudly stood by as Blaise looked at the newborn baby. Blaise gingerly pushed his arm under the baby’s body and used his other hand to cup the neck and back of the head before he lifted the tiny baby from the bassinet.

“He’s beautiful, Harry; he looks so much like you.”

“He looks like you as well.”
Blaise’s head snapped to him and Harry grinned.

“Don’t tease me about that, Harry.”

“I’m not teasing you, he’s yours.” Harry replied with a smile as he wrapped arms around Blaise’s waist and cuddled up to him.

“Mine.” Blaise whispered, bringing the baby to his face and inhaling the scent of the baby deep into his Dracken memory.

Harry kissed the baby before kissing Blaise and going back to the food before it burnt.

“I can’t believe that I missed the birth of my own biological son.” Blaise said sadly.

“Don’t worry, love, there will be many more to come, you can’t possibly miss them all.” Harry smiled as he plated up some more bacon before making Blaise a full plate and putting it on the table.

Blaise sat down in front of the plate, the baby still held in his one arm, the hand of his other arm delicately tracing the facial features of the baby, recognising his eyes and his chin now that he looked for them.

“He’s got your nose and mouth.”

“So I’ve been told.” Harry replied happily.

“I hope he has your eye colour.”

“As long as he doesn’t get my hair I’ll be happy.”

Blaise chuckled. “I like your hair.”
“Draco would throw a fit.”

“Let him.” Blaise said softly as he kissed the baby and let Harry take him from him. “What’s his name?”

“I haven’t thought of one yet.” Harry said truthfully. “But I’ll come up with one soon; I won't let him be baby boy Zabini for long.”

“You want him to have my last name?”

“And your first.”

Harry felt his heart ache as Blaise looked so happy and a tad tearful at Harry’s declaration. He put the baby back in the bassinet and went back to cooking, giving Blaise more as he finished it.

“You’re as bad as Max; I don’t need any more food, love.”

“This is the first time since we’ve been together that I’ve been allowed to cook. Max won’t let anyone near the kitchen and I like cooking sometimes. Not all the time and definitely not as much as Max does, but I do like doing it now and then. I’ve got to make the most of it while I can.”

Blaise chuckled and allowed Harry to put several more sausages onto his plate. Harry wasn’t a bad cook at all and it had been so long since he had last had an English breakfast, he could indulge a little given the circumstances he was celebrating. He had a son; he was seventeen with a beautiful young man as a mate, three more men as lovers and a newborn son. He was so happy.

Nasta walked into the kitchen in just a pair of boxers and Harry quickly made him a plate of food and served him. Nasta pulled him into a passionate kiss and Harry smiled a bit dopily when he was released.

“Max will have your ass when he realises you’ve rendered him useless for the morning.” Nasta told him.

“He can do the dishes if he wants to. I hate doing the dishes.”
Harry was confused by the evil grin that spread over Nasta’s face and the gleam of lust in those hazel eyes.

“I’m sure he’d love to do the dishes.” Nasta replied with no hint of sarcasm as he started eating.

“Who’d love to do the dishes?” Draco asked as he sauntered into the room and sat next to Blaise.

“Max.” Harry answered as he happily served him a plate of food.

Draco chuckled darkly. “Max would love to do the dishes.”

Harry shared a look with Blaise who shrugged. At least he wasn’t the only one left out of the loop.

“Does Max not like the dishes anymore?” Harry asked confusedly.

“Max loves the dishes still, not too sure he likes his counters though.”

“Okay, I’m thoroughly confused so I’m just going to tend to the baby and perhaps go back to bed because I’m getting tired again.”

“You over did it.” Nasta sighed. “You’ve only just come out of your nest; you cut yourself wide open just yesterday, not even twenty-four hours ago.”

“No.” Harry replied thoughtfully as he looked at the kitchen clock. It was solar powered by the bright sunlight coming through the wide, unadorned kitchen window. “About fourteen hours ago. That doesn’t seem too long ago when it’s put like that but it feels like weeks.”

“You shouldn’t be pushing yourself so much, you should be resting, potions can’t do everything, you need rest to recover fully, Harry.” Nasta told him seriously.

“Alright, alright. I’ll happily go back to bed after I’ve eaten something.”
“You haven’t eaten yet?” Draco asked.

“No.”

“Then park your arse and eat something.” Draco told him.

Harry smiled and did as he was told, taking the seat next to Draco. The seat that was right beside the bassinet that was parked right next to the end of the table.

“Why is Max still sleeping?” Blaise asked curiously. “He’s normally up early and I don’t think he’s ever slept in so late before.”

“He woke up with the baby in the night.” Nasta said, cutting over whatever Draco was about to say.

“Oh.” Blaise had no idea how to take that comment. He didn’t like that someone had gotten up to tend to his son when he himself had been sleeping, regardless of whether it had been potion induced or not.

“I still wouldn’t have thought he’d sleep so late.” Harry replied between bites of toast and fried egg.

“His family are coming around today so he’ll be up. My brother went to get my Dad in Cairo and they will likely be here by this afternoon.” Nasta replied.

“Your Dad went on another business trip?”

“He’s always on a business trip.” Nasta replied with a reminiscent smile.

“You miss travelling the world don’t you?”

“Sometimes. I miss seeing different cultures, learning different languages and interacting with different people from around the world.”
“Maybe we could all go on holiday together.” Harry hedged a bit uncertainly. “I know the baby has just been born, but maybe in a year’s time we could possibly go somewhere.”

“We have no idea when you could start going on heat. You could start as early as six months’ time; you could be pregnant again by next year.”

“Oh.” Harry replied down heartened. “I’m never going to be able to do anything again, am I?” He asked sadly.

“What makes you say that?” Draco asked.

“If I’m always going to be pregnant, then I’ll never be able to do anything that I want to do. If we can't even go on holiday together with our children because I’m pregnant, I feel like I’m ruining everything, everyone’s plans. The kids are going to hate me.”

The three men all made noises of disagreement and smothered him in strong hugs, soothing and reassuring him, but Harry couldn’t help but feel that they were empty words. He had hated not being able to go on holiday when he was a child, he had hated being left behind at Mrs Figgs, he had hated the Dursleys for leaving him behind. If he was the thing stopping his children from going on holiday, then they were going to hate him like he had hated the Dursleys.

Harry smiled and thanked his mates for their hugs and kisses, he excused himself as quickly as he could which came in the form of his unnamed son suddenly emitting a smell that would wilt flowers.

“Dear Merlin, what have you been feeding him?” Draco asked, who was second closest to the baby after Harry.

“He’s only had a few bottles of milk.”

“Circe was that milk spoilt and left to ferment for several years?”

Harry frowned as he scooped his son up. “You’re going to hurt his feelings!” He chastised.

“Harry, he’s less than a day old! He doesn’t know what we’re saying!”
“He can pick up on your negativity!” Harry hissed as he left the kitchen to tend to his dirty son.

“Don’t worry, sweetie, Mummy still loves you. Mummy will change all of your dirty nappies happily, if only to torture you mercilessly with the knowledge when you’re a teenager and bring a girl or boyfriend home.”

Harry carried the baby into the bathroom and used the closed down toilet seat as a changing mat, because he had no idea where his mates had put the actual changing table they had bought. He pulled the poppers on the sleepsuit and the bodysuit and hoisted them above his son’s waist before he peeled the fastenings on the nappy away from the front of it.

The smell increased and actually made his eyes water as he pulled the nappy from his son’s body and set to cleaning him up, thankful that he had insisted on keeping a pack of nappies and wipes in both bathrooms.

“Hell, I think Draco was right, we should call you stinky from now on.” Harry said as he wiped his son’s bum, pulling a face at the thick, greenish-black tar like substance on his baby’s skin. “Oh ick! I got it on my fingers!”

Harry’s pulled face remained all throughout the cleaning until he had powdered and covered his son with a new nappy. He quickly washed his hands and even used an extra pump of liquid hand soap.

“Your Daddy is seriously going to be changing you next.” Harry said as he swaddled his son back in his blanket and headed to the bedroom after chucking the soiled nappy in the bathroom bin. He had handled it as much as he was going to, someone else could change the bins.

Harry smiled at the site of Max spread over the entire bed, sleeping happily on his stomach wearing absolutely nothing, the duvet pooled on the floor, yet hanging on by one foot, the corner twisted around his ankle.

“This is your Daddy Max. He’s impossible yet adorable.” Harry whispered as he swaddled his son up tighter and placed him in his bassinet before hefting the duvet onto the bed and covering Max with it.

Max grumbled and mumbled into the pillow, his voice muffled by the fabric.

“I didn’t quite catch that, love.” Harry said softly with a grin.
A thickly muscled arm shot out and dragged Harry onto the bed and under the duvet and he was held prisoner there by the same arm and a leg that hooked over his back.

“I said it was on the floor for a reason.” Max said more clearly as he removed his face from the pillow, darting forward to give Harry a kiss before dropping his face back into the pillow.

“What reason would that be?” Harry asked, though he could take an educated guess.

“Love, it’s the middle of August! It’s got to be thirty degrees out there!”

“It’s twenty-four actually, but there is absolutely no wind, which makes it seem hotter.” Harry replied as he snuggled up to Max.

“Still too hot for blankets.” Max replied, but he made no move to dislodge the duvet that was covering himself and Harry. “It’s alright for you, laying on the roof in nothing but your birthday suit, tanning yourself in the sweltering heat, it probably feels cool in here to you.”

“Keep your voice down or you’ll wake the baby.”

“Baby’s here?” Max asked as he tried to look over his own shoulder to see into the bassinet.

“The baby has been here since yesterday evening, yes.”

Max flicked his cheek. “You know exactly what I meant. Has Blaise met him?”

“Of course he has, he seemed a bit shell shocked really.”

“I can’t imagine why, he went to sleep and when he wakes up, poof you’re back in the house and the baby’s here. Poor sod must think he’s going mad.”

“He seemed fine, like I said a bit shell shocked but he’s taken to Fatherhood really well.”
“He is the more mature out of the younger doms, no matter how much Draco tries to kid himself and act older he just comes across as…I don’t know, naïve isn’t really the right word for it, but he just acts younger, like he’s been sheltered for his whole life.”

“I think he has been sheltered his whole life, his parents really love him. He misses them.”

“They’ll come around, Harry, this isn’t your fault. Draco loves you; he wants to be with you. If you gave him a choice between his Mother and Father or you and the baby, he’d choose you.”

“He shouldn’t have to choose between his lovers and his parents.”

“No, no he shouldn’t, but his Father has pressed the issue and Draco chose anyway. He’s made it clear to them that he is with you and he isn’t leaving, it’s up to them now to decide if they want their only son in their lives.”

Harry made a small noise of acknowledgement and snuggled into his pillow and further into Max, who groaned and cuddled up tighter.

“I really should be getting up; the others will be wanting breakfast.” Max groaned.

“You can stay here with me.” Harry purred into Max’s ear. “I made breakfast this morning, so you don’t have to.”

Max shivered as he heard Harry’s tone of voice before something he thought of made his eyes widen. “Did you wipe down the counters?”

“Max, seriously, you wash those counters several times a day! It’s not healthy!”

“No! No, no, no, no.” Max bolted out of the bed, taking the duvet with him, and he ran out of the bedroom, presumably to the kitchen.

Harry sighed and sat up; it looked like he wasn’t getting any sleep this morning. He scooped his son up and went to the source of the ruckus.

He found Nasta holding Max with his teeth biting into his neck. It was obvious why as Draco was helping a stunned and slightly pained Blaise from the floor.

“Maximilius Diadesen Maddison, what the hell is wrong with you?” Harry demanded as he went to see if Blaise was alright.

Max shuddered. “You sounded just like my Mother when she was angry.”

“I will act like your damned Mother if you carry on, you could have hurt Blaise even more! He doesn’t need any other injuries on top of the ones that I gave him!”

“It was my fault, Prezioso, I should not have gotten so close to you. I knew what would happen when I did, but I just had to see you, smell you. I was foolish.”

Harry smiled at Blaise and kissed him.

“You don’t understand!” Max panted as he looked at all the dishes and splotches of food on his countertop, on that countertop.

“Then tell me so I do understand. You were asleep, I was awake and I was hungry, so I made breakfast for once, it’s not the end of the world, Max. I like cooking too now and then!”

“But the countertop, it’s…we…I.”

Harry started getting upset and it showed. Nasta stepped in smoothly and held Harry tightly to comfort him.

“What Max is trying to bumble out of his big mouth is that we had sex last night on the countertop, he thought he would be cooking so he didn’t wipe it down last night, thinking he’d do it this morning. I believe he is less concerned with you actually cooking, but more with if you actually sterilised the counter before you started cooking.”
“It would serve you all right if I hadn’t! Having sex without me.”

“I was still out of it on sleeping potions.” Blaise shrugged. “I had no idea either.”

Harry looked to Draco, who went faintly pink.

“I watched them from the kitchen table.”

“I feel a bit left out, don’t you, Blaise?”

Blaise nodded to Harry’s question, but he chuckled slightly as he caught on to what Harry was implying.

“You’re going to be too sore for sex for a few days.” Nasta shot down immediately. “Either giving or receiving.” He added as Harry opened his mouth. “You’ll do damage to your healing stomach muscles.”

Harry huffed and cuddled his son tighter. “I know when I’m not wanted. I’m going to bed; at least my baby will still touch me.”

“Harry…”

But Harry carried on up the stairs. He grinned to himself, perhaps in a few days his mates would be wound up enough to give him what he wanted, until then he’d play the sexually frustrated submissive to a tee, he was going to tease his mates into a sexual frenzy, or into insanity, whichever one came first.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Nasta was getting a headache. Draco and Max were arguing in the kitchen and Blaise had gone off to another room after Harry had sulkily gone to bed. He needed a headache potion, or some pleasurable release, whichever came first, though if Harry had his way then he’d be taking headache potions for the rest of his life.
He had to get away from the two twits in the kitchen, he hoped their argument didn’t escalate or get louder, the last thing he wanted to hear right now was the shrill cries of a distressed newborn baby. His head wouldn’t be able to take the pain of it.

He wandered into the living room to find Blaise sitting on the settee a bit dejectedly. He hadn’t thought for a moment that Blaise would feel hurt by him, Max and Draco having sex together, even if Draco had only been watching and masturbating.

He sat down beside him and threw an arm around his shoulders, but Blaise pushed him off before turning to look at him with such a look on his face. Nasta felt his stomach drop, he liked Blaise, loved him even, he didn’t want to be on the receiving end of such a look from one he loved.

“Do you think I’m a submissive?!” Blaise demanded, his accent going thicker in his anger.

“No, of course not, Blaise.” Nasta replied immediately.

“Don’t lie! You all treat me as lesser, you treat me like Harry, like I’m easy to break. So I got hurt, I can handle it! I don’t need to be mollycoddled! So I like receiving as much as giving, does that make me a lesser man? A lesser dominant than the rest of you?”

Nasta sighed, he knew now what this was about and he twisted to face Blaise.

“We don’t see you as a submissive, Blaise, we don’t see you as lesser, I certainly don’t. I take care of you because I love you. I pamper you because it makes me feel better, I pamper Harry, I pamper you, I pamper Max as much as he allows me to and I’d pamper Draco if he’d let me. It has nothing to do with seeing you as lesser or more submissive, you are just more secure in who you are and what you want than the other two hot heads in the kitchen, so you allow me to do more, which makes me happy.”

“So you don’t think I’m a lesser man just because I like being topped? Because I wouldn’t fight for dominance and willingly allowed the three of you to become more dominant than I am?”

Nasta chuckled and pulled Blaise forward with a hand to the back of his head, resting their foreheads together.

“You are not a lesser man for going after what you want. Fighting doesn’t prove that you’re a man, Blaise; it only proves that you’re an idiot by having your head knocked around by other idiots. You said it yourself, you allowed us to become dominant to you, we didn’t earn that place. For all we know you could be a martial arts genius and hand our arses to us in a fight, but you didn’t fight us, so we’ll never know. That doesn’t make you weaker, lesser or submissive, it makes you smart. You are a smart, secure man who likes sex and there is absolutely nothing wrong with that.”

Blaise smiled and relaxed against Nasta. He felt better knowing that the older man didn’t see him as weak, that he didn’t consider him lesser. An arm came around him and pulled him into a cuddle. He went to break the hold, but then thought better of it; he was not an insecure woman! The other man had said he wasn’t weak, was having a cuddle really such a weakness?

Nasta smiled happily as Blaise settled down in his arms after a moment of tension. Perhaps now Blaise would accept his cwtches more readily. He was a loving guy, he liked hugs, he liked kisses, he had four men around him and it pained him that only one of them readily accepted his shows of affection and love. He wanted to be able to walk up to Draco and hold him from behind like honeymoon lovers, he wanted to hold hands with Max now and then just because he liked the contact, he wanted to sit cuddled up with Blaise like he was now, but they often snubbed him, brushed him off or turned him away. Not always, but often enough that it upset him. He wanted to care for them, to love them to his fullest extent and he would, if only they’d let him.

Nasta shifted his body to lay on the settee and pulled Blaise on top of him, still holding him tightly, slightly afraid that if he let him go then he’d move away from his hug. He grimaced as his movement caused a spike of pain to sear through his head.

“What’s wrong?” Blaise asked.

“Headache.” Nasta grunted.

“Why don’t you get a headache potion for it?”

“I locked Max and Draco in the kitchen because they’re fighting like babies.”

Blaise grinned and Nasta felt his heart speed up just a bit. “I heard that really good sex cures headaches, it’s apparently what Muggles use instead of potions.”

Nasta chuckled and pulled Blaise into a kiss. Usually Blaise let him take claim to his mouth, but today, today Blaise fought back with everything he had and Nasta found himself panting, out of breath as Blaise mapped out his mouth with his tongue.

“You want to take the dominant role today, Blaise?” Nasta asked, or rather offered to the younger man.
“You…you’d let me top you? Why?”

“Because I’m thirty-seven, Blaise. I know who I am and what I want out of life, I don’t mind bottoming to those I love because it won’t change anything for me. Making love to those you love so deeply is making love to those you love no matter who is on top or who is on bottom, it’ll still be love making. I’m not half as insecure as the rest of you, I don’t care, I don’t try to find a deeper meaning to it, I don’t over analyse it. Its love making and I love you, there’s no need to analyse anything, there is nothing to analyse. I love you, end of story.”

Blaise smiled and moved to kiss Nasta more forcefully. Nasta shoved his knee under Blaise’s body and lifted the smaller and lighter man until he was fully on top of him, proving that he had absolutely no problems with the other man completely dominating him, and he didn’t. Nasta really couldn’t care less if he was on top or being topped as long as he was connected to those that he loved.

Blaise was slightly unsure of himself, he had topped Harry, of course, but Nasta was a lot different to the small and slight Harry. How awkward would it be to have sex with a man bigger than he was?

“Stop thinking so much about it.” Nasta coached him. “You do love me, don’t you?”

“Of course.” Blaise replied immediately. “I love all of you.”

“Then let your love dictate your actions.”

Blaise took the advice seriously and he began mapping out Nasta’s chest with his hands, lowering his mouth to the skin to lick, suck and nibble on it. He licked Nasta’s skin like he would an ice cream, repetitive licks to the same spot, tasting him, savouring him like he would a sweet. Nasta tasted good and it hardened parts of him that he pushed into Nasta’s thigh.

Blaise took his time to explore Nasta fully; he had never had the chance to before, not really and never one-on-one. Nasta wasn’t idle either as he pulled clothing from Blaise, the very same pyjamas that he had dressed the younger man in yesterday. Blaise was healed completely; his stomach wound not even a scar.

“We need lube.” Blaise gasped, breaking the fierce kiss.

Nasta cursed as he realised that he was wearing just his boxers and his wand was upstairs. Blaise’s wand had been put on the bedside table and he hadn’t picked it up when he’d come down.
“Just do it without.” Nasta finally said after realising he did not want to move to go and get a bottle of lubricant.

“No.” Blaise answered as he stood up and jogged out of the room.

Nasta watched Blaise’s perfect arse as he went, a naughty grin on his face as he watched it bounce. It was almost criminal to have sex and not sink himself into Blaise. His cock throbbed at the thought and he lowered a hand to stroke himself lightly.

Blaise was back quickly with a bottle of lubricant that Nasta was pleased to note was his favourite. There were five of them living together and they all had different preferences for different lubricants, as a result there were at least six different bottles of lube in the house, unfortunately they were mainly in the bedroom drawers and bathroom cabinet.

Blaise slicked his fingers quickly and Nasta grinned at the impatience of youth.

“I…I’ve only ever done Harry before and he’s a lot different to you are.”

It was as close as he was ever going to admit that he didn’t really know what he was doing with the older, more experienced man.

“Don’t worry about it, Blaise. It all works the same way, only I want it rougher than you give to Harry.”

Blaise’s pupils dilated at those words and he sucked his top lip into his mouth and nipped at it before letting it go and letting out a shuddering breath.

His long, slim fingers found Nasta’s entrance and pressed lightly.

“I just told you that I’m not Harry, I don’t need you to be soft and gentle, a bit of blood and pain never hurt anyone.”

“There are some who would disagree.” Blaise whispered heavily.

“Let them, I know my own body, I know what I like and I know what I want. Just give it to me, Blaise.”
Blaise pushed his fingers straight into Nasta and the older man arched into him, his mouth opened in a silent moan, his eyes closed in that pleasurable first penetration.

Blaise explored inside of Nasta as he had the outside of him, curiously moving his fingers in different ways, pressing harder, twisting his fingers, curling them. He had never done this to Harry, he had always been so afraid of hurting him, when perhaps he shouldn’t have been, but he took encouragement and confidence from the way that Nasta moved under him, the soft noises of pleasure he made.

“Please, Blaise.” Nasta breathed and Blaise didn’t have the will power to deny the older man as he squirted more lube onto his hands, slicked himself up and pushed into Nasta, who dragged him in further with his powerful legs.

Blaise had to stop for a moment even as Nasta urged him on, he couldn’t move or he’d just lose all self-control and cum then and there.

Once he felt able to breathe through his urge to just give in and orgasm, he moved slowly, gently, almost tentatively. Nasta groaned as he tried to get Blaise to move harder.

“Blaise!” He growled out.

Blaise pushed a bit harder, but nowhere near as hard as Nasta wanted him.

“Damn it, Blaise!” Nasta growled in frustration. “Don’t make me regret putting you on top!”

Blaise shoved as hard as he could and Nasta’s head dropped back against the arm of the settee, Blaise put his all into every thrust and took pleasure and confidence from the noises that Nasta made. His legs ached with the effort, his stomach muscles burnt with the strain, his arms wobbled the longer he held himself suspended over Nasta’s sweat slicked body, but he carried on thrusting regardless, thinking only of giving Nasta pleasure, his own was secondary.

“That’s it, Blaise, right there.” Nasta gasped out, his jaw clenching as the coil in his stomach wound tighter and tighter until it snapped and his orgasm took over his entire body as a wordless scream tore itself from his throat.

The clenching undid Blaise and he just collapsed on Nasta’s chest as his own orgasm took over him, out of breath, aching, sweating and writhing through the white wash of pleasure.
It took them both a while to get their breath back and even longer before they could speak and even then they sounded out of breath.

“Now that was love making.” Nasta said with a grin, pulling Blaise into a kiss.

Blaise moaned his protest at being moved.

“I feel like I’ve been hit by the Knight bus.”

“That’s how real sex should feel after every coupling, that ache is how you know you’ve pleasured your lover to your fullest capacity.”

“No wonder your abdomen is like steel if you do it like that every single time you have sex.”

Nasta laughed full throatedly and made Blaise shiver.

“It’s not just the stomach that gets a work out.” Nasta said with a grin, indicating his muscled arms and thick thighs.

“I ache all over so I can’t tell which areas I’ve worked out, but if I keep this up and end up looking like you, I’ll be a very happy man.”

Nasta laughed again and pulled Blaise into a cwtch.

“I think I took all your aches into my own body.” Blaise moaned.

“What do you mean?”

“You don’t have your headache anymore do you?”

Nasta startled at that. “No. No I don’t.” He laughed again in wonderment. “All those women that said no to sex because of headaches, they should have just accepted the natural remedy. Muggles have it right, fuck potions; I want sex every time I have a headache.”

“In this house you’d never be out of bed.” Blaise teased.

“Maybe that’s the point.”

It was Blaise’s turn to laugh and Nasta lay on the settee and watched the laughter light up Blaise’s eyes; transform his face into a young, happy man. He looked gorgeous with his face lit up with laughter.

He pulled a startled Blaise into a long kiss, more of a snog really as he pushed his tongue into Blaise’s mouth, his body twitching with renewed heat.

“I don’t think I can do that again.” Blaise said a hint of regret in his voice.

“You can’t, but I can.” Nasta purred as he grabbed Blaise and rolled them off of the settee and onto the floor.

They kissed and rubbed their bodies together Blaise pushing against Nasta’s shoulder to roll him over and reclaim his position on top. Nasta used the momentum and rolled him right back over again and locked his body tight, making it impossible for Blaise to move the bigger, stronger, heavier man from on top of him.

Blaise chuckled as he saw that Nasta’s left hand had a death grip on the bottle of lube. That sorted that out.

Nasta pushed his tongue down Blaise’s throat, flicking the tip and shivering as Blaise moaned, sending the vibrations down his tongue and straight to his throbbing cock, he was so hard it hurt.

The both of them had ended up on the thick, plush rug in front of Max’s wood burning fireplace. It was so romantic it hurt Blaise’s teeth, he remembered being with Harry in front of a very similar fireplace at Hogwarts, cuddled up, just the two of them in the afterglow of really good sex, just holding and touching one another, enjoying the warmth of the fire.

Nasta quickly, well as quickly as he could one-handedly, his left hand on top of that, lubed up his fingers and set to stretching Blaise. He returned the favour of exploring Blaise, but he used every technique that he knew felt good and he watched as Blaise’s cheeks flushed red with his pleasure as he continuously stimulated the tiny little O shaped gland inside of Blaise.

“Please! Please I’m going to…going to cum!” Blaise panted out, pushing at Nasta’s chest to try and remove him from his body.
“Don’t fight the urge, Blaise.” Nasta breathed sultrily.

Either Blaise took the advice or he couldn’t hold back any longer as his back arched from the rug, his elbows digging into it as he orgasmed over his chest, screaming Nasta’s name.

Nasta removed his fingers slowly, shivering as Blaise rhythmically clenched around them. He squeezed more lube onto his hands and rubbed them together to warm it up before applying it to himself, making sure he was completely covered before he pressed himself into Blaise, who cried out. Nasta was considerably bigger than his fingers.

Nasta removed his fingers slowly, shivering as Blaise rhythmically clenched around them. He squeezed more lube onto his hands and rubbed them together to warm it up before applying it to himself, making sure he was completely covered before he pressed himself into Blaise, who cried out. Nasta was considerably bigger than his fingers.

Nasta sucked at a patch of skin on Blaise’s collarbone, marking the younger man with a love bite, his one hand holding himself up, the other stroking Blaise’s hardness to ease away the pain of penetration.

He pushed in slowly and carefully, he remained inside for a moment to allow those tight muscles to adjust before he pulled out slowly, applied more lube directly to his cock from the bottle before he pushed back in, his passage considerably more comfortable this time, he again remained inside for a moment or two before pulling out again and pushing back in, the excess lube making a squishing sound as he pushed in that made him smile.

He threw the bottle away from him, he didn’t need it anymore, he lay fully over Blaise, taking the younger man’s hands in his own and pushed his hands, still holding Blaise’s, under Blaise’s head. Using just his leg and stomach muscles he flexed his hips to thrust into Blaise, moving around a bit until Blaise suddenly gasped and arched under him and Nasta grinned, loving the way that Blaise clenched around him, sending jolts of pleasure through his body.

He kept at that angle and Blaise clenched around him uncontrollably as Nasta hit his prostate over and over, flexing his hips, feeling every muscle moving, working, under his skin.

Blaise moved as he was assaulted by such pleasure, arching up, writhing on the rug, wrapping his legs tightly around Nasta’s slim waist. He was at a loss at what to do, he couldn’t do much past lying down and taking every thrust Nasta that gave him, his pleasure was so high his mind was blended colours and sounds together until it was all white and just a loud, constant noise that he was, almost positive, he was the one emitting.

“Nasta! Nasta! Nasta!”

His name continuously coming from Blaise’s mouth did something to him that made him burn red hot, pushing himself harder, faster, flexing his hips to hit Blaise’s prostate just right, loving the spasm like clenching that followed drawing his orgasm further and further to a climax.

He passed one of Blaise’s hands to his other hand, freeing one up so that he could tug on Blaise strongly and firmly, matching his pace to that of his lower body, not even having to think about it. He twisted his wrist just as he reached the head of Blaise and it undid the younger man underneath him, who let out a startled yell and released himself all over Nasta’s hand.

Nasta breathed to himself, coached himself to just breathe through Blaise’s orgasm, to just keep thrusting and to ignore the almost vice like grip Blaise’s muscles applied to his cock, but it was an impossible thing as Blaise made such a sweet noise in the back of his throat, arching his neck back, trying to get his head high enough to kiss him. He let his orgasm wash over him, let it blind and deafen him for a moment, the only thing he could see was white, the only thing he could hear was his own rushing blood, before he came back into himself and saw nothing but Blaise. Blaise laid out on the rug like a fitting offering, like a feast to a starved man.

“I love you.” Nasta forced out of his tight throat muscles.

“Love you too, Bello.” Blaise whispered back tiredly, his body boneless.

Nasta pulled out of him and grimaced at the wash of fluid that followed. He had forgotten to get a cloth, he didn’t have his wand and his semen was going to dry on Max’s rug before he could get it out. Max would have their heads on a spike and their hearts on a plate, but at the moment, with his body sated and loose from his recent bout of release, he couldn’t bring himself to give a flying fuck in space.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Harry woke up to a noise that he didn’t recognise. It took him several moments to realise that his baby son was crying. He rolled out of bed, stumbling with his grogginess and scooped his son into his arms.

“Are you wet or hungry, love?” He croaked, his mouth dry. He looked around for a glass of water before realising that he hadn’t brought one up with him. He cursed silently.

He lay back on the bed and brought his crying baby with him, he checked his nappy to find him wet. He looked around before noticing the changing table in the corner of the room. He sent a silent thanks of gratitude to whoever was looking over him and got up and walked to the changing table. He put his crying baby gently down and pulled apart the poppers to the sleepsuit and the bodysuit.

He changed his son and double checked that he hadn’t missed any part of his body with the wipe, he never wanted his son to suffer with nappy rash. He had heard from Mrs Weasley that it could get quite bad and quite painful. He powdered his son’s little bottom and clad him in a new nappy, taking the sleepsuit and bodysuit off of him completely, now he knew where the changing table was, he could change his son’s clothes.

He pulled open a drawer and got a new bodysuit out. He carefully slipped his baby’s head into the clothing before shimmying it down his body, pushing the poppers together before digging around to find a tiny pair of light blue cotton trousers and a tiny little white tee-shirt, the both of them bought by Nasta.
Harry fought to get a pair of socks onto his son’s tiny feet and finished the outfit off with matching scratch mitts and a little hat.

“That was a struggle wasn’t it, love?” He asked as he swaddled the little boy back into a blanket and scooped him to his chest, making obsessively sure that he supported his baby’s head. “Don’t worry, I’m sure I’ll get better once I get more used to it, you’re just so tiny. You’ll have to grow a little more!”

His every step was carefully measured, he made sure he had his full weight on his foot before he moved his other foot, making sure he kept his balance. It was slower to get anywhere this way, but he was so paranoid that it was worth it.

“You sweetie, need a name.” Harry told the blinking baby boy, those huge baby blue eyes tracking every curve of his face. “I like the name Braiden. Do you want to be a Braiden? Braiden Blaise Enzo Zabini.”

Harry grinned, feeling proud of himself for coming up with the name by himself.

“Braiden Blaise Enzo Zabini, a name all for your own, a name after your Father, and one after the grandfather you’ll never know and the Father your Daddy never knew.” Harry said sadly, his heart going out to Blaise.

He went down stairs and as he past the living room door he stopped and did a double take at the entwined bodies in front of the fire.

“Seriously?” He asked and their heads snapped to him. “Maybe I should just lock myself in the bedroom and keep myself company with Ginny’s new toys. I thought we had an understanding, Blaise? You would take me first, the first one in how many months has it been? I’m bound to be virgin tight again, oh well your loss.”

Harry carried onto the kitchen as the other two scrambled to get into their clothes. He grinned. He wasn’t upset at all, a bit hot under the collar at seeing two very handsome, gorgeous men spread out, completely naked together on a rug in front of a lit fireplace, but not at all angry, he’d get sex one way or another, he just wanted to know who would snap first.

He opened the kitchen door and the noise from behind it startled both him and the baby that had been quiet in his arms.
“SHUT UP!” He yelled, holding his son to his chest protectively. “What the hell is wrong with you?”

Max and Draco were both red cheeked and shouting hell at each other. Nasta came to his shoulder and held him around the waist, one hand on the top of his baby’s head.

“You’re still at it? What on earth has you riled up enough to shout for two hours at one another?”

“Draco said Harry’s cooking is better than mine.” Max pouted.

“That is what you’re arguing about?” Harry asked incredulously as he bounced the baby in his arms lightly to soothe him, moving to make a bottle for him but being beaten to it by Max.

“I just wanted to rile him up.” Draco admitted with a pink blush.

“For Merlin’s sake, why?”

Draco mumbled and Blaise, who was closest, burst out laughing and Draco went an even brighter pink, the brightest Harry had seen him.

“Come on, spill, I wanna know what has you blushing so brightly.”

“Max looks sexy when he’s angry.” Draco bit out in a rush.

“So you deliberately wound him up with something you knew would anger him just to arouse yourself?” Nasta clarified.

“I guess.”

“Oh you are so going to bend over for me.” Max growled as he shook the bottle to mix the formula powder and the hot water.
Draco’s receding blush came back and Max’s face lit up like a kid on Christmas Day.

“You want to bend over for me, don’t you?”

Draco tried to struggle for nonchalance but the blush gave him away.

“Does no one want to be with me anymore?” Harry pouted as he held the bottle for his suckling baby son, Braiden. “I know I had a baby, but I cut him out, I didn’t actually birth him, I’m still as tight as ever, perhaps tighter as I haven’t had sex in months!”

“I’d love to have you.” Draco put in.

Harry grinned. “You take me whilst Max takes you. Nasta and Blaise can have each other as they’ve so recently been sated.”

Draco chuckled and came over for a hug, kissing the baby on his full, apple cheek as he suckled the milk from the bottle.

“Have you thought any more on names, Harry? He can’t remain nameless for much longer.”

“I have thought of a name, I think it’s perfect.” Harry answered.

“Well don’t leave us in suspense, Harry, what’s his name?” Max asked.

Harry watched Blaise as he said the name, watching his face fall slack with shock before tears welled up in his eyes as he came to hold Harry and his son tightly, wrapping his arms completely around them.

“Ti amo, mio amore. Ti amo.” Blaise whispered lovingly, laying his head on Harry’s.
“I love you, Blaise. I don’t feel like I say it enough, but I do. I love you. I love all of you.”

The baby was eased from his arms and held to Max’s huge chest, one large hand completely covering the baby’s head and part of his back.

“Braiden huh? Welcome to the family, little one. You don’t know us yet, but you will. We love you so much; we will always protect you and look out for you, even when you’re old and grey. I’m your Daddy Max; this knucklehead is your Daddy Nasta, that’s Daddy Draco, Mummy Harry and your wonderful Daddy Blaise.”

Harry chuckled as Max turned the baby’s body to face each of them, the baby blinking slowly at them as if he thought they were all fools.

“Either he’s constipated or he thinks you’re a dim-witted ogre.” Draco commented as he carefully took the baby from Max and went to sit at the table, the morning paper open on the wooden surface.

“Shall we go with dim-witted ogre?” Harry asked with a grin.

Max launched at him and hefted him over one massive shoulder so he was upside down staring at Max’s bum.

“You’re not pregnant anymore, Harry, you’re mine.”

“Stop laying claim to all of us like we’re dogs!” Harry tried to chastise, but he was laughing so much that it ruined the effect; instead he took to pinching Max’s bum, which was more effective seeing as Max was only wearing a pair of small shorts and a tight tee-shirt.

“When did you get dressed anyway? Last I saw you; you were in your skin, ranting about your counters.”

“You were sleeping like a baby with Braiden; you didn’t hear me come in.”

“Oh! Am I interrupting?”
Harry looked to the doorway, where Blaise’s Mum Marianna was standing, looking as tall as ever, muscle bound yet flawlessly lovely in a practical summer dress made of a light, earthy blue cotton which brought out hints of the colour in her violet eyes.

“Madre!” Blaise cried out happily as he embraced her and let her hold him back.

Harry smiled happily at the scene, having being righted by Max. It warmed him to know that Blaise was still so affectionate to his Mother; he hoped his son was that affectionate towards him at seventeen.

“I heard that my little grandson was born, where is he?”

Blaise grinned and accepted Braiden from Draco and, after a look from Harry, who nodded his assent, he passed the baby over to his Mother.

“Oh he’s gorgeous, Blaise. I can tell immediately that he’s yours, he has your eyes.” Marianna said.

“Harry named him.” Blaise told her as Marianna bounced the day old baby in her arms.

“Well are you waiting for me to beg, Blaise? Tell me my little grandson’s name.”

“Braiden Blaise Enzo Zabini.”

Marianna’s arms stilled as she heard her mate’s middle name. She swallowed and smiled bravely as she resumed her bouncing.

“I think your Father would have been very smug to hear that you had named his grandson after him.”

“I hope it makes him happy.”

“It would have, darling. It would have made him very, very happy.”
“Where’s Josiah?”

“He’s still in France; I left as soon as I was showered and dressed when I was told this morning that Braiden had arrived, I forgot to inform him. I’m a bit late as I popped over to Toulouse to get you a gift, Harry.”

Harry went pink as he was presented with a box wrapped in bright blue paper and tied up with a white ribbon. He quickly opened it and smiled happily at the assortment of baby clothes inside the box. He didn’t really need any more, but he would make it a point to dress Braiden in the clothes his Grandmother had bought him.

Blaise chuckled and brushed his fingers against his son’s cheek. His heart ached with love for the small baby in his Mother’s arms. Braiden, his son, a part of his whole world.

“My Dad will be coming over today, I sent Sanex to Cairo yesterday to get him from his meeting.” Nasta said.

“You shouldn’t have dragged him from his work meeting, won’t he be angry?” Harry fretted.

“Cariad, he’d be furious if I hadn’t interrupted his meeting with the news of his first grandson’s birth. This is something that he’d want to be disturbed over, family first, everything else second.”

“Did you floo call my parents?” Draco asked in a small voice that didn’t suit the blond one bit.

“I did, I spoke to your Mother and she assured me that she would give us space to bond with the baby and then come over later today.” Nasta answered.

“My family will be back over today as well; they were never going to leave us alone for too long. Maybe it would be better to set up a few tables and chairs on the back lawn? I could get a gazebo to protect the baby from the sun.” Max said thoughtfully.

“That’s an idea; do you have more than the kitchen table?”

Max snorted incredulously. “I have a large family, a large family that comes over often. I have four “Go set them up, Draco go and help.” Nasta ordered.

“What are you going to be doing?” Draco grumbled.

“Getting blankets to put on the grass and tablecloths for the benches.” Nasta replied with a raised eyebrow.

Harry chuckled and hopped onto the kitchen table.

“You get your peachy behind off of my table!” Max hollered from the back garden.

Harry fully laughed as he wiggled his bum around instead of removing it. Marianna let out a tinkling laugh as she handed Braiden back to Harry.

Blaise lifted him carefully from the table and set him on his feet. Harry covered his baby as much as he could; made sure his hat was pulled over his head and went outside, he opted to sit on the blanket covered ground with Braiden rather than the picnic benches with Marianna, Draco and Max. Nasta sat behind him, cradling his body with his strong legs; Harry reclined against him as Blaise sat beside them both. The soft noises of the summer, the light conversation and the soothing feeling of Nasta drawing patterns on his arm with his fingertips lulled Harry into a peaceful, tranquil state as he held Braiden reclined against his chest. His gut clenched lightly and Harry got the feeling that the peace wouldn’t last much longer as he spied two heads of platinum blonde hair being led out of the back door by a house elf.

Chapter Forty-Two – I Promise; The Truce

- “Draco.” Harry called out softly and nodded to the two approaching blondes as his only blond mate turned to look at him questioningly.

Draco let out a sigh as he spotted his parents and he stood from the bench and went to meet and greet his parents. Harry held Braiden tightly, leaning against Nasta as the elder Malfoys walked towards them with Draco.

Harry was very, very tense as Draco led his parents over to him and Braiden, it was only Narcissa who looked even remotely interested as she primly folded her skirt under her knees and knelt down to chuck Braiden under his chin.

“He is not Draco’s.” She announced surely.

“No. He’s Blaise’s. His name is Braiden.” Harry answered as politely as he could, Nasta rubbed his back, part in comfort, part in praise and Harry relaxed slightly.

“It’s not too late to end this…relationship, Draco.” Lucius Malfoy drawled. “The baby isn’t yours.
You have no obligation to stay.”

Harry felt his heart stop and his stomach take up residence in his knees. He couldn’t believe the audacity of this man, to walk into his house, well Max’s house, and actually suggest that Draco should leave them in front of all of them, in front of him.

“It was never about the baby.” Draco answered a bit stiffly. “I love them, the baby was just another person for me to love and though Braiden isn’t mine, I love him like my own, I treat him like my own.”

“I do not understand your reasoning, Draco. You have no reason to stay here with them and feel second best. Astoria was willing to be the only woman in your life, she would bear your children, you wouldn’t have to guess which baby had your blood.”

“He wouldn’t have to.” Harry hissed. “We’re Drackens, we can scent out who has fathered our children.”

Lucius Malfoy clenched at the mention of Drackens and Harry felt his anger go up a notch. He breathed in deeply and coached himself to remain calm. He did not want his baby son to witness his Mother go ape shit on anyone, it didn’t matter that Braiden couldn’t possibly ever remember it happening.

“Would you like something to drink?” Max asked politely, but very stiffly and there was a glint in his eyes that said he would rather pour their preferred drinks over their heads, but he had offered none the less.

“Tea would be acceptable.” Narcissa answered as she stood up again, tall and proud next to her Husband.

Max nodded and made a hasty retreat, Harry would have called it cowardice, but it wasn’t, not really. Max couldn’t trust himself not to punch Lucius Malfoy in the face if he stayed, so he left before the temptation became too great.

Draco offered his parents seats, but neither of them moved, they replied politely when Marianna greeted them, but didn’t offer up conversation. The fresh, outdoors air was thick and heady with tension by the time Max came back with a teapot covered by a tea cosy and a tray full of porcelain cups.
“How do you like your tea?” He asked distantly.

Harry was so tense that he could feel each muscle tighten under his skin. He hated dancing around anyone, hated stepping on egg shells, he wanted the tension gone and if the Malfoys had to go for that to happen then he wanted them gone.

Braiden fusses for his feed at midday and it was about that time when Max’s garden was suddenly flooded with every member of his family. Harry finished feeding the baby, burped him and let him be passed around, watching with amusement as he was carefully, but viciously fought over like he was the only slice of cake at a birthday party.

Aneirin and Sanex were there next, seemingly like they had popped up out of the ground whilst Harry had been talking to Talia. Aneirin hugged him right off his feet and it made Harry laugh happily, but what really surprised Harry was when Caesar showed up around two in the afternoon, pulling a tall, pretty woman who had her arms clamped around a pink shawl.

Harry shifted and assessed the woman through narrowed eyes, before he turned his head and the need to show off Braiden to her was gone. His son was not a prized horse to be tugged around and scrutinised by strangers.

“Pushing away your natural instincts again?” A deep, dark, rich toned voice asked.

Harry smiled up at Myron and looked back at the woman who could only be Amelle.

“I have nothing to prove to her.” Harry answered. “I have my baby and she has hers. I’m obviously going to think Braiden is the best, the cutest, the smartest, the most adorable and she is obviously going to think the same of her daughter. There is no competition; it would just be a waste of time and energy which I really don’t have at the minute.”

Myron slung an arm the size of a tree branch around him and held him tightly.

“That’s what I love about you, Harry. You think with reason, you don’t let your animalistic tendencies take over, too many of the natural Dracken instincts are outdated, even archaic in today’s modern era, yet you use your human logic to overpower your instincts. It gives me hope that finally submissives are moving into the twenty-first century.”

“Are dominants in the twenty-first century?” Harry asked curiously.

Myron let out a deep chuckle. “Yes. We had to be or we’d either all be dead or in prison. In the past a dominant would not have allowed anyone to look upon his submissive, he’d take it as a challenge for his mate and he’d kill them. How many people have looked at you, given you eye contact or touched you since you became mated? All of them would be dead right about now a few hundred years ago. He wouldn’t have allowed his submissive the freedoms that they have now. A submissive would not be permitted to leave the home for any reason, some dominants refused to allow their submissives from the top floor of their homes.”

“Why?” Harry asked appalled.

“Protection and safety were the main reasons, we are a very secretive race, Harry, perhaps not with one another, but with strange humans, most definitely. That was for protection as well, they began fearing us, hating us, they came after us with weapons and fire.” Myron turned his head to look into the captivated eyes of his little son-in-law. “They wanted to exterminate us. So we hid ourselves, we became distrustful of them, of course this was thousands of years ago, but much hasn’t changed in that regard. Humans still don’t accept us; they still seek to exterminate us.”

“Why do they hate us so much?”

“Because we can kill them, Harry.” Myron told him. “Humans fear death; they kill everything that threatens to wipe out their tenuous existence. We are so much more powerful than they are, so much faster and stronger, so very deadly and aggressive. Plus we make great trophies.”

Harry looked at Myron aghast.

“Think about it, Harry, humans hunt the tigers and lions into extinction, the white rhino, the elephants, it doesn’t matter to them. The rarer the animal the more they want one in their collection, the more they want the fur, the tusks and the skin. We are rare creatures, Harry. Like the tiger or the lion, we are hunted, poached for our scales, blood or organs. Some collectors, who don’t want to sell our scales for money, will just harvest us as we are, they will hack off our whole wings from the shoulder joint and put them on display.”

“Not scaring the boy are you, Myron?” Aneirin asked a hint of warning in his voice as he hugged Harry tightly.

“No, I'm just explaining why humans fear us and why they would kill us if given half a chance, whether directly or indirectly.”

Aneirin snorted. “It’s not hard to work it out. What with the Ministry imposing tighter and tighter leashes on ‘dark creatures’ others are bound to lash out and then our whole race is coloured by one person’s actions. We don’t judge them for all the murderers, rapists and child abductors their race has, why are we any different?”

“It’s that foul woman Umbridge that’s the problem.” Myron stated. “And Fudge too, if we didn’t have such completely incompetent politicians who can’t see past their own noses and discriminations the world would be a much better place.”

“Why don’t you run for Minister?” Harry asked curiously.

“I can’t. My name is linked to an unsolved murder.” Myron replied mildly.

Harry frowned and just looked at Myron curiously, willing him desperately to carry on.

“There’s not much to tell, Harry. I was accused of murder twenty-one years ago, but through lack of evidence I was never convicted. Because no one else has ever been imprisoned or even accused over it, the case has gone cold, but it’s still open. My name is the only one linked to this murder, the opposition would rip me apart, I would lose all votes of confidence from the public and I would endanger myself and my family.”

Blaise walked over with a sleeping Braiden tucked into the crook of his arm. Harry couldn’t keep the grin from his face as he watched Blaise be an overprotective, loving Father as he brushed aside one of Max’s sisters gently, exclaiming that he just wanted to hold his son for a while longer. Julinda practically melted with suppressed squeals.

“How are you, Blaise?” Harry asked as he kissed Braiden, making no move to take the baby from his Father, which made Blaise grin.

“I’m soaking up the love and warmth that seems to surround our son on a permanent basis.”

Harry chuckled and hugged Blaise, carefully sandwiching Braiden between them.

“He is a cute little one.” Aneirin praised stroking a pale cheek peeking out from under the little visor of the soft cotton hat that Harry had put on Braiden’s head.
“Where is Draco?” Harry asked as he once again scanned for the blond, but the only blondes that seemed to be in the garden were Lucius and Narcissa Malfoy, Julinda and Ashleigh.

“Nasta took him into the orchard to calm down. His Father is upsetting him more than he wants to let on to others.”

Harry steeled his face into a grimace and he felt his already tight muscles, tighten up more. He let out a soft hiss of anger.

He ignored the others and strode over to Lucius Malfoy and tapped him on the shoulder. The tall man turned to look, before he exaggeratedly looked down at Harry, implying he was shorter than he actually was and beneath the man’s notice.

“Can I have a word with you in private?” Harry ground out from between clenched teeth.

Lucius Malfoy raised a perfect eyebrow and let his eyes rove over his person. It was only the thought that a few hundred years ago his mates would have torn his head from his shoulders for looking at him at all, let alone for how the man was doing now, that helped Harry keep his anger in check.

“I presume it will not be for long?” Lucius drawled.

Harry swallowed back the slew of insults and the blinding rage as he looked past Lucius Malfoy and picked out a spot of platinum blond pillowed on a speck of light grey in the distant orchard. The same light grey that was the colour of the tee shirt Nasta was wearing.

“It’ll take as long as needed.” Harry replied, his voice cracking under the strain of keeping back his anger.

Lucius made a noise in the back of his throat and started walking towards a deserted part of the garden. Harry cleared his throat and motioned into the house.

“When I said private, I meant it.”

Harry had expected a fight, but Lucius followed him without a word. He looked faintly amused and was likely only humouring him, but Harry had a point to get across and by god he was going to get it across to the stubborn man.
Harry led Lucius into the more private of the living rooms which was opposite the first, more used living room which was connected to the floo.

They stood there staring at each other and Lucius raised an eyebrow, but Harry couldn’t find the words he wanted to say.

“Did you bring me all the way in here just to look at me, Potter?”

Harry bit his tongue and looked at the man, holding back his glare by the skin of his teeth.

“No. I came here to tell you that you’re upsetting Draco. He loves you and Mrs Malfoy, but he also loves us. Me, Max, Nasta, Blaise and the baby. You being the stubborn, pig-headed man that you are, are only hurting Draco. He shouldn’t have to choose between his parents and his lovers; it’s not fair on Draco!”

“We are his family!” Lucius seethed.

“You will always be his family. You can't help who your parents are, you don’t choose your parents, but you can choose your lovers, your future family and like it or not Draco chose us as his family! He loves us and we love him back! How can you call yourself a Father when you are making your only son as miserable as sin!”

“I’m not…”

“You are!” Harry roared. “He’s in the orchard with Nasta right now, crying because of you! He’s crying, Malfoy, crying. Does that mean nothing to you? Do you feel nothing at making your seventeen year old son cry in misery because of your actions? He’s desperate to make this work, but whilst you remain so hard headed it never will! He knows what he wants, he’s trying to overcome a lot of his own fears to become comfortable with all of us and he’s succeeding, would he even bother to do that if he wasn’t in love with us?”

Harry panted, red faced and out of breath, his stomach aching from the amount of heavy breathing and jostling around he had done in a short space of time. Lucius Malfoy stood in front of him, seemingly unaffected and stoic faced.

“Draco has accomplished so much in the past few months and you’ve missed it all. You weren’t there for him when he needed someone other than us to talk to, you weren’t there to ease him into his transition of becoming a Dracken, you weren’t the one to help him accept himself for who he is.
Draco struggled on his own for six months before anyone even knew that he needed help and it was Blaise and I who helped him! Blaise and me who were there to hold him when it became too much, hell even Professor Snape was there to guide Draco back onto the right tracks when he hit a brick wall. How does that make you feel as a Father, Mister Malfoy? To know that two teenagers and another man had to help your son because you weren’t paying close enough attention to him to realise that he needed help?”

A punch to the face was his answer and Harry stumbled into the settee, rubbing his jaw. His first instinct was to call to his mates, to let them know that he was being attacked, that he was in distress, but under that was the urge to maim the one who had hurt him himself, with his own hands. Then under that again was a grim satisfaction that he had gotten a raise out of Malfoy. It proved that the man still loved Draco very much and hearing that others had had to fill in his place of looking after his child angered him enough to lash out ‘the muggle way’ with his fists.

“I suggest a truce.” Harry got out through his aching jaw. “For Draco’s sake we need to try and make it work, he deserves more than this. So Braiden isn’t his, the next baby might be. The next baby might be a Malfoy and if family means anything to you, then you will know how important it is to see the next generation of your family because Draco won’t leave us. We love him and accept him for who he is, can you say the same?”

Lucius Malfoy looked like he was struggling to swallow a whole watermelon as he closed those steel grey eyes and breathed deeply. He held out a perfect hand towards Harry and it was only as he grasped that hand with his own that he realised how big those hands actually were. They were not the first thing he noticed when he looked at the man, not over all that platinum coloured hair or those steel eyes that commanded the utmost attention, but now that he had noticed he couldn’t stop looking. It wasn’t that they were ill proportioned to the rest of him, because they weren’t, it just wasn’t noticeable how big they were until you had your own hands to compare to.

They shook hands and Harry felt lighter. He and Lucius would never be bosom buddies, but they would get along with one another if only for Draco’s sake.

“I am only doing this for Draco.” Lucius stressed.

“Rest assured that I’m only doing this for the same reason. We both love Draco and he loves us both. By being stubborn brats we are only hurting him. Now I think we’ve been gone for long enough.”

Harry made his way outside to see everyone getting along fine; Narcissa was actually holding Braiden, chatting happily with Marianna, Kimberly and Ashleigh. Draco was fresh faced, dry eyed and happy as he watched his Mother with baby Braiden. It seemed it really was Lucius that was the problem.

A terrible roar made Harry look startled to Max, whose blue wings were framed against the cloudless sky, he was glaring at Lucius like he would tear him to pieces and it was only his Father holding him back.

Draco stepped forward and he looked horrified at his Father.

“Tell me that you didn’t hit Harry, Father.” He pleaded. “Tell me that you didn’t hit him!” He yelled when they remained silent.

“It was my own fault.” Harry assured quickly before anyone could jump in and it was Nasta who stepped forward his hazel eyes catching the direct sunlight and appearing fully golden and fierce.

“You never deserve to be struck, Harry.” He growled out with force.

The atmosphere changed in the garden as those who knew of his past looked to him with renewed horror and shock.

“It’s not like that. I went too far. I did it to prove something and I found what I was looking for.”

“You never deserve to be struck!” Nasta replied more forcefully. “To prove a point or otherwise.”

“It’s over and done with.” Harry stated, even as Draco pulled him away from Lucius, looking at his Father like he had never seen him before.

“Harry is a month younger than I am.” Draco told his Father. “If you can hit him, then you can hit me.”

“I would never strike you.” Lucius said surely.

“But you could hit Harry? My younger lover and the carrier of my child?”

“It isn’t your child!” Lucius hissed.

“He’s as good as!” Draco bellowed and Nasta slipped his arms around Draco’s torso and easily held him.
“Do you not remember our truce?” Harry asked. “Have you forgotten what our little chat entailed?”

“Truce?” Draco questioned.

“Potter and I have agreed to be…civil to one another from now on.” Lucius answered.

“Was this before or after you hit him?” Blaise hissed.

“It was before the truce was made. But the truce stands, we have one and that’s all that matters now.” Harry answered.

“You…you have?” Draco asked, deflating in Nasta’s arms.

They both nodded and looked at Draco, who just stood there with an unreadable look on his face.

“Why did you hit Harry?”

“He stated a few home truths that I wasn’t ready to hear.”

“You’re ready to deal with them now?”

“No. I will never be ready to deal with them, nor accept them. The only thing I can do is put it behind me and move on.”

The silence stretched between them, needing to be broken, yet none of them knew what to say. Luckily they didn’t have to break it as Narcissa grace fully moved towards them and passed a wailing Braiden to Harry.

“I believe my grandson needs to be changed, Harry.” She told him before pulling Lucius over to Kimberly and Alexander Maddison.
Harry sniffed his son’s bottom and he pulled a face. “Oh he definitely needs to be changed, which one of you will volunteer?”

Nasta and Draco both took a step back as Harry held the baby out to them.

“Come on, I’ve changed every dirty nappy he’s had! I need a break some when!”

Nasta stepped forward and ‘bravely’ accepted the smelly baby, taking him inside the house to change him for the first time.

“Harry. What…what you did with my Father, the truce, did you mean it?” Draco asked as they made their way slowly back to the gazebo.

“Of course I did, Draco. I love you. I’d do anything for you and if making a truce with your Father makes you happy, then I’ll find a way to make it work.”

Draco grabbed hold of him and swung him into a hug, holding him tightly and pressing his lips to Harry’s forehead.

“I love you, Harry. I love you so very, very much.” He declared.

“I love you too, Draco, never forget that.”

“I won’t, I promise.”

Chapter Forty-Three – Harry Versus Amelle

Harry grinned as he spied bright red hair come from inside the house. He ran the full length of the garden and hugged Mrs Weasley tightly.

“Oh, Harry dear, you are glowing!” She said approvingly. “Having a baby has certainly brightened you up, dear.”

“I feel better now that he’s been born.” He admitted. “More like myself and less like an alien.”
“Well where is he? Where is my only grandchild?” Mrs Weasley gave a pointed look to Bill, who cowered from his Mother’s glare.

“Fleur and I aren’t ready for children yet, Mum! We’ve only just gotten engaged.”

“You got engaged?” Harry asked. “Congratulations! Where is the lucky bride to be?”

“Thanks, baby brother. Fleur is happily visiting her parents and little sister in France for a few weeks, but I’ve been told to take pictures of the baby for her, that is if you’ll allow it of course.” Bill winked at him and Harry laughed as he bounced to Blaise, who was once again defending his son from advancing relatives.

“Do you think I could have a turn holding our son?” Harry asked Blaise teasingly, who smiled at him a bit sheepishly as he carefully handed the baby over.

“You are the Father, dear?” Mrs Weasley asked Blaise distractedly.

“Yep, Blaise is his Father. Mrs Weasley, this is Braiden Blaise Enzo Zabini, the first of many.”

Harry handed the baby over to Mrs Weasley who cooed and cuddled to her heart’s content, tears gathering in her eyes as the rest of the family crowded around. Hermione came over and hugged him tightly.

“You must be so proud, Harry.” She stated into his hair as she held him.

“I am. He’s so beautiful.”

“He’s adorable, how much did he weigh?”

“He was four pounds two ounces. Less than I thought he was going to be, but he’s fine and healthy. He’s got an appointment booked in with Saint Mungos tomorrow just for a check-up to make sure everything really is as dandy as it seems.”
Ginny came over and hugged him tightly, slapping his bum which made all four of his mates stop what they were doing and look over. Harry waved away their attention with a bright red face as he glared at Ginny.

“What was that for?” Harry demanded as he rubbed his sore bum.

“Why aren’t you using my present?” Ginny demanded in return.

“I’ve only just given birth! I’m under a sex ban for another week at least.”

“Please! I don’t need to hear this, Harry.” Hermione stated with a cross look covering her face.

“What? I am on a sex ban, here I am surrounded by four men who are all indulging in each other’s bodies and I’m stuck merely watching them.”

“Harry!”

“Tell me more.” Ginny grinned as she tugged Harry’s arm into her own and away from everyone else, heading towards the orchard.

“No, Ginny. I’ve told you that my sex life is mine.”

“I’ll share mine; including the threesome I had with those two gorgeous, muscly Hufflepuffs.”

Harry yelled out and covered his ears with his hands.

“I’m not listening you devil!” He cried and ran to Max, letting his mate scoop him up into his arms. “She’s being evil, Max.”

“Stop being evil, Ginny.” Max demanded, even though the smile threatened to split his face in half.
“Are your hormones not settled yet?” Ashleigh asked him.

“I don’t know. I think I’m just being childish.” Harry admitted with a grin, Max laughed.

“You can be childish all you want to.” He said.

“You can’t exactly tell anyone not to be childish.” Draco shot at Max as he walked past them.

Harry grinned up at Max who pouted.

“I am not childish.” He whined.

Richard chuckled and threw an arm around Max’s waist as he couldn’t reach his shoulders. Then again only Myron, Nasta and Draco could throw an arm around Max’s shoulders.

“You are childish.” Richard stated. “You get it from me.”

Myron snorted. “Of all the traits you possess you had to give our children your childishness.”

“I gave them my sense of fun and adventure.” Richard countered.

“You made them eternal children.” Myron stated dryly.

“Well who wants the kids to grow up anyway.” He huffed and wandered away.

Myron sighed as if this was a long fought battle in which he was double teamed, outnumbered and was losing.

Harry looked to Ashleigh who was giggling and jumping up and down with Alayla and Talia and to Richard who had gone off to headlock Caesar. He grinned. It looked like Myron was losing a battle after all. He had two young at heart, childish mates who, in his eyes, were corrupting their five children. There was only so much one could do to counteract all of that bad influence and it seemed that Myron had done his best, but it wasn’t enough to overshadow both Ashleigh and Richard’s childishness.

“Harry? How are you feeling?”

Harry turned in Max’s arms at the sound of that familiar voice and he leapt at Remus, but ended up kicking Max’s stomach, who sucked in a lungful of air, but said nothing as he handed Harry over to the other man instead.

“I’m fine. How are you?”

Harry scrambled to get his feet on the floor so he wasn’t being carried; only his mates could carry him.

“I’ve been alright. I’ve mainly been thinking of you, Harry.”

“Why?” Harry asked curiously.

“Why? Harry you are seventeen and have a newborn baby.”

“I’m considered an adult man in the wizarding world.” Harry pointed out stubbornly.

“Do you feel like a man?” Remus asked seriously.

Harry opened his mouth to say of course he felt like a man, he had four lovers and a baby, but he stopped and thought about it, having lovers and a baby didn’t make you an adult, kids could have sexual partners and children, that didn’t make them adults. Did he actually feel like a man? He felt overwhelmed, like he was stuck in quicksand which had just reached his neck and was climbing ever higher. He felt lost without a guide to help him through these new experiences, his mates were no help, this was new to them as well, which made him think, did they feel like men or lost little boys thrust in at the deep end?

“I feel…lost sometimes, like I’m drowning in my own panic. Before Braiden was born, I was always worried about making a single mistake, but now I know that I’m obviously going to make mistakes and have lapses in judgement, I just have to make sure that they aren’t so bad that they screw Braiden up for life. I do feel like a man. If I was thrown into a house on my own then I’d know how to take care of myself and those around me. I know about money management, I know how to cook and clean, I know how to do laundry and how to change bed sheets, but on the other hand, this is all new to me and I feel like a little boy whose just discovered the endless dark hole at the bottom of the garden, excited and adventurous, with a hint of fearful adrenaline at the new experience and the possible dangers ahead. So I feel like a man at times and like a little boy at others.” Harry shrugged and looked up at Myron, Max and Remus.

“That was a good answer.” Myron told him with a smirk.

“If you had just said yes straight off, that you feel like a man, that you never get scared or feel overwhelmed, then we would know that you are still just a child.” Remus answered, looking happier. “A true adult can admit they’re frightened and overwhelmed by new experiences, a child pretending to be an adult thinks that nothing frightens or gets to us and acts the same.”

Harry rolled his eyes and hugged Remus tightly. “I didn’t know I was being tested.”

“I needed to know if you were adult enough to be in this situation, Harry.”

“Braiden is very safe with me!” He hissed.

“This isn’t about the baby, Harry, this is about you. I’m not worried about anything happening to the baby because I know all five of you love and care for him; it’s you I’m worried about. James was an amazing Father, loving, doting, I don’t think he left you alone for more than five minutes, we used to go around and visit him and you’d always be tucked up in his arms sleeping, on his lap playing or on the floor with him sitting right behind you. He grew up well and knew how to deal with a baby and the emotions and responsibilities that came with you. But if you were given to Sirius…” Remus shook his head sadly. “Completely hopeless. He loved you so much and he’d rather have eaten his own arm than hurt you, but it was always clear that he was overwhelmed when he was near you. He didn’t know how to act, what to do or say. He was very awkward around you because he’d never had to deal with responsibility before and, I say this in the nicest possible way, his mind was too immature to cope with a baby. He got better the older you got, he grew up more, but it wasn’t until he went to…to Azkaban that he really grew up. It’s tragic really that it took going to that place for him to grow up, but it was the hard kick up the backside that he needed to finally become a man.”

“Even that didn’t really mature him; he still acted like a big kid.”

“No, it did mature him, Harry. Sirius was always going to be a big kid at heart, but he could be serious and responsible when the need for it was there, before Azkaban he wouldn’t have known how to. He was a very clever, intelligent man, but he was quite dim as well. He was emotionally stunted by his dark, hatred filled family. Hugs and kisses from family members that most of us take for granted weren’t offered to Sirius when he was growing up, his parents hated him, his brother rejected him, he had no one, no one except his imaginary friend.”

“Sirius had an imaginary friend?” Harry asked shocked.

“Yes, he had needed one growing up. He was surrounded by blackness, by dark, cruel people who sneered at him and hated the air he breathed, but he was the Black Heir, he was not to be touched.
Deprived of any sort of contact or communication except from his hired tutors, Sirius made a friend who liked him, who spoke to him without loathing in their voice. Sirius could very well have snapped from his upbringing, but because he was clever enough to invent someone he could vent all of his feelings, dreams, wants and fears at, he survived with his mind intact until he found James at Hogwarts, Pettigrew and I came later, but together we were just what Sirius needed to root him to his sanity.”

Harry thought about how similar he and Sirius had grown up. Only he had never been deprived of touch or communication. His communication from the Dursleys may have been cruel words, spiteful hisses and demands and his contact with them was usually a slap or a kick, but he had still gone to a public school. He had gotten praised by his teachers, pats to the head, smiles and on occasion’s even sweets. They spoke kindly and encouragingly to him, he couldn’t imagine what he might have turned out like if he hadn’t gone to school, if he like Sirius had been barricaded in number four Privet Drive with stuffy tutors who had been hired to teach him and nothing else. Not that the Dursleys would have ever wasted money on him, they wouldn’t even buy him clothes or food.

“Anyway, enough of this. Where is the baby, Braiden did you call him? I haven’t seen him yet.”

Harry grinned. “We’re going to have to wrestle Mrs Weasley for him.” He laughed.

“On second thoughts, why don’t I just get a drink instead.”

Harry laughed again as he scanned the back garden for his son. He couldn’t contain his grin when he saw that Blaise was cradling him again as their son drank deeply and greedily from a bottle.

“I should have known that you’d stolen Braiden again.” Harry told Blaise as he approached.

Blaise drew his eyes slowly from Braiden’s face, as if he couldn’t quite bring himself to stop looking at that smooth, sweet face, baby blue eyes closed, little mouth pouted around the bottle teat sucking strongly.

“I adore watching him feed.” Blaise admitted. “I would wake up with him every single night just to watch him feed.”

“I wonder how long that’ll last.” Draco commented, peering over Harry’s shoulder at the baby. He kissed Harry cheek and Harry rolled his eyes, turning to face Draco for a kiss to the lips. “My parents will be going soon; Father has a prior engagement at five o’clock.”

“That’s fine, Draco, I take it they want to see Braiden one last time before they leave?”

The blond nodded. “Mother wishes to buy him more clothes, I told her that he has enough clothes but she insisted on buying something.”

“If she really wants to buy clothes tell her to get them in a bigger size, he has enough clothes for now, but he will outgrow them all soon, he’s getting bigger every time I see him.”

“I don’t know why, you and Blaise made him and you’re the shortest of us all.”

Harry huffed and shoved Draco away from him. “Tell your parents they can have Braiden to say goodbye after Remus has met him.”

“But he’s…”

“If you say one bad thing about him, Draco, I will kill you.” Harry hissed threateningly, his claws coming out of his nail beds.

Draco growled and Harry felt the urge to submit. He shoved it aside violently and hissed again, keeping his eyes pinned to Draco’s and his neck hunched to his shoulders to show he wasn’t submitting. He wasn’t going to back down from this.

Draco leapt on him and Harry fought back. Kicking and scratching and biting as Draco tried to bite down on his neck.

Strong hands forced them apart and Harry found himself being held by Nasta, who wrapped a leg around both of Harry’s own to keep them pinned, held both of his wrists in one hand and held his head still with his other hand.

Max was sitting on Draco, pinning the snarling blond to the grassy ground.

“What the hell happened?” Max demanded his own wings and claws out as Draco tried to bite him.

“They were fine a moment ago.” Blaise answered holding Braiden tightly, even as he finished feeding the baby and burped him.

“He was saying bad things!” Harry hissed.

“You said you’d kill me!” Draco snarled back.

“I’m going to!” Harry assured the blond as he struggled against Nasta.

“What is going on?!” Lucius Malfoy demanded as he was blocked from getting to his feral son by Richard Seppen. “Why are you manhandling my son?!”

“You must understand that Drackens are very physical, violent creatures.” Richard informed the other man. “They will fight often and usually for the most stupid of reasons.”

“Max, get Draco inside.” Nasta ordered as he carted Harry towards the house. “We will be back shortly.” He told the other guests.

Harry was sat on the living room settee and Draco was sat beside him, they were both held tightly as they hissed and growled at one another.

“What happened?” Nasta asked calmly.

“He wasn’t going to let Remus near the baby!” Harry growled.

“Braiden is as much my child as yours! I will not see him in the arms of a werewolf!” Draco
“You were going to let the werewolf hold Braiden?!” Max demanded.

Harry glared at his biggest mate and launched himself at him, trying to cut out his eyes. Nasta held him around the chest and pinned his head back to his shoulder, whispering soothingly into his ear whilst glaring at the other two.

“It is Harry’s right to allow whomever he wishes to see and hold his child.” He explained patiently.

“But a werewolf?” Max demanded. “A werewolf is a danger to our children!”

“Remus is no more a danger to Braiden then anyone else!” Harry yelled.

“Your instincts should not have allowed you to take Braiden within a hundred yards of a dangerous creature like a werewolf!”

“Well I’m not exactly listening to my instincts now am I? If I was then I wouldn’t have let your Mother hold him. You can’t pick and choose you know! Either you want me to listen to my instincts in which case Remus and your mother won’t be allowed near Braiden, or you don’t want me to have them and you let me decide who I trust enough to let near Braiden.”

“My Mother is not a threat to Braiden!” Max roared angrily.

“And neither is Remus!” Harry yelled back. “I trust you when you say your Mother isn’t a threat to our children, do the same courtesy for me and trust me when I say that Remus isn’t a threat either!”

Harry broke away from Nasta and stomped back outside. Everyone was staring at him and he realised that they must have heard every word that had been shouted and screamed through the open back door. He felt heat flare up his cheeks but he pushed it back. He wouldn’t be embarrassed, he would not be ashamed of how he felt.

He went to collect his son off of Blaise and after glaring his mate into handing the baby over with no fuss; he took Braiden to where Remus was sat alone at a table and dumped the baby, gently, into the man’s arms.
“I’ve caused problems for you.” Remus whispered.

“No you haven’t. They’ve caused problems for themselves. I trust you, Remus, with my life and my son’s. You aren’t dangerous just because of what you are. You’re a werewolf one night a month, Remus; I’m a Dracken every hour of every day. Besides you must have held me as a baby, Dad and Mum would have trusted you with me and I’m very sure you never once thought to hurt me. I’m more of a danger to my son than you are. I almost gutted Draco and Max, you couldn’t do that to me as you are now, you aren’t strong enough, nor do you have it in you to hurt me or Braiden. The sooner they learn that the happier I’ll be.”

Remus said nothing. Harry got the idea that he was holding back tears and Harry left him to his thoughts as he held and cuddled Braiden.

“He’s gorgeous, Harry.” Remus finally said his voice slightly choked. “You were a very cute baby as well. I’ll bring you photos the next time I come and visit. You had bigger eyes than your son though, huge, brilliant, bright green eyes that could stop any stranger dead in their tracks.”

“He has Blaise’s eyes.” Harry said. “Though we don’t know the final colour yet.”

“You’re eyes started changing a week after you were born, they started going darker and James was certain that you would have his hazel eyes, a complete clone of your Father, but then they started going bluey-green, getting greener every day and we all knew whose eyes you had taken at that point. Lily was ecstatic.”

Harry smiled at the story, hearing about his Mum and Dad always made him smile. He brushed Braiden’s hair out of his little face and scooted closer to Remus. He hated fighting with his mates, but he would not be told who to entrust with his child.

“Is there something wrong with you?” A soft voice asked from behind him.

Harry looked over his shoulder and saw the woman who had come with Caesar, his Wife and mate, Amelle. She was still holding the pink shawl; she hadn’t put her daughter down all afternoon.

“Not that I know of.” Harry replied a bit confused as to what she meant.
“You’re letting a dangerous animal hold your son. I mean, I know he’s not as good as my Eleonora, but that’s no reason to kill him, he’ll just have to settle for being second best.”

“Excuse me?!” Harry demanded, already riled up from his previous fight with Max and Draco.

“That’s alright, you can’t help having second best children, you are after all, not me.” Amelle let out a little laugh and Harry saw red. He would have liked to have ripped her arms from her body and stomped on her head, but she was holding a baby and he was hesitant to put the baby in harm’s way, no matter how angry this woman was making him.

“You should apologise.” Remus coached, looking at the woman in front of them. “No child is second best.”

“What would you know werewolf, you can’t even have children.” Amelle stabbed.

Remus looked crushed and Harry got even angrier. What the hell did Caesar see in this woman? Surely he could have waited for a better submissive to turn up, but then he realised that most of the submissives acted like Amelle if the horror stories his mates had told him were true, they truly believed that they were Princesses and the men around them were just more gifts, no more than slaves. It made Harry sick to think that Caesar was being treated like a servant, he liked Caesar a lot.

“You’re a vile woman.” Harry scathed.

“There’s no need to insult me because I have the better child.” Amelle answered airily and Harry realised that Amelle was a very hard woman to insult because she’d just turn everything around and assume that the person insulting her was just jealous.

Harry took Braiden from Remus because if he didn’t then he was going to attack Amelle. He cradled his son and turned his back on the woman behind him, he would not be drawn into a pathetic fight over who had the better child. He knew he did, just as Amelle thought she did, there was no competition, of course they were going to favour their own child. He just kept chanting that Braiden was better in his head, but there was no keeping Amelle’s voice out.

“Hiding your inferior son isn’t going to help you know.” Amelle told him from behind.

Harry could feel the anger that had been bubbling inside of him spike into a raging inferno, he ached to defend his baby son, to lash out and rip the woman’s tongue from her mouth, but it would be pointless, she would argue back and he’d just get angrier and angrier until he got himself punished or did something unforgivable, he’d never forgive himself if he hurt Eleonora and he’d doubt if Caesar, Max and the entire Maddison-Seppen clan would forgive him either.

“How can one person be so cruel?” Remus asked rhetorically as he stared at Amelle.

“You’re one to talk werewolf, eat any babies lately?”

Harry shivered with suppressed anger and pressed Braiden onto Remus, he stomped up to Amelle who looked faintly amused, she was taller than him by two inches and used them to pull herself up to her full height. She foolishly didn’t see him as a threat, which is why when he gently, but swiftly pulled Eleonora from her arms to get the baby out of the line of fire she took a few moments to react.

Harry had already pushed the baby into Remus’s arms when Amelle attacked him with a screech, riding his body to the floor and she began hitting his head into the ground. Harry snarled and grabbed a fistful of all that prissy hair and yanked it. Not like the girl on girl pulling that constituted as a catfight, but yanking at it as if he’d pull half of her scalp away with it. He heard screams; distant yells and Alayla’s voice calling out ‘Get her, Harry! Take out her bitchy tongue!’

A large hand grabbed his arm and Harry sunk fangs into it before he even knew who it was, they let go with a yell, cursing him. Harry twisted around, pushed the woman off of him and then got on top of Amelle and with a hand in her hair holding her head in place he threw a mean punch at her face, feeling that perfect nose breaking under his fist.

More hands grabbed him, but as they pulled him off of Amelle, he refused to let go of her hair and dragged her with him even as her claws sunk into his stomach. He screamed, part in anger, but mostly in pain, his stomach was still very tender from giving birth.

He kicked out at her and caught her thigh, she would have fallen but he still had her hair in his fists, he could hear more yells and then a very familiar hand in his own hair. Max was behind him. Even as Max clenched his own hair and demanded that he let Amelle go he refused, kicking out at the woman again as he held her hair tightly. She couldn’t kick him because she couldn’t lift her legs from the floor without pain to her scalp, so she clawed at him instead, cutting up his stomach and chest, but he didn’t care, he had gone past pain, all he thought about was her slagging off his baby son, the cruel words she had spat at Remus and he ignored the pain in favour of causing her as much pain as possible.

He could see Caesar behind Amelle, his arms were around her middle trying to pull her away from him, but Harry had her hair bunched tightly in both of his hands and he was not going to let go. Myron and Richard were trying to unwind his fingers from her hair, whilst Aneirin was trying to stop Amelle from causing more damage to his stomach and chest, getting cut up himself in the process.

“Harry, let go!” Max growled tugging harder on his own hair, forcing his head back. There was a thread of fear in his biggest mate’s voice.

Harry hissed in denial and wound all of that hair around his wrists and yanked Amelle off of her feet, kicking her as she went down. Max kept him on his feet, but he also allowed Harry to cause more pain to Amelle because he still had her hair by the scalp and he was now digging claws into the top of her head.

“Let go, Harry!” He heard Nasta’s voice yelling, there was a demand in there somewhere as well, but he didn’t care how angry he made his mates, he hated this woman and she would not get away with insulting Braiden and Remus like she had.

“Get him off!” Amelle screeched thickly in pain from her broken nose. There were tears in her voice. Harry could see her face, it was dry and she was smirking at him even though the lower half of her face was covered in blood. “Caesar! Caesar, get him off me! Please!”

The next thing Harry knew his jaw was on fire, his whole body had gone numb and slack with shock and Caesar was standing over him looking horrified with his fist raised. It took four seconds for what had happened to sink in before Max let out a terrifying roar and tackled his brother to the ground and started battering the shit out of him.

Harry was clamoured and hugged; Nasta held a bleeding arm to his mouth and Harry sucked it up deeply. He noticed that no one was helping Amelle as Myron, Richard and Aneirin were now trying to split up the fighting brothers. It looked like Max was winning.

The cuts in his stomach and chest made by Amelle’s claws were not healing as well as the other scrapes and bruises he had gotten and it was with a groan that he remembered that submissives had certain toxins in their claws that could stop the cuts made by them from healing properly; he hoped he didn’t die from them.

He noticed that Ashleigh was cradling a beautiful little girl and he smiled. It seemed that Grandma had gotten to hold her granddaughter after all. Braiden was still being held by Remus and Harry sighed in relief. At least his son was alright.

He wrapped his injured body around Nasta and snuggled in, hoping to avoid punishment. He felt any punishment would be unfair and he’d react against it, but he was done fighting for now. He’d done what he had said he wouldn’t and he’d gotten dragged into a fight with Amelle, he had fought with Draco and Max, he didn’t want to fight with Nasta as well.

Max and Caesar were eventually split up and Caesar was definitely the worse off, which angered Amelle again who started screeching at Caesar for not being a proper dominant and him not being strong enough to protect her. Caesar grabbed Amelle’s wrist and bent her arm behind her back, holding it in an uncomfortable position, but not a painful one, not yet, but Harry watched as Caesar inched that arm up further the longer Amelle yelled until she whimpered in pain and fell silent. He frogmarched her away and into the privacy of the house.

Harry feigned sleep as Max approached him and stroked the place where Caesar had hit him, something wet and sticky clung to Max’s fingers as he pulled them away, Caesar had made his lip bleed. Nasta moved him into a more comfortable position and held him tightly; as if he were afraid he would either disappear or fall apart.
“How is he?” Blaise’s concerned voice asked. Harry felt awful for worrying him, for worrying them all.

“Alright as far as I can tell. He’s exhausted though, he overdid it, I told him to be careful.” Nasta answered softly, his hand caressing his cheek.

“Are the cuts healing?” Draco asked.

“They will in time.” Nasta answered. “Amelle doesn’t seem to be overly poisonous or have too dangerous a property to her claws, Harry’ll be fine.”

“It could have been so much worse.” Max said with such pain in his voice Harry considered showing he was just pretending to be asleep and comforting him.

“It wasn’t.” Nasta soothed. “Harry will be fine. Amelle will be fine as well.” He added as an afterthought and Harry grinned into Nasta’s shoulder.

“What happened anyway?” Draco asked.

“Amelle insulted Braiden and myself and Harry felt the need to defend us when she went too far.” Remus explained. “I had no idea a fight between two submissive Drackens would be so violent.”

“Oh fights between any Dracken, no matter if they’re dominant or submissive, can be very, very violent, sometimes to the point of death.” Max replied seriously. “I’m just glad that Harry wasn’t killed. If so many of us weren’t here today then they could have done serious damage to one another.”

“They weren’t killed so it’s best not to think about it.” Nasta stated as he adjusted his arm to cuddle Harry even tighter belying, if only to a sleep feigning Harry, that Nasta had been frightened for him.

-------------------------------------------------------------------------------- X

Harry woke up and it took him several seconds to realise where he was. He was snuggled up in bed alone. Braiden was not in the bassinet beside the bed and the amount of sun coming into the room from behind the closed curtains was the reason why. It was still daytime.

He rolled over and off the side of the bed and padded out of the bedroom and down the stairs, the smell of cooking food made his belly rumble and he smiled as he realised that it must have been dinner time.

“Should I go and wake Harry for dinner?” Draco’s voice came from the kitchen.

“Let him sleep a bit longer, those cuts were nasty. I’ll keep him something for later.” Max answered.

“No need.” Harry told them as he walked into the kitchen, smothering a yawn, letting himself be pulled over to the table by a concerned looking Nasta, who sat him on his lap and licked and sniffed at his bare skin.

“Nas, ‘m fine.” He complained half-heartedly.

“Just…just let me do this. Please.” Nasta whispered into his ear as he stroked gently over his skin with a brush of fingertips.

Harry sighed and settled himself back into Nasta’s arms and watched as Blaise rocked Braiden to sleep. He smiled as he realised that Blaise was being incredibly possessive of the baby, it was cute.

Max plated up ten chicken breasts, two per plate, and smothered it with a white sauce that had been bubbling in a saucepan, he added a large amount of salad from a pre-prepared bowl, making sure there was no cucumber on Draco’s plate and no spring onion on Blaise’s, that Nasta had extra tomatoes and there was plenty of red onion on all of their plates as it was a food that they all enjoyed, he finished it off with a large spoonful of mashed potatoes and served them dinner.

Harry once again ate whilst sitting on Nasta’s lap, leaning slightly to one side to give his oldest mate room to eat his own food.

“Is this white wine sauce?” Harry asked as he licked it off of his fork.

Max smiled. “Yep, you aren’t pregnant anymore, so I’ve seen fit to start cooking with wines again.”

“I’d forgotten how nice your sauces were.” Harry grinned as he cut off another chunk of chicken, slathered it with sauce and put it into his mouth.
“Smaller bites, Harry!” Max warned him. “I don’t want you choking.”

“I’m starving.”

“Your body is expending energy to heal you.” Nasta told him. “You need to eat and sleep as much as possible.”

“Eating I can do, but I don’t think I can sleep anymore.” Harry answered. “I’m wide awake.”

“You are now, but you might not be in a few hours’ time when it’s later.” Draco replied, cutting off a polite sized bite of chicken and putting it carefully into his mouth.

“You do know that if you shoved your face into your plate and ate with just your mouth none of us would think anything of it, Draco.” Harry told the blond, who was actually cutting up a leaf of lettuce to make it bite sized.

Draco looked like Harry had told him to strip naked, roll in red paint and run streaking through Gringotts.

“I certainly will not eat like a pig, Harry.” He answered as he cut a cherry tomato into quarters, scooped a small amount of potato onto his fork with it and placed it delicately into his mouth.

Harry rolled his eyes and shoved a whole baby beetroot into his mouth and chewed happily. Draco grimaced, but said nothing, likely thinking that at least Harry was eating something.

Max had only just finished and put his knife and fork down when Braiden started crying in his bassinet. Blaise made to move to grab him, but Max bopped his head and indicated that he should carry on eating as he scooped Braiden into his arms and turned to boil the kettle to make a bottle. Harry had insisted on using Muggle means as much as possible after he had read an article that had made a connection to magic and the health of a baby. He had asked Blaise and Draco, who had both grown up as Purebloods without Muggle means and they had admitted that the house elves that had looked after them on occasion used Muggle means to do so right up until they were five and their magical cores had settled down. Harry had forbidden anyone to use magic around Braiden and had taken the opportunity to fill Max’s house with even more Muggle things, much to Myron’s disgust, but his two mates were able to soothe his ruffled feathers over the Muggle stuff appearing in his son’s life, especially as they had used Muggle means to raise their five children, not as much stuff as Harry was demanding be used, but enough.
“How is Amelle?” Harry asked casually, every one of his mates stiffened and Draco let out a rough growl.

“How’s Amelle?” Max replied tightly. “Caesar finally took charge and let her know that her behaviour is unacceptable. He forced her home without Eleonora, who is spending the night with my parents while Caesar asserts his dominance over Amelle.”

“She’s missing clumps of hair and her nose didn’t heal straight.” Blaise told Harry with a sadistic smile.

“Don’t encourage him, Blaise.” Nasta chastised.

“I’m not encouraging him.” Blaise answered. “I’m telling him the damage he did to Amelle to counter the damage she did to his chest and stomach. We all know that he almost got an infection.”

“I didn’t know.” Harry replied with confusion.

“You were asleep.” Draco told him with a conflicting smile that was part reassurance and part worry.

“I feel fine.” Harry said confused.

“Max has been applying potions and pastes to you since you fell asleep to aid healing and block fever and infection.”

“Thank you, Max.” Harry said with a little smile to the man who was feeding Braiden.

He grinned at the stiff posture of Max as he watched Braiden feed, the tenseness in his muscles and face as he held the baby tightly, but not crushingly. Harry sighed, he knew it would take some time before Max was comfortable with such a tiny person around, but he hoped that he did finally come to trust himself and relax around Braiden, if not he’d have to step in and talk to Max about his inability to trust himself around the baby.
Harry was lying on the fur rug in front of Max’s huge fireplace. They were settled in the second living room, the one where the fireplace wasn’t connected to the floo network so anyone who came to visit wouldn’t stomp on him when they came through.

He was cuddled up with Blaise and Draco as Max was doing paperwork and Nasta was reading one of his books in a strange language that Harry had no hope of recognising.

The fire was large, bright and oh so very warm as he twisted over once again as the side of his body facing the fire got too hot to stand.

“I think this fire is cooking me.” Harry complained as he moved.

“Make sure you turn yourself periodically.” Max replied with a grin on his face. “It’ll ensure you cook properly and evenly.”

Harry let out a surprised burst of giggles. “You wouldn’t want to eat me. I’m all skin and bone, Draco however has more meat on him.”

“Are you saying I’m fat?” Draco asked affronted as he opened an eye to glare at him.

“Draco is mostly all muscle, he’d be tough. Blaise is too lean, he’d be hard to digest, but you, you Harry still have all that gorgeous baby weight, you’d be soft and juicy.”

Max slipped off of the settee and crawled over to them and covered Harry’s body with his own, giving long licks and little nibbles to his skin making Harry giggle uncontrollably.

Max worried a patch of flesh on Harry’s belly; sucking on it and making Harry thrash with laughter. Max pulled away to grin proudly at the bright red love bite he had left on Harry’s stomach.

“There. I’ve branded you. No one touch my meat!”

Nasta chuckled as he watched all of them. Draco rolled his eyes before he closed his eyes again and went back to a peaceful almost sleep state, but Blaise growled at Max with a smile on his face and leapt playfully at him.
“I challenge you for your meat!”

“What do I get if I win?” Max asked pompously. “You are too lean to hold my tastes.”

“You get my meat.” Blaise indicated a resting Draco.

Harry started laughing and couldn’t stop as Draco was unaware that he’d just been called Blaise’s meat. Nasta shook his head, but put his book aside to watch as Blaise and Max circled one another on their knees.

They embraced like they would kiss, but Max flipped Blaise over and onto his back, pinning him to the ground and started tickling him whilst sucking a love bite onto his skin, just above his left nipple.

Harry startled as arms wrapped around him and started pulling him backwards. He looked up into Nasta’s hazel eyes, which looked darker than they actually were because of the firelight, there were golden hints in them that captivated Harry and made him twist his head back for a kiss.

Nasta complied as he pulled Harry behind the settee and began caressing him and licking him. He sucked his own love bites onto him and Harry moaned his appreciation, gripping onto Nasta as the game turned into something more.

“Ha! I win!” Max yelled out, breaking through Harry’s hazy lustful fog. “Hey, where’s my meat gone?”

“He’s my meat now!” Nasta shouted out. “I’ve claimed him! You foolishly left your meat alone and unprotected where anyone could come along and take him.”

Max crawled around the back of the settee and let out a false roar of anger, charging at Nasta on his knees and tackled him, making Harry tumble harmlessly onto the carpet.

Harry was confused as his trousers were painfully restricted. He had hoped that Nasta’s ministrations would lead to something a bit more gratifying, instead he had been brushed off.

“Hey! I wanted sex!” He cried out.

“You can’t have sex yet, Harry; you’re under a sex ban for another two days.” Max answered as he stopped play grappling with Nasta to look at him.
“But…but I want sex now!”

“You can’t.” Draco replied calmly from the rug.

Harry’s shoulders fell and he bit his lip. He was ashamed to realise that his eyes were tearing up. He turned away and left the room with a called out message to his mates that he was going to bed.

He climbed the stairs and after checking on Braiden to make sure he was still asleep, he went to wash his face and dug around for a pair of pyjamas. It was too hot for pyjamas, but if they didn’t want to have sex with him then they sure as hell couldn’t look at him.

He was feeling irrational and hurt by their rejection, he felt fine, he was back to his normal self, nothing was going to get damaged if he had sex a few days earlier than the Healer had recommended to them.

It was as he was pulling his trunk from under his bed to get his winter pyjamas, a bar of fudge chocolate in his mouth, that he pulled out Ginny’s toy box. He was going to push it back under again but curiosity got the better of him. If his mates wouldn’t have sex with him, then maybe he could have sex with himself. Or rather with some helpful toys. He opened the box and saw all of the toys inside and he blushed even though there was no one there to see it. He didn’t know what half of them were for and knew how to use even less. He spied the little red, pleated skirt and remembered how Max had loved it. He took the skirt out and hurried it away to the bathroom. He tried it on after locking the door and he looked in the mirror. It only just covered his bits, but the back was shorter than the front, half of his bum cheeks were on show as the skirt rose up with the curve of his bum. It was then that he found the tiny pair of matching lacy knickers that were attached to the skirt. They wouldn’t cover much more, but they would at least keep his bits in place and keep his bum partly covered. He grinned as an evil idea formed in his head. His mates wouldn’t know what hit them tomorrow. He was going to show them what happened when they denied him sex. He was going to make them suffer for denying him.

It only just covered his bits, but the back was shorter than the front, half of his bum cheeks were on show as the skirt rose up with the curve of his bum. It was then that he found the tiny pair of matching lacy knickers that were attached to the skirt. They wouldn’t cover much more, but they would at least keep his bits in place and keep his bum partly covered. He grinned as an evil idea formed in his head. His mates wouldn’t know what hit them tomorrow. He was going to show them what happened when they denied him sex. He was going to make them suffer for denying him.

Chapter Forty-Four – Little Tease

Harry woke up with a frown and after stretching, he looked around him. He was in bed and his four mates were surrounding him, Draco and Blaise on one side, Max and Nasta on the other.

Harry wormed his way out of the bed, thankful that they didn’t have a footboard so he didn’t have to clamber over it to get free and he stretched again, properly this time, popping the vertebrae in his spine with a satisfying crack.

He plucked up a still sleeping Braiden, he hadn’t woken up last night so one of the others had to have woken up with the baby, it made him feel a little less vindictive about yesterday, but when he saw all the love bites that littered his body, he firmed himself, he was going to go through with his plan and he’d dare them to touch him because if they did they would lose a hand, after all, they didn’t really need their hands to give him more children.

Harry ambled down the stairs and went into the downstairs bathroom, he started running a bubble bath for himself before moving over to the living room to floo call the in-laws and tell them that he was going to be spending some quality time with his mates to ‘recover from his sustained injuries the previous day’ he only got the family house elves, who swore to tell ‘Masters and Mistresses, little Master Harry’s message’ and Mrs Weasley, who, of course, ‘understood that he needed some alone time to recover from yesterday’s theatrics and that she would owl over some biscuits for him later.’

Harry thanked her and the house elves and grinned sadistically as he went into the bathroom to turn off the taps and headed into the kitchen to feed a stirring Braiden a bottle of milk.
“You gutsy little boy.” Harry cooed proudly as Braiden finished his bottle in record time.

Bright, baby blue eyes opened to look at him and Harry grinned widely at their appearance, he had seen Braiden’s eyes perhaps a handful of times since he had been born. Harry quickly swiped the ever present camera from the kitchen counter and snapped a quick photo of those gorgeous, cornflower blue eyes before Braiden closed his eyes again. Harry wanted to remember the colour of his infant son’s eyes for the rest of his life.

Harry burped Braiden and rocked him back to sleep before strapping him into the brand new, previously unused carrycot and took the baby into the bathroom with him. He took the nappy bag and a spare set of clothes for Braiden as he planned on giving his son his first ever bath that wasn’t Ashleigh or Molly Weasley supervised. Which reminded him that he had an appointment at St Mungos in the afternoon for Braiden’s first ever check-up.

Harry settled Braiden on the floor close to the bath so he could easily reach him and the nappy bag whilst he scrubbed his entire body clean ready for his revenge.

Slipping into the water made Harry’s breath hitch, he hadn’t realised it was quite so hot, but as he lowered himself gingerly into the water and remained sitting still, it was bearable. He just sat and soaked for a while, just laying back and relaxing. It had been a long time since he had been able to relax like this; his life seemed too hectic at times.

Harry sighed as he had enough of lying around doing nothing and sat up again to reach for his favourite shower gel. He squeezed far too much into his hand and lathered up his body very generously. His mates loved him smelling like chestnuts.

Harry scrubbed every single millimetre of skin, making sure to soap up everything, from his little toes, to behind his ears and everything in between. He dunked himself into the water, fully submerging himself for a few moments before coming back up for air. He grabbed his two in one shampoo and conditioner and poured it generously into his hand before vigorously scrubbing his head and scalp.

A knock on the door made him pause.

“Harry, are you in there?” Max’s sleepy voice called out.

“Yep. I decided to have a bath down here instead of upstairs so I wouldn’t wake any of you this morning.” Harry answered.

“Is Braiden with you?”

“He certainly is. He’s been fed and he’s sleeping at the moment. I’m going to give him a quick bath and then I’ll join you.”
“Alright, love. I’m going to go make breakfast, is there anything you fancy?”

“Anything’s fine.” Harry replied. “Are any of the others up?”

“Nasta’s up, Blaise is still asleep and Draco was just stirring as I got up. Do you want eggs and toast?”

“Sure.”

“How do you want your eggs?”

“Scrambled!” Harry replied back enthusiastically.

“Alright, love.” Max answered with a hint of amusement in his sleepy voice.

“See you in half an hour or so.” Harry called out as he heard Max pass the bathroom door and go into the kitchen to start preparing breakfast.

Harry grinned as he sunk back under the water to wash off the shampoo. He got out of the water and pulled the plug, grabbing the towel he rubbed his body dry before picking up something that had been in the box. Body moisturiser. He had never used the stuff but apparently it was supposed to make his skin ‘touchably soft’, ‘silkily smooth’ and ‘irresistibly kissable.’

Harry snorted at it before dumping a load onto his hand and smoothing it over his skin, leaving on a thin white layer as the back of the bottle instructed, letting it soak into his skin, before he rubbed it in and wiped off the excess.

Harry touched himself and frowned as his fingers actually glided over his skin. That stuff actually worked! Harry grinned as he put it on ‘his’ shelf of the bathroom. Max and Nasta had installed five shelves and they each had one shelf to put their shampoos, shower gels and razors and things. But even though Nasta always had stubble on his chin and cheeks, he shaved every morning, it was the only time he didn't have hair, but it always grew back in the afternoon.

Harry picked up the plastic baby bath that was Braiden’s and put it under the tap. He run the water into it and obsessively checked the temperature with his elbow. When he believed it was at the right temperature, he cast a quick spell just to double check, before he picked up Braiden and stripped him. He got a baby soft wash cloth and dipped it into the water and began washing Braiden’s face. His son woke up and started whining.
“Oh I can see now how much trouble we’re going to have getting your bum into the bath when you’re older.” Harry sighed as he finished washing Braiden’s face and neck before starting on his hair, using the wet cloth to wet it and the baby shampoo to clean it. Once Braiden’s head was clean; Harry lowered him into the water and he was unprepared for his son to start wailing and crying at the top of his lungs. Harry quickly checked the temperature, but it was fine. He quickly washed Braiden’s body and took him out of the water, wrapping him in a towel and cuddling him.

“Are you alright, Harry?” Nasta’s voice asked through the door.

“I’m fine. I don’t think Braiden likes baths.”

Nasta chuckled. “Max almost has breakfast ready, are you almost finished?”

“Yeah. Are Draco and Blaise up yet?”

“Yes, they’re in the kitchen awaiting breakfast like the teenagers they are.”

Harry snorted. “I’ll be there in a minute, I need to get myself and Braiden dried and dressed.”

Harry finished drying Braiden and clad him in a clean nappy, pulling his head through the stretchy neckline of his bodysuit, popping it closed under his nappy before he pulled on a plain white, long sleeved cotton shirt and a tiny pair of blue and white checked cotton dungarees. He finished off the outfit with matching white socks, scratch mitts and summer hat with sun visor and his four day old son was ready for the day.

Harry looked at the bright red, pleated skirt and swallowed. Suddenly he didn’t feel like wearing it and exposing himself as much as the skirt allowed. This was a stupid idea, of course it wasn’t going to make his mates suffer, they’d just relieve themselves with each other if he denied them.

Harry was about to put on his dressing gown and run upstairs for some proper clothes when he mentally slapped himself. He’d sworn that he would go through with this and he would. Where was all that Gryffindor bravery that he was known for? If they tried to relieve themselves with each other he could just hex them…of make use of those toys.

Harry pulled on the lacy knickers that were more like very small, lacy boxer-briefs now that they were on and he giggled slightly at the inside pouch thing where his bits were kept in place so they wouldn’t be visible from the outside. They were made for men with the design of women’s lingerie.

He pulled on the skirt and buttoned it up tightly on his left hip. It again rode high over the curve of his bum, but the lacy knickers covered his more intimate parts and held him in place. He grinned at himself in the mirror a bit bashfully.
“I can't believe I’m actually going to do this.” He put his burning face into his hands and breathed deeply. He couldn’t go out there whilst his face was bright red; he wanted to portray confidence and sex appeal, not shyness and blushing bashfulness. He didn’t want to flaunt the fact that this had been planned so much.

“Harry? Are you alright? Everyone’s finished breakfast.” Max’s concerned voice came through the door.

“I’m fine, Max, honestly. I’m just finishing dressing and then I’ll be out. Promise.”

“Alright, but don’t be too long, your breakfast is getting cold.”

Harry chuckled and cleaned up the bathroom with a spell, put away Braiden’s bath and picked up the carrycot handle after making sure that Braiden was strapped in securely.

He left the bathroom and headed to the kitchen before he had a chance to change his mind. Blaise saw him first and he dropped his half eaten slice of toast onto the table top, his mouth hanging open.

“Really, Blaise? Close your mouth when you’re eating, I don’t want to see your half chewed breakfast.” Draco complained as he folded his fork over his knife and pushed his plate away.

“Blaise?” Nasta asked puzzled and a little concerned.

Blaise’s eyes never left Harry’s little skirt or the multitude of love bites that littered his bare body, standing out like vivid bruises on his pale skin and he seemed to be having problems swallowing and breathing. As one the other three turned to look at what had Blaise so transfixed, Harry smirked as he saw their eyes go wide as they took him in, their own eyes going from the love bites, to the tiny skirt and the edge of the lacy underwear that was just visible underneath.

Harry ignored them as he put Braiden on the table top and began eating his breakfast slowly and calmly as if nothing was out of the ordinary.

“Harry…what?” Nasta asked, finding his tongue first even as he continued to stare.

“What?” Harry asked as he finished chewing and swallowed his bite of food.
“You…you’re wearing…a skirt?”

“I know. Really, Nas, I thought you were intelligent.”

“Is there uh… any particular reason that you decided to wear the skirt?” Max questioned as he continued staring at the tiny scrap of red fabric.

“It’s comfortable.” Harry answered with a straight face as he took another forkful of scrambled eggs.

“Are you going to wear it all day?” Draco asked his voice oddly strained.

“If it doesn’t get too cold. I’m thinking of writing off to the company who made this skirt and asking them to make a matching top, also I’d like it in blue.”

Harry finished his breakfast whilst none of his mates moved from their seats; he slapped Blaise’s hand as it moved to touch his leg.

“Oi! I’m trying to eat here.” Harry chastised as he finished his last bite of toast. He was quite pleased with himself; he had eaten everything, including his crusts this morning. None of his mates noticed.

“Do you need help with the dishes, Max?” Harry questioned innocently as he indicated the table full of dirty dishes and the counter next to the sink which held two frying pans, one saucepan and numerous spoons and knives.

When Max didn’t answer Harry looked to his biggest mate and saw him sat there staring at the skirt still, he rolled his eyes and stood up. He walked normally to the sink, no extra swaying or unnatural movements, no need to give everything away so early into the game.

He did bend over a bit further than normal to reach the washing up liquid and the taps of the sink and someone behind him groaned. He smirked wickedly and began running the tap, ‘accidentally’ spraying himself with water.

“Oops.” He exclaimed, turning around with his chest dripping wet, one droplet clinging to an erect nipple. What a damn stroke of luck that was.
He flicked the droplet from his nipple, flicking his actual nipple in the process and there was a sharp intake of breath. He grabbed a tea towel and rubbed his body dry slowly.

“This is why I don’t do the dishes!” Harry pouted at the table of transfixed men. “I always get the water everywhere.”

Harry acted as normally as he could, pretending that he was wearing jeans and a tee shirt rather than an indecently short skirt and his mates’ love bites.

He started washing the dishes by the sink first and heard someone get up and collect the dishes from the table. That person came closer to him and pressed right up against his back. He could feel the hardness of who was most definitely Max pressed against him, almost crushing him into the countertop, the rough material of his jeans stretched tight against the strain of him against his zip and scratchy against Harry’s bare skin. Harry remained calm and acted as if nothing was amiss.

“Hey! Max, if you’re not going to be helpful with the dishes go and do something else! How am I supposed to wash up with you crushing me into the counter?”

Max didn’t answer but pressed into him harder, he put the dirty plates down and wrapped his arms around him, one hand moving to pinch and twist the nipple that he had flicked the water droplet from.

Harry almost forgot what he was supposed to be doing, almost let himself sink into the pleasure that Max was offering, but he steeled himself. He would not give them sex or pleasure on demand when they denied him when he wanted sex.

He slapped Max’s hands away and pushed him away, Max let him push him because there was no way that Harry could have moved him otherwise, but he didn’t go far and those hands kept moving to touch him.

“Will you stop molesting me and do the damn dishes?” Harry sighed in exasperation.

“How can I when you look so damned fuckable.” Max growled.

Harry’s eyes dilated and his lower body clenched tight. Max’s voice was so deep, so guttural that it was arousing. Harry breathed in deeply, trying to calm himself, but all he could smell was Max’s aftershave and it made his legs go weak. A shiver went down his spine as he let out all the breath in his body in one shuddering gasp, the tiny hairs all over his body standing up on end as goosebumps broke out on his fever hot skin. He needed to be stronger than this.
“I don’t care, now do the dishes whilst I sort out Braiden, I can smell him from here.” Harry answered, holding himself firm and scooping Braiden up and moving to change him on the plastic covered, foam mat that was stored in the cupboard at the far end of the kitchen. It was yellow and had little pink and white bunnies on them, Harry was sure Mrs Weasley had wanted him to have a girl.

Harry sat down on the floor; his legs spread to either side of the changing mat as he went through the process of undressing Braiden so soon after he had dressed him for the day. He was sure he was flashing the matching underwear to all of them as the skirt was too short to pool between his legs. The thought almost made him blush, but he staved it off viciously.

He sneaked a quick peek at his mates through the corner of his eye and saw that the only one who had turned away was Nasta; he seemed to be avoiding temptation by not looking at it. Harry chuckled lightly, he couldn’t have that. He finished cleaning up Braiden and dressed him again, throwing the dirty nappy and the used wipes into the bin before laying his son into the bassinet.

He went around the table and happily hefted himself onto Nasta’s lap with an evil little smile. Nasta’s hands automatically went around his waist to steady him, but Harry could feel the tenseness of Nasta’s muscles, the hardness that he was being held against rubbing at his bum. He repressed a shiver; he couldn’t let his mates know how much they were affecting him, it would ruin everything.

“What time was Braiden’s appointment, Blaise?” Harry asked casually, wiggling around on Nasta’s lap a bit to ‘get comfortable.’ Behind him Nasta let out a soft moan.

“Four.” Was the clipped, deepened reply from Blaise.

Harry looked to him with a raised eyebrow.

“What is wrong with you?” He asked.

“You’re sat in the kitchen wearing just a skirt and lace panties and you ask us what’s wrong?” Draco demanded gruffly.

Harry shrugged and slipped from Nasta’s lap even as his oldest mate’s arms tried to hold him onto his lap.

“Harry, why?” Max asked, his eyes burning with lust and love.
“I told you, I like it. It’s comfortable as well. I was thinking of trying out some of those toys that Ginny gave me as well.” Harry added watching with a hidden smile as Draco choked on his shaky sip of tea. “She has wonderful taste in sex toys.”

“When were you thinking of trying them?” Max asked licking his lips unconsciously.

Harry shrugged. “Tonight maybe. Some of them come with instruction manuals.”

“Why would you need an instruction manual?” Blaise queried, his eyes glued to Harry’s body.

“Because I don’t know how to use them.” Harry didn’t need to pretend to blush as it came regardless.

“We know how to use them.” Max answered. “At least I know Nasta and myself can.”

“If they’re the magical variety then I know how to use them and so does Blaise.” Draco answered quickly.

“I’m not going to use them for the first time with you there!” Harry exclaimed in shock. “It’s going to be humiliating and mortifying enough without an audience. No, I’ll try them out myself first.”

Harry wished he could take a picture of all four of their faces as he made at that declaration. This was turning out so much better than he had ever imagined. He was having so much fun.

“You…you can’t do that.” Max replied looking like he had been denied the meaning of life itself.

“Why?” Harry asked. “It’s my body; I can do as I want with it. If I don’t want anyone watching me, then you’d better stay the hell away.”

Harry chuckled lightly as he heard all four of them groan as he picked up Braiden and carried him into the living room. He was going to make all four of them suffer.
At half past three Harry had changed out of the little skirt and into the tightest pair of jeans he owned and the tightest tee-shirt. They were a bit small, but the way Max hung his head as he appeared back into the living room made him smile. The skirt was safely in the bottom of the bag he was taking to the hospital so Max, Nasta and Draco couldn’t throw it away whilst he and Blaise went to St Mungos with Braiden.

“Come on, Blaise, we’re going to be late.” Harry hurried Blaise, who was strapping Braiden into his carrycot.

“I’m coming!” Blaise called out.

“I will be.” Max muttered as he tugged on himself through his tight trousers.

Harry kissed each of them goodbye and took Blaise’s hand, stepping into the fireplace and calling out ‘St Mungos’ with a whoosh they were both gone.

“Fuck I can’t handle this!” Max burst out as soon as they were gone. “Why the hell is he doing this to us?!?”

“I have an idea.” Nasta sighed, thinking back to the previous night.

“I don’t care why he’s doing it, let’s just get that damn skirt and hide it so he can’t put it back on when he comes home.” Draco exploded, turning on his heel and heading up the stairs to their bedroom.

The two older men followed and watched as Draco bent under the bed to pull out the damnable box, only to find it near enough empty. The only things in there were Muggle DVDs, two ball gags and a set of heavy duty chains.

“FUCK!” Draco hissed slamming his hands into the floor.

“Damn minx must have hidden everything.” Max groaned, tugging on himself through his jeans.
“He must have hidden them here somewhere.” Nasta said desperately as he started opening up the drawers to the bedside cabinet, the only things sexual inside them were various bottles of lubricant and boxes of condoms.

“Where would Harry hide something?” Max asked as he started looking in Harry’s suitcase and school trunk, begging for his submissive to forgive him for the breach of privacy, he just couldn’t spend the rest of the day seeing Harry’s gorgeous ass swollen in red lace and barely covered by that tiny skirt. His heart was going to give out.

“The bathroom?” Draco questioned.

“I don’t think he would have used Braiden’s nursery.” Nasta put in. “He wouldn’t want to taint the baby’s room. So the bathroom’s a good guess.”

Draco went into the bathroom and searched all of the cupboards and cabinets, but there was not one single sign of a sex toy anywhere.

“Damn it! Why is he doing this?!”

“Because he want’s sex.” Nasta put in. “He’s sexually frustrated so he’s making us sexually frustrated.”

“The Healer said…”

“It doesn’t matter.” Max cut in. “Harry’s wants sex regardless of what the Healer said and if he carries on like this then I’m not going to be able to take it.”

“Where the hell would he have put them?” Draco complained as they started downstairs, Max scouring the downstairs bathroom because Harry had spent so long in there that morning.

“They’re not here!” Nasta groaned in frustrated agony.
“Damn you, Harry!” Draco yelled throughout the house.

Harry hated the looks he was getting from other visitors to the hospital. He had dressed up purely for his mates, he hadn’t realised that going out in skin tight clothing would mean other people would be looking at him too.

Blaise was being very possessive and had an arm firmly around Harry, hissing lightly under his breath so only Harry could hear him. It was pretty annoying but Harry understood completely because if the tables were turned he’d be just the same, if not worse, no one touched his baby’s Daddy.

“I need the bathroom a sec, love.” Harry told Blaise. “Stay here with Braiden in case we’re called. I don’t want to be here any longer than necessary.”

Blaise nodded tightly and watched Harry walk down the corridor, using this time to breathe deeply and calm himself down before he gave his family away as outlawed creatures.

Harry quickly finished emptying his bladder and he washed his hands. He just wanted to get out of this hospital. Hospitals had always made him feel itchy and paranoid.

“Big, fat penguin.”

Harry turned at that declaration and raised an eyebrow at the man behind him.

“What?”

“That’s the ice broken.”

Harry just looked at the man and wondered if he had escaped from the mental patients ward. He was grinning like a loon and standing in a pose that puffed up his chest and tautened his leg muscles.

“Excuse me?” He asked again, hoping the man would make some sense.
“Hey kitty, I’ve got some cream you can have, you just need to lap at it.” The man breathed with an eyebrow movement.

Harry’s own eyebrow rose in question. This man was clearly unstable.

“Are you feeling alright?” Harry asked.

“Want to do some Arithmancy with me? We’ll add a bed, subtract the clothes, divide your legs and multiply.”

Harry just scooted around the clearly mental man and made for the door.

“Where are you going, honey? Back to heaven with all the other angels?”

“No, I’m going back to my boyfriend and my newborn baby!” Harry answered icily.

“Don’t be like that! Me and you together equals perfect! I bet those jeans would look better on my bedroom floor.”

“Fuck off!” Harry answered as he pulled the door open and made to walk out, only to have the man grab his arm and yank him backwards. “Oi!”

“Don’t leave; I want to see how good you look on me. You can ride my broomstick as much as you want.”

“Get off!” Harry hissed drawing back his fist and launching it right into the man’s face, just like he had with Amelle the previous day. Only this time the pain that encompassed his hand almost made him screech. Hell that had hurt. The man gripped Harry’s shirt to try and keep himself upright, but ended up ripping it as he fell to the floor.

“What is going on in here?!” A man in a Healer’s lime green overcoat asked as he looked to Harry with a ripped shirt sleeve and a bruised forearm to the man rolling on the bathroom floor clutching his face.
“He grabbed me as I was leaving, so I punched him in the face.” Harry answered truthfully, quivering just a bit. He wanted Blaise.

“Alright. Let’s get you to an examination room to see if there’s any damage done and I’ll get a colleague for him.”

“I just want to go home.” Harry said quietly. His confidence was knocked, his hand hurt like hell and his forearm ached.

The Healer sighed. “Was there a reason you came in today? Anything I can help you with before you leave?”

“I came here with my boyfriend and our baby. He’s having his first check up because I home birthed.”

“Ah. Alright I’ll send word to the paediatrician Healers and let your boyfriend know that you’ve gone home; I’ll see you to the floo.”

Harry let the nice Healer escort him to the floo; he passed right by where he had been sitting with Blaise so Braiden must have been called in to see the Healer.

“Callum, there’s a gentleman in the men’s bathroom in the second corridor, could you see to him please? There’s no need to be gentle with him.” Harry’s Healer escort said to a passing Healer, who nodded and headed off towards the bathroom. Harry smiled just a bit.

He took a handful of floo powder from the offered pot, using his uninjured hand and cast it into the flames watching them turn green.

Harry tumbled out of the fire place and into a surprised Draco’s arms. Harry clung to him and much to his shame he felt tears well up in his eyes.

“Harry, what’s wrong?” Draco’s concerned question brought Max and Nasta running.

They growled when they caught sight of his bruised arm, his cut and swollen hand and his ripped “What happened? Who did this to you?” Nasta demanded in a feral way.

“A man in the bathroom at the hospital.” Harry answered with a sniff.

“Where was Blaise?” Draco snarled.

“With...with Braiden. I was only gone for...for a minute.”

“Where is Blaise now?”

“With the Healer, Braiden still needed his check-up. He doesn’t know.”

“He doesn’t know?! Max asked shocked.

“He had already been called into the appointment before I left the bathroom.” Harry said pathetically as Max examined his hand and carried him into the kitchen to fix it up.

“This hand is badly bruised, Harry.” Max told him as he spread a topical paste onto it to ease the swelling after sitting Harry on the kitchen table.

Nasta was sniffing around his arm and growling, he tugged Harry’s shirt from him and threw it straight into the bin.

“Hey! I liked that shirt.” Harry complained weakly.

“It smells like the man that attacked you!” Nasta growled and Harry ducked away.

Nasta cuddled him then and kissed him softly, rumbling soothingly in his throat to calm him whilst simultaneously rubbing his scent upon him. Harry purred and snuggled in tighter.
“Do you want a nap, Harry?” Max asked softly as he presented him with a sugary, fruit squash drink.

Harry shook his head as he carefully sipped the strong squash, he felt less shaky almost immediately.

“Do you want to cuddle up on the settee?”

Harry nodded and allowed himself to be carried into the living room and settled down on the cushions. He was drifting in and out of sleep when the fire went green and Blaise landed perfectly on the carpet with Braiden strapped into his carrycot.

Harry couldn’t place his finger on what was wrong, but something about Blaise screamed feral and Harry sat up straighter.

“Pass Braiden to me, Blaise.” Harry coaxed.

Blaise immediately handed the carrycot over, but caught Harry’s arm gently, snarling as he caught sight of the bruising.

“It’s alright.” Harry assured. “Max sorted it out for me; I popped that bastard’s nose and jaw as well.”

“I should have protected you!” Blaise hissed.

“You can't always protect me, Blaise. I’m a big boy; I can take care of myself.”

“You shouldn’t have to.” Max answered sadly. “We’re here to look after you.”

Harry sighed and unstrapped Braiden from his carrycot, he held his baby up to his nose and inhaled deeply before cuddling his son into the crook of his arm and snuggling down further between Max and Nasta.

“Can I have a story please?” He asked a bit childishly, but Max grinned and picked up the book they had been reading together for the past month.

None of the others had ever been involved in his and Max’s quality time together, but Harry was sure Max would forgive this one intrusion as he cracked open the book to where they had left it off and started reading in the soft silence that had taken over the settee.

The others remained silent as Harry cuddled Braiden and listened to Max’s storytelling. He felt calm and relaxed and it was no wonder to Max that half an hour later Harry was fast asleep and Braiden was getting fussy.

“Take him to bed would you?” Max asked, not really directing his question at anyone as he eased Braiden from Harry’s sleep slack arms and took him for a bottle.

Draco followed him into the kitchen and Max groaned as he lowered himself into a chair to feed the baby.

“I can’t believe it’s only been four days since Harry gave birth.” Draco stated, looking at the feeding baby. “He’s gotten bigger.”

“The Healer was pleased with Braiden’s progress.” Blaise told them as he walked into the kitchen and poured himself some pumpkin juice from the cold storage cupboard.

“Anything wrong or we need to worry about?” Draco asked a bit too quickly for casual.

“Nothing. Harry birthed a very strong, very healthy baby boy. He’s gaining weight steadily, he’s growing, all his organs are working properly, his immune system is advanced for his age and his reflexes are all normal.” Blaise told them happily as he stroked Braiden’s deeply suckling cheek.

Nasta walked in and grinned at them.

“What has you so happy?”

“I found all the sex toys. That sneaky minx didn’t even move them out of the bedroom.”
“We searched every cupboard and corner of that room!” Draco denied.

“They were piled on the bed, underneath Harry’s very handy invisibility cloak.” Nasta stated with a chuckle.

Draco thunked his head on the table and groaned.

“Did you find that damnable skirt?” Max asked as he burped Braiden.

Nasta shook his head. “It was the only thing I didn’t find.”

“I found that.” Blaise put in. “Harry shoved it at the bottom of the nappy bag we took to the hospital.”

“Good, give it to me. I can’t see him wearing it anymore; my balls are so full they’re aching.” Max complained as he rocked Braiden to sleep.

Blaise pulled the skirt from his pocket and passed it to Max, who threw it out the back door and set it alight with his wand.

“I hope I never have to see Harry wearing something like that again.” He groaned as he placed a sleeping Braiden into the bassinet next to the kitchen table. “Now who want’s what for dinner?”

Harry woke up slowly and he stretched fully. He rolled over and his memory came back to him in sections. He looked to his hand, which was no longer swollen, no longer cut and bruised, but it was aching.

Harry frowned and slumped onto the mattress. He could smell dinner cooking and his belly rumbled. He placed his uninjured hand onto his now very minimally bumped stomach. He was almost back to normal, only not really as he had retained eight pounds of weight, which made him look healthier and his mates enjoyed the view. Harry smirked and rubbed a hand down his own body. He shivered from the contact and grinned.

He rolled over and then it clicked that whoever had taken him to bed must have found out where he had stashed the sex toys. He pouted and looked for his skirt before remembering that he had left the nappy bag with Blaise. Cursing Harry got up and shimmied out of his pyjama bottoms.

He looked down at himself and laughed as he kicked off his boxers and headed down the stairs. If he couldn’t wear his skirt, he wouldn’t wear anything. Either way he was getting sex tonight or he was going to owl Ginny for more toys and little outfits, in fact he might do that anyway. He’d just bribe Ginny with a few little details about his sexual life and he’d get another box of toys, he’d of course send her the money for it, but then again how much did sex toys cost? How much would he have to send to her? Max would know, but he couldn’t exactly ask, he doubted if he would even get an answer.

Harry chuckled almost silently as he saw his mates setting the table for dinner. He walked in and adored the look on Draco’s pink coloured face as a plate slipped from his fingers and shattered on the floor.

Max spun around as Nasta hefted Draco into his arms and away from the broken porcelain.

“Are you alright? Nothing landed on your foot did it?” Nasta asked panicked.

Draco slowly shook his head mutely and Nasta, with a feeling of déjà vu, turned to look at the kitchen door, where Harry stood wearing nothing but an evil looking smile.

He swallowed harshly and wanted to hit his head against the cabinet, they should have just let him have his damned skirt back.

“Why…why don’t you go and get some clothes on, Harry? It’s not that warm anymore.” Max tried, even as the lowering sun was still shining and the heat from the outside was drifting in through the open back door.

“I’m lovely and warm.” Harry answered as he picked up Braiden and after pulling off his little dungarees, his white shirt and his bodysuit, leaving just his nappy on, he sat at the kitchen table and cuddled his son to his chest, giving him skin-on-skin contact.

“You look gorgeous like that.” Max told him.

Harry saw something out of the corner of his eyes and turned around just in time to see Max putting away the camera.

“You had better not have taken a photo of me!” Harry hissed as he held Braiden flat out on his chest.
“Would I do that?” Max asked with a massive grin.

“Would Harry sit naked in the kitchen as we’re about to eat?” Draco replied dryly as he finished putting out the plates as Nasta fixed the broken one on the floor.

Blaise chuckled as he claimed the seat next to Harry and scooted his chair over to cuddle against Harry and Braiden.

“I changed him for the first time when you were in bed.” Blaise admitted proudly.

Harry grinned and kissed Blaise’s cheek.

“Good, now you have no excuses not to change him when I ask you to.” Harry said back.

Blaise chuckled again and kissed Braiden’s cheek.

“We have a beautiful, healthy baby boy, Harry. Thank you.”

Harry blushed a bit and quickly looked down to Braiden, whose cornflower blue eyes were open and looking up at the both of them.

“I think he knows who we are to him.” Harry said softly.

“Of course he does, Harry. How could he not know you are his Mother?”

“Yeah he spent the first six months of his life listening to your voice.” Max hollered from the oven where he was taking out a large side of salmon. “Poor kid.”

Harry hissed at Max, but couldn’t bring himself to stay even remotely angry as he sunk back into his soft, calm bubble with Blaise and Braiden. He made sure to keep as much eye contact with Braiden as he could, he adored his son’s blue eyes and he was almost sad to see the day come when they would change colour.
“Here you go.” Max interrupted with a flourish as he served them dinner.

Harry tucked Braiden into his left arm in a position where they still had skin-on-skin contact and he could eat comfortably, he was glad that Max had cooked salmon for dinner and not something that required the actual use of a knife, he really did not want to put Braiden down at the moment.

They ate normally, as if Harry wasn’t wearing just his skin at the dinner table, until Harry had finished eating and Braiden started fussing for his own dinner.

Harry stood up unashamedly and boiled the electric kettle to make up a bottle for Braiden, showing off his body in a long, lean line for his mates’ perusal. Draco choked on a bite of salmon, Blaise stopped chewing with his mouth still full, Max bent his fork when he clenched his hand into a tight fist and Nasta appeared to have stopped breathing.

Harry made up the bottle and instead of sitting back down, he turned to face his mates and fed Braiden standing up, ignoring his own hardness that was pressing against his belly and ignoring the four of them as he attentively fed his son, who was going to be put down for the night very soon and then…then the real games would begin.

“Please put something on.” Draco almost whispered.

“Why? It’s such a nice day, I was thinking of laying outside for a bit when Braiden has been put down.”

“Outside?” Max croaked his body tensing so much that Harry feared for the table top that his biggest mate had a death grip on. “I put away all of the blankets.”

“That’s alright, Max, I prefer the grass under my body anyway and I still have to dismantle my old nest, I’m sure there are some blankets in there. I can’t actually remember what I used to build it.”

A splintering sound accompanied Nasta diving for Max’s hand before it could go through the solid wood table and they gripped hands like one of them was dangling over a five thousand foot cliff and the only thing saving them from certain death was their grip on that one hand.

Braiden finished his bottle and Harry burped him confidently, wiping away the small amount of spit up from his baby’s chin and giving him a sound kiss on those pouty little lips.

“I’m going to put this little monster to bed, make sure you have one of the three way monitors switched on.”
Harry walked out of the kitchen without looking back, even though he could feel the burning gaze of four sets of eyes watching him. He climbed the stairs and went into his bedroom with a laugh.

“We did it, Braiden baby! We’re getting some love tonight, so you be a good boy tonight and wake up in four hours exactly. This is not a day where Mummy wants you to break out of your routine. I’ll promise you that I’ll beat your Daddies into agreeing when you want to join the Hogwarts house Quidditch team. I’ll be on your side and I’ll be in those crowds cheering you on every second of every game, your Daddies will not stop you from doing what you want to, just give Mummy this one night, please.”

Harry changed the wet nappy that had started to make Braiden grizzle and dressed him in a clean bodysuit and overlaid it with a light blue sleepsuit that had little yellow ducks on it.

Harry cuddled him in his arms and hummed lightly to get him to sleep, Braiden yawned and Harry mentally cooed, wishing he had his camera. Braiden’s eyelids slowly drooped and within moments he was fast asleep as Harry slowed his humming and finally stopped.

Harry watched Braiden’s little chest raise and fall for a moment before he put him into the bassinet and covered him over with a light summer blanket, making sure that Braiden’s little feet touched the end of the bassinet, before he switched on the monitor and picked up the third one.

He made sure he could hear Braiden breathing over the monitor before he opened the bedroom window and leapt out, unfurling his wings as he did so. He closed the bedroom window from the outside so no bugs could get to Braiden and then he went up to his abandoned nest.

He looked at it and grinned. Odd memories came to him of just lying about sunning himself, a bit like he was doing now, he mused as he pulled out his full Dracken attributes so he wouldn’t get sun burnt. He started dismantling the mess and he was incredibly amused at what he found, including three of the eighteen set of woven linen coasters Max had. Why he had needed three coasters to build up his nest he didn’t know, but he had wanted them at the time and he had had them.

Harry walked through the backdoor with an arm full of curtains and the front room rug he had borrowed and he grinned bashfully at Max’s shocked face.

“You robbed my damn curtains?”

“I’m sorry?” Harry stated, not even trying to sound apologetic. “I found your three missing coasters as well; I guess Caesar wasn’t to blame for those going missing after all.”

Harry placed the three coasters down on the table top and laughed all the way to the front room to replace the rug.

It was astonishing to see what he had actually used in his nest as he pulled it apart, his mates helping him when they realised what he was doing. It took an hour before the roof top was clear once again and everything was either put away or put in a safe place for cleaning. Harry hadn’t realised exactly how much blood he had gotten everywhere.

“Damn it, you puffed up this nest with some absolute rubbish.” Draco complained as he rubbed his back. Harry wondered if this was the first time that Draco had done any manual labour and decided it was best not to ask.

“My favourite pyjamas are not rubbish.” Blaise complained as he critically checked every inch of the silk pyjamas, Harry had loved how they had felt on his skin.

Big fingers stroked Harry’s right wing and the sensation it caused sent him to his knees with a moan. He looked over his shoulder to glare at Max, who was staring at him through lust blown eyes.

“You could have caught me.” Harry whined as he showed Max his grazed knees.

“We can’t be having that.” Max whispered, his voice once again gone deep as he picked Harry up from the floor and jumped off of the roof, his huge, bright blue wings snapping open to save them from a nasty fall.

They landed harmlessly on the grass and Harry rolled a bit more than he would have, just because the feel of the sun warmed grass on his naked skin was wonderful. He giggled as he rolled.

Max caught him under his body and pinned him to the grass and full out snogged him, not even a polite, but passionate kiss on the lips first, just full out tongue in mouth snogging. Harry let out a startled moan and wrapped himself around Max, who shredded his own shirt to feel skin on skin quicker.

“You’ve been teasing all day.” Max growled as his Dracken side took over, the hand clenching in his hair a testament to that. “Do you know how hard it was for me to watch all of that glorious skin glisten under the sunlight and not touch it, not taste it?”

“You wouldn’t give me what I needed!” Harry snarled back as Max clumsily kicked off his shorts. Harry grinned as he realised that Max had gone commando.

The other three landed around them and Harry barely spared them a glance, but the little flick of the eyes he had given made Max clench his hair harder.
“Calm down, Max.” Nasta growled as he elbowed him away.

Max snarled but allowed Nasta to lean over him as well. They kissed him together, both of their tongues forcing their way into his mouth and Harry arched into their touches.

The two older dominants separated as they seemed to have entered a dominance battle with their own tongues as they each tried to get the other to submit, Harry was having none of it as he rolled over and crawled to Blaise, who was already being fucked by Draco.

“You two move fast.” Harry panted with a grin.

Blaise yanked him down and under his own body, kissing him and penetrating him with two fingers at the same time. Harry yelped but wrapped his arms around Blaise’s neck to tug on his hair.

Blaise, it seemed, had very little patience and deemed a few thrusts with two fingers enough preparation as he pulled out his fingers and pressed himself immediately into Harry, who arched himself back and canted his hips to try and ease Blaise inside.

Draco was not feeling very thoughtful as he did not even slow down to give Harry a chance to accommodate Blaise, who was being shoved into Harry’s body with every harsh thrust from Draco. Harry let out a small mew and Blaise immediately moved one hand from its previous position of clawing the grass to clench around his cock.

The pain ebbed away under Blaise’s strokes and Harry started moving into Draco’s thrusts, sandwiching Blaise between them. Harry went with Draco’s thrusts, not Blaise’s who it seemed didn’t know what to do or whose thrusts to go with or against. He just shuddered and let them do as they pleased with his body in the middle.

“Fuck, would you look at that, Nas?” Max groaned gutturally as he tugged on himself.

“Looks like our three little ones decided to start without us.”

“We didn’t take that long to get undressed did we?”

Harry grinned at their banter, before his eyes rolled back into his head as Blaise was pushed into his prostate. He let out a soft moan and rolled his head back in the grass, pushing his hips up further to take as much as Blaise could give him.

Draco let out a grunt and stilled on top of Blaise and Harry kept pushing himself on Blaise until Blaise let out a choked moan and flooded Harry’s insides. It took the kiss to his neck to get Harry to go over the edge.

Max pulled him out from under the pile of bodies and fused their mouths together. They broke apart only when air became a necessity.

“You wanted this, Harry, you’ve been hinting for days and today was torture.” Max told him in a lust roughened voice. “I don’t think I can be gentle.”

“I don’t want it gentle.” Harry exclaimed as he pushed his lips to Max’s and wrapped his arms and legs around him.

Max lifted him up and slipped himself inside and sat Harry back on his lap. Harry’s breath hitched in his throat as he sunk down on Max’s full length. He felt like Max was buried in his lungs.

“Are you alright?” Nasta whispered into his ear, pressing against his back.

Harry gurgled as he leant back and kissed Nasta, who held his head so he wouldn’t hurt his neck and pushed his tongue down his throat.

Max pushed up and Harry broke the kiss with a gasp as his back arched further, his spine bowing until his stomach was touching Max’s as his head was angled backwards to look at Nasta.

“You look gorgeous all bendy and pleasure flushed.” Max growled pushing into him harder and faster.

Nasta pushed up tight against his back and forced his bowed spine straight as he rubbed himself against his lower back.

“Nasta! Nasta please.” Harry begged, knowing what he wanted but not able to articulate his words enough to ask for it.

“You want this?” Nasta asked as he rubbed the head of himself at the point where Max’s was sliding in and out of him.

“Please, please, please!” Harry begged as he tried to move a hand to grip Nasta and press him inside with Max.
“Ah ah ah, Harry, bad boy.” Nasta scolded fakely as he slapped a bum cheek.

Harry’s breath hitched again.

“You like that do you, love?” Nasta asked as he slapped the other cheek.

“Nasta, please.”

Nasta pushed Max over onto his back and Harry was pulled with him until his bum was being held in the air by Max’s hands on his hips. Nasta took full advantage of this and slapped both of his cheeks in quick succession.

Harry moaned at the stinging sensation and the gorgeous burning ache deep inside of him that he adored so much. Draco crawled over and Harry accepted the silky tongue into his mouth and those smooth hands on his chest, before those fingers pinched together to twist his nipples.

“Draco!” Harry called out. Nasta smacked him sharply and Harry grunted with the impact.

“Please just push in me already!” Harry almost ordered as he felt Nasta brush up against his burning cheeks.

Nasta let out a purely masculine laugh as he pressed the head of himself to Harry’s entrance. He applied a bit of pressure as Max continued to thrust into him steadily.

Nasta smoothly popped himself past the first ring of muscle and Harry squeezed his eyes closed against the pain, that is until Nasta pressed Max into his prostate. His eyes snapped open and he screamed as Max hit the little ‘O’ shaped gland dead on.

Nasta pushed in completely in one fluid move of his hips and Harry fell against Max’s chest, not even trying to hold up his own weight as he let two of his mates possess his body as a third tried to eat the inside of his mouth.

A hand that was too small to be anyone else’s but Blaise’s encircled his burning cock and Harry shivered the full length of his body as that smooth hand stroked fluidly, but slowly. A complete contrast to the strong, fast thrusts both Max and Nasta had taken on and the distracting movements of Draco’s tongue in his mouth.

Harry orgasmed first and both Max and Nasta forced their own orgasms down as Blaise stopped stroking him and started squeezing his balls instead.
Harry ripped his mouth away from Draco’s and screamed as his hips bucked uncontrollably into Max’s as Nasta sped up further behind him.

Max moved then and grabbed Blaise from his position next to their bodies and laid him on his chest so Blaise’s back was against his chest. Harry made a soft questioning noise and Max groped around for his cock and pressed it to Blaise’s opening, which was slick with Draco’s previous release.

Harry slipped into Blaise easily and Harry mouthed wordlessly at the sensation of being taken and taking at the same time. No wonder Blaise was always the most satisfied after group sex like this.

“I feel left out.” Draco muttered from beside them, his mouth still inches from Harry’s.

“I have a spare cock, you have a spare opening.” Blaise managed to get out as he pushed himself onto Harry.

“I won’t be able to move if more weight is added.” Max complained laboriously as he exerted nearly all of his energy just to keep thrusting.

Blaise was lying completely on his chest and Harry was straddling his hips, Harry peeked behind himself to see Nasta’s legs spread over the top of Max’s pinning them to the ground. It was a wonder that Max could move at all.

“You don’t need to move.” Nasta growled as he let go of Harry’s hips and stilling himself inside of Harry he reached over and pulled Draco to straddle Blaise’s body, turning him until his back was against Harry’s chest and helped him to sink down onto Blaise.

Draco hissed and Blaise groaned in the back of his throat. Max grunted as the air was forcibly expelled from his lungs with the addition of Draco’s considerable weight onto his chest.

“My ribs are buckling.” He complained, but he wrapped his arms around Blaise’s shoulder’s and took hold of Draco’s cock, stroking it as he threw his own head back and relaxed as much as he was able to as Nasta took control of everything, thrusting into Harry, which caused Max to press into his prostate and pushed Harry forward into Blaise, who jerked upwards into Draco.

It was messy, awkward, jarring at times as someone’s elbow caught someone’s body wrong, but it was so amazing as Harry orgasmed once again, bringing Max and Nasta with him. Blaise gave in next and Draco finally let go into Max’s hand.
“Okay, off!” Max wheezed, rolling all three of them off of his chest and onto the grass. Nasta moved back before he got rolled over by Max’s legs. “I can’t handle all of your weights post-coital. You’re just too heavy when you’re all boneless.”

Harry giggled and curled up as his body ached pleasantly.

“That was amazing.” He told them all.

“Can you please start wearing normal clothing now?” Draco begged. “Or at least actual clothing. Anyone could have come around today and seen you in that skirt.”

“No they couldn’t.” Harry answered. “I flooed everyone this morning and told them that I was going to spend the day fucking you all senseless on as many surfaces as I could and that I didn’t appreciate an audience. Your Mother was particularly shocked, Draco.”

All of them turned to look at him in horror and when Harry showed no sign that he was joking they started stumbling over their words.

“Dad will slaughter you if Mum doesn’t get to you first.” Max announced seriously.

“Mum’s going to be scarred for life.” Blaise stated.

“Dad’s going to flip.” Nasta sighed as he flopped back onto the grass.

“You spoke to Mother like that?” Draco demanded. “Father is never going to forgive this!”

“You lot need to grow a funny bone.” Harry giggled. “Of course I never worded it like that. I can’t believe you’d think I would! I said that I needed a day or two to settle myself down after the fight with Amelle.”

“Thank Merlin.” Draco mumbled.

The sun was setting as they lay in the cooling grass, none of them bothering to move as they all rolled over, groaning and complaining, to cuddle against one another. Harry ended up with Blaise, Draco and Nasta on one side of him and Max on the other, Blaise being cuddled in the very middle.

“I want a bed.” Harry told the other’s through a jaw breaking yawn as sleepiness settled in.

“Go and get in one then.” Max told him, his gorgeous blue eyes closed.

“I can’t move. Max, carry me to bed.”

“Any other time I would love to hear you say that, Harry love, I would even joke and salaciously beg for sex, but as my chest feels like it can’t support itself, let alone anyone else, I’m going to have to apologise and push you towards Nasta, even though the thought breaks my heart.”

Harry giggled sleepily as he moved from his spot in the line-up and crawled slowly and achingly to Nasta and flumped on him, completely spent of energy.

“Take me to bed, Nasta, please?”

Nasta just grunted, that could have been anything really, but the clue was that he didn’t move from his position.

“Please take me to bed.” Harry begged.

Draco forced himself upright and stood up groaning like an old man.

“I feel like death.” He whined, but he stooped down and picked Harry up and started carrying him to the house.

“We can get the best position in the bed.” Harry told him. “Right in the very middle, cuddled up together.”

Draco chuckled roughly. “Sounds like a plan, love.”
Draco settled him down once they had climbed the mountain they called the stairs and the both of them snuggled up together in the centre of the bed. Harry rolled over and peeked into the bassinet just to check on Braiden, who hadn’t moved an inch from where Harry had placed him, his little chest raising and falling softly, his little breaths only just loud enough to be heard if everything else was silent. Harry tucked the blanket around his little side more firmly and with a soft kiss to his little head, Harry rolled back towards Draco and cuddled up again.

“How is he?” Draco asked with his silver eyes closed.

Draco chuckled and wrapped his arms more firmly around Harry’s waist. It took a while before Nasta showed up with Blaise, Blaise was already fast asleep and Nasta tucked him up next to Harry and took a stirring Braiden straight downstairs for a bottle. Max stumbled up before Nasta came back and he claimed the largest part of the remaining bed space, which was behind Blaise.

Nasta came back up with a happily fed and changed Braiden and put him back into the bassinet carefully, making sure his feet were to the bottom and that the summer blanket was tucked under him before he came around the bed and climbed in behind Draco. The four of them slept soundly for four hours when Braiden woke up at two in the morning for another feed. It was a groggy and very sleepy Max who was brave enough to roll out of the bed to feed the baby and Harry smiled, knowing that the next time Braiden woke up at six in the morning it would be his turn to take the screaming baby.

It was a groggy and very sleepy Max who was brave enough to roll out of the bed to feed the baby and Harry smiled, knowing that the next time Braiden woke up at six in the morning it would be his turn to take the screaming baby.

Chapter Forty-Five – Alexander’s Birthday

Harry woke up with a groan and rolled over minimally to hear the squawking of an angry, unhappy baby. He sighed heavily and fought his way out from between his lovers’ bodies to reach the baby.

Braiden was five days old, almost a week and Harry was already bone tired and weary. Not that he didn’t love his son, he did, very much. He just wished that Braiden would sleep a bit later, until perhaps ten in the morning like he wanted to, so that he didn’t have to take so many naps during the day to stop himself from collapsing.

Harry scooped up Braiden and glared at the four other men in the bed, there was no way any of them were still asleep, yet none of them so much as opened their eyes.

Sighing Harry made his way down the stairs to feed Braiden and to get him into a clean nappy because he was wet. Harry could feel the heaviness of the nappy in his hand; Braiden had to have been so uncomfortable.

“Alright, love, let’s get you out of this nappy and into a nice warm bath, hmm?”

Harry walked into the downstairs bathroom and stripped Braiden and left him lying on the foam changing mat. This one was white with little blue elephants depicted on it.
Harry filled the little plastic bath and again checked the temperature manually and magically before washing his son’s face and hair, before lowering the screaming baby into the water to wash his body.

“Seriously Braiden, you need to take a bath, I don’t know why you don’t like it, I love baths and I’m pretty sure Blaise does too. Although he’s never had one, he prefers showers, but you’re too young to have a shower, so you’ll have to make do with the bath.”

Harry quickly finished bathing Braiden and got him out of the bath as soon as he could, exhaling in relief as he emptied the water down the plughole and dressed Braiden, who was soothing himself by sucking his fingers.

Harry grinned at the cute picture that Braiden made and he carried him quickly out into the kitchen and snapped a picture of him before making his son his breakfast. It was half past seven when he finished and there wasn’t a sign of his mates anywhere.

His stomach growled loudly, so placing Braiden into the bassinet in the kitchen, he made himself something to eat and washed up after himself, it was now eight o’clock and his mates were still in bed.

“Just me and you Braiden love, some quality time between Mummy and baby.” Harry chuckled and carried Braiden out into the back garden with an armful of blankets and three chairs floating behind him.

Harry placed the chairs in a triangle with their seats facing outwards and he draped three of the blankets over the chairs and placed two others on the ground between the chairs, before crawling into his little fort with Braiden and a book.

“You’re a little young for this, love, but I’ll read it to you anyway, it’s something for us to do until your lazy Fathers’ get out of bed.”

Harry settled Braiden on his lap, supporting him upright as his son peered around him with big blue eyes as Harry opened the book and started reading from the beginning. It was a children’s book, but as Braiden was only five days old, Harry rather thought that even picture books were beyond his son at the moment.

An amused head popped into his fort at half eight and Harry smiled sweetly back at Nasta.

“Hey Max, I found the missing chairs.” Nasta called out. “They seem to have a few stowaways between them.”
Max came out into the back garden and peered over Nasta’s shoulder and into the fort.

“Seriously? This is what you do in the mornings when left to your own devices for a few hours?” Max asked him with a long suffering sigh.

“I could take an extra-long bath, oil up my body and walk around in a little skirt all day if you’d prefer it.”

“I burnt that offending piece of cloth.” Max growled.

Harry just grinned at them and winked saucily.

“You have more. Dear Merlin, he has more!” Max breathed in horror, first to Harry and then to Nasta, who looked a little shell shocked.

“Well then, let’s leave Harry’s little house up and…”

“It’s not a house it’s a fort.” Harry interrupted.

“Alright, let’s leave Harry’s fort up and use the remaining chairs for breakfast, we need to go shopping today.”

“Why?” Harry asked curiously as he was helped out from inside the fort and led inside for breakfast.

“It’s my grandfather’s birthday tomorrow, love; I need to get him a present.” Max answered.

Harry remembered then a conversation that seemed a long time ago, when he was at the Dracken meeting. He remembered Alexander inviting him to his birthday on the twentieth of August and Harry swearing to go, even if he had to be wheeled there in a wheelchair if he was heavily pregnant. He grinned, Braiden had come early, Braiden was born and Harry could go to Alexander’s birthday without worry of collapse due to pregnancy.

“I forgot, I can’t wait!” Harry exclaimed in excitement before his face fell. “Oh, will Caesar and Amelle be there?"

Max looked a little worried, but attempted a brave grin. “Caesar will definitely be there, but I’m not sure about Amelle, she might be there. Please behave; the entire family will be there.”

“I’ll behave if she does.”

Far from reassuring Max, Harry’s statement seemed to make his face fall more.

“Harry, my entire family will be there. My Dad isn’t the only child my grandparents had; he’s only one of thirty children. Though he is the youngest, which is why my grandparents are around him almost all day every day.”

Harry was sure his mouth was on the floor as he looked at Max.

“Your Dad is the youngest of thirty?” He repeated. “And all thirty are going to be at the party tomorrow?”

“Yes, they’re all scattered around the world with their own families, so this get together is a huge thing.”

“You have twenty-nine aunts and uncles?” Harry asked for confirmation.

Max grinned and pulled Harry into a chair, giving him a loving kiss.

“Yes Harry, I have twenty-nine aunts and uncles and I lost count of how many cousins.”

“I don’t have to meet them all do I?”

“Of course, but so do the others.” Max grinned.
“You’re enjoying this.” Nasta groused as he sat down next to Harry and cupped the back of Braiden’s head with a large hand.

“Yeah, but I like teasing all of you.” Max said fondly, looking at the three of them lovingly. Harry smiled back at him and blew Max a kiss.

Max mimicked catching the kiss and instead of leaving it at that, Max mimed pushing the ‘kiss’ down his throat. Harry laughed and Nasta rolled his eyes good naturedly.

“You’re impossible; do you want help with breakfast?” Nasta offered.

“I don’t know why you keep asking, I always say no.” Max teased as he opened up his cold storage cupboard and started pulling out ingredients. “What do you fancy, Harry?”

“Oh I already had breakfast.” Harry answered distractedly as Braiden had stuffed two of his fingers into his mouth again and was happily sucking on them.

Unbeknownst to Harry, Max and Nasta shared a look over his head.

“Are you sure?” Max asked, looking like he was expecting to be hit.

“Am I sure what?” Harry asked, picking his head up to look at Max.

“That you’ve eaten today?”

Harry frowned at Max. “Of course I’m sure I ate today. I’m not stupid.”

“Max wasn’t implying that you were stupid, Harry.” Nasta cut in smoothly and soothingly. “Do you want something else to eat? Just a small portion.”

Harry sighed and nodded. “Sure, but make sure it really is a small portion. I’m not hungry and I don’t like wasting food.”
“You bleeding heart you, thinking of all those starving kids in the world.”

Harry looked at Max like he had grown an extra leg out of his forehead.

“No, I don’t like wasting food because I was starved as a child.” He responded dryly as he tended to Braiden.

Max and Nasta both stiffened as they were reminded of this little fact and a slow growl trickled from Max’s throat.

Nasta shot him a look and with a snort he turned and started making breakfast, muttering inaudibly to himself as Nasta turned to face Harry.

“How often were you starved, Harry?” He asked gently.

“I didn’t mean for you to turn that comment into therapy time. I was being truthful; I don’t like wasting food because I never had much when I was younger.” Harry shrugged.

“Please answer the question.” Nasta pleaded.

Harry sighed and resigned himself to digging through painful memories so early in the morning.

“Often.” Harry answered with a sigh after he had thought about it. “They used food and isolation as a punishment; if I did something they perceived as wrong then I was locked in the cupboard without food. It was just another way they could control me.”

Harry startled as Nasta pulled him into his arms.

“You didn’t deserve to be treated that way.” He told him thickly.

“I know, Nas. I knew then that what they were doing wasn’t right, I just never realised how bad it actually was. I think I was still clinging to the lost hope that they loved me.”
Nasta’s arms clenched and held him tighter, laying kisses against his neck.

“You know you are so very loved by us don’t you?”

“Of course. I love you just as much.” Harry replied.

“Good, because we do love you and we don’t want those people messing this up for us, we love you, Harry. We love all that you are, all that you were and all that you will be.”

“And any sprogs you give us are just as loved.” Max cut in, chucking Braiden under the chin lightly, his dark green apron covering his body, whisk in hand.

Harry chuckled and gave a kiss to Braiden.

“What the hell is a sprog?” Blaise demanded as he walked into the kitchen and kissed Braiden’s little mouth and then Harry’s.

“A kid, a baby, a child, a little monster from hell, a brat…”

“We get the picture.” Nasta replied dryly from the other side of Harry. “Blaise, was Draco up when you came down?”

“He’s in the bathroom.” Blaise replied with an eye roll. “We’ll be waiting another half an hour for him to make an appearance.”

“I heard that, Zabini!” Draco scowled as he strode into the kitchen and after the morning kisses he sat down and started a glaring contest with Blaise.

“Ease off you two. Here.” Max said as he put two plates of pancakes in front of them along with an assortment of sliced and diced fruit.
“Oh you didn’t say you were making pancakes!” Harry burst out as he snatched Draco’s plate from him and cuddled with the plate to stop an angry Draco from snatching it back, wrapping an arm around it protectively.

Max chuckled and passed his own plate to Draco before making up some more batter to make even more pancakes, watching unobtrusively as Harry ate a sized portion meant for Draco and if Harry was to be believed, which they had no reason not to, then this was his second breakfast as well.

“Harry, please make sure you chew your food before attempting to swallow it.” Nasta chastised as he firmly, but gently thumped Harry’s back when he started choking.

His airways cleared Harry grinned sheepishly and thanked Nasta before actually picking up his unused knife to cut his pancakes, which he had covered with honey and a mix of blueberries, raspberries and sliced kiwi fruits.

Max served Harry with two fresh pancakes, gave Draco another one, Blaise another two and Nasta another three before he settled down to eat himself.

Harry polished off his plate and sat back to rub his belly. Which felt very full and uncomfortably bloated.

“When did you become pregnant again?” Draco teased, poking his belly making Harry moan in discomfort and half-heartedly swat at the blond.

“None of your business!” Harry replied sluggishly.

“What if it’s mine?” Draco asked affronted.

“It’s mine.” Harry managed a small grin. “I’ve only had sex with myself and those wonderful toys. Can a toy get you pregnant?”

Max stifled a chuckle. “No, Harry. It’s nice seeing you this way though. I loved your pregnant body and now, knowing that your belly is caused by my cooking makes it very sexy.”

“As long as I don’t stay like this then I don’t mind being fat with a food baby for an hour.”
“Fat he says.” Nasta stated shaking his head. “I’ve seen more fat on a chicken bone.”

“Must have been one hell of a chicken.” Harry answered cheekily.

They all shared a laugh and Harry stayed where he was as he watched Max clear off the dishes and watched as Nasta got up to help him wash up. Draco left to finish the last few chapters of his current novel and Blaise took a fussy Braiden to spend some quality time with his son.

Harry flumped onto the table and groaned.

“I ate too much.” Harry complained. “This is your fault.” He directed towards Max’s back. “You and your cooking, making me feel all heavy and bloated.”

“I didn’t force you to eat.” Max answered, peering over one broad shoulder.

“You would have if I had said no because you didn’t believe I had already had breakfast.” Harry corrected.

Max looked slightly embarrassed, but he took it all in his stride.

“You need to eat as much as possible.” He defended.

“I’m not pregnant anymore.” Harry pointed out sullenly.

“It doesn’t matter; you look damn good when you’re full of food.” Max answered.

Harry sat up and growled.

“Knock it off the both of you.” Nasta cut in sharply, giving them both a steely glare.

Harry pouted and looked down at the table top. He heard Nasta sigh before he was pulled into a hug.
“I didn’t mean to snap.” Nasta apologised softly as he held Harry against his chest. “I just wish that one day would go by without a single argument, debate or fight.”

“We weren’t really arguing.” Harry sniffled.

“A disagreement is the same as an argument.” Nasta said softly. “I’m sorry for upsetting you, Caru. Dw I’n dy garu di.”

Harry jumped a bit on his feet and Nasta chuckled softly as he wrapped his arms around Harry and pulled him up into a hug, loving that Harry wrapped his arms and legs around him tightly.

“Harry and I will be in his fort.” Nasta informed Max, who was watching them with a huge grin on his face as he wiped his wet hands on a tea towel.

Nasta carried him out the back and crawled, with Harry still in his arms, into the small space between the three chairs.

“Hell, it’s a tight fit in here!” Nasta complained.

“It was made for me and Braiden; of course it’s a tight fit.” Harry grinned.

“Maybe we could steal some more chairs and put in an extension.”

Harry chuckled and looked around his little fort. “If you get another chair that wall can extend outwards, but we’d need another blanket for the roof.”

Nasta smiled. “Or we could just cuddle up close to make more space.”

“I like that idea.” Harry answered as he held Nasta tightly and let himself be squeezed tightly so that neither of them were touching the chair legs.

Nasta smiled as he closed his eyes and listened to Harry’s soft breathing as they lay there quietly with only the sound of the birds singing in the trees of the orchard off to his left.
It was the first time that Harry had been to Diagon Alley since he had been mated, impregnated and had given birth.

People stared, they pointed, they whispered as Harry pushed Braiden, snuggled in his knitted cosy toes, in a pram that he hadn’t even known that Draco had bought. Draco and Blaise were on either side of the pram, Nasta in front and Max was behind him. Harry knew they were subconsciously protecting him and the baby, but they did it so casually it looked natural as they searched the street for a gift for Alexander.

An elderly woman approached Harry and he shoved Blaise aside when it looked like his mate might actually go to attack her. He smiled at her instead as she peeked over the side of the pram to the sleeping baby within.

“Oh he’s a cute one.” She cooed. “Such a tiny little boy.”

She reached into her pocket and pulled out a bright silver Sickle, Harry saw Max wave his wand quickly and he nodded to Nasta with a relieved sigh and they watched and did nothing as the elderly woman tucked the coin into Braiden’s hand.

“For luck and wealth.” She said with a smile as Harry looked confused.

Harry watched the woman go and he looked at Braiden’s coin, held in his little hand. His fingers gripped it just over the half-way point of the coin. It was bigger than his closed fist.

“Aren’t you going to take the coin from him?” Draco asked. “You don’t know where it’s been or how many people have touched it, what if he puts it in his mouth, he could get sick.”

Harry eased the coin from Braiden’s grasp and looked at it consideringly before looking to the huge, white building that was Gringotts.

“I think we should open a bank vault for Braiden. This is his coin, he should keep it.”

Max chuckled and shook his head fondly but he started moving towards Gringotts bank all the same and Harry followed. Several other elderly and not so elderly people pressed silver Sickles into Braiden’s hand until Braiden had two Galleons and eight Sickles to his name all in silver coins.

“This kid is going to be richer than we are if this carries on.”

“My arm is going to ache if this carries on.” Max mumbled as he waved his wand every time someone showed them a coin, just before anything was pressed to Braiden’s hand.

“Why are you doing that?” Blaise asked curiously.

“More than likely to check for jinxes or Portkeys.” Harry answered with an approving nod. Max nodded back.

“It’s an old trick that poachers use, they’d disguise themselves as well wishers and press a coin into the baby’s hand that was actually a Portkey that dumped the baby into a cage. My Dad used to scare us all with the stories when we were little to make sure that we didn’t accept anything off of strangers.” Max answered.

“My Dad told me the same.” Nasta nodded.

“My Mother never told me that.” Blaise said.

“She was so over protective of you, you didn’t go near any strangers to have them pass you any Portkeys.” Draco replied.

Blaise growled at the blond but Nasta clipped the both of them around the ear.

“Not in public!” Nasta hissed at them, scolding his two younger subordinates as they entered the bank and went up to a teller.

“Hello, we’d like to open a vault for my son.” Harry said to the free goblin, who stood up to peer at the little baby in the pram.

“Yes, we had heard you had had a child. Name.”
“Braiden Blaise Enzo Zabini.”

The goblin wrote the name down and had Harry check the spelling of the names before he moved to the next question.

“Age of the vault owner.”

“Birthdate.”

“Fourteenth of August, nineteen-ninety-seven.”

“Father’s name.”

“Blaise Mariano Zabini.”

“Mother’s name.”

Harry blushed a bit but answered promptly. “Harry James Potter.”

“Fill in this section.” The goblin told him, sliding the parchment form over.

Harry read the question and carefully counted the coins again before he filled in forty-two Sickles, he handed the form back after signing it, the goblin signed it and then held his hand out for the coins. Harry handed them over and watched as the goblin weighed them, before thanking him.

The five of them headed back out into the street and they met a wall of people with cameras and notepads. Harry had been expecting it, but he scowled all the same, even as Max moved to hold him around the shoulders. He had hoped to have gotten some shopping done today.
“Why do you need so many lovers?!” Was shouted out. Harry ignored it.

“Do you even know who the Father of your baby is?”

“What are your lovers’ names?”

“Is it true that two of your lovers are forty years old?”

“Is it true you are dropping out of Hogwarts to become a catamite?”

“Are the rumours that you are already pregnant again true?”

“Are you planning another baby?”

“How are you going to look after a baby when you go back to school?”

“Is the baby a boy or a girl?”

“What have you named the baby?”

On and on and on it went until their voices drowned out one another and became a mass of screaming noise that woke Braiden from his sleep. Harry picked him up, still snuggled in his cosy toes and cuddled him fiercely as he turned his back to the cameras to shield his baby son.

“We’ll get you out of this, love.” Max promised, anger and loathing in his voice.

“Take Braiden and go, Max, I’m going to go collect me some tongues.”

Max chuckled. “You can’t rip out their tongues, Harry, we need to remain hidden remember? Though I’d like a head or two to mount on the wall, do you think they’d look better in the hallway or in the living room above the fire?”
Nasta came around the pram and passed Harry a slip of paper.

“It’s a Portkey; I suspected something like this so I had one made up ready. It'll take you back to Max’s; it’s safe for Braiden as well.”

“What about Alexander’s present?” Harry asked.

“I’ll find him something.” Max answered.

“I wanted to enjoy some shopping.”

“I know. Let us sort this out and the next time we come, you will have endless hours to spend at pleasure shopping. We should have done this before we came, but with the birth…”

“Maybe not hours shopping.” Harry said with a grimace as Nasta trailed off. “But I did want to buy some outfits for Braiden now that I can actually see my own feet. I’ve got so many clothes for him, but I haven’t gotten him a single outfit from me. That doesn’t seem right to me.”

“We’ll bring you back next week, Myron is sorting it all out, I promise.” Nasta told him as he pushed the parchment into his hand more firmly and whispered something in a language he didn’t know.

He felt the jerk to his navel that signalled the activation of a Portkey and he cradled Braiden tightly against him as he spun around in tight circles until he landed hard on his knees in a pitch black room.

Harry groaned as his knees throbbed in pain and he clumsily got to his feet as Braiden squirmed against him. He took his wand from his shirt pocket and waved it to open the heavy curtains that Max hadn’t had time to open that morning before they had left for Diagon Alley. He was in the living room that Max called a parlour, the room that had a huge fireplace but it wasn’t connected to the floo.

“Stupid newspaper leeches.” Harry grumbled as he opened the door to the hallway and almost blinded himself with the light pouring through the glass front door and the large windowed kitchen at the other end of the hallway.
Harry went into the kitchen and placed Braiden down into the bassinet as he boiled the kettle. He needed a cup of honey tea to soothe his nerves and calm his adrenaline, Braiden was due a feed and he had left the nappy bag with the premade bottles of milk in the basket of the pram.

No sooner had Harry finished shaking the bottle of milk did Braiden start fussing for it. Harry cooled the milk down before smiling as he carefully eased his baby into his arms and pressed the bottle teat to his son’s cheek, watching as Braiden rooted for it, catching the teat between his lips and sucking and swallowing strongly. Suck and swallow, suck and swallow. Harry understood why Blaise loved watching Braiden feed, there was something mesmerising about watching Braiden suck and swallow continuously, his blue eyes flitting from shape to shape, but mostly remaining on Harry’s face, particularly his mouth.

All too soon Braiden was finished and Harry burped him over his shoulder, wiped away the spit up and he rocked the baby back to sleep as he picked up his cup of tea and took a large gulp one handed. The strong tea calmed him and the honey soothed him and he let out a relieved breath.

He looked around with Braiden snuggled into the crook of his arm as he thought of something he could do whilst he was stuck at home for an hour or two. He had a few more essays to complete, Blaise and Draco were helping him through it all seeing as he had spent half of August on the roof and had missed valuable essay time, but he didn’t really feel like doing an essay at the moment.

The kitchen was spotless, every room he went into was spotless, even the bedroom and bathroom after the mad rush to get ready to go out. He groaned, there was nothing to do, except…

Harry looked to the changing table that was in the corner of the bedroom and he moved to the hamper beside it filled with Braiden’s dirty clothing. He pulled them out and carried them down the stairs with Braiden carefully tucked into the crook of his arm as he measured each step of the stairs.

He boiled the kettle again and put the plug in the sink, searching through the cupboard under the sink until he found a box of non-biological powder and a bottle of Comfort Pure fabric softener. He knew exactly what to do as he scooped the right amount of powder into the sink, poured over the boiling water and dunked the clothes in it to soak. Mrs Weasley had told him that only boiling baby clothes would remove the spit up stains and sometimes not even then, some stains were so hard to remove that it was easier to just throw them away.

Harry waited until the water had cooled down enough to put his hand in and he placed Braiden into his bassinet before going to vigorously scrub the baby clothes. He rung them all out and placed them on the draining board, emptied the water and boiled the kettle again for more water. He filled the sink, poured in a capful of the pure fabric softener and washed the clothes again. He repeated his actions again, only this time he used just pure water to wash any lingering traces of softener off of the clothes before he rung them out and carried them outside to hang on Max’s small washing line. Max didn’t use it except for hand wash only clothes as they couldn’t be spelled dry or clean, the fabric started unravelling when introduced to certain spells.

Harry cleaned up the kitchen and washed his hands thoroughly before he made himself another cup of honey tea and got a chair to stand on to get down a bar of fudge chocolate from the top shelf of the top cupboard where Max had put them to stop him from gorging himself on them. Max would kill him if he saw him eating the chocolate for lunch, but Harry didn’t want to cook anything at the minute and he wanted some chocolate.

Harry heard the floo going and he smiled, thinking his mates had come back, but it wasn’t Max or Nasta, Draco or Blaise who poked their twin heads into the kitchen.
“Fred! George!” Harry cried out happily as he hugged the both of them.

“We decided to come and visit.”

“You lovers came into our shop and told us what happened outside Gringotts.”

“Terrible happenings. Every reporter from the Daily Prophet was there by the sounds of it and the Witch Weekly Magazine.”

“How do you know the different reporters?” Harry asked as he made them both a cup of tea and another one for himself.

“From the questions they asked. The Daily Prophet was more interested in you and the baby. Witch Weekly were more concerned about how large your men were down there.”

“What?” Harry asked, a hint of anger and disbelief in his voice as a spike of possessiveness went through him. He was so angry that he crushed a tea cup in his hand and he cursed vehemently as he started bleeding.

Harry run his hand under the tap as Fred waved his wand to repair the tea cup and George finished making the tea. Harry wrapped his hand in a tea towel and he was ushered to sit at the table before he was served his cup of tea.

“They never answered did they?” Harry asked as he glared into the depths of his tea.

“Of course they never answered you dolt.” George answered.

“Anyway, onto more happier topics. Are you using the baby book that George and I got you?” Fred asked.

“Of course I am. I love it.” Harry stood up and got the ivory and gold book from the bookshelf in the living room, making sure not to touch it with his bloodied hand.
He carried it back into the kitchen to see Fred and George cooing over the sleeping baby. He chuckled and puffed himself up in pride just a little bit.

He put the book on the table and turned it to face the twins and let them flip through the pictures and paragraphs of information, like how long Braiden was at birth, how much he weighed, when exactly he was born.

“This one’s cute.” Fred exclaimed as he showed a picture of Braiden sucking his fingers. It was the most recent picture.

“He only did that the other day. Draco developed them for me earlier when we were waiting for Max and Nasta to get out of the showers.”

“Mum wants to spoil him rotten, she even baked him biscuits the other day before Ginny pointed out he didn’t have any teeth yet.”

“He won’t get any teeth if Mum carries on.” Fred grumbled. “Start feeding him sweets and cakes and he’s going to get a sweet tooth and his teeth will rot out of his head before he’s four. We can replace them with Skele-Gro easily enough, but have you ever had to try and pull a child’s teeth and then feed them Skele-Gro? I’d rather take on a Death Eater armed with a broken hair brush.”

“Remember Bill when he was fourteen and he had that cavity from Honeydukes? Mum body-binded him, ripped out his tooth and forced the Skele-Gro down his throat and he didn’t stop screaming until his tooth had grown back in six hours later.”

“I think I handled taking Skele-Gro so well because it wasn’t just a tooth, it was my whole arm. It hurt so badly to grow back all the bones, but it was my arm! I wouldn’t miss a tooth, but I’d damn well miss my arm if it was gone.”

The twins chuckled and finished the last of their tea.

“I think we’ve been away for long enough, we took an extended lunch break to come and see you. Your lovers should be back soon.”

“It was nice catching up with you, Harry, don’t let the papers turn you mental. We can’t lose our baby brother.”
Fred winked and Harry chuckled. “Get lost the both of you, my son will be wanting another bottle soon. I can’t believe those men of mine have been gone for five hours, what are they doing?”

“Shopping.” George answered. “Draco took the point of the group and he’s insisting on going into every shop and looking at every item. The others looked so happy.”

Harry snorted. “I’ll just bet they are. I’ll make dinner today then; I don’t think Max will be up to doing anything when he gets home.”

“We’ll leave you to it then, come on, Forge.”

Harry kept dinner simple. Just a spaghetti carbonara, but he had only just plated the food and placed it on the table when his mates finally returned home. He heard the whoosh of the floo and he smiled at their perfect timing. He heard them talking, arguing and the rustle of carrier bags before everything went still and silent. There was a sudden growl.

Nasta was the first to smash into him, frightening him, pulling him up and searching every inch of him as his claws shredded his clothing to see underneath them.

“What are you doing?!” Harry demanded as he found his voice at last.

They didn’t answer, though Harry shouted the question several times as he found himself stripped naked and pulled about like a doll. He practically screamed for them, but they ignored him still as his hand was seized and the bloody tea towel that he had dropped to the floor when he had started cooking was picked up and growled over. The cut had long since stopped bleeding, but as Nasta licked and sucked it, it started bleeding anew.

Harry tried explaining what had happened several times, but his mates shushed him and didn’t let him explain that he had broken a teacup, even when he raised his voice, they just growled louder.

Fed up and hungry, Harry kicked Nasta right between the legs and the bigger man’s immediate reaction was to drop Harry and go to his knees cupping himself as he almost retched from the pain.

Max stooped down to see to Nasta and the look he gave Harry made him equal parts upset and more angry.

“This has got to stop!” He screamed. “I don’t do this when you get injured! I don’t do this when Nasta comes home with a new burn, or Max comes home with a cauldron blister! I dropped a fucking tea cup! I cut myself on the shards, I dealt with it, it’s going to be fine. I have suffered through much worse than a damned cut to my hand. It’s not even deep! I know you’re concerned, but why can’t you just ask me what happened first like a normal person?! Why do I have to always be treated like a child with their first scraped knee?”

“Go upstairs.” Max ordered him. They hadn’t listened to a damn word he had just said.

“But I…”

“UPSTAIRS!” Max roared.

Harry fled and took refuge in the spare bedroom. He staved off his tears viciously. He wouldn’t cry over this incident. He wouldn’t. They were feral because of the blood that had been spilt. His blood. He knew that now, he had seen it in the way that Max had looked at him and he knew absolutely when he had yelled at him without listening to him.

He shouldn’t have kicked Nasta, he shouldn’t have argued, but he was damned sick of it! He was sorry he had hurt Nasta so much, he certainly hadn’t been aiming for between his legs, he had wanted a thigh or a knee, but he couldn’t undo what he had done and he curled up on the bed and ignored his bleeding hand and his growling stomach. How many times in his life had he had to do that before? Going to sleep hungry, in pain, in tears and covered in blood? It was nothing new to him and he slipped into sleep easily enough, his hand still bleeding and his belly still roaring.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Harry woke up groggy and hungry. It was morning by the looks of the low light coming through the un-curtained windows. That or it was dusk.

His stomach clenched horribly and Harry clutched it as it cramped. He had forgotten what it felt like to go hungry, he wasn’t as used to it as he had thought he was, not anymore, and he wondered how he had ever coped with it when he had been less than half his age now.

He climbed out of the cold and lonely bed, noticing as he did so that he’d ruined the sheets and pillow with blood from his hand. He hoped that the stain came out or he’d owe Max a new bed set.

Stretching gingerly as his stomach cramped furiously, Harry quietly made his way to the door and he opened it gently…to find all four of his mates asleep on the hallway floor. Harry looked back into the room and he frowned. The bedroom door looked like it had been hammered on and it had even splintered in places, but he hadn’t heard a thing. Had he done accidental magic and warded the room in his anger and upset? Probably, his magic was known for reacting to his emotions without him even knowing about it.

He gingerly stepped over them and went in search of Braiden and some clothes, though his six day old son was the higher priority. He was in the bedroom bassinet, happy and content, sleeping away with a patch of dried milk stained on his little chin. Harry smiled at him adoringly as he slept.

He made his way over to the dresser and took out clean boxers and socks before going to the walk-in wardrobe and picking out comfortable jeans and a tee-shirt before turning back to his son and picking him up gently to carry him downstairs.

The food he had made yesterday was still on the kitchen table, untouched and now inedible, and he sighed heavily. He hadn’t been the only one who had gone to sleep hungry then.

Harry made a bottle of milk for Braiden and a cup of tea for himself as he left them both to cool down; he cleared the table and washed the dirty plates. He made himself some toast but it gave him a bad taste in his mouth and he couldn’t handle more than a few bites before he started to feel queasy. He hadn’t missed this sensation. How many welcoming feasts at Hogwarts had been ruined because of his summer of starvation at the Dursleys? How many odd looks had he been given when he had pushed his plate away after eating only a few mouthfuls? He hoped that because he had only gone one day without food then it wouldn’t take the usual two weeks to get used to eating full portions again, but it seemed that his terrible luck had other plans and he’d have to be careful for the next few days lest he make himself sick.

He gulped down the last of his tea and he scooped up Braiden as he started wailing. He boiled the kettle again for another cup of tea before offering the bottle teat to Braiden.

Once he was done, Braiden actually stayed awake and Harry smiled as he bounced the baby in his arms, but the baby was not going back to sleep as his blue eyes flitted here, there and everywhere, taking in everything around him. Blue eyes that had gone darker. Harry was shocked to see the darkening of Braiden’s eyes as the last he had seen, those eyes were still a beautiful cornflower blue. Harry studied the eyes that were studying his mouth. Harry noticed the hint of purple at the edges of those blue eyes and he grinned widely. He was going to get his wish, it seemed. Braiden was going to completely have his Daddy’s eyes. Blaise’s eye shape and Blaise’s colour.

Harry was seized around the middle and cuddled from behind. He was so startled that he lost his grip on the bottle he was holding and it clattered to the floor, but Braiden he held tighter, clutched him desperately to his chest.

“Mi dispiace, amore. Mi dispiace.” Blaise whispered against his neck. “Perdonami per favore. Perdonami per favore.”

“I can’t understand Italian, love.” Harry said with a smile. “Look! Braiden’s eyes have changed colour!”

Harry turned around and shoved the baby he was holding into Blaise’s startled face. He pointed out the darker blue and the hint of purple and Blaise smiled and kissed him and then Braiden.

“Do you forgive me for yesterday? I should have stuck up for you, but all I could smell when we arrived home was blood. Your blood.”
“Of course I do.” Harry said flicking Blaise’s nose. “I was always going to forgive you. Did you get Alexander’s present? When are we due to see him anyway?”

“At midday and yes we found him a present. Apparently Alexander collects animal statuettes. We found him a lovely manticore statuette made of coloured crystal, it costed a bit, but with all five of us cutting in and giving it then it’s acceptable.”

Harry smiled and sat on the floor, pulling the changing mat towards him to get rid of the smell that threatened to choke him.

Max, Nasta and Draco rushed into the room and went to clamour him, only they stopped short when Harry brandished a soiled nappy at them.

“Don’t come any closer!” He threatened, shaking the full nappy. “I understand what happened last night; I know I was the one at fault…dah dah dah!” He said as they went to interrupt him. “I kicked Nasta first; I understand the reaction to the smell of the blood and the need to protect all mates, even from other mates. I was the one who lashed out first and I’m sorry for that.”

“I didn’t mean for you to go hungry.” Max said softy looking crushed.

“One night hasn’t harmed me.” Harry said, though it wasn’t strictly true and he gave himself away by avoiding eye contact.

“You’re hungry now?” Max asked, almost desperately, as if he were trying to make up for yesterday, but it didn’t work like that.

“No. I’ve already had breakfast.”

“You mean this?” Blaise asked as he tilted the plate with the less than half eaten toast. Harry cursed himself for leaving the evidence on show.

“It’s all I could stomach.” He admitted sourly. “I always have problems with eating right after a missed meal. I can't handle too much food or I just throw it back up.”
“Those monsters will pay for how they treated you.” Draco hissed.

“Richard’s working on the case.” Harry said. “He told me he’s filed the accusations and that the Dursleys will be arrested soon and put into holding cells until it goes to court.”

“Do you want something else to eat?” Max fretted. “I can make pancakes again, or croissants, you love croissants.”

Harry sighed, but he smiled as Blaise took the dirty nappy from him so he could get a fresh one on Braiden.

“I’ll try to eat one, but only one, Max; I mean it when I say I can’t stomach much.”

Max was happier then as he started scouring his counters before preparing his ingredients to make breakfast.

Harry finished up Braiden and put everything away and sat next to Nasta. He turned to face his oldest mate and thrust Braiden into his face.

“Look at his eyes.” He said happily. “He’s going to have Blaise’s eyes. They’re going purple.”

“So they are.” Nasta smiled happily, giving Braiden’s little mouth a kiss.

“I want to see.” Draco demanded and he took the baby from Harry.

Nasta took Harry and placed him on his lap, cuddling him and nuzzling his neck and cheek.

“I’m sorry I fuss so much. How is your hand?” He whispered.

“You don’t fuss too much, well you do, but I don’t mind, it’s that you don’t listen to me when you are fussing. You smelt the blood, saw my hand and immediately thought someone had hurt me.”

“There was a smell of other people here too.”
“Fred and George came around to see if I was alright when you told them what had happened.”

“So your hand is alright?” Nasta asked unrelentingly.

“Fine, it was just a little cut. How are your hands? I saw the bedroom door.”

Nasta had the grace to look embarrassed as he scratched his ear. “When we calmed down and realised exactly what had happened we went to look for you, we went a bit crazy when you weren’t in the bedroom or bathroom. We couldn’t get into the spare bedroom and we knew then that you had taken refuge in there, we tried calling to you, knocking on the door, we thought you were ignoring us and with good reason, but we couldn’t open the door and we were worried. So Max tried to unlock the door with his wand and it was then that we found the wards.”

“Those were incredibly impressive, where did you learn them? None of us could break them.” Max said from the counter, looking back over his shoulder as he worked.

“I didn’t realise I had put any up.” Harry answered with a shrug, a little pink cheeked. What sort of wizard couldn’t control accidental outbursts at seventeen? He was supposed to be a man now!

“You…you still do accidental magic?” Blaise asked as Max and Nasta shared a look.

“I…sometimes I guess.”

“Is this a recent thing, like when you had your inheritance?” Max asked.

“No. I inflated my ‘Aunt’ Marge when I was thirteen because she was calling my Dad a useless drunk and my Mum a teenaged whore. My Uncle grabbed me around the throat when I was fifteen and I sort of heated up until he let go.”

The four of them growled, but Nasta shushed them.

“Anything else?” Nasta encouraged.
“Umm, I was attacked by Dementors between my fourth and fifth year, I was desperate for light and my wand had been knocked out of my hand, my wand tip flared up without me touching it when I was searching for it. I can’t remember anything else off the top of my head, why the interest?”

“Only very powerful wizards can do accidental magic after they’ve been given a wand.” Max answered casually. “Certainly after they’ve turned twelve. It is usually an impressive feat to manage any sort of accidental magic after starting formal magical education.”

“I stopped when I was nine.” Draco answered. “But that was only because I had a training wand.”

“I was eleven.” Blaise answered.

“Eleven.” Nasta said.

“I was eight.” Max said.

“You must be really powerful, Harry, have you ever done wandless magic?”

“I don’t know, isn’t wandless magic and accidental magic the same?”

“No. Wandless magic is doing magic without a wand on or near you with the intent to use it, accidental magic is, as it says, accidental. You don’t mean to use it.”

“Oh. I unlocked the cupboard under the stairs after I inflated Marge. I inflated her without meaning to, but afterwards I wanted to get out of the house, away from all of them. I wanted my trunk which was locked under the stairs and the door just burst open as I approached it.”

“Most adults never learn how to use wandless magic, Harry.”

Harry shrugged and accepted the single croissant he was handed by Max. He ate it dry without any of the sweet and sugary jams and conserves on the table, but he forced himself to eat most of it, he left two inches at the end of the croissant and he couldn’t make himself eat another bite, he cuddled with Braiden and kissed and tickled him as the others finished their breakfast and then it was left to Max to clean up as everyone else was ushered to the bathroom to shower and get ready to go and wish Alexander a happy birthday.

Harry scraped all his knees when he landed on the rug in front of the fireplace. He let out a strangled groan and before he knew what was happening he was up into someone’s arms before he could stand up himself. From the height it could only be Myron, but when he opened his eyes, the eyes that looked back were cerulean blue and not Myron’s black.

“You must be Harry.” The voice was not as deep as Myron’s and it held a very slight Irish accent.

“Yes, who are you?”

“I’m Julius. Myron’s older brother and one of Max’s Uncles.”

“Oh. Max said there were thirty of you.”

“Max exaggerates; I have twenty-three brothers and sisters.”

“So there are twenty-four of you?”

The man smirked and nodded before looking down to the baby in his arms.

“This must be Max’s son. The Grandson that Myron doesn’t stop gushing over.”

“Myron gushes?” Harry asked as he was carried away and out into the back garden.

Harry stared at the amount of people milling around the huge garden. There were tables filled with finger food, another with drinks and a third held the biggest cake that Harry had ever seen.
“Of course Myron gushes, he’s like a little boy at Christmas when it comes to his kids and his grandkids.”

“This is Braiden. Braiden Blaise Enzo Zabini.” Harry introduced.

“I know.” Julius grinned.

“Ohh, is this Myron’s son-in-law?” A woman cooed.

“Yes, love. Adorable little thing isn’t he?”

“I’m not!” Harry insisted.

They just grinned at him and Harry rolled his eyes, squirming to be put down. He was let down and Julius’ laughter followed him as he hunted for a familiar face.

He found Myron first, talking to a group of men who could only be his brothers; Harry noticed that Myron, who was the youngest, was also the tallest. He burrowed under the man’s arm and grinned up at him when those black eyes looked down at him in amusement.

“How are you, Harry?”

“Fine, I was accosted by a man named Julius, but I ditched him over there.”

“Did he hurt you?” A man older than Julius had been asked, his eyes were black but his hair was brown.

“No. But no offence, he’s tapped in the head.”

The group started roaring with laughter and Myron squeezed his shoulders.

“Harry, these are my brothers, Alaric, Enrique, Xerxes, Cassander, Philip, Edward and Oliver.”
“Hello, I’m sorry but I’m probably going to forget every one of you and call you something else.”

They laughed again and Myron bopped him on his nose with a finger.

“So this must be Braiden.” The one introduced as Xerxes asked. He was almost Myron’s twin, but he was older, much older.

Harry handed him over trustingly and the man held him with a long practised ease that settled Harry down and it was a good thing too because Max tackled the back of him, tripped over his Father’s foot in his rush and crushed Harry into the ground.

As soon as he was landed on the weight was gone again and he was peeled from the floor. He groaned and massaged his aching ribs.

“We weren’t leering at him that badly, Max.” Cassander laughed, he had brown hair and blue, blue eyes.

Max blushed as he took Harry from his Uncle Alaric and kissed him.

“Thank god you have the baby.” Harry said to Xerxes.

“Alright, alright, I get it. I had a clumsy moment.” Max said as his Uncles laughed at him.

“Your poor submissive.” Oliver shook his mop of light brown hair, his black eyes glinting in the sun.

“I’m fine. I just feel a bit squashed.”

“What did you do?” Nasta sighed in a long suffering way as he took Harry from Max and sniffed him over.

“I fell on him.” Max said quietly.
Nasta just shook his head in exasperation.

“Is this the top dominant? Nasta?”

“Yes sir.” Nasta answered politely.

Draco and Blaise sidled up and sort of huddled around Nasta and each other.

“What happened?” Nasta asked incredulously. “We’ve been here less than five minutes and all of you have had run-ins with someone.”

“We ran into a woman called Kyra.” Draco said with a shiver.

“Oh holy hell. Aunt Kyra is here?” Max asked as he darted a look around to see if he could spot her, but seeing as the entire of Max’s family seemed to be abnormally tall, it wasn’t as easy as it could have been if he had been around average sized people.

Myron smacked Max’s head. “That is your Aunt you are speaking ill of.”

“I’m not speaking ill of her!” Max defended. “She’s really a demon.” He said to Harry, Nasta, Blaise and Draco in a whisper that carried to everyone around. “Avoid her at all costs!”

“What did I just tell you?”

“I heard you, Dad! I had to warn them what a vulture she is.” Myron hit Max again. “It’s not my fault she’s a she-devil!” Max insisted.

“I’m warning you!” Myron growled. “I will punish you right here, right now if you don’t close your mouth.”

“Why not just ask him to stop breathing?” Harry muttered dryly. “You’ll get the same results.”
“Whose side are you on?” Max asked.

“You fell on me and squashed me into the floor!” Harry reminded him.

“He has a point. Now what were you saying about my darling sister Kyra, Maximilius?” Edward asked.

“She’s evil!”

Myron lurched at Max and he ran off laughing with Myron running after him. It was the most childish that Harry had ever seen the calm, mature and sophisticated man act. It made him smile.

“Where is Alexander? I want to wish him happy birthday.”

Strong arms wrapped around him and Harry looked up into the strong, aged face of Alexander Maddison who was smiling brightly at him.

“Thank you, Harry, it is wonderful to see you today. I’m glad you came.”

“Oh don’t mind your own sons, Dad, play with the little submissives.” Edward teased, his black eyes had a soft sheen to them that made them seem less harsh than most people with black eyes, his hair was a medium shade of brown that reminded Harry of chocolate mousse.

“Thank you for giving me leave to do as I please with the little submissives running around, Edward, where is yours?”

Edward laughed and looked around before beckoning a lovely woman swollen with child to him.

“Hello Charlotte, dear, how are you?”

“I’m fine, Mister Maddison. Thank you.”
“Charlotte, for heaven’s sake call me Alex.” Alexander pleaded. “Harry does as I tell him.”

“Of course I do, Alex. I’m a good boy.” Harry cooed sickeningly.

“That you are my sweet, love that you are.”

Harry was carried around the garden and Alexander looked after him with such care. Harry noticed that Alexander spoke kindly and happily to everyone, but Harry was the only one who wasn’t blood related to him whom he carried, the only one he spoke to at length with, the only one who Alexander seemed to actually enjoy being around for any long length of time.

“You are the best of them all, Harry my love, these other submissives, they’re all stuck up women from Pureblooded families, they all think they are the very best, the most beautiful, the most wonderful and the most important, you’re not at all like that and I admire that about you, I love that about you and I could not have asked for a better submissive mate for my grandson Max.” Was how Alexander answered when Harry asked after he greeted a woman politely and carried on before a conversation could be started.

Harry snuggled up tight and smiled, Alexander chuckled and cuddled him tighter, bouncing him like Harry did to Braiden. It made him flush a bit, but as he yawned he found he didn’t really care. Braiden really did wear him out and after the night he’d had yesterday and his distinct lack of energy from not eating enough, a nice nap didn’t sound too bad right about now, though he did wish he was in one of his mate’s arms, perhaps Draco’s, Draco’s neck always smelt amazing and it was a comforting smell that eased him into sleep easily.

----------------------------------------------------------------------------------- X

Harry woke up with a startled gasp and he looked around him. He was still in Alexander’s arms, surrounded by a group of men that Harry vaguely recognised as Myron’s brothers.

“Did you have a good nap, Harry?”

Harry hummed and looked about. There were women dotted all around the garden with shawl wrapped bundles and unhappy toddlers, young children as old as seven clutched to their breasts as if they would be snatched away by a passing hawk if they let them go.

Harry spied Braiden been fawned and cooed over by a group of elderly women, none of his mates were near him, but Harry saw Braiden was being held safely and supported sufficiently and he settled down again.

“What are you looking at?” One of the brothers asked, looking around the garden, but unable to see anything that could pose a threat to the submissives or the children.

“Those poor kids that are trapped by their Mother’s sides. Look at the size of this garden! Look at all the trees they could climb, rocks they can jump from, hell I can even see a little stream over there, I’d be all over them if I was their age, poor things must be bored to hell and back.”

“It’s only natural that they’re protective of their children.” One man said, but his words rang hollow, as if he had been saying them for a while and had gotten bored of them quickly.

“There is nothing natural about that.” Harry indicated a woman wrestling a five year old boy on toddler reins as she tried to keep hold of the equally squirming twin girls, also on toddler reins.

“That’s my mate and children.” One of the brothers sighed heavily. He might have been called Alaric, or Oliver. “Tisha has been protective of them ever since Logan was learning to walk; he tripped over and caught his head on the coffee table. Not only did we have to burn the table, but she’s refused to let him out of her sight since, he hates it, sometimes I think he truly does hate her too, Mother or not.”

A woman walked over with Braiden and Alexander put him on the ground as she presented Harry with a wailing baby with a small grin. Harry smiled and nuzzled Braiden lovingly as he took out the bottle from the nappy bag that was styled like a satchel which was slung over his shoulder. He fed the baby, being mesmerised, as always, by the repeated suck and swallow of Braiden feeding.

Harry put the empty bottle back into the bag and burped Braiden, loving the little noise that Braiden emitted. Harry checked his nappy, checked that his clothes were all still in place, checked that both socks were on little feet and that little scratch mitts covered each hand and the visor on his little hat was still protecting him from the sun before he allowed the elderly woman who had approached with him to take the baby straight back off of him, to take Braiden over to a group of elderly ladies who were sitting around a table under a sun parasol drinking tea and eating fresh cream cakes.

“They won’t try feeding Braiden any cakes will they?” He asked a bit panicked as he recalled the conversation with Fred and George the day before about Mrs Weasley baking biscuits for Braiden and kids losing their teeth.

“Of course not.” Alexander assured.
Harry chuckled as a determined little girl ran past him, her squalling Mother chasing her to no end.

“Help me with your daughter, Oliver!” The woman yelled at the man who was hiding a smile behind his glass.

“Leave the poor girl alone, Kelly.” He shouted back as his daughter looped around his legs and then ran for the trees as Oliver caught Kelly and held her. “Heidi is fine, Kelly. Leave her alone, love. She just wants some fun, this estate is quite safe.”

Kelly lashed out at Oliver and squawked. Oliver pinched the skin of her neck, right up behind her ear. By the way she shied away and raised a shoulder to knock away Oliver’s arm it hurt a lot. She hit him, lashed out at him, but in the end she went still and silent, sullen at the embarrassment of being punished in public. Harry would have hated it too, but he felt no sympathy for her, he was the only submissive at this party who was allowing the family members to coo and cuddle with his child. He wouldn’t dare try and attack one of Max’s relatives just because they wanted to pinch one of Braiden’s cheeks.

Caesar came over and hugged his Grandfather, Harry and all, wishing him happy birthday.

“How are you, Caesar?” Alaric asked pulling the smaller man into a hug. “How was America? I haven’t seen you in a year or more.”

“America is slowly becoming home now. I’ve settled down with Amelle and the remodelling of the house is coming on great. A few more pay checks and I’ll have everything I need to finish paying the contractors and within a month, maybe two, the house will be completely done.”

“I managed to get Amelle off of that name; we named the baby Eleonora Dahlia.”

“A much better, more fitting name.”

“I still can’t believe she wanted to call the baby Gem Bear.” Harry put in. “I thought Max was winding me up when he told me his niece was going to be named Gem Bear. Where did she get that name anyway, Caesar?”
Caesar shrugged. “I haven’t got a clue.”

Harry stretched in Alexander’s arms, the elder man chuckling as he tried to keep hold of a squirming Harry as he stretched. He was placed on the floor and he cracked his back before sighing in happiness.

“I’m going to hunt down my errant mates, I need a kiss.”

“No hanky-panky in my home!” Alexander warned him.

“Would I ever do that?” Harry asked, his cheeks filling with blood at the very thought of having sex in someone else’s home when said home was bursting with people.

“You might not, but some others would.”

“It was once, Dad!” A man Harry couldn’t put a name to burst out, his cheeks redder than Harry’s.

“Your Mother almost had a heart attack!”

Harry left giggling as he wove through people, stopped to speak to some, before finding Blaise. Harry locked arms around his neck and sucked at an ear. Blaise chuckled.

“Hello, Harry.”

“How did you know it was me?” Harry asked.

“You are the only one at this party who has to stretch up to reach my ears.”

Harry huffed, but forgave Blaise as his mate turned around and started sucking on his neck, nibbling it between his teeth. Harry giggled as it tickled him.
“Stop that.”

“You don’t really want me to stop, Bello.” Blaise purred.

Harry giggled again.

“Not getting it on over here without me are you?”

Harry looked at Max with lusty, wide eyes and a parted mouth.

“Oh hell, you are! You look so gorgeous like that.” Max groaned, striding forward and shoving his tongue down Harry’s throat, massaging his tongue and tasting the inside of his cheeks, drinking him down.

Nasta broke them all up a few minutes later as he spotted them and strode right over. “Save it for the privacy of our home.” He told them seriously. “I can’t stand to see everyone looking at Harry like a piece of meat, if you start pawing at him then he’s going to start emitting pheromones and they’re going to try something.”

“They’re all mated though.” Harry said confusedly, his eyes a tad unfocused.

“No they’re not.” Max answered. “Not all of my Aunts and Uncles are Drackens and only a few of them are mated. Uncle Enrique is known for hitting on every submissive that crosses his path and Uncle Cassander tried it on with Uncle Oliver’s mate Kelly when she was pregnant with Heidi, she almost severed his neck.”

“But…but…they’re his brother’s mates!”

Max chuckled. “And some of those brothers have gorgeous airheads for mates and my Uncles are men after all, stupid, foolish men, but men none the less.”

“That’s not an excuse!” Harry raged. “You had better not…”
“I wouldn’t dream of cheating on you, least of all with my Uncles’ bimbo wives.” Max cut in.

“Sometimes, if a Dracken has been without a mate for so long, they start to develop...strange characteristics.” Nasta told him softly. “They don’t care if it’s their brother’s wife, their sister’s best friend, a submissive old enough to be their grandmother or a submissive young enough to be their grandchild, they just see a submissive and they’ll try to woo them, bed them or sometimes kill them.”

“Thankfully none of my Uncles are quite at the point of killing a submissive just because they haven’t mated yet, unfortunately Uncle Sandor is at the point where he would try and force himself on a submissive.” Max admitted. “And a few others will try and flirt and grope, but nothing like Uncle Benedict.”

“What did he do?” Harry asked softly.

Max looked pained and a tad heartbroken. “Before he went almost completely mad with his need for a mate, he was one of my favourite Uncle’s. He wasn’t afraid to rough house with me, he taught me how to pick a lock and how to play football. But when I was fourteen he just snapped. He had been rejected yet again at a meeting and he just completely lost it. He killed twenty-seven dominants, the Elder who was the chaperone for the meeting and then he raped and killed the submissive for rejecting him. The Counsel sentenced him to death. Grandfather pleaded to be the one to kill him; he didn’t want his son to be taunted, tortured and then butchered, no matter what he had done. He gave him a kiss to the head and a hug. A quick, sharp twist to the neck and it was done. Uncle Benedict never knew how or when it was going to happen, it was better that way.”

“I’m so sorry, Max.”

“Don’t be. He did deserve it. He had killed twenty-nine people that day. Twenty-nine innocent people including a sixteen year old girl. Regardless of what his mental state of mind was, it didn’t matter that he had snapped or that he didn’t mean to do it. He deserved death for what he did, he knew it himself which is why he accepted the Counsel’s verdict of death with dignity and his head held high. The night before we were allowed to visit him, he said as much to us then, he wanted to die for what he had done, he told us that he couldn’t live with what he had done and that if by some stupid twist of fate the Counsel didn’t sentence him to death then he’d kill himself anyway. That was the hardest to hear.”

“Why do you all look like you’ve been smacked in the face?” Draco asked as he wandered over to them.
“We’ll tell you later, love.” Nasta said as he kissed Draco’s forehead. “Where is Braiden?”

“Being smothered by some old biddies eating lemon cakes and drinking iced tea.”

“Smothered?” Harry shrieked rushing off to where his Dracken told him the scent of his son was located.

“You just had to use the word smothered.” Nasta said with a shake of his head. “You couldn’t have said being cuddled or cooed over could you?”

“I didn’t realise he’d act like that!” Draco defended.

Harry snatched his son off of the poor, startled woman who was holding him and he sunk to the floor, creating a cover over his son and he meticulously sniffed and licked every inch of Braiden’s skin, scenting for injuries. When that failed to turn up anything Harry checked Braiden with his eyes and his hands, searching for a single hair out of place.

“Harry?” Myron questioned as he tried to approach him, getting down on his haunches to be as close to eye level as he could without lying down flat on the floor.

Harry hissed deeply and started growling and Myron backed away.

“We weren’t hurting him, sweet one, I swear.” One elderly woman told him, her hands pressed to her breast, beseeching him.

“Harry, Draco meant the word figuratively, not literally.” Nasta told him as he knelt down next to him. Harry gave a feeble growl, but couldn’t muster up enough of his human side to do anything else and a warning growl back was all it took for Harry to slip back to lay against Nasta’s knees as the truth of his mate’s words sunk in. Nothing was amiss, Braiden was fine, sleeping in fact, not a mark on him, breathing deeply and quietly, snuffling now and then, but nothing more, he felt like a fool.

“I’m sorry.” He told the group of women.

“That’s quite alright, dear.” One told him kindly.
“What brought this on?” Alexander asked.

“Draco made a harmless, but thoughtless comment and Harry reacted to the thought that Braiden was in danger.”

“No harm done.” Alexander commented as he helped Harry to his feet and gave him a kiss to the cheek.

Harry smiled weakly, but he couldn’t bring himself to unclamp his arms from around his baby and instead rested Braiden against his front, cupping that soft black hair and nappy clad bottom tightly to his heart. He had never felt so much fear before, the fear that his son might be in danger. That something could snuff out his life as quickly as blowing out a candle.

His son was so small and vulnerable, so delicate and defenceless. How could he have just left his precious baby in the care of strangers? People he didn’t know, people he had never even seen before, let alone met. Any one of them could have harmed his precious baby, anyone of them could have killed Braiden, how could he have gambled with Braiden’s life like that? Risked his sweet baby like that? What sort of Mother was he to give his son away to anyone and everyone?

His arms slid around Braiden more tightly, covering more of his little body as he clutched Braiden to his chest looking suspiciously at everyone and hissing at anyone who approached too close. No one was ever going to hurt his son; no one was ever going to get close enough to hurt his son. He’d kill them first, he swore it.

Chapter Forty-Six - Control

Harry didn’t let anyone close to him or Braiden; he even swiped at his own mates when they tried to take Braiden from him and things went downhill very fast when Ashleigh and Richard came over to say hello and Ashleigh tried to touch Braiden.

Harry snarled so ferociously that some of the other submissives called for their mates in distress. Harry shielded Braiden from Ashleigh and darted away to hide in the top branches of a tree, Nasta scowling at him from below.

“Really, Harry this is foolish, get down!”

Harry hissed at Nasta, who sighed in exasperation and started climbing the tree after his errant mate and child. Harry shuffled as far away as possible without compromising the safety of his son, which wasn’t very far as he was unwilling to move away from the strong, sturdy trunk of the old sycamore tree.

Nasta caught his leg and held him still until he reached his level and eased him into his arms before jumping from the tree, his black and gold wings snapping out to make the landing softer and less jarring.

Harry was carried away to the small stream at the very back of the garden, where Max, Blaise and Draco were waiting.

“Alright, Harry, we understand about the natural instincts of submissive Drackens, we do. Hell every submissive linked to my family have either destroyed their children or are in the process of ruining them, you were different and we loved that about you. Everyone loved that about you, but now you are turning into them.” Max told him as Harry sat on a boulder and rocked Braiden.

“I’m sorry for my thoughtless comment.” Draco said. “But I thought you knew that absolutely no one here would hurt Braiden, they’d rather eat their own hands. I didn’t mean anything by the comment, love and I’m sorry I’ve turned you this way.”

“Please come back to us, Harry.” Nasta told him softly as he held his head and kissed him.

“Don’t turn into them, Innamorato, you swore that you wouldn’t become like them.” Blaise told him. “Look at them. Look at how unhappy their children are, do you want our Braiden like that? Do you want him to hate you?”

Harry looked at the screaming children and swallowed down the bitter tasting self-loathing that had coated his tongue. What had he done? He looked to Braiden clamped in his arms, being squashed even as he wailed in discomfort. What had he done?

He loosened his arms and winced as the screaming of his Dracken tried to force him to clamp Braiden back up in his arms, to shield him from any and everyone who was in the garden. He took a deep breath and stood up, he forced himself to walk over to Myron, Richard and Ashleigh, whose eyes were slightly red tinted from crying.

He sucked up the rest of his dignity and stood in front of them with his head bowed, ignoring the blistering screeches that his Dracken was emitting in his head, making it throb terribly and his arms tremble as he retained his loose hold on Braiden where his Dracken wanted to crush him to their heart.

“What is it, Harry?” The cold way Richard spoke almost killed a part of him. Richard never spoke coldly to anyone except to Laurel and Amelle. Harry didn’t want to be pitched in the same boat as the both of them, not in Richard’s eyes, not in anyone’s eyes.

Harry held Braiden out to Ashleigh. “I’m sorry.” He whispered. “I didn’t mean it, any of it. I lost myself for a moment and that was all it took for my Dracken to take over.”

“I think sometimes we forget that you have only been a Dracken for little over a year. You have such good control over yourself and your instincts that it’s easy to forget that you are seventeen years old, just a baby Dracken.” Alexander spoke from behind him.

Ashleigh took Braiden from him and Harry peeked through his overlong fringe to see her delight as she cuddled and kissed his baby. Richard’s face was still stony and Myron wasn’t even looking at him. It destroyed a part of himself and he quickly excused himself and walked through the groups of people, around Mothers snarling at the Fathers of their tightly clutched babies, around faces he knew and those he didn’t until he reached the house. He found a bathroom and after locking the door he sunk to the floor and dissolved into tears. What had he done?

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

“Have you seen, Harry?” Max asked his parents as he spotted them with Braiden. “We’ve been looking for him for half an hour and we can’t find him.”

“He was here half an hour ago.” His Mother told him. “He apologised and gave me Braiden, I haven’t seen him since.”

Max sighed and run a hand through his hair.

“How you tried scenting for him?” Myron put in unhelpfully.

“Of course we have.” Max said coolly. “His scent is all through the back garden as you well know!”

“Don’t speak to your Father like that.” Richard chastised him and Max understood all at once what had happened.

“It was you two, this was your fault.”

“Don’t blame us for the actions of your submissive.”

“So he’s just ‘my submissive’ now is he? You know how much he loves you both and if you spoke to him like this then it’s no wonder he’s gone. If anything, anything at all has happened to him, I’ll never speak to either of you again!” Max threatened as he snatched Braiden from his Mother and strode off towards his other mates.

He handed Braiden to Blaise and thunked his head onto Nasta’s shoulder and breathed deeply to calm himself. Nasta’s smell always calmed him down. A perk of being the top dominant of their
“It was my Dads.” He admitted softly and it was one of the hardest things that he had had to admit to in a while. “They barely acknowledged Harry and it obviously upset him so he’s gone. Either home or he’s here hiding.”

“Draco, go and search the house, Max go with him, you need a familiar, peaceful place to calm down. Blaise and I will search here. If he’s not at either place, then we will check the Weasleys home, then Granger’s home and then with Lupin and Dumbledore, we will do so calmly and rationally. If we still can’t find him, then we will search to the ends of the earth for him, but until then, we are going to assume that he is safe and is just calming down somewhere quiet.”

“You really are taking Harry’s ‘don’t be so overprotective and fussy’ comment to heart aren’t you?” Max asked with a grin.

Nasta sighed. “If he’s just gone to the bathroom or is sitting at home reading a book to calm down and we’re rushing here, there and everywhere looking for him, getting more wound up and feral and then when we find him we clamour him and startle him and sniff him and lick him when he doesn’t even know why we’re doing it, he’s going to feel worse and he’s going to get angry again. If we remain calm and level headed we can actually speak to him and find out if he believes he’s hurt or not, we can always ask him if we can check, just in case. He knows that we need to do it to reassure ourselves, he just doesn’t like us all trying to do it at once or if he’s just left a room out of our sights.”

Nasta looked at the others who were just staring back at him. “What?”

“I think that’s the most I’ve heard you speak in a while.” Draco answered as he turned to Max. “Let’s get going then, that house isn’t going to search itself and you have a big house and an even bigger garden.”

Nasta put an arm around Blaise and led him over to Alexander, who was talking to his sons, his Wife and mate, Kimberly, standing happily by his side.

“Alexander?”

“Hello boys, what can I do for you?”
“Harry’s gone missing, can you watch over Braiden for us whilst we search for him?”

“Harry’s gone missing?” One of Alexander’s sons’ asked in surprise.

“We’ve searched the entire garden and he isn’t here, may we search your home for him, in case he’s just gone and hidden himself away to calm down after his bout of ferity?”

“Of course.” Alexander said in surprise. “You don’t need to ask about that when it concerns your own mate, go and find the little lad! Braiden will be safe here with me.”

“I’ll go and check the lagoon.” One of the men around said.

“I’ll check the garden again.” Another swore.

“I’ll make sure he isn’t stuck down that damned cave, how many times did I get stuck down there when I was a kid?”

“Just don’t get stuck down there again.”

“I’m too big now.” The man grinned.

“You actually went and checked didn’t you?” A woman, who looked so much like Myron it was frightening, asked him incredulously.

“Of course I did.” The man answered. “I spent half my childhood stuck down that cave!”

“Go on then, Harry isn’t going to find himself!” Alexander reminded them.

Nasta took Blaise into the house and searched for Harry, checking every cupboard in every room, they found a couple kissing in the sitting room, two men who looked at them startled when they walked in on them performing oral sex and a little girl hiding from her Mother behind a cabinet, but no Harry.
“I hope he’s alright.” Blaise said as he bounced on his feet in agitation.

“Keep yourself calm.” Nasta soothed. “He’s going to be fine. He would have called for us if anything had happened.”

“What if he wasn’t near us when he called?” Blaise had to voice.

“As top dominant I would have felt his distress call vibrating in my skull, no matter how far away he is. He hasn’t called, he isn’t distressed.”

Blaise breathed in deeply and he nodded, before they both climbed to the third level of Alexander’s home. Most of the house seemed to be made up of bedrooms, but with twenty-four children to their name, Alexander and Kimberly needed them.

Sniffling came from behind one of the closed doors and Nasta tapped the door with his wand and carefully eased it open. Harry was on the floor of the bathroom, his face red and blotchy, crying into his hands.

Blaise squirmed around him and fell to his knees, pulling Harry into his arms. Harry fell onto Blaise and held him tightly as he continued sobbing and Nasta felt nothing but rage at the people who had done this to Harry.

He controlled himself, sunk down behind Blaise and pulled the both of them into his arms, holding them and letting them get comfort from him, but his mind was down in the garden, pulling Myron and Richard Maddison-Seppen into tiny pieces.

Max and Draco came back as they were still cuddled on the bathroom floor. Max sighed and handed Nasta a small vial of sleeping potion. Harry drank it without incident and fell asleep quickly.

“Did he say anything?” Draco asked.

Blaise shook his head as the blond helped him from the floor. “Nothing. He just cried.”

Max took Harry from Nasta and cuddled him. “I’m sorry it was my Dads that did this to you, love.”
He whispered into Harry’s ear as he stroked that soft, messy hair.

“Where is Braiden?” Draco asked.

“With Alexander.” Blaise answered.

Draco led the way into the back garden and Max made sure his parents saw Harry’s tear-stained, blotchy face, his eyes rimmed in red even though they were closed.

“You found him.” Alexander sighed in relief. “Where was he?”

“In the bathroom on the top floor. He was crying.” Nasta replied tightly, his eyes blazing gold under the high sun tracking every movement Myron and Richard made.

“This wasn’t my Myron’s fault was it?” Alexander inquired.

“They didn’t like how Harry acted towards Mum when she went to see Braiden when Harry was feral.” Max answered sadly to his grandfather.

“Right, I’ll sort this out.” Alexander told them as he strode over to Myron and Richard and grabbed the both of them by their belts and waistbands and dragged them forcibly into the house.

“Woah, what did Myron do?” Julius asked Xerxes, the both of them standing close to Max. “He’s the golden boy of the family, the baby of us.”

“He upset Harry.” Max answered his Uncle. “Grandfather was most angry to hear about it.”

Xerxes looked at Harry’s face, softly sleeping on his Nephew’s shoulder.

“I’m not surprised if you showed him that heartbreaking little face. Father loves Harry something chronic, enough so that he’d even tear a new arsehole in his baby golden boy for causing that heart clenching sight. Poor Harry.”
“All because he lost control for a moment.” Cassander sighed as he came over to them, his blue, blue eyes soft and sad, his strong mouth downturned into a frown.

“I lost count of how many times I’ve lost control.” Xerxes shrugged. “I’m the oldest of you all and I only had Mother and Father helping me through the change, and even then they were so spaced out with the rest of you lot that I was mostly left to myself to deal with it. I ruined so many doors and trees.”

“That’s right, I remember you destroying my bedroom because I had borrowed one of your shirts for a date.” Cassander said with a grin.

“That whore got lipstick on my favourite shirt and it stank of cat’s piss!”

“Her perfume wasn’t that bad, she just put a bit too much on.” Cassander defended.

“It was my favourite shirt!”

Cassander laughed and turned to Max and stroked one of Harry’s cheeks.

“I liked this little cutie too. This face isn’t made for tears and frowns”

“Oi!” Max snarled. “He’s mine Uncle, back off!”

“My own Nephew doesn’t want his Uncle to be laid.”

Max screwed up his face in horror and disgust. “Uncle, you’re nearly seventy! Give it a rest and settle down for the love you hold all of us.”

“Even Max think’s you should settle down already.” Xerxes told Cassander.

“He settled down early, that’s why.”
“I’m thirty-one!”

“And I’m sixty-nine!” Cassander told him.

“You should have settled down twenty years ago.” Xerxes told him.

“Where’s the fun in that?” Cassander snorted.

Max left his two Uncles arguing and went to his brother instead.

“Where are Amelle and Nora?” He asked.

“Nora is with Amelle’s parents and Amelle is over there, sulking by the drinks table. I told her that she was coming today and that she was either to leave Nora home, or bring her and let her be passed around. I’m angry that she chose to leave the baby in America with Richmond and Amara rather than bring her and let my family see her to.”

“As long as she stays away from Braiden and Harry…” Max trailed off.

“She wouldn’t dare hurt Braiden and Harry seems to be sleeping at the minute.”

“The potion was very mild, it’ll last only another half an hour, it was just to calm him down and resettle his emotions.”

“Then we might have another fight on our hands. Amelle hasn’t forgiven him for winning their last fight.”

Max groaned. “Damned submissive grudges.”

“Tell me about it, I haven’t had sex since I punished her for fighting with Harry.”
Max chuckled. “Harry doesn’t use sex as a weapon; at least he doesn’t use it as a weapon to prevent us from having sex with him.”

“What do you mean?”

“The Healer told us not to have sex with Harry for two weeks after the baby was born.”

“Yeah, the Healer told me and Amelle the same thing, everyone knows that.”

“Harry didn’t agree. He wanted sex straight away.”

“What did he do?” Caesar asked his face lighting up with a grin.

“He decided to come to breakfast dressed in nothing but a little skirt and matching panties.”

Caesar’s jaw dropped as he looked to the little boy in his brother’s arms and then back to his brother. “Seriously? He walked around in just a skirt, how the hell did you resist that? I would have bent him over and fucked him on the table if he was mine.”

“I wanted to.” Max growled, his Dracken coming out slightly at the memory of grinding Harry against the sink.

“But you didn’t.”

“No. He teased us all day, we thought we’d get a respite when he took Braiden to the hospital for his check-up, but he wore the tightest jeans I’ve ever seen and the shirt wasn’t much better. We hunted for that fucking skirt but he had taken it with him.”

Caesar chuckled. “Smart boy.”

“Blaise found it in Braiden’s nappy bag and I burnt that fucking little piece of cloth so he couldn’t wear it again.”

“I get the feeling that that didn’t work out quite so well.”

“He came down wearing absolutely nothing. He sat there, at my table, eating his dinner with nothing on like he did it every single day.”

“How long did you last?”

“He went up to the roof to tear apart his nest and seeing him bathed in sunlight, his skin glowing, I couldn’t take it.”

Caesar laughed and patted Harry’s sleeping head. “Good boy, Harry, you take what you want!”

“Why don’t you take what you want?” Max asked. Caesar looked horrified. “Get that look off your face, I don’t mean rape. Fuck, who do you take me for? But maybe you could take a leaf out of Harry’s book and tease Amelle a bit, surely she’s at least attracted to you?”

“So I should walk around in a little skirt you mean?”

“Why are you, an idiot? Do you still have that weight set I bought you two years ago?”

“I told you I’d never use them before you bought them!”

“Use them now. In the sun. Make sure you do it topless and in a little pair of shorts, surely no woman will resist your body when your muscles are warm and stretched and your skin is coated in fresh sweat?”

The grin on Caesar’s face was three parts evil, seven parts naughty. “Oh I love you, Max, I’m so glad you’re my big brother.”

Max chuckled and pulled Caesar into a hug, kissing his forehead and shoving his shoulder.
You should have thought of this yourself! Taking a sex ban like a meek dog, what’s wrong with you?"

“What if she doesn’t react to this?” Caesar asked.

“Then she’s a lesbian and you need a new Wife.”

The both of them started roaring with laughter that got the attention of nearly everyone in the garden.

Harry sipped on his cup of tea sleepily as Draco rubbed his neck and shoulders. He had only woken up ten minutes ago and he was still feeling groggy and wrung out. His throat was sore and his eyes were itchy, he had tried to speak only to let out a croak.

Draco had taken him from Blaise to get him some honey tea to sooth his throat and he was now working out the tension in his shoulders.

“I love you.” He croaked out.

“Stop speaking and drink some more tea.” Draco encouraged, bending down to kiss his cheek.

Harry sipped some more tea and relaxed back into Draco, who stopped massaging his shoulders and wrapped his waist in a hug.

Draco nuzzled Harry’s neck and bit a pale shoulder, leaving his teeth marks on the soft skin; he kissed up Harry’s neck, behind his ear, before leaning around to kiss the corner of Harry’s eye.

Harry giggled lightly and put his tea cup down so he could turn in Draco’s arms and cuddle him better.

“Are you feeling better?”

Harry nodded, but he touched his neck.
“Your throat still hurts.”

“I cried too much.” He said his voice no longer croaky, but it was still wavering and it cracked on random words.

“I know.” Draco sighed. “None of us blame you for going feral for a bit, I’ve done it more than once.”

“I can’t believe I treated Ashleigh like that. I swore I’d never act like all the other weak willed submissives. That I’d never stop her from having Braiden and I did both in one afternoon.”

“No one blames you.” Draco reiterated. “Ashleigh understood, she’s forgiven you.”

“Myron and Richard haven’t.”

“Alexander shouted at them for twenty minutes, they’re still sulking inside the house as far as I know. Alexander came to see you when you were sleeping though, he wanted to hold you again but Blaise wouldn’t let you go.”

That made Harry smile. Apparently he’d been passed from mate to mate and when Blaise held him he wouldn’t let anyone take him back, not even Draco, who had taken him as soon as his bleary eyes had opened and had yet to let him go.

“I hope they forgive me.”

“If they don’t then Max swore that he’d never speak to them again.”

“What? But they’re his Dads!” Harry cried upset.

“He loves you, Harry and they are in the wrong. I can understand being protective of their mate, but it was a onetime thing. You have never stopped Ashleigh from seeing, holding, even feeding Braiden, not once until this afternoon and you were very feral. How they can treat you how they did I’ll never understand. I mean, it wasn’t a personal attack on just Ashleigh, you wouldn’t even let us hold Braiden and we’re your mates. They need to get their heads out of their arses and realise that they’re making a big deal out of nothing.”

Harry held on tighter to Draco and breathed deeply, shoving his Dracken down when it tried to force him back into a feral state through the weakness it sensed in him. Braiden was fine. Nasta had fed him a bottle, had changed him and he was sleeping again on Kimberly’s lap. He was safe, content, happy and sleeping. Harry refused disturb him.

Feeling sick and run down, Harry lay on his back, on the grass by Alexander’s feet, spreading his body over the grass, much to people’s amusement.

Everyone moved around him, but he remained on his patch of grass, sunning himself and enjoying the warm feeling of the grass below him and the sun above him.

He saw Myron and Richard again and flipped onto his stomach so he didn’t have to see them. The sight of them caused his heart to clench in pain. Blaise brought him a glass of chilled apple juice and Harry gave him a loving kiss as he gulped the cool liquid down and rested his head back on his folded arms. He yawned and was just entertaining the thought of going back to sleep when a pair of white ballerina shoes came to stand before his folded arms, just in his view.

He looked up bare legs, to a knee length skirt and a small, strappy top, up to the anger twisted face of Amelle.

“You ruined my perfect face!” She hissed.

Harry really looked at her face and thought that it was just as lovely as before, her nose was slightly off centre, but it was barely noticeable and it didn’t stop that face from being almost devastatingly beautiful, yet Amelle seemed to think that it made her ugly, Harry was sure Caesar didn’t mind in the slightest.

“I think it’s an improvement.” Harry told her spitefully.

She screamed shrilly and lashed out with her foot before Harry could even get to his knees and he felt the blood pouring from his lip where her dainty ballerina shoe had kicked him. Harry had a sense of Déjà vu as he heard male voices shouting as Amelle continued to kick him, stopping him from getting to his feet. Harry refused to disgrace himself any further by fighting back and he instead just curled up into a ball and let her kick his body as she pleased.
His wings burst out and curled around himself protectively as his fangs and claws slid out of his gums and nail beds. Amelle got one good kick to his head and then she was dragged off by a livid looking Caesar. Harry lashed out and sunk his claws into her leg, raking them all the way down and tearing a chunk of meat out of her calf as she screeched in agony.

Harry was picked up by Max’s Uncle Philip and placed on his feet. He swayed as his head swam. He collapsed back to his knees and threw up onto the grass. Blaise was there then, his scent soothing him as strong arms cradled him as he hissed and growled at anyone who came close.

A bloodied arm was pressed to his lips and Harry licked slowly as his stomach roiled and clenched. He shoved the arm away and threw up again and someone screamed for someone else called Claire.

Claire turned out to be a lovely looking middle aged woman with lots of curly blonde hair and kind brown eyes. She was married to Julius and had been around Drackens since she had met and married him. She was also a Healer and had taken an apprenticeship under a Dracken Healer at the Counsel Halls to learn all she could about her Husband’s family and in case any children she had turned out to be Drackens, she did not want to be unprepared if one of them got sick or hurt. She had been caring and diagnosing problems in Max’s family for over ten years now and had even helped Tisha birth her twins when she had gone into a sudden, unexpected labour outside of her nest, two months premature.

She told him all this and more as she checked him over with soft fingers and a non-invasive wand. His lip was bleeding sluggishly as he had taken in enough blood to slow down the bleeding, but not enough to close the wound, his head throbbed where Amelle had kicked him repeatedly and his eye was sore. His stomach hurt where he had been throwing up and his fingers ached where he had raked his claws through her flesh and the speed of his actions had forced his fingers back at unnatural angles because he hadn’t had time to lock his fingers properly into place.

Once again he was the one clamoured and Caesar was left alone to deal with Amelle on the other side of the garden, forcing his blood down her throat as his shirt was wrapped around her leg. He was talking quickly and angrily if his hand gestures were any indicator.

“How are you feeling?” Alexander asked him.

“Dizzy.” Harry replied weakly.

“You’re still dizzy?” Claire asked, moving her wand immediately to his head, tapping it gently, roving her wand over every inch and running her hands through his hair to search for bumps.

Harry pushed her away and turned his head as he threw up for a third time, four large hands rubbing his back. Harry would have smiled if he wasn’t currently throwing up. All four of his mates were behind him, soothing him.

“What can we do to help you, Harry?” Max asked sadly.
Harry heaved up more vomit as an answer, though he wanted to tell them that there was nothing they could do, that they were doing everything they could do just by rubbing his back to ease the spasms that went through him as he vomited, but as his mouth was full of bile and vomit, he just spat instead of talking.

“Sit up for me, Harry, good boy.” Claire told him softly, helping to ease him back up. She ran her wand over his belly and sighed, pushing his shirt up to expose the red mark just slightly bigger than the size of Amelle’s shoe. “This will bruise.” She told him with a sympathetic smile.

Harry lolled back onto one of his mates and groaned, moving his hands to clutch his stomach; large hands caught his own and held them away as Claire moved her wand over his stomach.

“Oh. Oh dear.” She exclaimed.

“What? What is it?” Draco demanded, moving forwards, maybe to shake her into answering quicker, but Harry moved an elbow to stop him.

“Harry sweetheart, you’ve given birth recently, haven’t you?”

“Yes.” Harry answered, Braiden was being passed around from pillar to post, everyone in this garden knew that Braiden was his and was only six days old.

“Is your nest still intact?” She asked casually.

“No. I demolished it the other day.”

Many of the older Drackens gasped or growled.

“Why?” Nasta asked. “Why is that significant? He wasn’t using it any longer.”

“Submissives keep their nests intact until the day of their next heat after they’ve given birth.”
“I haven’t had a heat.” Harry answered, feeling miserable as he burped up more bile.

“What day exactly did you dismantle your nest on?” Claire persisted.

“Why does it matter?” Blaise demanded, slipping his arms around Harry’s neck and pulling him further back against him.

“Did it happen to be two days ago? When the temperature hit record highs and it hit forty degrees Celsius?”

Harry looked at his mates and they all looked at him. How had this woman known?

“How did you…?”

“Let me guess, you made love outside, underneath the sun after you had taken down your nest.”

“What are you saying?” Nasta asked, his hand moving protectively around Harry’s waist.

“Harry went on heat, caused by the spike in the weather because his body heated up to over one hundred and ten degrees as he was having sexual contact and then later sexual intercourse. A submissive only dismantles their nest when their bodies feel the heat approaching.”

“What does this have to do with my stomach?” Harry asked.

Claire looked at him with soft, sad eyes. “You’re pregnant.” She told him.

Chapter End Notes
We’re playing a little game! Just for one chapter if you please. All I need from you readers is a number and a letter. You can chose from only three numbers and three letters. The numbers are 6, 10 or 12 and the letters are A, D or L. Chose only one of the numbers listed and only one of the letters listed please! For example: A-6
This will all be made clear soon enough!

Chapter Forty-Seven – Denial

Harry looked at the woman blankly, everything was still and silent and then Ashleigh called out a happy congratulation and everyone was doing the same and Harry looked at his hands, resting over his belly. Two days pregnant. How could she know? How could anyone pick up a baby two days after conception? She was mistaken. She was lying.

“No, I’ve just given birth.” He denied.

“You’re two days pregnant, Harry.” Claire insisted.

“No, no, no, no, NO!” Harry screamed hitting his hands against the ground. Immediately they were seized and held in Max’s hands as his body was turned and curled into Nasta’s chest.

“I don’t want to be pregnant again.” Harry mumbled. “I’m not pregnant again!”

“You might not remain pregnant.” Claire told him softly.

“You just said…” Draco exploded before Nasta covered his mouth with a hand.

“The pregnancy is now unstable due to…”

“Her.” Blaise hissed deeply, his indigo eyes pinned to Amelle on the opposite end of the garden.

She had only gotten one kick to his stomach, right after she had split his lip as he tried to raise himself from the floor. Harry had then curled up on his stomach, protecting his chest as she lashed out at his back and head before his wings came out to protect him further.

“Are you saying that Harry is having a miscarriage?” Max demanded.

Claire smiled sadly. “Possibly unless it is stabilised soon. Harry, if you really don’t want to be pregnant, then just let the miscarriage take its course, the group of cells are only two days old, not even formed sacs yet or an embryo. If you want me to help stabilise it then I can also do that.”

Everyone started shouting and yelling, trying to get their opinion heard but Claire held up a hand and silenced them with a furious, almost poisonous look.

“This is Harry’s body, Harry’s life and Harry’s decision! Only he can make it. If he does not want to be pregnant again so soon, while his son is less than a week old, then he doesn’t have to be.”

Harry didn’t look at anyone; he sat on his own, on the grass, curled around himself. His mind was flitting from idea to idea, from thought to thought, but nothing was really staying in his head. He didn’t know what he wanted, what he was going to do, all he could really focus on was that Amelle, who had attacked him twice now, had caused him to potentially lose his second baby.

He could feel heat rising from his skin, could feel an electric like tingle as his anger grew and he knew that he was losing control of his magic, like he had back when he was thirteen and Aunt Marge had made him so angry that he just couldn’t stop his magic from reacting.
He screamed, long and loud and his magic exploded from his body with the force of a hurricane and it destroyed everything. Tables went flying, chairs compacted themselves to splinters, glasses shattered, tea cups turned to a fine powdery dust, the grass tore itself from the ground in strips and everyone standing around him was knocked back several feet onto their arses or backs.

His magic enveloped him and soothed him, caressed him with phantom fingers and tendrils of love as a horrific scream came from the back of his mind.

“Stop it, Harry! Please!” Someone begged him pleadingly.

Harry looked up to the one who had spoken, past the gawking family members, to Caesar who was looking at him with heartbroken brown eyes, pleading with him as his Wife and mate writhed on the floor in agony as he tried to hold her body down as it moved in unnatural ways.

Blaise was there then, wrapping him in loving arms, holding him and kissing his neck and Harry relaxed back into him, his magic ebbing away to disperse into the air or into the ground, some of it coming back to his own body, flowing into the little channels that it travelled through, throughout his entire body and he felt soft and calm and weightless. He felt no pain at all and when he raised a hand to his split lip, the split wasn’t there. He smiled beatifically and lifted his shirt to look at the red mark that would have badly bruised. It wasn’t there. He had healed himself.

“What was that?” Cassander asked his eyes wide and frightened, his voice soft and respectful.

“Harry is very powerful.” Blaise whispered in a carrying voice, his skin still tingling from touching Harry as his magic exploded outwards.

“No matter what the newspapers speculate, I was the one to destroy Voldemort.” Harry said as he looked around at the damage he had caused and the looks on everyone’s faces. Amelle’s scrunched up agonised face was the one he kept going back to, he took sick pleasure in seeing her pain. “I held him as his skin peeled away and his flesh sloughed off of his bones, crackling and cooking from the heat of my magic. My magic did that. All he could do was curl up as he died, screaming in agony.”

There was silence. He hadn’t even told his mates how he had killed Voldemort. Max wrapped his arm around him more firmly and everyone seemed determined not to mention what had just happened or what he had said.

“How is he pregnant?” Xerxes asked Claire curiously, breaking the strained silence that had fallen. “He gave birth six days ago. Everyone knows that submissives don’t have another heat for months after their last birth.”
“There are exceptions.” Claire answered, happy to be back on ground that she knew and could explain. “One submissive got pregnant the day after she had given birth, an over enthusiastic dominant wanting to show his appreciation for his new child no doubt. One submissive had a clutch of seven, three babies were born and then two weeks later the other four were birthed.”

“I thought a clutch could only hold a maximum of five babies.” Harry said confused.

“The largest number of babies a male submissive has ever had was five, the largest a female submissive has had in one birth was seven. In one pregnancy it was nine, she birthed two children, then four and then the remaining three over twelve days.”

“But the book…”

“I told you, Harry don’t believe everything you read in mass produced creature inheritance books.” Nasta told him. “The majority of the information is wrong or misleading.”

Harry swallowed and held still as Claire approached him and waved her wand over his belly.

“Remarkable. You stabilised your own pregnancy.” Claire looked at him with huge, awed eyes. “This is supposed to be impossible! How could your magical outburst have stabilised a pregnancy with such raw, uncontrolled magic? It’s not possible!”

“I didn’t want to lose my baby, if there is one inside of me.” Harry said softly, cuddling into Blaise. “I may not want another baby or to be pregnant again, but I can’t just do nothing as my potential baby is dying inside of me.”

“It’s not truly a baby yet, Harry. It’s just a collection of cells that have the potential to form into a baby, but you are pregnant. My diagnostic is picking up on your cell activity in your abdomen, which is how I knew you were pregnant, the inflammation of the tissues surrounding the cells informed me that the cells were dislodging from your sac wall and were starting to pull apart from one another.”

Max picked him and Blaise up from the floor and cuddled the both of them, even as his blue, blue eyes followed every move of Amelle’s soft, smooth, uncovered neck. He bared his teeth, his inch long fangs gleaming in the summer sunlight and Harry kissed a pulled back lip gently. Then it clicked and his head snapped around, looking everywhere his eyes flitted and his heart beat several times faster.
“Where is my baby?” He demanded. “WHERE IS MY BABY?!!” Harry grabbed a hold of Blaise who was being held beside him by Max. “Where is Braiden?!” He demanded of him. “Where is our son? We need to find our son!”

“He’s here, Harry, calm down.” Draco told him, handing over the happily sleeping baby.

Harry snatched Braiden and cuddled and cooed over him, sniffing over his body to make sure his magic hadn’t done any harm to him.

“We didn’t feel any of the effects we usually do when Harry’s on a heat and we were only sexually intimate for about an hour and a half.” Nasta said unembarrassed, not even blushing or stumbling over his words to Claire. “If he was on heat, why didn’t we get any warnings?”

“It was caused by the weather, extreme heat will raise a Dracken’s temperature up to the optimum level for conception, so if the submissive has sexual intercourse when their bodies are in this period of optimum temperature, they will conceive.”

“Like how I got pregnant in the steam room of the health spa when I was in between heat periods.” One woman said with a grin. Her Husband buried his face in his hands.

“I do not want to hear about my daughter’s exploits thank you very much, Lydia.” Alexander chastised.

Harry looked at Claire as he remembered something from what seemed like a long time ago. “At the Dracken meeting, two women told me that they used a hot tub to get their children.”

“A hot tub, a steam room, baking yourselves under the sun on the hottest day on record with your scales out to conduct the heat throughout your bodies. All of them will rise a submissive’s body temperature up to conception levels; I can guarantee that many babies were conceived two days ago in that heat wave without the submissive or dominants even knowing about it.”

“Damn it!” One man exclaimed as his wife looked smug beside him.

“Can you check me please, Claire?”
“Of course, Shae.” Claire answered her wand in hand as she approached the young woman, one of Alexander’s granddaughters, and gave it a little wave. “You’re currently two days pregnant, congratulations.”

Shae let out a laugh and her Husband moaned into his own arm as he looked at his mate, love and horror warring on his face.

“We have twelve kids, honey! Don’t you think adding more will be a bit…unmanageable?” He said delicately.

“No.” She answered simply as she ran to one of Max’s Aunt’s and hugged her tightly. “I’m pregnant again, Mum!”

“Well be careful, Shae, don’t go running about or jumping around.”

“I’m two days pregnant.” Shae answered rolling her eyes. “The baby is well protected.”

“It might be a good idea to err on the side of caution.” Alexander told his granddaughter as he grinned at her happily. “This baby wasn’t conceived on a usual heat, but because your bodies were heated enough to conceive, so it might be best to be a bit more cautious. That goes for you too, Harry sweet one.”

Harry blinked around him as he took his eyes from Braiden’s face and focused on Alexander as he heard his own name.

“I’m sorry, what did you say? I wasn’t listening, Braiden snuffled in his sleep.” Harry went pink cheeked; embarrassed that he had lost the thread of conversation just because Braiden had made a noise.

Alexander chuckled and came forward a few steps to cup his cheek and kiss his forehead. “Be careful with yourself, Harry dear.”

“Oh I won’t need to. I’m not going to be walking by myself until after this baby is born.” Harry answered with a glare to his four mates, one which was holding him, the other being held next to him and the other two hovering around him already. “Back off.” He growled at them.

They growled back and Harry hissed, swiping half-heartedly at Nasta before looking at his stomach.

“There’s no baby in there. I’m not pregnant.” He said adamantly. “You’re wrong.” He told Claire.

“Harry…”

“NO! You’re wrong. WRONG!” He screamed.

Max put him on the floor as he squirmed and Harry went and burrowed under Alexander’s arm with Braiden.

“Come now, Harry, it’s not so bad. You may have your second clutch.”

“I’m not pregnant.” Harry reiterated sternly.

“Two days is a very small amount of time, perhaps the pregnancy won’t take. The cells might be lost, they might not attach to your sac walls sufficiently, you might have lost this clutch regardless of recent…behaviours.”

Alexander gave a stern eye to Amelle, who Caesar was holding and cuddling, her mouth and cheeks stained red by blood from the nosebleed that Harry’s magic had caused from too much pressure and from Caesar feeding his blood clumsily to her.

Harry cuddled up closer. He didn’t know what to think. He didn’t want to be pregnant, he didn’t want to think that there was another baby growing inside of him, but if there was, and it was a big if in his mind, then he also didn’t want that baby to die or for the cells that were going to form up his baby to unravel and tear apart before his baby even had a chance of becoming an actual baby.

Harry took comfort from Alexander and looked up as a strong hand was placed on his shoulder. Richard was standing behind him and he pulled him from Alexander and over to a clear space of grass away from everyone else, who were working on mending and fixing everything his magical outburst had destroyed.

“I’m sorry, Harry. I’ve acted disgustingly towards you, but Alexander is right, I do believe that you are older than you actually are because of the way you act. You’re more mature than I am, so it’s harder for me to associate you with being so much younger. Your control is outstanding, so when you showed the first waver, the first slip, I attacked it and I’m sorry. You have such amazing control that perhaps I maybe thought that your slip was purposeful, when in reality it wasn’t. I know you’ve shown great kindness to Ashleigh, to all of us. I mean, look at all these other prissy bitches; they’re still clinging onto their children even now. You were the only one who has ever shown such kindness to Ashleigh and such trust in her personality as to actually hand her your newborn, to let her hold him and cuddle him and without you even hovering over her. Myron and I, we got used to it. We were so used to you being so trusting of other people with yourself and with Braiden that when you went feral for the first time in my knowledge, when you showed the first crack in your control and denied Ashleigh what she had come to love and adore, it angered the both of us. We’ve been looking out for and protecting Ashleigh so much more than we should since…since that day.”

Richard’s hand automatically, almost subconsciously, climbed to his ruined throat, his fingers massaging the mounds of tight scar tissue. “It was almost an automatic reflex to shun you and to blame you for how you acted towards her and that was so very unfair of the both of us. We love you, Harry, of course we do and not just because you managed to snag our oldest son’s heart. You’re a very kind, loving and brave man, what’s not to love about you? You are selfless, smart, balanced, funny and Max loves you, everyone loves you. We are so very sorry and I ask from the bottom of my heart if you can forgive us. We never meant to hurt you, our family means everything to us and you are a part of our family, Harry.”

Harry threw himself into Richard’s arms and sobbed like a child as he was held and soothed, Braiden tucked under his arm securely.

Larger, stronger hands held him around his waist and he was pulled bodily from the floor, turned and cuddled to a chest so much like Max’s, but softer. Max was squishy, but not as soft as Myron, who was losing his muscles as he grew older.

“Please say that you’ll forgive us.” That deep voice whispered into his hair. “We never meant to hurt you so badly. We were fools.”

“There’s nothing to forgive.” Harry sniffled. “You were protecting your mate, I understand that. I hope that if I was in the same situation that my mates would be half as protective of me as you are of Ashleigh.”

Myron squeezed him tightly, but Harry noticed that it wasn’t quite the bear hug he had been getting recently. The overprotectiveness had already started.

Harry settled himself down with Braiden on the bed and picked up the bottle, shaking it before dribbling a few drops onto the underside of his forearm. He rubbed the teat against Braiden’s cheek, watching with a smile as Braiden rooted for it and caught it in his mouth, his lips spread wide around the bulb of the teat, sucking and swallowing strongly. Braiden was a healthy eater.

Blaise slipped into the bed beside him and held the back of Braiden’s head with a large hand, watching their son eat with him.

“He’s perfect.” Blaise whispered reverently.

“Do…do you think that I am pregnant?” Harry asked softly.

“I think that the Healer would know what to look for, Harry.” Blaise said hesitantly, obviously expecting him to blow up at him or perhaps for his magic to react and literally blow up the room.

Harry moved a hand from under Braiden’s bum and touched his belly. He hadn’t lost all of the pregnancy weight he had gained from Braiden yet. He was still fleshy with the extra weight he had gained, it hadn’t bothered him. He had known the weight would melt away eventually, but now it wouldn’t. Now he would be gaining more weight again and if he was as big with this baby as he had been with Braiden then school was going to become impossible. If he was two days pregnant then his baby was due on the second of March, halfway through the school year and well before the exam months. What was he going to do with a ten month old and a three month old during exams?

“I can’t be.” Harry denied. “I just can’t.”

Blaise slipped an arm around him and kissed the side of his head.

“We love you, mio amore. We will stay by you and support you through all things. You are not alone.”

Harry smiled and fell sideways to rest against Blaise as Braiden finished his bottle. Harry quickly took it out of his mouth so he didn’t swallow any air and get trapped wind. Harry placed him over his shoulder with a bright orange burp cloth that Blaise had placed over his shoulder for him and patted Braiden’s back firmly, rubbing him until he burped. He was getting more confident in burping Braiden now that he had realised that gently patting him and barely rubbing was not going to get all of the air up and Braiden would suffer for it with trapped wind and colic. After that bombshell Harry had been a bit firmer handed and Braiden was burping better.

Blaise eased him down until he was lying down with Braiden over his chest before stripping them both naked and doing the same.
“What are you doing?” Harry said with a chuckle as Blaise lay down in the bed beside him and cuddled up close.

“Babies need skin to skin contact to bond. I thought we could bond with one another as well as with our son.”

Harry smiled and moved his arm out from beside him and slipped it over Blaise’s chest as he rolled onto his side, carefully bringing Braiden down so that their sleepy, yawning son was touching the both of them, Blaise’s arm slipping under his neck to rub patterns onto his back, his other arm covering Braiden’s little back.

“My Mother would like to hear about the new pregnancy and would also appreciate an update on her only grandson. She has grown restless with the need to see her grandchild, but she has also been toeing the line between our privacy also.”

Harry hummed and smiled as he thought of Marianna. He wanted to see her again. He wished Aneirin was around as well, it seemed he didn’t see enough of them, but Aneirin at least had the excuse of working in a different country every other week, though he did constantly check in with Nasta and tell his youngest son where he was and what hotel he was staying in. He was hardly ever in Britain, but Marianna was only a floo call away.

“We should go and tell her.”

Blaise made a noise as if to immediately disagree.

“Perhaps it might be best for her to come and visit us here?” He offered instead.

Harry clenched his teeth together to keep from lashing out.

“I am two days pregnant.” He hissed lightly. “When I was two days pregnant with Braiden I was running, jumping, climbing, going to lessons and having sex. We didn’t even know I was pregnant for eleven days!”

Blaise bit down on his tongue to keep from replying but he couldn’t help his hand drifting to the back of Harry’s neck, cupping it lightly to give him a warning. So many things had happened during Harry’s first pregnancy with his son, so many scares, too many, so much drama, too much danger and too many people hitting his pregnant mate. Not this time. Amelle had already gotten an early start, but no more, never again. He would stand in front of Harry like a shield if it kept their next clutch safe from harm. He would confine Harry to their bed for the duration of the pregnancy if he thought it would help, regardless of Harry’s thoughts on the issue. They would never again have a miscarriage scare if it could at all be preventable. He wouldn’t allow it.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Harry woke up groggy and found himself caught in a sight that would forever make him laugh. He and Blaise were cuddled around Braiden, still naked. Draco was cuddling Blaise from behind, also naked, and Max and Nasta were on the outside of the bed, Max behind him and Nasta behind Draco, all of them naked and ‘bonding’.

Harry chuckled sleepily and eased himself out of the pile, bringing a squirming Braiden with him. He had no idea who had fed Braiden last night before returning him to his arms, but he was forever glad that whoever they were had decided to put him in a nappy as the smell emitting from it almost choked him when he changed the little baby.

Braiden made a happy sound as Harry finished powdering his bum and put him in a clean nappy. It made Harry chuckle quietly and kiss him soundly on the lips as he quietly packed away the changing things, got himself dressed quickly and efficiently before he crossed the bedroom, sure footed, leaving the bedroom so his mates could sleep, all tangled together in a naked heap.

Harry made some tea, made up a bottle and ate a bowl of fruit muesli that Nasta had bought to keep in the cupboard for when he had to run to the Dragon reserve and had little time for a proper breakfast. He put the bowl into the sink before feeding Braiden his bottle, watching him carefully even as he tried to drink his own tea before it went cold.

Harry burped Braiden and went to sit in the living room with a fresh cup of tea. His mind drifted back to the conversation yesterday and his teeth ground together. Who was Blaise to try and stop him from doing what he wanted or going to see whoever he wanted anyway?

Harry made up his mind and he got Braiden ready, got himself ready before strapping the baby into his carrycot, making sure he had a packed nappy bag and flooing, at six in the morning, to Aneirin Delericey, who was in Sydney, Australia. It would be some when in the afternoon and sure enough, as he tumbled out of the fireplace, Aneirin scooped him up with a bear hug and kissed him on the cheek.

“How are you, Harry?” He asked as he was set down in a chair, Braiden being placed on the table, before his carry cot was unstrapped and Aneirin had him in his arms, cuddling and kissing the baby. “I have missed this little guy so much. He’s my only grandchild and I barely see him! I’m going to have to take a break from work, this just won’t do.”

Harry smiled and he felt happy again, he felt normal.
“What brings you here?” Aneirin asked as he made them both fruit smoothies, putting whole fruit into a top of the range juicer, adding ice and finishing it off with three plump raspberries for edible decoration.

“I wanted to see you. I missed you.”

Aneirin smiled and ruffled up his hair. “You’re a sweet kid, Harry, coming to see an old man like me.”

Harry snorted into his drink. He couldn’t think of anyone who looked less like an old man than Aneirin. His hair was still thick and dark, the only lines on his face were laughter lines around his eyes and mouth, though there were two frown lines over his forehead, Harry put that down to having to raise three young babies whilst working in the business profession. His body was still strong and healthy, though he was losing some muscle definition, it didn’t make him look old at all.

“I am sixty, Harry.” Aneirin told him with a smirk and Harry just gaped. He would most definitely have said that Aneirin was younger than Myron Maddison, not almost ten years older, but then Aneirin’s youngest son, Nasta, was six years older than Myron’s oldest son, Max, so perhaps it shouldn’t have been such a huge surprise.

“If you stopped drinking so much tea and eating so much processed, unhealthy food you could look as good as I do at sixty.” Aneirin told him with a wink and Harry laughed. “Though tea is healthier than coffee, if I ever catch you or yours drinking coffee I’ll pull you over my knee and spank the sense back into you.”

“I don’t like the taste of it and I only have the odd cup once in a blue moon, usually after a late night.” Harry said with a grin. “Blaise does love coffee though; he has at least three cups a morning.”

“And Nasta allows this?” Aneirin asked incredulously.

“Nasta allows him one cup a day with a heavy frown and a lot of grumbling about his health, but Blaise always finds ways of slipping in more. Nasta is very busy with paper work from the reserve at the moment and he’s having to have meetings with the other handlers often because nesting season is almost upon them, so Blaise is finding it easier than usual to get his caffeine fix.”

“That boy is only seventeen; he shouldn’t even know coffee exists!” Aneirin grumbled.
Harry smiled and kissed Braiden as his son made small sounds from Aneirin’s arms.

“There was one other thing I needed to tell you before going to visit Marianna.”

“What is that?”

Harry bit his lip and looked into solid brown eyes. “There’s a possibility that I’m pregnant again.”

“You gave birth a week ago, Harry; I wouldn’t have thought you’d be pregnant again so soon. If your body is still acting up it is likely left over hormones, I doubt you have anything to worry about.” Aneirin told him gently.

“That’s what I thought, but the Healer told me that I’m three days pregnant, I said there was no way I could be, but she insists that I went onto a heat period due to the weather.”

All at once Aneirin understood and he made an ‘Ah’ sound. “How hot did the temperature go for you to go onto this supposed heat?” He asked.

“It hit a record forty degrees, she said that because I was outside and all of our scales were out that we raised our core temperatures up to one hundred and ten degrees and I conceived. Was she telling the truth?” Harry asked, feeling very much like a little boy and feeling like one too.

Aneirin sighed, put Braiden back into his carrycot and slid to his knees in front of Harry’s chair. He took hold of his small hands and looked him right in the eyes.

“The Healer was telling the truth, Harry. It’s rare that a Dracken conceives outside of their usual breeding heats, but outside forces that raise out body temperatures to a certain degree confuses our bodies into believing we are on heat. The neck of your sac would have loosened with the heat of your body and fully opened when you were engaged in sexual activities, leaving you susceptible to pregnancy. You may very well be pregnant.”

Harry bit his lip. He hadn’t wanted to hear that. Aneirin pulled him down, off of his chair, and into his lap and he just cuddled him like a baby, resting his chin on the top of his head and humming soothingly.
“It’s going to be difficult for you to have a second clutch so close to the birth of Braiden.” Aneirin told him. “Make no mistake about it, having any children so close together will be hard in the long run, but it’ll all be worth it when you see them grown up, Harry. When you see the beautiful people you have raised and nurtured through their lives. You can get through this, love, I know you can. You have four mates, four of them. When I had Angharad, Sanex and a newborn Nasta, it was only me. Just me on my own raising three young children, one of whom was a newborn. I was flooing off all over the world with them, trying to do my job as they played about my feet in meetings, trying to earn enough money to feed and clothe them properly. You don’t have to do that, Harry. Not only do two of your mates have very well paid jobs, but three of you, including yourself, come from old money and are especially intelligent and will have no problems getting top paid jobs yourselves, money is not an issue for you as it was for me. You are not short on supporting family members; you have people willing and even wanting to take your children off of you so you can rest for a night, or even a whole weekend. I never had that luxury, despite being incredibly paranoid and protective of my three children after my mate died, I was always half a world away from mine or Lowri’s family members who would have looked after my children for a day or two. In hindsight, I know now that I was foolish. I should have left my children with my parents or Lowri’s and gone to these meetings myself. They would have barely seen me, but at least they would have had a safe, secure and permanent place to live.”

“Nasta would have hated you.” Harry replied mildly and Aneirin stiffened under him, his arms clenching as a growl slipped from his throat. “He would have. He loves other languages and cultures. He only learnt them because you took him with you. Nasta loved going all over the world with you and nothing made him happier than you telling him that you were taking him to a country he had never been to before. Nasta didn’t want a fixed abode growing up, he wanted to be with you and to see as many different places as you could take him, to learn as many languages and cultures as he could. It was the highlight of his life and I’m going to ruin that by constantly being pregnant.”

Aneirin kissed his head and nuzzled his neck.

“He won’t think like that, Harry. Nasta has been to every country on this planet at least twice and some of the more mainstream countries more than eighty times. He’s seen them all, learnt all the languages and cultures they have to offer. He’s not a child anymore, he’s a man grown and it’s past time for him to have his own family. If he has said anything at all about you ruining his travelling life by being pregnant with his children then he is not the man that I raised him to be and I will happily pull him over my knee for you.”

Harry chuckled weakly and snuggled in tighter to the comfort that he was being offered.

“I never saw my life being like this.” Harry confessed. “When I found out that I was a Dracken, I handled it quite well, I handled getting a mate well, though maybe I could have handled the news that I needed more than one mate a little better. I even welcomed the news that I could get pregnant, but I never thought for one moment that I’d constantly be pregnant, that I wouldn’t be allowed to do anything or go anywhere.”
“Who’s stopping you?” Aneirin asked. “Surely not Nasta.”

“All of them are. All four of them don’t like me going anywhere or doing anything, they carry me everywhere and yeah it’s nice when I’m tired or need a nap, but I do have a pair of legs that I like using too. We found out yesterday that I was pregnant and I was carried home, carried to bed and left there and I felt like they had forgotten all about me until Braiden woke up and Blaise brought a bottle up to feed him.”

“They left you upstairs in bed and went downstairs?” Aneirin asked a hint of anger in his voice.

“Yes, they said that I needed the rest even though I told them I wasn’t tired and would get just as much rest downstairs on the settee with them.”

“You want to get a handle on that, Harry. Lowri almost skinned me when I tried suggesting that she rested and I wouldn’t have dared force her upstairs when she didn’t want to go for fear of losing my eyes. Like you said, you have a pair of legs, why didn’t you just walk back down the stairs?”

“They would have been angry and upset with me.” Harry said softly.

Aneirin clenched a hand into a fist and breathed deeply. He knew all about Harry’s childhood from Nasta and he had been livid, but he was so angry now that Harry thought that maybe telling him had been a bad idea.

“Then they are at fault. If they make you stay upstairs like a naughty child whilst they enjoy themselves downstairs and they make you feel too guilty to get up and join them then they are the ones who should be ashamed, Harry, not you! I’m going to be speaking to Nasta about this, as top dominant of your family it’s his decision. He can overrule all of the others and I will be speaking to Myron about Maximilius, I know that that man didn’t raise Max to treat submissives this way!”

Harry stayed with Aneirin until the man had to go to another meeting and Harry hugged and kissed him goodbye and took Braiden through the hotel floo network and landed on his knees, cradling Braiden’s carrycot, on the floor of the Burrow, it was now eight in the morning and the kitchen was a buzz of activity and Harry had his ear screamed off as he was hugged desperately, ushered into a chair beside Charlie and given a heaped plate of food as Ginny relieved him of his son.

“Harry dear! Oh it’s so good to see you, how have you been? Here, have some more sausages!” Mrs Weasley encouraged, tipping four more sausages onto his already full plate.

“I’ve been fine. I went to see Aneirin this morning because when I was awake, he was already halfway through his day because he’s in Australia.”

“So that’s where you went. Your lovers came here looking for you an hour ago, they were quite frantic.” Bill told him with a wink.

“They must not have found the note I left them telling them where I was then.” Harry said with a shrug.

Harry ignored Ron, who was at the opposite end of the table. Mrs Weasley glared at him every now and then to remind him to behave and Ron unhappily shoved more bacon into his mouth.

Harry finished off his huge meal, feeling that he’d be full until dinnertime, when he was given tea and biscuits as well, before Mrs Weasley shooed off the younger children and took Braiden from Ginny. Ron left quickly and Ginny went with Fred and George, leaving Harry with Bill, Charlie, Mrs Weasley and Mister Weasley.

“How are you feeling, Harry?” Mister Weasley asked.

“Fine, I take it the others were ranting about how I shouldn’t be going around on my own because I’m pregnant.”

“Yes, they seemed quite concerned actually. From the way they were acting I almost believed your labour was imminent.” Molly told him with a look to his only slightly rounded stomach.

Harry snorted. “I’m three days pregnant. Three days and already I can’t wait to birth the baby because of them. I’ve got another seven months of this if I carry to term.”

“How long is a Dracken’s gestation period?” Asked a very curious Charlie, who seemed to be immensely interested.

“Leave the poor dear alone, Charlie, he isn’t a dragon!” Molly chastised.
“Technically I am part dragon.” Harry put in timidly.

“Yes, but you don’t want to be studied and questioned when all you want is a nice cup of tea and some more homemade ginger biscuits.”

“Seven months gestation, but the baby has been known to survive at four and a half months gestation.” Harry muttered to Charlie as Mrs Weasley went to get more biscuits.

“Just like most dragon species.” Charlie said, staring at Harry like he was a saint. “How are the babies born? Bill was saying something about you being in a nest on a roof!”

“Yes, I built a nest and then stayed in there for two weeks before my labour took over and I birthed Braiden.”

“Do you give birth to live young or eggs?” Charlie asked.

Mrs Weasley heard him and smacked the back of his head with a spatula she took out of her apron pocket.

“Charlie Weasley! You leave the poor boy alone! Asking him if he laid eggs of all things! Of course he gave birth to a baby and not an egg!”

Charlie looked abashed but Harry grinned and took another biscuit from the plate that was shoved at him. He loved the Weasley’s.

Harry stayed with them for only an hour before saying he had to get off despite Mrs Weasley telling him he could stay the night, that he could have Fred and George’s old room as they slept at their shop, even if they did honour her by coming back every morning before they opened up the shop for their breakfast. It was approaching nine when he reached Marianna’s home in France and he gave her a huge hug before shoving Braiden at her as she ushered him into a soft chair.

“I was worried for you, darling. Blaise came over this morning and said that you were missing and something about you being pregnant. He didn’t explain much, just frantically asked if you were here before leaving as soon as I told him that you weren’t.”

“I went to visit Aneirin in Australia before I went to visit Mrs Weasley. I am pregnant. Three days.”
“That is wonderful news! But from the way Blaise was acting it was as though you were tightrope walking over a pit of manticores at six months pregnant.”

“As if they’d let me walk at six months.” Harry grumbled.

“What do you mean, sweetness?” She asked with narrowed eyes.

Harry told Marianna everything that had happened the previous day and she growled.

“I’ll be having words with Blaise. He used to hate it when I treated him like a glass doll. I can’t believe that he’d do the same to you. But, Harry honey, they can only walk all over you if you lie down and let them do it. Stand up for yourself and fight back.”

“I want to see the world.” Harry admitted softly. “I want to go places, see things, but with me always pregnant, I’m never going to get to do those things. I love my children, but I want to be able to walk down the street without an entourage of lovers following me.”

“Come and stay here for a few days, Harry. You and your mates and of course Braiden. I’ll say that Josiah and I wish to spend some quality time with Braiden for a while before you go back to school. Draguignan is lovely in the summer and the scenery is like no other.”

“That is very kind of you, Marianna, but the others won’t let me leave the house now that I’m pregnant. I won’t be able to go. They’ll leave me at home if you insist that you want to see Braiden. Blaise will bring him on his own without me.”

“Then I’ll insist you come too, it’s a crime to split a Mother from his baby so early. Just remember that it is not four against one, Harry dear; it is just you and your top dominant Nasta. He is the key in all of this, if he says you can go, then the others can’t disagree with him.”

“He’ll never let me go.”

“Then you play dirty, sweet one. Submissive Drackens don’t get anywhere if they’re all sweet and cute and fluffy and roll over like content puppies. Get hard and dirty.”
“You mean… sex.” Harry went red, stumbling over the word in front of Marianna.

“I’m not telling you to withhold sex from them, I have very little respect for those who use sex as a weapon to get what they want by threatening to withhold such an important part of a relationship, but that’s not to say that you can’t give him a little… extra.” Marianna purred. “Just to sweeten him up and get him to be a little more receptive to your thoughts and ideas.”

“Oh. OH!” Harry grinned as he caught her meaning and he giggled.

“Also, don’t be afraid to use emotions as weapons, turn on the tears if you have to. No man can resist seeing the one they love crying. They can only walk all over you, Harry dear, if you lie down and let them.” Marianna repeated making sure that the message was hitting home.

“I don’t like fighting with them though, it seems like all we do lately is fight and it’s usually over me and the baby and now that I’m pregnant again, it’s going to get worse, I just don’t want to fight anymore.”

“You don’t need to fight or yell them into submission, use your head, darling. Use underhand tactics, go below the belt, worm through them and make them agree with you. No one likes fighting with the ones they love and with four against one, you are outnumbered and outmatched. Make them think that you’ve given in without a fight, but look devastated and crushed, turn on the tears if you need to and you make them feel guilty for denying you what you asked for, make them regret fighting with you, fight dirty to get your way. Submissives have been doing it for decades, love; you need to learn to do the same. A dominant Dracken can fight and scream all day if he has to, he will match you shout for shout, so take away the anger and fight back with your own emotions, they won’t be able to handle you upset and in tears.”

“How… how did you…?”

“How did I get Maximiliano to take me on holidays? I would stare wistfully out of a window or at the page of a book and tell him in a sad voice that I had never been to Sweden, or that I’d never been skiing before, little comments that all added up and played on his mind until I found myself being whisked away for a ‘surprise’ skiing holiday at my favourite resort in Sweden for the fourth time in my life.”

“But you said…”
Marianna winked at him and all at once Harry understood what she was trying to teach him. To get what he wanted he had to play his mates, if he didn’t, then he was going to live out the rest of his life stuck in Max’s house, confined to the bedroom just like summer time at the Dursleys. Marianna was right, it was time for him to fight back against their domineering control. It was time to get down and dirty and if he had to use a bit of emotional blackmail or word things just right to make them feel guilty to get a bit of leeway over them, then so be it. He now knew what he had to do.

Harry flooed home at midday, his mind still buzzing and running rampant with everything that Marianna had taught him, could it be that simple? Could he work his mates like that without feeling guilty himself? Would they even fall for it?

He was converged on the moment he stepped through the floo and he had four different voices screaming at him, four men grabbing and pulling at him and when he almost dropped Braiden because his arm was tugged on he lashed out with his claws instinctively.

He used a careful claw to snap the straps that held a crying, startled Braiden, scooped him out and kicked the carrycot away from him, sniffing and licking his baby to see if the drop down his arm, from his elbow to his wrist, had harmed him or if the carrycot had held him safe and secure before cuddling the baby and shushing him.

“How could you try and hurt him like that!” He screeched. “What if I had dropped him? What were you thinking?”

Nasta was holding Max, who was hunched over his arm which was bleeding. Blaise was standing beside him, his arm around his back rubbing soothing patterns onto his skin, cooing to Braiden to calm them both down.

“We were worried.” Draco told him.

“I left you a note!” Harry said.

“A note could have been written by anyone, you could have been forced to write it. You said you were going around the families, but no one had seen you!”

“But they told me all about your visits when I went there.”
“Who did you go to and when?” Nasta asked calmly.

“I went to your Dad first in Australia; I stayed there for two hours.”

“You went to see my Dad?” Nasta asked as if the thought hadn’t occurred to him to check there.

“Yes, I haven’t seen him in so long and he deserved a chance to see Braiden for a bit, we stayed until he had another meeting, then I went to the Weasleys and had a second breakfast, I only stayed for an hour, until nine, then I went to visit Marianna. I stayed with her for three hours. We talked a lot; she loved seeing Braiden and wants to see more of him. She’s invited us to stay for a few days before we go back to school.”

“Absolutely not.” Draco hissed. “Do you know how worried we’ve been?”

“So, what are you saying? You’re going to ground me like a child? I’m a grown man!” Harry hissed back feeling very much like it was four on one, even as Blaise was stood beside him, touching him. “If I want to go, I damn well will and not one of you will stop me!”

“Want a bet?” Max growled his mouth stained with Nasta’s blood from where he had been feeding to help heal the four claw marks deep in his arm. His fangs and claws were out, he had gone feral.

“All of you calm down. Leave us. Take Braiden with you.” Nasta ordered and the other three listened without complaint, though they didn’t look happy. “Draco, Blaise! Get the salve from the top shelf for Max; I don’t want him overexerting himself with an injury.” Nasta called after them.

The room went deadly silent when the others had left with Braiden and Harry felt like curling up on himself and hiding.

“I hope you know that what you did today was very dangerous, Harry.” Nasta told him quietly. “Anything could have happened to you today.”

“I was visiting family!” Harry hissed.
“What if you had fallen out of the wrong gate when flooing all the way to France and Australia?!” Nasta demanded. “What if you had ended up halfway across the world, with no money and no way to get back, with a week old child?!”

Harry bit his lip and looked down at his lap. He hadn’t thought of that. It had happened before; he had ended up in Knockturn Alley when he was twelve because he had said the wrong place name. True he had gotten better at floo travel since that first time, but if he had fallen out accidentally as was known to happen sometimes, what would he have done when he had Braiden with him?

Nasta came and stood in front of him, lifting his chin up so that Harry was looking into those soft hazel eyes.

“We love you, Harry and we don’t want anything to ever happen to you, we want to protect you, but we also want to trust you. How can we do that when you floo off all over the world when we are still asleep? Giving us nothing but a hastily scribbled note that looked like it might have been written under duress? Can you understand where things like this push us over the edge and it doesn’t exactly instil our trust in you?”

Harry nodded. He could understand that and he felt like such a fool, putting Braiden in danger as well as himself, but at the time it had seemed perfectly fine and logical. A tear escaped his eye and Nasta brushed it away with his thumb.

“Don’t cry, love. I hate seeing you cry. I’m not shouting at you, I just want you to understand why we were so upset and angry with you for disappearing, we want to trust you, Harry and we want you to trust us.”

“You never listen to me.” Harry said quietly. “You would have never let me go.”

“We would have let you go, of course we would have, but we would have gone with you to ensure your safety. Admit it or not, but you are pregnant again, Harry and you had Braiden with you, our seven day old son.”

“I wouldn’t have let anything happen to him.”

“But what would have happened to you when you were protecting Braiden? We’re your dominants’, Harry; you have us to protect you from all attacks so you don’t have to be put in dangerous situations.”
“You are not human shields!”

“No, we’re Dracken shields. It’s the job of a dominant to fight for, protect and die for his submissive if needs be. That is the purpose of a mated dominant, Harry, to love, to cherish, to reproduce and to die for his submissive.”

“Maybe that was true a thousand years ago but…!”

“No, Harry.” Nasta cut in, shaking his head. “That is the function of a dominant. We are your lovers, your mates, but our function is still the same as it was a thousand years ago, if you die in an attack, we would have failed you as your dominant mates.”

Harry was silent. He didn’t know what to say or what to do. He felt disgusted with himself and the familiar, bitter self-loathing crept into his mind. Why couldn’t he ever do anything right?

“Am I doing anything right?” He asked after the question refused to leave him, repeating over and over in his mind until he just had to ask it.

“What do you mean?” Nasta asked, his eyebrows lowering in confusion.

“Am I doing anything a submissive Dracken should be doing right? I push away my own instincts, I put Braiden and myself in danger, I ignore you and the others when you try to keep me safe. Why can’t I do anything right? Why is everything I do always wrong?”

Nasta hugged him and held him against his chest, urging Harry’s arms around his own body.

“Every submissive is different, you just happen to be more different than most, but that’s a good thing. Having your own mind isn’t a bad thing at all, that you push away your own thousand year old instincts and listen to your logical mind is a very good thing, Harry because our instincts can be very illogical, irrational and downright idiotic at times. The others and I know that sometimes the safety measures we give you are a tad overprotective and even stifling at times, which is why when you break them we usually aren’t too upset about it because we understand your need for independence and space, but we cannot allow you to put yourself and Braiden in danger like you did this morning. If you had waited just twenty more minutes I would have been up and I would have joined you. I would have told Max where I was going and that I had you and Braiden with me and he could have kept Blaise and Draco in bed with him for a lie in and he would have given them a big breakfast when they had all finally woken up instead of all of us scrambling around in a panic. stricken state of mind looking for a hint of you and Braiden, who in our minds had upped and vanished in the middle of the night. We were frightened, Harry and I doubt the others will even admit it, but I can and I was terrified for you and Braiden.”

“Does this mean that we can’t go and visit Marianna now?” Harry asked softly.

“I don’t think it’s a good idea.”

“Why not? I want to go, Nasta, please. Marianna deserves some time with her son and Grandson before we go back to Hogwarts, you can be there with me, all of you can!”

“No, Harry.” Nasta grumbled, his deep voice rougher than usual because the stress of talking so much had left his throat dry.

“It’s only Marianna’s home. Blaise’s home. What danger is there going to be?”

“Floo travel is dangerous…”

“I flooed there just this morning! There was nothing dangerous about it! If you still don’t want to floo then why can’t we get a Portkey?!” Harry demanded and got a glare for his tone.

“I said no, Harry.”

“I don’t want to stay here!” Harry told his oldest mate. “We are going back to Hogwarts in a week! I want to see something other than Hogwarts and the inside of a house!”

Nasta sighed and rubbed his aching temples. How much did he really want to just give in, but his Dracken snarled. It was too dangerous, their new clutch could be terminated, a clutch that could be his this time around.

“Just…just think about it, Nasta, please. I’ve never been anywhere in my life. I’ve never had a holiday before. The Du…the Dursleys, they would leave me at an old woman’s house as they went on lavish, expensive holidays and then they’d torture me with everything they did and got to see as a family when they got back, putting up photos where I could see them and reminiscing about things that I couldn’t hope to see in my wildest dreams. I just want to have a break before I go back to school, just please think about it.”

Harry felt so sickened with himself for playing the Dursleys card, but he wasn’t lying. He had never been anywhere whilst the Dursleys had jetted off all over the world, Dudley coming back with a suitcase full of trinkets and mementoes. He had been made to polish the frames of the holiday photos, the Dursleys on a beach, Dudley in a go kart when he had still been small enough to fit, at theme parks, at aquariums and reptile houses, at various zoos all over the world. Harry had hated them all for leaving him with Mrs Figg; he had used to spit on the glass fronts to polish them instead of using the tub of polish that Aunt Petunia ordered him to use. It hadn’t been fair and it still wasn’t fair as he was free of them now and he still couldn’t go anywhere that he wanted.

Nasta was quiet for the rest of the day and Harry felt wretched. He went to bed early and when Blaise and Max came up and snuggled into him, he was still awake, his mind twisting around thoughts at a mile a minute. Draco came up next and he fell asleep quickly. By the time that Nasta came up it was three in the morning. He climbed into the bed carefully, but Harry acted like it had disturbed him as he pretended to look groggily over at Nasta, who smiled softly and eased him back down, rubbing his hair gently to sooth him back to sleep. Harry rolled over Max and shoved the biggest man in the bed towards Blaise and Draco. Max grunted as little feet dug into his back and he rolled over twice until he was snuggled up tight to Blaise. Harry settled down in the warm groove that Max had left and cuddled into Nasta’s chest, who shimmied him over so that he could fit in the bed comfortably and lay down, holding him close.

“I love you, Harry.” He heard him whisper sometime later as he pretended to sleep and almost was asleep. “We’ll go visit Marianna because you want to go, but I’ll be damned if I’m letting go of your hand for the entire time that we’re there.”

Harry smiled as Nasta squeezed him. He made a soft, sleepy noise and Nasta relaxed his arms so he wasn’t squeezing. Harry snuggled in once again and he fell asleep with a smile on his face.

Chapter End Notes

The vote is over! L12 won. The number 12 by 47 points over the number 10! The letter L by 1 point over the letter D! For the results:-

The number 6 was 3 babies in the clutch.
The number 10 was 4 babies.
The number 12 was 5 babies.
The letter A was baby girls.
The letter D was baby boys.
The letter L was both girls and boys.
So the clutch Harry has contains 5 babies of mixed gender! I will choose how many of each gender and who their Fathers are! Many of you worked out that only Max, Nasta and Blaise can be the potential Father’s, this was an author oversight as I believed I had written Draco into the last sex scene, but I never, as a result of this, Draco is excluded from being a Father of this clutch.
A/N: This chapter is dedicated to Christopher, without who this chapter would still be frozen and running up and down with the scroll bar on Microsoft word and to chachamaru43, you know why.

Last Time

Harry rolled over Max and shoved the biggest man in the bed towards Blaise and Draco. Max grunted as little feet dug into his back and he rolled over twice until he was snuggled up tight to Blaise. Harry settled down in the warm groove that Max had left and cuddled into Nasta. He yawned widely and burrowed into Nasta’s chest, who shimmied him over so that he could fit in the bed comfortably and lay down, holding him close.

“I love you, Harry.” He heard him whisper sometime later as he pretended to sleep and almost was asleep. “We’ll go visit Marianna because you want to go, but I’ll be damned if I’m letting go of your hand for the entire time that we’re there.”

Harry smiled as Nasta squeezed him. He made a soft, sleepy noise and Nasta relaxed his arms so he wasn’t squeezing. Harry snuggled in once again and he fell asleep with a smile on his face.

Chapter Forty-Eight – Fun in the Sun

Harry was so excited even as Max and Draco shouted at Nasta, who was calmly packing an overnight bag with enough clothes for the weekend.

It was two in the morning and Harry was so excited that he hadn’t slept a wink. Everything was so short notice that they were only now packing their suitcases.

Harry had never been on holiday before, so he had no idea what he needed to take. He was packing anything and everything that came to his hand as Nasta chuckled and started removing things from his little suitcase.
“Braiden will not need all of these clothes, love.” He told him as he took out several jumpers, even more shirts and fourteen pairs of trousers.

“What if he has an accident or if it’s not warm enough?”

“We have blankets for him and it’ll take a few minutes to come back to get a spare pair of clothes. It’s not like we are Muggles and need to catch a plane to come back and forth. We’ll be fine, now instead of filling the suitcase with everything for Braiden, pack some clothes for yourself.”

Harry did as he was told, not willing to push his luck as he was actually being allowed to go and Marianna had been right, he only needed Nasta on his side as Draco and Max were furious and demanding that they not go, that it was stupid and dangerous and that it could potentially terminate his pregnancy, but Nasta was adamant and firm that they were going and he ordered them to pack or be stuck without clothes for a week.

“What do I need? Blaise, what’s Draguignan like?”

“It is going to be hot there, Mio amore, but not much more than here.”

“That’s good, I’d hate for Braiden to be pushed into a climate where he’s uncomfortable. Oh! Where are his sun hats?! He’s not going without his hats or his sun cream!”

“I’ve got both.” Nasta assured. “Now pack some boxer shorts or you won’t have any.”

“How can you agree to this insanity?!” Draco demanded.

“We are going, now pack your damn suitcase or you’ll have nothing to wear!” Nasta growled.

“Don’t forget your toiletries!” Blaise called after a fuming Draco.

“Don’t tease him.” Harry chastised. “How many bottles should we take? Do we need the extra ones?”
“Harry love, listen to me. Stop packing for Braiden and pack for yourself.” Nasta ordered testily.

Harry dropped the bottle he had been about to pack and frowned at his hand as it had automatically released the bottle without his brain telling his fingers to move.

Nasta sighed and cuddled him

“I didn’t mean to use the full weight of the dominance bond, love, but can you please pack some clothes for yourself or are you planning on running around Marianna’s home with nothing on?”

Harry shook his head and an excited grin stole over his face once more as he rushed to his wardrobe to get some clothes, Nasta giving his bum a swat as he moved past.

Draco unhappily packed his bag and Max zipped his case up in angry silence. Blaise, who had been done before all of them because the majority of his clothes were already at the house they were going to, was making sure that they had everything Braiden needed, tipping out half of the things that Harry had already packed to make space for the things they actually needed.

“Are you all done and ready?” Nasta asked an hour later, Harry’s hand firmly in his own as his mate bounced with excited, pent up energy. It made it almost worth it to see Harry this excited over just going to someone else’s house for a few days.

Once he had resigned himself to the fact that, yes they were actually going and that Harry and Braiden were going with them, Max had become as excited as Harry as he rushed around locking all of the windows, locking the doors and flooing his family to let them know where he was going to be for the next few days to a week.

Draco on the other hand had sunken into a silent sulk and he was very angry and very against the idea of Harry leaving the house. Nasta had ordered him to be quiet and to stop being a pest. He hadn’t spoken since.

“Are we leaving now?!” Harry asked bubbly as he bounced on the balls of his feet, swinging his arm that was attached to the hand Nasta was holding and bouncing Braiden with him, who was strapped to his chest in a baby carrier that had, only that morning, been taken out of its box for the trip since the carrycot was broken and now useless and needed to be replaced.

“Yes Harry, just calm down. We’ll be going now, in a minute.” Nasta assured him as he and Max went through a check list to make sure they had everything and had done everything that needed doing.
“Are we going now?” Harry asked a minute later as they still hadn’t left the house.

Nasta chuckled deeply and pulled him into a light hug, being mindful of Braiden strapped to his chest and gave him a kiss.

“We’re going now, just shut your mouth for two minutes whilst Max makes sure everything is locked and everything is turned off.”

Harry waited as patiently as he could, but as he opened his mouth to ask once more if they were actually going, Max placed a large hand over his mouth.

“We’re done; we’re going, no more asking.” He said with an indulgent grin.

Harry almost squealed as they made their way to the fireplace. Nasta had decided that flooing was more practical than getting permission for a Portkey with such short notice, but Harry and Braiden were to floo with Nasta, just in case.

Blaise went first, then Nasta forced Draco to leave, Max went next carrying the majority of the suitcases and then Nasta bundled up Harry against his chest, covered him with a blanket and flooed to Marianna’s.

Harry checked on Braiden as a first priority, making sure no soot or dirt had lodged itself anywhere and then turned to grin at Blaise, who was having his back broken by his Mother.

Nasta chuckled quietly beside him and Harry smothered a giggle, even Draco managed a smile and Harry felt almost delirious at the sight of it.

“Everything is set up, Josiah and I worked through all of yesterday and half the night for you all when we heard you were paying us a visit and we made sure to set everything up!” Marianna exclaimed happily.

“Set what up, Mother?” Blaise asked, rubbing his ribs and looking more like he’d rather not know.

“Why, your little holiday, Blaise. Honestly.”

“This is our little holiday.” Harry said. “Blaise said Draguignan is very beautiful.”
“You can come to this place any old time!” Marianna exclaimed. “I’ve booked you into a lovely hotel, just the five of you, got a tour guide to recommend all the places you should visit, the best restaurants, the finest beaches, all the sights you should see.”

Marianna pushed a folder into Nasta’s hand as he raised a black eyebrow incredulously.

“I thought you said we could stay here, Mother.” Blaise reminded her. “You said you’d love for us to come and stay when I spoke to you yesterday.”

“Yes, of course I would, but you need to go out into the world, my little loves! Guadeloupe is a very beautiful island.”

“Guadeloupe?” Max asked faintly.

“Where you’re all going, yes. Except for Braiden. Braiden is staying here with his Grandma Marianna!”

That was where Harry disliked the idea as he cowered back into Nasta and wrapped his arms around Braiden like a shield.

“What?” He asked. “I can’t leave Braiden here.”

“You can’t go out exploring Guadeloupe with a baby in tow!” Marianna refuted. “Josiah and I will take excellent care of him and you can floo back anytime you like, even in the middle of the night, if you want to check up on him.”

“This is too much, we couldn’t possibly…” Nasta began, but he didn’t get much further.

“Well you are.” Marianna snapped at him, proving that she was a dominant female and unafraid to stand up to him. “I would be most offended and unhappy with you if you didn’t go now that I went through all the trouble of making all the arrangements and compiling all the information I could for you boys. You’re going whether you want to or not, I will force the Portkey onto you all at some point with no way for you to get home for a few days, the way I see it you can either sulk and try to find a way off of the island like brats or you can relax and enjoy yourselves for a few days and come back, happy and refreshed in a few days’ time. It’s your choice.”
Harry saw the look on Nasta’s face and knew that he wouldn’t refuse Marianna now that she had played so dirtily and made him feel guilty over wanting to refuse. Marianna was right, it really was easy to manipulate dominants to do what you wanted if you knew what to say and do, but he was no dominant and he did not feel comfortable leaving Braiden.

“I don’t want to leave my baby. He’s only a week old.”

“You can come and see him every day, Harry. It’s only for a few days, one big, happy holiday before you go back to school. I’m sure you could use a few mornings where you can sleep in, where you don’t have to get up in the middle of the night and don’t have to do anything you don’t want to do for a few days. It’s not bad parenting to leave a child with a relative for a few days to have a break, Harry, you are refreshing yourself ready to come back, pick him up and take on school, a new pregnancy as well as a very young baby.”

“I…” Harry looked from Marianna to his mates. Draco did not look accepting, but then he hadn’t wanted any of them to come on this entire trip. Blaise was debating; Max was smiling so he obviously thought that it was a good idea. Harry looked up at Nasta, who was standing at his back and found those hazel-green eyes looking back.

“We could benefit from a break.” Nasta said smoothly, ignoring Draco’s growl of protest.

“If you think it’s a good idea.” Harry said meekly, his arms still around Braiden. But he really wanted to go, so he was doing as Marianna had told him to do, letting Nasta think that he had made the decision himself, but he was wearing a hopeful looking expression, but he wasn’t fighting or yelling, he wasn’t demanding that they should go. He was giving in and softly letting Nasta think that he was making the decision whether to go or not.

“I raised Blaise alright didn’t I?” Marianna demanded. “Braiden will be perfectly safe and happy here!”

“That made Blaise make up his mind and he agreed. Draco looked torn.
“Please, Draco.” Harry said softly. “I won’t go if you don’t want me to, but I really want to go.”

Marianna winked at him subtly and gave him an approving smile before adding in. “Won’t this be your first ever holiday, Harry? I’m sure your mates would want you to have a holiday and will make it extra special for you. After all you’re a grown man now, it’s criminal that you’ve never been on a holiday before. How many times did your parents take you on holiday when you were a child, Draco? At least two holidays a year wasn’t it?”

“Sometimes three.” Draco put in quietly as those silver eyes darkened in anger at the reminder that Harry’s upbringing wasn’t as lavish as his own.

“Are we going or aren’t we?” Nasta asked, as if the fate of it rested upon Draco and not on himself.

“We’ll go, but you have to be careful, Harry!” Draco said sternly.

“I will I promise! Thank you! Thank you!” Harry cried engulfing Draco in an awkward hug around his neck, with his arse stuck out so that his chest, which held Braiden, wouldn’t be crushed against Draco. “I can’t believe I’m finally having my first holiday! It’s so amazing!”

“Right, give me Braiden, you can settle him down with a bottle and a last cuddle, but your Portkey leaves in twenty minutes, I booked reservations for you to have dinner in Le Lucullus restaurant in Sainte-Anne, your hotel is also in Sainte-Anne. La Toubana hotel and spa.”

“What are we going to do in a spa?” Max asked his eyebrows in his hairline.

“Spa things?” Blaise answered questioningly.

“Find a steam room.” Harry said with a naughty giggle.

“You don’t need a steam room, sweetheart, you’re already pregnant. Speaking of which, the magical staff at the hotel have been informed of your arrival, that you are in fact pregnant and they have a Healer on standby for the duration of your stay.”

“I’m not that clumsy!” Harry pouted.
“You have your own private villa, with full access to the hotel swimming pool; there is an onsite restaurant and access to the hotel’s private beach.” Marianna continued. “You will arrive around the corner from the restaurant, the reservations are under Delericey, a seven seater car will be waiting to pick you up whenever you are done with dinner to take you to your hotel, you may then do as you please for the rest of your stay.”

Marianna looked so pleased with herself that Harry laughed and slipped Braiden out of the carrier, unstrapping it from his body before he gave his baby a big hug and a sloppy kiss.

“I’ll miss you, love. You be good for your Grandma Marianna, I’ll be home in a few days, I promise.”

Harry handed Braiden over, but then changed his mind and took the baby back, cuddling him tightly.

“I don’t think I can do it.” He said weakly.

“You can, you’re a strong man, Harry.” Nasta encouraged. “I’m sure if anything at all happens then Marianna will inform you, not that I expect anything to happen while we are away, he’s going to be fine and spoilt during his few days with his Grandmother.”

Harry swallowed and slowly held out Braiden again. He pulled his hands away once Marianna had Braiden in her arms so he didn’t snatch him back.

“You do have a bassinet don’t you?” Harry asked suddenly.

“I have Blaise’s old crib. I bought a new mattress just for Braiden and new linens too. He’s going to be fine and he has everything he needs. Stop fretting.”

Harry turned to move away, but turned back to Braiden, the little suitcase that Blaise and Nasta had packed for him and the nappy bag by Marianna’s feet, and kissed those little cheeks and mouth again.

“Nasta, be a dear and take Harry for the Portkey ride, I’m sure that once he’s away he’ll be fine. It’s always the hardest leaving them for the first time.”
Nasta wrapped Harry in his arms and Harry was almost ashamed to realise that his eyes were burning with tears. He was the one who had wanted this holiday; he had just imagined that he’d be taking Braiden with him.

“It’ll be fine, Harry love, Marianna will spoil Braiden and we are going to spoil you.” Max purred lustily in his ear and it made Harry laugh, before realising that the five of them were going to be in a their own private villa, with no baby, no family, no distractions for long enough that his stomach muscles clenched in anticipation. Perhaps leaving Braiden with Marianna wasn’t such a bad idea after all.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

The place they arrived at was dark, but the humid heat made Harry feel like stripping off and running around naked. It was hotter here than it was in Britain and France; they had been told by Marianna that it was eleven in the night in Guadeloupe. It was no wonder that Marianna insisted that they get up early and arrive at her house at three in the morning. They were all tired, but after they had eaten, they were going straight to the hotel and to bed, so they could get their bodies in time with the local time.

Draco led the way around from the dark corner the Portkey had dumped them and they found the restaurant quickly.

Nasta did all of the talking in rapid French that only Blaise could keep up with and they were quickly led to a beautiful table that seated five, with a gorgeous view and Harry made sure he had the seat closest to the window so he could peek over his shoulder and look outside.

“I bet it’s even more gorgeous when the sun is rising.” He said wistfully.

“Before we leave, you will see a sun rise and a sun set.” Max promised, leaning over to nibble on his neck. This holiday was bringing out Max’s more passionate side and he was wasting no time in showing it.

“Behave!” Nasta chastised as they were given menus and asked to order drinks.

Harry heard the word champagne and heard Nasta quickly decline before ordering them all fruit drinks and glasses of water.

Harry sucked on his straw from his fancy glass with the little green umbrella and he grinned as Blaise looked at his drink in disgust.
“You could have at least allowed us one glass of wine with dinner.”

“While Harry is pregnant we will support him through his non-alcoholic diet.” Nasta said simply.

“I don’t mind you drinking alcohol.” Harry said. “I never liked the taste of it anyway, I was never refined enough to enjoy it.”

Harry indicated with his glass to Draco and Blaise, who were both grumbling snobbishly to one another about not being allowed wine when they had been allowed one glass with dinner since they were twelve.

Nasta chuckled. “I just didn’t want them drinking so soon, love. Not when we’re going straight to bed after dinner. Do you need help with your menu? It’s all in French.”

“Please. I want something with pasta.”

“They boast a lovely ravioli.” Nasta told him.

Harry grinned. “I’ve never had ravioli.”

“Never?” Max asked scandalised. “I’ve never made ravioli for you?”

“No.” Blaise answered. “I didn’t know you could make pasta from scratch.”

“Of course I can!” Max said scandalised. “I made that lasagne from scratch. I’ll make you some when we get home, love. I can’t believe you’ve never tried it.”

Harry frowned and looked down at the table top.

“I’ve never tried a beef burger.” Nasta said casually, though he was looking at Harry whilst pretending to peruse the menu. He saw Harry’s head come up and he felt better that he had saved the “You’ve never eaten a burger?” Draco asked.

“I’m surprised that you have.” Nasta answered.

Draco actually went pink. “Blaise and I…we were in between our fourth and fifth year at Hogwarts, we went to a nearby town in Wiltshire and we saw a Muggle stand. We were hungry and it smelt nice.”

Harry actually laughed at how embarrassed Draco sounded at confessing to eating a burger from a vendor.

“I had a burger once.” Harry told them. “Uncle Vernon bought one for himself and Dudley and the nice man handed me one before Uncle Vernon could whisk me away. I didn’t like it much, it made me feel sick from all the oil and grease, but the onions were nice.”

His mates were saved from answering by the appearance of their server, who took their orders, topped up their glasses and then the mood was saved as the awkward tension passed when Harry almost climbed over the back of his chair because an iguana passed in front of the window.

“Sit down, Harry.” Nasta said, but he was laughing so much he could have said almost anything to Harry, who was trying to follow the iguana through its procession through the windows.

“What is it?” Harry asked as he looked at the funny lizard as it cocked its head at him. Harry did the same and heard not only his mates laughing but other diners too.

“It’s an iguana, Harry.” Blaise told him.

Max came and lifted him back into his chair, but Harry still tried to crane his neck to search for the errant iguana.

“You’ll see plenty of them on Guadeloupe, apparently they roam wild.” Draco said as he read through the file that Marianna had given them. “There are also wildlife parks and aquariums if you’d like to see some animals.”

“Can we, please?” Harry asked excitedly.

“Of course we can.” Nasta answered as he sucked twice on his straw of fruit juice.

“You look sexy doing that.” Harry whispered loud enough for their table to hear. “I can suck better than you though.”

“Oh, you think so do you?” Nasta challenged, his voice dipping lower.

Harry chuckled, his voice deeper than it had been in a while. He almost couldn’t wait until they got back to the hotel room, he was almost tempted to say fuck the dinner, fuck me instead, but he didn’t as his stomach grumbled under the table. He’d eat dinner first; he’d need the energy for later.

Harry’s mouth watered as he was served his meal and he ate happily, making sure he tasted everything. He even took the forkful of food that was offered to him by Nasta.

“That’s nice.” He said. “What is it?”

“Trout meunière.” Nasta answered with a perfect accent that he didn’t usually have.

“Nothing can compare to Max’s cooking, but this comes close.” Harry flattered, looking at Max through his eyelashes as he put more of his ravioli on his fork before putting it to his mouth.

“So you’re saying my cooking is better than a real chef’s creation in their area of specialty?” Max asked. “You are so getting it tonight.”

Harry laughed even as he twitched in his loose linen trousers and his stomach clenched in arousal. He couldn’t wait for later.

“Won’t it hurt the baby?” Draco asked.
“No.” Harry replied immediately. “You wouldn’t even know I was pregnant if it wasn’t for Claire. With Braiden it took eleven days before I was dragged to Madam Pomfrey and she told me that I was pregnant. Braiden was fine with all the sex we had for those eleven days and even after! I swear if you try and deny me sex I will tie you down, suck you hard and fuck myself on you.”

“You promise?” Blaise whispered lustily.

Harry had trouble swallowing and took a deep drink of his fruit drink, sucking exaggeratedly on the straw and hearing four muffled growls around him.

They were offered a dessert menu when their main plates were cleared away and before any of the others could decline; Harry took a menu and asked Nasta to translate it for him.

“Don’t you want to get to the hotel quicker?” Blaise asked one hand disappearing under the table to give himself a short, subtle tug as his smart trousers restricted his blood flow.

“I want to fill up first.” Harry said teasingly. “I have enough room for dessert, plus I could use the extra energy, we all could.”

“However much you want to eat.” Draco agreed as he looked at his own dessert menu. He luckily knew enough French to translate himself, which left Nasta to help Harry and Blaise to help Max.

“What are sorbets?” Harry asked.

“It’s frozen, but it’s made with egg whites and fruit purees, so it’s a healthier choice for a dessert.” Nasta said approvingly.

“I want a mango sorbet and a passion fruit one!” Harry exclaimed.

“I want the coconut sorbet.” Draco decided.

“Papaya sorbet.” Max said with a grin.

“Let’s get one of each sorbet then and share them.” Nasta suggested. “That way we can try them
Nasta gave their order and it wasn’t long before a selection of the frozen, ice cream like desserts were placed on their table. Only they weren’t creamy at all, they were ice, bursting with flavour and very delicious and refreshing.

Harry’s favourite was definitely the strawberry sorbet and particularly the lime one, while Nasta preferred the coconut. Max liked the mango and Blaise favoured the passion fruit. Draco enjoyed them all except for the guava sorbet. None of them much liked the guava sorbet or, strangely enough, the raspberry sorbet, which Draco loved.

They all fed one another and enjoyed themselves immensely. They were all done and finished and Nasta asked the server to have their car bought around as he paid for their meals. Harry still couldn’t believe that Marianna had hired them a car.

Harry yawned and leaned against Draco, his seat belt securely on as he kept his eyes peeled open to see the beautiful place they were in, but it was now nearing one in the morning and it was dark.

“We’ll see more in the morning, cariad.” Nasta told him.

Harry hummed, but kept his eyes open. He was semi-hard and he wanted to do something about it with his four lovers as their baby was being looked after by Marianna.

“Do you think Braiden is alright?” He couldn’t help asking.

“I’m sure he is just fine, Harry.” Max told him.

“Oh course he is.” Nasta told him. “Blaise turned out fine didn’t he? And it’s always said that grandparents are more patient and more careful with their grandchildren than their children. You always look after something more carefully if it isn’t yours.”

Harry smiled as the pressure released from his gut. He hated feeling that Braiden was going to be distressed without him.

They arrived at the hotel they were staying in and Harry almost lost his breath. It was beautiful. It looked like a jungle, full of trees and flowers and plants, with little bungalow cum villas studded around, held off the ground by stilts and close together, but far enough apart for privacy. Harry grinned as he realised that their neighbours weren’t going to be able to hear him scream tonight whether they used silencing charms or not.

They arrived at the front desk and Max got the key to their own villa. The hotel staff were lovely, though one of them kept darting their eyes up to his forehead, Harry took this to be the magical resident staff on duty. Their suitcases were already in their villa, like Marianna had said they would be and Harry darted around exploring everything in their villa, watched by his amused lovers who occasionally had to remind him not to run and to be careful.

The bed was huge with white linens with red borders, it looked like two king beds pushed together, magic had had a hand in its creation. The bedroom opened up onto a large decking balcony via a sliding glass door that had a gorgeous view of the ocean and the beach and as Harry was stood by the railing, looking over, arms encircled his waist and lips were pressed to the nape of his neck.

Blond hair blew in front of his eyes from the ocean breeze and Harry turned his head to kiss a bicep.

“It’s gorgeous here, Draco.” He said softly.

“I’m sorry I tried to stop you from coming here. I had no idea how miserable you were until I saw your face light up in the restaurant.”

“I wasn’t miserable, just a bit…stifled. Suffocated. I needed a bit of room to move and instead of giving me that room; you’ve given me an endless expanse of space to stretch in.” Harry answered throwing his arms wide. “This place is better than I could have ever imagined! This is going to be a perfect first holiday!”

Draco turned him around and hugged him tightly, kissing his lips soundly.

“I love you and I’m sorry if I’ve hurt you at all since our mating. I love you.”

Harry went onto his tip toes and put his arms around Draco’s neck, squeezing tightly and trying to offer himself as comfort.

“Let’s go to bed to reaffirm just how much we love one another.” Harry purred into one of Draco’s perfect ears. “Let me show you how much you’re forgiven and how very much I love you.”

Draco chuckled deeply and let Harry lead him back into their bedroom where Max and Nasta were checking through their suitcases.

Harry spun Draco around and shoved him onto the bed beside Blaise before climbing onto him and kissing him, little hands burrowing under the shirt that Draco was wearing to play with pretty pink nipples.
“Hey! Not starting without us are you?” Max asked, a naughty grin on his face as he watched Harry attack Draco’s mouth with a little tongue and a whole lot of vigour.

“You’re here aren’t you?” Harry asked breathlessly, leaning back down to attack that perfect, pale neck with his teeth.

Draco, fed up of lying on his back, rolled Harry over and took over his mouth, his hands shredding the shirt that Harry was wearing before roving over every inch of bared flesh. Harry couldn’t hold in the moan that came from the back of his throat.

Draco pulled back from him and ripped off his own shirt, his muscles rippling under his pale, perfect skin. Draco threw the, now buttonless, shirt aside before leaning down to claim Harry’s mouth as his own once more. Harry’s legs slipped around Draco’s hips and the heels of his feet dug into the base of his spine, forcing his hips to push forward into Harry, who moaned again at the contact.

“I feel left out.” Blaise said a hint of a bass growl in his voice that sent a spike of arousal through his ears and down to his aching cock.

“Stop talking and kiss me!” Harry demanded and Max fell to his knees beside the bed, pulled Harry’s shoulders to the edge of the bed so his head was hanging over it before giving him such a passionate, dominating kiss that Harry’s toes curled.

Draco untied the sash that was holding up his linen trousers, unzipped them and tugged them down his legs, kissing them as he went.

A hiss had Harry breaking away from Max to look over at Blaise, who was straddling Nasta’s lap, naked from the waist up, having his neck and ears nibbled and bitten.

Max pushed his hair until he was once again hanging over the edge and all the blood rushed to his head before a tongue was shoved down his throat.

Draco’s tongue and teeth licked and nibbled up the arch of his little foot and Harry almost kicked his nose as it tickled him. Draco yanked him halfway down the bed and Max crawled up to join them, taking off his shirt and undoing his trousers as he went, taking a push up stance over Harry’s head and chest before leaning down to kiss him again.

Harry’s hands took fistfuls of Max’s short, but thick brown hair and tugged mindlessly on it as Draco sucked on his inside thighs, making a soft sound slip from his throat.
The bed creaked as Nasta fell onto it, pinning Blaise down to the bed, undoing both of their trousers at the same time before yanking Blaise’s off of his legs, taking his black boxer-briefs with them.

“Will this bed hold all of our weights?” Harry asked.

“I could reinforce it if you’d like.” Nasta offered his voice so deep it was almost guttural.

“No, a part of me is insanely curious as to whether it can actually support all of our weights or not.”

That made them all chuckle, except for Draco, who was moving his mouth higher and higher up his thigh, getting closer and closer to his groin.

Harry’s breath hitched as Draco’s tongue dipped into the crease made by his thigh meeting his groin.

“Please.” He whimpered and Max chuckled into his ear, before licking it teasingly.

Nasta shoved both Draco and Max off of him, to twin growls and hisses, before dragging Harry to lay right next to Blaise, turning them to face one another, before lying behind Blaise and inching his hand between their bellies. A moment later Harry felt that strong, calloused hand brush his cock and he mewled as Blaise hissed.

Draco licked a wet, wonky line over his shoulder and Harry wondered where Max had gone when he felt a large hand pushing him to twist his hips further forward and more into Nasta’s hand, exposing his bum.

Blaise took over his mouth as Nasta stroked the both of them with one hand; his other hand supporting his heavy body on his side, Draco moved over his shoulder up his neck and over his cheek as Max exposed his entrance before leaning down to lick at it.

Harry felt his heart lurch into his chest as his eyes rolled into the back of his head and he almost bit Blaise’s tongue off as his jaw twitched.

Max continued licking and nibbling on his skin and Harry’s legs spasmed as he threw his head back, not even feeling any pain as his skull made contact with Draco’s. The blond cursed and ducked his head down to nibble his neck, out of the way of Harry as he threw his head back once again as Nasta’s fist clenched tighter around him and Blaise.

“Max. Now!” Harry ordered.

Max chuckled. “Not even close to now, Harry.” He answered, slipping a finger inside of him.
Harry thrust forward into Nasta and Blaise, arching his back around Draco as Max stroked his insides.

“Now!” He demanded again and Max bent down to bite into the soft flesh of his side.

“You better give him what he wants because if he head butts me again I’m going to lose consciousness.” Draco murmured twisting a little nipple between strong fingers, Harry made an odd choked moan and a shiver stole through his entire body, a warmth taking him over coming from his belly under the quadruple assault of having his prostate stroked, his cock squeezed, his nipples twisted and his mouth dominated.

Harry threw his head back as every muscle tensed as his orgasm stole over him so powerfully that his scream was a silent, open mouthed strain of every muscle in his body, unable to see, unable to breathe in, unable to make a sound as he waited for it to ride out and pass.

He sunk boneless into the bed and he just laid there, listening to Blaise and Nasta turn on each other, snarling and frotting with one another as their own orgasms built. Max was still down by his legs, working more fingers into him, but Harry had no energy to even move past a muscle twitch, though when Max brushed his prostate he let out little whimpers and half moans as his body moved feebly.

Max’s fingers slipped out and Harry fully expected his cock to be pushed into him, instead he got Max’s tongue again and a bite to his left bum cheek that made him yelp in surprise.

Max licked and sucked him until Harry was writhing and fully hard once again and reaching hands out to grasp fistfuls of blanket, just for something to tug on.

Harry twisted the top of his body away from Blaise and Nasta, laying on his stomach, his head facing out towards the sliding glass doors and he found Draco tugging on himself behind him, getting himself hard again after his recent orgasm. Harry gripped the waistline of his open trousers and tugged it with all his might and sent Draco tumbling sideways, Harry gripped his blond hair and smashed their mouths together, biting and sucking on those lips and tongue, rubbing his fully hard erection into the bed spread, making little mewling noises.

Draco sat up and pulled Harry away from Max’s tongue, before Harry could figure out what was going on and where the nice sensations had gone, Draco had shoved his trousers out of the way, yanked his boxers down and was inside of him and his back bowed at the even nicer sensations of having Draco fully inside of him.

Draco rested his forehead against his shoulder as Harry gripped his blond hair and squeezed it tightly between his clenched fingers, a continuous groan coming from the back of his throat as Draco pulsed inside of him.

Draco moved then, shifting his hips backwards before pushing them forwards and Harry got the message and moved with him. In this position Draco couldn’t do much and that suited Harry just fine as he picked up the pace and pulled Draco’s head, by his hair, to press their mouths together as he raised and lowered himself from his knees faster and harder.
Harry’s inside muscles clenched as Draco hit his prostate and Draco growled viciously and one hand slid from his hip to the back of his head to grip his hair, meshing their mouths together, pressing Harry’s head hard against his own as he bucked his hips underneath him more frantically.

Harry felt his second orgasm building and he pulled his fists, still clenching Draco’s hair, outwards, strands coming off in his fingers as his back slowly arched until it was fully bowed and the red heat in his belly exploded and turned his vision white as his scream bounced off the walls.

Max shoved him forward with such force that Draco fell backwards. Max lined himself up and pushed himself inside slowly. Draco was soft so it was easier than if they had both been hard, but Harry made a small pained sound regardless. Two hands touched him in exactly the same place, but on opposite sides of his body, Draco rubbing his lower stomach soothingly and Max his lower back, easing his muscles to relax so the pain lessened.

Harry breathed deeply as it helped with the pain and when Max slipped into him fully, he felt Draco swelling. It was a tight, tight fit and Harry shivered as every nerve ending in his body tingled.

Max moved to a brutal pace, his end already almost upon him from watching Harry and Draco together and Nasta and Blaise near the head of the bed.

Harry felt the white wash of fluid inside of him and Max fell backwards, sated, slipping out of him, leaving only Draco, who pulled his legs out from under him, pinned Harry down onto Max and started fucking him.

Harry dug short fingernails into Draco’s shoulder and pushed his hips up hard into Draco’s, making it easier for the blond to push in and out of him, allowing him to thrust harder and faster.

Harry panted as Draco grunted; sweat beading on his forehead, dripping down to land on Harry’s cheek. He poked his tongue out to taste those beads of sweat and enjoyed the salty, musky taste on his tongue.

Draco quivered and with a short grunt and a shudder that wracked his whole body and tensed every muscle, he flooded Harry’s insides and caused Harry’s orgasm to take him over.

When he could see and hear again, Harry was cuddled on Max’s chest, watching a threesome of limbs belonging to Nasta, Draco and Blaise and trying to make sense of it. It was only when he realised that Nasta was fucking Draco and Blaise was fucking Nasta that his brain made sense of what his eyes were seeing.

“That is fucking hot.” Harry exclaimed.

“Not as hot as watching you and Draco go at it. I thought you were going to milk him dry and then kill him.” Max chuckled, his throat raw.

“Whose cock have you been deep throating?” Harry teased.

“Nasta’s.” Max answered back, surprising Harry who hadn’t meant it seriously.
“I missed that.” Harry pouted.

“You missed a lot when you were engrossed with Draco.” Max grinned.

Harry looked at Draco as he was being fucked by Nasta, that strong face tinted a delicate pink, his mouth opened in pleasure, but clenching now and then into a snarl, fingernails leaving bleeding crescents in Nasta’s shoulders as he tried to move under him but couldn’t as Nasta’s hips were pinning his own to the bed.

Nasta shuddered as Blaise yanked his hips back forcibly, changing the position and angle of himself inside Nasta and Harry licked his lips with a dry tongue; his mouth was like ash or sand.

Max sat him up and knelt behind him, leaning down so his mouth was next to his ear.

“Gorgeous together aren’t they?” He whispered. “It gets me all hot and bothered to know that Nasta is fucking Draco only with the spit from my own mouth.”

Harry made a little sound and his hand almost automatically slid to his cock, tugging and pulling on it. Max chuckled deeply in his ear and Harry’s eyes closed and his mouth opened.

“Open your eyes, Harry. Watch them, they’re about to reach their peak. Watch their expressions, see the pleasure on their faces, hear their screams and growls, see the lust and love in their eyes.”

Harry peeled his eyes open, but he couldn’t open them fully as Max’s hand closed over his own, squeezing tighter and moving his own hand faster as they watched Blaise, Nasta and Draco move together and against one another, getting faster and more vicious as their orgasms approached.

Blaise released first with a growl that almost took Harry with him, Nasta followed and Harry saw for the first time how the muscles in his stomach and legs tensed when he orgasmed. Draco followed with a scream and Harry let himself go into Max’s hand.

Max twisted his slack head around and kissed him, his strong tongue trying to coax Harry’s wet and lax tongue into a battle that Harry was feeling too drained to give him.

“Come on, love, work with me here.” Max purred. “You can’t be tired already, I promised I’d give you one for your flattering comment in the restaurant and I mean to keep my promise.”

Harry turned around and straddled Max, pushing all of his weight onto him, but Max held him as if he wasn’t even there, not letting Harry take control as he wanted to and forcing his tongue into Harry’s mouth, stroking the inside of his mouth, licking over his teeth and the roof of his mouth.

Max pulled him up, one large hand cupping a bum cheek before sliding Harry down onto himself and grunting at the tight heat that suddenly surrounded him.

Harry fought against Max, trying to set the pace and the rhythm, but Max held his hips tightly, encircling the small, protruding bones with his large hands, moving him against his will to the pace he wanted and Harry was frustrated and he tried to move himself using Max’s shoulders for leverage, but Max just tipped him backwards, spreading him onto the duvet and using one hand to pin his hips and the other to pin his wrists, leaving Harry only what little movement his legs could give him.

Max started out slow and soft, but when Blaise crawled over and decided to take advantage of Max’s position to slip himself inside of the larger man, he got rougher and harder and faster and when Blaise started hitting that spot inside of him, Max got brutal and Harry couldn’t catch his breath and he couldn’t move, he just lay there and let Max take control of him, hitting inside of him so hard and so deeply the air was knocked out of his lungs with every powerful thrust.

Harry’s orgasm washed over him so suddenly and so quickly that he had no time to prepare for it and his eyes rolled into the back of his head and everything was so violent that he blacked out.

Harry came back to someone stroking his face. Smiling, green-hazel eyes were looking down on him and Harry grinned goofily up at Nasta, sitting up with a hand behind his back to see a sight that made him burst out laughing, even as his cock gave a feeble twitch.

Max had been pushed off of the bed, pinned down by Draco who was fucking him with every muscle in his body as Blaise held Max’s head down on his cock with both hands.

“I think the way they ganged up on poor Max showed real intellect.” Nasta said with a chuckle. “Actually convincing him that he was going to dominate them, only for them to turn around and force him to submit. Not that he’s complaining, not with Blaise shoved down his throat at any rate.”

“He’s alright though isn’t he?” Harry asked a bit concerned as Max made a choking, hacking noise around Blaise.

“He’s fine. Look at how big and powerful he is, Harry, if he really, truly wanted to get out of that situation then he could very easily. He’s fine.” Nasta assured, before kissing him.

“Can I have you?” Harry asked a bit timidly.

“Are you asking or telling?” Nasta replied with a raised eyebrow.

“ Asking I guess.” Harry answered softly.
“You know what they say, Harry, if you need to ask…” Nasta trailed off, his one eyebrow still raised.

Harry grinned as he understood what was being said and he pulled Nasta into a passionate kiss, being spurred on by the noises coming from the floor.

Harry gently put Nasta’s body into the position that he wanted him in, that large, powerful body being moulded like clay in his smaller hands, Nasta allowing him to move his body where he wanted it, chuckling every now and then as Harry moved him into an awkward or near impossible pose.

“Show me what you can do, cariad.” Nasta rumbled.

“I can do better than last time.” Harry said with a small giggle, his hands going to his nearly flat stomach. “I don’t have a beach ball inside of me anymore. Not yet.”

Nasta pulled him down and kissed him gently as Harry took the bottle of lubricant that only Max had had the forethought to pack in his suitcase, but then Max was very dirty minded and likely thought that they wouldn’t care if it was Marianna’s home or not and they would spend the night’s fucking in Blaise’s old bedroom.

“You don’t need to bother stretching me.” Nasta told him with a smile. “I’ve had Blaise and Draco inside of me already.”

“Not Max?”

Nasta chuckled. “He wanted to but I shoved that whining mouth down over my cock instead. He needs to learn not to speak so much.”

Harry chuckled as he looked to where Max’s mouth was busy once again. He wondered what it felt like to have Max’s mouth completely over himself and he vowed to find out before they went back home.

Harry slicked himself up with Max’s favoured lubricant that smelt of something called ylang ylang and slipped himself carefully into Nasta.

“You’re so tender hearted.” Nasta told him slightly breathlessly. “Draco and Blaise just shoved themselves in like I was nothing more than a blow up doll; you take care when you don’t need to. I’m not going to be hurt, Harry.”

Harry smiled and kissed Nasta’s mouth. “I’m not being careful because I think I’ll hurt you.” He said. “I’m being careful because I love you and I want to make love to you and not just fuck you. I want you to remember our first times together, both the first time you took me and the first time I took you, forever. I never want you to forget, so I’ll be careful and gentle because none of the others have.”

“Oh, Harry, I’d remember this night if you took me with a bulldozer.”

“I’ll take you like a bulldozer if you’d want.” Max offered, his voice strained and his throat red raw, but he was grinning and smiling, a drop of white fluid clinging to the corner of his mouth. Draco leant forward and licked that drop off and kissed Max deeply, sharing the taste of Blaise’s cum.

Blaise was flat out on the floor, looking to be unconscious, but he was breathing deeply and evenly, even if he wasn’t moving. Max looked relaxed and sated and Draco was almost boneless with content. He was panting harshly and even as Harry watched he flumped backwards with his eyes closed and stayed there. Max joined him with a groan.

Harry turned back to Nasta and laughed, giving his hips an experiment little wiggle and watching as Nasta’s eyes closed.

“You’re right on my prostate.” He moaned, pushing his hips up into Harry’s.

Harry tensed his body and flexed his hips into Nasta, pushing slowly and carefully, trying not to move the angle which he was already at and Nasta tensed under him and let out another soft moan.

Harry gained confidence and moved within Nasta, but a touch to his bum had him pushing in much harder than he had wanted to and Nasta let out a small yelp of surprised pleasure.

Blaise pushed into him and Harry gurgled, even as Nasta nimbly wrapped his legs around both him and Blaise’s bodies and yanked them into him.

“Blaise!” Harry cried out, even as Nasta nimbly wrapped his legs around both him and Blaise’s bodies and yanked them into him.

Blaise tried to be soft and gentle, but he was too tired for much forethought and he let Nasta do most of the work with his legs. Harry on the other hand, fought against Nasta and tried to set his own rhythm, it ended up making everything so much more pleasurable as Nasta tried to fuck himself on Blaise, to his own pace, but Harry was in between them, going much slower and when Nasta bucked his hips up hard, Harry’s were already pulling back out and it drove Nasta wild.

He moved one hand from where he was propped up on the bed and shoved it through Harry’s hair, tugging it backwards as his head fell back on his neck with a deep groan.

Harry took that to mean that he was doing something right and he moved a hand from Nasta’s hip to stroke him slowly and gently, cupping his balls and rolling them between his fingers before tugging on them sharply. Nasta’s hips bucked harshly when he did so and a groan, almost a growl, slipped from Nasta’s throat even as Blaise picked up the pace behind him, slamming into his prostate and making him mewl in the back of his throat.

Harry’s orgasm hit him first and Blaise only seconds after, Nasta went when Harry tugged on his balls a couple more times and squeezed them gently in his palm.

Almost as soon as they had all slipped out of one another and took comfort in the soft bedspread, Nasta grabbed his hips, pulled him straight and pushed into him with a single flex of those powerful hips.

Harry screamed and Draco shot up from the floor, blearily looking around before an amused Max pulled him back down into his arms.

Just like the first time that they had fucked, Nasta started rolling his hips over and over and again, just like the first time, Harry could already feel his orgasm building as those little flexes and body rolls made his body quiver and quake, rubbing against every nerve ending and jabbing his prostate as Nasta used every last ounce of his energy to give him one final release of pleasure.

Harry moved his body onto Nasta, becoming desperate as he felt that crest his orgasm was coming to, felt the edge of his pleasure and he wanted to go over it. Nasta squeezed his hips tighter and started panting slowly, but harshly as he continued rolling his hips, his stomach glistening with sweat as a bead of it rolled down his neck to join others dotted on his chest.

The coil in Harry’s stomach wound tighter, becoming a red hot burn in his body as his muscles danced with pleasure and his back bowed so suddenly that it cracked in several places and his head flew backwards as his limit was reached and his muscles tensed and his inside muscles clenched tightly around Nasta, who fell to his elbows and gave a final roll of his hips before he joined Harry in his pleasure with a grunt and an exhale of air against his neck.

Nasta rode out his orgasm, prolonging Harry’s own as he did so, before he fell sideways, slipping out of Harry’s body and leaving him to pant deeply to try and catch his breath back.

Max stood up and picked up a drowsy, half sleeping Draco from the floor and dumped him on the bed before collapsing onto it himself with a moan.

“Every muscle aches.” He whined, his voice raw.

No one replied, no one could reply. Draco was almost asleep, Blaise was asleep, Nasta was possibly unconscious and Harry was still trying to get his breathing back under his control.

Max moved Nasta in short, sharp tugs and laid him against the pillows, yanking out the duvet as he did so. Nasta groaned and swatted at him proving that he wasn’t unconscious after all. Max bopped Nasta’s head before he pulled Draco, by his arm, to lie against Nasta. Draco hissed sleepily at Max, who bopped Draco’s head too.

Max moved Blaise to lie against Nasta’s other side, Blaise did not wake up. Lastly Max scooped Harry into his arms and flumped down on the bed, holding Harry tightly to his chest, pressing Harry’s back to Blaise’s back, before he reached down and tugged the duvet up to cover them all.

“So much for getting to bed early to rise with the sun to alter our body clocks.” Max rumbled before he moved around to get himself comfortable before he stilled, waiting for exhaustion to take him over so that he could fall asleep.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------

Remus smiled as he looked through the pictures of his school days and early twenties. Sirius and James grinning and laughing, Lily smiling as she stroked her baby bump, a toothless, grinning baby boy who was reaching clenching hands towards the camera, James sat behind him holding the little boy under his armpits to prevent him from toppling forward. James had always been so overprotective of Harry it was a wonder he had ever learnt to walk.

He smiled sadly and he wished Lily and James and Sirius could be here now to see how their beautiful baby boy had turned out. Sirius had been hopeless with a baby Harry, but there was no denying that he had seen Harry as much as his own son and later in life, he had given a teenaged Harry sound advice, an ear to listen to him and a body to turn to when things got rough.

He missed them. He missed them dearly and with Harry growing up so fast and off having his own baby, it felt like he was missing everything, that everything was going too quickly for him to catch up with and he hated thinking that Harry was off having sexual relations with men and getting pregnant when he was just seventeen. Even James and Lily had waited until they were twenty and married before planning a baby.

Remus rubbed his gritty eyes and he sighed. He wished with all of his heart that they could be here instead of him. What was he doing with his life? Who did he really have? James and Lily, even Sirius, could have been doing something and been something to someone. Harry deserved them, all three of them, instead he got an old, tired werewolf who was no good to anyone.

Sometimes he dreamed that he had a Wife and children, maybe four. Four seemed like a good number to him. He wouldn’t be a werewolf in his dreams and there would be no danger of hurting or infecting his own children.

Perhaps the dreams were just a by-product of his conflict of opinion with Tonks over her want of a relationship with him, despite him giving her a list of cons against the idea. He wanted what she offered so badly, but how could he ever accept? No matter what he did or how many dreams he had, he was a werewolf, older than her by thirteen years, hated, disgusted, as poor as the most impoverished man, he had only what gold Harry had put into his vault, which made him feel even worse about his situation.

He didn’t deserve Tonks, she didn’t deserve to be hated just for marrying a werewolf, her children deserved better than being ridiculed and bullied because of their Father.
But sometimes, sometimes he wished he could just give in and say yes, that he would stay with her. He would be loyal; he would love her and care for her, even if he couldn’t provide for her. Deep down he wanted children and he wanted a Wife as wonderful as Tonks. He wanted to settle down, but no sooner did he have these thoughts did he push them away in anger. He could never have his dream. It was too dangerous, no matter how much the woman he was coming to love begged him, no matter how much she pleaded and beseeched him to just try, he couldn’t. He couldn’t do it to her and he couldn’t do it to himself. It was hard enough to stay strong now, to keep himself away from his dream, to keep her out of harm’s way. If he agreed to ‘just try’ the relationship then he would never have the strength to walk away from her. He was not that strong.

He looked to the grinning baby photos he had of Harry, of which there were numerous, and he smiled. Harry was as close to a son as he was ever going to get and he cherished the memories and the photographs he had of time spent playing and looking after the adorable little boy.

His biggest regret was his weakness after James’ death. Of his selfishness. How he could have treated Harry so poorly was a disgrace and he spoke to James and Lily, asking for forgiveness every night for his abandonment of their fifteen month old son because deep down, he was a very selfish man.

He had left a broken, bleeding, recently orphaned fifteen month old baby that he had sworn to James and Sirius was like his own son because of his own pain. Harry had just lost both of his parents; Sirius had been arrested and thrown into prison. Harry would have been confused, scared, uprooted from his home and all familiar faces and dumped on a family who had neither loved him nor cared for him.

He could have been the only familiar face Harry had, he could have been Harry’s rock, he had been offered a house in the same neighbourhood as Harry, but he had turned it down and he had selfishly cut all ties and run away, cradling his pain and his hurt to his heart.

Harry had looked so much like James, so very much like his Father. Like the brother that he had lost. He hadn’t even been able to look at a photo of Harry, let alone go and see him in person. He hadn’t wanted to see Harry. The pain was unbelievable, his entire pack destroyed in one night, it had hurt. Harry had reminded him so much of James, had looked just like him in miniature form that he had just packed and left, leaving Harry to rot in a cupboard at a place where the people held absolutely no love for him.

He had regretted his selfish decision for years now, ever since he had decided to cautiously peek in on Harry twelve years later when he had briefly taken the Defence Against the Dark Arts position at Hogwarts. He had kept his distance, he had watched him from afar and he marvelled at the amazing person that Harry had become. He looked less like James and more like Lily as he had grown older. He was such a kind, caring, loving boy that Remus had wept over his selfish, cowardly decision to leave the little baby that boy had been behind. Twelve years he had lost. Twelve years where he could have been with Harry every day of his life, where he could have spared him the pain of his childhood. If Sirius had not been sent to Azkaban, no matter how useless he was with children, Sirius would have taken Harry in without having to think about it, he would have taken Harry in despite his looks and resemblance to James, regardless of his own thoughts and feelings and he would have done his best to care and provide for him for the rest of his life.

But not him, oh no, he had run. He couldn’t take the pain, couldn’t get past his thoughts and feelings on the matter so he had abandoned Harry. His best friends’ son and he had never regretted anything quite so much in his life.

This was his punishment, he penance for abandoning Harry. He was miserable now because Harry had spent fifteen years being miserable growing up with the Dursleys, who he had only just found out had been abusing and neglecting Harry since that very first day that he had been left with them, until the day that he had left their care when he himself had picked him up the day after his birthday a year ago.

The shame he felt for leaving Harry to fend for himself, the horror at finding out that the sweet, kind boy he knew had been beaten, starved and locked in a cupboard and who knew what else every day of his life that he was in that house. It made him sick, it made him weep and it made his revulsion at himself hit a new high. He had done that to Harry, he was to blame. He had abandoned that baby boy and as a consequence Harry had been mistreated when if he had had the strength and guts to stay as any other decent person would have, he would have noticed anything amiss with Harry and put a stop to it before it had really even begun. He was to blame and nothing he would ever do would make up for it.

“Remus?”

Startled Remus looked around and hastily wiped the tears from his eyes and face as Tonks stared at him.

“Why are you crying?” She asked softly, coming over to him and taking note of all the photo albums opened to James, Lily, Sirius and baby Harry.

“Oh.” She exclaimed, giving him an understanding smile. She brushed his tears away, but Remus took hold of her hands gently and pushed them away, hating himself further for the hurt look on her face.

“You caught me at a bad time.” He told her, hoping that she would leave, but a part of him didn’t want her to leave, not truly.

“I haven’t seen you in a few days; I thought I’d pop around to see if you’d given anymore thought to what I asked you.”

“I keep telling you, Tonks. I’m too old for you. Too poor and a werewolf besides.”

“I keep telling you that I don’t care, Remus. I’m an adult woman now, I can make my own decisions and I have made up my mind!” Tonks told him, brushing bubble gum pink hair out of her eyes.

“My mind hasn’t changed.” Remus told her, shoving down the part of him that wanted to take her into his arms, kiss her breathless and never let her go.

“Have you even thought about it?” She asked.

‘Only every single day.’ He thought, but out loud he simply said. “There is nothing to think about, Tonks. The sooner you let it go, the happier you’ll be and then you’ll realise what a mistake you are trying to make.”

Tonks made and angry frustrated noise, her hands making a sharp, chopping motion as her fingers clenched, like she wanted to hit him, or perhaps throttle him, but she did neither as she stepped right into his personal space. For one moment he thought that she was going to punch him square in the face, he would have deserved it, but she seized his head between her hands and yanked his face to her own into a demanding, fierce and violent kiss full of desperation and determination. She was never going to give up and as Remus slid his arms around the back of her slim body, pulling her towards him to crush her body against his, he thought that maybe it actually was a good thing that the Black family were all hard headed, steel willed and stubborn to a fault.

Harry blinked open his eyes and wondered sluggishly what had woken him. He listened and he could hear birds singing and nothing seemed amiss. Except he could only hear four sets of breathing noises.

Harry bolted upright and looked around him frantically, he was in Draco’s arms, Max behind him; Nasta was behind Draco and Blaise on the other side of Nasta. His baby wasn’t here. He couldn’t hear Braiden breathing or crying. His baby was gone.

Harry looked around the room and he didn’t recognise anything, the bright, retina burning sunlight that poured through the sliding glass doors lit everything up in a golden glow and as Harry spotted the ocean through those doors, he remembered. Marianna had Braiden. She had sent them to an island called Guadeloupe for a holiday before they went back for their final year of school.

He breathed in deeply and massaged his chest before getting out of bed. His entire body ached pleasantly and every muscle burnt with strain, but he felt loose and nimble. More relaxed than he had in months.

He cleaned himself off in the sink, dressed and headed to the fireplace in the living room, to the pot of floo powder they had been given by the wizard hotel staff on duty last night; he wanted to visit Braiden to make sure he was alright.

He stopped as something niggled the back of his mind before remember what had happened the last time he had done this. He put the pot of floo powder down before he trekked back into the bedroom.

He kneeled on the bed and touched Nasta’s shoulder, shaking him gently and carefully so he didn’t wake up any of the others.
“Nasta!” He whispered urgently. “Nas!”

Nasta groaned and rolled over, but this had the fortune of waking up Blaise, who blinked sleepy indigo eyes at him.

“What’s the matter, mio amore?” He asked softly as he rolled onto his back and stretched, every bone in his body cracking as Blaise made a sound of happy pleasure, sinking back into the mattress.

“I want to visit Braiden, but thought I’d better tell one of you where I’m going first.”

Blaise nodded and sat up. He stretched again, this time without his bones cracking and he stood up. He leant over the bed and licked Nasta’s ear, who murmured in his sleep. Blaise bit his ear lobe and Nasta’s hazel eyes snapped open and he glared at Blaise over his shoulder.

He rolled onto his back and stretched, much like Blaise had; only he didn’t sit up.

“What’s the matter?” He asked as he spotted them both, his voice gruff and sleepy.

“Harry wants to visit Braiden; he wanted to tell you where he was going. I’ve decided to go with him.”

The proud, happy smile that Nasta gave him made Harry feel tingly and warm. Nasta flicked his head towards the living room.

“Go on then, don’t be too long though, I want these two up, I want us all dressed, fed and showered and I want to see what this place has to offer.”

“Haven’t you ever been to Guadeloupe?” Harry asked curiously, Aneirin had told him that he had taken Nasta to every country in the world at least twice.

“Never Grande-Terre, where we are now. I’ve been to Marie-Galante several times, Basse-Terre once, but Dad’s associates here were never very accommodating of three kids and didn’t like Dad visiting for very long, he was only invited to the very important meetings that never lasted very long, it didn’t leave much time for exploring and I have never see the eastern half of the butterfly island or Les Saintes.”

Nasta sounded so excited that Harry chuckled. “I just want to see how his first night was without me and maybe feed him as I cuddle and cwtch him.”

Nasta chuckled as he heard the Welsh word and beckoned him over. Harry went and was dragged into a passionate kiss as Blaise hurriedly dressed himself.

Harry and Blaise flooed back to Draguignan and found Marianna blowing raspberries on a pudgy belly.

“There you are. I was expecting you an hour ago.” She told them as she handed Braiden over immediately.

Harry cuddled and kissed his contented son, whose blue eyes were now more purple than blue and tracked his face almost obsessively as Harry held his baby up to eyelevel. It was strange having his face studied so intently by such a young baby but Harry smiled widely and hugged the tiny body to himself regardless.

“Was he alright?” Harry asked.

“He was fine, darling. He takes after Blaise. Such a good, quiet baby. He only cried twice, once after you had left until he fell asleep and then at one in the morning for a bottle.”

Harry looked at Marianna. “He cried after I left?”

“He missed you, darling, all babies miss their Mothers. He soon settled down, he’s fine now and slept happy. How was your first night on Guadeloupe?”

“It’s lovely.” Harry replied, accepting the bottle that Marianna passed him and fed Braiden, who latched on immediately and started eating.

“I was hoping for you to come by soon, I didn’t feed him his midmorning bottle because I thought you would like to.”
“He hasn’t gone hungry has he?” Harry asked.

“Of course not, he started wailing for food just before you arrived, I was cheering him up by blowing raspberries on him.”

Harry nodded and fed his little baby, enjoying the weight of him in his arms. Blaise came and stood behind him and wrapped arms around his chest, supporting Braiden as well.

Blaise rested his chin on Harry’s shoulder, watching as Braiden suckled, before turning his head and laying a kiss to Harry’s neck. A camera flashed and Harry looked up to see Marianna smiling, a camera in hand.

“I need to document my son’s happiness.” She explained as they both stared at her. “Speaking of which, I found Blaise’s baby photos for you, Harry darling. You and your lovers can come and look through them when your holiday is over.”

“Mother, no!” Blaise cried.

“You can’t deny your mates the privilege of seeing how cute you were running around the house naked.”

Blaise actually blushed and Harry threw his head back and laughed.

“If it makes you feel better I’ll contact Narcissa, Myron and Aneirin and ask them for a get together to show all of their baby pictures too.”

Harry felt left out that he couldn’t be included in the showing of baby photos as he didn’t have any parents and the people he had been left with hadn’t taken any photos of him ever. The only photos he had with a baby him in them were one with both his parents and one with his Father. There weren’t any more.

He smiled bravely and burped Braiden, happily changing him and dressing him, before Blaise said that it was about time they got back. Harry held Braiden and kissed him, but found it hard to let him go when it came to it.

Marianna took the baby and Blaise led him back to the fireplace and flooed him back to their hotel to find Nasta up, dressed and fed, watching over a grumbling Max who was poking at his breakfast and a half asleep Draco, who was eating a bite every other minute.
“There you are. How is Braiden?” Nasta asked.

“He’s fine. He’s bigger and his eyes are more purple, but he’s fine.” Harry answered, sitting down and digging into his breakfast.

“I don’t see why we have to get up.” Draco grumbled, putting another forkful of food into his mouth and chewing sluggishly.

Max seemed to have woken up a bit over breakfast, but Draco looked half dead and Harry grinned as he finished his food and stretched.

“Harry, you have food on your arm.” Nasta deadpanned.

“Oh.” Harry exclaimed, looking at the food as if he hadn’t smeared it there himself. “I needed a shower anyway; I’m covered in dry sweat. Come on, Draco, a bit of cold water splashed on your face will wake you up.”

Draco let Harry pull him up and followed him into the bathroom, where there was a toilet, a sink, a bath and a shower stall. It was the shower stall that Harry was the most interested in because it had a solid steel bar running across the top of it for the shower curtain and one simple reinforcement spell meant it was perfect for his naughty thoughts.

Harry stripped himself and Draco looked away.

“Don’t you like what you see?” Harry asked, making his voice seem upset.

“You know I do, but I think my cock is broken.”

Harry laughed and he sauntered over to Draco, playing with him and teasing the bared skin just above the waistband of the boxer shorts he was wearing.

Harry cupped Draco through his boxer shorts and he felt that he was already semi-erect. He grinned.

“I don’t think it’s broken, love.” He purred. “I think it just needs some teasing to get it to come out of its shell.”
Draco’s eyes were dark grey by the time that Harry pushed his boxers down his legs and started playing and touching Draco’s bare cock, which was now hard in his hands. Draco was baby soft, uncut and completely smooth and straight.

Harry fell to his knees and took Draco into his mouth, considering the texture and feel of Draco with his tongue and mouth, even as Draco took hold of his hair and hunched over his head, pushing gently and shallowly into his mouth.

Harry tried to take as much of Draco into his mouth as he could, but he gagged and had to pull back. He had no idea how Blaise had done it, or Max or Nasta did it, but he could not seem to deep throat any of his lovers.

Harry stood back up after teasing and playing with Draco in his mouth for a while and he turned to the shower even as Draco growled and tried to grab him to pull him back. Harry chuckled and shook his head at his blond lover, who growled again, this time angrily.

“Would you prefer just a blow job, or do you want the whole dessert?” Harry asked, indicating himself and the shower, which he turned on and stepped into, not closing the curtain and teasing Draco by running his hands all over his wet body, teasing himself and playing with himself until Draco rushed into the shower and snatched him up into his arms, kissing him and squeezing his bum cheeks.

“There’s no lubricant.” Draco pointed out.

“We have shampoo and shower gel, both work just as well.” Harry answered, snatching up Blaise’s shower gel and handing it to the blond, who flipped the top open and squeezed out a handful before chucking the bottle halfway across the bathroom floor.

Draco didn’t bother stretching him, he just slicked himself up and pushed into him and Harry hissed at the bite of pain, but otherwise he encouraged Draco on.

He unwrapped his arms from Draco’s neck and gripped a hold of the shower rail and grinned cheekily at Draco, who cupped his bum and pushed more fluidly into him, hitting him dead on.

“So let go.” Draco ordered as he picked up the pace and started really thrusting into him hard and fast.

Not letting go was the hardest thing that Harry had ever done as his entire body wracked with pleasure and every muscle twitched and tautened and all he wanted to do was let go and claw at Draco with his nails.
His orgasm came quickly and as he screamed his pleasure, the bathroom door burst open and Draco’s orgasm overtook him and he collapsed into the shower, taking Harry and the shower rail with him.

All Harry could hear was running water and Blaise and Max laughing their arses off at them. Nasta gently pulled him out of the shower and handed him to a chuckling Max, who had a towel ready and waiting to wrap him up in while Nasta extracted Draco and the shower rail.

“Seriously, what were you thinking?” Nasta berated them.

“I’m thinking that the reinforcement spell I used needs to be stronger the next time.” Harry answered. “I never let go of it though, Draco.”

Max started laughing again as he towelled Harry’s body dry before his hand stilled on his stomach. All laughter vanished and Harry was up in the air before he could ask what was wrong, Max’s nose and tongue pressed to his abdomen, being licked and sniffed.

Max let out a relieved sigh.

“No sign of damage or injury.” He reported. “The fall never hurt him or the baby.”

“Of course it didn’t, not only did I land on my knees, I landed on Draco.” Harry laughed. He was on too much of a high from everything to even berate Max for sniffing and licking at him without asking first.

“Did you really not get enough action last night?” Max asked. “We’ll have to improve ourselves if we’re going to satisfy our little minx here, lest he start killing us off one by one due to sexual frustration.”

That did get Max a bop to the head, but Max just laughed it off and gave him a kiss, waving his wand to dry his hair and body properly before giving him to Blaise to make sure he got dressed.

“And don’t try having sex on the bedside table! Its spindly legs won’t last a minute.”

“Then why don’t you come and give me one on the bedside table then, you don’t last a minute either!” Harry shouted back and heard Max roaring with laughter from the bathroom.
“Cheeky little fucker!” Max called to him.

“What was that, Max, I didn’t hear you properly, you like fucking my little cheeks?” Harry shouted back.

Blaise let out a surprised burst of laughter and more laughter came from the bathroom as Max came out and started play wrestling with him on the bed, digging gentle fingers into his sides and making his eyes stream with tears as he wiggled and squirmed.

“No! We don’t need this baby having a squirming fetish too!” Harry gasped, giggling as Max stopped tickling him only to lean down and kiss him.

“Nasta says we’re going exploring today. It’s very hot outside so I’m going to cover you in sun cream.”

“Your cum doesn’t count as sun cream mind.” Harry told him.

Max chuckled and snatched up a big bottle of factor fifty sun cream, squirting it onto his hands, rubbing them together before plastering Harry’s naked body with it.

“I’m sure every inch doesn’t need to be covered!” Harry whined as Max had flipped him over after finishing his front and his hands went from his back, over his hips and to his bum cheeks. “When is my bum going to be bared to the sun?”

“You never know.” Max growled in arousal.

Harry tutted and kicked his legs back and forth.

“Are you done yet?” He asked as Max made sure every individual toe was coated.

Nasta dragged Max off and started coating the larger man’s body with the cream, quickly and efficiently, making sure all major areas were covered before shoving him towards his suitcase to get dressed.
Nasta took the excess cream off of Harry and helped him dress in a pair of shorts and a tee-shirt, before he finally covered himself and dressed.

“Are we all ready?” He asked.

“Yep!” Harry answered, not even batting an eyelash as Nasta’s hand curled around his own as they left their little villa and started making their way out of the hotel.

Harry laughed as he was chased onto the white sand of the beach. The sun was just setting and he had had an amazing day exploring Grande-Terre with his lovers. There was so much to see, so many things to do, he had learnt a bit of French, he had witnessed Blaise going into a screaming match in French with a market seller and he had walked down roads and across beaches hand in hand with one of his mates.

Now the day was coming to a close and they were on the private beach of the hotel and it was empty.

“Stop running, Harry!” Max shouted at him.

“I’m fine you spoil sport!” Harry called back as he and Blaise ran side by side, laughing.

Blaise seized him around the waist and pulled him down onto the sand, making sure he landed on his body before rolling around the hot, sun baked, sand laughing.

The others joined them and fell about laughing, even Draco, who after repeating numerous times throughout the day that Malfoys didn’t act like fools Harry had gotten fed up and tipped a bucket of crabs down his back. Draco had chased him for half a mile before Nasta had scooped him up and held him out of harm’s way. Draco had loosened up after that and after Max had pointed out that no one was around to notice a Malfoy acting like a fool in the first place.

Harry made several sandcastles with the bucket and spade that Nasta had gifted to him when they visited Grande Anse and he had called it Castle Dracken, which made his mates laugh even as Max dug him a ‘moat’ around Castle Dracken and Harry made a high tower that was called Braiden’s Bridge.

Harry had loved Grande Anse beach, he had even seen a sea turtle and he had followed it as it made its way to the ocean.

They stayed on the beach watching the sun set down below the horizon and afterwards Nasta carried him back to the hotel because Harry was knackered from his day in the sun. They ate at the hotel restaurant, but Harry waved away the dessert menu, telling the others they could eat more if they wanted, but he was full.

They waved away dessert too and Harry was carried through the ‘jungle’ and up to their villa where Nasta stripped him and tucked him into bed. Harry was asleep as soon as his head touched his pillow.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

On the second day they visited Maison du Cacao in Basse-Terre for five euros each and it was amazing to walk around the gardens of cacao trees, learning about how cocoa was produced, seeing the green, orange and pink fruits growing from the very top to the bottom of the trees. Having a demonstration of how the ripe fruits were cut from the tree trunks with an axe, being shown how the seeds were fermented under the hot sun to the making of cocoa paste. They were even given a taste, though Harry didn’t need Nasta to wave away the staff when they tried to give him ‘liqueur au chocolat’ as he would have done so himself. He did enjoy the hot chocolate drink though.

Most of their second day though was taken up by the promised visit to Aquarium de la Guadeloupe, which was amazing. Their tour guide was a helpful, friendly man who was almost as indulgent towards him as his own mates as he looked at everything and put his hand into every open tank. They happily visited the mangroves and coral reef and even went snorkelling in the lagoon, which Harry had been sure that he would have been left out of, but Nasta, after looking a tad apprehensive, had agreed to let him try it.

They spent eight hours in the aquarium and with all of the equipment they needed supplied and the exceptional knowledge the staff showed, they hardly wanted to leave, but they were hungry when they came back to Sainte-Anne and Nasta hustled them all into the nearest restaurant and ordered them a filling meal before they headed back to their hotel.

The third day Harry wanted to go swimming, so they stayed by the hotel swimming pool, Max teaching Harry how to swim as Draco and Blaise messed about near Nasta, who was swimming fast, perfect laps of the pool.

“I can’t do it!” Harry complained as he tried to do as Max showed him whilst watching Nasta’s slick body carve through the water like a fish.

“Stop looking at Nasta’s gorgeous body and concentrate, if you want to swim then do as I tell you.”

“I can’t!”

“Nas! Stop distracting Harry, he’s getting hot and bothered and he’ll drown!”
Nasta finished his lap and stopped, coming up for air and grinning. “Maybe you should take him out of the pool then before he has an accident.”

“I don’t want to leave!” Harry pouted as he did an awkward, very hilarious version of a doggy paddle over to Nasta.

“How did you swim in the Triwizard tournament?” Blaise asked curiously. “You had to go into the lake for the second task.”

“I got given Snape’s stolen Gillyweed and my hands and feet went webbed. I could just scoop the water and move really quickly.”

“Keep your fingers together then.” Nasta encouraged. “It won’t be as big a scoop as when you were under the effects of Gillyweed and you won’t be as fast, but it’ll work.”

Harry kissed Nasta and he did as he was told, but it was slow going as he didn’t use his legs properly to move himself.

Later that night Harry was sat on their bed bouncing up and down, reminiscing all about the things they had done so far. Max placed a hand over his mouth and kissed him.

“Quiet down, we know what happened, we were there. Now shush or I’m going to plug up your mouth.”

Harry chuckled. “Are you going to take advantage of me because Blaise and Draco are showering whilst Nasta bathes?”

Max grinned wickedly and turned over onto his hands and knees and pinned him on either side, leaning down to kiss him.

“I don’t think I’m up for sex, I’m too tired after today and the swimming lessons, but there was something I wanted to try before we left, something that I’ve been thinking about and wondering about for a while now.” Harry said curiously.

“What’s that, love?” Max asked, his voice deepening, his own curiosity piqued.
“Stand up for me.”

Max looked puzzled, but he did as he was asked and Harry crawled to him, undoing his shorts and pushing them and Max’s boxer-briefs, which were a lovely shade of sunshine yellow, down to the floor. Harry played and kissed Max, listening to his growls as he grew hard in his hands.

“Okay, now stay still.” Harry ordered as he took all of the pillows from the head of the bed and set them up in front of Max.

“What are you doing?” Max asked as he stroked himself, watching Harry make a set of stairs with the pillows, starting off with one, then two and finally three resting right up against his body.

Harry settled his bum on the one pillow, eased himself back over the two and let his head and shoulders rest on the pile of three. Max grinned as he saw that Harry’s mouth was now in almost perfect alignment with his hard shaft and he pressed the head of himself against Harry’s mouth.

Harry arched his head back and opened his mouth, letting Max push himself into his mouth. Max took one of Harry’s hands and pressed it against his bare thigh.

“Pinch me if I go too far or if it hurts, love and I’ll pull out.” He assured Harry, who clutched at Max’s thick thigh with a small hand that couldn’t even fit halfway around that thick, solid thigh.

Max pushed slowly and carefully into his mouth, pulling back out to let Harry take in a breath before pressing back in. He got a bit faster when Harry’s saliva covered him and made his passage smoother, when he reached the back of Harry’s throat a shiver went down his back. He had never thought he’d get to do this with Harry, who gagged when any more than the head of a cock was pressed into his mouth.

Harry hummed around him in a short burst and Max clenched his body to stop himself from reflexively thrusting his hips into that wet and warm mouth.

Max put his hands gently on either side of Harry’s face and tilted it further so that his cock went into Harry’s mouth, run over his tongue and straight down his throat, it was an amazing feeling, being so far down that little throat and he moved himself faster and just a bit harder as he moaned happily. Harry panicked and Max was about to pull out when Harry sucked in a deep breath through his nose and calmed himself.

Max kept his thrusts long, but short, not remaining in Harry’s throat for longer than a few seconds at a time and as Harry experimented with humming, swallowing, constricting his throat muscles around him and sending pleasurable vibrations down his shaft, Max lost his control and shoved down Harry’s throat hard as he let go and released his pleasure down Harry’s throat.
“That was a good scene to walk in on.” Draco commented as he walked around the bed to get to his suitcase of clothes.

Harry swallowed obscenely and looked at Blaise who was in the doorway just staring open mouthed and Nasta who shook his head and brushed past Blaise to get his own pyjama bottoms.

“I wanted to try it.” Harry rasped, his throat red raw.

Nasta kissed him and laid him back against the bed, dismantling his pillow stairs to place them back at the head of the bed and crawled in to cuddle around him. Draco cuddled his other side, Blaise crawled in behind Draco and Max fell onto the bed beside Blaise, sated and happy. They all fell asleep quickly and happily.

The fourth and final day in Guadeloupe was spent exploring. Nasta got them onto a ferry and took them over to Les Saintes and after looking around and buying various little trinkets, they got onto another ferry to go to Terre-de-Haut where they ate lunch at a place called Café de la Marine. Everything was so beautiful, the sky was blue and cloudless, the sea was a deep blue and transparent when up close, the sand was white and hot and everything was so amazing that Harry hardly wanted to leave.

They travelled back to Basse-Terre where they made a trip around the botanical garden named Jardin d’Eau and from there they went to Parc des Mamelles and Harry really didn’t want to leave as they explored all the different animals, crossing bridges that went from tree to tree and over ponds and rivers.

Nasta snapped photos with the camera that had been present throughout their trip and Harry grinned happily and posed for every photo that Nasta took, or he at least posed for the ones that he knew Nasta took, there were some where Harry had been so engrossed in what he was doing or looking at the animals that he didn’t notice the sly photo being taken now and then.

They finished off the day with a tour around the sugar cane factory in Port Louis, in north Grande-Terre which took two hours. Learning how the sugar was grown and its history was so interesting as they walked through the media rooms dedicated to the sugar cane, before going out and exploring the fields, but the highlight for Harry was most definitely taking a trip on the old sugar cane railway.

Harry was sleepy and happy when Nasta led them back to the hotel for dinner and then to bed. They hadn’t stepped foot in the onsite spa, which made Harry grin, his mates were obviously not taking any chances with the steam room.

They all went to bed early and Harry was glad to have had a chance for a holiday, but he couldn’t wait until he was home again with Braiden.
Harry woke up and stretched, it was still early, the sun had yet to come up and he grinned to himself as he noticed that he had had a pretty damn good dream last night.

His mates were all sleeping soundly and they probably had an hour or so before breakfast was served and they had to leave the hotel, but until then, Harry decided that one last romp in the bed before they left was a very good idea.

Harry took hold of himself and stroked softly, even as he dug the heels of his feet into the mattress and let out a soft sound.

When he was fully hard and aching, he crawled carefully over to Nasta and tipped him onto his back. He sucked on Nasta’s flaccid cock until it started hardening in his mouth. He enjoyed the feel of Nasta in his mouth, the soft skin and the warmth of it. He was so glad that Nasta hadn’t dressed last night before going to bed.

Harry continued licking and sucking softly, running teasing butterfly touches over Nasta’s balls and inside thighs, teasing the soft, dark hairs that grew there.

Nasta murmured in his sleep and his head went from looking at Max, to nuzzling Blaise’s cheek on the other side of his body. Harry smiled around his mouthful and slipped down a bit further, trying not to wake Nasta just yet, but it was difficult as Nasta was not the heaviest of sleepers, already his eyes were moving rapidly under his eyelids as he started the process of waking up.

Harry popped himself off of Nasta and savoured the taste of Nasta’s precum on his tongue. He picked up the bottle of lubricant that was now almost empty after the past couple of days where they had been free to fuck as much as they liked and he squeezed a blob onto his palm, rubbed them together and slicked Nasta up. He used the excess on his fingers to open himself up and he almost cried out in pleasure as he sunk onto two of his own fingers, shivering at the feeling of his own fingers being inside his body.

He didn’t waste too much time stretching himself and he soon pulled his fingers out and crawled over Nasta’s body.

Harry pressed the head of Nasta to his stretched entrance and he applied minimal pressure. Nasta still made a soft noise, which Max echoed. They were speaking to one another in their sleep and Harry wondered what they were saying as he bent further over Nasta and kissed his lips. Those eyes blinked without opening and Harry knew that Nasta was almost awake and that he was likely consciously aware of his surroundings. He rumbled in his chest and Max let out a sleepy grunt.

Harry pressed himself more firmly on Nasta and kissed him again, this time pushing his tongue into a sleep slack mouth.

Hazel eyes blinked open slowly and took in Harry’s laughing emerald eyes from inches away and Nasta groaned, still not fully aware of the position of his body, or Harry’s.

“Time’s it, love?” He asked gruffly.
“I don’t know, a little after six?”

Nasta made a noise and tried to push Harry to the side. “Go back to sleep, love.”

“Sleep is the last thing on my mind.” Harry answered.

Nasta opened his eyes again and it was only then that he seemed to realise what was happening and he fully understand his and Harry’s position and that he was hard and Harry was hard, but he seemed to skip over the fact that Harry was almost being penetrated by him.

“You wanted some fun while all the others are sleeping and you’ve singled me out, why?”

“If you don’t want me then I’ll just leave.” Harry pouted and made to move but Nasta put a hand behind his neck and pulled his head down into a kiss.

“I didn’t mean that. Draco and Blaise were both closer to you, why did you come to me?”

“To thank you in a very special way for letting me have this little holiday.” Harry answered honestly.

Nasta looked stunned and Harry took advantage of his surprise and he dropped down onto him completely.

“Holy FUCK!” He shouted and Harry felt so much accomplishment at making the usually quiet and reserved man shout so loudly.

Max darted awake, Draco bolted upright and knocked a suddenly alert Blaise to the floor, but Harry ignored the others as he concentrated on his breathing and on moving up and down on Nasta, who had thrown his head back and screwed his eyes closed as it felt like he was being crushed and compressed to fit inside of Harry’s body.

Harry eased up and sunk back down, his back ram rod straight as he moved his body in a soft, rocking, thrusting motion that had Nasta’s breath hitching and his toes digging into the mattress, his hands gripping Harry’s knees tightly.
“How come I don’t get to wake up like that?” Max pouted through lust blown eyes, his hand in his lap stroking himself slowly.

Harry didn’t answer; all of his focus was on Nasta, who threw his head back when Harry purposefully clenched his inside muscles around him.

Harry ached already, but it was difficult to tell if it was a good ache or a bad ache when he was feeling so much pleasure.

Nasta recovered really well and he started thrusting his own hips into Harry, gripping his thighs tightly, his stomach crunching up as he moved.

Harry’s head fell backwards and Max seized his head, pushing a tongue into his mouth and trying to suffocate him with it as Harry continued to rise and fall on Nasta.

Draco crawled behind him and pressed against Harry’s already full entrance and Harry grumbled deeply in his throat as Draco pushed into his body alongside Nasta.

Max cursed and kissed Draco as desperately as he had Harry, their tongues fighting just behind Harry’s ear and it made him move faster, more enflamed as Blaise crawled onto Nasta’s chest and started kissing him, their own tongues battling and fighting as Nasta and Draco worked together to bring him pleasure.

When Draco hissed, Harry looked over his shoulder to see Max behind him, pushing into him and he groaned, turning back to face Nasta and Blaise, who had turned around to attack Nasta’s mouth.

Harry took a hand off of his own leg and pushed Blaise off of his knees and onto his stomach, belly to belly with Nasta, before tugging his hips until his hard cock brushed between those cheeks. Blaise groaned loudly and bit at Nasta’s lips as Harry spat on his hand, slicked himself up and pushed into Blaise as slowly as he could while he was still bouncing on Nasta, Draco still thrusting into him hard.

All of them moved together or against one another to give and receive pleasure. The smell of sweat and cum soon filled their room along with the light from the sun and the sounds of gasps, groans curses and moans.

Harry mewled when Max gave a particularly vicious thrust that threw Draco into him and him into Blaise, who grunted and shoved himself back onto Harry, who sat down hard on Nasta who snarled and gave a brutal upward thrust, making Harry clench him and Draco tightly and sending Draco reeling back onto Max, who started the circle back off again by slamming into Draco hard.

Harry quivered as the red hot pool in his belly spread out to his entire body, making him spasm and clench every muscle he could control as his orgasm washed over him in a flood of heat, pleasure and a continuous long scream.

Draco went next and Nasta shortly after, which made Harry mewl as his insides were coated by their release. Harry screamed again when Blaise clenched tightly around his softening cock as he orgasmed and Max let out a choked snarl as Draco’s arms tightened around Harry’s waist as Max’s orgasm took over him.

They all fell into a pile and stayed there, breathing deeply and taking comfort from one another’s bodies as they calmed down and enjoyed the feeling of being completely relaxed and pleasured.
“What did we just do?” Draco moaned.

“Celebrated our last time in this bed before we go home.” Harry answered. “We had to go out with a bang.”

“I’m going out with a banging headache.” Blaise complained.

“I have a potion in my suitcase for that, love.” Max said from the foot of the bed, one large arm thrown over his eyes.

“I’m starving now.” Draco told them.

“Me too.” Harry answered. “I don’t think I’ll make it down to the restaurant though.”

“I feel revived and invigorated.” Nasta told them, proving it by standing up and stretching, Blaise’s release clinging to the top of his light six pack, Harry’s on his abdomen where it had slipped out of Blaise and his own and Draco’s release making his soft length glisten.

“You look sexed up.” Harry giggled.

“And whose fault is that?” He asked, raising a sexy eyebrow at him.

Harry laughed and rolled himself up, groaning as his own weight was put on his bum. Nasta chuckled deeply and scooped up him and Blaise too and he carried them both to the bathroom.

“Bring Draco, Max. We need to get them cleaned up before we leave.”

Max groaned but dutifully scooped up an angry Draco and carried him kicking and complaining into the bathroom.

“Stop that.” Nasta ordered Draco as he turned on the shower and stepped under with Harry and Draco stopped reluctantly, but Max did put him down on his own two feet. Blaise too went onto his own two feet, but Harry was content to let Nasta wash and pamper him for a bit.

They made sure everything of theirs was packed and even some things that weren’t as Harry robbed all the little hotel shampoos, soaps, and a flannel with the hotel name printed in the corner for keepsakes.

Nasta and Max carried the suitcases down into the main part of the hotel and left them behind the desk as they went to have breakfast. They went down to the hotel’s private beach after breakfast for the last time and Harry quickly collected another bag of seashells for his already large collection and some pretty pebbles and even a few fossils.

“Don’t you have enough of those?” Draco asked as Harry dug up another shell.

“No, I’ve never been on a beach before we came on this holiday, I love it! We’ll have to go to the beach with the kids when they’re older whether I’m pregnant or not. I love it! The sea, the sand, the shells, the sandcastles, the fun and the sun! I just love it.”

Max scooped him up and kissed him. “We love you, Harry and we’re happy to have given you this experience, even if it should never have been your first time on a beach.”

“Of course we’ll take the kids to the beach.” Nasta told him. “I swear it.”

Harry smiled wonderfully at him and Nasta felt his breath catch as Harry actually glowed with utter happiness. He was almost sad to rip Harry away from this place, but their Portkey would be leaving soon and no matter how much fun and excitement they had had on this holiday, it would be nice to go home and to see Braiden again, he had actually missed waking up in the night with the little boy, the night feeds had become their bonding time and he really had missed it.

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Harry took hold of Braiden and hugged him tightly. He had missed his baby so very, very much. Everyone was there to welcome them home. Marianna had invited them all to her home because she knew that that is where they would come first, because Braiden was here.

Myron, Richard and Ashleigh were hugging Max, Alayla and Talia were grinning as Max blushed. Aneirin had taken Nasta into another room as soon as they had arrived home, leaving Sanex to run wild with Caesar. Narcissa was kissing Draco’s cheek and remarking on his good health and how the sun had done him good and Harry smiled as he held Braiden, wishing deep down that he had a parent to welcome him home from his holiday and ask him how it had been.

A hand landed on his shoulder and Harry turned to see Remus smiling down at him. Harry turned with a grin and hugged him with all his might. Remus may not have been a parent, but he was the closest thing that he had to a family member that he had had when he was a baby.

“You look amazing.” Harry told the man and he really did. His skin and hair looked healthier, he looked happier, he had fewer lines and wrinkles on his face and his robes were nice. Not expensive or lavish, but nice.

Remus smiled and Harry saw the playful man that used to run around on the full moons with three illegal animagus’.

“I’ve been feeling better lately and I’ve been happier.” Remus answered.

“Is there a reason for this?” Harry prodded as he shifted Braiden up onto his shoulder and sat down on the settee.

Remus followed suit and sat down with him, he looked as nervous as Harry had ever seen him.

“I have started seeing someone.” Remus explained carefully, avoiding looking at Harry.

“Really? That’s wonderful! Do I know them?”

“I…yes, you do.”

“I do? It’s not Professor McGonagall is it?” Harry demanded.

“What?” Remus asked with a horrified laugh. “No! No, it’s…well it’s Tonks.”

“Really? Well she seems like a nice enough woman and if you’re happy that’s all that matters, where is she? Why didn’t you bring her?”
“She’s in work today, Harry.”

Harry grinned at the goofy look on Remus’s face.

“You really do love her don’t you? When are you going to get married? I expect an invite for me and the guys.”

“Married? Harry we’ve only just begun a relationship.” Remus said flabbergasted.

“Alright, but remember that anything could happen and it’s always a good thing to marry the woman you love before she gets pregnant, otherwise she’ll just think you’re marrying her for the baby.” Harry replied as he laid his own baby across his lap and tickled his belly.

“What baby? Harry, I’m not sure what you know of relationships, but most do not end up with babies.”

“Really?” Harry asked, pulling a confused face. “Mine did.”

“Well Braiden was a stroke of luck due to your creature inheritance.” Remus said as he took a tiny, baby hand between his fingers. “The book Nasta gave me explained that you wouldn’t get pregnant again right away.”

Harry pulled a face. “Remus, I’m pregnant again. Nine days along.”

Remus looked for a moment like he would faint.

“How?”

“I didn’t so much go onto a heat as my body became heated enough through outside factors to conceive and I did.”

Remus pulled Harry into a hug and held him close.
“It’ll be alright, you’ll be fine.” The werewolf soothed.

“I know. I just didn’t want to be pregnant quite this quickly. I am going to make sure that this baby is the last for a while.”

“Oh, you know it’s only the one then?” Remus asked.

“What do you mean?” Harry frowned.

“Harry, Dracken pregnancies are typically multiple babies. Only the first pregnancy is usually one baby.”

“Kimberly had several single births before…”

“It doesn’t matter; Kimberly is from a whole different generation. She is decades older than you are and the strain of the times and conflict that she was living through would have messed with her breeding and fertility. You on the other hand are a young, virile young man living in a time of peace, there is every chance you are carrying multiple children.”

Harry mouthed wordlessly for a bit before he stood up and strode over to Max, he stood right in front of him and glared up at him.

“What did I do?” He asked as he cowered away from that poisonous glare of his little submissive.

“Why didn’t you tell me?” Harry demanded.

“Tell you what, love? Whatever Caesar has said then it is likely a lie.”

“Why didn’t you tell me that this baby I’m carrying is likely more than one baby?!” Harry snapped.

“It might not be.” Ashleigh told him. “The circumstances under which the baby was conceived might mean that the usual Dracken breeding statistics don’t apply, Harry love.”

“Is there any way to find out?” Harry asked.

“Not before your first scan.”

“Why can’t I have my first scan now?”

“Because you won’t be able to see anything.” Myron told him patiently. “The scan won’t pick up anything visible until the baby, or babies, have had a chance to grow.”

“If I am carrying more than one baby then you and the rest can look out!” Harry threatened and stomped off with Braiden.

“I think now is time for some light hearted relief.” Marianna exclaimed. “Remus, be a dear and go and fetch Harry back. Myron, go and find out what Aneirin is doing to his poor son, I’ll fetch us some tea and then the fun can begin.”

Harry sulkily sat on an equally sulky Nasta, who had had both his ears chewed off by his Dad for not taking care of his submissive properly, though Aneirin had been a bit lenient because Harry had gotten a holiday after all.

“Right, you have been home for an hour and already your faces look like you have been hit with a soggy loaf of bread. Drink your tea and let us make you feel better…by embarrassing the hair from your heads.”

Marianna picked up a delicately embossed photo album that had Blaise Mariano Zabini scripted on it in elegant cursive along with Blaise’s birth date; the twelfth of October nineteen-seventy-nine.

“Mother, please no!” Blaise begged as he stood up so quickly his tea cup shattered.

“This is Blaise’s baby book; he was such a cute baby.”
Marianna opened the book to show a baby that was at least three days old, lying on his stomach wearing just a nappy.

Blaise started speaking in rapid French and Nasta started laughing as Marianna giggled at her son, but she obviously ignored him and what Harry suspected were threats as she turned the page.

“Aww, Blaise, you were so cute.” Harry cooed. “You look so much like Braiden.”

Max pulled Blaise down and made him sit through the entire baby book and the three photo albums after that that went through his childhood and all the way up to this summer. Blaise shoved his face into his hands at the naked pictures of his baby self, the bath time photos, the grins with the missing baby teeth and the picture where he was cuddling a stuffed toy when he was twelve.

Marianna took out a single photo from behind her back and Blaise went pale.

It turned out to be a picture of a six year old Blaise wrapped around a five year old Draco as they slept on a rug in front of a fire place.

Draco went pink and Blaise went red when Harry cooed over the photo and thanked Marianna.

“Now that Marianna has finished, we can move onto Max.” Myron said with a smirk that was so evil that Harry cackled and he went to sit on his lap so that he could see the photo album better.

“Wait, wait wait, is this what all this is about? You’re going to show off all of our baby pictures?” Nasta asked his face whiter than paper.

“Of course. It’s every parent’s right to embarrass their children with photos.” Narcissa said with a dainty laugh.

“You too, Mother?” Draco asked, his already pale face going grey.

“Of course, Draco darling, you were the cutest, most handsome baby I’d ever seen, I want to show
They sat through Max’s huge baby book, all the way to his adult years, from tiny six pound baby to eighteen stone man. Then they went onto Draco’s baby book, seeing the very cute, pink ball with blond fluff for hair to the pouty child and the angular teenager and finally the man he had become.

Aneirin delighted in showing Nasta’s baby photos, from the miniscule three pound baby, the very happy and healthy child with the huge grin, there was a very cute picture of Nasta between his two older siblings, standing head and shoulders shorter than Sanex and coming to his sister’s elbow and another one where Aneirin was carrying Nasta on his shoulders, little legs in a pair of shorts and a tee-shirt that was in a foreign language which Nasta told them was Polish. Harry had never seen any of them blush so much and he delighted in laughing at them from his place still sat on Myron’s lap.

“Alright, Harry, you’re next. You’ve spent all day laughing up us, now it’s your turn.” Max stated.

“You’ll have to go without then, I don’t have any baby pictures of myself.” Harry answered sadly.

“Did those people not take even one photograph of you?” Ashleigh asked in surprise.

Harry shook his head. “No, they made me stand out of the shot and then, when I was older I was the one taking the pictures.”

Myron hugged him tightly and kissed his forehead.

“I’ve got two pictures.” Harry admitted as he stood up and went to his suitcase. He dug out the photo album from where it was wrapped in his invisibility cloak.

“You took your cloak and photo album on holiday?” Nasta questioned.

“I take them everywhere I go.” Harry replied as he opened the book, skipped over the pictures of his parents and Sirius and Remus and showed them the two pages, on one side a picture of a smiling Lily and James holding a baby Harry between them and on the other side a picture of James holding a grinning toddler.

“Oh Harry, you were beautiful.” Ashleigh sighed. “You can really tell you’re a submissive Dracken.”
“Really, how?”

“The eyes.” Richard answered, pointing out how large and alien Harry’s eyes looked in his head.

“Can I tell with Braiden?” Harry asked.

“Are you saying Braiden’s a Dracken, Harry?” Myron asked him perceptively.

Harry grinned and he looked to his adorable little son. He felt it was a bit too early to tell them that he had birthed a Dracken, but it didn’t matter too much.

“Yes he is. I smelt it on him as soon as he was born.”

Ashleigh squealed excitedly and grabbed Braiden’s little hands and shook them gently as his mates looked on proudly. Blaise more so than the rest as Braiden was his biological son.

“Back to the question, can I tell if he’ll be dominant or submissive?”

“You can hardly ever tell using the eyes alone.” Myron answered giving his two mates a reprimanding stare. “It’s so difficult to tell, you’d be better off treating all of them the same, boys and girls, as one of my sisters thought that she was going to be a submissive just because she was a girl and she turned out to be a dominant. We thought for years that Caesar would be a submissive and he turned out as a dominant. You can never truly know until their inheritance, you can only make educated guesses and even then they could be wrong.”

“You what?” Caesar demanded.

“We all thought that you were a submissive Dracken, Caesar.” Max chuckled before turning to his parents. “You used to tell me to treat him like the girls, because he was delicate and easily hurt.”

“Caesar had wide eyes too, not as wide as yours though and he was so slim and slender, very androgynous, I had hoped that he was a submissive.”
“Please stop talking.” Caesar begged, covering his burning face.

“He shot up days before his sixteenth birthday and gained a lot of weight in a short amount of time. We still thought that he might be a submissive, but when he woke up on his sixteenth birthday, he was the man you see before you, only less of a man and more of a boy, but he was a dominant like Max.”

“This is where I come in.” Remus said with a grin. “You might not have any baby photos of yourself Harry, but I do.”

Remus pulled out a bright blue photo album that had a picture of Lily and James on the front of it.

“James thought it would be fitting to put a picture of himself and Lily on the front rather than a picture of you.” Remus explained as Harry carried Braiden over to sit on his lap to see photos he had never seen before.

There was of course the mandatory bath photo, only baby Harry was covered in so many bubbles it was hard to see him.

“That was Sirius’ fault. He preferred showers so he didn’t realise that you only needed one capful of bubble bath. He poured in half a bottle before he started seeing bubbles and he finally stopped pouring, you of course found it hilarious.” Remus said as he pointed out Harry’s wide grin. “You had such an infectious laugh.”

Harry giggled and he turned the page.

“Now this was a cute picture.” Remus said as he showed everyone a year old Harry wearing a pair of lopsided sunglasses that were far too big for his face. “Those were your Mother’s favourite sunglasses, of course you loved them and she let you have them, you broke them the day after this photo was taken by snapping out the lenses.”

Harry laughed and he even stroked the photos with his parents in them with such a wistful, longing look on his face that it brought lumps to everyone else’s throats.

The required naked photo of Harry even made him laugh as he was in the back garden of his parents’ home, in the pouring rain, covered in an inch of mud and muck. The only parts of him not covered in mud were his eyes and nose, one elbow and half a peachy, pert bum cheek.

“You can keep these, Harry.” Remus told him as they finished the book and it was closed.

“But they’re yours.” Harry answered.

“And I’m giving them to you. I have my memories, Harry. I remember all of these situations and the long days I spent with you and your parents, you don’t have that, you don’t have those memories as I do, so you can have the photos, you need them more.”

Harry hugged Remus tightly and he didn’t let go, whispering a soft ‘thank you’ into Remus’ ear.

“Now that we have thoroughly embarrassed you, how was your holiday? I was so excited when Marianna told me what she’d done; I wish I had thought of it! What did you see, what did you do?” Ashleigh asked.

“Oh it was wonderful!” Harry said enthusiastically. “We took loads of photos; I saw an iguana and a sea turtle and I went to a beach! An actual beach!”

“You’ve never been to a beach before?” Sanex asked astonished.

“I have now, I’ve been to three beaches and I picked up so many little shells! Nasta says they’re from dead molluscs and crustaceans, but they looked so pretty!”

Harry recounted everything they had done and seen, talking so happily and quickly that it made them all smile as Harry told of the wildlife parks, the botanical gardens and the aquarium.

“And Nasta even let me go snorkelling when the boat with the window in the bottom stopped! We saw so many little fishes and Max said he saw a shark, but I don’t think he did because no one else saw it.”

“I did so see a shark!” Max pouted.
“It sounds like you had an amazing time.” Marianna told them. “Braiden and I were fine, though I had forgotten how taxing a young baby could be. Do you boys feel better?”

“Much better.” Harry replied. “I think I even got a tan! Despite Nasta’s orders that all of us wear factor fifty sun cream all day every day.”

“Nasta only made you do that because I forgot to cover him when he was eight and he got the worst sunburn I have ever seen.” Sanex replied. “His skin was peeling for weeks. And he was red raw and he was in constant pain. I got a beating for that.”

“You did not get a beating.” Aneirin denied. “I just clipped you around the ear.”

“And then spanked me so hard I couldn’t sit down.” Sanex pouted.

“You could have caused Nasta to get skin cancer!” Aneirin growled. “Your baby brother!”

“He’s not a baby anymore.” Sanex said.

“I’m fine.” Nasta stressed. “I got one skin mole and that was the end of it.”

“Is that where it came from?” Harry asked. “I love that little mole.”

“You mean you love running your tongue around it.” Max chuckled. “Makes me wish I had one for you to play with.”

“Maximilius!” Myron berated. “There are women and children present, including your own Mother and your own child!”

Max looked abashed but he was grinning still and Harry chuckled.

“I can’t believe you went four days without cooking, or did you sneak a camp stove into your luggage again?” Talia asked her brother.
“The food was really nice.” Max told her.

“Not as nice as Max’s, but it was nice.” Harry explained further.

“Aww, he really loves you, Max.” Caesar cooed.

Harry chuckled and happily fed Braiden when he woke up, wailing for his dinner. They said goodbye not long after that and flooed home for the first time in days and just the smell of Max’s home made him sag in relief and it made him so glad to be home.

They all left their suitcases by the fireplace and went into the kitchen; where Max threw open all of the windows and the back door before making them all a cup of tea.

“It’s good to be home.” Harry said with a smile as he sipped on his honey tea.

“You see this place as home?” Max asked a happy, hopeful glint in his eyes.

Harry nodded and he swallowed a mouthful of tea. “I gave birth here, this is home to me. Though we might have to upgrade in a few years when we get more kids as you only have two spare bedrooms, though that won’t be for a long, long time yet. Just let me enjoy the babies I have before giving me anymore, okay?” He asked.

Max came and kissed him deeply and Harry made a small noise in his throat. Things got heavy and passionate and then Braiden started sniffling and squirming in discomfort as he started emitting a very bad smell.

Harry laughed as Max backed away. “It’s good to be home.” He repeated as he took Braiden to the changing mat they kept at the end of the kitchen to change his son’s dirty nappy.

Max started on making them a late dinner and he was so infectiously happy to be back in his own kitchen in front of his oven that it made the rest of them happy.

Harry changed Braiden and happily handed him off to Blaise, who silently asked for the baby by holding out his arms. Harry went and sat on Nasta after disposing of the soiled nappy, Nasta who then wrapped his strong arms around him and kissed the back of his neck.
“We should get to bed early tonight, perhaps with the aid of a very light sleeping potion, just enough so that we can sleep, but not enough to keep us sleeping through Braiden’s cries. We should go to Diagon Alley tomorrow to pick up your school things before it’s too late, you only have a few days left before you need to leave.”

Harry nodded and as he was served a plate of food, the conversation turned to their school schedule and child minding duties. After dinner and all of the dishes had been washed and put away he readily agreed to take a sip of the light sleeping potion to make him drowsy enough to fall asleep and he cuddled up with his mates, in their own bed and snuggled in until he fell asleep a little while later, dreading when Braiden would wake them up crying, he had become accustomed to sleeping in and his body was not going to welcome the screaming baby in his ear again and though he was looking forward to going back to Hogwarts again, he realised with a grin that he wasn’t looking forward to it as much as he had in the past as he hadn’t even made his count down chart that summer.

Chapter Forty-Nine – Castle Calm

Harry yawned as he was rocked back and forth by the scarlet steam train, the Hogwarts Express. Braiden was strapped to Max’s chest in the baby carrier and it looked so hilarious but so sickeningly adorable at the same time and it was hilarious to see the amount of women, Muggle and magical alike, who had cooed at Max as he walked through the station with Braiden strapped to his chest, a huge hand adding extra protection to the back of a three week old Braiden’s head.

Harry couldn’t believe his baby was almost a month old already, he had no idea where the time had gone and as he lolled around the train compartment, listening to his mates talking and conversing with one another, he smiled and closed his eyes again, pillowing his head on Draco’s lap.

Draco’s hand rested on his shoulder and rubbed gently, one thumb stroking him. Harry was in a relaxed, happy state of mind, right up until the compartment door burst open. Nasta was on his feet standing in front of all of them before Harry could even get his body into a seated position.

Nasta collapsed back into his seat right beside the door with a groan and revealed a startled Hermione, who had her usual summer tan and her usual holiday gift for him in her hands.

She edged around Nasta and plonked down opposite him, presenting him with her gift.

“Thank you, Hermione, how are you?”

“I’ve been well. My parents took me to Spain this year, you wouldn’t believe the amount of Spanish wizarding history there is to discover! Did you know that it was a Spanish wizard who invented the Harry chuckled at the familiar overload of information he was given from Hermione about her holidays and her newly found information.

“Braiden needs to have his first Dragon Pox inoculation soon. He’ll need four primary injections and two follow up injections, one a month after birth, one when he is four months, one at nine months and the final one at thirteen months and then a final booster jab at three and five years.”

“Poor thing, I heard they hurt terribly.”

“They burn more than they hurt.” Nasta said civilly.

“You remember what it was like?” Hermione asked interestedly.

“I work with Dragons; I need to have a booster every five years.”

“I had mine as soon as I arrived at the castle, the first morning I was there. I’ve been trying to forget it ever since.” Hermione said with a shudder.

“I never. It was assumed that I was vaccinated because I’d had had my four primary jabs. As soon as these overprotective louts heard that I had never had my two follow up jabs they booked me a precautionary booster jab.” Harry grumbled rubbing his left arm in remembered pain, glaring at his four lovers.

“Better that you are angry with us than dying of Dragon Pox.” Draco answered, kissing his cheek.

Harry was surprised, he would have thought that Draco, out of all of his mates, would have closed off and gone stiff and cold in Hermione’s presence.

“Draco wanted you to have the full course again.” Blaise told him, looking unhappy that he was seated next to Hermione.
“You just try and get me to have that injection again!” Harry snarled.

“My Grandfather died of Dragon Pox, it runs in my bloodline!” Draco explained angrily.

“We’ll make sure all of our children are vaccinated, Draco, no child of ours will ever be susceptible to such a disease.” Nasta assured, stroking gentle fingertips through Braiden’s dark downy hair that was starting to grow in thicker and fuller.

“May I hold him?”

Hermione didn’t single out any of them, but asked them all as a whole and when Max looked ready to disagree, Harry gave him a glare and the big man sighed and carefully and unhappily pulled Braiden out of the carrier, supporting his head and handing him over carefully to Hermione.

Hermione was awkward and clumsy with their son and Blaise twitched, as if he was aching to support Braiden’s little body. Harry just smiled, it reminded him of when he had first started out with a newborn baby and he didn’t know what to do. Braiden was fine, he had survived through Harry’s parenting and he was likely better off with Hermione because there was no way that she hadn’t read at least three pregnancy and baby care books over the summer.

He placed a hand over his soft belly. What was he going to do if this baby was actually two babies, or more? This was the downside to Dracken pregnancies, Kimberly had told him. The very high chance of multiple births.

“Do you have a stomach ache, Harry?” Hermione asked.

“No. Hermione, this might come as a surprise, but I’m pregnant.”

“Again?” She asked shocked. “But how are you going to focus on your N.E.W.Ts this year, Harry? And two babies are a huge handful, especially ones so young.”

“I know, but you know what I am. These things can’t be controlled. We can’t even use contraceptives because the heat period takes away our minds so condoms are out and the high temperature of our bodies’ burn up any potions.”

“What about a charm?” Hermione suggested.
“They need to be recast every forty-eight hours, the heat lasts for ten days; it’ll wear off before the end of the heat period.”

“Is there nothing you can do?”

“I can go out and fuck a human to destroy my own womb.” Harry said his tone heavy in disgust, which kept his mates from growling or hissing. “But it will make me permanently barren so I’ll never have any more children for the rest of my life. The best I can do is hope that when this baby is born that my body takes a very long while before it repairs itself so I won’t have another heat period.”

Hermione bit her lip. “That doesn’t sound like a solid plan; you’re relying too much on chance and maybes.”

“It’s all I have. Unless I want to be permanently barren or go completely celibate and lock myself in a little box where these four can’t get to me, neither of which I want to do, then there is nothing more I can do other than hoping and wishing.”

“You have endless amounts of people around you to help and support you.” Nasta said softly. “You will not be going through anything alone.”

“At least there’s that.” Harry grinned. “I’m heading for hell, but at least I get to drag the four of you with me.”

Max laughed amusedly and plucked Draco from his seat to exchange places with him so he could hug Harry properly.

“You could have just asked!” Draco hissed.

“And give up an opportunity to touch your luscious body? Never!”

Draco went pink, but it was less from anger and more from pleasure as he averted his eyes from Max and started a hasty conversation with Blaise.

Harry had enjoyed actually being able to go to Diagon Alley without incident. Myron had made the media rue the day that they had set foot on the alley and no one bothered them, except for two little girls who had pointed at him holding Nasta’s hand and confusedly asked their Father why two boys were holding hands.

Their Father had looked up at them sharply, seen the baby in Harry’s arms, went to Nasta who stood head and shoulders taller than him and was twice as broad, before his eyes went to Harry’s forehead. Harry glared and the man had swallowed.

“They’re married, Lauren.” The man managed to get out of his tight throat.

“But they’re both boys! How can they be married?” The youngest girl demanded.

“They love one another, so they married. Now come on!”

“So two boys can marry if they’re in love, does that mean that I can marry a girl if I love her?” The oldest girl asked. The Standard book of spells, grade one that was clutched in her arms aged her to eleven.

The man looked horrified and shot an accusing glare at Harry and Nasta growled threateningly, starting to release pheromones that instilled fear into the human man.

The man’s eyes went wide and he hurried his two daughters into the nearest shop. Nasta had wrapped him up tighter and kissed his forehead, right in the middle of the alley. It had made Harry feel better and they had carried on shopping, Harry finally getting into the baby boutique shop to buy some outfits for Braiden and to also slyly look at the prices for cots and bassinets. They had one bassinet and one cot; they would have to move Braiden out of their bedroom and into the nursery before he was ready because of the new baby, or babies. Harry swallowed as he saw that the prices of cots ran into hundreds of Galleons, one absolutely gorgeous solid wooden, hand carved, cot costed over a thousand Galleons.

None of them were short of Galleons, but how many cots and bassinets would they have to buy? If he got pregnant again just after this baby was born he would have to buy even more cots, not to mention every baby needed a new mattress and new linens. Harry had a vision then of a room the size of the Great Hall and every inch of the room was covered in cots holding sleeping babies. He shuddered and cuddled into Nasta, who looked at him with a frown, but draped an arm over his shoulders. He never wanted that vision to become reality, there had to have been at least a hundred babies in that room, he was going to struggle with just two.

Harry held Blaise’s hand as he made his way into the school. He breathed in deeply and he smiled as he realised that he no longer considered the castle as his only home. Max’s house was the place he most considered home now and he grinned as teenaged girls swooned over Max, who had once again put Braiden securely into his baby carrier and was striding through the castle like a virgin’s wet dream wearing just a sleeveless vest and a pair of loose, linen trousers.

Harry himself was following quickly, just to keep that gorgeous arse in his sight; tugging Blaise with him and leaving Nasta with Draco, because Malfoys never rush.
They all sat at the Slytherin table, because all the girls from all of the other tables were shoving each other to ‘make room’ for Max to sit next to them.

“Awww.” Harry complained.

“Don’t worry, Harry, they can say and do what they want as long as they don’t come anywhere near me.” Max told him.

“Huh?” Harry said slowly.

“Why don’t you tell Max just why you are so disappointed?” Blaise teased.

“You sat down.” Harry said with a grin. “I was enjoying the view.”

Max laughed and pulled Harry gently onto his lap to kiss him with a lot of tongue; Harry pulled back and kissed Braiden’s head.

“I like this baby carrier.” Harry announced. “He’s safe, protected; no one can take him from us and unlike with the carrycot we don’t have to put him down where he can be kidnapped.”

Max run his fingers through his hair, watching as, instead of bouncing back into place like normal hair did, it stayed up in ruffled tufts and thick layered clumps. Max loved Harry’s hair. It was so soft, thick and clean, but so different to everyone else’s hair that it was its own entity.

“I spent an hour doing that hair!” Draco scolded, trying to salvage Harry’s hair with his fingers. Harry was wholly unconcerned with the state of his hair but he purred deeply as Draco’s fingers massaged his scalp.

Draco stayed sitting behind Harry playing with his hair throughout the sorting ceremony and then the food was there and Harry dug in happily, having missed Max’s usual large lunches for pumpkin pasties and cauldron cakes, which just couldn’t fill him up properly anymore, not since he had met Max.

His mates watched him as he ate and when it seemed that he was actually going to eat more than usual they focused on their own plates. Harry stopped eating halfway through and pulled out a bottle from the black dragonhide satchel on his shoulder. It was his new nappy bag that he had seen in the baby boutique and he had fallen in love with it and after Nasta had made absolutely sure that it was made from shedded hide and not from a murdered dragon, he had actually bought it for him as a present. Though he had spent ten minutes checking the quality of the hide and checking the thickness of the hide, apparently if it was more than an inch thick, it made a higher quality item and looked much better, but to go an inch deep into a dragon’s hide meant to injure and kill it, if it was less than an inch thick, like Harry’s bag, then it was shedded hide, which didn’t look quite as good, vibrant or shiny, but still made a strong, durable and fire resistant item. For Nasta’s piece of mind Harry didn’t care that his black nappy bag was a dullish grey-black instead of shiny, jet black like the living scales of a dragon. It made him sick to think that people paid hundreds of galleons per square inch for the hide of a murdered dragon just for them to wear.

Harry tugged Braiden from the carrier and bounced him lightly to ease him gently from sleep so that he could have his bottle. He rubbed the bottle teat on his cheek and watched with a smile as Braiden rooted for the nipple before taking it into his mouth.

Harry fed him quickly and efficiently, burped him, wiped the spit up milk from his lips and chin with a soft cloth before he slipped Braiden back into the carrier on Max’s chest and placed a little ear flat over Max’s strong heartbeat, Braiden was asleep again within moments.

Harry happily dug into his slice of treacle tart and even had a second one, watched by a disapproving Nasta, who was eating an apple, but his oldest lover said nothing and as long as he said nothing, Harry was happy to eat treacle tart until he was full…or sick, whichever one came first.

Harry managed three and a half slices of treacle tart, watched on in amazement by those around him and when he finally put his fork down and pushed the last half of tart away from him it was Daphne Greengrass who spoke first.

“Where did you put all of that?” She asked him, not unkindly, but looking pointedly to his slim frame. “I can see that you’ve put weight on since last year, but not enough to be eating near four slices of tart after a large meal.”

Harry shrugged. “I’m pregnant.” He told her and he loved the shock that covered her face and the faces around her as they heard.

“Again?” Theodore Nott demanded.

“I do have four lovers.” Harry pointed out, giving him a glare as he looked to see where Blaise was. He trusted Blaise completely; he didn’t trust Nott not to touch his lover, not one bit.

“Whose baby is it this time?” Pansy asked neutrally.

Harry shrugged again. “Absolutely no idea. I am a man of carnal desires and I have a harem of men at my beck and call. I can’t help myself, when I get started I can’t seem to stop until I’m unconscious.”

Blaise and Max chuckled, Nasta just rolled his eyes but Draco looked scandalised.

“That is not something you should be talking about publically!” He chastised.

“Relax, Draco, I wasn’t going to tell them about the time you fucked me in the shower so hard that you ripped down the shower rail.” Harry said with a devious glint in his eyes.

“You just did, Mio amore.” Blaise pointed out with a chuckle.

“Oops.”

“When was this?” Daphne asked, striving for nonchalance, but Harry could see the lust in her eyes.

“Oh we went to Guadeloupe this summer on holiday. I think it was the first morning we were there, wasn’t it, love?” Harry asked evilly.

“Are you having four babies?” A girl a year below them interrupted curiously.

“Why would you think that?” Harry asked.

“There’s a male carrier in my family, he has a male harem too, though he only has three lovers. Every pregnancy he had was triplets, one baby for each lover except for one peculiar pregnancy where he had six babies, but it turned out that those three extra babies were a set a set of identical triplets on top of a set of identical twins and a singleton.”

Harry mouthed a bit as the girl continued.

“I’m surprised your first pregnancy only gave you the one baby, but then I suppose you only had Draco and Blaise at the point of conception, but maybe you’ll make up for it with this pregnancy.” She eyed his still reasonably flat stomach with considering eyes. “You’ll want to gain a bit more weight and start taking a bone strengthening potion or you’ll be in agony soon enough. Cristobel was the same when he hit three months, his body wasn’t big enough to support all six babies so he was confined to a bed and force fed nutrient and bone strengthening potions and he came out of it alright, though at this point he had eighteen children. He made his lovers go for vasectomies.”

Every male listening except for Harry winced. “Did it work?” He asked curiously.

“Of course it did, if no sperm can get into the sac, no baby can be formed.”

“Absolutely no way.” Max hissed. “I don’t care if we get a hundred babies, I will not have a vasectomy!”

Harry thought back to the vision he’d had, of the hundred cots in a room the same size of the one he was sat in, all full of babies and he rather thought that if Max had shared this vision with him then he would be the first in line for a vasectomy, but Harry said nothing and instead he just smiled sweetly.

“Not even if I have four babies a year, every year?”

That stopped Max short and he looked to be thinking it through.

“In ten years we could have forty babies. Maybe even more if I get pregnant twice in the same year like I have this time. That’s a lot of dirty nappies, vomit and snot, Max.”

Max licked his lips and he seemed to be warring between the two points.

“Even you don’t have a hundred relatives.” Harry pointed out. “We’d run out of people to fob them off on to. We’d never be able to go anywhere or do anything as we’d always have four newborns with us, I’d have my sac ripped out first.”

Blaise chuckled and kissed his cheek.

“If we get over forty babies, then I’d say it was time for a vasectomy.”

“Agreed.” Draco answered, looking on in horror. “If we have forty babies, I’ll go for a vasectomy.”
Harry chuckled. “Forty does seem a bit much, but some of our older children will be grown up, our little Braiden will be on his way to Hogwarts in ten years’ time. So we won’t ever have forty babies.”

“By the time we have forty kids, Harry; I will be more than ready for a vasectomy.” Draco told him.

Harry yawned, but dutifully looked up at the top table when the dishes vanished. Harry barely heard Dumbledore’s start of term speech and when he was done he was leaning against Draco, nearly sleeping.

Nasta scooped him up from the bench and carried him to their old rooms. They were just how they had left them and Harry smiled, inhaling the familiar scent and welcoming the rush of happy memories these rooms brought him.

“I love these rooms.” He told them happily.

“Let’s get you to bed, love, you, Draco and Blaise have lessons tomorrow.” Nasta told him softly.

“Are you working tomorrow?” Harry asked.

“You know I’m on paperwork duty for as long as I can stick it. Though they may need me soon, breeding season is almost upon the dragons and it’s the worse time of the year for a dragon handler.” Nasta told him with a smile. “Max goes back to work in a few weeks unless an urgent call comes in for a stock of potions.”

Harry nodded as he was put in the bed and tucked in after being stripped and redressed. Braiden was placed in his bassinet and the three week old baby squirmed as he lost contact with Max’s warm body, but he fell quiet and still a few moments later.

Draco groomed himself and got himself ready for bed while Blaise just stripped to his boxer-briefs, pulled on a pair of pyjama bottoms and climbed in beside him.

Max, who had forced Harry to stay in bed that morning when Braiden cried at six in the morning for his bottle, let out a jaw breaking yawn and climbed in on his other side, pulling Harry and Blaise tight to his chest. Draco climbed in behind Max and faced away from him, back to back, one leg hooked around Max’s and Nasta climbed in behind Blaise, closest to Braiden. He would be the one to wake up in the middle of the night with the baby.
Harry blinked open gluey, emerald eyes and it took him a moment to realise where he was. He was being squashed and remembered that they were back at Hogwarts. Their bed here was smaller than the one at Max’s, so it was a tighter fit. Not that he minded as he rolled out of bed and scooped up Braiden before he started crying, trailed carefully down the stairs from their platform bed and wandered into their kitchen area to boil some water for a bottle and a cup of tea, perhaps ginger this morning as he was feeling slightly nauseous. He hoped he never had morning sickness as bad as he had with Braiden. He hated it more than almost anything else about pregnancy.

Harry sipped the ginger tea and fed Braiden, a tiny hand covering his own as he held the bottle and Harry grinned happily as Braiden’s fingers brushed gently against his skin. Braiden was growing and learning.

“You’re such an amazing baby and I’m so sorry I got pregnant again so soon, I swear I’ll still play with you and pay attention to you, this baby won’t take anything away from you, I promise. I still love you and you’ll always be my first child, no one can ever take that away from you, Braiden.” Harry told the suckling baby, kissing his forehead as bright purple eyes flitted open to look at him. Harry loved that Braiden had taken Blaise’s gorgeous indigo eyes.

Harry burped Braiden and kissed him gently as they cuddled quietly together as Harry sipped his tea to ease his queasy stomach.

Max came out at twenty past six halfway through a yawn, his hair all rumpled and his face still sleep creased.

“Morning, Max.” Harry greeted softly.

“Morning, Harry.” Max said back, coming to give him a kiss, pulling Braiden’s head to his face for a kiss, before grinning as he went into the little kitchenette. “It’s not my kitchen, but it’s good enough.”

Harry chuckled as he finished his tea.

“Do you want another one?” Max asked him as he started making pancakes for breakfast.

“Please. Ginger tea though.”

Max turned to him as quick as Harry could blink.
“Are you alright? You haven’t been sick have you? I didn’t hear anything.”

“I’m fine, I just felt slightly queasy this morning, so I think it might be safe just to stick to ginger tea.”

Max nodded and he quickly made the requested tea and placed it in front of him.

“Thank you, Max.”

“That’s alright, love. Nasta’s up and showering quickly before Draco gets in there.”

Harry smiled and drank his tea, thankful that he felt better.

“I smell ginger.” Was Blaise’s first comment as he came into the kitchen slash living room.

“Just a queasy belly. I’m fine.” Harry smiled, hugging Blaise as he kissed Braiden.

“You’re sure you’re alright?” Nasta asked as he greeted Max with a deep kiss, his hair still damp from his shower.

“Where’s my kiss?” Blaise demanded.

Nasta chuckled and pulled Blaise into a toe curling kiss, sitting him in a chair as he came to Harry and kissed him deeply, his tongue stroking over Harry’s in greeting. Braiden got a peck to the lips as well as his eyes landed on his Daddy Nasta for a moment.

“Don’t forget Draco’s kiss.” Max reminded Nasta.

“Draco had his first.” Nasta replied with a grin as he set the table.
“I missed it? Damn it!”

“Stop being a lecher.” Draco demanded as he walked into their living room slash kitchen already dressed in his uniform.

“I like being a lecher.” Max replied as he served up some pancakes for everyone, before going back to make more.

“I wish I could take him with me.” Harry said softly as he looked to Braiden’s sweet little face and huge, trusting eyes.

“Perhaps it was a good idea that we went on holiday without him, it’s helped you to learn to carry on without him.” Nasta said thoughtfully.

“At least it won’t be days on end without seeing him, you can see him every morning, for lunch and then after dinner you’ll spend the evening with him.” Max pointed out.

Harry smiled. “At least there’s that.” He conceded brushing his knuckles against the so soft skin of Braiden’s chubby cheek.

At half past eight in the morning they made their way down to the Great Hall and slipped to where their Head of House were handing out the students’ schedules to sleepy, unhappy, grumbling pupils. Max came with Harry to the Gryffindor table to collect his schedule from Professor McGonagall, who gave Harry a rare smile and chucked Braiden under his chin as she handed him his schedule.

Harry read it and frowned as he counted his subjects and realised that he was one short and that he had free periods on his timetable, no N.E.W.T student ever had free periods.

“Professor, has there been a mistake with my schedule? I seem to have free periods and I’m down a subject.”

“You have been taken out of your Potions course, Potter.” Professor McGonagall informed him and Harry made an ‘ah’ sound, understanding all at once. He was pregnant again and couldn’t do the course, not to mention that he had had to cancel his Ministry tests because of his pregnancy, he should have realised. He’d have to make sure that he didn’t get pregnant next summer and that he took his N.E.W.Ts in Potions.
Harry wandered back to Draco, Blaise and Nasta and handed over his schedule before it could be snatched from him.

“Why do you get free periods?” Draco demanded.

“Because I’ve been kicked from the Potions course due to pregnancy.” Harry grinned.

Draco blanched as he searched Harry’s schedule for Potions and didn’t find it.

“I’ll take the tests this summer.” Harry assured. “But I’ll need to do a lot of work.”

“We’ll all help and support you.” Nasta told him as he checked all of their schedules against one another. “Your first lessons aren’t together.”

“I didn’t take Arithmancy.” Harry said. “I have Charms first.”

“Me too.” Hermione said as she popped up behind him with her schedule.

“There we go. I’ll be with Hermione, she’s not a you-know-what, but she’s damned fast with her hexes and curses, she’ll keep me safe.”

Harry chuckled as the whole idea was ludicrous. He was a Dracken, he was decent at defence and he had defeated Voldemort at fifteen. He didn’t need protecting from a bunch of students.

“Be careful, you hold onto the bannister rail if you go up and down stairs, you do not run and you tread carefully.” Nasta told him sternly. Hermione giggled.

“I’ll be fine, I promise.” Harry answered as he handed Braiden to Nasta and held onto Hermione’s arm. “Come on, Hermione, if we’re going to get to Charms this side of Christmas we’d best leave now, every step needs to be measured and weighed carefully.”

Harry exaggeratedly picked his foot up and slowly put it down half an inch in front of him, making sure his toes were firmly on the stone floor before he eased his heel down, made sure his foot was securely on the floor before peeling his other foot up and putting it half an inch in front of him and repeating. It took him four minutes to move past Blaise, who was almost crying with his laughter.

Nasta swatted his bum with a grin and told him to get to it and that he’d see them at lunch. Harry giggled and set off at a normal pace with Hermione towards Charms and after that he had History of Magic and then Transfiguration with Draco then Defence Against the Dark Arts and finally Herbology with Hermione and Neville.

He met up with all of his mates and shared a kiss with them all as they sat around the Slytherin table for dinner and he told them of the exhausting first day that they had had and the mountain of homework they had been given by merciless Professors.

“I’ll be fifty before I get through with it all.” Draco complained and he speared a broccoli floret with his fork and popped it into his mouth, chewing moodily.

“I have a Herbology essay that needs to be in tomorrow!” Harry whined.

“I need to go to the library after dinner.” Blaise joined in. “I have twenty Defence questions I need to answer by tomorrow.”

“What questions are they?” Harry asked interestedly, wondering if they were the same ones he had been given and had already answered with ease. They were.

Harry giggled as he pulled out his already completed Defence questions and handed them to Blaise, who pulled his head into a deep kiss before scouring the homework, taking in the information instead of just copying it.

“When did you get the time to answer them? Wasn’t Defence your last but one lesson?”

“I answered them in the half hour break between Defence and Herbology.” Harry gloated proudly.

“What lessons do you have tomorrow?” Nasta asked as he pushed his empty plate away from him and picked up his pumpkin juice.

“Double Potions, Charms, double Defence and Arithmancy.” Blaise answered moodily.
“Double Potions, History, double Defence and Arithmancy.” Draco answered just as unhappily.

“A double free period, History, double Herbology and Charms.” Harry grinned. “I’ll get to sleep early, wake up with Braiden and do my homework in the two hours before my lessons start.”

Nasta nodded his acceptance of Harry’s plan. “You two need to do your homework before you go to sleep and you can lie in tomorrow morning.” He told Draco and Blaise, who nodded themselves, unhappy with the prospect of an evening full of homework.

They went to their rooms and Harry snuggled with Braiden, but decided to get his Transfiguration essay done and over with when Draco pulled his out, they had Transfiguration together, so had the same homework, so it made sense to work through it together. Harry was tired when he finished, so he fed Braiden his ten o’clock bottle, kissed all four of his mates goodnight and then went up to bed.

It felt nice being back in the castle, it was nice being back into the flow of a balanced education and the castle was so welcoming and calm, despite the hustle and bustle of everyday student life, that he felt calm and balanced himself, which put him in a good mood despite the mountain of homework he had and because he was happy, that put his mates in a good mood too. He was sure all of that would change once the exam month rolled around and if his two youngest dominants were anything like there were last year, during the practice and mock N.E.W.Ts, then what were they going to be like when the real thing rolled around? Plus he’d have given birth already, Max and Nasta would be back in work and he was sure everything would be one huge mess. His last thought before he went to sleep was a prayer that he was pregnant with only one baby.

Chapter Fifty – Hectic Hounding

Life soon dissolved into chaos, it was just one week into the September school term and Harry had taken to tearing out clumps of his own hair. Braiden was a little over a month old, he was a month pregnant, he was drowning in his own homework and Max had been called back into work urgently for a huge order of Rubella draughts as a breakout of the disease had started in a Magical community.

It started one morning and they had no warning as Harry darted awake in the early hours of Wednesday, a week after the term had started and he puked out his guts onto Draco’s bare shoulder, who had had the misfortune of sleeping next to him when the morning sickness had struck as quick as a viper.

Draco woke screaming and he cringed away from his own shoulder as the warm, wetness slid slowly and sickeningly down his arm. He rushed off still yelling into the bathroom to shower, Braiden had been startled awake by the noise and he was adding to it as he cried loudly. Blaise groggily pulled their month old son into his arms to soothe him as Nasta tried to soothe Harry as he dry heaved over and over again until he thought that his own stomach was trying to come up his throat. His eyes were streaming with tears, his nose running as his body shook uncontrollably from the shock and suddenness of vomiting so violently.

Max, who had gotten home very late and was due an early morning, was not happy to be woken up to such noise and activity, but he dutifully rubbed Harry’s back as the spasms threatened to make Harry collapse.

Harry finally stopped vomiting, but he lay spent and sobbing on the bed as Nasta wiped his eyes and nose for him as Max dabbed the vomit and bile from his mouth. Draco, finished showering and having a fit, brought Harry a glass of water to wash his mouth out with and, still huffing and quivering, Harry took a few shaky mouthfuls, swilled his mouth out and spat on the carpet, which was already covered in vomit, before Nasta removed it all with a simple wave of his wand.

“I’m sorry.” He croaked out, his throat feeling like a raw wound.

“You have nothing to be sorry for.” Nasta told him immediately as he carefully eased him up and into his arms, one hand rubbing his belly softly.

“As long as you don’t puke on me again, I can forgive you this once.” Draco told him, kissing his sweaty forehead.

Harry chuckled weakly as he tried to control his shaking with no success.

“Should I call the Headmaster and tell him that you won’t be in lessons today?” Nasta asked him.

“No. No, I’ll be alright. I can’t afford to miss any lessons. I just need some tea and maybe a few crackers.”

Nasta nodded and carried him slowly and carefully into the living room where Blaise was feeding Braiden and Nasta placed him on the settee and wrapped him in a blanket as he was still shivering and a bit shocked from the suddenness of waking up only to immediately throw up. He was given sweet, ginger tea and a packet of salted crackers, which he sipped slowly and nibbled on until the queasiness went away. It was only just coming up to six in the morning and none of them wanted to be awake this early, Max least of all, who had been herded back into the bedroom by Nasta and shoved back into bed, which had been stripped and changed by Draco, who was getting so much better at small domestic things like that.

They sufficed with cereal and toast for breakfast as Max tried to get a few more hours sleep before he spent the day making more potions and Harry was far too shaken up and weak bodied to cook.

At eight Max was up, showered and dressed for work and he kissed them all goodbye hastily, as he smothered a yawn behind his hand and flooed off to work. Harry only hoped he didn’t make a mistake or have an accident, which could ruin an entire batch of potion and mean Max would be working for longer as he started again.

At ten to nine Harry shakily held onto Draco as they made their way down to Transfiguration, leaving Braiden with Nasta, who was napping, and leaving Blaise on the fifth floor as he headed to Ancient Runes.

“You look terrible!” Hermione greeted worriedly as he sat between her and Draco at the front of the classroom, a concerned Professor McGonagall listening to them.

“Morning sickness came back with a vengeance.” He smiled weakly as he took out his parchment, quills, ink and completed homework.

“Are you alright though?” She persisted.

‘Not really’ He thought disparagingly, but he just smiled and nodded as he waited for the double period to be over, they had a half hour break after Transfiguration, but where Draco and Blaise would be heading to Potions afterwards, Harry had a free lesson and he was going to damn well use his two and a half hour break to catch up on some sleep.

Harry battled through the double lesson as much as he could, but his attention just wasn’t there and Professor McGonagall knew it. She stopped calling on him for answers and let him work at his own pace as she pushed the other students and when the bell rang for the second time signalling the end of second period and the start of their first half hour break, Harry weakly climbed to his feet and let Draco carry him and their book bags back to their rooms.

Nasta was up and ready for them as he indicated the bed he had made for Harry out of cushions and blankets and wrapped him up and sent him straight to sleep as Draco sat and relaxed for a bit before heading off to Potions to meet Blaise before lunch.

Harry was woken up groggily and fed some chicken broth and some more ginger tea before he was sent off to Charms at one thirty. He felt much better once he had woken up some more and he thanked heaven that it was a Wednesday and he had had that little respite right in the middle of the day where his Potions lesson should have been.

After dinner, they all relaxed back on the settees in their rooms with groans and sighs, Harry happily taking Braiden as he had barely seen his baby at all today and he was feeling a tad guilty for that as he played a game of ‘wiggle worm’ with Braiden, which was a game he had made up where he took one of Braiden’s limbs, an arm or a leg, and wiggled it about gently but vigorously and called his son a little worm. Braiden loved the game and he showed it by flinging out his arms and legs and stretching them, building up muscles and gaining control of his limbs at the same time.

It was as Harry was playing this game with Braiden, that his son let out two short huffs and every mate stopped and looked at the baby. They cocked their heads, lowered eyebrows and looked at Braiden consideringly and Harry curiously took a hold of Braiden’s leg again when his son squirmed unhappily at the pause in the game and he wiggled it. Braiden huffed three times as Harry wiggled his leg this time and Harry grinned.

“I think he’s trying to laugh!” He exclaimed excitedly to the others.

“He’s not trying, he is laughing!” Max said with so much enthusiasm that it was almost as if he hadn’t been dozing off just a few minutes before. “Do it again!”
Harry wiggled both legs together and Braiden screeched with huffy giggles and it startled Harry into letting go of Braiden’s legs.

Blaise tickled Braiden’s side and got the same screech of delight and both arms flew over Braiden’s head and out to the sides.

It turned into a new game as all of them took it in turns to make their son giggle, huff and screech. It was amazing. Yesterday Braiden hadn’t been able to laugh, he only cooed in happiness, even this morning he hadn’t been able to huff in delight, but now, their four week old son couldn’t stop as they tickled him, wiggled his limbs and blew raspberries on him.

“This is amazing.” Draco exclaimed as he held Braiden up to his face and nuzzled their noses together.

Things got better for them then, Harry’s morning sickness didn’t come back the following day, Braiden delighted them all by keeping up a steady stream of coos, giggles, huffs and screeches and on Tuesday morning, he grinned a huge, cheesy, gummy grin that Max captured with a camera.

It brought tears to Harry’s eyes and he wiped them away, feeling like a fool. Nasta chuckled and pulled him into a kiss.

“It’s alright, love.” He said with a soft rumble. “He’s growing by the day, he’s learning and developing. He’s growing up and he wants to show us that he is.”

“I’m being stupid, damn hormones.” Harry complained as he wiped the tears away, cupping his belly, that had started to swell minimally, but it was now obvious that he was gaining weight, and not losing it and those who hadn’t yet heard that he was pregnant again, were pointing and speculating as if it were some huge secret.

When October rolled around, Braiden was brightening up the rainy sky with continuous giggles, coos, exclaimed grunts and kicks. He was able to push himself up on his arms and hold his head up to look at them for a few moments before he dropped back down. Braiden had taken a special interest in his own hand; particularly his left one and took to chewing and sucking on it.

Nasta was back in part-time work, but he had volunteered himself for the graveyard shifts, so that he was with Braiden in the day as Max was in work. Lessons were in full swing and Harry only barely had enough time to do everything with his free periods, he had no idea how Blaise and Draco were dealing with their homework load, but Harry spent most days carrying Braiden around with him, keeping a running commentary of what he was doing because Braiden cried and fussed when Harry stopped talking for a long stretch of time.

He was two months pregnant and though he was feeling queasy in the mornings, he hadn’t yet had as bad a time as he had that morning three weeks ago when he had woken with vomit already in his throat. He was due a scan this morning and through a stroke of bad luck, once again none of his mates would be there.

Harry carried a gurgling Braiden into the hospital wing, his belly looking like he had swallowed a Quaffle already, but he put it down to the fact that he hadn’t lost his baby weight from Braiden before getting pregnant again.

“Morning, Madam Pomfrey!” He called out to the matron, who was tutting over two fourth year girls.

“Good morning, Harry, if you’d have a bed, I’ll be with you in just a moment.”

Harry climbed awkwardly onto the bed and laid Braiden on his back and began tickling him, filling the hospital wing with his huffy screeches of laughter.

“I see little Braiden has learnt how to laugh.”

Harry grinned and nodded.

“He’s coming on fantastically well, Harry. How old is he now?” Madam Pomfrey praised as she shimmied the two protesting girls out of the hospital wing once they were fixed up.

“Two months, just about nine weeks.”

“So you are eight weeks pregnant, yes?”

“That’s right.”

“Most first scans aren’t until twelve weeks, but as Drackens develop a lot quicker, let’s see if we can’t find something to take a photo of.”

Harry grinned and stripped off his shirt, reclining back with Braiden tucked into the crook of one arm. He watched as the picture was projected from Madam Pomfrey’s flat wand on his stomach and he moved his head closer without dislodging the wand, squinting as he tried to make sense of the mess his eyes were showing him.

“Oh dear.” Madam Pomfrey exclaimed and covered her mouth as her eyes scanned the image.

“What? What is it? I can’t see the baby like I could with Braiden? Is it alright?”

“Calm yourself, Harry, please.” Madam Pomfrey ordered as she made a photo of the picture and gave it to him, Harry tracked it restlessly, trying to find his baby, but it was just a mess of white, lines of grey and a mass of black.

“I’m sorry, Harry, but this is frightful news.”

Harry swallowed and curled in on himself, expecting to be told that his baby was dead and he was having a stillborn.

“What is it?” He forced himself to say tearfully.

“There have to be at least four babies inside of you.”

“Fo…four?” He croaked out, feeling a sense of relief that the babies were alive, but a tremor of fear sliced down his spine. Four babies in a single pregnancy, one had been hard enough and four newborns on top of Braiden going into exam week was going to ruin them.

Madam Pomfrey took the photo, duplicated it and ringed four masses of grey with a red circle with her wand, then she grimaced and circled a fifth.

“Five babies. These masses of grey are hearts, Harry. There are five hearts, five babies.”

Harry quivered as he took the photo with the five red rings and he looked at the very pale grey masses inside the white masses. Hearts. His babies’ hearts. The fear almost made him sick, he felt self-loathing as the thought that he didn’t want these babies flitted through his mind. He didn’t want them. Not one of them, but at least he might have had a hope in hell of coping if it had been just one baby, what was he going to do with five newborns?
He burst out crying and he couldn’t stop, he sobbed and cried and sniffled in the bed and he cried so hard he made himself sick.

“I’m going to call a specialist Healer, Harry. He’ll swear to a secrecy oath, but you need him.”

Harry just continued crying and he didn’t answer as the misery threatened to consume him. The next he knew, strong, able hands were over his belly, feeling and pressing and Harry hissed and swiped, but one of those strong hands caught his and he was looking into icy brown eyes. How such a warm colour managed to look like chips of ice, Harry didn’t know, but a calming draught was shoved down his throat and his crying tapered off into huffy sniffls.

“Harry, this is Healer Almus, he’s a pregnancy specialist and mostparticularly he specialises in male pregnancy.”

The Healer turned out warmer than his eyes indicated and calmed him down further before going back to feeling and pressing on his stomach.

“There are five babies.” He confirmed as he finished pressing and poking. “Five heads and five bottoms. I take it this is more than you bargained for, how many lovers do you have?”

“Four.” Harry replied miserably, his voice thin.

“Is that little boy one of four or…?” Healer Almus trailed off, looking at Braiden pointedly.

“No. It was just him on his own.”

“How unusual.”

“Not for a Dracken. Dracken’s first pregnancy is always the one baby, unless in the situation of identical multiples.”

The Healer hummed thoughtfully. “I confess I know next to nothing about Drackens and have never treated one before to my knowledge, but I am a specialist in male pregnancy. I can’t believe they’d differ too drastically, so I’m going to treat you like any other patient, I’ll prescribe you bone strengthening potions and nutrient potions that you are to take, no questions asked. You could also benefit from a light sleeping potion in the evenings and perhaps a small supply of calming draughts, I’ll get the hospital’s Potions Master onto making some for you immediately.”

“Just tell me which potions they are; one of my lovers is a Potions Master and I trust him more than some stranger I’ve never met.”

The man’s eyebrows lowered in suspicion, as if he thought that Harry was lying.

“What is his name?”

“Maximilius Diadesen Maddison.”

The man’s icy eyes showed recognition and he pulled back in surprise with a small smile.

“I had heard that Max had settled down, I don’t believe anyone who is even a small acquaintance of Myron Maddison doesn’t know by now, but I had no idea that it was you that he had settled down with, Myron neglected to mention that part when we met recently.”

The Healer, who ironically was named Maximillian, wrote down a list of potions and numbers and X’s that Harry couldn’t make heads or tails of.

“Hand that to Max and he’ll know what to do with it. You are fine for now, you seem to be adjusting quickly and your body is responding readily, but judging from the look of that little one, that is hardly surprising, that baby can’t be much over two months old.”

“Nine weeks.” Harry admitted, refusing to make eye contact with the Healer, who was looking disapprovingly at him.

“And you are eight weeks pregnant, how long between the birth of that baby and the conception of these five?”

“Four days.” Harry said after a lengthily pause, his cheeks flaming as he found more interest in Braiden than in those ice brown eyes.
The Healer hummed knowingly. “Perhaps this will teach you to take more care the next time. Now, onto the future of this pregnancy…”

“I am not terminating them.” Harry hissed.

“I wasn’t going to suggest it.” Healer Almus told him back. “But perhaps you might consider thinking about a selective reduction.”

“What’s that?” Harry asked, not liking the sound of it.

“It’s a medical procedure where we remove one or more of the weaker foetuses to give the others a bigger chance of survival. With your slight size and narrow hips, the amount of foetuses in the pregnancy and the size of that baby, I would advise you to take away three babies and leave the two strongest to reduce the risk to you and the risk of having a stillborn baby.”

Harry was sure that he was gaping like a fish and despite the calming draught in his system; he could feel a bubble of hysteria building up as his eyes burned with tears.

“No!” He gasped out. “No! Absolutely not!”

Healer Almus was unflinching as he carried on, handing him a booklet on the procedure and telling him survival rates and the benefits of the operation.

“The only downside is that there is a higher chance of miscarriage to the remaining foetuses, but it is lowered drastically with the taking of a stabilising potion just after the procedure.”

Harry felt the tears cutting down his cheeks as he looked at the booklet and cuddled with Braiden, who had fallen asleep sucking his own fist.

Harry wandered back to their rooms and found two worried, pacing mates waiting for him. He was later than his mates’ had expected.

“There you are!” Draco said relieved, then he saw the tear tracks, old and new, even as he started crying fresh tears. “What’s the matter? Are you alright?”
“I’m sorry. I’m so sorry!” He wailed as he just slipped to his knees and started bawling his eyes out.

“Blaise, floo call Max and Nasta.” Draco ordered as he went to the floor with Harry and wrapped his arms around him.

Harry could hear Blaise desperately trying to get hold of Nasta, but he just repeatedly apologised and rocked and cried, before large, strong, comforting hands picked him up from the floor and cradled him to a chest that smelt like musk and fire. Nasta. The smell of pine sandwiched his back. Max.

Harry eventually cried himself out and into exhaustion and he found himself on the settee, wrapped in a tangle of arms, hiccupping and sniffling.

“Can you tell us what’s wrong?” Max asked with a voice that cracked halfway through, he was still wearing his Potions overcoat.

“I’m sorry.” Harry sobbed.

“You’ve apologised several hundred times, Cariad, but you’ve yet to tell us why you’re so sorry.” Nasta exclaimed gently. “Is it the baby? Is something wrong?”

Harry pulled out the scan photo and shoved it at them; they twisted it, turned it, squinted at it but they looked back to him confusedly.

“Usually I’m good with scan pictures; I’ve seen enough of them, but this...” Max shook his head, trailing off.

“Is that it? There is no baby?” Blaise asked.

Harry shook his head and sniffed, pulling out the second scan photo, the one with the five red circles. His mates couldn’t make any more sense of that one either.

“I still can’t see what I’m looking at, is the baby…malformed?” Nasta asked, hesitating over the word.
That made Harry give out a weak cough, but he laid the photo flat on his knees. “One, two, three, four, five.” He croaked out, pointing to each circle. “Five hearts, five babies.”

“Five?!” Draco gasped in shock.

“Five.” Harry confirmed.

His mates were silent and Harry felt tears well up again. “I’m so sorry.” He burst out as more tears he hadn’t thought he had left trailed down his cheeks.

“Stop that.” Nasta ordered and pulled him in tight to his neck, forcing him to inhale his scent to calm him down. “We’ll get through this, we will.”

“I’ve been told to consider a selective reduction.” Harry informed them.

Nasta stiffened and Max hissed, but Blaise and Draco looked confused.

“How many do they want to take?” Max growled, trying to force his voice into neutral and failing.

“Three.”

“Take three what, where?” Draco demanded.

“A selective reduction is an operation performed on a person pregnant with multiple children to terminate a predetermined number of foetuses before they are born to give the remaining foetuses a higher survival rate.” Nasta informed the two subordinate dominants. “The Healers want to take three of the five that Harry is pregnant with and leave him with just two.”

“I told the Healer no. I told him over and over no, but he just kept telling me to think about it, to tell you and to consider the scenario where I refuse the procedure and me and all five babies die. He said that at least if I went through with it I had a good chance of surviving even if none of the babies do.”
“Say you went through with it and had three babies removed, why would the remaining two then die?” Blaise asked calmly.

“The procedure gives an increased risk of miscarriage to the remaining babies.” Harry told them.

“We will think about it as an option.” Nasta said and held up his hand when everyone went to interrupt them. “But not today. We are all going to calm down today; you are going to bed, Harry, or you are at least taking a nap on the settee, you three are calming down and doing what you’re supposed to be doing.”

“I need to get back to work, I put the potions under the care of the apprentice, but I don’t trust her not to blow up her own face.” Max said disparagingly, not for the first time, of the twenty-one year old who was desperate to become a Potions Mistress, but lacked the intellect and talent for it. Max complained every night that she should never have been accepted into an apprenticeship, but her Father held sway with the appointers of the Potions Academy so he and his co-workers were stuck with her.

“Max!” Harry called him back before he could floo away; he pulled out the list of potions and all the numbers and little X’s. “The Healer said I need those.”

Max looked at them and then to him and Harry bit his lip, perhaps it might have been better to let the Hospital’s Potions Master make the potions for him from the way that Max was looking at him in shock.

“You need all of these? These are hideously strong potions and the dosages on them are at the addiction level!” Max shook his head and sighed.

“The Healer told me to give them to you, because you’re a Potions Master.”

Max nodded. “I’ll make them all for you, but I’ll be administering them personally and I’ll be observing you closely.”

Harry nodded in acceptance and he allowed himself to be tucked up on the settee with Braiden as he was feeling exhausted and drained from today and the pregnancy didn’t help. It might have just been his mind but now that he knew he was pregnant with five babies, his bump looked that much bigger, felt that much heavier and he seemed just a tad more drained than he had before he knew. He couldn’t wait until March came around and he birthed these babies, but on the other hand he could wait, because once they were out of him, there would be five, squawking, squalling, crying newborn babies in his ear day in, day out and throughout the night and he was sure that none of them would be able to cope. It just wasn’t fair!

-----------------------------------------------------

It was Halloween and Harry had sent all four of his mates to the feast, telling them that he wanted to mourn in peace. They all knew why and nodded understandingly, but all Harry wanted was some space and time to himself as he had been taken everywhere by the hand for the last three weeks and he couldn’t take it anymore, so he had booted them down to the feast, denied any company and huddled himself on the rug in front of the fire to relax as he listened to the wood popping and crackling beside him and nothing else.

They had done nothing but argue and scream at one another for three weeks and they had had two Healer consultations with Maximillian Almus, who was just as frustrated with them as they were with each other.

They couldn’t come to an agreement over the pregnancy. They couldn’t come to an agreement on whether they wanted the selective reduction or not, there were pros and cons for each side and Harry just could not decide. None of them could and as Healer Almus, who had thrown himself into factual books on Drackens and their pregnancies, had pointed out to them, they were running out of time.
The babies would be viable soon and it would be illegal to terminate them.

Harry stroked the bulge he had grown overnight. He looked six months pregnant at three months and he was growing still. He kept himself covered at all times as, unlike with Braiden, he was getting disgusting stretch marks around his lower abdomen and thighs. He hated them and no matter how many times Draco or Blaise, Max or Nasta said that they were fine, that he was still gorgeous, he still didn’t want anyone to see them. He didn’t want to see them, so he remained covered even if he was sweating because of the heat of being cuddled up to four bodies during the night.

Harry cupped the misshapen bulge and sighed.

“I don’t want any of you.” He admitted out loud. “But I can’t just kill you all off, or pick three of you to die. How do they expect any Mother to pick out three of his or her babies to die? I know it’s to give two of you a higher survival rate, but how do I go on and live knowing that there were supposed to be five of you? Maybe I’m just being selfish.” Harry considered. “Maybe it’s not about me, but about you, maybe you feel differently, but I don’t think I can bring myself to do it. I know I change my mind every other hour, but I think this is the final decision, the others will feel differently, they change their minds as often as I do, but at the end of everything, it will always be my decision and not theirs.”

Harry patted his belly and thought about his parents. What would they have done? He didn’t know because he didn’t know anything about them and that brought tears to his eyes. He had been so teary and so emotional through this pregnancy that Max had bought him a man sized box of tissues.

The worst though were the cravings. He had had a few cravings with Braiden, most of them normal foods and a few odd ones, like the peas on toast, but this time around he was craving so many different things together than none of the others could stand to be near him when he was eating.
Harry blamed the five babies, saying that every baby must have been craving something different as he ate a multitude of combinations which included cheddar cheese cut into sticks, covered with garlic butter and honey, he ate mustard from the jar with a spoon, covered chunks of cucumber with rock salt and smothered absolutely everything he ate with honey. He just had to have honey and when they had run out and Max had told him that there was none in their rooms, he had screamed, cried, thrown an absolute fit and almost made himself sick until Max had rushed out and come back with a jar of honey. Harry had then spent the evening dipping his fingers into the jar and sucking it from his fingers.

Just thinking about it made Harry roll to his knees, get to his feet and go rummaging in the cupboards for the stock of honey that Max now kept. He pulled one jar down, twisted the lid off, picked up a table spoon and ate spoon after spoon of honey before he went searching for something else, he didn’t know what he wanted until he saw the bottle of vinegar. He pulled out a bowl, tipped quarter of a bottle of vinegar into it, spooned out half a jar of honey, mixed them together and smothered a piece of bread with the mixture and ate it. He managed six pieces of bread, which he soaked with vinegar, before the door to his rooms opened and his mates came back with a surprise. Myron, Ashleigh, Richard, Alayla, Talia, Kimberly and Alexander had come to visit and Harry waved as Marianna, Narcissa and Aneirin followed before closing the door.

“What are you eating?” Max demanded in horror.

Harry shrugged and swallowed. “Bread, honey and vinegar. I’m thinking of adding some horseradish, do we have horseradish?” He asked as his eyes drifted to the cupboard.

Talia actually gagged and heaved and Richard rubbed her back soothingly as his eyes remained on Harry.

Harry went digging in the cupboard and he made a happy sound as he found a small jar of horseradish at the back, he pulled out the ever present jar of mustard too and he set to mixing them all together again before spooning the mixture onto more bread and eating it.

Talia darted for the bathroom, but no one else moved as they watched Harry devour the vinegar soaked bread covered with honey, horseradish and mustard. They were transfixed as Harry went back to the cupboard as he decided he wanted something else and he pulled out gravy granules and added them to the mixture to make a thick, brown goo that he polished off an entire loaf of bread with watched in horrified fascination by a group of people he had come to see as family.

“Are you still hungry?” Draco asked, his eyes pleading him to say no.

Harry shook his head. “I’m stuffed.” But despite claiming to be completely full, Harry took down another jar of honey as he put his dishes in the sink and sat in front of the fire eating it with his “Max said you had something to tell us, sweetie.” Ashleigh exclaimed, looking like she’d rather not disturb him from his honey as she cradled Braiden.

“Ah!” Harry exclaimed as he grinned widely. “We’ve decided that it’s time to inform you about the pregnancy.”

“It seems to be going well.” Richard exclaimed with an evil grin.

Harry handed them the old scan photo that Madam Pomfrey had taken what seemed like a year ago, but was only three weeks.

“I can’t make any sense of these stupid things.” Richard pouted.

“Can anyone see what it shows?”

“I’d say that it was showing there was nothing there, but that’s obviously not true.” Marianna stated. “So come on, tell us what we’re seeing.”

Harry pointed to each, fingertip sized grey dot in the middle of the huge mass of white that was his five babies cuddled together.

“Are those limbs?” Narcissa asked curiously.

“Nope, those little grey specks are hearts. Five hearts. Five babies.”

It took a moment for that information to sink in before there was uproar and it took Braiden crying in fright to shut everyone up. Harry took his baby and cuddled him, sitting the two month old baby on his massive bump.

“Five?!?” Aneirin was the first to exclaim in shock.
“You’re too small to carry five babies. You’ll snap your own ribs or the babies will crush your spine or pelvis as they grow.” Myron told him.

“I’ve been told to consider selective reduction. They want to take three babies.”

“Are…are you going to go through with it?” Ashleigh asked, licking her lips. “I don’t think it’s a good idea.”

“Ashleigh.” Myron growled warningly. “He could die!”

“What if one of the three babies chosen is our Max’s?” She demanded. “His first child and it might be killed off before it’s even born because of this selective reduction! It’s a fancy word for abortion.”

“Don’t be a fool.” Narcissa scathed to the other woman. “Would you rather all five babies and Harry die? If the Healers are suggesting it then it’s because it’s the best option for the health of all involved.”

“You’re only saying that because there’s no chance any of the babies are your son’s!” Ashleigh hissed and Draco went ash white.

He had been devastated to learn that none of the babies could be his, but he had taken it in his stride and consoled a tearful Harry, who had been trying to guess who the Father of each baby was as they kicked him in various different places with different levels of pain, only for Harry to realise that Draco hadn’t had sex with him on the night he had conceived.

Myron dragged Ashleigh to her feet and marched her straight out of their rooms and Richard sighed unhappily.

“Don’t mind if I stick around for a bit do you? He’s going to tear her a new arsehole for what she said and how she’s acted.”

“Richard!” Kimberly chastised.

Harry remained quiet and no more was said about his pregnancy, the five babies or the selective reduction, instead they talked about the leaps and bounds that Braiden had taken and how well he was developing and how brilliantly he was doing until Harry could stick it no longer and he claimed to be tired before he fled to the bedroom in tears.

His mates came in ten minutes later, after seeing everyone out and promising to update them if anything else happened or came about, but Harry was already asleep with tears staining his face, his arms wrapped around his considerable belly.

Chapter Fifty-One – Autumn Misery

November was bleak and wet. Harry was three months pregnant and he looked about eight. Everything was a strain, he was snapping at everyone, including the teachers and his misshapen bulge was an agony he had never experienced before in his life. It ached all on its own; his unborn babies kicked and punched him and likely each other as their already limited space constricted even further around them as they all grew.

Max gave him his potions every morning, except for the one which was given to him just before he went to sleep at night. Harry had taken so many bone strengthening potions that he was sure that if he was hit by the Hogwarts Express it would crumple around him rather than the other way around, but it was doing its job as his body moved around the five babies struggling for space inside of him. He was sure he’d at least have a broken rib or two by now if he hadn’t been taking the potions.

School was a torture and looking after an increasingly bouncy Braiden was taking its toll on him, even with the free periods he had, Harry was finding it difficult to stay awake during lessons and he found it even harder to concentrate and focus on the lesson. He was more of a distraction really as the second year Ravenclaws had taken to calling him the famous whale and now everyone in all houses and all years was calling him it and then, because he burst into tears every time it happened, it made Draco and Blaise incredibly angry and they were now serving detentions with Professor Flitwick for attacking said second year Ravenclaws who had started the nickname.

Though it had made Harry laugh so much he had pissed himself, something he was getting used to as a single kick to his bladder and it released, no matter where he was or what he was doing at the time. Max had joked that they should put him in one of Braiden’s nappies. Harry had been sleeping on the settee ever since in protest.

Harry woke up there once more and stretched, cracking his back. The best thing about this pregnancy was that the morning sickness had not come back and his mornings were vomit free as he stuffed himself so full of grotesque foods it was no wonder that he had put on two stone of weight.

Ashleigh had not apologised and she had not come back, though Richard came by nearly every other day, saying Myron and Ashleigh were at each other’s throats and that he wanted to keep his throat away so it didn’t become a target.

Harry had refused the selective reduction, thanking Healer Almus for his time and advice, even as his mates screamed bloody murder, but Harry had remained firm and he said that his five had been conceived together and they would live or die together. Blaise, who had been in favour of the selective reduction from the start, had not spoken to him for three days afterwards.

Healer Almus had accepted his decision with a wry smile and told him plainly that he would help as much as he could, wherever he could to get him and the babies through the pregnancy safely.

Harry rolled himself to his feet and he stood still as his central balance adjusted to make him steady as the massive bulge threatened to take him over as he wobbled about like the floor was made of jelly. It wasn’t fair!

Harry went digging through the cupboards and the cold storage to find something to fill his growling belly with. He found a bag of frozen peas and he wanted them straight away. He boiled them, tipped them into a bowl and then slathered them with vinegar, butter and honey and sat at the table eating them with a spoon. He knew logically that it was supposed to taste vile, but he moaned after every spoonful.

It was how Max found him and his biggest mate turned right back around and told Harry to call him when he was done eating. Harry chuckled, too use to this behaviour now to be hurt by it.

Nasta came out and sat by him though, rubbing his belly and murmuring softly to it as he had taken to doing, it made Harry smile as he placed one hand in Nasta’s hair, stroking and combing through it as his oldest mate talked to the five babies inside of him.

Blaise brought Braiden out and fed him the bottle that Harry had already made up in preparation.
Braiden had started sleeping for longer and all of them couldn’t wait until he started sleeping through the night, because though only one of them got up to feed him at two o’clock in the morning, all of them were woken up and disturbed by his crying.

“How are you feeling, Prezioso?” Blaise asked as he burped Braiden and handed him to Harry, taking away the empty bowl in front of him.

“How hungry.” Harry sighed. No matter how much he ate, he just could not feel full.

“I’ll make crepes for breakfast.” Max announced as he came back into the room, his hair and bare chest still damp from his shower.

“Put something on!” Harry demanded. “It’s November, you’re going to freeze!”
Max chuckled amusedly, but dried his hair and body with a spell before pulling on the jumper that he had tied around his waist.

Max made the crepes quickly and easily, filling them with sliced peaches and blueberries. Harry spooned half a jar of honey onto his three crepes and happily devoured them.

“How you don’t have several cavities I don’t know.” Draco said as he bit into his fourth crepe.

“I’m special.” Harry said with a grin, bouncing Braiden, who was now getting strong enough to hold his own head up, but not for long periods of time.

Harry finished his breakfast and savoured the feeling of not being hungry for a moment, even if he wasn’t completely full, he made sure he had his snack pots, which he had been given permission by Dumbledore to carry and eat in class because of how much food he was getting through, and he handed Braiden to Nasta and allowed himself to be led down to Hermione, who he had Defence Against the Dark Arts with first. He thanked Merlin that it was a Friday and that the weekend was soon upon them, but he really couldn’t wait for Christmas to come. Three weeks off from school was going to do him the world of good. His four mates too.

“How much bigger can I get?!” Harry screamed as he stood off the scales after realising that he had gained another eight pounds almost overnight. He had gained nearly three stone in weight and his body was aching and sore and his joints were agony.

Blaise rubbed him gently and kissed his cheek. “You look stunning.” He whispered. “You make me hot and hard for you.”

Blaise proved it by pressing the hard length of himself into Harry’s back. Harry giggled and turned to cuddle Blaise. Even though it was only superficial proof, it was still proof that Blaise loved him and still found him desirable, which made him feel infinitely better and more secure.

Harry sunk heavily to his knees and rubbed his cheek against the front of Blaise’s boxer shorts.

“I’m going to make you feed me.” He growled, his Dracken coming out. He really wanted his mates’ seed. Any mate would do, but he wanted it badly.

Harry pushed Blaise’s shorts down and took him immediately into his mouth, no stroking, touching or getting either of them used to it or giving them time to get their heads around it. He took Blaise straight into his mouth and as far down his throat as he could before he gagged.

He sucked, licked and sucked some more, he wanted Blaise and he would have him. Harry did raise a hand to massage Blaise’s balls, trying to milk him to orgasm quicker as he became desperate for his release, his stomach ached for it.

Blaise did not last half as long as he usual would have before his body stiffened and he came with a cry, Harry sucked him dry until Blaise’s legs went from under him and his mate joined him on the bathroom floor.

“That...what was that?” Blaise exclaimed weakly as Harry nuzzled him softly.

“I think the Dracken cravings are coming out. With Braiden I craved blood, this time I’m craving something a bit different.”

Harry giggled and then the hunger came back and his Dracken took over and he knew just by scenting him that Blaise would not be able to feed him again. He took two mouthfuls of blood, fed Blaise a lick of his own blood from his bitten lip, before he crawled out of the bathroom, out of the bedroom and into the living room where his other three mates were. They looked up at the smell of the blood that was dripping down his chin from his lip, where a fang had bitten deeply.

“Harry?” Draco questioned softly, putting his textbook aside.

“I’m hungry.” He complained with a soft growl.

“You’re always hungry, what do you feel like?” Max asked happily as he stood up to go to the kitchen.

“I don’t want food.” Harry hissed.

“You want blood, for the babies.” Nasta said with understanding, suddenly realising why his Dracken was out and why his lip was bleeding. “How much did you take from Blaise? Is he alright?”

“I only took a mouthful or two. He’s fine.” Harry assured as he crawled to Nasta, who was the closest to him and he rubbed his cheek up and down his leg.
“You want blood from my leg?” Nasta questioned confusedly as Harry undid his belt and yanked his trousers and boxers off together. “Harry!”

“I never said I wanted blood.” Harry countered as he pulled Nasta straight into his mouth and sucked.

Nasta let out a wordless grunt and pushed his hands into his hair as Harry sucked him strongly and quickly, bringing him to full hardness as quickly as he could, his jaw ached, but he still sucked as his belly clenched. He wanted Nasta’s seed. He wanted all of his mates’ seed and when Nasta orgasmed into his mouth, Harry swallowed before turning to Draco, who was the closest again.

Draco undid his belt and opened his trousers for him, Harry got there before he could get himself out of his boxers but Harry just popped the single button and pulled him through the hole and sucked him into his mouth. His jaw was on fire now, but still he sucked and licked and brought Draco to a quick orgasm.

Max was ready and waiting for him, sitting on the settee, his hand stroking himself almost to orgasm already as he watched Harry crawl towards him, a wild hunger in his eyes. Harry attached himself to Max and sucked, even as Max’s hand still stroked himself, his hand bumping Harry’s chin as he stayed near the head of him and sucked, licking and teasing the slit in the tip, anything to bring him to orgasm to feed the hunger he had for his mates’ seed.

Max cried out hoarsely and emptied himself into Harry’s mouth; Harry sucked him dry, before biting his leg to suck three, quick mouthfuls of blood, sinking a fang into his own lip and offering his bleeding mouth to Max, who kissed him passionately, sucking in some blood to heal himself at the same time.

“Thank you.” Harry said softly as he rubbed his full belly with a happy sigh.

Max chuckled so deeply that it was more of a grumble. He sat himself up and pulled Harry into a hug.

“I love you.” He declared strongly. “No matter what we face, no matter what we go through. I’ll always love you.”

Harry yawned and Nasta pulled him from Max’s arms, kissed him deeply and settled him on the settee, covering him with a blanket and kissing his head gently.

“You have a nap now, you’ve exerted a lot of energy and now that you’ve been fed, you need some “Potion?” Harry asked hopefully.

Max shook his head. “No. You’re becoming dependant on them for sleep, we need to break that habit before it fully forms, try and sleep without it.”

Harry pouted, but he dutifully curled up as much as his belly allowed and he tried to calm himself enough to sleep. He managed it with ease and he was soon breathing softly and lightly in his nest on the settee.

Draco smiled at him softly and brushed a lock of hair out of Harry’s sleeping face. When he was asleep all the lines vanished, all the worry lifted and the black bags under his eyes seemed less apparent.

He felt so bad for Harry and he was sorry that he had been making things worse by shouting and yelling. It wasn’t Harry’s fault that he was pregnant with five babies, it wasn’t anyone’s fault, it had happened and now that Harry had refused the selective reduction, they were committed to having five babies.

He sighed; everything was getting on top of him. His Father’s continued silence, school work, the exams that would be upon them after Christmas, Harry, the babies, the pregnancy. He swiped a hand through his hair, before realising that he had ruined his hair and he smoothed it back down. He was picking up bad habits from Harry. He smiled and kissed Harry gently. They could do this, they could get through it. He didn’t have to get a job straight out of school; he could stay at home for a while to help Harry cope with the six children, they had enough money and with Max and Nasta working, they had a steady income. Everything would be fine as long as they could survive school, which would be a huge challenge, but it was doable. They could do this, they could.

Harry disgusted his mates further the next week by mixing a large bowl of cold mashed potatoes with a large pot of coconut yoghurt. He sat next to them and ate it with a table spoon.

“No honey, Harry?” Draco questioned, looking faintly green, but that could have been from the Slytherin green jumper that he was wearing.

Harry shook his head.

“What are those black things?” Max asked, trying to get a closer look, but he didn’t really want to get any closer.

“Raisins.” Harry answered as he took another spoonful.

“Raisins?” Max questioned.

“Raisins.” Harry confirmed with a nod as he shoved another spoon into his mouth.

“Can you please hurry up and come out.” Draco demanded to his massive belly.

Harry giggled and flicked Draco’s forehead. “Leave the babies alone, I think three or four of them are sleeping; only the one is active and its bliss.”

Harry finished the mixing bowl of potatoes and reclined on the settee. He still felt hungry, but he didn’t want to disgust his mates any further, so he left it. No. He wanted chocolate.

“Blaise?”

His mate hummed from the floor.

“Can you go and get me my chocolate stash please?”

“You can’t be hungry still.” Max told him as he bounced Braiden on his knee, still supporting his head and neck, but Braiden was getting stronger by the day and Harry was sure that by the time that Christmas came around then Braiden would be supporting himself upright, his four month old baby.

“I am.” Harry pouted. “I’m always hungry.”

“That’s no lie.” Draco teased.

Harry blushed as he was reminded that he sucked all of them dry every morning and sometimes once again in the afternoon or evening too.

Blaise came back from the bedroom with three bars of fudge chocolate and Harry moaned at the first bite, sucking on the chocolate and enjoying the flavour. He drank his tea, made Max get him another one and ate another bar of chocolate before Nasta came home and took the third one from him with a frown at the two empty packets on the coffee table.

Harry pouted, but he didn’t mind too much as he popped the last bite into his mouth and curled up to sleep some more. It seemed all he did these days was eat, sleep, school work and look after Braiden, there was no time for anything else.

Things got more stressful with Nasta and Max in work and the Professors were heaping the homework onto them in preparation for the Christmas holidays.

Harry hadn’t slept in what felt like weeks, but it was only maybe a few days at most. He tossed and turned and he had taken to sleeping on the rug in front of the fire. He told his mates that it was more comfortable, but really it was because he didn’t want to keep them awake with him as he tossed and wriggled about all night. He, of course, took Braiden with him so he was doing both the two in the morning feed and the six in the morning feed so his mates could sleep through the night and feel a bit more rested in the morning and he was so stressed and frazzled because of this added stress that he burst into tears at the slightest provocation.

Despite his night and morning care of Braiden, his mates were still very tired and so stressed themselves that they seemed not to notice him, his mood or his health, either that or they were purposefully ignoring him and his declining health.

Harry sagged as he heard Braiden sniffle as he woke up for his bottle. He hadn’t had any sleep, but thankfully it was Saturday and he had no lessons to go to. He forced himself up, even though he really wanted to curl up and sleep for the next month.

He fed Braiden and burped him, his son was now unrecognisable from the tiny baby that he had once been and Harry smiled tiredly as Braiden gum grinned at him. He was fourteen weeks old and he was developing so quickly. He had even tried launching himself across the floor with his feet when Harry had put him on a quilt on the living room floor. He had laughed at that and wondered if they’d have to baby proof their rooms, it seemed like Braiden would be crawling in next to no time, it was like he was raring to be on the move. Harry just knew that Braiden would be crawling around soon.

Nasta came out of the bedroom at half six and gave him a tired kiss, taking Braiden off of him to give him a break from the baby. He was in work today, so was Max. Draco, Blaise and he all had homework to get through and they usually passed Braiden between each other as they completed their work.

Today was different though as apparently both of his younger mates had reached the end of their tether, it was mid-afternoon and Draco had gone to the library to help him with his essay as his tired brain couldn’t come up with the answer by itself and Braiden needed a bottle and a nappy change, Harry had been awake for hours and hours, days even, and his energy was draining quickly. He wanted nothing more than a nice long nap.
But as he stood up to go to bed for an hour or two, Blaise handed Braiden to him with an irritated huff as he tried to focus on his Ancient Runes essay and his Arithmancy equations simultaneously.

“Tired.” Harry whined, even as Braiden was passed to him, wailing as his soiled nappy became uncomfortable.

“All of us are tired, Harry.” Blaise snapped.

“We’ll I’m the only one whose pregnant!” Harry spat back as a baby kicked him harshly.

“With the way you’re always reminding us, waking us up in the night and whinging over everything we might as well be pregnant too!”

“Well you’re not! You wouldn’t even last a day in my shoes!”

“You think I’m having a cake walk of this?”

“What do you have to worry about?” Harry shouted. “Homework and school? I’m the one who could die from this pregnancy!”

“I was all for you having the selective reduction, you’re the one who chose not to go through with it, fuck what the rest of us think!”

Blaise packed up his homework and stomped to the fireplace.

“Where are you going?!?” Harry demanded.

“Away from you!” Blaise hissed as he threw a handful of floo powder into the fireplace and vanished.

Harry felt as if a piece of him had been ripped out as Blaise left. He didn’t even have it in him to send out a distress call. He didn’t know what to do, so he did what he always did these days. He cried. He cried silent tears as he changed and redressed Braiden, cried as he fed and burped him and as he rocked him back to sleep. He huddled in the corner of the living room as the pain inside of him became unbearable.

A knock sounded on the portrait door, but Harry barely heard it. The door pushed open five minutes later and Myron poked his head around it curiously, dark eyebrows lowered over deep black eyes. He saw Harry huddled in the corner and he rushed to him as Richard came in behind him.

“What’s the matter? Are you alright?” Myron demanded, giving into his dominant instincts and trying to sniff out an injury.

“Are you here alone?” Richard demanded as he listened for any other sounds or movements from the rooms.

“Gone. He left.” Harry sobbed. “He said he wanted to get away from me.”

“Who?” Myron demanded with a growl as he eased himself onto the settee and wrapped Harry in the blanket from the back of the settee.

“Blaise.”

“You look terrible, Harry. Have you been sleeping?” Richard asked concerned.

Harry shook his head. “I can’t sleep. It’s too hard, they’re all kicking at all hours and I’m just too uncomfortable to sleep.”

“I thought that’s why you had sleeping potions.”

“Max thinks that I’m getting addicted to them and too dependent on them for sleep, so he won’t give me anymore.”

“You sleep now.” Myron demanded as he slipped Harry onto the settee and passed Braiden to Richard. “We’ll look after you. I can’t believe they can’t see how exhausted you are.”

Richard found Max’s potions case and he opened it one handed to find the one potion marked
'Sleeping potion – mild (For Harry)’ and he handed it to Myron, who uncorked it and held it to Harry’s lips.

“Max said that I shouldn’t.”

“A few sips aren’t going to kill you or the babies.” Myron rumbled soothingly and Harry took a few sips. His eyes dropped closed immediately.

Harry slipped into sleep quickly and as he did, Myron ordered Richard to watch over him as he flooed to his son’s work place. He was known by sight and the expression on his face stopped anyone from speaking or stopping him as they pointed him in the direction of Max’s lab, as if he didn’t already know where it was.

Max looked up as he barged through the door and he looked shocked.

“Dad, what…?”

Myron grabbed Max and dragged him from his lab, back through the building and he snapped at Max’s supervisor that his son was not going to be in work for a while due to family obligations.

“Of course, Mister Maddison!” The man agreed, almost wetting himself in fear as Myron was releasing angry, fear inducing pheromones.

“Dad, what’s going on?”

“You’re a fool!” Myron hissed as he flooed them back to his own home, ignoring Ashleigh who was sitting in a chair sulking as she had been doing for the last couple of weeks.

“What did I do?”

Myron hit him. He had never wanted to beat one of his own children as badly as he did now. When he had seen how terrible Harry had looked, how exhausted and drawn he was as his pregnancy drained everything from him. He wanted to break Blaise’s neck for leaving him on his own, he wanted to cuddle Harry into his side and never let him go. Harry was as good as his own son now and his youngest son was suffering terribly.
“Don’t you hit him!” Ashleigh screamed at him.

“Sit down and shut up!” Myron roared at her. She had hurt Harry as well; he had seen it on his face immediately.

“Don’t you speak to Mum…” Max started furiously but Myron cuffed him again.

Ashleigh jumped on him, but he caught her easily and twisted her ear so hard she fell to her knees and clutched at his leg, apologising profusely.

“Have you looked at your mate lately?” He demanded of Max, who was standing so straight and stubborn before him, two inches shorter than he was.

“Of course I have.” Max scoffed. “I saw him this morning.”

“Then by any chance have you gone blind?” Myron snarled.

“Look, I’m sure Harry’s fine.” Max tried to assure him. “He’s a bit tired, we all are, but he’s fine.”

“Then I’ve raised a complete ignorant fool. Harry is exhausted. He has not slept in days.”

Max blinked and Myron shook his head. Max had absolutely no idea of the condition of his own mate. Myron grabbed Max and tugged him to the floo and he went straight into the boys’ rooms, instead of detouring to the Headmaster’s office as he usually did for privacy’s sake.

Myron threw Max to the floor, on his knees and he held his head looking at Harry.

“Look at him!” Myron demanded quietly. “Look how ill and pale he is. You’re killing him! You are watching him die slowly before you and you are doing nothing!”

Max swallowed as he took in the black bags under Harry’s eyes that seemed worse than he had last seen them. His unwashed, scruffy hair, the pale, thin, gaunt face even though his belly was still growing. Harry looked incredibly sick and it made bile rise in his throat as tears burnt at his eyes.
Why hadn’t he noticed? He was medically trained, he knew what to look for, so why hadn’t he noticed? Harry meant the world to him, how could he not have noticed? Was he so wrapped up with his own life and his own lack of sleep that he was ignorant to Harry’s health and lack of sleep?

“I…I…”

“Do you see it now?” Richard asked him calmly. “Do you see what you and the others have done? He is pregnant, Max. You know that the pregnancy will drain every last ounce of energy, every last resource it can from him, he has five babies inside of him, all sucking him of his energy, his vitamins and minerals, his blood, his oxygen, his nutrients, they are all being sucked out of him by those five babies. You think you’re tired? From what, waking up a few times a night? Harry has not slept in days and he has been Braiden’s primary carer too. He cannot keep this up or he’ll die and he’ll take the five babies with him.”

“Blaise was…”

“Blaise fucked off back home to get away from Harry, leaving the both of them here, alone and unprotected. Harry was using his last energy to cry and rock himself in the corner of the room. He didn’t even have enough left inside of him to send out a distress call.” Myron growled.

Max felt like he had been shot. He mouthed a bit, but he couldn’t think what he wanted to say, what his Dads’ wanted to hear, so he closed his mouth again, forcing himself to look at Harry, at how ill and sickly he looked, how frail. Why hadn’t he seen it before? Why had it taken someone pointing it out to him to show him that he was not taking care of Harry properly?

He inched forward on his knees and rested his head gently on that thin chest. How could Harry still be so thin when he ate so much, when his stomach was bulging so much, when he had gained three stone in weight?

He listened to the steady heartbeat, just to convince himself that there was still time to help Harry, that he could fix this. It was going to be hard, but then it was always going to be hard, they had known that from the moment they had heard about Harry’s pregnancy.

“What happened?” Draco demanded from the doorway, spilling an armful of books onto the floor, striding forward and reaching for Harry.

Max caught him and shook his head.

“Let Harry sleep.” He said in a voice thick with unshed tears.
“What…”

“Harry’s near the point of complete exhaustion; I can’t bear to think on what would have happened had he collapsed.” Max rested a hand on the bulge to emphasis his point.

“He was fine this morning.”

“He wasn’t fine this morning. He hasn’t been fine for weeks. Harry hasn’t slept for days.”

Draco’s silver eyes widened and he looked at Harry in a new light, his gaze tracking over every feature of the little face. He swallowed at what he saw.

“Blaise is gone.”

“Gone where?” Draco asked confused.

“Home, wherever, but he left Harry and Braiden unprotected and that cannot go unpunished. Nasta will have to be told.”

“He doesn’t get off work until eight.”

“Draco, don’t you see. Harry should always be our top priority, Harry and the kids. Hell, to think I was worried over my damned job, I’m one of the few Potions Masters in Britain, I like my job but I can always get another one if I am actually fired. I’d have people begging for me to come work for them. When will I ever get the chance to have another Harry? To have another family like ours? I love my job but I love the family I have more. I love you and Harry, Nasta and even Blaise, though I’m not too happy with him at the moment. I love Braiden and I’ll love these five when they come too, I love my family more than anything and to think that I was even neglecting my family in such a way that Harry and the babies could have died, it makes me sick. Nothing should ever be more important than Harry and the children.”

Myron petted Max’s head. “You have finally understood, Max. Everything, absolutely everything is second to your mates and children, nothing comes before them, nothing is even on the same level as them. Your Mother and I are fighting because she’s a stubborn mare, but I still love her and I will still stand in front of her if the need arises. No matter how angry I am or how upset or insanely angry she makes me, I will still stand in front of her, because she is my submissive mate, because she is my Wife and the Mother to my children. I love her and I do my best, even at risk to my own health, to protect her, love her and keep her happy. It should be the same for you and Harry.”

“It will be.” Max swore. “I’ll make it so.”

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------ X

Nasta had been livid when he got home and had been informed of everything that had transpired. He sat on the floor of the bedroom and stroked Harry’s shrunken cheek with bile in his throat. Why had none of them noticed quite how bad Harry had gotten? He felt a fool and if he could have someone beat him, he’d beg for them to do it.

He had called his colleagues and explained what had happened and he had put himself back on paperwork duties. He hated paperwork, he hated not being with the dragons that he loved and had raised over the last twenty odd years, but he’d do it gladly for the rest of his life if it helped ease the stress and pressure off of Harry, even just a little bit.

Nasta climbed onto the bed, where he had placed Harry as soon as he had come home, after he had been informed of what had happened, and he settled Harry on his stomach, his body supported around the huge bump with body pillows and he lightly and gently massaged his back, smiling as he remembered the first time he had ever given Harry a back rub.

It had been the very first night that he had been mated to him; Harry had been such a little tease, all lithe and comely with his wide, imploring eyes and upturned, pouted mouth. He hadn’t known what he was doing as he brushed that bare back with his fingertips, he had never given a backrub before in his life, he had fucked and learned how to please his lovers to the fullest of his capabilities, but he had never given or received a backrub until he had mated to Harry and then that little tease had rolled him onto his stomach, striped off his shirt and straddled him naked and proceeded to show him exactly how to give a proper backrub. Nasta had fallen a little more in love with Harry that night and even more so after what came next. He grinned a naughty grin that no one could see as he stroked lightly along Harry’s skin and sides.

Harry moaned lightly and smiled to himself as he felt rough hands glide up his spine and fan down his sides.

“Do you feel better?” Nasta bent down to whisper in his ear.

Harry nodded and lay still as he relaxed into the mattress and let Nasta’s fingers calm and sooth him. He couldn’t really remember much of what had happened before he had gone to sleep, he remembered arguing with Blaise, then he had been crying, then Myron had been there with Richard and then he had woken up to Nasta. He felt confused and wondered why he felt so unhappy and distressed. He wanted to send out a call, but he didn’t know why. Then it came to him. Blaise had gone.
“Blaise!” Harry said, shooting up.

“Blaise is fine, he’s cooling down at Marianna’s, he was fast asleep when I went to get him. I left him there after being assured that Marianna had had several stern words with him and had made him realise exactly what he had done.” What Nasta didn’t tell Harry was that Marianna had also told him that she expected him to take Blaise firmly to hand once she sent him back. He planned to.

Nasta eased him back down and stroked his belly for him, helping him when he wanted to move onto his side.

“Do you need anything?”

“Where’s Braiden?” Harry asked.

“Having some much needed quality time with Draco and Max, who are both teasing him rotten by tickling and nibbling on him like a sweet treat.”

Harry chuckled deeply. “Can I see?”

Nasta scooped Harry up gently and carried him into the living room, where Max had spread a quilted blanket onto the floor and had lain Braiden on it. Max sat on one side of the squalling baby and Draco on the other. They were tickling him, nibbling him, poking fingers into his sides and armpits, kissing him, blowing raspberries on him, wiggling his toes and arms and Braiden was giggling in his huffy way so much that it brought a wide smile to his face.

“Look who’s awake.” Nasta declared as he approached them with Harry.

Nasta settled him between Max and Draco, sitting by Braiden’s feet and he sat himself behind Harry. Draco kissed him first and stroked his cheek; Max kissed him and then licked across his cheek to his ear. Harry pushed him away and wiped his face but he was laughing.

Harry bent down to kiss Braiden, but his belly got in the way, so he pulled Braiden up by his arms, his son having enough strength to hold his head up as Harry pulled him from the floor, but unwilling to take any chances, Harry kissed and nuzzled him quickly, before lowering him back onto the blanket.
“Harry, we’re sorry. All of us…”

“You don’t need to say it.” Harry said with a soft smile. “We’ve all had a horrible time of this and this past week has been awful.”

“But not as bad a time as you, Harry, you’re pregnant, we should be taking care of you, not passing you the most responsibility.” Max explained. “I’m taking a leave of absence from work. They’ve assured me that they’ll take me back with open arms whenever I decide to go back to work.”

“I’m back on paperwork duties, the dragons have all laid their eggs now, the breeding season is over and all the bucks we had on loan have been safely sent back to their respective Reserves. The Mother dragons will now incubate the eggs for three, four months and then it’s just keeping an eye on the nestlings and making sure the male dragons who are at our reserve don’t eat the hatchlings and fledglings.” Nasta explained.

Harry smiled and lent back against Nasta’s chest, loving the arms that wrapped around his huge stomach, stroking and caressing. A baby kicked Nasta’s hand and his lover chuckled and kissed the side of his neck.

“I love you.”

“I love you more.” Harry teased.

Nasta chuckled. “You must do if you’re willing to put up with us after what we’ve done and look after our six kids too.”

“Oh imagine the night feeds.” Max groaned. “I hope they all wake up at the same time, half an hour feeding them all and then back to bed. Knowing my luck though they’ll all wake up an hour apart from each other.”

Harry chuckled. “It won’t be long, as soon as I’m out of school everything will be fine, it will be easier, we just have to survive until June.”

“Just seven months.” Max sighed. “Seven more months and then our biggest hurdle to date will be behind us."

Harry kissed him and told him with his eyes how much he loved him and appreciated that he was willing to give up his job, even temporarily, to help ease his stress and work load.

“Have you finished your homework?” Nasta asked.

“It’s Saturday.” Harry complained.

“And if you finish it all today, you’ll have the entire of Sunday to relax and do absolutely nothing.”

“Ooo.” Harry perked up at that and he made his mates chuckle as he slipped over to Draco and they did their last few pieces of homework together on the coffee table.

Nasta was waiting when Blaise came home late that night. He looked miserable and his eyes were red rimmed from tears.

It had to be said though that Blaise just lowered his head as he stood in front of him, willing to accept his punishment like a man.

“Do you know what you did?” He asked softly, unwilling to raise his voice and risk waking Harry, Draco and Max, who had gone to bed an hour or so ago.

“I left when I shouldn’t have.” Blaise answered in almost a whisper. “I should never have left them unprotected. My submissive mate and my own son. I’m not fit to be a partner or a parent.”

Nasta’s heart clenched. Blaise was so young. He had been expecting something like this for a while, from either of the younger dominants, but he had been expecting it to be Draco over Blaise, so he supposed he owed the blond an apology.

Nasta steeled himself for the punishment, he didn’t want to do it, but as the top dominant it was his role to keep his submissive and all his subordinates in line. He had to, to get it through to Blaise that he could not just leave Harry and Braiden unprotected. Anything could have happened to Harry, he could have tried to console himself in his pillow and fallen down the stairs to their bed, he could have fallen, tripped over, been attacked, if he had left their rooms he could have been kidnapped along with their son and five unborn children and they wouldn’t have been able to get to him in time to help him. Blaise needed to understand that.

“They could have been killed, Blaise. All seven of them could have died or been kidnapped. Do you understand that?”

“Yes.” Blaise whispered. “At the time I was so tired, so frustrated with my homework and so angry at everything that I didn’t think properly and I’m sorry. I don’t expect anyone to forgive me or what I did. I’m a terrible person.”

Blaise started crying then and it was all Nasta could do to hold himself firm and not wrap him up in a hug, kiss him and tell him that everything would be alright.

“Understand that if anything, anything at all had happened to them, I would have killed you, Blaise. I would have killed you.”

Blaise hunched down just a bit, the tears still falling from his eyes and his shoulders shaking.

“If anything had happened to them I would have killed myself.” He admitted thickly through his tears.

Nasta shook his head and decided to get the punishment over with quickly. He pulled Blaise to lean against him, unsheathed his four fangs and he sunk them slowly and painfully into Blaise’s neck juncture, just where it met the shoulder. He bit down and he clenched his jaw, holding, holding, holding as Blaise’s body seized up in pain around him, clenching, trying to twist away, but Nasta held him tight.

He carefully pulled his teeth and his fangs out and left Blaise to bleed, not offering him his blood to heal the mark.

“You will wear that mark, you will look at them when they scab over and you will remember to never do anything like this ever again.” Nasta ordered.

Blaise nodded and then the punishment was over and Nasta pulled Blaise into his arms and held him as he cried, shushed him, kissed him and held him until he fell asleep in his arms, his face soaking wet from his tears, his neck plastered in dried blood and still murmuring soft, sleepy ‘sorries’ under his breath.
Nasta had tears in his eyes himself and he hoped that he never, never had to punish a subordinate mate in this way ever again.

Blaise wore his healing scabs on show to everyone, wearing one of Max’s jumpers for the first time, which was so large that it fell off the one shoulder, the shoulder that Nasta had bitten. Nasta hated seeing it, but he knew that Blaise looked at it often and remembered what he had done and that it helped to steel himself to never do it again. Soon the scabs would heal and there would be no mark left to remind him, so the message had to sink in before they healed. Nasta was sure that it would have sunk in so deep by then that none of them would ever forget the time that they had almost watched Harry die slowly in front of them from pure exhaustion while doing absolutely nothing to help him.
