Tearing Into Your Soul

Summary

Bruce Wayne and his brother Jack are both witnesses to their parents’ murder. Bruce handles the loss one way, while Jack goes another until Bruce is forced to hire a doctor for his younger brother's deteriorating mental condition.

Notes

Arrival

It was a wonderful night for the Waynes who had finally gotten a chance to go out as a family, which didn't happen very often. The boys' father was a surgeon, a miracle-worker some said, and because of his gift, he was always busy. But that wasn't the only reason that Thomas Wayne was always busy. He was working to heal Gotham, not just with his skills as a surgeon, but also with the charity work he did with his wife Martha.

Their sons, Bruce and Jack, understood why their father was so busy. He would tell them time and time again that they should give back to the city of Gotham when they could and that was exactly what he and their mother were doing, giving back. They, as a family of privilege, had a responsibility to the less well-off of Gotham. They had an obligation to try to make Gotham a better place for everyone.

The boys understood, at least somewhat.

Despite understanding their parents' mission, they couldn't help but want to spend more time with their father and mother together.

But tonight was finally one of those nights where the family was all together. It was such a rare treat that in their excitement, the boys acted as if it were Christmas. The family had headed into downtown Gotham for a night on the town, dinner at a fancy restaurant, a movie the boys would enjoy...it was perfect.

They had been walking the streets of Gotham after the movie. The family decided to enjoy the clear night before heading home. Their sons were just a little distance ahead of their parents, playing characters from the movies. Bruce laughed, grabbing his little brother. “I'm taking you to jail foul villain!!”

“Bruce!! I'm not a bad guy!! I'm not going to jail!” Jack elbowed his brother in the stomach.

“Boys, now no fighting.” Their mother frowned, absently fingering her pearls with a gentle smile.

“Thomas can you make those boys settle down?”

The boys’ father laughed. “Alright you two, settle down and listen to your mother.”

The two boys were laughing and running around each other when a voice floated out of the darkness.

“Yeah boys, you might want to settle down before someone gets hurt.”

The boy's mother gasped. “Bruce! Jack! Come here!”

Before the boys could get out of reach, a man stepped out of the darkness. Long skeletal hands reached out for one of the boys, managing to grab the Wayne's youngest son Jack by the collar of his jacket. The mysterious man hauled the boy back toward him as he revealed the pistol in his other hand to the boy's parents.

Jack cried out “DADDY!” just as the gunman yanked the boy against him, wrapping his arm around the young boy's neck pressing painfully against Jack's throat. The youngest Wayne struggled, but the man holding him pressed hard against his thin neck nearly cutting off Jack's
“If you two fine folks don’t want this one to get hurt, I suggest you hand over everything, your money, them fine jewels you’re wearing...all of it.”

Bruce had run back to his parents' side. His mother grabbed him, pushing Bruce behind her, just as the man with the gun stepped forward dragging a still-struggling Jack with him, his fingers digging into the young boy's shoulder. Jack cried out, his tiny, thin collarbone snapping.

Thomas Wayne threw down his wallet at the criminal's feet. “Let my boy go now!”

The criminal yanked Jack hard, causing the boy to cry out in pain, the broke bone in his collar digging into the child's flesh beneath his skin. For a moment Jack's vision wavered, the pain causing everything to seem fuzzy, out of focus. He saw his parents standing there, his big brother hiding behind their mother, doing nothing to save him. Jack felt hot tears rolling down his cheeks, but no one moved to take him away from the bad man.

Thomas Wayne stepped forward reaching for his youngest son. “You have our money give me my son!”

The gunman snarled. “Stay back!” The man waved the gun to punctuate his statement.

That was when gun went off, a bullet striking Thomas Wayne in the chest. His body seemed to fly backwards in slow motion. Both boys watched in horror, the spray of bright red blood caught by the weak streetlights, their father's body slamming against the pavement, bouncing once then going still...

The boys' mother screamed; she reached for her husband calling his name. The gunman fired at her as Jack cried. Bruce cried out. The bullet ripped through their mother's neck, her pearl necklace shattering, ripped in half, pearls flying into the air stained bright red. As the bullet hit his mother, her blood splattered Bruce's face. He could hear the cry of his little brother being thrown to the ground, the retreating footsteps of the man running away....then the only sounds were Jack's weeping.

Bruce woke up gasping for breath, dripping with sweat. He took a steadying breath running his hand through his damp hair. He couldn't recall how many times he had dreamt of that night, the night his whole life changed. He took a steadying breath when he heard the laughter. Bruce sighed throwing his legs off the side of the bed.

The laughter had started out as a soft giggle, but now it had burst into full-blown maniacal laughter, a shadow of sound that echoed through the manor. Bruce knew it was only a memory of a laugh...the manor was quiet...but the laughter seemed to always be lurking...waiting...

Bruce pushed himself off the bed and headed to the bathroom. Thank goodness the private psychiatrist was starting today. It was becoming more and more difficult for Bruce to handle his younger brother alone, especially since he had begun his nighttime activities...focusing his rage and pain in protecting Gotham as the Batman.

As Bruce ran some hot water in the sink to wash his face, his thoughts wandered to his brother Jack. Jack would disappear for days on end. No word of warning, nothing. He would just be gone, only to return home smelling of smoke, gun oil, alcohol and drugs. Sometimes he would come back looking as if he had been beaten, other times he would have blood on him but no wounds, only that maniacal smile that never seemed to waver. Jack would never divulge where he had been or what had happened to him while he was gone. Even when Jack would come home beaten and bloody, he still would only laugh that maniacal laughter and tell Bruce not to worry.

But Bruce did worry. He could see the gleam of something in his brother's eyes that wasn't—right—but he had no idea what it was or how to handle it. It had been there since that night in the alley and had grown steadily more acute.

Now that he was older, Bruce knew that everything in regards to Jack had been handled poorly. After their parents' death, Jack had never been “right” again. He had started to mutter to himself, laughing at the strangest times, becoming more extreme in his behavior, dangerous to himself and sometimes others. The disappearances would be for longer and longer periods as he became older.

It was as if Jack had no will to live.

But the worst part was when he would find Jack's writings or drawing. Jack's brilliant mind was still there, hidden in the madness that was quietly taking him over. Jack would spend hours working on formulas for things Bruce, at the time, didn't understand.

He had thought about sending Jack to private school, a boarding school, away from the manor, away from Gotham. Bruce thought that maybe, being away might help Jack to become more...focused, stable, but Bruce wasn't sure what he hoped would happen. He sent his little brother away to a boarding school out of state. Bruce sometimes wondered if he had sent Jack away for his own peace of mind, that it wasn't for Jack's sake, but for his own that he sent Jack away to school.

Jack excelled in his classes. Jack was just as brilliant as Bruce; in some ways Jack was even more gifted. Bruce was told that his brother was a genius, that Jack could be capable of great things. But that had all come crumbling down.

When Jack returned home...actually Jack didn't return home, he was dismissed after a fight had started in which Jack had permanently disfigured a fellow student. It wasn't the first time Jack had been implicated in some sort of violence at school, but it was the first time Jack had been caught. All the other incidents had been hearsay, reports of Jack's involvement from the school had only been speculation, but the school had contacted Bruce in order to let him know about the allegations. But then the fight, the disfigured student...there had been several witnesses. Bruce never learned all the details, only that Jack had pinned the boy to the floor, laughing hysterically and carved a smile from ear to ear on the boy while whispering to him. “A smile makes everything better don't you think?”

Jack would not talk about the incident, he only told Bruce that no one at the school had a sense of humor. A large settlement with the student's family had been handled quietly and Jack had come home.

And thus Bruce had hired private tutors for Jack after that, with the help of the boys' butler Alfred Pennyworth.

Jack had a brilliant mind, just like Bruce, just like their father. He excelled in chemistry, math, philosophy, art....all subjects it seemed. But while Bruce maintained his sanity, Jack spiraled into more and more violent behavior.

Bruce stared at himself in the mirror. He had escaped his pain over his parents' death by focusing on training, building, learning. Perhaps he had also been trying to escape...escape not just his pain, but the pain of watching his brother fall into madness, to become something he didn't recognize.

In recent years Bruce had turned his focus on Gotham. He didn't want any other children to grow up without their parents, to end up like him and Jack, orphans. Bruce's time away in the evenings had not gone unnoticed by Jack, though Bruce assumed his nocturnal activities were going unnoticed. Though Jack wasn't buying the “playboy about Gotham” persona Bruce had been cultivating since he hit his twenties. Jack would give him these strange knowing smiles, as if the brothers were sharing some great secret. The brothers didn't speak much, which made it easy for Bruce to keep his newest project secret...but he wondered how much Jack suspected.

As Bruce dressed that morning, he asked himself the same question over and over. Could he have done more when Jack was young? Even though he had been only a child himself? He didn't see what was happening to Jack until it was already too late.

Bruce adjusted his tie. There was no point in worrying about the past...he had to focus on his mission...to keep Gotham safe so that no other families fell apart like his. Losing his parents to the criminals, to the dirty underbelly of Gotham and then the slow loss of his brother to madness brought on by what happened when they were kids....no one else would suffer if Bruce Wayne had any say in it. He had just stepped back into the main area of his bedroom when there was a knock at his door.

“Sir, are you up? Ready for breakfast?”

Bruce smiled. It was Alfred Pennyworth, his family's loyal butler and his second father.

“Come in Alfred.”

Alfred came in carrying a tray from which Bruce could smell bacon, eggs, toast and the rich smell of coffee.

As Alfred set the tray down Bruce walked over.

“Have you seen Jack this morning yet?: Bruce asked as he sat down at the small table and chair in one corner of his room.

“Yes Master Bruce. I served him breakfast down in the kitchen. I am uncertain if it is my place to mention this, but he was quite excited about something he was doing this evening. He stated he would be gone all evening.

Bruce frowned. “Maybe we can convince him to stay in...his new doctor is arriving today.”

“Yes sir. She shall be here within the next hour I believe.” Alfred set Bruce's breakfast out on the table by the window.

“Is there anything else you need sir?” Alfred asked as he finished setting up the breakfast.

“Thank you Alfred, I'm good. Going to eat and run,” Bruce explained. “I'm supposed to be heading over for a board meeting this morning.”

Alfred bowed, but before he left he placed his hand on Bruce's shoulder.

“I hope so.” Bruce sighed.

Alfred returned to the kitchen to see that Jack was still at the small table scribbling notes with a wide smile on his lips, his light brown hair having fallen over his forehead to hide his green eyes as he worked.

“Master Jack, I wanted to remind you that your new doctor will be arriving today.”

Jack looked up from his work, a frown suddenly replacing his smile. “Is that today?”

“Yes sir.” Alfred started to clean the oven.

“This one is going to live with us? I still can't believe Bruce thought that was a good idea.” Jack giggled. “A live-in doctor for the crazy brother!” He stopped what he was doing to laugh louder.

Alfred frowned. Jack's laughing had started to sound...frightening to him...as if the young master was about to go off the rails so to speak.

“Promise to be on your best behavior master Jack.” Alfred walked over picking up Jack's breakfast dishes.

Jack grinned crossing his heart with his long fingers. “I cross my heart and hope to die Alfred.” Then he giggled.

Dr. Harleen Quinzel pulled up at the gate in her beat up VW bug, her blue eyes large and round as she looked through the gate toward Wayne Manor. The place was far bigger than she had anticipated. She knew Bruce Wayne had money and lots of it, but she hadn't really considered how much money until she got a look at the house. Harleen swallowed. “Wow...” she whispered to herself.

She rolled down her window, leaning out to press the button on the intercom.

“Wayne residence, how may I help you?”

Harleen smiled. “Dr. Harleen Quinzel, I'm here!”

“Oh good morning Dr. Quinzel, I shall just buzz you through.”

There was the sound of an actual “buzz” and the gate slowly opened. Harleen drove through, her heart hammering in her chest with excitement and a little bit of fear. She hadn't been a doctor that long when Bruce Wayne hired her to be his brother's private doctor. Rumor had it that Jack Wayne was so crazy that Bruce Wayne kept him locked up in a tower...stories of course. But Dr. Quinzel had been scared and thrilled when Mr. Wayne had offered her the job.

Mr. Wayne had hired her on the understanding that she would speak to no one about her work with his brother. The elder Wayne brother also required her to sign a non-disclosure agreement that prevented her from writing about or publishing any work relevant to her time with the Waynes. Which was fine with her; Mr. Wayne was providing her not just with a paycheck, but he was also providing her room and board at the Wayne estate so that she was always on hand when his younger brother needed her.

Harleen drove up turning her tiny car along the circle drive and parking on the side, her eyes wandering up the front of the manor. “God!” she thought to herself as she got out of her car. The place was even bigger up close.

Inside, gazing out one of the windows, Jack watched his new doctor pull up. She wasn't very tall, he noted, watching her as she stood next to the little VW. He would tower over her, but she had a very nice figure that was highlighted by her black pencil skirt and deep red blouse. Her thick blonde hair was piled onto the top of her head, held in place by a couple of hair sticks. She turned around to pull her suitcase out of her vehicle as Alfred walked out to meet her, Jack saw the sunlight reflect off the lenses of a pair of glasses.

He rested his narrow chin on the palm of his hand watching her with a huge grin. He wondered how much fun she would be...she couldn't be much older than him. Though he couldn't get a very good look at her face from up here, he wouldn't be surprised if she was a good ten years younger than he was. He giggled. “Pretty, Pretty...” he murmured to himself pushing away from the window. He stopped at the full-length mirror that sat in the corner of his room and looked himself over. His brown hair was slicked back from his face and he wore a suit of dark grey, pinstriped with a lighter grey, and a bright purple tie for color. His shoes were highly polished oxfords that he snazzied up with a pair of spats. He grinned showing off his perfectly white, almost unnatural looking straight teeth.

“Let me show you to your room first Dr. Quinzel, give yourself a chance to get settled in before you meet Master Jack.” Alfred Pennyworth, a real-life butler, picked up Harleen's bags for her and turned to walk up the stairs. Harleen was trying her best not to stare at everything, but this place was incredible!

The stairs were made of some sort of highly polished thick wood, and looked as if they came out of some romance novel, Gothic manor on the moors! There were huge paintings and other pieces of art such as marble sculptures or huge vases...everything looked as if it should be in a museum! Harleen found herself holding her arms close to her body, afraid she might knock something over and break it!

Just as she put her foot on the first stair, she heard the sound of a cheery laugh.

“Let me take those Alfred, old boy!”

Harleen looked up to see an incredibly handsome man leaning over to take her bags from the butler.

“Master Jack I am quite capable...”

“Oh Pfffttt!! Alfred...she is going to be my doctor, let me show her to her room.” The man looked past Alfred and grinned at her.

Harleen found herself speechless for a moment. He really was very handsome as he smiled down at her. “Jack? Jack Wayne?” she finally managed to get out.

Despite holding her bags, Jack Wayne executed a perfectly elegant bow.

“At your service Dr. Quinzel.” He grinned brightly at her.

Harleen tried to remain professional, but she couldn't stop the blush creeping up her neck and over her cheeks.

Jack continued to grin. “Come along Doc. I'll show you your room!”

Alfred nodded to her as she walked past him but as she followed Jack up the stairs Alfred frowned deeper...

Jack threw open the doors to the most beautiful room Harleen had ever seen. All through college she had been forced to share a house with six other girls, all of them struggling to make ends meet and get through school. Before that, she had lived in a dinky two bedroom apartment with her parents, two sisters and a brother. This room made all those places look as if she had been homeless this whole time. She could fit everything she had ever owned in this room! She pressed her lips together in order to keep her mouth from hanging open as she stepped in. The room had a king size bed in the middle of it. The mattress on the bed looked as if she would sink into its comfy embrace. The room also included a large desk and bookcase in one corner. There was a giant chest of drawers, a vanity with mirror, a full length mirror, a dressing screen painted with roses and a massive window. As she walked over to the window she saw that it looked out onto the Wayne Manor gardens.

Jack set her luggage down and flopped onto the bed.

“I know it isn't much, but I hope you will find it comfortable doctor.” Jack leaned back on his elbows watching her inspect the room.

She had just opened a door peering in and saw that she had her own bath with a deep, sauna bathtub...it was as if she had just booked a room at a swanky hotel in downtown Gotham.

She looked back at Jack who was watching his feet as he kicked his legs back and forth over the edge of the bed. “This is very nice. Thank you Mr. Wayne.”

Jack grinned at her. “Mr. Wayne is my brother. Call me Jack...especially since you are going to be poking around in my head.”

Harleen walked over to take a seat on the bed beside him. “Is that what you think I'm going to do? Dig around where I’m not wanted?”

Jack shrugged. “Maybe...maybe not.” He grinned and laid back on his elbows, rolling his head to lay his cheek against his shoulder. “You are quite pretty for a doctor.”

Harleen blushed. “Thank you. But my looks do not take away from the fact that I know what I'm doing.”

Jack nodded and pushed himself to his feet with a little hop. “Well, you get yourself settled Dr. Quinzel.”

Jack did a spin on the balls of his feet, stopping to grin at her. “You know, if you rework your name a little, you could be Harley Quinn...like a Harlequin...doesn't that just make you want to smile?”

He chuckled taking several long strides to the door.

“See you for our first session doctor.” He winked at her before slipping out the door.
The next morning, Dr. Quinzel dressed in what she hoped was a professional looking outfit. She had on a white coat/jacket over a deep blue blouse and a straight black skirt. She carefully chose her shoes, deep red heels, not too high, but high enough to give her some height and hopefully some authority. Her stockings were a bit...risky...for her professional look, with the line running down the back, but they were her favorite kind of hose to wear, a little sexy without being too sexy.

Harleen studied herself in the mirror as she piled her thick blonde hair up on top of her head, shoving a few bobby pins in to hold it in a bun. Despite her best efforts, however, long strands came loose to frame her face. Sometimes she really hated the way she looked. No one took her seriously as a doctor. Well...until Mr. Wayne. She sighed a little. He was quite handsome, wealthy, donated to charities with genuine concern for people...everything a girl would want really, but when she had met him face to face for her interview, all her “attraction” had vanished. He was still handsome and rich, but there was something about him that was...distant. He was not a man who gave in to his passions. It had been a disappointment to Harleen...no whirlwind romance with a billionaire in her future. She just felt no attraction to him.

She slipped her glasses on. They were fake—like her blonde hair—just plain glass filled the frames. She hoped the glasses helped her look more professional, smart. She turned her head one way, then the other. This job could be the chance she needed, a chance for her to make her career...maybe write that book she wanted to write on extreme personalities, albeit with names changed, maintaining the privacy of the Wayne family and upholding her contract. Working with Mr. Wayne's brother could be the big break she needed to get Arkham Asylum to give her a serious look as a doctor. She smiled at herself. Now, to go find her patient. When Harleen stepped out of her room, she realized she had no idea where she was supposed to go. Yesterday, after Jack Wayne had shown her to her room, he had disappeared. It was the butler, Alfred Pennyworth who had given her a tour of the estate.

The Wayne grounds and the manor were gorgeous! Harleen had seen pictures of the Wayne manor and it's lands in magazines before...images from when the Wayne boys had been young, before their parents' tragic death. She remembered gazing at the house in wonder while flipping through the magazine. It was a radical difference between her own home, a cramped two bedroom apartment with her parents, a brother and two sisters. But now, here she was, her own spacious room in the Wayne manor.

Harleen carefully made her way down the elegant staircase looking for anyone, but the place seemed deserted. When she reached the great hall, she walked around, gazing at the art on display. She was simply amazed by what the Wayne's had in art. There was an original Rembrandt, and a one of a kind Rachel Whiteread, and those were just a small sampling of what she saw and what she suspected they owned!

She had just walked through a doorway that led to what looked to her to be a dining room when she smelled coffee. She lifted her head sniffing the air. Oh yes...coffee! she thought. At that same moment her stomach made a loud growling sound. Blushing, Harleen grabbed her stomach only to hear a soft giggle.

Harleen turned around swiftly to see Jack Wayne standing there watching her from the doorway. Her heart slammed against her breastbone. She hadn't heard him at all.
“Hello Mr. Wayne.” She pressed her lips together. He looked incredibly dashing, leaning in the doorway with that smile on his face.

Jack chuckled, holding up a gloved finger. “Tsk, tsk! Dr. Quinzel. I told you, Mr. Wayne is my brother.”

Harleen smiled. “Sorry...Jack,” she amended.

He grinned. “Now that is much better.”

This morning Jack was dressed in a three-piece English cut suit of black with thin pin-stripping in dark grey, paired with a blood red tie and spats over his black oxfords. He even had a gold chain across his stomach. His brown hair was slicked back, highlighting his brilliant eyes, eyes which she couldn't decide the color of...his eyes almost seemed to shift from blue to green as he walked across the room toward her.

“How about I escort you to the kitchen for breakfast?” He smiled at her, those perfect teeth forming a perfect grin.

“You eat in the kitchen?” Harleen asked a little surprised.

“When I'm home I do...most of the time. When I'm working, I take my meals in my room.” Jack put his arm out for her and she hooked her arm through his.

“What sort of work do you do Jack? Do you work with your brother?” Harleen tried to suppress the blush, but this close he smelled...good...more than good—delicious. She couldn't put her finger on what the scent was, but she found it almost intoxicating.

“Work with Bruce? Pfftt!” Jack made a rude noise and laughed. “Oh listen to you! Trying to get into my confidences already and we haven't even had a first date! Naughty naughty, doctor!”

Jack giggled taking her around a corner and into the kitchens. She was immediately in heaven. The smells of coffee and cooking eggs were delicious and her stomach was making itself loudly heard. Alfred looked up from where he was working at the stove. “Ah Master Jack, Dr. Quinzel—ready for breakfast?”

Jack let go of her arm and pulled a stool out for her, one of several that lined a large metal topped counter in the center of the kitchen.

“That smells divine Mr. Pennyworth. What are you fixing?” Harleen asked as she took her seat.

Alfred smiled while Jack pulled three mugs down and started to fill them with coffee from the coffee pot down the counter from the oven.

“I'm making Master Jack a crab and cheese omelet,” Alfred explained. “Would you like one Dr. Quinzel? It is no trouble at all.” Alfred smiled at her while he worked.

“Oh please, call me Harleen. That goes for you too Jack. I may be your doctor, but I also want us to be friends.” She smiled softly. Some of her instructors had taught that one had to maintain a critical distance from one's patients, whereas others had argued that balancing a friendly relationship while being professional was important with some patients. Harleen elected to go for the closer relationship on this job.

Jack gave her a devilishly amused grin. “I don't have any friends except old Alfred here.”

“Miss Harleen? Omelet?” Alfred slid Jack's onto a plate with ease, picking up some eggs ready for the next omelet.

“You know...I will have one, thank you.” Harleen sipped her hot coffee with a smile. Alfred smiled and nodded as he set Jack's plate in front of him and started to prepare her omelet. Jack pushed his plate in front of her. “You have this one—I'll wait.” He grinned at her leaning his elbow on the table and putting his chin in his gloved hand.

“I couldn't!” she exclaimed, but Jack grinned and lifted one eyebrow. “I insist.”

Harleen smiled taking the plate and cutting a bite off. She stuck her fork in the fluffy egg and brought it to her mouth, Jack watched her the whole time with a smile on his face, his gaze intense as he watched her. When Harleen bit into the fluffy egg, cheese and crab, her eyes rolled. It was probably the best thing she had ever eaten.

“Oh Mr. Pennyworth,” she said with a pleasantly surprised expression. “This is delicious!”

Alfred gave her a smile over his shoulder. “I am happy that you find it so, Dr. Quinzel. And please, call me Alfred.”

Jack grinned brightly. “Now that we are breaking bread together, can I call you a friend Dr. Quinzel?”

Harleen smiled back at him. “I'm here to help you...Jack. That is why your brother hired me. I hope that we can build a trust between us and yes, you can call me your friend.”

Jack looked delighted. “I actually don't have any friends, you Doctor, will be my first. Other than Alfred, of course.”

Harleen smiled. “And you will be my first. I don't have any friends either Jack.”

Jack grinned wider. “Well, you have one now Harleen.”

After breakfast, while she was finishing her coffee, Harleen asked Jack, “So what do you do Jack?”

Jack chuckled. “Oh, a bit of this and a bit of that...”

She nodded sipping her coffee. “Why don't we, together, decide on a room that would be the best place to conduct our sessions. I would like to set aside an hour each day for us to just...talk...get to know one another. The rest of today I would like to spend observing—if that is acceptable to you Jack?”

Jack grinned with a glint in his eyes. “Oh, that is more than acceptable.”

Alfred frowned glancing at the two of them. Jack's enthusiasm surprised Alfred. When Master Bruce had first approached Jack about having a live-in doctor for him, Jack had been livid. He had disappeared for a day and a half, returning dirty, beaten with a bloody lip, but he had said nothing to Master Bruce when he returned about where he had been or what had happened while he was gone.
The only thing that Jack had said was that he was agreeable to the doctor now.

Jack hopped to his feet bowing at the waist, one hand behind his back and the other he held out to Harleen. “Shall we then, my dear doctor?”

Harleen couldn't help the smile that danced across her lips. He was indeed charming. She took his hand as she slid off her stool. Then Jack spun around, his arm extended to her. Harleen put her arm through his and the two set off. Alfred watched them leave the kitchen, a strange feeling of foreboding washing over him.

Jack walked Harleen out into the main room throwing his arm up like a game show host.

“Now we have so many many rooms we could explore...but...I think I have the perfect room for our little chitchat sessions, my dear doctor.” With a display of his teeth in a wide grin, Jack proceeded to guide Harleen back the way they had come through the dining room, the great hall, through another room that she thought might be a drawing room, into yet another room that looked to be a study, finally stopping in what was clearly a library.

The walls, except for one where a very large fireplace dominated the space, were covered in shelves upon shelves of books, reaching all the way to the high ceilings of the room. There were a handful of long polished tables as well as several comfortable looking wing-backed chairs, and a long couch that reminded Harleen of something found in a Victorian era home.

The room was all polished wood and warm rich colors. The textured ceiling was highlighted by the warm light of a chandelier.

Jack grinned as he took her hand. “How is this my dear, dear doctor?”

Harleen smiled looking around. “I think this will do perfectly Jack.”

He laughed and, still holding her hand, escorted her to one of the chairs. He pulled her hand up and kissed her knuckles before he gracefully took a seat on the couch next to her. He crossed his legs and folded his hands along his knee.

“So my dear beautiful Doctor Harleen, what shall we talk about?”

Harleen blushed. “Please Jack, while I appreciate the compliments, can you please not do that?”

Jack grinned at her. “Why ever not? You are a beautiful woman, after all.”

Harleen blushed, clearing her throat. “We should be talking about you, not me.”

Jack continued to smile, something that Harleen noticed he did a lot. She wondered if his smile hid something deeper however, something not amusing or happy. “Alright, what should we talk about?” he inquired.

“Well, since this is our first session, why don't we just get to know each other?” Harleen smiled. Jack tilted his head to the side, maintaining his smile.

“You have a beautiful smile.” He giggled when she blushed and continued. “Alright, how about for every question I answer of yours, you have to answer a question of mine?
Honestly. No beating around the bush or declining to answer. If you want me to trust you, then you need to be perfectly honest.” Jack smirked. Harleen nodded in acceptance.

“Alright, but you promise the same? Complete honesty?” Harleen put her hand out to him. Jack gracefully removed his gloves, placing them on the couch beside him and wrapped his long fingers around hers. Harleen felt the warmth of his hand run up her arm, spreading through her like melted chocolate, oozing and caressing as the heat traveled through her body.

He held her hand, not letting go even when Halreen lightly tried to tug her hand back. He turned her hand over, her palm laying open and started to trace the lines the criss-crossed her palm.

“I think I shall go first,” he murmured gazing at her palm. His touch tickled slightly, the tip of his finger just barely skimming the lines of her palm. She noticed that his nails were perfectly manicured, his fingers the long tapered digits of an artist.

“Why did you become a doctor, a psychiatrist...Harley?” Jack looked up then, catching her eyes with his and holding hers with the intensity of his gaze. A stray lock of hair fell forward across his forehead. Harleen had a powerful urge to reach over and brush the lock of hair back into place with the others. With a mixture of excitement and alarm, she thought that he looked incredibly sexy as he stared at her.

She swallowed. “Remember, my name is Harleen.”

Jack grinned. “Yes, but I like Harley. You look like a Harley to me. Remember, yesterday when I said reworking your name to Harley Quinn instead of Harleen Quinzel...made me smile? You want me to smile don't you Harley?”

Harleen blushed glancing down at her hand in his, his finger still lightly tracing the lines of her palm. “Alright, when we are alone, you may call me Harley if you like, but if we are in public or around your brother, please call me Harleen or Dr. Quinzel.”

Jack nodded his agreement.

“I became a psychiatrist to help people. I've always been fascinated by “extreme” personalities, people who see the world differently.” Harleen watched while Jack continued to caress her palm.

“My turn,” she said softly. “Why did you have problems in school?”

Jack stopped his caresses to laugh. “Oh, now that was a long time ago! Boarding school...who would ever like that?” He met her gaze, a slight crinkle around his eyes filled with humor. “Poor orphaned rich boy whose own brother doesn't want him around? It was a perfect storm for teasing, beatings, you name a humiliation, I bore it. Until I became tired of it.”

He laughed then. “Poor Brucie, never knowing what to do with his little brother.” Jack dropped her hand to lean back into the couch.

Harleen found herself disappointed that he had dropped her hand and tried to put that thought out of her mind.

He grinned at her, putting his hands behind his head. “My turn. Why the glasses? They're clearly fake.”

Harleen blushed again pushing the glasses up her nose. “I...wanted to project a more professional air. It's hard to be taken seriously as a woman.”
Jack smirked. “You mean as an attractive woman, don't you?”

Harleen blushed and posed her own question. “What's your favorite past time?”

Jack nodded. “Yes. I love chemistry and explosives...maybe I'll show you my ‘lab’ sometime.”

When Jack said lab, he emphasized the word by removing his hands from behind his head and made air quotes.

Harleen smiled. “I would like that.”

Jack laughed. “Okay...” He hopped to his feet. “I'm bored with this game. We should do something fun!”

“Fun?” Harleen stood up. Jack let his eyes roam slowly down her body. “Hmm...” His eyes came back to her face. “You should change into slacks.”

“Why?” Harleen self-consciously ran her hands down her skirt to smooth it out.

“Because, I'm taking you for a ride on my motorcycle.” Jack spun on his heel and walked out of the library calling over his shoulder.

“Come on Harley!”

Harleen stood there unsure what to do. She heard Jack call again. “Come on Harley!!!”

She jerked and took off at an awkward jog in her high heels after him. She had said that she wanted to build trust between them—she had to admit that riding on a motorcycle would be one way to achieve a new level of trust.

Several minutes later, Harleen found herself standing in a garage that was bigger than four of her apartments put together. Jack had waggled his eyebrows at her when he flipped the switch that lit up the entire room, rows of lights snapping on to reveal the works of art that were the Wayne brothers' cars.

There were a wide variety of cars, from a 1936 Mercedes-Benz 540K Special Roadster painted in midnight black, to a 2017 Bugatti Chiron in a deep, sparkling silver. Harleen tried to keep her mouth close, but she couldn't help gaping at the cars. Each vehicle was expensive and beautiful.

Jack was still in his suit while Harleen had changed into a pair of black slacks, losing her white “doctor” coat for a red fitted blazer and a pair of knee-high black boots. She had left the glasses upstairs too, though her hair was still up in its conservative bun.

Jack grabbed her hand and pulled her down the garage to a section where there were several motorcycles running down the decades in the same way as the automobiles. Jack stopped in front of a slick looking motorcycle painted a vibrate purple with decals or paint that appeared to be happy faces with knives through them.

“This, my dear is MTT's New 420 RR, Turbine Superbike, one of the fastest bikes on the market. Well...not yet,” he corrected himself. “This is one of the first, but it's one of the fastest street legal bikes out there.”

Jack grinned looking like a little boy for a moment.

Harleen paled. “Is it safe?”

Jack giggled. “Who cares?! Come on!”

He tugged her toward the bike. He dropped her hand walking over to some shelves against the wall that were lined with helmets. He stopped to inspect the helmets for a moment before he grabbed one off the shelf and handed it to her.

“Put this on,” he said as he walked back toward the bike.

She took the helmet as Jack walked over to the bike, and swung his leg gracefully over to settle onto the motorcycle’s seat. He started the engine, which caused Harleen to jump back just before he backed the bike up.

“Aren’t you going to wear a helmet?” she asked as he held his hand out to her.

Jack grinned. “Now where is the fun in that?”
Caught In A Landslide

Harleen wrapped her arms tightly around Jack's waist as he hit the gas and ripped down the pavement and out of the garage whooping with joy. He zipped down the driveway toward the gate that surrounded the Wayne estate, building speed as he went. Harleen glanced over his shoulder, her eyes widening; the gate was rushing up fast. She started to say something, but Jack was laughing. Harleen tightened her hold on him instead, screaming out. “JACK!!”

He was still laughing as they came right up on gate, then at the last moment, the gate suddenly started to slide open and Jack slipped through the narrow opening.

Jack threw his head back laughing. Harleen pressed her forehead against his shoulder, her heart hammering as she screwed her eyes shut. Jack raced down the street going faster than Harleen thought was possible. He was laughing as he took the turns in the road, whipping the bike from one turn to the next with expert skill. He rounded the curves in the road nearly laying the bike flat as he did so. He hit the gas when they straightened, causing the bike to lurch forward and Harleen tightened her grip once again though he didn't seem to notice. Before she knew it, they are on the streets of Gotham City, ripping through lights and traffic as if he owned the streets. Jack leaned forward on the bike, tearing past a police car which instantly had their lights flashing pulling out to pursue them.

Harleen turned looking over her shoulder, her eyes widening when she saw the police. “Jack!!” She yelled, but the wind whipped her voice away.

The police car tried to keep up, but Jack was going too fast and whipping down streets and around moving vehicles at such a speed there was no way the police could keep up. It only took a few minutes for Jack to completely lose the cops within the confines of Gotham's many narrow alleyways and congested streets.

Once the police were no longer an issue, Jack slowed down, though he continued to drive down the streets heading to downtown Gotham. It was clear to Harleen that Jack had a goal in mind, not just a joy ride. After a while she saw their destination up ahead of them. They were coming up on Amusement Mile...a whole mile dedicated to an entire carnival. The place was busy on this cool autumn day; there were crowds of people going in and out of the massive parking lot to the side of the main entrance.

Jack slowed down, weaving easily through the parking lot and the people who milled about until he parked his bike. He hopped off and helped Harleen ease off the bike, stepping close to her in order to unstrap her helmet. Harleen froze when he touched her, his long graceful fingers moved swiftly, but wherever he touched her skin, she felt a flash of heat. He pulled her helmet off gently, placing it on the bike. He grinned at her still standing uncomfortably close to her.

“There you go Harley. Beautiful.” He reached out and brushed a stray lock of her hair behind her ear with a wink before he turned to crouch down by his bike. She could see he was doing something to the bike, but she couldn't quite see what exactly he was fiddling with on the side of the motorcycle.

“Jack, what are you doing?” She looked down trying to figure it out, but she had no idea. It almost looked like he was...well...setting a bomb.

Jack stood up, dusting his hands off on his slacks. “I'm rigging the bike to explode if anyone tries to take it.”
Harleen laughed. “No, seriously what are you doing?”

Jack turned, his face deadly serious. “I’m rigging the bike to explode if anyone but me tries to start it.” Then he smiled that infectious smile. “Come on, let’s go have some fun shall we Harley?” He put his arm out to her and while Harleen glanced back at the bike with a frown. But she weaved her arm through his and let him lead her away.

Jack paid for tickets and turned to grin at her. “So my dear, what would you like to do first?”

Harleen looked around. “Why are we here?”

Jack laughed. “To have some laughs doctor, or don’t you laugh?”

Harleen smiled blushing a bit. “I laugh!”

Jack grinned. “Then show me, pick something for us to do first.”

Harleen looked around then pointed at the roller coaster. “How about that?”

Jack chuckled. “Oh the bike wasn't exciting enough I see. Come on, Harley.” He grabbed her hand tugging her with him as he set a brisk pace for the roller coaster.

While they waited in line for the coaster, Jack leaned in close to her, his breath a tickle against her ear. “We used to come here with our mother sometimes but it was usually Alfred who would bring Bruce and me, even before our parents died. This was always my favorite place.”

Harleen smiled turning to look at him. He was so close, his nose almost touching hers. His eyes were so compelling, and his smile...Harley swiftly forced her thoughts back away from his physical attributes.

“So this was a favorite place when you were a kid. How often do you visit now?”

Jack shrugged. “Oh, a lot I suppose. To me, this place is what life is all about, fun, games, and disappointment.”

“Disappointment?” Harleen frowned. “What do you mean?”

Jack grinned. “Because all the fun is a facade. Do you think the people that work here are having fun? Don't you think there might be something deadly...decayed...rotten...under all the grease paint? This place is just like Gotham, just like...” He stopped himself. He frowned for a moment, but then he smiled again. “Even all the fun and happiness in the word can't keep the rot from spreading. To fight it is simply foolishness. You just have to give in to the madness!”

Harleen frowned deeper. “To fight it? What do you mean? What madness?”

Jack turned to Harleen. “There is something dark underneath...” He reached out and grasped her chin gently, running his thumb over her bottom lip in a caress that had her spellbound in its seductiveness. He stared intently into her blue eyes. She felt like he was looking into her soul. His eyes wandered down once to her lips, his smile reaching his eyes for a moment so brief she wasn't sure she had seen it. When he spoke his voice was a low, warm purr that melted over her, his lips almost touching hers.

“Tell me doctor, is there something black and rotten in you...something you're covering up with all the pretty outside trappings of being sane, of being “good?” Our smart, smart pretty, pretty doctor...or is there something dark dwelling inside Harley Quinn just waiting to get out?”

His smile was slightly lopsided, the smile of a rogue. He winked at her letting her jaw go, dropping his hand back to his side.

Harleen found herself missing the warmth of his touch. She swallowed. “There is nothing dark in me Jack, I assure you.”

Jack laughed. “Oh you are so pretty, so good...you keep telling yourself that.” He reached out and took her hand to bring her knuckles to his lips and press a kiss on them. Harleen stared at him for a moment before dropping her eyes.

When it was their turn for the roller coaster, the operator who was running the coaster saw them and yelled, “Hey Jack!! I was beginning to think you weren't going to come back!” The man put his hand out and Jack took the offer, shaking his hand.

Jack grinned. “Well, hello there Mark. Let me introduce my friend.” With a broadening smile, Jack gestured at the operator. “Harley this is Mark...he is a man of many trades and few talents.”

The man named Mark grinned, clearly not catching the veiled insult as he gave Harleen the once over. “Well, well Jack...you've got good taste in the dames.” Mark took her hand kissing her knuckles in nearly the same place that Jack had just kissed her moments ago. Neither Harleen nor Mark saw the way Jack looked at him. Jack's face suddenly darkened, his blue-green eyes going flat for just a moment. Mark grinned at Harleen and winked. “When you get tired of the rich boy here, you come look me up toots, okay? Get to hang out with a real man, knows what a dame like you needs.”

Harleen flushed. “Ah...thank you.” She quickly snatched her hand back looking uncomfortable.

Jack smiled, though it didn't reach his eyes. “So Mark, me and Harley here came to have a good time. Anything good happening?”

Mark shrugged. “There's a game going on tonight if'n you're interested.”

Jack laughed. “Oh yes, I'm interested.”

Mark grinned. “Come by around midnight...bring your girl with you if you want. I always like taking your money.”

Jack nodded. “Maybe I will.”

Mark lifted the gate up with a laugh. “Your chariot awaits!”

Jack climbed into the seat holding Harleen's hand and guiding her to the seat beside him. When the restraints came down in the next second, Mark walked over checking everyone's restraints to make sure they were in working order, though he did a little too complete a check on Harleen's. She backed herself against her seat as far as she could to prevent Mark's hands from touching her as best she could. After Mark stepped back Jack took her hand, bringing it up to his lips and kissed her knuckles. “Scared?”

Harleen smiled. “Nope.”

Jack grinned in response to her answer. “Good.”
Harleen frowned a bit. “What party was he talking about?”

Jack kissed her knuckles again. “Nothing for you to worry about my dear, dear doctor.”

Then the coaster took off. Jack laughed the whole while; his laughing had her laughing along with him throwing her arms up in the air when the coaster dived. Jack chuckled holding his arms up too. The ride was exhilarating and fantastic!

When they got to the end of the ride, Jack helped her out pulling her close, his hands pressed against her waist. Jack’s nose was nearly pressed against her own, all of it accompanied by his ever present smile. “Let’s go get some cotton candy shall we?”

Harleen laughed. “That sounds great!”

They walked the circuit of the carnival eating cotton candy together. Jack stopped in mid-stride, his eyes going toward one of the many shooting games. This game had the participants shooting moving targets. Jack got a wicked grin on his face.

“I’m going to win you a stuffed bear,” he announced. He grabbed Harleen’s hand dragging her over to the game.

“Gonna win the lady a prize?” The man running the stall inquired with a grin.

Jack winked. “Yes, I am.” He handed the man some bills and picked up the toy gun. Within seconds, Jack had gotten off several shots, each one taking out a target. Harleen was a little surprised at how quick and accurate his aim was; it was really impressive. The man running the stand nodded. “Now that is some good shooting!” He handed Jack the teddy bear and Jack, in turn, handed it to Harleen with a deep bow. “My lady.”

Harleen laughed. “Thank you,” she said with feeling.

Jack winked at her before taking her hand again.

They rode several other rides, including the carousel. Harleen decided that of everything they did, the carousel was her favorite.

When they stepped onto the platform of the ride, Jack picked Harleen up easily by the waist setting her on the back of a white horse.

Harleen squeaked in surprise when he lifted her up. He was deceptively strong. “Thank you Jack,” she said with a slight blush to her cheeks. Damn it, she thought. I’m blushing at a patient! What’s wrong with me?

Jack took the bat-looking thing beside her hopping on gracefully. “You are always welcome Harley.” He gave her a smooth, seductive smile, holding onto the pole as he leaned against it.

“Did you’re parents ever bring you to the carnival Harley?” Jack asked.

Harleen frowned. “No...we could never afford it.”

Jack quirked a brow at her before he grinned again. “Then I’m glad I was the one to take you.”
Harleen started to say something in return, but then she had to grab the pole, laughing as the carousel started. Jack grinned at her reaching out to take her hand. He giggled and started to make up lyrics to the carousel music that was playing while swinging their hands back and forth.

“Oh Harley pretty, pretty Harley...why don't you come out to play!”

Jack’s singing voice was beautiful, Harleen noted, though she was not surprised; Jack seemed to possess many talents.

Harleen laughed and grinned at Jack who swung her hand back and forth his eyes never leaving hers as he sang his made-up song to her.

They ended up staying all day at the carnival, riding all the rides at least twice, playing games and eating junk food. Jack was attentive and entertaining the whole time. He would tell her terrible jokes that had her laughing. If I wasn't his doctor...no...Harleen stopped herself from following that line of thought. She had to keep her thoughts about Jack neutral. The fact was, she was his doctor. What might be...could be...no...Harleen got after herself for letting her thoughts drift...she was here to help him, not anything beyond that.

It was late in the day, the sun setting and the lights of the carnival came to life around them. They were sitting at one of the picnic tables that were placed around the carnival eating something or other that had been deep-fried on a stick. Jack was laughing at her as she took an experimental bite then wrinkled her nose. “Is that an Oreo?”

Jack grinned tapping the tip of his nose. “You are correct!”

Harleen laughed. “Eww!”

Jack giggled taking a bite of his own deep-fried treat. “I don't know Dr. Quinzel...you don't like fried Oreos. I don't know if I can trust you with my deep dark secrets now.”

Harleen made a face at him and stuffed the rest of the fried confection into her mouth which had Jack howling with laughter.

Harleen grinned with her mouth full of Oreo, which had Jack laughing even more. A cool breeze brushed over them and Harleen shivered slightly.

Jack noticed her shiver. “I think it's time to head home.”

He stood up taking her hand and helping her to her feet. Jack didn't let go of her had while they made their way back to the parking lot. Harleen thought she should take her hand back, but his grip was pleasant, his hand warm. And it was just friendly hand holding, she told herself, nothing to get all worked up about.

When they arrived back at the bike, Jack helped her again with the helmet. He gave her a smile while his fingers stroked slowly along her chin. He strapped the helmet on then caressed her cheek once with the back of his fingers before reaching out and stroking some of her blonde hair back from her brow. Harleen tried not to react, but the blush was immediate.

If Jack noticed he gave no indication, turning around to climb onto the bike, twisting toward her, his hand out.

She climbed onto the back of the bike, holding onto Jack with one hand, the other around the stuffed bear he had won for her. Once he had her seated, he shot a grin over his shoulder at her.

They drove back to Wayne manor at a much more subdued speed than they had come to Gotham so many hours previously. Harleen relaxed, laying against his back with her one arm around his waist. She couldn't remember the last time she had had that much fun.

Jack drove into the garage and parked the bike hopping off with a huge grin. Turning, he helped Harleen to climb off the bike.

“Want to join me for dinner in the kitchen?” Jack asked. Harleen thought that he looked so adorable, his brown hair, wind-blown and falling over his forehead, his fancy suit slightly wrinkled, but he still looked fantastic...handsome. Harleen quickly shoved those thoughts away. No, she could not think of him like that—he was her patient!

“Let me go freshen up, then yes, dinner sounds good.”

Jack grinned. “Meet you there.”

Harleen showered, dried her hair and pulled it back into a loose ponytail. She dressed in casual leggings and a long t-shirt...a little more informal than “doctor/patient” attire, but since it was just dinner in the kitchen after spending the day together at a carnival, Harleen decided being casual was acceptable in this instance. Besides, she lived here...she couldn't stay looking the doctor part all the time, could she?

She made her way down the stairs, wearing only her socks on her feet; this time she was able to find her way to the kitchen without any help.

When she arrived Jack was already there, dressed in a pair of grey slacks and a white dress shirt, the sleeves of which were rolled up, the collar unbuttoned a couple of buttons down, exposing his collar. She could tell he was freshly showered, his hair still damp and slicked back from his narrow face. The image of him sitting there, forearms exposed, a hint of his collar and chest...Harleen stop it! She mentally berated herself. He is your patient! Remember that!

Jack was working on something at the counter where he sat on a stool writing, his full attention on whatever it was he was working on. Alfred was at the counter near the oven snapping peas and cutting a few other vegetables. “Good evening, Miss Harleen.”

She smiled brightly. “Good evening Alfred, dinner smells fantastic.”

Alfred smiled. “Why, thank you Miss Harleen. I'm making Chicken Scaloppine with sugar snap peas, asparagus, and lemon salad.”

Harleen gasped. “Oh, that sounds delicious!”

“I hope so.” Alfred smiled.

Jack looked up and grinned at her. “Well Harley...I mean, Harleen, you look adorable tonight.”

Harleen blushed. “Thank you Jack.” She turned back to Alfred. “Can I help you with anything?”

Alfred shook his head. “Thank you Miss Harleen, but I have everything handled.”
Jack pulled a stool out and patted the surface. “Come sit with me Harleen.”

She came over and climbed onto the stool glancing over at Jack's papers. “What are you working on?”

Harleen put her chin in her hand leaning on the counter. “Secret project?”

Jack nodded. “Yes, but I might share it with you.” He gave her a coy grin looking at her with those intense eyes through his lashes. Harleen was suddenly very aware of how thick Jack's lashes were...she felt a warmth along her cheeks curling down her spine when she looked at him.

Alfred walked over, setting a bottle of wine and two glasses on the counter between them.

“A Sauvignon Blanc, goes well with the chicken.” He smiled at the two of them and walked back to his vegetables. Alfred glanced once over his shoulder. It pleased him to see Jack talking to Dr. Quinzel so easily. Alfred seemed to genuinely like the doctor. Alfred hoped that she could help him; Alfred feared for Master Jack more than he had confided in Master Bruce. The young man was reckless...destructive, traits that were becoming more intense as he grew, and grew more lonely. The boys had been close before their parents death, but now they could go whole days without seeing each other. Alfred sincerely hoped Dr. Quinzel could help mend the rift between them.

They did not have to wait long until dinner was ready. Alfred served the two of them as if they were dining in the dining room surrounded by guests.

While they ate, Jack showed her what he was working on. He pointed down at a formula that Harleen could neither make heads nor tails of. “This will create a gas, but it also has a liquid form.” Jack giggled.

Harleen frowned staring down at it. “What exactly does it do?”

Jack giggled. “I have no idea yet, but I’m looking forward to finding out!”

“Isn't that dangerous?” Harleen frowned as she sipped her wine.

Jack shrugged. “It will be fun to find out won't it? That's part of the fun, having no idea if it will kill you or not.” He grinned at her and surprised her by leaning over and kissing her cheek while stuffing the paper into his pants pocket.

“Well, I have to go. See you tomorrow for our session, my dear doctor.” He gave her a wink as he strolled out of the kitchen before Harleen could murmur a word. Harleen watched him go, her fingers coming up to delicately touch her cheek.

Jack stopped at his room on his way out. He slipped on a black jacket, grabbed a wide brim hat that he set low on his head, casting his eyes in shadows. He slipped a switchblade into an inner pocket of his jacket, as well as a deck of cards. He stopped as he passed the mirror in his room, a full-length antique that had been his mother's. Jack stared at himself for a long moment and a gradual smile formed across his face. Tonight is going to be fun, he thought to himself.

Jack walked out to the garage and headed to his favorite vehicle, a 2016 Lamborghini Huracan painted in a deep—and gorgeous, he thought—shade of purple. The car had been a birthday gift to himself. Bruce had been upset, especially because Jack refused to tell him how he had paid for it...in cash. Bruce kept tight purse strings for a billionaire. Jack chuckled. Big brother Brucie really hated not being in control, but that was what made life worth living as far as Jack was concerned—realizing you never had control...of anything.

Jack slipped into the car, leaning back in the white leather seats with a wide grin as he turned the motor, listening to the purr of the engine. He grinned wider as he thought about Harley sitting next to him in a very short dress, her long legs showing. She was a delicious dish of a doctor...and she was all his.

Jack started to laugh as he took off, leaving Wayne Manor and heading into Gotham.

Jack drove back to the now closed carnival stopping at the gate where a large man stepped out, his face painted like a clown. He leaned over, saw Jack and grinned. “Head to the camp, game’s going on in the main tent.”

Jack gave the clown a two-fingered salute and headed on in.

Harleen sighed when she was back in her room changing into her night clothes. She wore just her panties and an oversized t-shirt with a cute teddy bear on it that read “Beary tired.”

Harleen pulled the bed back crawling under the covers, the stuffed animal that Jack had won her at the carnival on the pillow next to her. She grinned looking at the teddy bear laying against the pillow with a cheery grin. The bear made her think of Jack. Harleen groaned and flopped down on her own pillow glaring at the ceiling. “Don't let yourself be charmed Harleen! He’s your patient! Mr. Bruce Wayne hired you to help his brother...not get all hot and bothered by him! Especially within the first week of working with him!” She made a face, screwing up her lips and wrinkling her nose. Why did he have to be so charming?! She thought to herself as she pulled the covers up and leaned over to turn off her light.

In the main tent, Jack leaned back in his chair, his long legs stretched out before him, crossed at the ankles. He had a cigarette held between his lips as he looked at his cards, his hat tilted low over his brow. His hand wasn't the best, but he was fairly sure the others at the table were bluffing. Jack's eyes wandered over to Mark, the guy who had been working at the roller coaster. Jack's eyes narrowed. Mark wasn't paying any attention, all his focus on a brunette who had been serving the men their drinks all night. Jack leaned forward picking up his glass of whiskey and downing it in one swallow.

Mark finally turned back to the game. “Come on Jack, whatcha got?”

One of the other men, a guy everyone called Bone sighed. “Shut up Mark, let the man take his time.”

Mark scowled. “If'n he's going to lose, he needs to get it over with.” Mark then smirked. “Some of us got other plans tonight too.” Mark's gaze turned once again to the brunette.

Jack grinned. “Fine...I'm calling your bluff Marko.” Jack laid his cards down, a good old-fashion straight.
The other men at the table groaned throwing their cards down while Mark looked confused. “But...you can't...”

Jack laughed standing up and pulling the money in the middle of the table toward him. “Not my fault you can't play cards, Mark.”

Mark growled throwing his cards. “I'm done.”

Jack stood up pocketing the money. “I'm afraid I'm done as well boys.” Some of them groaned about winning back their money, but Jack laughed. “Next time gents!”

Jack waved turning to leave, but he walked over to Mark. “Come take a drive with me buddy. I have something I need to discuss with you.”

Mark frowned and shrugged. “Okay, what is it.”

“Believe me, it is an opportunity that will make you a lot of money!” Jack laughed.

Mark grinned running his hands over the interior of Jack's car as Jack drove to the warehouse district of Gotham, located near the docks. Mark glanced out the window. “What are we doing here?”

Jack grinned. “Well I never said it was honest money, did I?”

Mark nodded. “Yeah, yeah I get it, you don't have to worry about me. Figured all you rich guys had to get rich somehow that wasn't honest.”

Jack pressed his lips together into a thin smile, not saying a word.

They ended up parking behind an old abandoned warehouse. From the discarded equipment around it, whoever had owned the place had dealt in heavy equipment. Jack parked and slid out of the car, walking up to the warehouse. He moved not just with a long familiarity of the place, but he also didn't seem to be affected by the lack of light. He found the door easily and after a few seconds Jack escorted Mark inside.

Mark started to feel uncomfortable when he stepped into the warehouse; the place was dark and deserted. He started to turn around. “Hey Jack, what's...”

Suddenly Jack had wrapped an arm around Mark's neck from behind and with his other hand, which he rolled and twisted, snapped out a switch blade. The pale, watery moonlight that came into the warehouse from the upper windows hit the blade in Jack's hand, causing the slick metal to shine eerily in Mark's eyes.

“Look, what's this about Jack? I didn't do anything to you man!” Mark's voice cracked a little.

Jack smiled his lips pressed against Mark's ear. “You remember that woman I was at the carnival with earlier today?”

“Yeah, yeah, sure man the hot blonde. I remember, what about her?” Mark spoke a little too quickly.

“Well you see Mark, you made her uncomfortable...and you kept staring at her in a way I didn't like much...”

“Look man, I'm sorry man, I'll apologize!” Mark trembled in fear. He had been in unpleasant situations before, but Jack Wayne truly frightened him right now.
“Don't worry about a thing Mark—that's why I'm here, for your apology.”

Jack started to giggle, moving his arm that pressed down on Mark's neck, his hand coming up to cover Mark's mouth as he slowly and precisely ran the sharp blade across Mark's neck.

He dropped Mark to the floor, watching with a grin while Mark jerked and sputtered, the blood pooling under Mark's body becoming a bigger and bigger puddle.

Jack smiled down at Mark.

Fly Me To The Moon

Harleen woke up the next morning in a good mood. She had showered last night before bed, but decided to take another quick one this morning to freshen up (and she didn't have to worry about the water bill, so why not indulge?)

Letting the water run down her body, her eyes closed and enjoying the warm water, she started singing to herself surprising herself when it was the words to the song Jack had made up while on the carousel. She stopped singing to giggle at herself.

Once out of the shower she blew her hair dry and piled the blonde tresses on the top of her head, sliding two hair sticks into the bun to hold it in place. She dressed today in a blue blouse that brought out her eyes and a white calf-length flared skirt, matched with a white jacket and a pair of black heels along with her mock seam hose. She slipped her glasses on and smiled at herself.

“You look very professional, Dr. Quinzel,” she said to her reflection.

Soon she was on her way down the stairs as the smell of coffee wafted up from the kitchen below. She turned the corner and ran smack into a wall of muscle. She stumbled backwards with a startled yelp. She teetered on her heels for a moment, but a pair of large strong hands reached out to grab her upper arms preventing her from tumbling backwards. Harleen looked up startled into the face of Mr. Bruce Wayne.

“Oh yes, sorry Mr. Wayne. I didn't see you there.” Harleen flushed.

Mr. Wayne let go of her arms. “Following the scent of coffee?”

Harleen laughed softly. “Yes, yes I am.”

He nodded smiling. “As was I. Can I ask, how are you and Jack getting along? I know it's been only two days, but...”

Harleen ran her hands nervously down her skirt. “Oh, so far so good. We are having a session later today as a matter of fact. Right now my sessions are more about building trust with your brother so he will feel comfortable and open up to me more.”

Mr. Wayne nodded. Harleen could see the stress around the man's eyes. He looked as if he had not received enough sleep.

“You know Mr. Wayne, I will be able to help your brother. You don't have to worry and if you need to, you can always talk with me if you wish too?” She gave him her best professional smile.

“Call me Bruce, please Dr. Quinzel.” Bruce smiled.

“Then you should call me Harleen.” She smiled in return. Bruce put his arm out to her. “Would you like an escort to the kitchen?”

Harleen chuckled. “Why thank you Bruce.”

When the two of them arrived in the kitchen, Jack, dressed in a three piece suit, a blue-grey with a dark purple vest, white shirt and a purple and white polkadot tie (which was unusual, the added color of the vest and all, but Harleen found she liked it a great deal.) Jack sat in his usual spot drawing. He was bent over the drawing, his dress shoes, complete with spats, were hooked under the stool. His posture almost made him look slightly child-like. He was bent over the drawing in such a way that Harleen only caught a glimpse of the image on the sketch pad. She frowned, the image on the paper looked like a lot like a drawing of her...and it was gorgeous.

Jack swiftly closed the sketchbook and frowned as his eyes fell on his older brother. He curled his lip a little.

“Moving in on my doctor Brucie?”

Bruce escorted Harleen to a stool which she took. “I turned a corner and bumped into him.” Harleen shrugged.

Bruce frowned at his brother, but made no additional commentary to Harleen's explanation.

Alfred was at the stove flipping a large omelet. “Master Bruce, are you planning to eat breakfast with the good doctor and your brother?”

Bruce shook his head. “No Alfred. I was just lured in here by the smell of coffee.”

Alfred smiled. “You really should eat before you go this morning sir.”

Jack placed his elbows on the counter where he sat, setting his chin in his hand. “You should brother dear.”

Bruce turned to look at his little brother, but Jack's smile seemed genuine. “Alright Jack.”

Jack smiled hopping up and walking to the cabinet grabbing a cup for Harleen and one for Bruce. Alfred smiled. The brothers hadn't eaten a meal together in ages. Perhaps Dr. Quinzel's presence was helping.

Alfred glanced over his shoulder where Jack was at the coffee maker.

“The coffee is that Rwanda Blue Bourbon coffee you got last week Master Bruce.” Jack handed Bruce his own mug while he went about preparing Harleen's for her. He waltzed back over offering her the steaming mug. “Thank you Jack.”

Jack winked at her and retook his seat, picking up his mug and sipping his own coffee. Alfred grinned as he cracked a few more eggs into the bowl he had been using. “I'm making cheese and spinach omelets this morning Master Bruce, would you like one?”

Bruce smiled and shrugged, giving in. “Sure thing Alfred.”

Soon the three of them were eating breakfast together. Alfred poured himself a cup of coffee while he finished cleaning up.

“So, Jack, what are your plans today?” Bruce asked. It was clear to Harleen that there was an awkwardness in Bruce's attempts to engage his brother. Jack glanced up from where he had been staring down at his food. He hadn't eaten but a few bites, the rest he simply poked with his fork. Harleen could feel and see the tension between the two. It was clear from the way Bruce Wayne held himself that he was not accustomed to having breakfast with his brother and the way Jack seemed slightly sullen he was upset that Bruce had actually decided to share breakfast with him. She wondered how long their arrangement of avoiding each other had been in effect...months? No—she Jack looked up grinning, a lock of his brown hair hanging across his forehead. “Oh, get my head shrunk by our dear doctor here. Maybe she can find out why I’m broken, eh Brucie? Give me a bunch of pills to make me all better. Or maybe it’s something you can fix if you throw enough money at it? Maybe she’ll disappoint you and you’ll find out there is nothing wrong with your little brother except he sees the world as it is?”

Jack grinned wider seeing Bruce pale a little.

“Jack, you know why I brought in Dr. Quinzel. Can we please...I mean...let's talk about this later...” Bruce frowned, but Jack only laughed glancing at Harleen. “You know if you can't figure out what is wrong with me, my big brother is going to lock me up. Put in a tower like a dirty secret and hope I don't do anything he can't fix. He might even become desperate enough and stick me in Arkham. Now wouldn't that be a gas?”

Jack giggled.

Bruce closed his eyes and let out a sigh. “Jack...” He looked at his brother who was resting his chin in his hand leaning forward expectantly, a huge smile on his face. Bruce sighed. “Nevermind. I have to go into the city. I'll be back later. Jack, please don't forget about the fundraiser Friday night.”

Jack giggled. “Oh, you trust me to mingle with other people?”

Bruce stood. “I trust you to uphold the family name and take seriously some of the responsibilities.”

Jack rolled his eyes. “This coming from the Bruce Wayne sex machine.”

Bruce flushed bright red which had Jack laughing. “Fine, fine, big brother. I'll make an appearance and I will be good.”

“Thank you Jack. I will see you later.” He nodded. “Dr. Quinzel, Alfred.”

“Master Bruce. Oh sir, will you be home for dinner?” Alfred asked while wiping off the counters.

Harleen watched him go thinking to herself that Bruce Wayne needed a therapist too. Jack grinned as he picked up his coffee. “Poor Brucie—burdened with good looks, money and a crazy brother. It's all very romantic really. Would make a great movie don't you think Harley? I mean Harleen.” He winked at her.

Harleen could tell the slip on her name was on purpose, but she decided not to call him out on it.

She stood up taking her plate and set it in the dishwasher after scraping off any food remains into the garbage. “So what is this fundraiser all about?”

Jack made a face. “Oh it's for a good cause that all rich people love. Oh look at us donating money to help those filthy poor people and we don't have to get our hands dirty.”

Jack wiggled his fingers in the air. Harleen had to press her lips together in order not to laugh.

“But the money does go to a good cause. Doesn't it?” Harleen resumed her seat watching Jack with interest. He made a face. “Yes, but those fundraiser have more to do with all those people feeling good about themselves than about the people they help. Hypocrites. The poor wish to be rich, the rich wish to be happy, the single wish to be married, and the married wish to be dead.”
“Even your brother?” Harleen asked quietly.

Jack frowned. “Bruce...cares. It's a fatal flaw.”

Harleen started to open her mouth to ask why it was a fatal flaw, but Jack jumped up. “How about you go to the fundraiser with me?”

“But...I don't know...” Harleen frowned rubbing her chin with a finger, but Jack laughed. “Oh come on, it would be fun with you there and besides, Bruce would be happy. I would be there and I would have my doctor there undercover making sure I don't do anything embarrassing.” He gave her the most charming smile.

“Well, I suppose...” Harleen muttered rubbing a hand up and down her upper arm. “I don't really have anything to wear to a gala...fundraiser though.”

Jack made a rude noises. “Pффффt! Just means later today I'm taking you shopping.”

Alfred was just about finished cleaning up after breakfast; he was standing at the sink washing the pan when he heard Master Jack state that he was going to take Dr. Quinzel shopping. Alfred tried to hide his small smile focusing on the task at hand. True, this was crossing a line between a patient and doctor relationship, but Alfred was pleased to see Jack taking an interest in someone. Maybe little things such as Dr. Quinzel accompanying Jack to the fundraiser was a type of therapy for the young man. Alfred wasn't sure how master Bruce would feel about it, but Alfred was pleased.

Harleen frowned. “I don't know...”

Jack put his hands together, weaving his fingers together and stuck out his bottom lip. “Please Dr. Quinzel, don't make me face all those people alone. So much boredom might actually kill me! Without a charming companion to help relieve the stress of so many stuck up rich people I might actually die.” Jack fell across the counter with his tongue hanging out. Harleen laughed. “Fine, alright.”

Jack popped up with a huge smile lighting up his face. “Perfect!”

Harleen laughed. “Are you ready for our session?”

Jack nodded with a grin, grabbing her hand and pulling her up from her seat at the same time snatching his sketch pad and pencil from the counter, tucking it under his arm.

“Let's go shrink my head doc!”

It required a few minutes to get settled in the room with Jack draping himself dramatically over one of the couches in the room. She tried not to laugh, but he was being so silly it was hard for her not to. She pulled out the small notebook she had stuffed in the pocket of her jacket along with a pen.

“So, Jack, what do you feel like talking about today?”

Jack laid the back of his hand across his forehead. “I have no idea.”

Harleen tapped her pen against her lips. “So you draw?”
Jack laughed. “Yes I do, my good doctor.”

“Is there a reason why you hid the drawing when your brother and I came into the kitchen?” she asked.

Jack waggled his eyebrows smiling. “Maybe I'm shy. Or I was drawing naked women and didn't want my big brother to see. OR maybe I was drawing you.” He pressed his teeth into his bottom lip smiling at her.

“Would you like to share your work?” she inquired with a tilt of her head. “Have you ever thought about doing art professionally?”

Jack snorted. “I am planning on sharing my art, my talent...some day.” He revealed this with a strange, almost whimsically delighted air as if he were planning something big.

“Oh, are you planning to display your art in a gallery?” Harleen smiled.

Jack giggled. “Something like that.”

Harleen made a note and then looked back at him. Jack had his sketchpad resting against his bent legs where he lay on the couch. He was holding the pages up looking at his drawing. She saw the image he had been working on before breakfast, an image of her. Jack glanced over at her smiling before he let the cover fall back into place.

They were quiet for a moment as Jack flipped his sketch pad back to a blank page, twirling the pencil along his fingers for a moment before he started to sketch.

She pressed her lips together glancing back down at her notepad. “Tell me about you and Bruce as children.”

Jack made a face as he scribbled on the paper. She couldn't quite see what it was he was drawing.

Harleen frowned. “Why the face Jack?”

“Bruce. Don't get me wrong Harley. I love my brother. He's just so...I don't know. He does the playboy thing, a different lady all the time, parties, but he can't fool me. Brucie has a deep dark secret.” Jack narrowed his eyes staring at the wall across from him over the top of his sketch pad before he started to giggle.

“Fool you?” Harleen asked. “What do you mean?”

Jack sat up straighter. “Bruce isn't like that. He was always serious. Especially after our parents were killed...”

Harleen frowned. “How did he react after the death of your parents?”

Jack laid back down, crossing a leg over his knee and settling the sketch pad on his thighs. He motioned with the hand that held the pencil. “He became more...I don't know...focused.”

“What about you?” Harleen asked softly.

Jack frowned as he stared off into space again. When he spoke it was with a smile. “The fear of death follows from the fear of life. A man who lives fully is prepared to die at any time.”

Harleen frowned. “Mark Twain?”
Jack grinned. “Very good, doctor.”

“So do you think you live fully and Bruce doesn't?” She tilted her head studying him.

Jack grinned rolling his head over to look at her.

“I live each day as if it will be my last and I look to go out with a smile on my face. Don't you realize doc? This is all—all of it—a big joke.” Jack threw one of his arms out to encompass everything.

Harleen chewed her bottom lip. “Do you think this has to do with your parents dying in front of you? Do you see yourself as taking risks in order to “fully” live your life? Is that why you see everything as a joke?”

Jack went quiet. Harleen looked from her notepad where she had been taking some notes, her eyes focusing on Jack's profile. He was very attractive and, to her mind, more so than his older brother and Bruce Wayne was considered one of the most eligible bachelors in the world. Jack wasn't just attractive; there was an intensity about him that she found compelling.

“Jack?” Harleen said his name gently.

He frowned still not making eye contact. “That's not a funny question at all,” he muttered.

Harleen became quiet. “Jack, how did your parents' death make you feel?”

Jack giggled softly. “He broke my collarbone you know.”

“Who did?” Harleen again asked gently.

Jack sat up straighter, flattening his legs and placing his hands on top of the sketchpad.

“The man who murdered my parents.” Jack said it casually as he finally turned to look at her. Then in a playful voice he said.

“Well, you know, this is becoming quite dark Harley.”

He laughed getting to his feet casually dropping the pad and pencil on the couch.

“I think we need to lighten the mood. Do something fun, don't you?”

Harleen frowned. This was exactly what he had done yesterday. As soon as a tough question came up he deflected, but she decided not to press him—not yet anyway. Her relationship with Jack Wayne was going to take time. He would answer the questions when he was ready. Her job was to help him to be ready.

“Alright Jack.” She closed her notebook, sliding the small pad back into her jacket pocket. “What did you have in mind?”

“I think you should put on something less...doctery, doctor. Then we will go shopping for a dress! AND I will take you out to lunch!” Jack grinned with a gleeful shine in his eyes.

Bruce arrived at his office to find the morning paper waiting on his desk. Bruce could have read the paper online like everyone else, but he felt like he owed it to the old Gotham Gazette to still read the hard copy of the paper they put out...especially since a portion of his wealth went to keeping the paper from falling into obsolescence. Bruce also liked the feel of the paper in his hands, the tangible texture of the newsprint. Maybe it was because holding the paper reminded him of his father?

He sat down at the desk picking up the paper. That afternoon he was to go to the tailor for a fitting, make some last minute menu arrangements for the fundraiser and a few other frivolous things. But what he was really looking forward to was meeting with Lucius Fox. The two of them had been working on some new designs for his weapons and Lucius was to show him some modifications to the car, especially after that time Bruce had come back to his vehicle only to find the tires slashed.

Bruce picked up the paper and frowned at a small article near the bottom of the front page. Bruce's eyes ran over the article. A man name Mark Boyd was found dead in the warehouse district. Boyd had a criminal record, illegal gambling, one rape charge that was dropped and a few minor crimes. Boyd had currently been working at the Amusement Mile theme park. Bruce frowned. He knew the Amusement Mile was a place his brother frequented. He knew Jack gambled illegally and that there was a backroom poker game that was held at the park. He wondered if Jack was acquainted with Mark Boyd, but then he sighed folding the paper and put it aside. While he would like to be able to stop all crime in Gotham, he knew realistically that the Batman could only do so much. But right now it was time to act like a billionaire playboy without a care in the world.

Harleen hurried down the stairs of Wayne manor. She had changed into a red sweater and a pair of low waist, flare-legged black slacks and red heels. She had left her hair up and ditched the glasses.

She made her way out through the kitchen toward the garage where she found Jack waiting for her. He was dressed the same as he had been at breakfast except with the addition of a cigarette hanging from his lips. He was using a cane as a golf club, hitting imaginary balls down the length of the garage.

He turned at the sound of her heels clicking against the floor. When he saw her, Jack let out a wolf-whistle. “You look very nice, Harley.”

She blushed giving him a small smile. “Thank you.”

He giggled and put his arm out. “Shall we?”

Harleen put her arm through his and Jack started to walk them through the garage.

“What vehicle shall we take?”

Jack stopped in front of a Ferrari 250 GT SWB, a car Harleen had only seen in movies or magazines. It was a shiny deep blue, with a pair of white stripes along the sides making it look as if the vehicle would fly down the road. Jack stood in front of the car tilting his head one way then the other before he smiled. “Yes, perfect.”

“Perfect?” Harleen asked. “I mean, yes, the car is perfectly beautiful.”

He smiled at her reaching out with his free hand to trace her bottom lip with his forefinger.

“I mean, it's perfect for you. You will look gorgeous in this car.”

She blushed again; the touch of Jack's finger left a burn across her bottom lip. She really needed to work on reining in this...whatever this was. I am his doctor, Harleen reminded herself. But she was also a woman who found her patient not only interesting, but extremely attractive.

Jack let go of her arm and waltzed away to retrieve the key from the safe. He returned and opened the door of the car for her with a bow. “My lady.”

Harleen laughed at his behavior, but slipped into the seat.

Soon they were on their way into the city. Jack started to sing during the drive. There was no music playing, the car was in its original state...no modern additions. Jack grinned as he sang; Harley thought that he had a fantastic singing voice.

“Fly me to the moon, Let me play among the stars, Let me see what spring is like on, A-Jupiter and Mars, In other words, hold my hand, In other words, baby, kiss me...”

He winked at her while he sang. Harleen couldn't help staring at him, blushing as he winked at her.

“Fill my heart with song, And let me sing for ever more, You are all I long for, All I worship and adore, In other words, please be true, In other words, I love you...”

She tried not to delude herself that the words had any meaning beyond just being a song, but the way Jack kept looking at her had Harleen shivering.

He drove into Gotham at a far more sedate rate than he had when he had her on his motorcycle. They drove into the downtown shopping area of Gotham City, but what surprised Harleen was that he kept going, past the mall and headed into the section of high quality stores that Harleen Quinzel, on her beginning psychiatrist's salary, could only window shop at from the sidewalk.

“Jack, where are we going?” She looked out the passenger window seeing shops such as Ralph Lauren, Neiman Marcus and Versace. Jack glanced sideways. “We are shopping,” he said as if the answer were self-evident.

“But Jack—these places...” Harleen glanced at her nails, noticing the polish on two was chipped. “I can't afford places like this...I doubt I can afford to walk inside!”

Jack snorted. “You're going to be with me, Miss Quinn.” He winked at her.

Jack parked along the street. Even though all of the cars parked along the street here looked to be expensive, Jack's Ferrari stood out. Jack practically leapt out of the car, coming around to pull her door open for her, bowing as she exited the car. The whole “show” caused her to blush badly, but she got out, taking his hand and stood. Jack grinned kissing her knuckles before they headed toward the one of the stores.

Jack strolled into Neiman Marcus without a care in the world, one of his hands wrapped around hers. Jack didn't seem to noticed it—or paid no attention because it was such a part of his everyday life—but Harleen could have sworn someone took a picture of them entering the store. She glanced back, but whoever it was had gone or had never been there in the first place.

Once inside, a young women dressed in a tight, short black dress that showed off her model thighs, her long hair dyed a white-grey, (very trendy, Harleen thought) immediately approached them. “Hello, welcome to Neiman Marcus,” she greeted with a magazine cover smile. “How can I help you Mr. Wayne?”

Jack smiled politely, but with a wicked edge. “You can find the beautiful lady here a beautiful dress to match, money is no object and I want it in red.”
The woman looked at Harleen just barely keeping the sneer off her face. “Very well, Mr. Wayne.”

Harleen glanced over at him. “Mr. Wayne?” She giggled. It just seemed strange to hear someone refer to Jack as Mr. Wayne. He shrugged. “I may have bought a suit or two here.”

It only took the clerk a few moments to return carrying a gorgeous Jovani gown. The gown was mermaid cut, ruby red, sleeveless with a mock neckline and backless. Jack whistled. “Now that's a dress. Go try it on Harley!”

He shoved her at the clerk who held the dress waiting impatiently. Jack's shove caused Harleen to stumble slightly, but then the clerk turned her back on Harleen and began to walk toward the dressing rooms. Jack frowned at their retreating backs. The look on that clerk' face though...Jack frowned and narrowed his eyes slightly. He didn't like it, not at all.

Once inside, Harleen slipped out of her clothing and into the dress. The dress fit as if it were made for her, hugging her figure in such a way that Harleen blushed to see herself in the mirror. She turned around examining the way the open back dropped low, just at her hips. She flushed red enough to nearly match the dress. This would be the most expensive, sexiest garment she had ever had, and Jack wanted to buy it for her. She wasn't sure what to do! On one hand, this was definitely a violation of the doctor/patient relationship, but on the other hand, she couldn't show up to a fundraiser in anything she currently owned and she really couldn't afford to spend that much on a dress, even with the salary Mr. Wayne...Bruce...was paying her. She took a deep breath. “Playing loose with that line aren't you, Dr. Quinzel?”

She turned and walked out of the dressing room.

Jack was waiting for her when she stepped out. His eyes widened at the sight of her. He grinned motioning with his finger for her to turn around, which she did. Jack laughed and slapped his hands together in a single clap of delight.

“Oh, I think I am actually going to enjoy this fundraiser now. We'll take it!”

Jack drove them down to one of Gotham's dining areas, stopping at a restaurant called Kirby's Place, another place that Harleen Quinzel would never have been able to get into on her own. They were shown to an intimate table by the restaurant's large picture window. Jack grinned as he pulled her chair out for her.

“Oh Jack, this...I mean this is a bit much. I'm your doctor, not...” She looked unsure as she spoke, Jack laughed her concerns away. “Harley, Harley can't you be my friend too?”

Harleen frowned, glancing down at her hands. “I don't have many friends,” she said softly.

Jack, taking his seat, reached across the table and took her hand. “Well, you have one now Harley.”

She looked into his eyes. It was the strangest sensation, she realized. It was at once erotic, his eyes were gorgeous, but it was also like looking into a bottomless pit, a place she could become lost. Losing herself...

Jack squeezed her hand before letting it go and picking up his menu. “Let's see what looks good shall we?”

The rest of the day was pleasant. They had a nice lunch and Jack took her for a drive before returning to the estate. Harleen could not have asked for a nicer day. If she wasn't his doctor it could almost have been a date. She was actually disappointed when Jack excused himself, explaining to her that he had some work he wanted to do before dinner.

Harleen decided that she would spend the remainder of her afternoon typing up her notes on Jack and working on some potential therapy ideas to work on getting Jack to open up more to her. But when she went to bed that evening, her dreams were filled with very unprofessional dreams about Jack Wayne.

The sun was just beginning to set below the horizon when Jack left the house. He had stopped by Harleen's room, his knuckles poised inches from the door. The thought of inviting her along...the urge was strong, but he stopped himself. Not yet, but maybe soon.

He turned and left, hurrying outside. He only had a short time before dinner, which he didn't want to miss. He found that he enjoyed Harley's company more than he anticipated. She was becoming a distraction, but he didn't mind.

He trotted down the path from the manor, then around the side. He stopped and glanced back at the manor for a moment with a little smile. Then he turned and headed out to the gardens, his goal, an old workman's cottage. The cottage was part of a series of buildings that had once housed some of the Wayne Manor's staff. Most of the cottages were gone had fallen apart, but this one still managed to stand, though it was falling apart. In many ways the structure could barely be called a cottage at all. But it had walls, doors and it was ignored by both Bruce and Alfred and any workers that came onto the grounds to tend the gardens and lawn.

Jack had found the place not long after his brother had returned him home from boarding school for the last time. Over the years Jack had turned the place into his own hideout, lab, a secret place to do his experiments. He giggled as he slipped inside after unlocking the series of locks he had installed.

Inside, the cottage was equipped with everything any scientist would want or need. Jack smiled turning around to gaze at his toys after locking the door. The inside of the room glowed softly.

Jack walked over to the table where he had several syringes lined up, each glowing softly in the dim light leaking through the window. Jack picked up one of the syringes.

After dinner tonight, he decided it was time to see what his new chemical that he had made could do....and he knew a perfect volunteer.
It was well after midnight. The moon was high in the night sky illuminating the Wayne Manor grounds. The only light from the structures on the grounds came from a small cottage on the property. It wasn't much of a light; dim, liquid, if one wasn't looking for it they would not have actually seen it.

Inside the cottage, Jack hummed happily to himself, one of his favorite Frank Sinatra songs. If he was honest with himself, he loved all of Old Blue Eyes' music, but tonight the song he had in mind was “The Way You Look Tonight.” Jack weaved to his humming, occasionally singing the words as he thought of Harley. He imagined her in the dress he had bought for her, the doctor in his arms, and the two of them dancing. He sighed. She was not part of his plans, not at all, but she was a lovely distraction...maybe more. He frowned for a moment wondering if he was letting her worm her way inside his mind...but then he shrugged and smiled.

“Some day, when I'm awfully low, When the world is cold, I will feel a glow just thinking of you, And the way you look tonight...” Jack did a perfectly executed spin on his black, Italian leather Prada Oxfords. He smiled at the woman from Neiman Marcus who was on the old hospital exam table. Her whole body was tilted at a 90 degree angle on the exam table, her arms and legs strapped down, another strap across her forehead and a ball gag in her mouth. Jack walked over weaving to the music while he sung.

“With each word your tenderness grows, Tearin' my fear apart, And that laugh...wrinkles your nose, Touches my foolish heart...”

He stopped singing, holding the syringe full of a deep green, slightly glowing liquid. Jack held it up just where his reluctant patient could see it. “Well, Miss...” He leaned over and lifted her name tag up a little in order to read it better. “Miss Ashley...You my dear have been chosen, because of your rude behavior earlier today toward my female companion, Miss Harley Quinn.”

Jack leaned an elbow against the side of the table his intense eyes examining the contents of his syringe. He glanced at Ashley, watching her as she twitched, her eyes wide with terror and a single tear rolling down from her eye.

“You know Ashley. I think I might actually be falling for the good doctor.” He smiled looking surprised at his confession. “She is fun, beautiful and I think there is something deep inside her that will understand...everything about me.”

He giggled. “It would be nice to have someone to share my passions with. You have any idea how important it is to find someone who understands you?” He tilted his head, examining Ashley from a different angle. “I suppose not, Ashley my dear.”

He sighed then stood up straight. “Well, shall we proceed Ashley? I have no idea what this is going to do to you. Most likely it's going to kill you, but there's always the chance it will simply scramble your brains.” He giggled while Ashley started thrashing around, her eyes round and wild with fear.

“Oh, now come on Ashley, really? That is so undignified! Really, don't take life so seriously Ashley, it's not like you are going to get out of it alive anyhow?”
Jack started laughing as he laid the needle against her arm, breaking the skin, shoving the needle into a vein and pushing the plunger. Ashley screamed behind her ball gag, struggling to no avail. Jack placed the empty syringe on the table and pulled up a stool, perching himself elegantly on it. He crossed his long thin legs, resting his elbow on his knee to hold his chin in his hand watching her with an amused, yet interested expression.

The next morning Harleen woke, stretching her arms over her head with a bright smile. She had slept like the dead and now she felt good and refreshed. She was humming when she stepped into the shower, letting the warm water run down her body. Today is going to be a good day, she thought to herself.

While sitting in her robe at her vanity, she dried her hair moving the blow dryer around as she combed out her long blonde hair. She smiled at herself while she pulled out clips and bobby pins from a drawer in the vanity in order to style her hair for the day. She put her hair up again, going once more for that slight professional look, though she pulled a few long strands out letting them curl softly around her face. It softened her look. She smiled wondering if Jack would like it?

“Harleen, now you stop that!” She pointed a finger at herself in the mirror, but she left the soft curls around her face as she got up to get dressed.

Today's outfit was a pair of black, modern fit trousers, a white blouse with a tie neck. The only part of the outfit that wasn't “professional” was the pair of bright, ruby red stilettos she wore. Harleen gave herself one more look in the mirror. She still looked professional, like a doctor. She reached over and picked up her perfume, spritzed herself with some before heading down for breakfast.

Alfred was already up, as usual, dressed in his butler's uniform, minus the jacket. He wore a plain white apron over his front while he stood at the oven cooking breakfast.

This morning he was making crepes.

At the moment, he was filling the crepes with what looked to be apricot jam, wrapping them over with ease before he picked up a steel container (similar to a salt shaker but a little bigger) and gently tapped the side of the container, sprinkling the tops of the prepared crepes with powdered sugar. The crepes looked perfect, exactly like one would see in a cookbook or advertisement for crepes, almost too good to eat—almost.

As usual, Jack was already here sitting at his counter writing in his notebook. Today he was dressed in a Marks & Spencer dark grey three piece suit, white shirt, with a deep red double-breasted vest and matching red tie; his brown hair was mostly slicked back, but one strand that seemed determined not to stay, as it curled softly across his brow. He looked...gorgeous, Harleen thought to herself, her heart picking up speed and her palms became sweaty.

“Good morning Jack, Alfred...”

“Ah, good morning Miss Harleen. Crepe?” Alfred turned to smile at her. He picked up the plate he had just sprinkled with powdered sugar and placed it in front of her. “The coffee today miss, is called Jamaican Blue Mountain. It has quite the unusual flavor.”

“Thank you Alfred.” Harleen walked over to the coffee getting herself a mug.

Jack made a few more notes before closing his notebook and looked up to see Harleen walk over to the coffeemaker. He leaned against his arm watching her make her coffee, the way she walked, the movements of her arms, the way the air from the vents in the kitchen made the soft, silky hairs hanging free from her bun swirl. Jack was hyper aware of everything to do with her, even the soft scent of her perfume that drifted over to him. His eyes wandered down taking in every inch of her, tracing the soft curves of her figure, the way the slacks hugged her backside. He grinned pressing his teeth into his bottom lip watching her. She was damn sexy without even trying. His eyes wandered down to the shoes she was wearing, imagining the way her legs looked under the slacks. He giggled softly to himself, looking forward to tomorrow night.

Harleen turned to look at him over her shoulder causing Jack to grin brightly at her.

Harleen blushed as she walked over to take a seat by him. “I thought today we might try some therapy exercises.”

Jack pursed his lips with a twinkle in his eye. “Do tell?”

“Well, there is art therapy. I saw yesterday that you draw—perhaps we could do something with that or there is also music therapy. Do you play any instruments?”

Jack laughed. “I play a mean piano...took piano lessons when I was younger. Kept up with them even after I didn't have to anymore.”

For a moment, a split second that Harleen would have missed if she hadn't been looking at Jack's eyes, a shadow passed over him at the mention of the lessons. Harleen surmised that his parents had him taking piano before they died.

She had just reached out, her fingers having just brushed against Jack's when Bruce walked into the kitchen surprising everyone into a startled silence. He was dressed almost all in black, black suit, grey shirt, black tie, his black hair slicked back, and his blue eyes piercing. Harleen thought, for a “rich playboy” Bruce Wayne looked terribly serious all the time.

“Jack, I need you to come with me into the office today.” Bruce looked slightly upset.

Jack groaned. “Why? I thought you were going skydiving with that French model...what was her name...Amelia?”

Bruce sighed. “Because you still have a controlling share in Wayne Enterprises and there is a vote this morning—you are needed. And yes, afterward I am going skydiving”

Jack groaned for a moment looking like a child as he dropped his forehead to the counter. “I thought I wasn't allowed to vote? You know, because of my instability.” He giggled without looking up.

Bruce frowned clearly unhappy with Jack referring to himself as unstable.

“Jack, you could sell your shares to me.”

Jack sat up grinning. “You would like that wouldn't you? So what's so important that Lucius is having us both show up?”

“We are voting on whether to take the deal with LexCorp for the development of cybernetic scouting drones.” Bruce walked swiftly over to the coffeemaker, filling a mug with coffee before turning around to face his brother again.

“And where do we stand?” Jack stood up, brushing off his suit.
“I’m against it. You can vote however your conscience feels Jack.” Bruce took a sip of his coffee studying his younger brother.

“Fine. Let’s get this over with. You know how much I hate all those corporate asskissers.” Jack straightened his jacket, then stepped closer to Harleen taking her hand and kissing her knuckles. “How about I come back and pick you up for lunch doctor, and we can have our therapy session over food?”

Harleen glanced at Bruce and nodded. “That sounds fine Jack. See you when you return.”

Jack winked at her then turned toward his brother. “Alright, let’s go.”

The two brothers sat in the back of a black 2017 Cadillac Escalade with tinted windows as a driver/body guard drove them to Wayne Enterprises. They were both quiet, Bruce on his phone texting and Jack staring out the window. Bruce put his phone away in the inside pocket of his jacket and glanced at his brother. Jack was smiling to himself staring out the window, his chin resting on his knuckles, his middle finger seemed to be tapping out a beat only Jack could hear.

“So how are things with Dr. Quinzel?” Bruce asked.

Jack frowned, lifting his brows and turning to Bruce. “Hmm...what do you mean?”

“I mean, do you like her? Is she helping?” Bruce turned sideways to face his brother.

Jack grinned. “I like her. She is...different.”

Bruce nodded. He wasn't sure how to ask his brother how things were going...are you feeling less destructive? Less violent? That sounded...wrong. Instead, Bruce turned back around. “That's good.”

Jack tilted his head looking at his brother. They had not spent a lot of time together...actually if Jack was truthful, they had not spent much quality together since before their parents' death.

Jack smiled. “You need to laugh more Bruce.”

Bruce glanced back at him quizzically. “Laugh?”

“Yes! Life is one big joke and you are missing it completely Bruce. Completely.” Jack giggled.

The sound of Jack's giggle send shivers down Bruce's spine. He could hear that slightly unhinged quality that continued to creep into Jack's laugh. It was one of numerous factors that had prompted Bruce to find a personal psychiatrist for his brother.

Bruce pressed his lips tighter. “So, ah...what have you been doing?”

Jack grinned laying a finger aside his nose. “Oh Bruce, do you really want to know or are you being the polite big brother? Hmmm?”

Bruce frowned turning away from Jack to look out the window. After a few moments he murmured, “They found a man you might know...Mark Boyd. He was found murdered.”

Jack laughed. “Oh now that is NOT a surprise.”

Bruce frowned deeper. “So you did know him?”

Jack was looking out the window again, neither brother looking at each other. “I did—played cards with him at the amusement park once or twice. Not a good man Bruce, so don't cry any tears over him.”

“Do you know anything about what might have happened to him?” Bruce asked.

For a moment Bruce was reminded of all the times Jack had been violent over the years, starting with the incident at school. Each time his violence had been directed at someone who had annoyed him, or Bruce for that matter, and each incident had become more and more violent until one day, his violent episodes had stopped. Bruce figured Jack had just become more gifted at hiding it, not that the psychiatrists or psychologists they had hired in the past were actually helping his brother, but each time Bruce confronted him, Jack had always been innocent.

Jack frowned putting a hand to his chest in mock horror. “Goodness Bruce, are you accusing me of something?”

Bruce’s brow furrowed. “No, no, just just a casual question.”

Jack smiled. “Well, believe me Bruce, if I ever did something like that, you would never know if it was me more or not.”

Bruce frowned at Jack, but his brother had already turned away his smile back in place just a little bit bigger than before.

Harleen sipped her coffee and cut into the crepe that Alfred had placed in front of her. Alfred had excused himself for a moment when there was a buzz at the front door.

“Probably a package, Miss Harleen. I shall be right back.”

Harleen had nodded then continued with her breakfast. She glanced over seeing Jack’s notebook from the corner of her eye. She looked around, no Alfred. She pressed her lips firmly together, contemplating whether or not she should, but then she reached out with one finger and slid the book toward her.

There was nothing on the cover stating that this was a diary or anything of that nature. She frowned staring down at it. This was not a “good” doctor thing to do...or a “good” anything to do. She ran her fingers over it for a moment more before she opened it to a random page.

She wasn’t sure what she had been expecting on the page, but it was covered in mathematical equations, math way beyond anything she could understand. She smiled. There was a fine line between madness and genius.

She flipped to another page. Here Jack had written some notes:

Interesting results:

contracting of facial muscles

Harleen frowned. She was about to flip to another page when she heard Alfred coming back. She closed the notebook and slid it back into place.

“Sorry about that Miss Harleen. Are you enjoying the crepes?” Alfred asked politely taking off his apron.

“Delicious Alfred, thank you.” Harleen smiled finishing off the last few bites.

“I suppose I should go do some work.” She sighed getting to her feet.

Alfred smiled. “Feel free to call me if you need anything at all Miss Harleen. Also do feel free to walk the gardens. They are beautiful this time of year.”

Harleen smiled. “Thank you Alfred.”

Bruce and Jack Wayne walked into the main headquarters of Wayne Enterprises, neither of them aware of the stares they were receiving.

They took the elevator up to the top floor where the main meeting room for the Wayne Enterprises board of directors met for special votes like the one going on today. Jack sighed completely bored. He hated dealing with the board of directors. These men and women, as far as Jack was concerned, had no idea about anything. They lived in a world that was full of numbers, money and some of the most idiotic concerns that Jack had ever been witness to in the few times he had graced Wayne Enterprises with his presence. As they walked into the board room, today looked like it would be a perfect example of what he hated about most human beings, their complete lack of sight, lack of understanding at what the world really was...

Lucius Fox stood up as the Wayne brothers entered. “Ah, good of you both to come.” He held out his hand shaking Bruce's then Jack's. The brothers took their seats, Bruce at the head of the table, Lucius on the right and Jack on the left, announcing that the meeting had begun.

The meeting only lasted an hour, which was lucky for Jack because at the end of it he was about ready to start strangling the man sitting next to him, a blond with blue eyes, perfect teeth, and a shitbag personality.

The votes were cast, a decision made and Jack was ready to go when the man next to him reached out and put a hand on his upper arm stopping Jack from moving.

“Hey man, the name is Marcus McDermott, I have got to show you something.”

Jack's eyes widened as he struggled to control himself. He rolled his eyes to his brother looking for salvation, but Bruce was in conversation with Fox. He sighed, turning back to McDermott. Marcus grinned pulling out a silver cardholder, taking out a card and set it on the table.

“New card, what'd ya think?”

Jack looked down. To him, it was a white card with the man's information printed on it in boring black...dull. Marcus grinned.

“Eggshell with Romalian type ...” Marcus tapped the card with his middle-finger. “It's even Jack stared at the card pressing his lips together in a thin white line. He glanced at Marcus McDermott who was grinning like a pleased cat. All Jack could think about was how good it would be to slice the man's throat open. Jack smiled.

“Impressive,” he said.

McDermott smiled. “I know.”

Jack grinned. “Wanna hear a joke?”

Marcus frowned at the youngest Wayne brother. “Sure?”

Jack grinned. "This guy goes into the hospital, okay? His wife's just had a baby and he can't wait to see them both. So he meets the doctor and he says, 'Oh, Doc, I've been so worried. How are they?' And the doctor smiles and says, 'They're fine. Just fine. Your wife's delivered a healthy baby boy and they're both in tip-top form. You're one lucky guy.' So the guy rushes into the maternity ward with his flowers. But it's empty. His wife's bed is empty. 'Doc?' He says and turns around and the doctor and all the nurses wave their arms and scream in his face. 'April fools! Your wife's dead and the baby's a spastic!!'"

Jack started to giggled. Marcus looked uncomfortable. Jack slapped the man on the back.

“Oh now come on, that was funny? You know what you need Marcus, you need to smile more. That's what everyone in this damn building needs, a little smile. Why so serious Marcus?”

Marcus smiled reluctantly. “Yeah...”

Jack started to giggle a little louder which captured his brother's attention. Bruce came over putting a hand on Jack's shoulder. “Ready?”

“Oh, I was ready when we walked in.” Jack stood up picking up Marcus's card. “Thanks for the card Marcus, now I know how to find you if I ever need you.”

Jack grinned slipping the card into his jacket pocket before waving his fingers at Marcus. “Toodles.”

Bruce escorted Jack downstairs. “What did you say to him?” Bruce asked as they waited for the elevator.

Jack grinned. “Nothing just told him a joke. Goodness Brucie, don't trust me?”

Bruce frowned not saying anything for a little bit, then softly spoke. “Thank you for coming in today Jack.”

Jack grinned patting Bruce on the arm. “Anything for my big brother.”

The elevator doors opened and Jack stepped in turning around to smile at Bruce. “See ya later alligator.”

The doors closed on his brother. Bruce frowned staring at the closed doors. Something felt...off, but he could not figure out what it was. Maybe...Bruce sighed with a slight shake of his head. He had been so busy that he and Jack had hardly spoken in months. Maybe he should make an effort to change that...
Harleen sat at her computer typing up her notes when her cellphone rang. She picked it up, placing it between her ear and shoulder as she continued to type. “Dr. Quinzel.”

She burst into a smile when she heard Jack's voice. “Harley, Harley, so professional sounding!”

She chuckled. “Hello Jack.”

She heard Jack giggle softly in reply. “You get dressed for a picnic and meet me in the garage.”

Harleen was dressed in a pair of jeans, a close fitting red t-shirt with a white sweater over it, red keds and her blonde hair up in a ponytail, was waiting for Jack with a picnic basket that Alfred had waiting for her when she came down stairs. Alfred, under the directions from Jack who called ahead, had packed a fairly big basket which included a spinach pie, deviled eggs, Parmigiano Reggiano and Wild Mushroom Risotto Balls, Parma Ham, Parmigiano Reggiano and Basil Mayonnaise Baguettes, Blackberry Lime bars and a bottle of Pinot Blanc.

Harleen also had a bag which contained a change of clothes for Jack. She was rocking on the balls of her feet when Jack came jogging from inside the house.

“Hello Nurse!” He yelled laughing.

Harleen blushed. “Hi Jack.”

He grinned at her. “I see Alfred is as efficient as ever. Would you mind driving?”

He tossed her some keys. Harleen caught them out of the air with a grin.

Harleen was smiling as she pulled out of the garage driving a Fiat 500 painted a deep plum color. Beside her Jack was undressing.

Harleen was doing her best to keep her eyes on the road, but it was extremely hard for her to avoid watching Jack shrug out of his suit jacket, unbuttoning his vest, then he started loosening up his tie. Harleen chewed her bottom lip her eyes shooting sideways. He slipped out of the dress shirt revealing his torso. He was muscled, though not overly so, thin, cut muscles, his chest was smooth, hairless, well sculpted, flat stomach.

Is my mouth watering? She thought to herself as she swallowed. He pulled out a light blue button-down shirt (she could tell with a quick glance the shirt was fitted for him) from the bag slipping it on without buttoning it up, then proceeded to unbutton his slacks.

Harleen lost control of the vehicle for a second as she started to swerve out of her lane.

Jack started laughing. “Never seen a man get undressed before doctor?”

She knew she was bright red. “Not...no...well...”

Jack grinned slipping the slacks off after having kicked his dress shoes to the floor. “Don't worry doctor. I'm putting my clothes back on...unless you would prefer I didn't?”

He lifted an eyebrow at her. Harleen was sure her ears had just turned red to match her cheeks.
Stuttering slightly. “N-no...you go ahead and get dressed.”

Jack laughed again at her reaction.

Harleen saw that under his slacks he wore boxers, dark grey, with lighter grey stripes. Suddenly boxers were the sexiest piece of clothing Harleen had ever seen. Jack pulled out a pair of jeans from the bag. Harleen was sure she was going to have a heart attack.

She tried hard not to pay attention to him, but watching him arch his hips up, pulling on the jeans, the shirt falling away to reveal his flat stomach, a thin line of hair just under his bellybutton that disappeared under the band of his boxers...

Harleen felt heat pool in her groin making her squirm in her seat.

Jack settled back after buttoning the jeans and proceeded to button up his shirt. He grinned at her and waggled his eyebrows. “So still able to drive to the park?”

Harleen smiled, continuing to blush badly. “Yes.”

They pulled into Robinson Park with Jack directing her where to go until they found a more secluded parking lot. Jack jumped happily out of the car walking around to the back of the car and pulled out the picnic basket before he headed from the parking lot away from the trail. Harleen jogged to keep up, dashing from the car to catch up to Jack.

He grinned at her when she came up beside him.

Jack led her into a grove of trees that eventually opened up into a small clearing with a park bench. Harleen gasped. It was a really lovely spot with the sun streaming through the tree branches, the sound of birds and the breeze cutting off all the sounds of Gotham.

“Oh Jack, this is lovely.” Harleen smiled.

Jack laughed. “I found this place one day when I was about fifteen. I was wandering the park and simply stumbled on it.”

Jack set the basket on one of the benches, opening it up to remove the contents. He pulled out a red and white checkered table cloth, snapping it out and laying it across the ancient wooden table. He then proceeded to pull out the plastic plates, forks and flutes, then the wine and food, setting everything up while Harleen watched. After he was done he gave her a cheery grin and bowed, one arm to his waist the other out. “Your lunch, my lady.”

Harleen laughed taking a seat. “Thank you Jack.”

Jack sat down opposite her picking up the wine. “So did you miss me?”

He popped the cork, but he did something that startled Harleen. He not only popped the cork, he managed to grab it out of the air. It was a quick movement, but amazing, she thought. He smiled at her setting the cork on the table and poured the wine into her glass.

Harleen smiled. “Thank you and yes Jack, I did miss you today. How did the meeting go?”

Jack groaned. “Boring.”

Harleen looked up from where she had been placing food on her plate. “You don't enjoy the family business?"

He grinned. “Not at all. Oh I like the money and I like some of the things that Wayne Chemicals and Electronics puts out, but the day-to-day workings? No. I a not a rat in a maze Harley. I don't do well confined to a set program of behavior.”

He took a sip of his wine. “Because when it's all said and done, what does any of it matter?”

“Any of it? What do you mean?” Harleen sipped her own wine watching him.

“Life is chaos. Everyone is always trying to bring order to it, but that just isn't how it works. You must have chaos within you to give birth to a dancing star, or so says Nietzsche. I want to birth dancing stars Harley.”

Jack grinned at her, a slow, almost seductive smile. “Not as beautiful as you Harley Quinn.”

Harleen glanced down at her plate embarrassed. Jack laughed softly. “Sorry that I embarrassed you.”

She glanced up at him. “It's fine.”

He laughed softly. “You know how nice it is to have someone see you as you really are Harley? To have someone see past your smile and still like you?”

Harleen smiled. “I like you Jack.”

“And I like you Harley.” Jack took her hand and laced his fingers with hers.

Jack drove them back home later that afternoon singing a Dean Martin song. “...My head keeps spinnin', I go to sleep and keep grinnin' If this is just the beginnin', My life is gonna be bee-yoo-tee-ful”

Harleen laughed, smiling so hard that her cheeks hurt, but that seemed to be becoming the norm when she was with Jack.

That night when Harleen went to bed, her dreams were filled with Jack Wayne. It was highly inappropriate the way he was making her feel, but there was no denying—the man really did it for her.

Later that evening after dinner, Jack made his way quietly down to the garage. He was dressed in a black suit, black shirt, even a black tie. He flipped on the lights watching as they came on snapping down the rows revealing each expensive vehicle. Jack smiled making his way to his motorcycle. Just before getting on the bike he pulled out the business card and gazed at the name.

“Marcus McDermott, now I know exactly how to find you and I think it's time I put a real smile on that face of yours.”

Jack chuckled softly.

Nocturne Op. 9 No. 2

The morning of the gala, Harleen woke up early. She was nervous and unsure why she was nervous; her nerves were on end, to the point that she hadn't slept well. She decided to use the Wayne's indoor pool. She had seen it during the tour and Alfred had assured her she could use it at any time. Harleen was happy that she actually had a swimsuit. It was a deep red bikini, something she had bought on a whim, but hadn't really had the opportunity to wear. She felt a little exposed, but it was the only suit she had. She wrapped a towel around herself, slipped on a pair of matching flip flops and made her way down to the pool.

The indoor pool room was massive, easily the size of two ballrooms put together. Three of the walls were large picture windows wrapping around on two sides, that looked out onto a patio (big enough that Harleen thought it was more of a plaza) that was set up with comfortable and well-crafted outdoor furniture while she could see the Wayne Manor gardens beyond. The lighting in here could alter between bright to a soft seductive light that made the room feel warm and inviting. The pool itself wasn't a straight rectangle, but rather flowed in nice rounded sharps, resembling a melting figure eight. The colors of the room were golden browns, and even the tiles around the pool were a slightly darker shade from the walls. Harleen felt that it was all very relaxing. Additionally, running along side the main pool, was a lap pool strictly for exercise.

There was even a large stereo built into the wall next to where the dressing rooms and showers for the pool room were located. Harley walked over to the stereo turning it on and sorting through the music that was available until she found one she liked.

As the music wafted through the room, some smooth jazz,, Harleen removed her towel and tossed it over a lounge chair. When she had asked about the pool the previous day, Alfred told her that she didn't need to worry about a bathing cap, so she had pulled her long hair back into a ponytail. She stood on the edge of the pool, her toes hanging over the edge. She held her arms out in front of her, looking into the clear blue water before she dived in, cutting an almost perfect figure into the water with very little splash.

She swam down a little ways before she came up, breaking the surface of the water with a gasp and a huge smile.

She turned around ready to swim back when she saw Jack standing there at the pool's edge. He was wearing pair of dark blue swim trunks decorated with bright orange octopi, a towel flung over his shoulder. Harleen did her best not to stare, forcing her eyes to stay on his face, but she was discovering that it was difficult to avoid thoughts of how attractive Jack Wayne was. He was all lean muscles, well defined muscles. His hair hadn't been combed back as it usually was, the thick brown strands loose, curling slightly around his forehead, that sharp, charming smile on his face, and those beautiful eyes...Harleen swallowed.

He was grinning as he greeted her. “Hello there, doctor.”

Harleen wiped the water from her face. “Jack! Hi! You surprised me!”

Jack laughed. “I saw you heading this way wrapped in a towel and I thought, why not? A swim sounded fun! Oh, you like my trunks?”

He posed, a hand behind his head, cocking his hip to the side, resting his other hand on his waist and shooting her a devilishly handsome smile while he struck a model's pose.

Harleen couldn't help the laugh that bubbled up. “I like them very much.”

Jack waggled his eyebrows and arched his hip the other direction. “Why thank you Harley.”

He tossed his towel over to the lounge chair where hers was and dived in, cutting through the water without a sound. Harleen watched him swim toward her, popping up right in front of her. She squeaked a little louder than she intended when he broke the surface. Jack laughed at her expression.

Harleen blushed “Nothing...nothing at all.”

Jack waggled his brows at her full of humor and splashed her. Harleen squeaked again, swimming away from him and splashed back. Soon they were laughing like a couple of children, splashing water back and forth screaming with laughter. Jack dived down grabbing her around the waist and pulling her under. Harleen just barely had enough time to grab a gulp of air before she was yanked under the surface of the clear blue water.

Jack let her go once she was under, though he stayed close, floating under the water, so close he could have simply leaned in and kissed her. His eyes were watching her with humor, but there was something else there for the briefest of moments. Harleen wasn't sure what it was she saw, but there had been something there...

Jack reached for her, his hands sliding against her naked torso, gripping her waist then he kicked for the surface. They both broke through, gasping for breath. Jack was smiling, his hands still resting on her waist. Jack let go with one hand, the other remained on her waist while he used his other hand to wipe his hair back from his face, droplets of water running down over his cheeks, nose and his lips. He stared at her tilting his head. Harleen was struck dumb staring into his incredible eyes. She was hyper-aware of his hand on her waist, the length of his fingers, the heat radiating up from the point where his fingertips touched her skin.

He opened his mouth, about to say something when they heard someone clear their throat.

They both turned, Jack looking over his shoulder and Harleen looking past him. It was Bruce.

“Just came to use to the lap pool,” he said but there was something in his voice, just an inflection that indicated he was not happy.

Harleen flushed looking down at the water. “I should get dressed. See you at breakfast Jack, Mr. Wayne.” She swam to the side, away from Bruce, pulling herself up and grabbing her towel. Jack turned to watch her. She is gorgeous, he thought, the suit sticking to her, the way the light softly illuminated her perfect skin.

As soon as Harleen had left, Jack glared at his brother.

“What was that about?”

Bruce frowned tossing his towel to the side. “I don't know what you mean Jack.”

Jack trended water, his eyes slightly narrowed. “She was here first, I just followed.”
Bruce frowned deeper. “What are you doing Jack?”

“What do you mean, what am I doing? I'm swimming.” Jack grinned leaning back and letting the water hold him on his back.

Bruce sighed. “Just don't get any ideas of seducing your doctor.”

Jack laughed. “Oh Brucie, so concerned. You know, I'm a grown man and she is a grown woman, even if she is in your employment big brother, you can't control feelings.”

“I could let her go,” Bruce said quietly.

Jack came up, his eyes cold. “Don't even think about it Bruce. You think I'm bad now? Just wait.”

Bruce stared at his brother. “Is that a threat?”

Jack smiled again. “No. I would never threaten you Brucie. Besides if you don't want to pay her I could always do it myself. I want her to stay. Plus I don't really see where you have a lot of room to talk.”

Bruce mouth twitched. “What do you mean?”

“Oh Brucie, stop. You know exactly what I'm talking about. Let's see..what was her name? Oh yes...Alison wasn't it? Worked for that rival company. And then there was Jillian...your lawyer?”

Bruce sighed. “Fine, point taken.” He frowned deeper. “Fine, she stays, but Jack...please listen to her as a doctor, please.”

Jack laid back again. “Brucie, don't worry. Dr. Quinzel is doing her job. She is gaining my trust, isn’t that what you want Bruce? Dr. Quinzel to not just be my doctor, but my friend? She's doing just fine. Hell, we talked about my feelings just yesterday.” Jack giggled. “Oh I should probably tell you that she is my plus one tonight.”

Bruce stared at his brother then grunted. The next thing Jack heard was his brother starting his laps.

As Bruce swam his laps, his mind mulled over the situation with his brother and Dr. Quinzel. Jack could be falling for Dr. Quinzel...would that really be so bad? Jack had shown no affection towards anyone beyond Bruce and Alfred. His brother had never dated, didn't have any friends in the truest sense of the word that Bruce was aware of and he had never shown any interest in women—or men, for that matter. But now, just this morning, the one other time he had seen them together, alone, it was clear to Bruce that Jack was feeling something. Perhaps he was being too hard, his little brother falling in love might be just what the doctor ordered. Bruce chuckled mentally at himself. What the doctor ordered. Jack would find that play on words funny. But yes, he decided, he would step back, let things progress until something happened one way or the other that would require him to step in.

Harleen sat at her vanity and wiped the tears from her face. She had changed out of her suit into a tank top dress with a modest square neckline and flared skirt, a shrug laid across her lap to put on before going downstairs for breakfast, if she was still working here. She was barefoot, her feet crossed at the ankles under her seat as she glared at herself in the mirror. She hadn't started to put her make-up on yet because she kept tearing up.
God, how could I be so stupid! Mr. Wayne is going to fire me for sure! she thought in fear and self-recrimination. Of course, nothing had happened between her and Jack, but their behavior had looked bad in the pool. How could she..? Then she told herself to stop. She was building a relationship with her patient...the attraction had not been intentional.

“UGH!” Harleen dropped her head onto her folded arms. That was when there was a knock at her door. She looked up going pale. This was it.

“Just a minute.” She angrily wiped the tears away trying not to look like she had been crying.

“Harley, it's me.”

Harleen turned at the sound of Jack’s voice. “Jack?”

“Can I come in?” Jack asked.

“Ah...yes, sure.” Harleen glanced in the mirror. Oh god, I look terrible! Her hair was still damp, no make up, her skin blotchy from crying. The door opened and Jack slipped in, closing it behind him. He was wearing just a pair of dress slacks and a white button-down shirt, untucked, his hair still damp. He looked as if he had simply thrown on some clothing and hurried straight to her door.

“I came to let you know Bruce isn't angry with you—or us.” Jack grinned.

“What?” Harleen was confused.

“I said, 'Bruce isn't mad.' Don't worry about anything.” Jack smiled at her walking closer to gently grasp her chin.

“Everything is fine. Nothing for you to get your pretty head in a tizzy about.” He smiled, a soft gentle smile while lightly holding her chin, his thumb lightly stroking her skin.

“I explained about building trust between doctor and patient. He understood.” Jack stroked her bottom lip lightly, such a feather soft touch that for a moment she wasn't sure he had actually touched her.

Harleen's whole body relaxed, her breath flowing out of her in a gush.

Jack grinned. “There—better?”

“Much...I-I just...” Harleen stammered.

That was when Jack surprised her by pulling her against him and wrapping his arms around her in a tight hug. He laid his chin on the top of her head and whispered, “You are still my doctor. Now let's forget all about stick-up-his-ass Bruce and go have breakfast. You said you wanted to try some art therapy and I promised you I would play the piano. Let's see about doing that today hmmm? I can teach you to play a game of pool too.” He tightened his hold just a fraction. “And of course, I have to show you my dancing skills tonight.” Jack giggled stepping back from her, his hands shifting to her shoulders.

Harleen looked up into his beautiful eyes and melted. Oh, this is so dangerous, she thought to herself, but he was like a magnet that she just couldn't pull away from.

“Sounds good Jack.” She smiled in response to him.
Jack stared at her for a long moment, not saying anything. Her eyes are amazingly blue, he thought. There was something about her...he could see a lurking darkness behind those blue eyes. Interesting, he thought to himself, but there was more to it. She...tugged at him.

He took a breath before he nodded. “See you at breakfast.” With that he spun around gracefully and was gone.

Harleen took a deep breath, her knees feeling weak for a moment. She smiled. Maybe everything was going to be alright after all.

When she came downstairs for breakfast, most of her hair was pulled back with a barrette at the back of her head, the rest of her hair falling in a soft wave down her back, and her makeup was in place as was her smile. She looked more like herself.

Jack had already fixed her cup of coffee and was standing by the oven with Alfred cooking. Jack glanced over his shoulder when she stepped into the room. He was fully dressed now, wearing another three piece suit, this time in navy blue, though the jacket was currently lying across the counter behind him. He was wearing only the white shirt and vest, his sleeves rolled up and an apron over his front. He smiled when he saw her, giving her a wink.

“Doctor! Ready for a hearty breakfast?”

Alfred turned around, smiling brightly. “Good morning, Miss Harleen. Master Jack decided he wanted to cook this morning.”

Harleen took her seat in surprise. “You cook, Jack?”

Jack winked at her again. “I'm a man of many talents doctor.”

“Well whatever it is, it does smell good.” Harleen blushed, but picked up her cup of coffee to hide her red cheeks behind it. She took a sip of the coffee and smiled. Jack had made it just as she liked it; he had noticed, she thought to herself. Her heart did a little flip. The fact that he had paid attention to how she took her coffee—it was nice. She set the mug down taking a breath to swallow the sudden swell of emotions that the simple gesture of making her coffee had caused in her.

“So what are you making?” she asked straightening up in her seat to try to see what was going on at the stove.

“I am making French Toast and it requires a great deal of attention.” Jack giggled as he gestured with a spatula.

Harleen laughed. Alfred smiled reaching up to retrieve some plates for Jack and Harleen. Jack glanced at Alfred. “Oh no you don't, you have to eat breakfast with us old man, since I'm cooking.”

“But Master Jack...” Alfred started to protest, but Jack smiled pointing the spatula at him.

“Nope, I insist. You and Harleen are my favorite people in all the world and we are going to eat breakfast together. So get yourself a plate.” Jack smiled with a mocked narrow-eyed look. Alfred laughed. “As you say, Master Jack.”

Harleen sat stunned. She was one of his favorite people?

A few minutes later the three of them were sitting at the large island counter eating together. Alfred had set the plates and utensils, bringing over a small ceramic pitcher that contained a thick, delicious syrup and had even poured the three of them glasses of milk.

Harleen smiled at Alfred as the older man took his seat. “So has Jack always cooked?” she asked with a glance at Jack.

Alfred laughed softly with a twinkle in his eyes as he raised his glass to take a sip. “He has always tried.”

Jack gasped in shock. “Alfred!” Then he giggled. “I don’t think Alfred has ever forgiven me for burning up his kitchen when I tried to make that omelet by myself.”

Harleen snorted a laugh on the bite of French toast in her mouth, trying to swallow. “You burned the kitchen up?”

Jack nodded. “I did.”

Alfred laughed again. “Master Jack burned his eyebrows off too. He was trying to make a father’s day omelet for me.”

“Oh Jack, that is so sweet!” Harleen looked over at Jack who shrugged.

“I ate it despite its blackened state...and the state of the kitchen,” Alfred said softly. The emotion in the older man's voice was clear. Alfred looked on Jack like a son.

Harleen took a bite of her French toast, a soft smile on her face. This little conversation told her quite a bit about Jack, how he felt about Alfred, the one person in his life besides Bruce that he had feelings for, a connection with...and now he considered her part of that small circle. Harleen felt—excited and honored, her own feelings toward Jack twisted tighter in her chest. It made her all the more determined to help Jack in any way possible.

After breakfast Jack took Harleen to a room she had only been in once, during her tour. The Wayne Manor gaming room. The elegant room was large (much like most of the rooms in the manor), but this one was dominated by a large, elegant pool table that sat in the precise center of the chamber.

The pool room was decorated in dark wood paneling and clearly expensive oriental carpets in shades of rich red and deep golds. The lights overhead hung from the ceiling reminding her of the lights one would find in a fancy bar. The lights cast a warm orange glow throughout the room. There were no windows in this room; instead the walls held a rather large dart board, a flat screen TV hung on another wall in front of which sat a circle of comfortable looking plush chairs and a long wrap-around couch facing the TV. Along the opposite wall there was a bar made from what looked to be large stones. The counter was a shining cherry wood and the wall behind the bar held an extensive liquor cabinet.

Near the bar there also sat a gorgeous piano, a baby grand if she wasn't mistaken.

Jack strolled in walking over to the bar.

“Fix you a drink doctor?” he asked with a grin.

“It's a bit early isn't it?” Harleen asked as she gazed around the room.
“I suppose.” He smiled as he poured a shot of whiskey, downing it without even flinching before walking back around to take her hand and lead her over to the piano. He sat her down next to him, their hips touching as they shared the padded piano bench.

“So, music therapy, how does that work Harley?” Jack asked going back to calling her the nickname he had given her. He opened the lid over the keys and lightly ran his fingertips over the keys.

“Well, it's supposed to let you express yourself in a way that might be easier for you than talking. I mean, in its simplest form.” Harleen smiled.

With a saucy grin, Jack laced his fingers together then stretched them out cracking his knuckles. He winked at her before he placed his long fingers on the keys, but he didn't move to play immediately; instead Jack closed his eyes.

Harleen watched him, her eyes glancing down to his fingers spread out on the keys. Then he started to play, slowly and gracefully; his fingers moved over the keyboard as if they were dancing. Jack's body began to move gently while he played, the music seemed to move through him. Harleen didn't know much about classical music, but she did have a CD her friend Dr. Ethel Peabody had given her to help her sleep. Though Harleen had only listened to it once or twice she knew enough of the recording to recognize the piece of music Jack was playing...Chopin-Nocturne Op. 9 No. 2.

Harleen watched intently while Jack played. She has never seen anyone put so much emotion into the music. As she watched him, she could feel the pain within him, the darkness that dwelled in Jack Wayne. He swayed slightly, a slight crease to his brow while he played. Harleen felt as if he were laying his soul bare to her if she listened hard enough.

He gently began to bring the piece to a close, his fingers nimbly sailing over the keys and then gradually playing the last note which hung in the air.

When he was finished he turned to face her. “How was that?”

Harleen blinked several times, wiping her eyes. “Oh Jack...” she shook her head just barely. “That was—it was beautiful.”

Jack laughed, but she could see something lurking in the back of his eyes...a shadow of emotion that flitted by and then was quickly gone. Jack smacked his hands playfully on his knees. He looked down for a moment, his voice barely a whisper. “Will you save me Harley? Save me from my demons? Or will you dance with them...dance with me?” Harleen started to open her mouth, but then stopped, remaining quiet. She reached over to lay her hand on top of his, squeezing. “Yes Jack. I will be there to battle the demons with you...or dance, whatever you need.” She smiled. Jack turned on the bench to look at her, his head still hanging so that his hair fell forward making him look younger, his large smile in place, looking perfect on his lips, she noted. There was something about his smile that stirred a quiver of something deep in her gut, but it passed.

“So, I think you should play pool with me until lunch. Then we should have lunch with Alfred before we have to get ready for the gala tonight.” Jack lifted one eyebrow marginally, his smile still in place.
He always smiled, had smiled at her a great deal, but there was something she could detect that was different about this smile. She couldn't lay her finger on what it was...just a slight change, but it made her heart squeeze tightly in her chest.

Jack set the pool table up, handing her a cue stick. “First thing you want to do my sweets...” Harleen blinked in surprise when he called her my sweets. Jack kept talking, not seeming to realize the term of endearment he had used to refer to her. She decided to simply file that away to examine later, but her heart had skipped a beat when he said it.

“You want to pick a cue stick, one with a good head.” Jack giggled. “Good head.” He grinned at her which caused her to blush bright red.

He continued with a laugh in his eyes. “Anyway, you also want to make sure your stick isn't bent. Not something we really have to worry about here.” Jack walked over to the wall where the cue sticks were hung in a row, taking four down. She watched him as he weighed them before coming back to her and handing one to her. “Chalk your tip, but don't blow on it because that puts moisture on the tip. I already racked the balls for you. So now Harley, I want you to break.”

Harleen wrinkled her nose in question. “Break?”

He nodded moving around behind her. “You are going to hit the cue ball, that's the white ball there...” Here he pointed at the white ball on the table.

“Then with a nice easy hit...” Jack said quietly.

Harleen bent over, holding the cue stick a little awkwardly pointed at the white ball. She glanced up at Jack who grinned. “Here let me show you how to hold it more comfortably.

He walked around behind her and put his arms along hers. His right arm was practically around her waist. With that hand holding the stick just behind her own hand, he placed his left hand above hers, his arm practically flush with hers as he showed her how to hold the cue stick.

Harleen wasn't really listening to him talk. She caught that he was showing her how to do both an open hand bridge and a closed hand bridge for the cue stick. But her attention was focused on the feel of his body so close to hers, how good he smelled, a combination of spice, cologne, the hint of cigarette smoke, and the warmth of his breath. His cheek was almost touching hers...instantly Harleen forgot how to breathe, his words seeming distant as he explained how to use the cue stick...the heat of his body against hers was more than simply erotic, it was...she couldn't think of a word to describe everything that was churning inside of her.

Harleen did her best to stop focusing on Jack's body against hers and tried to pay attention to what he was telling her.

Jack was hyper aware of Harley. The smell of her, the warmth of her. The urge to lick her neck, to lay her across the table...he had never felt lust like this before. And it was more than lust, but instead he returned his focus to the game.

“Now, hold the cue stick like this...” He moved her hands on the stick, his body leaning into hers. His face was so close to her own that she could feel his breath against her cheek moving the fine hairs along her skin.
“Once you have the shot lined up, just let the stick flow, hit the ball, not too hard; give it a light tap.” Jack was smiling. He glanced sideways at her, their eyes meeting. For a moment, just a moment, Harleen thought he might kiss her. The way his eyes seemed to glow, circled by those thick lashes, that seductive smile.

“You don’t want to push the ball too hard or you’ll lose control of it.” Jack stared into her eyes while he spoke. His lips were so close, his breath caressed her lips. But then the moment was broken at the soft click of the ball hitting the others, sending them rolling across the table.

Jack stepped back. “Good shot Harley.”

Harleen laughed. “Lucky you mean.”

Jack grinned at her. “Maybe...or maybe I'm just a great teacher.”

Harleen laughed. “You might be right.”

They ended up playing a game of pool with Harleen not doing too badly, but ultimately Jack won. Harleen clapped. “That was fun Jack.”

He grinned leaning against the table with one hand. “You think that was good, you should play tennis with me.”

Harleen smiled blushing. Jack stepped around the table wrapping an arm around her waist and pulling her against him. “Come on Harley, let's go eat!”

They ate lunch with Alfred who made a light meal of baby kale, butternut and chicken salad.

“The food tonight for the gala will be rich so I thought you two would enjoy a light salad.” Alfred smiled.

Jack grinned pointing his fork at Alfred. “You can always count on Alfred to take care of us.”

Alfred chuckled. “If I didn't, you and Master Bruce would have eaten cake all the time when you were small.”

Harleen laughed, shaking her head for a moment. “The salad is wonderful, thank you Alfred.”

He smiled at her. “Well, I do hope the two of you have a good time this evening. Oh and Master Jack, your masks arrived today and I have hired the driver you requested.”

Harleen frowned in confusion. “Masks?”

Jack grinned. “Didn't I tell you? It's a masked gala.”

Harleen blinked. “Really?”

Jack laughed. “Oh yes. It's going to be great fun.”

“Are we riding with Bruce?” Harleen asked before taking a bite of her salad.

Jack made a face. “No, he has his own driver, and he is going with some Finnish model named Suvi
I believe. The latest in a long line…”

“Does Bruce only date models?” Harleen frowned.

Jack shrugged talking around his bite of food. “Pretty much, though occasionally there is an heiress or a professional woman thrown in to add variety.”

Harleen frowned. “I guess Bruce isn't looking for a Mrs. Wayne is he?”

Jack shook his head. “Bruce plays the playboy, but he can't fool me.”

“You've said that before…” Harleen took a sip of her water.

Jack simply smiled, changing the subject. “I hired a make-up artist and hair dresser for you. They will be here in approximately…” He looked at his watch. “An hour.”

“What?” Harleen looked shocked, but Jack waved his hand in a dismissal.

“You are going to a party with me. You shouldn't have to do your own makeup or hair.” Jack chuckled.

“But Jack, between that and the dress...it's just…” Harleen struggled for a moment, but Jack put a hand up.

“Harley, it makes me smile. You want me to smile don't you?” He stared at her intently.

“I-I...y-yes. I do..” Harleen stuttered.

“Good, then it's decided.” Jack took a last bite of his salad hopping to his feet.

“See you in a couple of hours Harley.” He gave her a wink as he strode out of the kitchen.

Harleen glanced at Alfred who only smiled. “I have not see Master Jack this...invested in anything...anyone Miss Harleen.”

She turned to look at Alfred, her heart slamming against her chest despite her brain telling it not to...

Alfred smiled gently at her. “I thank you for that.”

For the next few hours, Harleen Quinzel was made to feel like a princess. The people Jack Wayne had hired were not only gifted artists, but they were terrible gossips and a lot of fun. Harleen had never had so many people exclaim over her before.

The make-up artist, a man named Jeffree squealed loud and long when he saw her.

“OH MY GOD!! Look at your eyes!! Those have got to be the most beautiful eyes I have ever seen!!” He had grabbed her face in his soft hands turning her face this way and that.

“You are going to put every one of those high society ladies to shame tonight, mark my words! And our Jackie is going to be drooling over you!”

The hairdresser was just as bad. Her name was Deepica and she had marveled over Harleen's hair. Deepica had her sitting in a chair putting gold highlights in her hair, while Jeffree did her make up and had assistants attending to both her fingernails and toenails.
At that moment Harleen felt like Cinderella being transformed for the ball.

After a few hours, finally, Harleen was ready.

Alfred had come up to knock on her door, letting her know that Master Jack was ready and waiting for her.

Jack was waiting at the bottom of the steps, their masks in his hands. He was dressed in a slim cut black jacket, trimmed in silver along the lapels. He was wearing a black shirt underneath, with a matching silver waistcoat, a silver tie that had a black stripe running down the middle of it, wrapped with a silver ribbon, all of it held in place by a silver pin. His hair was slicked back, his devilish smile in place, but as he looked up the stairs, his smile faltered.

Harleen came down the stairs, her hand on the rail, wearing the red dress he had bought for her. Her hair was half up, half down, golden blonde waves tumbling down her back, loose strands curling around her face. The diamond drop earrings that Jack had sent up while she was having everything done, glittered from her ears. Jack had decided that was the only jewelry she needed and he had been correct. She was a vision. Her lips were done in a deep red, her eye make-up, done in a elegant smokey-eye with just a hint of glitter for evening, the effect made the blue of her eyes glow. Jack felt that strange twist in his chest when he saw her; it was more than lust (though looking at her right now had his desire for her working overtime) the feeling was something...deeper.

Jack smiled broadly reaching up to take her hand as she came down the last few steps.

“You, my lovely, are a vision,” Jack said just before kissing the back of her hand.

Harleen blushed smiling at Jack. “Thank you.”

His grin became even brighter. “Ready to go cut a rug?”

Harleen laughed with a nod. “You bet.”

Jack handed her a mask. The mask covered her eyes and nose, leaving the deep red of her lips and the blue of her eyes exposed. The mask was silver and gold, that almost looked to be made of lace, small diamonds were embedded in the middle of the brow, along the eye-slits, and curling up with the corners of the elaborate mask. Jack’s mask was a counterpart of Harleen’s. His mask, which also left only his mouth exposed, was a burnished antique silver/gold. The sides of the mask flared up, making the wearer look part devil, but in what Harleen thought was an entirely sexy way.

Jack helped put Harleen’s mask on, her blue eyes standing out in startlingly contrast to the silver of the mask. Jack grinned, sliding his own mask into place startling a gasp from Harleen as she looked into his eyes, the blue/green blazing with mirth.

“Shall we, my princess?” He bowed, took her hand, and led her outside to the waiting limousine.
When Jack took her outside, Harleen was surprised by the vehicle waiting for them. It wasn't a traditional limousine that was parked in the Wayne Manor turnaround. Instead, it was a Rolls Royce, and not just any Rolls Royce—this one was clearly from the 1960s. Harleen glanced at Jack who grinned clearly pleased with himself.

“This is a 1961 Rolls Royce Phantom V...not just any old car to take my princess to a party.”

Jack gave her a wink as he leaned over and opened the door for her. Harleen was smiling, she was definitely feeling like Cinderella and this was her fairy tale. For a moment, she wondered if she should allow herself to think that way, considering that she was Jack's therapist, but she decided that for tonight, they were concentrating on friendship, the gala, and to hell with the standard rules.

He guided her in, making sure her dress was in the car, his fingers for a moment, tracing the side of her leg before closing the door.

Harleen felt the burn where his fingers had glided along the fabric of her dress. She felt heat rise in her face as she watched Jack make his way around the back of the vehicle. He seemed to skip around to the other side, jumping in beside her with a wide grin. Harleen couldn't stop herself from giggling suddenly. He looked dashing, his brilliant eyes sparkling at her from behind his mask.

“I've never been to a gala,” she admitted. “Well, nothing like this I mean. The closest, I guess, would be a friend's wedding where I had to dress up.” Harleen felt a blush again. She felt like a backwoods hick.

Jack took her hand, kissing her knuckles.

“Well I won't spoil it for you by giving my opinion on these parties where the rich and richer like to try to one-up each other.” Jack's smile was a sardonic expression. “Though I have to say I probably would have attended more of them if I had had someone like you on my arm. You look good enough to eat, Harley.”

Jack waggled his eyebrows with a wide perfect grin on his face just before he dragged his upper teeth light across her knuckles sending waves of heat through her body.. Harleen blushed deeper, glancing down at her lap. Jack still held her hand, placing it on his lap, his hand covering hers. The simple gesture made her heart slam against her breastbone. His hand was warm and the feel of his thigh under her hand was strong, lean. She resisted the urge to squeeze...just barely.

The back of the car was not overly large and they were sitting almost hip to hip. She could smell his cologne, the slight undercurrent of cigarette smoke mixing with his own unique scent. The combination was enough to make her squirm in her seat. She had never been this shy around someone like she was with Jack. Nor had she ever been this attracted to anyone! He was like a drug...intoxicating. Damn it, why did he have to be so handsome and charming!! Harleen asked herself. Her attraction to him was almost overpowering. She glanced sideways at him only to find him gazing at her, that soft smile tugging at his lips, a smile that always seemed to be present. The way he looked at her combined with the hint of a smile, a secret at the corner of his mouth just waiting to be shared just with her. Harleen swallowed, her eyes moving from his mouth back to his face.
He released her hand, reaching over to brush his fingertips along her cheek, tenderly caressing a line behind her ear. Jack found her irresistible...he wanted to lose himself in her. The feeling was slowly becoming desperate, almost like a drive to possess her, make her his...as he touched her cheek he promised himself that soon, he would make her his, part of everything that mattered to him.

Harleen glanced at Jack. She started to say something, but Jack took that moment to brush his fingers over her lips quieting her before he put his hand back over hers turning to look out the window. Harleen stared at him for a moment before she felt her blush burning her ears causing her to turn away and look out the window too.

The ride wasn't too long from the Wayne estate. The driver made good time, sweeping them from Wayne Manor to downtown Gotham in a matter of minutes. Their car turned onto the main street, traveling down a few blocks until they were met with traffic. They had arrived at the Gotham City Art Museum where the gala was being held. Harleen tried not to let her mouth fall open, but when they pulled up to the museum, it was difficult. There were fancy cars everywhere! Harleen had never seen so many clearly expensive automobiles except on TV or in the movies. The elite of Gotham were attending this gala fundraiser and it looked to Harleen as if some actual celebrities were among those attending the gala.

Not everyone wore masks. Some attendees had their masks on sticks or in their hands posing for the Gotham press to take pictures. There was even a red carpet rolled down the front steps of the museum for the guest to walk. Reporters lined both sides of the red carpet that was protected by velvet ropes and a few men in tuxedos and women in dresses that were simultaneously elegant while allowing for rapid movement if necessary that were clearly security, so that only those attending the gala could walk in the carpet. Harleen's eyes grew larger. “I wasn't expecting so many people!”

Jack laughed. “Oh, a Wayne charity gala brings out the who's who of Gotham and beyond. Brucie really knows how to put up a fancy get-together don't you think?” It took over fifteen minutes for them get to the front of the museum, but soon their car was able to pull up and drop Jack and Harleen off at the entrance to the party.

When Jack jumped out of the car, the press went crazy. Even with the mask the reporters apparently recognized Jack Wayne.

Unlike his brother, Jack Wayne did not attend a lot of these functions and was not seen out and about as much as his brother. The fact that he was attending the gala and with someone on his arm was unprecedented. Some reporters yelled questions which Jack ignored, swiftly moving around to open the door for Harleen himself. When she stepped out the press included Harleen in their questioning.

“So who's the lady Mr. Wayne?”

“Jack! Jack Wayne! Does this mean you're off the market? What about your brother? Can you take the masks off?”

Jack simply ignored the press, though he put his arm around Harleen's waist which had the crowd going crazy again. Jack leaned in close to her so she could hear him.

“Don't worry about them. The press like to be here at these things...never know who is going to show up at one of my brother's parties.” Jack smiled giving a wave to the crowd with his free hand.

“But...are you sure you want to be seen with me?” Harleen was doing her best to try to avoid looking scared, but this was a bit overwhelming.
Jack laughed. “Let them print what they want. Besides, they only know it's me from the car and you are my mysterious companion! Besides that,” he added with a grin, “we look good together don’t we Harley?”

Harleen blushed, but didn't have a chance to respond. They had made their way up the stairs to the main entrance of the museum amongst the flashes of a hundred cameras.

The entrance was a large glass front behind four sets of Roman Tuscan columns. There were four different entrances, but three of them had been blocked off so that guests could only enter through one which was being held open by an imposingly tall, wide man in a tuxedo, wearing a simple black mask. As they approached the door and the tall man, Jack laughed.

“Well hello Bruno! Fancy seeing you here!”

The man grinned. “Mr. Jack Wayne. Not as surprised as I am to see you here. You don't usually come to these events.”

Jack shrugged. “Oh you know how it is...big brother gets angry and tells you that you have to go or else. Besides, how could I refuse to take this gorgeous lady out?”

Jack bowed presenting Harleen. Bruno gave her a once over and grinned.

“You ever get tired of skinny here,” Bruno said with a sly, yet friendly grin, “Feel free to look me up.”

Jack's eyes narrowed ever so slightly, the brilliant color of them going flat for a brief second though neither Harleen nor Bruno noticed. Instead Jack smiled. “Sorry Bruno, Harley here has better taste than that.”

With that Jack swept past Bruno and into the museum itself. Bruno watched them go, eyeing Harleen's backside with an appreciative smile.

Harleen hadn't had a lot of chances to go to the Gotham Art Museum. She had driven by it a few times, but as she walked into the gala her mouth fell open. When walking in, she was greeted by the breathtaking decorations and just above her a glorious skylight that right now showed only stars. The floors were a dark marble that shone in the lights that were everywhere. The overall lighting was dim, creating an intimate atmosphere despite the large size of the room. Lights shone everywhere. The lights that were littered throughout the room were actually designed to look like pillars made from tiny, twinkling lights that were set on heavy marble bases. At the base of each light pillar, were a large number of fresh flowers. The flowers might have been white, or blue or purple.

Harleen realized that it was difficult to determine in the dim lighting throughout the museum. Tables and chairs had been set around the room, each decorated with white table cloths, candles and more flowers. With an amazed shake of her head, Harleen noted there was even a fountain in the middle of the room. She wasn't sure of the time period, but the fountain looked old to her and made from white marble, though the lights made it seem dark purple or blue. The sound of the running water from the fountain mingled with the other sounds of quiet conversation and the beautiful melody that was being played by a string quartet. The ceiling of the museum had been decorated with dark blue drapery that gave the entire main room a rich quality that was enhanced by the lighting. There had even been a dance floor set up where several couples were dancing. Across from the dance floor a small stage had been put together for the charity auction later this evening.

The next thing that Harleen noticed beyond the room were the masks and the clothing. She had never seen so many gorgeous dresses! And the masks were amazing! Moving among the crowd of expensively dressed people, were waiters and waitresses all dressed in black tuxedos and all wearing simple black masks across their eyes. They carried trays of champagne, wine and some even carried beer which Harleen was sure was probably some sort of expensive beer, not just regular “bar” beer.

Jack grinned taking her hand and kissing her knuckles. “Would you like to dance?”

Harleen blushed, but nodded. “Yes.”

Jack held her hand gently and led her out to the dance floor. The quartet had just started playing a new tune and Harleen frowned softly. “I know this song.”

Jack smiled putting an arm around her waist, his other hand holding hers as he slowly moved her around the dance floor. Low, only for her to hear he started to sing, his voice warm, sending shivers down her spine and heat where his hands touched her.

“Guess it's true, I'm not good at a one-night stand But I still need love 'cause I'm just a man These nights never seem to go to plan I don't want you to leave, will you hold my hand?”

He spun her around, holding one of her hands before he gently tugged her back into his arms. Harleen's heart was beating so hard in her chest, pounding against her breastbone, that she was surprised he couldn't hear it. He held her close, his lips pressed just below her ear where she could feel the soft caress of his lips against her skin as he continued to sing just for her.

“Oh, won't you stay with me? 'Cause you're all I need This ain't love it's clear to see But darling, stay with....”

Jack smiled, brushing a kiss across her pulse beating fast beneath her flushed skin. He spun her out, slowly spinning her around, then, his strong hand was pressing against her waist, he lifted her up spinning around once, then placed her on her feet. Jack wrapped his arms around her, one at her waist and dipped her back; with his other hand, he cradled her head ever so gently, his long fingers in her hair. He smiled at her, that wide glorious smile, and his eyes twinkled behind his mask. Harleen took in a shuddering breath as he leaned in close, his lips almost touching hers. She could feel the brush of his breath against her mouth before he gracefully pulled her back to her feet. They glided across the dance floor Jack continuing to sing just for her.

“Why am I so emotional? No it's not a good look, gain some self control And deep down I know this never works But you can lay with me so it doesn't hurt...”

He pulled her close, putting her weight against his left arm, his right gently pressed to her stomach as he spun slowly around. Harleen reached up to caress his cheek with her fingertips causing his smile to broaden. As her fingers glided past his mouth, Jack brushed a kiss against her digits. He wrapped both arms around her when he pulled her close again, the two of them now just weaving to the music.

Jack brushed his fingers through her hair. He had so many things he wanted to say at that moment, but he said none of them, instead content to hold her against him. Harleen closed her eyes, her cheek to his, she felt his hand come up to cradle the back of her head again, while they weaved to the music. Her emotions were in turmoil, roiling butterflies in her stomach like nothing she had ever felt before...she didn't know what to say or do...she was his doctor!! She...
“May I cut in?” They both turned at the sound of a rather high-pitched man's voice.

Jack narrowed his eyes ready to lash out, but then he saw that it was Harold Sale, which startled him for a moment. He recognized the foul little man even with the rather gaudy mask he was wearing. Jack remembered Sale from school, one of the numerous bullies who made life hell for Jack, until he took matters into his own hands. Harold was one of the richie riches of Gotham, born into money. Sale had made even more by dealing in real estate and other investments...not all of them strictly legal.

“Oh, if it isn't Harold Sale. You know, looking at you Harold, I understand why some animals eat their young.” Jack sneered.

Harold laughed. “Why if it isn't Jack. God, when was the last time you attended one of these? Oh that's right—your big brother doesn't let you out much does he? Got to keep his crazy brother on a short leash doesn't he?” Harold bodily moved himself between Harleen and Jack. “This schmuck bothering you miss?” Harold smiled, his teeth so white that for a moment Harleen was sure they were fake.

Harleen frowned, pulling back. “No he isn't, thank you.”

Harold reached out grabbing her hand in a vice-like grip.

“Why not dance with a real billionaire? Nice seeing you Jack,” the shorter man said dismissively.

Harold grabbed Harleen, practically dragging her out onto the dance floor just as the music changed. Jack hissed ready to go out there and break Harold's nose...and maybe a few other appendages when someone grabbed his arm.

“Don't Jack.”

Jack Wayne turned to see his brother. Bruce held Jack's upper arm loosely, but firmly and discreetly enough that no one would notice anything more than two brothers speaking.

Jack glared, but took a deep breath. “It's fine Brucie. I'm fine.”

Jack watched Harold and Harleen dance for a few minutes, his brother maintaining a hold his upper arm.

Bruce sighed, watching Harold and Harleen too.

“I understand, believe me. If anyone deserves a beating, it's Harold Sale, but Jack, you can't solve problems with your fists.”

“No, but breaking his face would do a lot to solving one of my problems.” Jack laughed.

The brothers were quiet for a moment. Jack's eyes never left Harleen.

Bruce cleared his throat. “Did you hear about Marcus McDermott?”

“Who?” Jack didn't look at his brother.

“Marcus McDermott, he is on the board of directors....you spoke to him after the meeting?” Bruce continued tilting his head to gauge his brother's reaction.
Jack finally looked at him. “Oh, you mean the man with the cards right?”

“Yes, apparently he took off on vacation without a word to anyone.” Bruce took a sip from his champagne glass that he had been holding. Jack shrugged his shoulders. “Why are you telling me?”

“No reason, just saw you talking to him, thought you two might be friends.” Bruce turned back to watch the dancers.

Jack laughed. “I didn't want to talk to him. And no, he isn't a friend.”

Bruce nodded. He glanced sideways at his brother. Jack's eyes had not left the pretty blonde once.

Bruce sighed letting go of Jack's arm. “Go on, go get your doctor back.”

Jack grinned at his brother and waved at Bruce as he made his way back to the dance floor. Bruce watched him go shaking his head slightly though he did so with a smile. It really was good to see Jack take an interest in someone and Dr. Quinzel did look beautiful tonight. He couldn't fault his younger brother on his taste in women. With a smile Bruce turned and went back to wandering the party.

As Jack approached Harold and Harleen on the dance floor, he hummed along to the music that was playing; this time the quartet was playing some Coldplay song the words of which he couldn't place, but he remembered the tune and danced along as he glided across the dance floor. He came up on Harold and brought his hand down, a little too hard on Harold's shoulder causing the man to stumble to the side a bit. Harleen looked relieved when she saw Jack.

Harold started to say something, but Jack grabbed Harold's tie, yanking Harold close.

“Don't start Harold...” Jack's voice had dropped low, menacing. “She's with me Harold, dear and I don't like sharing, so consider yourself lucky that I let you dance with her. Capiche?”

Harold's eyes widened, but he nodded. “Yeah, yeah, it's fine Jack.” Harold put his hands up looking meek.

Harold stared wide-eyed at Jack before he quickly took off, stumbling in his haste which caused Jack to chuckle. He turned to Harleen and swept her an elegant bow before he gathered her into his arms again. “Sorry about that...”

Jack spun her around slowly on the dance floor. Harleen smiled, relieved to be back in his arms.

“That man was disgusting,” she muttered.

Jack frowned glancing toward Harold, then back at her pulling her close against him.

“That won't happen again. I promise.” They glided along the dance floor, Jack keeping her body pressed against his as they moved in a sensual weave to the music.

Jack giggled. “Did you see the dessert table?”
Harleen smiled with a blush coloring her cheeks. “Dessert?”

Jack laughed. “Yes! I love a woman with a sweet tooth.”

Harleen blushed as Jack danced her to the far right and then off to the side where the dessert table sat. The white cloth covered table spanned the length of the wall, heavy with a wide variety of desserts. Harleen was delighted. She had never seen so many desserts in one place, not even at her friend’s wedding! Some of the desserts were things Harleen had never even seen before!

Jack held her hand as he led her over. Harleen thought that the table was loaded with everything one could possibly want, from macaroons all done in a variety of shades of purple, to cake pops that were not just in a variety of flavors, but the decorations were what she could only think of as beautifully elegant. There were whole slices of cake, parfaits, blueberry violet eclairs, pavlovas with blueberry jam, cupcakes and more.

Harleen giggled. “Oh gosh, there is so much to chose from!”

Jack reached over grabbing two dessert plates with a hungry look in his eyes and a smirk on his lips. “You grab two plates too. Let’s take a bit of everything!”

Laughing like a couple of kids, the two of them filled their plates to overflowing with some of nearly everything that was available. They found an out of the way table, with Jack hopping up to grab them several glasses of champagne from a server, before coming to sit back down with her.

“I feel so wicked!” Harleen giggled.

Jack grinned cutting a bite off a piece of rich chocolate cake and holding it out to her. “It’s fun to be a little wicked, don’t you think Harley?”

Her eyes sparkled behind her mask as she leaned forward a little, opening her mouth. Jack slowly caressed her lips with the chocolate. He watched her mouth, catching his bottom lip between his teeth when her pink tongue licked across the edge of the chocolate covered fork. He had never in all his life seen anything more sexy than Harley.

Grinning, he fed her the bite slowly, brushing the chocolate frosting against her red lips. Harleen blushed giggling as he slid the bite of cake into her mouth. She smiled putting her fingers up to her mouth, but Jack reached out pulling her fingers away in order to wipe the small dab of chocolate from her mouth with a finger. He then stuck his finger in his mouth grinning at her.

Harleen wondered how he managed to look completely and utterly seductive with his finger in his mouth, the twinkle in his eye. She felt a hard twist in her groin while she stared at him. Jack reached down and plucked a macaroon from his plate reaching over to caress Harleen’s lips with the smooth surface of the treat. Jack’s eyes followed the shape of her lips, his breath catching just a little when she slowly opened her mouth. “You’re lips are perfectly kissable. Did you know that Harley?” Jack purred, his eyes coming up to catch hers.

Before she could answer, they were interrupted by someone using the speaker on stage. The room was suddenly filled with loud feedback buzz startling everyone. Jack and Harleen turned to see Bruce standing on the stage.

“Sorry about that folks! I wanted to thank all of you who came tonight in support of art programs in our inner city schools. Tonight we have some great local musicians and if you walk through the Basquiat hall you will be treated to the works of not only local Gotham artists, but works from students from our own Gotham public schools. Our string quartet providing our music tonight is also from Gotham High. Our charity auction will be starting in the next half hour.”

Suddenly there was a loud explosion and the wall behind Wayne exploded in a burst of smoke, fire and marble. Bruce was knocked from the stage, disappearing in the smoke. Jack and Harleen lost sight of Bruce almost immediately as the crowd started to scream, the room filling with smoke and heat.

“ALRIGHT GOTHAM’S RICH AND FAMOUS, THIS IS A HOLD UP!!”

Out of the smoke, appearing much like a rock band, stepped a group of five individuals, all dressed in elaborate complimentary costumes, each one representing a part of a suit in a deck of cards. One was dressed as a queen of spades complete with the traditional card crown, a king of spades with the stylized card king beard, a Jack of spades with the Jack of spades crown and outfit, and the last two both wore white bodysuits decorated with spades, the ace of spades, and another woman dressed in a ten of spades. All of them wore black masks that covered the upper halves of their faces, and all were armed with heavy weapons.

Jack stood up so quickly he nearly knocked their table forward. He grabbed Harleen, pulling her close, his arms wrapped protectively around her, but he was laughing.

“Oh my God! Get a load of those outfits.”

Harleen was scared, though not as scared as she thought she should be. Jack's attempts at stifling his giggles was making her laugh as well.

The king of spades walked up to the microphone. “Alright folks, now that we have your attention, let's get down to business. My friend there...” Here the king pointed at a large man dressed as the ace of spades. “He is going to go around with a large duffel bag and you are going to put money, watches jewelry, all of it in the bag. Anyone decides to be greedy and keep their valuables OR decides to play hero, is going to end up dead. Got it? Good. Go on Ace, go collect for the Royal Flush Gang fund.”

The man called Ace hopped down with his duffel bag, armed with a Colt M4 Carbine in his other hand. His voice was gruff when he spoke. “Alright, put it in the bag people and hurry up!”

Harleen was still giggling, trying to cover it behind her hand. Jack was laughing, his head on her shoulders. She hissed at him. “What are we going to do Jack?” For a moment, she wondered if the stress of the situation was making her slightly hysterical.

That was when there was a crash from above. Everyone's eyes moved skyward. Suddenly a dark shape swooped down, shooting something out that hit the Ace of Spades in the chest knocking the man backwards causing him to drop his weapon, though he managed to keep a hold of the dufflebag. Someone in the crowd shouted.

“BATMAN!”

Jack's eyes widened as he turned to look at the dark figure crouched between the party goers and the Royal Flush Gang. Something in Jack's eyes sparkled with glee.

“The Batman,” he murmured under his breath with a slight chuckle on the end.

Jack grabbed Harleen's hand, maneuvering her back behind their table while he giggled like a child. He was clearly excited about getting to watch Batman in action. Harleen's eyes widened when she saw the Batman. He stood, looking like a Gothic gargoyle, clad all in black, his cape whipping out behind him, and pointed ears atop his head. She had heard the stories about the Batman, but she had never actually seen him, hadn't even been sure he was real, but there he was right in front of her looking like a creature from a nightmare! She glanced at Jack who was giggling and smiling, enraptured at the spectacle.

Jack's giggle turned into a laugh. “Gotham is becoming so much more entertaining now that we have a masked vigilante stalking the streets of Gotham, don't you think Harley sweets?”

Harleen frowned. She wasn't sure why he was laughing; maybe it was nervousness, fear? She was scared, but...a giggle bubbled up some her, the tension of the situation mixed with the smile on Jack's face. She really didn't know why she was laughing along with Jack, but there was definitely something frighteningly ridiculous about the costumed villains and hero crashing a masked party and doing battle right in front of them. For the briefest of moment's Harleen thought about how funny it would be just to walk among them and bash a few heads!

One of the few conscious security guards, (who had not been knocked unconscious by the initial explosion) a young man no more than twenty-five, ran up to the group of “cards” with his weapon out. “You are...” He never got to finish his statement before the Jack of Spades pulled out a taser, hitting the young guard in the chest, putting him down quickly. Many of the bodyguards that were present, were too busy watching over their charges to interfere with the gang, especially now that the Batman had shown up.

At that moment, Batman turned yelling to the crowd in a terrifyingly deep voice. “Get down!”

Then he threw out a small black bat-shaped object (which Harleen would later learn was called a batarang) knocking the weapon from the King of Spade's hands. Within the same motion, Batman spun around just in time to bring both his arms up to block a roundhouse kick from the Ten of Spades. Ten hissed as she moved in on Batman, her fists and feet flying quickly. She clearly had some sort of kickboxing training as she came at Batman again and again not giving him room to maneuver and recover. Her fists and feet, lashing out with a surprising amount of speed continued to connect, but each time the Bat blocked her strikes with ease. Batman took several steps back, keeping his arms crossed in front of his face, his armored forearms taking the brunt of her attack, before he managed to grab her ankle in a lightning fast movement. With a quick and powerful twist of his wrist, Batman flipped her over by her ankle. The woman lost her footing and twisted in the air before slamming into the floor hard. Batman released her ankle and the woman lay there unmoving.

The King of Spades yelled. “EVERYONE!!! GO!!”

The other members of the gang turned, taking off the way they have entered the museum, through the hole in the wall their explosion had caused. The Ace of Spades stumbled to his feet just when Batman twisted around and threw something at the man. The Ace stumbled backward something clearly slamming into his back and knocking him to the floor with a jarring hit; he slid and slammed into the stage. The Ace shook his head from the impact, reaching in and grabbed something out of his dufflebag, throwing it Batman.

Whatever it was, the object struck Batman in the chest and exploded with the sharp scent of smoke and burning plastic. People started screaming again at the unexpected explosion.

The explosion was powerful enough to knock the Bat off his feet, sending him flying backwards a few feet, but it didn't put him down permanently. The concussive force wasn't strong enough to kill, but it caused enough of a distraction for Ace to follow his friends out of the museum. The sound of sirens outside could be heard by the people inside of the museum. The loud blare of sirens was accompanied by the colors of red and blue flashes throughout the interior of the museum.

Batman glanced the way the others of the Royal Flush Gang had gone, then back at the unconscious Ten of Spades. He seemed aggravated to Harleen, but he took the time to tie the Ten up before he took off after the rest of the gang.

Jack had watched all of it with an enchanted expression. His attention never wavered from the Batman. Harleen, nestled in Jack's protective embrace, watched in awe.

She whispered to Jack. “You think he'll catch them?”

Jack shrugged. “If he would just kill them, he wouldn't have the issues he has...”

Harleen giggled. Perhaps it's nerves, she thought, but she looked up at Jack.

“You might be right. But I had heard he never kills.”

Jack nodded. “Never...you really have to wonder what makes a man put on a mask and run around Gotham fighting crime trying to bring order to chaos.” He giggled. “I bet you would love to get him on your couch my sweet doctor.”

Harleen smiled. “Well...yeah,” she nodded. “Someone like that...fighting crime in a mask..childhood trauma would be my guess.”

Jack giggled. “Careful Harley, you might have me thinking you like Batman better than me.” He gave her a clearly put on pout before he spoke again. “Maybe I should put on a mask and take up crime fighting? Oh! Or maybe I should bring more chaos into Gotham just to see how the Batman likes it? But how?” He giggled again. “What do you think doctor?”

Harleen was about to say something when suddenly the museum was filled with police shouting at patrons to calm down, to not move...the typical police protocols.

Jack and Harleen sat at a table with a few other of the gala guests waiting to told when they could leave. Everyone at this particular table had already given their statements and were simply waiting now. There were plates of desserts on this table that had turned into something mushy and disgusting looking. Jack and Harleen were mostly making designs with the gooey remains, using forks to create weird little pictures that the two of them were laughing about, while they waited. The Gotham police force kept everyone at the museum for several hours, taking statements, trying to organize witness accounts. By the time Jack and Harleen were finally allowed to leave, it was nearly midnight. Jack held Harleen's hand as they stepped outside of the museum into the fresh night air. Harleen took a deep breath. She hadn't realized how much smoke had been in the museum until she was able to step out. She figured the thieves must have deactivated all the smoke alarms and the sprinkler systems. For a moment she wondered how many priceless works of art had been damaged due to the botched robbery. It's such a shame, she thought idly.

There were still several reporters waiting outside the museum. Most of the reporters were herded off in a tiny section of sidewalk, being held at bay by the GCPD. Though a few had called it a night, there was still a little bit of chaos going on outside the museum with everyone who had been inside now allowed to leave, trying to get to their cars.

There were bodyguards, police and security hired for the gala milling around outside trying to get everyone to their vehicles safely.

Jack tugged on Harleen's hand and pulled her back away from the main knot of chaos, the two of them slipping behind some bodyguards and away from the little press circle and the struggle of the rich trying to get to their cars.

“Jack? What about the car?” Harleen glanced back as she stumbled with him. She wasn't exactly tired, and in fact felt energized after the events of this evening.

Jack grinned, seemingly full of energy too. “Why don't we walk? I'm not ready to go home—are you?” While he spoke he pulled out a cigarette case made of silver with an elaborate “J” craved on the front of it. Jack pulled a thin cigarette out of the case and withdrew an exquisitely crafted lighter out of the same inner pocket. The lighter was a rich plum color with another “J” on its surface with gold filigree surrounding the letter. He lit the cigarette and took a long pull with a grin, blowing out a line of smoke. He gave Harley a grin.

Harleen shook her head in answer to his question. “Nope.” Jack gave her a wide grin squeezing her hand gently.

“Then let's go for a walk.” Jack pulled her close putting an arm around her waist. He surprised her by kissing her ear before he laughed and began to walk with a skip in his step. Harleen felt her cheeks burn, the heat from the kiss on her ear traveled down her neck spreading throughout her body.

They walked downtown with no real destination in mind. The night was clear, the stars just barely visible over the glow of the streetlights. Downtown Gotham consisted in a series of restaurants, local art galleries, specialty clothing stores and jewelry stores. There were even a couple of wine shops and a beer garden. Of course, at this time of the night everything was closed.

Jack murmured squeezing her close for a moment as he took his cigarette blowing a stream of smoke. “Someday I would like to meet the Batman.”

“Really?” Harleen asked softly.

Jack nodded. “Hmm...yes...I want to know why he does it. I mean...why put so much effort into saving people—and for what? Everything dies, crime continues, chaos reigns. Is he trying to bring some sort of order to the chaos of living...everything is chaos, there is no way to bring any sort of justice. Is there justice in two little boys watching their parents die? The man who killed them never saw justice. The only sensible way to live in this world is without rules.” Jack spoke serenely, not the least bit disturbed by what he had said. Harleen frowned slightly as Jack moved his arm from around her waist and took her hand once more. He swung her hand gently.
Harleen frowned “You really believe that? No rules?”

Jack smiled sliding his eyes sideways. “Introduce a little change, upset the established order, and everything becomes chaos...what is Batman really? He doesn't work within the law, or the established order—he is a rogue element trying to bring the wrong to justice, but in fact he isn't following the law either. Order needs chaos.”

Jack giggled kicking a can down the sidewalk.

“I myself enjoy not knowing what is going to happen. I like pulling the thread and watching things unravel in surprising ways!”

Jack tugged Harleen's hand a little, his expression playful.

“Will going down this alley get us killed? Or will we simply walk out into someplace new? Everything, all of it, no matter how hard you try, everything is chaos. I really don't think Batman understands that...he wants to bring a kind of order to Gotham...which will never happen.”

Jack laughed, the laughter taking on just a slight hysterical edge. “Robert Musil says that it's not necessarily a matter of good and evil, but what you fight against and what you decide to accept that matters. Batman accepts that there is good in the world and that he is doing his bit to bring order. I, on the other hand, think everything is chaos and Batman...like my brother Bruce, I suppose...just can't accept that.” Jack laughed dropping his cigarette and putting it out with the toe of his shoe.

Harleen frowned ever so slightly at his conclusions, but then Jack grinned. “Look! A diner! Come on, I'll buy you a cup of coffee.”

Harleen laughed as Jack pulled her down the street, then across heading for the lights of the diner.

When the two of them stepped in, the few patrons inside, as well as the staff, stared, startled to see two people in expensive evening clothes suddenly appear in their quiet place. They stared for a good long moment, then went back to ignoring them. Jack laughed. “Good old Gothamites!”

The “diner” wasn't your traditional diner, more of a twenty four hour restaurant. The inside of the place was done in warm colors, the floor was hardwood, polished and the booths were dark brown, as were the chairs. The lighting was subdued, the walls painted a warm shade of burnt orange. It reminded Harleen of a little place she used to go to as a kid with her family before everything became so messed up at home.

Jack tugged Harleen with him to a free booth in the corner, just at the edge of the large window that ran the length of the building's front. The waitress came over a few seconds later, pad in hand, to take their drink orders. “What can I get you to drink?”

She was pretty, with dark hair piled up in a messy bun. She had a nice figure, big brown eyes and full lips. The way she kept looking at Jack, it was clear she wanted him to notice her. The waitress, whose name tag read, “April” kept all her attention on Jack, acting as if Harleen wasn't there at all. April wore snug black pants and a navy colored shirt and by the way she was holding herself it was clear to Harleen this was a woman accustomed to using her looks and body to get what she wanted. If Harleen would hazard a guess, she would bet April was a woman looking for a “sugar daddy” to take care of her.

Jack, who didn't seem to notice the way the waitress kept leaning toward him to show off her cleavage or the way she would shift her hip closer to him, had all his attention on the menu or Harleen. Jack didn’t react at all to the waitress. Instead he looked down the menu then up at Harleen giving her one of his sexy grins.

“Just coffee please.” He ordered without giving the waitress a look. “Harley?” He lifted a brow quizzically at Harleen.

Harleen smiled. “The same.”

April frowned and went to get their coffee; by the set of her shoulders, she was clearly annoyed the Jack hadn’t noticed her.

April came back just moments later with a pot of coffee and two mugs, setting them down and trying yet again to flirt with Jack. She leaned forward, her cleavage nearly on the table in front of Jack as she asked, “You ready to order sir?” The waitress then did a double take at Jack. “Hey, wait, aren’t you Jack Wayne? Bruce Wayne's brother?”

Jack frowned, his eyes finally moving toward the waitress. They were cold eyes, flat and clearly annoyed. The waitress smiled at him, seemingly unaffected by his flat stare. Jack held his eyes on the waitress a heartbeat longer, then looked over the top of his menu at Harleen. His blue-green eyes twinkled. He held the menu so that it continued to cover the lower half of his face as he asked.

“You wanna share a plate of Belgian waffles with me doc?” Jack grinned like a child, his eyes full of expression now that he was gazing at Harleen, in stark contrast to how he had looked at the waitress just moments ago. Harleen blushed. She couldn't help the grin on her face. Here she was in a twenty-four hour diner, wearing expensive clothing with a gorgeous man ordering Belgian waffles.

“I would love to Jack.”

Jack tossed down his menu dramatically. “A large order of Belgian waffles serveuse!”

Harleen giggled. The waitress didn't look happy, but she took their order. Harleen gave Jack a quizzical look as she put sugar and cream in her coffee. “Do you speak French?” Jack smirked. “Fluently, along with a few other languages. Harley, vous êtes la plus belle femme et intéressant aussi. Vous êtes le mien et je suis le vôtre.”

“What did you say?” Harleen leaned her elbows on the table cupping her chin between her hands, but Jack simply smiled. “You will just have to figure it out Harley.” He reached over and bopped her gently on the tip of her nose with one long finger.

Harleen blushed picking up her coffee and took a sip of the hot liquid. Jack took his coffee black, glancing around once. “Too bad I can't smoke in here. Nothing like coffee and a cigarette for relaxing, especially after our little adventure.

Harleen nodded. She was about to say something else, but that was when the annoyed waitress returned with their waffles.

Jack grinned when the plate was set on the table between them.

“I remember my mom making waffles once. Alfred was teaching her how to cook. I'm not sure why she was doing it, but I remember her laughing. She had a wonderful laugh,” he said wistfully. “That's one of the few things about her I remember with any clarity.” Jack frowned at the memory. Harleen could see the dark cloud behind his eyes, but just as quickly it vanished. Jack seemed to shove the memory away. He grinned as he picked up the small pitcher of syrup and poured it over the waffles after he buttered them.
“It's nice to replace that memory of waffles with a new one.” Jack cut off a bite, but instead of eating it himself, he leaned over the table to feed her. Harleen grinned and opened her mouth slowly. Jack giggled lightly coating her lips with syrup before sliding the bite into her mouth.

Jack cut off his own bite and put it in his mouth with a grin.

“Are you sure you want to replace a memory like that?” Harleen asked softly after she had swallowed.

Jack shrugged. “Sometimes I think that memory is treacherous. It can so easily lie to you. One moment you're lost in a carnival of delight, childhood aromas...everything is perfect, happy, you have not a care in the world...you're safe with your family, protected by the strong arms of your parents, you're brother will always protect you...then Boom!!! All that's taken away by one person with a bad attitude and a gun.”

He chewed his bite contemplatively, resting his chin in his free hand. Jack cut off another bite and fed it to Harley smiling as he watched syrup dribble on her bottom lip. He reached out with his other hand wiped her lip then licked his finger. His smile faltered as he gazed at Harleen.

“Memory can also be terrible, rebellious, takes you somewhere you don't want to be, someplace dark and cold...vile, bloody...the sound of a child's scream, the snapping of bone, the crack of a gunshot...then everything that you thought was solid, is gone.” Jack's eyes were distant, but then he snapped back to the present giving her a grin again. Harleen frowned slightly. She wanted to ask more, to delve deeper, but this was not the place to do so, so instead she simply let Jack feed her bites of waffles. “Tell me about your childhood Harley?” Jack sipped his coffee smiling at her over the rim of the cup. Jack frowned ever so slightly when he noticed the minute changes in Harleen's expression when he asked the question. “What is it Harley? You can tell me.”

He reached across the table and took her hand, lacing his fingers with hers. The gesture was so sweet, so tender, that Harleen felt her eyes sting. She gently squeezed his fingers.

Harleen took a deep breath. “It was...good when I was younger, but after my father died my mother remarried and my step-father was...frightening. I wasn't his and he made sure everyday of my life that I knew I was not important. Then, after he and my mom started having their own kids, he made sure I knew that I was nothing, that his children were the important ones...I have two younger half-sisters and a younger half- brother, none of who I've spoken with in years. I left on the day I turned eighteen. Worked odd jobs, got myself through college...” her voice trailed off as she realized she had told him more than she intended.

Jack tilted his head gazing at her. “So, no family you care about it?”

Harleen shook her head. “ I did, but not anymore. My mother chose that family over me.”

Jack grinned tugging her hand up and kissing one of her fingers. “Who needs family!”

Harleen smiled. “What about your brother? Alfred.”

Jack wrinkled his nose. For a moment she thought she saw something pass over his face. She couldn't be sure what emotion that was, it seemed both dark and sad then Jack changed the subject.

“How about we go walk the waffles off before I get us a taxi?” Jack stood throwing some bills onto the table. Harleen followed, glancing at the table to see that Jack had thrown down two one hundred dollar bills.
“I know what we should do next.” Jack said, laughing lightly as he did a hopscotch on the sidewalk. Harleen couldn't help but be enamored watching him in his expensive suit, arms out to his sides, playing hopscotch on his own. Her professional opinion was that his behavior might not have been typical for an adult of his age, but she certainly didn't find it to be unhealthy. And again, perhaps the excitement of the night was manifesting itself in his—and her—actions right now. Jack grinned at her when he suddenly stopped.

“We should go get drunk!”

“What? Why?” Harleen frowned, again thinking of the nervous excitement of the night, but Jack grabbed her face with one hand, squeezing her lips gently. She stopped moving, staring into his eyes; they were hypnotic. He smiled, gazing down at her and then he made a pouty face. “Please...pluh-eeze Doctor Quinzel...let's go get drunk, pretty please.” He was holding her cheeks giggling as her pushed her lips together. Harleen was trying not to giggle, but the way he was talking was so cute and funny, his fingers on her cheeks warm. He stepped so close that for a moment she thought he might kiss her. He released her face after a few seconds, his fingers slowly dragging down her throat in a sensual caress. His voice dropped to a whisper.

“His voice dropped to a whisper.

“We could get drunk, then go home and so skinny-dipping in the pool. Bruce would be livid.”

He chuckled, his lips so close to hers that she could feel his warm breath brush against her mouth. “Whatya say doc?”

That was when a rough voice growled. “Real sweet love birds, now give me all your money.”

Jack and Harleen turned to see a man standing there with a gun on them.

The man motioned. “Wallets and honey, you can give me those earrings.”

The man mugging them was taller than Jack and more clearly muscled. What scared Harleen the most was that he wasn't wearing a mask, nothing to hide his face from them.

He was unshaven, bald, with a nasty scar running from the bottom of his chin through his lips and up his cheek. His clothes were nondescript. He leered at Harleen. “You know what babe, I want the earrings and you too.”

Harleen didn't notice that the only movement Jack had made was the balling of his fists.

Jack hissed. “You are not going to touch her.”

The man laughed. “Oh, I'm not am I?” The mugger moved surprisingly swiftly grabbing Harleen by the front of her dress and yanking her toward him. She stumbled, slamming against the man's chest.

“Ah!!” She let out a startled gasped.

The man let her go just long enough to grab her by her hair and yanked her around while he laughed. “You just give me your money pretty boy and you can go. The lady and I are going to go have some fun.” He yanked on Harleen's hair causing her to cry out. Jack giggled, but the sound was anything but humorous; there was an edge to it. Harleen was too scared to notice the darkness to the laugh, her eyes wide with fear.

“Let her go and I might consider letting you live, though I doubt it.” Jack smiled. It was a chilling smile that sent ice racing through Harleen's veins.
The mugger laughed. “What are you doing to do pretty boy? Eh?” The big man waved the gun threateningly.

Jack chose that moment to move. He was surprisingly swift as he stepped forward, easily knocking the gun from the mugger's hand with a sharp snap to the man's wrist with the ball of Jack's hand. The man stumbled back away from Jack yanking Harleen with him, determined to maintain at least the advantage of holding onto her. She cried out in pain as some of her hair was ripped from its roots, but the man kept a hold of her. He threw himself to the side yanking Harleen around in front of him as a shield, then pulled a long wicked looking Bowie knife from his belt, pressing it hard to Harleen's throat. She gasped in pain, a long, thick trickle of blood appearing on her pale skin.

“Stay back!! STAY BACK!! I'll cut her throat!! I WILL!” Harleen could feel that the man was suddenly terrified, his arms around her were shaking, she could feel the blade wobble against her neck.

Jack snarled at the sight of Harleen's blood. But Jack was full of even more surprises. He snapped forward, grabbing Harleen in an firm grip and easily—surprisingly—breaking the man's hold on her. Harleen cried out as Jack yanked her free, the man taking several strands of her hair, but his grasp on the mugger's knife hand was like steel, preventing the bigger man from carrying out his threat. Jack's grip on her arm would leave painful bruises, but suddenly she was stumbling away from her assailant, losing her balance. Her knees slammed into the concrete as she fell.

Jack grabbed the man by the throat with both hands. The mugger brought the knife up, slashing at Jack cutting through the fine suit, the shirt, biting deeply into the flesh of Jack's upper right arm forcing Jack to release his throat. If Jack felt any pain he didn't seem to register it or show it. Instead, he slammed the mugger up against the front of the nearby building. Jack's grin never faltered. Jack lashed out, grabbing the wrist of the mugger that held the knife. The two men struggled, the mugger trying to yank his hand away from the iron grip that Jack had on it while Jack, holding his teeth in a vicious grin, yanked the bigger man toward him, twisting the hand holding the knife, struggling to disarm him. The two men stumbled, slamming into the wall. The mugger tried clawing at Jack's face with his free hand, but Jack was too nimble, keeping an iron grip on the wrist holding the knife while avoiding the clawing fingers of the mugger's free hand. Jack gave a quick slam upward with his free hand under the bald man's chin forcing his head back.

The two men stumbled again, but kept their footing. Jack, with a chuckle on his lips, slammed his forehead against their attacker's face, blooding the mugger's lip, leaving a small cut on Jack's forehead, while at the same time squeezing the man's wrist with a wrenching twist, which finally caused him to dropped the blade. Jack released the mugger's wrist the moment he dropped the blade. Jack brought his arm up, pressing his forearm against the mugger's throat and forced the larger man back against the wall. He pulled one hand back and started to punch the man, over and over in the face with brutally quick blows while holding him up by the neck with the other hand.

Harleen struggled to her feet, her dress torn in the front and on her knees. Jack's fist was bloody. The mugger stopped struggling moments ago, but Jack didn't stop; he continued to hit the man though laughter started to bubble up. Jack's laughter turned maniacal until Harleen grabbed him.

“JACK!! JACK!! Stop!! He's down, stop please!!” Harleen grabbed his arm, her fingers slipping for a moment on the blood that stained Jack's jacket from the knife wound.

Jack giggled as he glanced toward Harleen. What she saw in his eyes both frightened her, but oddly that look of madness attracted her, and just as quickly, the look in his eyes was gone. Jack let go opening his hand that had been around the man's throat, letting the man drop to the ground though Jack continued to smile.
Harleen crouched down checking the pulse at the man's neck.

She let out a sigh of relief. “He's alive.”

She stood up looking down at the mugger. His face was a mess, nose clearly broken, some teeth were shattered, his lip split and one eye swelling shut, and maybe even broken cheek bones, but he was alive.

Harleen turned to look at Jack who was smiling, his hand bloody and cut up, the slice across his arm seemed to have stopped bleeding, but it was hard to tell with the blood matted material.

For a moment she thought about calling the police, but she didn't want Jack to get in trouble. He might not get jail time with his family's money, ties...and this was self-defense, but part of her worried about what his brother might do. She was Jack's doctor, this was part of what she was supposed to be helping him with. So, no police. Besides, her rotation in a hospital entailed hands-on medical work. She could handle stitches.

“Jack, we should go.” Harleen grabbed his shoulders, turning him to look at her. She was shaking like a leaf. With one hand she caressed Jack's cheek. “Jack?”

He blinked as if seeing her for the first time before he nodded. “You're right. Let's go home.”

* Jack called Alfred to come pick them up. The older man arrived in a timely matter, Jack and Harleen waiting for him near a small convenience store that was open twenty-four hours. Harleen had gone in and purchased some gauze and a couple of sodas. The man checking her out kept staring at the bloody wound on her neck, the torn dress, but other than that, he said nothing and didn't bother calling anyone either since she didn't ask for help.

Harleen carefully wrapped Jack's arm while he sipped the drink. He was going to need stitches, as she had suspected, but this was the best she could do for right now. “How is your neck?” he asked gently reaching out to caress the side of her throat. Harleen reached up, touching it gingerly. “It looks worse than it is.”

Jack frowned reaching out with his undamaged hand to cup her cheek.

Harleen opened her mouth to say something in reply when they heard a car horn. They both turned to see Alfred leaning across the car seat looking at them both with concern.

He was driving a four-door Chevy Nova, in good condition, but clearly old and not as pristine as one of the Wayne brothers' cars. If Harleen had to hazard a guess she would say this was Alfred's private vehicle. The butler rolled the window down frowning as he looked at the both of them. If Alfred was shocked by their appearance, however, he gave no indication.

“Come along,” Alfred said as he popped the passenger door open. Harleen started to get in the back, but Jack gave her a playful shove. “I'm sure Alfred would rather sit next to a beautiful woman than me any old day.”

Jack started laughing as he slipped into the back seat. Alfred glanced in the rear view at Jack, a slight frown on his face then he glanced at Harleen seeing the drying blood on her neck.
“Are you both alright?”

Jack nodded. “Nothing a few pain pills and some drinks wouldn't cure.”

Alfred frowned. “Not amusing, Master Jack.”

Harleen set her hand on Alfred's arm. “Jack needs stitches, but overall we're fine. It would have ended much worse if not for Jack.”

Harleen turned around. Jack looked pale in the back seat, his face illuminated only by the streetlights and the dash lights, but he gave her a wink. As Alfred drove them home she related most of what had happened. She didn't tell him about Jack losing control though, that was to be her and Jack's secret.

Alfred made no comment on the way home about what had happened. Once they were back at the manor, Alfred led Harleen, who had her arm around around Jack's waist, his less injured arm around her shoulders, to a small room located near the kitchens.

The room Alfred took them into was a fully stocked medical room. Harleen's mouth dropped open in surprise. There was even an examination bed where Harleen helped Jack to sit down on the edge of the bed.

“Why do you have a room like this?” Harleen looked around astounded by how well stocked the room seemed to be with all manner of medical equipment and a locked refrigeration unit, probably holding medicines that needed to be cooled.

Alfred smiled. “Raising two boys, I thought it would be...wise to be prepared for any...emergency.” Alfred washed his hands and wrists and removed some plastic gloves before opening a drawer that held sterile bandages. He unlocked another drawer that had a keypad lock and took out some vials of medicine, a syringe, needle and thread before he turned around to face Harleen and Jack.

Harleen nodded. “Yes of course.”

Jack grinned at her. “My very own Nurse Nightingale.”

Harleen blushed as she helped him with the buttons on his shirt after Alfred had helped with removing the jacket by taking some scissors and cutting up the sleeves to make it easier to remove. Harleen did her best not to stare at Jack's bare chest or to caress him when she removed his shirt. She had seen his chest once already, but she found herself staring anyway, especially when she pushed the fabric of the shirt off his shoulders and her fingers brushed his bare skin. Jack's eyes stayed on hers, a smile gracing his features. Once they had his clothing removed and the makeshift bandage Harleen had put on cut off, Alfred carefully examined the wound.

“Yes Master Jack,” Alfred said with his experienced eyes. “You are going to require stitches and your knuckles are going to need cleaning and bandaging. This is going to hurt. I could give you a numbing agent?” Alfred lifted an brow in inquiry, but Jack waved him off. “Nah, I'll be fine. You should check Harl...Harleen first.” Jack frowned glancing at her cut throat and torn knees.

Alfred sighed. “Both of you sit and be quiet and I will take care you both.” His tone was firmer than what Harleen had heard the butler use before.

Jack pulled Harleen next to him on the bed pressing his lips together, but his eyes danced with humor.

“I think we both just got into trouble.”

Harleen had to laugh. Despite everything, Jack could make her laugh.

Alfred stitched up the wound on Jack's arm, requiring at least thirty stitches. Jack's knuckles were badly cut and bruised, but Alfred cleaned and bandaged them with the care of an expert. He then examined Harleen's throat, cleaning and placing a bandage across it.

“It should heal without a scar Miss Harleen or at least if it does scar, since your skin is so fair, it should be light. Once it has scabbed over I shall give you some cream that will help with preventing any scars.”

He cleaned and bandaged her knees before he stepped back looking at the two of them with the slight air of a disapproving father.

Harleen had so many questions to ask regarding Alfred's medical skills and the fact that he didn't question them too much beyond what Harleen had told him about the incident—why he didn't suggest they call the police. But she chose to let all her questions go—perhaps it would be best if she didn't know.

“I want you both to go shower then come down to the kitchen where you will both be served some hot tea and scones before bed. Now scoot, both of you. We will say nothing of this to Master Bruce.”

Jack and Harleen glanced at each other then with humor in their voices they both said at the same time. “Yes sir.”

Alfred smiled then shooed them off while he cleaned up in the medical room.

Jack and Harleen walked up the stairs together. “Let me walk you to your room,” Jack said softly.

“You don't have to Jack.” Harleen smiled shyly.

“I insist.” Jack gave her one of his smiles that made her heart race. It felt strange walking with him in her now torn dress and him without a shirt. Harleen was thankful that Bruce Wayne wasn't home yet. This would have been...embarrassing seemed too mild a word, but that was exactly what it would have been like for him to catch the two of them like this...

They turned down the hall, stopping outside Harleen's bedroom door. Jack smiled taking her hand with his—relatively—uninjured left hand, lacing his fingers with hers. He stepped closer to her.

“Despite the part with you getting hurt, I enjoyed our evening Harley.” Jack smiled moving her hand up to kiss her knuckles at the same time backing her against the wall. Harleen blushed, smiling with a shy downward turn of her eyes. “Yes, despite both of us getting hurt, I enjoyed myself...even with the gala being...cut short.”

Jack pressed closer, his bare chest up against her. He brushed the tip of her nose with his, smiling as his eyes moved to gaze at her lips then back up to her eyes, which she turned up to meet his. He grin was contagious; she smiled back at him though her heart was beating a million miles a minute. Heat rushed through her body and breathing became difficult. Jack caught his bottom lip between his teeth as he smiled at her, his eyes moving once again over her face.

“Would you mind if I kissed you Harley...” His eyes met her once more, burning, melting into her. For a moment Harleen was sure he could see the dark parts of her soul, that he knew her inside and out.

Her voice came out in a whisper. “Yes Jack.”

Jack smiled wider just before he brushed his lips against hers. He dropped her hand so that his fingers could lightly caress her cheek, the very tips of his fingers, soft, like a breeze across her jaw. The back of his fingers lightly caressed the slope of her neck, resting for a brief moment against her collar. His lips stroked over hers once, then twice, the pressure never more than a breath across her mouth. Harleen's eyes fluttered shut. The kiss was sweet, innocent, a tease of what could be...but there was a burning passion behind it that was more erotic than if he had slipped his tongue into her mouth.

Then just as swiftly, Jack stepped back from her.

“See you downstairs, Harley.” Jack's voice was a whisper, accompanied by a smile. He winked at her before strolling away to his room. Harleen felt her knees turn to jelly, wanting to slide down the wall. It took a great deal of effort for her to turn and open her bedroom door.

Showering felt wonderful, the warm water stung when it hit some of the places where she had gotten little nicks and cuts, too small for bandages, but after the initial discomfort it was nice to wash up and put on some comfy clothes, a pair of yoga pants and a black sweatshirt that read “Pink Freud” on it in pink. It has been a gag gift from a friend at school, but it was a darn comfy shirt even if Freud was a complete nutter.

As she sat in front of the vanity braiding her damp hair before pulling on some thick red socks, Harleen studied herself in the mirror. She smiled softly reaching up and touching her lips, thinking about the warmth of his lips. A blush raced up her neck and over her cheeks.

His lips had been so perfectly soft, the brush of them so sweet it almost tickled. The heat from his fingers where he had stroked her jaw...she shivered blushing a deeper shade of red.

When she came downstairs for the required tea and scones before bed that Alfred had ordered, as she approached the kitchen, Harleen heard Jack and Alfred speaking.

“Jack, you need to be more careful.” It was Alfred speaking. It surprised her because so far Harleen had never heard Alfred refer to Jack as anything but Master Jack. The familiarity with which he was addressing him now reminded Harleen that Alfred had been both Jack's and Bruce's only adult figure growing up, that he raised the boys after their parents’ death.

“What was I supposed to do Alfred? Let her be hurt more than she already was?” Jack sounded slightly sullen.

“No, but...Jack, you know how Bruce feels...he worries about you crossing that line again,” Alfred said softly.
Jack hissed. “Bruce is always so worried about right and wrong, black and white...order versus chaos...he just doesn't get it, does he?”

Alfred said something else, quieter, but Harleen couldn't quite hear him. She felt embarrassed having eavesdropped so she pretended to stumble making some noise so that the two men would hear her approach as she stepped into the kitchen.

Jack was sitting in his usual spot, his normally slicked back hair now damp and ruffled, curling slightly over his forehead. He wore a pair of white cashmere sweatpants. Harleen wasn’t an expert on clothing or anything, but she knew cashmere when she saw it. He also had on a plain, dark grey v-neck t-shirt that gave her a rather delightful peak at his pecs and a very enticing view of his collarbone which she found to be immensely sexy. She could feel the blush creeping over her cheeks again as the remembered feel of his lips brushing hers immediately came flooding back.

Jack grinned when he saw her then laughed. “Oh, I love the sweatshirt!”

Harleen blushed even more deeply. “Oh it's—it's a joke from a friend.”

Alfred chuckled lightly. “Well I have the tea and scones ready, as well as some pain pills for the both of you.”

Harleen opened her mouth to protest, but Jack reached out and laid his hand across hers. “No point in arguing with him. When Alfred tells you to do something, it's best to just do it.”

Harleen smiled as Alfred looked slightly affronted.

“Master Jack, now I...”

Jack laughed.

Alfred busied himself pouring tea and placing a plate of scones between Jack and Harleen then gave them each a small cup holding two pills. “I shall clean this up in the morning. I expect you both to go straight to bed.”

“Yes sir,” they both said as before and giggled as Alfred left them alone in the kitchen. They sipped their tea, nibbling on scones when Harleen said quietly, “Tonight made me realize something.”

Jack gave her a quizzical look. “What was that?”

“I need to learn to defend myself.” Harleen frowned taking a sip of her tea.

Jack tilted his head studying her. She looked over at him and nodded.

“I wasn’t any help to you tonight. I wasn't any help to myself,” she said with a heavy frown. “I want to learn to fight.”

Jack gazed at her, a smile slowly forming across his lips.

It was still dark out when a couple of detectives from the Gotham Police department stood on the dock watching as a body was pulled from the water. They had gotten the call of a body being seen floating in the water about an hour after the incident at the Gotham city art museum gala. Detective Bullock didn’t think the two things had any relation to one another, but he wasn’t ruling it out.
The team got the body on the dock. It was wrapped in some sort of tarp. Bullock walked over to see what they had, his partner, Renee Montoya walking beside him. Just as they were approaching, one of the assistants to the coroner had walked over to remove the covering from the victim's face. As soon as he did, the young man gasped and turned away vomiting.

“Well, that is just great,” Bullock muttered.

Montoya frowned. “What's up with him?”

“Man with a weak stomach doesn't need to be in this business,” Bullock grumbled as they stepped closer. That was when he saw what had made the young man lose his lunch. The body of a woman, her skin chalk white, her mouth pulled back in a rictus, sardonic grin. The skin at the edges of her smile was torn and bloody as the skin had struggled to maintain the creepy smile. The victim's eyes were wide open, almost “bugging” out of her skull.

Bullock swallowed hard, the bile in his stomach roiling at the morbid sight. Montoya held the back of her hand over her mouth as she asked of no one in particular,

“What on earth could have done that?”

Chapter End Notes

Used modified quotes from The Killing Joke and The Dark Knight (movie)
The next morning, sitting at her desk in her pink pajamas with her hair braided and falling over her shoulder, Harleen was on her desktop looking for a language translator. She didn't remember word for word what Jack had said at the diner last night, but she was hoping she could pick out some of the words. Maybe piece it together like a puzzle? She had only been at it for a few minutes when she realized this was not going to work out as easily as she thought. She didn't even know how to spell the words correctly...so she decided to work on getting Jack to write down what he had said. She wondered if he would or would he just leave her to figure it out...like a test? She stood up to stretch, parts of her body cracking that had no business cracking as she contemplated what to wear instead of trying to figure out French when she heard a knock at her door. Harleen frowned walking over. It was still a little early for anyone else to be up. She opened it only to find Jack standing there looking—delicious was the word that came to mind.

He wore a pair of tight, purple shorts, a snug white t-shirt and a pair of athletic shoes. His hair wasn't slicked back, but lay naturally, some of the locks of hair forming soft curls around his forehead as he leaned in her doorway. “Ready?”

Harleen blinked in surprise. “Uh…”

Jack’s warm gaze roamed down her body taking in the oversized t-shirt top and big pink pajama pants, her braided hair looking bed ruffled. She felt a little silly, but Jack thought she looked good enough to simply take her back to bed.

Instead he grinned. “I guess not.”

“Are you sure you should be doing anything with those stitches in your arm?” Harleen frowned, her eyes on his bandaged arm.

Jack smiled at her, the smile having a soft, almost seductive edge to it. “Don't worry Harley, I wasn't planning on anything too strenuous. So change and come on!” he said eagerly. She wondered for a moment where he got so much energy.

Jack stepped into her room grabbing her hand as he did so and leading her back inside, closing her door behind him. Harleen sighed in resignation accompanied with a soft laugh. “Okay, okay!”

Jack kissed her knuckles before letting go of her hand and flopping onto her unmade bed while she grabbed some clothing out of a drawer and walked into the bathroom.

“Did you sleep alright after last night's fun?” Jack asked picking up the sheet he was lying on and holding it to his nose. He smiled. The sheet smelled like her, sweet...desirable...Jack sighed softly. He envied the bed, to be surrounded by her scent. He pressed the sheet to his cheek for a moment longer.

From the bathroom Harleen called out. “So what're you going to teach me exactly?”

Jack laid back against her bed, his arms outstretched to his sides, moving them up and down like he was doing a backstroke. “Oh, some basic self-defense, eventually leading up to teaching you how to shoot and maybe some brawling.”

Harleen came out of the bathroom wearing a pair of black crop pants and a red racer-back tank top. She was barefoot when she walked out which Jack found to be extremely cute. He rolled onto his side, leaning his head against his hand and watched her rummaging around for a pair of socks.
had unbraided her hair, pulling it back into a high ponytail, the long blonde hair bouncing back and forth as she dropped down on her knees to pull out the bottom drawer of her dresser.

“Did you take self-defense classes?” Harleen asked while she pulled out a pair of ankle socks.

“I’ve taken several types of fighting classes; karate, kick boxing, regular boxing, judo, aikido...you name it, Bruce put me in it. I think he was hoping to ‘focus’ me, provide me with an outlet for my ‘aggression’.”

Harleen sat down on the side of the bed next to Jack while she pulled her shoes on. She stopped in the middle of tying her laces to look at Jack. “Did any of it help?”

Jack shrugged. “Not really, but I enjoyed all of it. It's nice knowing a lot of ways to kill a person.”

He said it so matter-of-factly that Harleen frowned. Jack glanced over seeing her expression and laughed. “It's not like I would...just that I can. It's kinda of funny though isn't it?

Harleen finished with her shoe and brought the other one up. “Don't you mean it's nice knowing you can defend yourself?”

Jack grinned with a lazy nod. “Oh, that too.”

A few minutes later, they were down in the Wayne Manor gym. The room itself was very nice, Harleen thought, open with a large picture window on one side that let in ample amounts of sunlight. The floor was a highly polished light wood (she couldn't tell if the wood was real or imitation, but she was betting it was real) and the walls were all white, some holding mirrors that took up nearly the entire wall. There was a large open space in the middle of the room with a mat, along the edges of which were weights, exercise equipment, boxing gloves—you name it, the gym in Wayne Manor had it.

Jack led Harleen over to the center where the mats were laid out. He walked to the center of the mats stretching his arms over his head which Harleen found completely distracting. Jack Wayne wasn't overly muscled, but no one would dispute that he was in great shape; she liked the lean look of him as her thoughts wandered back to the pool.

He grinned at Harleen, waving a hand and motioning her over. Harleen's unfocused gazed snapped back. Jack chuckled.

“Just follow me for right now, yeah? We're going to do some warm-ups first...not that you get to do warm-ups in real life, but for now...”

Harleen was walking around some of the equipment on her way over to him when Jack chuckled and bent over to grab his ankles, his rear facing her. Harleen had to stop a moment to catch her breath when he did that, she could see his grinning face, upside down between his legs.

She giggled to herself. “You're acting like a hormone driven teenager Harleen,” she thought to herself as she moved around so that she was facing Jack. She stretched her arms over her head, then bent down to grab her ankles feeling the pull on her leg muscles. She made a face. It had been a while since she had exercised like this...warm-ups had once been a daily part of her life. Now—she was a bit out of practice.

Jack straightened. “Okay, now stretch side to side.”
Harleen popped up just as Jack leaned sideways. She mirrored his movements doing her best not to laugh at the faces he was making at her while they stretched. Jack kept crossing his eyes or sticking his tongue out, blowing his cheeks out like a chipmunk while Harleen giggled.

“So Harley, it states on your resume that you took gymnastics?” Jack asked as he began to do some jumping jacks.

Harleen blushed following suit. “You read my resume?”

Jack grinned. “Of course I did. How long ago was that?”

“A while.” She frowned switching to jogging in place.

Jack grinned. “So you know how to warm up and were just letting me feel in charge?”

Harleen blushed and shrugged which made Jack burst out laughing. “Look at you trying to stroke my ego. Alright you, I want to see some of your moves.”

Harleen stopped jogging in place and winced. “It really has been a while.”

Jack smiled stepping closer to her, his fingers stroked along her jaw. “I bet it's just like riding a bike.”

Harleen felt a shiver run down her spine at his touch. “Oh...okay, but step back off the mat.”

Jack did as she requested taking up a seat on the edge of a weight bench leaning forward with his elbows on his knees looking like a kid at the circus.

Harleen started out with doing a simple backward roll. She wasn't too sure about doing one; it really had been a while, but as soon as she had herself in position, the years of training took hold. She did the roll and came up on her feet with a bounce. Immediately all the years she had spend training in gymnastics came rushing back to her. She threw her arms back doing a couple of backward handsprings, switching to cartwheels then coming back toward Jack with a few forward handsprings.

She then slowed slightly, doing a back walkover, stretching her long legs, which had Jack catching his bottom lip between his teeth. Harleen came up on her feet again moving from the back walkover to doing a little jog, jumping up to do a split leap, then tucked and rolled. She finished with a series of aerial cartwheels and a front tuck, arching her back, her arms out as she finished.

Jack stared at her, his mouth slightly open, his eyes wide watching her in amazement. He had been prepared for her to do a few cartwheels and somersaults, but nothing like this! He leapt to his feet and started clapping his hands with enthusiasm. “That was AMAZING!!”

Harleen blushed. “Not really.”

Jack came over and wrapped his arms around her, under her rear, and lifted her off her feet, spinning her around. “That was the most beautiful thing I have ever seen!” He laughed.

Harleen laughed with him, looking down at Jack, her eyes sparkling. He was grinning up at her with the most beautiful smile. Harleen knew at that moment she would never get tired of his smile, she would do whatever it took to keep him smiling at her like that. Jack set her on her feet taking her face gently between his hands. His thumbs settled on her cheeks, his long fingers just under her ears. He held her face firmly, but tenderly, just enough pressure to keep her from pulling away, but not so much that he was hurting her at all. He gazed into her eyes for what seemed forever to Harleen, before his eyes roamed over her face, studying the details of her features, the curve of her lips, the tiny upturn of her nose. Harleen felt as if he were memorizing her, taking in this moment and cherishing it. His eyes came back to hers, ensnaring her gaze with his own. He leaned in slowly, never averting his gaze, never closing his eyes as he pressed his lips to hers, kissing her tenderly.

Unlike the kiss last night, this time, as he held her face, he traced her lips with the tip of his tongue. Harleen's eyes fluttered close. She didn't want to close her eyes, but she simply needed to absorb the feel of his tongue, butterfly light against her lips.

She opened her mouth only slightly, letting Jack direct how much he wanted to kiss her. She felt the gentle caress of his tongue, damp against her bottom lip, like he was licking her, then just as she was leaning into him he released her and stepped back.

His smile was devilish, a teasing look which made Harleen want to stomp her foot like a child, but instead she blushed and crossed her arms over her breasts.

Jack laughed. “Come Harley, now I will show you how to defend yourself.”

Harleen shook her head with a smile. “Alright, what do I do?”

“Okay, first, let's say I came at you like this?” Jack reached for her grabbing her upper arms, his grip was like iron. Harleen struggled, but Jack easily yanked her forward against him. Wrapping a leg around the back of hers, he tripped her back. Harleen let out a gasp of surprise as she hit the mat. She struggled, pounding on Jack's chest. He was scaring her, his eyes had gone flat; the smile was there, but it was all teeth and lacked anything that was Jack in it. He grabbed her arms painfully jerking them over her head, shoving a leg between hers.

“Jack stop!!”

Jack smiled wider, but his eyes came back to her, she could see her Jack there in his eyes.

“Stop me Harley, think where my most vulnerable place is, use your natural flexibility.”

He grabbed her wrists, his long fingered hand managing to encompass her wrists by pressing them against each other. Harleen did the first thing that came to mind, the leg he didn't have pinned she twisted it up, placing it between them. She planted her foot directly over his chest and shoved him away from her with all her strength. Jack grabbed her ankle with his free hand, but she screamed and shoved with all her might knocking him off of her.

Jack did a somersault coming to his feet with a laugh. “That was pretty good, but let's see if I can teach you to stop an attack before your mugger or worse gets you to the ground.”

Harleen was panting, her heart racing. “Okay. Jack? Are you alright?” Though she asked him, she was feeling a bit shocked at the practice session already. She had not known what to expect, but it certainly wasn't...that.

His smile was beautiful. “Yes, of course...”

Jack's expression now beamed with pride. Harleen had not broke down crying, but instead had gotten angry fighting him. He admired that, though he didn't say it.

“No, when I come at you this time, I want you to snap your arm out, straight, the ball of your hand should hit my chin or my nose. Please stop short of actually breaking either of those, if you don't mind. Part of fighting—self-defense—is controlling your actions, your position.”
Jack chuckled walking slowly around her. Harleen watched him, repeating what he said. “The ball of my hand...okay.”

Jack nodded as he watched her. “The ball of your hand will have a lot more force, but also you won’t break any fingers that way. Most people make a fist incorrectly and you could break your fingers or thumb.”

Harleen nodded watching him warily. Jack walked behind her slowly, then suddenly he grabbed her shoulder and spun her around. Harleen did what Jack had told her to do. Her expression serious, Harleen’s arm shot out lightning quick, the ball of her hand, fingers curled against her upper palm just as he had shown her. She went for his nose, her blue eyes hard.

Jack laughed bringing his hand up and blocked her, catching her wrist, his smile bright with pride.

“You're a natural at this,” he whispered.

His voice contained so much pride in it that Harleen felt herself blush. “Thanks Jack.” She smiled shyly enjoying the warmth of his body, the fine sheen of sweat on his skin.

Harleen just couldn't get over how attractive he was...so magnetic...

Jack brought her hand up kissing her fingers before releasing her hand.

“Now I'm going to come at you from behind. I want you to use your elbow the same way you would your hand, go for the face, alright?”

“Alright Jack.” Harleen nodded as he let go of her hand stepping away from her.

She turned to follow him with her gaze.

“Don't watch me...just start walking the mat...you would not see your attacker coming up behind you so you need to pretend you don't see me.” Jack's voice was a warm whisper. She nodded and started to walk around the mat. She gazed out the window, examined the equipment. Her heart was racing knowing she was going to be attacked, but not when...she was about to ask Jack what he was doing when Jack moved, rushing up behind her and grabbing her around the waist. His arms were like a steel vice, lifting her off her feet Harleen twisted, her elbow coming up, aiming for his face, but he jerked her, leaning back so that her elbow missed his face.

“Go for the foot!” he exclaimed. “The bridge! Stomp! If you can’t reach that, kick backwards, go for the groin, kick him in the balls!”

Harleen was struggling, but Jack lifted her up off her feet when she tried to slam her foot down. She snarled trying again with her elbow, but this time she connected. Jack let out a yelp dropping her. Harleen fell on her knees wincing as the impact opened the newly formed scabs from last night.

“Oh my God, JACK!” Harleen stumbled to her feet reaching for Jack who had a hand up over his mouth and had flopped down on the mat.

Harleen was struggling, but Jack lifted her up off her feet when she tried to slam her foot down. She snarled trying again with her elbow, but this time she connected. Jack let out a yelp dropping her.

Harleen fell on her knees wincing as the impact opened the newly formed scabs from last night.

“Oh my God, JACK!” Harleen stumbled to her feet reaching for Jack who had a hand up over his mouth and had flopped down on the mat.

She pulled his hand away to see that she had bloodied his lip. “Oh my god Jack, I'm so sorry! Oh god, oh god!”
Jack started laughing. “Harley! Harley it's alright!” His lip was bloodied enough that she could see his teeth stained with blood.

But she wasn't listening. She rushed over to where some towels were folded over a hanger near the mirrors, grabbing one of them and rushing back to hold the white cloth against his lip.

“Oh Jack...” Harleen's eyes started to tear up. Jack chuckled placing his hand against hers his voice muffled against the cloth. “I'm fine. I'm proud of you though, that was great!”

Harleen sighed, but she smiled. “Thanks.”

Jack removed the towel and Harleen took his face in her hands inspecting his lip. The bottom one was split, not bad, but it would swell a little. “I guess it's not too bad,” she whispered as she examined it. Jack smiled wincing a little, but he whispered. “A kiss might help.”

Harleen blushed. Jack stuck his split lip out in a childish pout which made Harleen laugh softly.

“Alright a kiss.” She leaned forward and pressed her lips tenderly against his wounded lip. Jack slowly caressed her neck, his hand moving to cradle her head tugging her closer. His mouth opened against hers in a tender response. Harleen moaned softly; she didn't mean to, but when his tongue slid against her bottom lip then met her tongue in a sweet, slow caress, Harleen thought she would melt. This was so wrong...she would never be able to keep her treatment of him separated from her feelings for him. She hadn't just crossed the line, she had leapt over it and then did a cheer on the other side. But she just couldn't stop herself. The kiss was slow, their tongues licking against each other gradually. She could taste just a little blood on his tongue and his lips and it was...exhilarating.

He was the one to end the kiss again, pulling away from her, but he kept his hand cradling the back of her head. He smiled. “That was much better.”

Harleen blushed. She started to say something when there was a buzz and then the sound of Alfred's voice over an intercom. “Master Jack, Miss Harleen, breakfast will be done in a few minutes. If you both would like to shower and come to the kitchen.”

Jack chuckled standing up and walking over to the intercom that Harleen hadn't noticed against the wall. He hit the button. “We'll be there in a jiffy Alfred.”

“Thank you Master Jack.”

Jack smiled. “We better go shower and dress. No one wants to see Alfred pout because his breakfast was served cold. Walk you to your room?”

Harleen smiled in return. “I would love that.”

At the door to her room, Jack left her with a brush of his lips against hers “So, are we having a session today doc?”

Harleen frowned in confusion for a brief moment before she gasped. “Oh yes, yes we are.”

Jack laughed. “After breakfast then!”

He took off at a jog turning to wave at her. Harleen felt herself go weak in the knees...oh GOD what am I doing?!
Back in his room Jack stripped off his shirt and shorts, tossing them to the floor in the bathroom as he stepped into the room. He stripped off his underwear, leaning in to turn on the water on in the shower, taking a moment to adjust the temperature before he turned and examined his lip in the mirror. He grinned, proud of Harley. With her gymnastics moves and natural skill, she could really cause a person some damage once he had her trained. He grinned, the wound splitting a little, a drop of blood forming on his bottom lip. He gently brushed his lips, smearing the blood over them, grinning at the bright red, thinking about her kiss, the sweet taste of her tongue. He closed his eyes imagining her for a moment, naked, her long blonde hair flowing down around her shoulders, her breasts peeking through the spun gold of her hair. His body reacted to the image of her in his mind. She was...distracting...from his experiments...from everything actually...but he hoped soon he could include her...show her everything about him. It would be good to have someone to share himself with...all of him, all his secrets.

He had seen the news this morning on the local Gotham news website; they had found the body a little quicker than he anticipated. Ashley's reaction to the chemical had been quite interesting. He particularly liked the smile, but then she had expired and he had no more use for her. So into the water she went.

Jack sighed and opened his eyes. Thinking of his experiments had nearly ruined his thoughts about the good doctor...he shook himself, his thoughts returning to the image of a naked Harley, his smile returning before he got into the shower.

Harleen came down for breakfast wearing a pair of red slacks and a black blouse with a lace, embroidered round neckline that showed off her neck and collar. It hung loose off her shoulders then clung to her waist. She was feeling pretty after sharing kisses with Jack, so she wore her hair down, loose and flowing over her shoulders, her make-up light and natural. She slipped on a pair of red heels then made her way into the kitchen. The delicious smell of coffee, blueberries, eggs and bacon greeted her as she stepped in.

Her heart skipped several beats when she saw Jack waiting for her. Alfred was setting a plate with muffins on the counter that had become hers and Jack's 'place' for their meals. Today Jack had dressed in a beautiful silver on light grey tartan three-piece suit, with a white shirt and a tie of black and grey checkers. His hair was slicked back again. His lip still looked swollen, the cut now dark with dried blood, but it didn't look quite as bad as it had earlier. He looked good enough to eat she thought. Jack smiled which made the rapid beat of her heart increase two-fold. He grinned at her patting the chair next to him.

“Alfred has made us a huge breakfast this morning, which means he must be in a good mood.”

Jack grinned at Alfred who blushed with a slight shake of his head.

“Master Jack is not mistaken, my mood is quite good this morning.” Alfred turned from the oven and set a plate of bacon and thick sausages on the table. (Alfred was in a good mood, despite the situation in which Jack and Harleen returned home, he had been happy to see the way the two of them interacted together. It gave him hope for the future of Jack, but also that maybe one of the young men would carry on the name of Wayne. Alfred feared that Bruce's obsession with Gotham and righting the wrongs of the past would send that eldest brother down a path of destruction...perhaps there was hope for Jack still.)

Jack laughed. “Alfred was thrilled to see you socked me in the lip. Made his day!”
Harleen blushed. “I'm so sorry...I mean it was an accident Alfred.”

The butler chuckled. “Sometimes that young man does need a smack.” Harleen and Jack laughed.

Harleen took her seat next to Jack and frowned with wide eyes, staring at the size of the sausages. “Those are huge!”

Jack laughed. “What every man wants a woman to say!”

Harleen blushed covering her mouth to stop the girlish giggled that bubbled forth while Alfred, clearly trying not to laugh scolded him.

“Master Jack, really! Must Miss Harleen box you in the mouth again?”

Jack grinned wrinkling his nose at Alfred. “She can smack me in the mouth anytime she likes.” He winked at Harleen before he continued. “We are being treated to an almost traditional English breakfast, well...albeit with an American influence since it is minus the baked beans.”

Harleen made a face. “Beans?”

Alfred was busy setting down a plate with round slices of tomatoes, slightly blackened on one side.

Jack giggled. “Yep, but Alfrie knows how much I hate beans.”

“Are fried eggs alright Miss Harleen? I can make you something else if you wish,” Alfred offered.

“Oh no, this is perfect! Thank you Alfred.” Harleen grinned at him. Alfred smiled in return and gave her a nod turning back to bring the pot of coffee over, setting it down on the counter with Jack and Harleen, placing it on a mat next to the cream and sugar that were already there. He went to the large refrigerator pulling out butter and jam, next to a plate of toasted bread, before laying out the silverware for the two of them.

“There, you two eat up.” Alfred smiled.

“Aren't you going to join us Alfred?” Jack asked with a slight frowned.

“No, no Master Jack. I will be back to clean up. I have a few things I would like to take care of before the post arrives.” Alfred said as he removed his apron. “Please enjoy your breakfast.”

With that Alfred left the two of them alone.

Jack smiled with a sigh. “That man is always busy.”

“He cares a lot about you and Bruce doesn't he?” Harleen asked as she poured herself some coffee. Jack picked up the butter-knife and started to butter some of the toast, putting a slice on Harleen's plate.

“Alfred...Alfred is a good man,” Jack murmured putting sausages and some bacon on both their plates.

Jack started using his knife and fork to cut up his eggs. “So doc, what are we going to do today for our session? More music? Maybe some dancing? I would love some dancing.” Jack waggled his eyebrows at her.
Harleen blushed and laughed softly cutting off a slice of sausage.

“I thought we might do a Rorschach test.”

Jack sat up straight. “Oh, is that the one with the ink blots?”

Harleen chuckled. “Yes it is. There’s a lot that goes into interpreting Rorschach tests, but I’m just going to do it for a quick reaction...just to see how your mind works.”

Jack giggled. “So you can see if I’m borderline crazy or just plain crazy? That my aggressiveness is just a personality defect or brought on by my issues in my childhood? Or maybe you just want to see how my mind works?”

Harleen pressed her lips together. “My version is not that deep Jack. No, this is just an evaluation of emotional and personality characteristics.”

Jack leaned toward her. “Oh is it?” He leaned his chin on the back of his hand that held the fork.

Harleen giggled just as Bruce Wayne stepped in. “There you are Jack, Dr. Quinzel; Alfred said you were having breakfast.”

Jack frowned looking up from his breakfast. “Oh don't tell me there is another party after that disaster at the gala last night? By the way, where were you? Saw you fall off the stage then you didn't come home last night.”

Bruce frowned. “I'm fine, just had to deal with the police and some of the patrons...I stayed with...a friend. Anyway, that is not why I'm here. I wanted to let you know that Vicki Vale called this morning, she is wanting to do an article on the two of us. I agreed.”

Jack made a gagging sound. “Vicki Vale? Why on earth did you agree to her interviewing us?”

Bruce frowned more (if that were possible. Harleen was beginning to think that Bruce Wayne never smiled.)

Bruce continued. “After last night we could use the good publicity and she has agreed to run an article on one of the charities that Wayne Enterprises sponsors in exchange for an interview with us.”

Jack made a face. “Fine, but only if Dr. Quinzel gets to be there.”

Jack made the statement without looking at his brother, instead shoving a forkful of egg in his mouth.

Bruce glanced at Harleen. “I don't think advertising that you have a...”

Jack smiled. “It won't be, the public already thinks she's my girlfriend after last night. Didn't you see the gossip columns this morning? There were pictures of everyone...including me and the good doctor. Speculation is running rampant!!”

Jack put his hands up, thumbs touching like he was framing a picture. “Who is Jack Wayne's paramour? Will the youngest Wayne brother find love...unlike his brother?” Jack wagged his eyebrows at his brother, grinning at Bruce. “Might be better for the Wayne reputation if they think Harleen is my girl and not my doctor.”

Bruce sighed. “Fine. Ms. Vale will be coming Monday night along with her camera man to interview us, tour the house, take a few pictures...under supervision. Just promise me to be on your best behavior.”
Jack made a face, crossing his eyes. “Yes sir. Geez...meetings, galas...dinner...I don't know if I can handle all this Bruce. I might snap!”

Bruce narrowed his eyes. “Not funny Jack.”

Jack grinned. “Oh I don't know...I think it's a little funny.”

Bruce looked confused for a moment. He finally realized Jack's lip was busted. “Did that happen last night?”

Jack laughed. “No, our doctor here did that this morning while I was teaching her self-defense.”

Bruce frowned, looking like he wanted to say more, but let the matter drop instead.

Bruce sighed and glanced at Harleen. “Do you mind not stating anything in regards to your treatment of my brother to Ms. Vale while she is here. I know she will learn everything there is about you and she is bound to speculate, but if you and my brother can keep our arrangement...quiet, I would appreciate it.”

Harleen nodded. “Yes, of course. I know what ought to remain private, have no worries, Mr. Wayne.”

Bruce nodded his thanks giving Jack a last look. “Be good.”

Jack snorted on a laughed. “Yes, Dad!”

Bruce made his way down to the Batcave, leaving his brother eating breakfast with Dr. Quinzel. Even though Bruce was sure Jack would not follow him, he was careful. He didn't want his brother to know about his nighttime activities.

Alfred was already down in the cave making some repairs to Bruce's batsuit. Alfred glanced over at Bruce. “The damage the Royal Flush Gang did during their escape is not bad sir, easily repaired, though I think we might want to consider lining the suit with something a little less...tearable?”

Bruce frowned. “I don't want to make it too heavy Alfred. I need to be flexible.”

“Yes sir, but that new material Mr. Fox was working on...I read through the reports...I think it might be pliable and light enough to line the suit with...”

Bruce nodded not really listening as he sat down in front of his computers. Alfred frowned glancing toward Bruce. He had suggested more than once that Bruce share this 'obsession' with Jack, but Bruce had flatout refused stating that Jack's delicate mental state would not be able to handle this...Alfred wasn't sure he agreed, but it was not his secret to tell.

“What is it sir?” He watched Bruce, noting that the younger man's expression was grim.

“Did you read about the strange body they found by the docks last night?” Bruce brought up the article on the computer.

Alfred nodded. “I did. The woman was found with a horrible smile on her face, frozen as it were...”

Bruce nodded. “It has me worried.”

“How sir...I mean beyond the apparent.”
“It's strange enough that it has me worried there will be more...the Royal Flush Gang is only one of many new types of criminals coming into Gotham. And this...it just feels like a...beginning.” Bruce's voice sounded distracted as he accessed the GCPD's computer files.

Alfred's expression became solemn. “Do be careful Master Bruce.”

Bruce smiled just a little. “I always am Alfred.”

Alfred chose to refrain from making the obvious rebuttal to Master Bruce's statement.

Since Jack insisted on a dance today, they went to the ballroom for their session. Harleen had seen it on the tour when she first arrived and it was just as impressive seeing it a second time.

“When was the last time your brother held a party in here?” Harleen asked as she stepped out onto the polished floor. The ballroom was big, not so large that it couldn't hold a large crowd and lose it's cozy feeling, but large enough that it could hold at least a hundred people. The floor was a stunning amber marble, the walls a mix of old wood, highly polished and walls painted a deep almost rose color. The chandelier that hung from the ceiling was amazing. Harleen stared up at it. Jack noticed her looking up and smiled.

“It's gorgeous!” Harleen walked around in a circle as she looked up at it.

Jack walked over to her, wrapping his arms around her from behind.

“It's not nearly as gorgeous as you,” he whispered against her ear.

Harleen closed her eyes leaning back against him, her arms outstretched. “Jack...do you mean that?”

He laughed turning her around in his arms. “Yes, yes I do.” He grinned. “Now dance with me.”

“I thought...” She started, but Jack placed the finger of his other hand against her lips.

“Shh...don't be my doctor right now.”

“What am I Jack? I don't know anymore,” she whispered softly against his finger.

Jack grinned sliding his finger along her lips. She giggled pressing her lips together as the caress made her lips tingle.

“...For dancing Soon becomes romancing When you hold a girl in your arms that you've never held before...”

Harleen let herself go, let herself enjoy this, the two of them laughing and dancing until Jack finally stopped in the middle of the ballroom. He pulled her close, wrapping his arm snugly around her waist, his eyes steamy as he looked down at her in his arms. He leaned toward her, his lips brushed against hers, a sweet tender caress. He dropped her hand, wrapping his other hand around her back, his hand sliding up into her hair. “I like your hair down Harley...like spun gold.”
Harleen stared back at him. His eyes wandered over her face, his smile softer. When his eyes came back to hers Harleen saw something there, possessiveness. She recognized it as a doctor, but she found herself pulled into that gaze, feeling the same—possessive. Jack was more than her patient...he belonged to her.

Jack spread his fingers in her hair licking her lips tenderly, the very tip of his tongue just barely tracing the form of her mouth. Harleen moaned softly, opening her mouth, her tongue meeting his...Jack stroked her tongue with his own before he plunged his tongue into mouth tugging her up tight against him. Harleen grabbed onto him, her fingers balling up the expensive fabric of his suit in her fists. This time his kiss was hard, demanding, passionate. Harleen groaned.

The kiss seemed to last forever. Harleen held onto Jack, her lifeline, keeping her grounded as his kiss carried her away, made her knees feel weak. When he finally pulled his lips away from hers, he smiled. “I’m going to take you out tonight. Dinner and dancing. Since you are mine...let's give Vicki Vale something to talk about eh?”
Smoke Gets In Your Eyes

Jack grabbed Harleen's hand. “First, we are going shopping! The place I'm taking you for dinner has a very specific dress code.”

“What kind of dress code?” Harleen asked as Jack practically dragged her out of the ballroom and headed toward the garage. Jack was grinning from ear to ear while holding her hand, his long fingers laced with hers.

“Let's just say that it's very “time” specific.” Jack chuckled.

In no time, Jack had dragged her into the garage. He tugged her down to the left end of the huge space. The handful of times she had been in here, this section had remained in darkness. On this end of the garage, there were several very unique cars, probably custom-made vehicles, Harleen realized. There were also a few vehicles that she couldn't see because, even while in the garage, they were covered in tarps. Jack led her along, skirting behind the cars, flipping on lights as he went until they were near the very back.

“You are going to love this car!” Jack said excitedly. “Bruce bought it for me for my twenty-first birthday. One of the few gifts that I think Bruce actually picked out himself. Usually Alfred would buy the gifts for him.”

With the flair of a game show host, Jack pulled the tarp off to reveal the most gorgeous car Harleen had ever seen. “Ta Da!!” he announced with a wide smile.

Harleen gasped when she saw the car. Never had she seen any automobile as gorgeous as this one.

“What is it?” Harleen asked reaching out to run her fingertips along its smooth side. Jack grinned with pride.

“It's a 1930's Screaming Purple Mercedes Exotic GT racer convertible.” Jack stroked the car. “Bruce had it built just for me...black leather interior, the purple paint job was specially done because Bruce knows purple has always been my favorite color. He really surprised me with this...” Jack's voice trailed off. She could hear the emotion in it, a slight tremble of feeling, but then he shook himself.

Jack turned toward her where she stood on the other side of the car. He grinned and hurried over to open the door for her. He bowed slightly at the waist, his hand pressed to his chest. “My lady.”

Harleen blushed and slipped into the seat.

Within moments, they were heading into Gotham, the air blowing through their hair. Jack was laughing with delight as he sped down the road, Harleen laughing along with him. She had a scarf tied around her head to prevent her long hair from whipping into her face, her hand on the top of her head holding it in place. They drove into Gotham, the sun shining down in a soft hazy light heading not to the downtown shopping area, but instead they made their way to the east side of Gotham.

Gotham's east side had once been one of those sections of the city that had belonged to street gangs, prostitutes and a wide variety of crime, but in recent years, younger, successful people had been moving into the area and reclaiming it. Nowadays there were an eclectic collection of stores, shops, specialty stores, along with a few restaurants and old houses that had been either turned into dining establishments or artist's apartments. Some of the older apartment buildings had been revitalized as well, providing artist lofts, studio apartments, and a wide variety of living spaces. The area wasn't as high-end as downtown Gotham, but it was definitely on it's way to becoming a haven for the artists and musicians of Gotham City.

Jack drove down the main street, the two of them receiving a lot of backwards looks as they drove by. Jack turned left into an alley that led to a small parking lot. The back of the building, which was painted a rose color, the trim in bright white, held a sign that read “Parking for The Attic”. Jack pulled in turning off the engine.

“You are going to love this place. I've actually acquired a couple of suits here as well as some other odds and ends.” Jack grinned.

Harleen looked shocked. “Really?” She had thought Jack only wore expensive designer suits, not any second-hand clothing.

Jack nodded as if reading her mind. “Yep, this isn't a “second hand” clothing store in the traditional sense; this is a high-end vintage resale shop. Milano has procured me some really rare finds. I just know he will have something for you.” Jack wrinkled his nose in amusement, opening the door for her and taking her hand as they entered.

* The inside of the store was a surprise. When Harleen heard “vintage” she usually thought of secondhand clothing stores that smelled like mothballs, but this place was not even close. There probably wasn't a mothball anywhere.

The walls were painted a rich gold color. Heavily framed pictures from vintage fashion magazines covered the walls, along with several long mirrors. There was a row of vintage chandeliers that ran the length of the shop providing a twinkling display of lights. And gorgeous clothing was everywhere! Rows of exquisite shoes, hats, gloves, jewelry were displayed throughout the shop. As Harleen took a closer look, she could see that everything here was designer, and all of it looked to date between the 1920’s to the 1950’s! There was a gorgeous deep red silk 1950’s sleeveless, knee length prom dress, a 1920’s beaded flapper dress in light green silk chiffon and gold lame. Over in a corner she saw a 1930's white satin wedding dress...it was just an amazing assortment of beautiful period clothing. She noticed a men's section containing suits, all from the same periods displayed in the women's section of the shop. It was almost like walking into a museum, except here you could touch and wear the outfits!

As the two of them stepped further into the shop, Harleen saw an older gentleman behind a heavy wooden counter reading a book. He was dark skinned, wearing white slacks, a white vest matched with a blush colored shirt, yellow tie and a red, yellow and blue plaid blazer. He had on a pair of perfectly round, thick black framed glasses, sporting a white beard and equally white hair. He reminded Harleen of a barbershop singer. When he glanced up and saw Jack, the man's face broke out into a huge smile.

“Jack Wayne!! Long time no see, son! Where have you been hiding?” The man put his book down and strolled over to pull Jack into an embrace, smacking the younger man's back.

Jack laughed. “Sorry Milano! But it's good to see you too!”

Milano grinned stepping back, his hands on Jack's shoulders. “Now what on earth happened to your lip?”
Jack chuckled. “Oh nothing, just a beautiful woman.”

Milano laughed. “Ah, women. Now that I have you here, I have this vest I’ve been holding aside on the off chance you would come in sometime. It’s purple Cavalier tapestry vest, perfect for you! Just perfect.” The man named Milano lightly thumped Jack on the chest.

Jack laughed. “Maybe later Milano, today I am here to buy a dress for my lady.”

Milano blinked in surprise. “Your lady?”

Jack put an arm around Milano's shoulders and turned him, his right arm going out to show Harleen. “Milano, let me introduce you to my lady, Harley Quinn. The one who popped me in the lip,” he added proudly.

Harleen smiled and gave a little wave. “Hello.”

Milano's eyes widened. “Well, well....” He smiled as he walked over and took Harleen's hand. “Good afternoon, beautiful.” He tilted his head down and lifted her hand to kiss the back of her hand.

Harleen blushed glancing at Jack who was shaking his head in amusement. “Milano, Harley here needs a dress for tonight. We are going to Maxim's Revisited tonight for dinner and dancing.”

Milano gasped. “Perfection Jack! Let us see what I have in stock for such a delightful woman.”

Milano placed two fingers alongside his jaw and studied Harleen. Harleen felt a bit odd standing there while Milano stared at her, his dark brown eyes roaming over her. She felt like a piece of meat being evaluated, but Jack grinned and winked at her from just behind Milano, which helped her relax. After another couple of moments, Milano smiled and stuck his finger up in the air with a flair. “I have the perfect dress!”

The older man hurried off, but returned momentarily from the back room, carrying a gorgeous black and red dress.

Milano held the dress up running his hand down it as he described it for her. “The top is black silk-rayon velvet, the skirt, red-silk satin with these structural accents to emphasize the hips along with black silk crepe. It's cut to accentuate the figure while the slim straps highlight the lady's slim neck and shoulders along with the sloped V-line of the back. I believe this is a perfect choice for Miss Quinn. You have that gorgeous hair of yours piled up so that your neck is on display...those creamy shoulders, you will be the bell of the ball.” Milano grinned, pleased with himself.

Jack stepped over and took the dress from Milano, holding it up and inspecting it with a critical eye. Then with a wide smile at Harleen he asked, “Would you try this on for me?”

Harleen blushed. “Of course.”

Milano led her to the back where he had a set of three dressing rooms; Jack followed behind carrying the dress.

Milano held the door open for her. “While you are trying this on dear, I have a darling pair of black satin gloves that will match perfectly with this dress.”
Harleen blushed. “Thank you.”

Milano smiled taking the dress from Jack. “You should go and see the new hats that came in Jack, there are several there that I think you will like.”

Jack grinned. “Ah, you know me so well.” Jack’s eyes settled on Harleen for a moment. “Call me once you have the dress on—I would like to see it.”

Harleen nodded. “Of course Jack.”

With that Jack gave a jaunty salute and started to walk in the direction of the hats.

Milano watched him go for a moment before he spoke again. “You are a very lucky woman Harley. You must be something very special if Jack has taken to you.”

Harleen smiled, a rosy blush spreading along her cheeks. “Well, he's something very special to me, too.”

Milano nodded with a smile. “Good. Well, I'll be back with those gloves.”

Jack heard Harleen shut the dressing room door. He smiled thinking about her in the dress while he causally examined some ties on his way over to the hats. He had just picked up a tie, yellow and green striped, colors that that reminded him of clowns, but he also the thought that Bruce would hate it—not conservative enough—when something caught his attention from the corner of his eye.

Jack turned. It was in the intimates section, women's period bras and panties, but what had his attention was a simple red nightie. It was see-thru, with thin spaghetti straps and ruffles with a bow between the breasts. The bottom of the nightie had matching ruffles with tiny red bows of satin running around the bottom. The negligee would hit his Harley just below her hips. Jack's eyes widened, a slow smile spreading across his lips as he imagined her wearing it.

He simply had to have it for her.

“Milano?” Jack called.

“Yes Jack?” Milano's voice came first before the older man stepped around from behind a rack of clothes.

Jack pointed at the silken negligee. “I must have that.”

Milano smiled with a twinkle in his eyes. “Ahh...a perfect choice!

Once alone, Harleen very carefully put the dress on. She was surprised, but the darn thing fit like a glove! She looked at herself in the mirror that was on the wall in the dressing room. The dress was gorgeous, despite its age; it was well cared for, looking almost brand new. She slipped the straps up over her shoulders and then started to struggle to reach the zipper. It took several minutes of her dancing around in a circle, struggling to reach the zipper while at the same time being extra careful with the vintage dress. After a few minutes, Harleen had to admit she needed help. With a sigh she opened the dressing room door and peeked out.

Milano was nowhere to be seen. There were no other customers in the shop, so Harleen stepped out of the dressing room looking around. “Jack?” No answer.

She called again, a little louder. “Jack?”

Jack’s head popped up from behind a rack of hats, one on his head. Harleen smiled when she saw him. He was wearing a wide-brimmed fedora that had the edges upturned.

The hat was made in dark grey with a black band. Jack ran his fingers along the brim. “What ya think doll face? Going to pair this with a period suit. It's by Huckel.” “I think that will look amazing on you Jack,” Harleen said softly, then looking around again, she motioned him closer. Jack waltzed over, the hat cocked at a crooked angle. “What can I do for ya toots?” he said with a grin winking at her.

Harleen laughed and turned around to show her back to him. “I can’t quite reach the zipper.”

When she turned around, showing her back to him, Jack stared. Her back was so smooth, the sides of the fabric having fallen aside to reveal her pale creamy flesh. Jack stepped closer reaching out toward her like a thirsty man and Harley was the source of his salvation, his life...Jack's hand trembled for a moment. He had seen her skin before in the bathing suit, but there was something even more erotic around the dress falling open to reveal her back.

Jack had never been with a woman...never felt the desire, never found anyone that he felt that kind of connection to...that he wanted to share himself with in that kind of intimacy. But Harley was different. He wanted her on a level he had never wanted anyone before...she was...He didn't simply need her, it was so much more than that...he wanted to share himself with her, not just physically, but mentally, emotionally.

Jack stepped closer, his eyes never leaving her back. He reached out and slowly, lightly ran the back of his knuckles along her exposed flesh. He traced the smoothness of her back, a tender caress down her spine feeling the way her back curved down to her hips.

Harleen gasped softly. The brush of his knuckles was feather light, but it still sent goosebumps racing over her skin while at the same time burning through her to her very soul. Harleen closed her eyes while Jack's knuckles traced her spine as far down as the unzipped dressed allowed.

“You're not wearing a bra.” His breath was hot against her ear when he spoke sending tremors through her.

“I took it off when I put the dress on, the straps were showing at my shoulders,” she whispered back. Jack chuckled softly, his knuckles disappearing from her spine to be replaced by his fingers at her neck. He traced the smooth slope of her neck, a hand on either side. Harleen's breath was shaky when his fingers glided over the soft skin of her neck, the caress causing heat to pool in her breasts and groin. She could feel the heat of his body behind her, the shift of the fabric of his clothing against her bare back. His fingertips shifted to brush along her shoulders, sliding forward to caress the line of her collarbone. Jack leaned in, bringing his hand around to brush her hair aside, gently stroking her thick locks over one shoulder just before he leaned down and pressed his lips against the nape of her neck.

The kiss burned against her skin. Harleen leaned back closing her eyes letting herself focus only on the feel of his hands and lips.

Jack's kisses glided along the nape of her neck burning a trail across her shoulder, his fingers squeezed against her skin where his hands hand moved to grip her shoulders.
He worked his way back up her throat, pressing his mouth at the tender place just under her ear. His tongue snaked out to lick her ear when they were interrupted by someone clearing their throat.

Jack looked up. Harleen couldn't see it, but she felt the pressure of his fingers on her shoulders, heard the flatness of his voice.

“What Milano?”

The older man frowned taking a unintended step back. He was holding a pair of black gloves in his hand. “Ah, you two should get a room if you're going to be playing that sort of game. Bad for business if you're doing it in the middle of the sales floor.”

Jack laughed then, releasing Harleen. “Sorry Milano.”

Jack stepped back from her, but then she felt him take a hold of the zipper and pull it up the back of the dress.

“There you go Harley. The dress fits as if was made just for you.” He walked around her to get a better look.

Smiling, Harleen did a little spin in the dress.

Milano grinned. “Ah, I knew you would look perfect in that. Your figure is stunning! Isn't it Jack?”

Jack grinned his eyes devouring Harleen. “You are perfection,” he said to her with feeling.

Harleen blushed. “Thank you.”

Jack stared at her for a moment more before he clapped his hands. “Alright, I'll take the dress, gloves; do you have some shoes in her size that would go with the dress? Oh and hose, period hosiery too?”

Milano laughed. “Of course I do Jack!”

“Why all the period stuff Jack?” Harleen asked as Jack came back behind her to unzip the dress. He slowly pulled the zipper back down, then ran the backs of his fingers up her smooth back sending goosebumps racing across her skin again.

“Because where we are going you will want to be dressed just right,” he said, his lips close to her ear before he quickly placed a kiss on her shoulder and stepped away. “Go change. I'll take you out to lunch, then home!”

Jack arranged for Milano to have everything delivered to the manor before 6 pm. Their dinner date was to start at 8 pm. But for now Jack decided he was taking Harleen out for lunch.

He took her hand as they left the shop. “I know a perfect place for a light lunch.”

He kissed her hand before handing her into the car. They drove a few blocks away until Jack found what he was looking for and pulled into a spot in front of a cafe. The cafe's name was placed across the top of a burgundy and gold awning.

“Nicoletto's Cafe”

Jack grinned. “This is perfect!”
He hopped out of the convertible without opening the door and jogged around taking Harleen's hand as he opened the door for her. The two of them were getting quite a few looks; a few people were even snapping pictures of them and the car. Jack's clearly expensive suit and busted lip probably had tongues wagging and if anyone recognized him it would not be long before someone from the Gotham press showed up to take pictures.

Jack strolled inside holding her hand for everyone to see and stopped at the counter looking over the menu that was displayed on a large chalkboard. “What looks good to you, my sweet?”

Harleen felt herself blush. He had called her his sweet? She distracted herself from the eruption of joy in her chest to examine the menu. She frowned in thought as she read each item.

“Mm...maybe the spinach fettuccine with sauteed cremini mushrooms?”

Jack laughed. “Peachy!” He kissed her cheek before he stepped up to the register.

“Two spinach fettuccine with sauteed cremini mushrooms! And a bottle of whatever Sauvignon Blanc you have here.”

The young woman at the register, thick black hair and brown eyes, blushed at Jack. Harleen knew how charming and handsome he was...she couldn't really blame the young woman.

“Yes sir. If you would like to find a seat, I will have one of our waiters bring your meal to you and your friend.”

Jack gave a little bow. “Thank you my dear.”

They ended up sitting outside under a large red umbrella in surprisingly comfortable wicker chairs. Their lunch was brought out fairly quickly along with the wine and two glasses. Jack popped the cork and poured some into Harleen's glass smiling at her the whole time.

Jack grinned in return. “It is. Never wanted to take anyone out before, but you—I want the world to see you Harley.”

Harleen blushed glancing down at her plate when a woman called. “Jack? Jack Wayne?”

Jack turned to glance over his shoulder. Harleen couldn't see his face, but she could tell by the set of his shoulders that he was not pleased.

“I thought that was you Jack Wayne.” The woman that walked over exuded sex. She was simply gorgeous with long silver-white hair that flowed down her shoulders and startlingly blue eyes. She was dressed in a sleeveless, v-necked, cream-colored crepe dress that highlighted her figure and legs, along with a pair of black Prada t-strapped studded sandals.

She stopped at their table cocking a hip, placing her hand on it, her small white purse hanging from her wrist as she smiled at Jack.

The woman gave Harleen a nod that stated “Yes I see you there but you are not important” as she turned her attention back to Jack. “You never returned my calls Jackie.”

Jack sipped his wine. “Silver St. Cloud, let me introduce you to Harley Quinn.”
Silver pressed her lips together turning to smile at Harleen. “Pleasure to meet you Miss Quinn.”

“Pleasure you meet you Miss St. Cloud.” Harley gave St. Cloud a little smile and Silver laughed. “Oh call me Silver please. So are you dating Jack?”

Harleen glanced toward Jack who smiled. No beating around the bush with this one, Harleen thought, keeping her thoughts from manifesting in her expression.

Jack spoke to Silver, though his eyes were on Harleen. “Yes, we are actually. I'm sure you'll hear all about it when Ms. Vicki Vale does her interview later this week.”

At first it seemed Silver didn't hear everything Jack had said as she smiled.

“Well, keep a tight hold of him if you can because I decided month ago that Jack Wayne would be mine.” Silver giggled then frowned, “What did you say Jack?”

Jack smiled. “Bruce is allowing Ms. Vale to tour the mansion and interview the two of us.”

Silver stood up straight crossing her arms over her chest, her bottom lip sticking out. “Seriously? And Bruce hasn't bothered to tell me?”

Jack snorted. “Now why on earth would he tell you?” He twirled some noodles on his fork without looking up at her. “I mean, it's not like you mean anything to him. It's not like you actually mean anything to anyone, Silver.”

Jack finally looked up at her, but he was smiling, a smile that didn't quite reach his eyes. “Look Silver, I have neither the time nor the crayons to explain this to you, but you know...I'm gonna try. Do you really think you were important to him? Isn't that why you tried to seduce me? Figured you would try to either make him jealous or at least to get one Wayne brother and hopefully some of that Wayne fortune or Wayne Enterprises backing on your side? But oh boohoo, poor Silver St. Cloud, not as attractive as she thought she was...nor as interesting. She'll never know which one it was that made Bruce dump her or made me not want anything to do with her...or it might be both. Now, I'm eating lunch with my girl. So please go. ” With that Jack turned away from her.

Harleen quickly grabbed her wine glass to try to cover up the laugh.

Silver stared at Jack in shock. That was when a camera clicked. The three of them turned to see Nellie Majors from the Gotham Herald writing on an Ipad along with her photographer Wilbur Eagle who was getting ready to take another picture.

Miss Majors smiled. Her strawberry blonde hair was cut in a short bob, just under her ears, the bands were high and perfectly symmetrical making her look a great deal like a blonde Vulcan to Harleen's eyes. She was wearing a bright blue pencil skirt and white jacket, while Wilbur with his short curling hair, baggy navy slacks and white polo reminded Harleen of a golfer.

“So Jack Wayne, can I get a comment about the lady you are dining with?” Nellie grinned. Jack rolled his eyes, but Harleen could see he was grinning. “No, not now Nellie dear, eating,” Jack said without looking back at her.

Silver St. Cloud glared at Jack with a hissed, “This isn't over,” before she stomped off. Wilbur followed her with his camera, very interested in the sway of her hips. Someone apparently reported Nellie Majors for disturbing guests, because a few minutes later a man in a black suit came to escort her away from Jack and Harleen.

Jack took a sip of his wine. “Sorry about that.”
Harleen smiled. “You were fine.”

Jack smiled. “If you hadn’t guessed, Miss St. Cloud there once dated my brother and when Bruce inevitably dumped her, she came after me...I never was interested in her.” Jack shook his head taking a sip of wine. “Woman like that only wants one of two things. Money or power...or both.”

Jack set his glass down to gaze at Harleen. “She could never compare to you.”

Harleen blushed.

Jack drove them home. Harleen had completely forgotten about the session she was supposed to do with Jack, instead she was focused on tonight.

The clothing arrived right on time along with the hose, shoes, garter belts, strapless bra, even perfume! Everything came in separate large boxes tied with red ribbon. It was almost like Christmas!

Harleen untied each box examining the contents. From one of the boxes she held up the nylon hose. They were not made of period materials, clearly modern, but they were made to look and wear like hose from the 1930's; there was even a seam down the back of each leg. The garter belt was black with tiny red roses on it and came with a matching strapless bra and panties.

The shoes were lovely with an art deco feel to them, she thought as she held them up. They had a Spanish heel, t-strapped black leather with red piping.

The last thing she removed was the negligee. It was lovely. Harleen blushed when she held it up. But no sooner she had to put it aside on the bed than there was a knock at her door. Thinking it might be Jack, she opened it only to be greeted by a young woman. The woman looked like she stepped right out of a rockabilly video with the black 1950's hair, a red and white polkadot dress, except she wore combat boots. The girl smiled. “You Harley Quinn?”

“Yes?” Harleen said with her eyebrows lifted in confusion.

“Jack Wayne hired me to do your hair and make-up. I'm Alice—nice to meet ya.” Alice picked up the make-up kit at her side and shoved her way into the room. Harleen frowned, but a slow amused smile crossed her features. Just like for the gala, Jack hired someone to do her hair and make-up. Now she was really curious about this place where he was taking her.

It only took Alice forty-five minutes to get Harleen's hair combed back at the forehead, the rest of her hair falling around her shoulders in soft ringlets. Her make-up was done spot on for the period with shimmering pink eye-shadow, her lips painted in a cupid-bow with a deep maroon lipstick, the blush was applied in a triangle on her cheeks and the stylist painted Harleen’s nails to match her lipstick.

“Now for a real 30's look I would give you pencil thin eyebrows, but since this is only for tonight I'll skip that.” Alice grinned. “There—you’re ready to go!”

Harleen looked at herself in the mirror. She did indeed look like she just walked out of a glamorous party from the 1930's.

“Wow,” Harleen murmured which made Alice grin.
“Well I gotta go. You two have fun!” Alice gathered up her things and with a jaunty wave took off.

Harleen made her way downstairs after Alice had left, but instead of finding Jack in the entrance way she found Alfred. He smiled brightly when he saw her. “Miss Harleen, you look stunning.”

She blushed. “Thank you Alfred.”

The older man smiled taking her gloved hand and wrapping it around his arm as he led her to the front door. “Master Jack is outside. He is smoking so I insisted he wait out there for you if he insisted on lighting a cigarette.”

Harleen laughed lightly.

Alfred opened the door and there was Jack dressed in an iconic gangster suit, with the wide brim hat, a double breasted jacket with peaked lapels over a vest with lapels and flat front trousers with a flared leg ending in a cuff. The suit was black with very thin pale pink pinstripes. He had a cigarette between his teeth, his hair slicked back. When he saw her, his eyes widened and he grinned with a show of teeth.

“Well, well, hey there doll, you ready for a night on the town?” Jack grinned waggling his eyebrows.

Alfred chuckled and whispered to Harleen. “Master Jack always did like dress-up.”

The older man took her hand and handed her to Jack. “You two have a wonderful evening.”

Jack grinned taking out his cigarette. “Don't ya worry Pops. I'll have her home at a decent hour.”

Alfred laughed shaking his head as he headed back into the manor.

Harleen giggled at Jack who surprised her by tossing his cigarette with a flick of his fingers and pulled her close just before he dipped her back a little. He press his lips to hers. Harleen swoon, wrapping her gloved hands around his neck, her maroon lips opening slightly. Jack opened his mouth, his teeth scraping against her bottom lip, his tongue teasing against hers before he let her go.

He smiled widely. “Let's go have some fun.”

The restaurant, Maxim's Revisited, looked just like a 1930's art deco style restaurant with bright lights, stain-glass windows and double doors. Jack pulled up front where a valet took the keys to park the car. Jack wrapped Harleen's arm around his and led her inside. There was a maitre d' waiting at a pedestal. He had a pencil mustache and slicked back dark hair. “Reservation?”

Jack took his hat off. “Table for two, Jack Wayne.”

“Ah Mr. Wayne! It has been a long time since you visited us!” The maitre d' grinned.

Jack shrugged. “Yes it has, but I'm glad to be back tonight.”

The man snapped his fingers and a young waiter dressed in a waiter's tux came to lead them to their table. The tables inside the restaurant were all round, covered in long white table clothes with flowered centerpieces. The interior was art deco design in blues and golds, with palm trees decorating the corners. In the center of the club was a large dance floor where couples dressed in 1930's clothing were dancing to a live band and singer on a small stage. The ceiling was painted to look like a night sky with stars and chandeliers hung from the ceiling everywhere.

Jack grinned watching her reaction. “Oh Jack, this is amazing.”

“Isn't it!” Jack laughed. “That band is Mary and Joe Steam and the Maxim orchestra—they are regulars here though sometimes the management brings in singers.”

Harleen was mesmerized as the big band played, men and women in period outfits danced and ate dinner, she felt like she had walked backwards in time.

Their table was over to the right, not in the center of the room and not too close to the dance floor giving them an illusion of privacy. The waiter gave them each a menu; again the menu design continued the art deco style of the restaurant.

“What can I get the lady and gentleman to drink this evening?”

Jack glanced at Harleen. “Care if I order for us both?”

“No, no, you go ahead.” Harleen smiled at him.

Jack turned to the waiter. “How about a nice Chardonnay.”

Jack grinned at Harleen. She looked so beautiful tonight, he was proud to have her on his arm.

“So what does my dame feel like?”

Harleen looked over the menu. “Oh gosh there is so much!”

Jack leaned forward. “I recommend the lobster.”

Harleen blinked. “That is so...”

Jack held up a hand. “Before you say expensive, remember who you're dating toots.” He laughed tossing the menu down. Harleen blushed.

Harleen's gloves lay folded next to her plate where the remains of her lobster lay. She was sipping her wine as Jack told her about growing up watching some of the old comedians.

“I really enjoyed watching Charlie Chaplin and Buster Keaton, but I think my all time favorite was The Marx Brothers.”

Harleen laughed. “Oh I loved their movies! Duck Soup is one of my favorites!”

Jack's eyes lit up. “Really?”

Harleen nodded. “Oh yes! I just loved that movie!”

Jack grinned. “I love Groucho's one liners.”

Jack grinned pretending to have a cigar between his fingers that he waggled. “Outside of a dog, a book is man's best friend. Inside of a dog, it's too dark to read.”
They both laughed. Harleen sighed happily looking at Jack across the table. He was so handsome, the suit looked great on him, though she doubted there was anything he could wear that would not look spectacular on him.

She was about to ask him something else when suddenly a rather short, slim man who might have been about Bruce Wayne's age, perhaps a year or two older, appeared at their table. He was dressed in period clothing, a white dinner jacket matched with a black vest and pants. The shorter man's dark hair was slicked back from a very sharp nose and a monocle on a gold chair was over one eye. He held a cane in one hand, both of which were concealed behind black leather gloves. He might have been attractive except for the scowl on his face.

“Well, well Jack Wayne. Whatever are you doing here?” The man smiled. Harleen found herself cringing a little.

Jack lifted his brows in mild surprise. “Oswald Cobblepot...now how on earth did you even get in? I thought this place had standards.”

Cobblepot narrowed his eyes. “Very funny rich boy. Surprised your big brother let you out. Heard he was keeping you under house arrest...gotta keep the crazies out of good society.”

Jack's right hand was on the table, Cobblepot on the left. No one but Harleen saw Jack's fingers wrapped tightly around the knife that sat next to his plate. She frowned slightly, wondering who this increasingly unpleasant little man was to evoke such a reaction from Jack.

“You know Cobblepot...Charlie Chaplin once said that life could be wonderful if people would leave you alone...especially fat little birds who think they are more than what they are...”

Cobblepot narrowed his eyes, his face turning red and his voice picking up volume. “You know Wayne, my family was something in this town long before you Waynes came to Gotham and took EVERYTHING!! Your family are nothing but thieves and liars!!”

Cobblepot slammed the table suddenly with his cane causing their dishes to leap and shatter to the floor. Harleen let out a startled cry, nearly falling over in her attempt to get to her feet. Wine spilled across the fine white table cloth and the remains of lobster tumbled to the floor.

Jack moved swiftly. He was out of his chair, his right arm whipping around, the knife from the table in his hand, held across his forearm. He stopped short, the blade coming right up under Cobblepot's throat and quivering chin. Jack's other hand had an iron grip on the shorter man's shoulder, pressing painfully into Cobblepot's skin through his clothing. Jack's long fingers squeezed Oswald's shoulder painfully. Jack leaned in close, his voice a low growl, his eyes flat and deadly.

“I suggest you leave, Oswald Cobblepot, before you get yourself into trouble that money can't get you out of...”

The shorter man stared at Jack in surprise, his blue eyes going wide, the monocle popping out to drop at his waist. Oswald opened his mouth to respond, but instead his lips flopped around. Harleen thought for a moment that the man looked like a fish struggling for breath.

A couple members of of the staff came jogging over. “Sirs! Sirs! Please!”

Jack moved his hand quickly, his long fingers nimbly sliding the knife up his sleeve, only Harleen having seen the blade and even she wasn't sure she had seen him slip a knife up his sleeve.

A couple of members of the staff rushed over, one of them, a middle aged man in a fine suit looked between Jack and Oswald. “Sirs, I must insist if you are to have an altercation, that you take it outside of our establishment.”

It was clear Jack and Oswald's “altercation” was drawing stares from other people in the restaurant.

Jack smiled at Oswald. “We're not having an altercation now are we Cobblepot?”

Cobblepot looked between Jack and the restaurant staff. He narrowed his tiny eyes before muttering. “No, there's no problem.”

With that, his long pointed beak of a nose in the air, Cobblepot tottered off using his cane for support.

The gentlemen who had questioned them bowed to Jack and Harleen.

“Sir, why don't you and your lady take a spin around our dance floor while we clean your table? And might I suggest a baked Alaskan, on the house for the two of you?”

Jack smiled, every inch the gentleman. “Of course, that sounds excellent, don't you think Harley?”

Harleen nodded as Jack took her hand leading her out onto the dance floor. The band had just started to play another song, the female singer, wearing a long midnight blue dress, stepped up to the microphone, holding the oversized mic in her hand and began to sing.

“They asked me how I knew
My true love was true
I of course replied
Something here inside cannot be denied
They said "someday you'll find all who love are blind"
When your heart's on fire,
You must realize, smoke gets in your eyes “

Jack grinned pulling Harleen close against him. “I love this song.”

His voice was warm as he spun her around on the dance floor, his thumb gently caressing her back where his hand rested against her.

“What was all that about?” Harleen asked as they spun around. She could see Cobblepot glaring at them from his table.

“Oh, old Oswald insists that his family is old money, helped in the establishment of Gotham, claims that the Wayne's somehow tricked his family and stole their fame and fortune.”

Jack did a little spin with her, winking at Oswald. He came back around with her, Harleen saw the smaller man glaring hatefully at Jack. Harleen thought about asking Jack about the knife, the swiftness of his attack, but she didn't even though Jack was supposed to be her patient. She glanced at the sleeve where he had concealed the blade. Jack followed her gaze smiling impishly.

“Are you going to tell on me Harley?” He dipped her, pressing his teeth against his bottom lip as his eyes seemed to devour her, running down her breasts, then he was lifting her back up bringing her close.

The singer continued to purr into the microphone.

“So I chaffed them and I gaily laughed
To think they could doubt my love
Yet today my love has flown away,
I am without my love (without my love)

*“No Jack, never.” Harleen knew she meant it too...she could never betray him. Jack laughed pulling her closer, then suddenly he dropped her hand to wrap both of his arms around her waist lifting her off her feet just a little. Harleen put her arms around his neck staring into his eyes, a soft laugh on her lips.

Jack kissed the tip of her nose with a wide smile.

“My girl...that's what you are Harley—my girl,” Jack whispered. He spread his hands down to her hips pressing her up against him, rolling with her as they swayed to the music. She could feel the slight hardness of him pressed against her.

“You my girl Harley?” Jack ducked his head then, coming up to brush his lips against hers. “Tell me you're mine Harley.” His stroked his lips against hers again, his tongue slipping out to lick her lips. “Tell me Harley.”

Harleen's eyes fluttered, she felt like she was melting, becoming lost. That was what was happening, she thought to herself. She was losing her way and she didn't care. “I'm yours Jack...

Jack kissed her then.

They weaved to the music until they were in the middle of the dance floor. His hands slid down her body, spanning her rear and squeezed, pressing her against him. Harleen's hands stroked the back of his neck, her fingers brushing through the short hairs on the back of his skull. Jack nipped and licked her lips, his tongue stroked against her tongue, circling, twisting. His hands squeezed her rear again before gliding up to her waist.

Harleen moaned, but then the music stopped and the audience was applauding the singer. Jack, the side of his nose against hers, opened his eyes to look deeply into hers. Harleen felt hypnotized staring up at him.

“Mine,” he whispered before brushing her lips with his, trailing down her chin and placing one last kiss on her jaw. He grinned. “Let's go have dessert.”

* When Jack and Harleen arrived back at Wayne manor that evening, the place was dark, quiet except for a light on the porch and another in the main hall. Jack walked Harleen to her room, stopping at her door.

“I had a good time Harley.” He stroked his fingers along her jaw.
Harleen blushed. “I did too.”

Harleen knew right then, that if Jack asked to come into her room, to spend the night with her she would not have said no, but instead he planted a light kiss on her lips, the tip of her nose and lastly her forehead.

“Sleep well, my Harley.” Jack whispered against her forehead before he stepped back, smiling and started back down the hall. Harleen watched him go, with Jack stopping on the steps to give her a wave before he descended. Harleen sighed smiling happily.

There was no denying it, she was in love.

Jack was excited. Harley was...perfect!! He took the stairs back down to the main floor two at a time, grinning the whole while. He was heading out to check on his volunteers. He had recruited a couple of men, homeless...people no one would miss, people that would do anything for money. He would have rather spent the night in her bed, exploring her, but duty called.

He was practically dancing again when he opened the locks letting himself into his “lab.” Harley had him on cloud nine. He knew right then she would be his in every sense of the word, when the time was right.

When he brought the volunteers over to his “lab” it was only after he had removed his previous...experiments; didn't want to scare them off by seeing the bodies of the other ones now, did he?

As Jack stepped in, he glanced over to where he had the two men strapped down to hospital beds. One of them was clearly dead, his eyes widened until one of his eyeballs had simply popped out of its socket, his face stretched so wide in a smile that the skin had split. Jack had given this gentleman the old dosage.

But the other man, he had received the new formula. The man's hair had turned a lime green, his skin a chalky grey along with the wide laughing eyes and rictus grin. Jack walked over to his subject, studying him. “Oh...darn...” Jack frowned. “Looks like you died too, but I really like the interesting new developments.”

Jack laughed.

The next morning Harleen, feeling pretty and wanting to be pretty for Jack, wore a spring dress of light blue, decorated with a scoop collar and printed with flowers, her hair done in a French braid. She had paired the outfit with a pair of light blue high heels and a white shrug.

Jack looked stunning as always in Harleen's eyes. He wore a slim fit navy blue suit, with matching vest, white shirt and a tie that was white, but decorated with blue roses. Harleen swooned inwardly staring at him. Oddly their clothing seemed to match.

“Alfred the beauty has arrived!” Jack said as he stood up to pull out her stool for her.

Alfred smiled. “And a very good morning to you Miss Harleen. Master Jack was giving me very few details about your “date” last night.”
Jack grinned. “Just waiting for Harley, Alfie.”

Harleen blushed sitting down. “Oh Alfred it was a fabulous night.”

Harleen smiled as Jack reached over to place his hand on her knee. She was still having trouble thinking of him as “her” boyfriend, but when he had looked up and saw her in the doorway of the kitchen, the smile that he had given her had sent her heart soaring.

She went on to tell Alfred all about the restaurant, the clothes, music, the food (carefully leaving out the part about Oswald Cobblepot.) and the dance. “Jack is such an amazing dancer Alfred.”

Alfred smiled having just set the coffee, the bacon and leek quiche he had made on the counter in front of the two of them, already cut into slices.

“It sounds like the two of you had a good time.” Alfred seemed very pleased.

Jack grinned from where he had been making notes in his notebook, squeezing her knee with his other hand while Harleen spoke.

“It was, it was just a unique experience!” Harleen smiled brightly.

Jack chuckled without looking up. “Well the company I had was simply the most beautiful and engaging woman in Gotham...probably on the planet.”

Harleen blushed brightly. Jack stole a sideways glace at her and winked.

Harleen her cheeks still red, glancing down to cut a bite from her quiche. She had just taken a bite, groaning with appreciation and was about to tell Alfred about how magnificent the food was, when Bruce came in like a storm cloud, looking annoyed.

Jack looked up. “Bruce.” His voice was flat.

“What was going on in your head yesterday? I just saw the news on the Gotham Herald! First you insult Silver St. Cloud yesterday afternoon AND in front of Miss Majors from the Gotham Herald! Who went on to write a scathing article about you. AND now you've jumped right into a spat with Oswald Cobblepot last night? What was going on yesterday Jack? And Dr. Quinzel, I thought you were supposed to keep my brother out of trouble, not get him into it!”

Jack slammed his hands down on the counter pushing himself to his feet.

Harleen jumped.

Alfred frowned.

“Leave her out of this Bruce.” Jack's voice was deadly flat.

Bruce took a calming breath. “Jack...this is not the kind of publicity we need.”

Jack narrowed his eyes at Bruce. “Look, Bruce, it's not my fault I had to tell Silver St. Cloud off...you should have done that ages ago instead of avoiding her or leading her on...whatever it is you do with your numerous women. Then maybe she wouldn't have been trying to seduce me for the last few months. As for Cobblepot...fuck off, Bruce.”

Jack grabbed his notebook and reached out taking Harleen's hand. He stopped then, glaring at his brother.

“And don’t you ever bring Harley into this again.”

With that Jack tugged Harleen with him out of the kitchen.

Bruce ground his teeth.

Alfred spoke quietly. “Master Bruce, I don't think that was the best way to handle Master Jack.”

Bruce sighed in frustration running a hand down his face. “I just...”

Alfred came over and laid a hand on Bruce's shoulder. “On the other hand Master Bruce, I've never seen Jack so...happy before and you know how Miss St. Cloud can be. As for Oswald Cobblepot the man has been looking for an opportunity to make a spectacle of himself since returning to Gotham, you can't really blame Master Jack for that.”

Bruce sighed. “I...I guess not.” Bruce was about to leave then frowned turning to Alfred.

“Did he just call Dr. Quinzel Harley?”
Precious

Jack dragged Harleen along with him. She didn't say a word, sensing that now was not the time. She let him drag her wherever he needed her to be, though it wasn't until the last moment that she realized he was headed toward the garage. Harleen stumbled a little in her heels trying to keep up when they went over a dip between the manor and garage.

“Where are we going Jack?” she asked with some concern as he yanked her with him.

“We are going for a drive,” Jack stated, continuing through the garage.

Jack headed straight for his motorcycle. He grabbed the keys and tossed a helmet at Harleen. She just barely caught it as he pulled the bike out of its place and started the engine. Harleen quickly dashed over, lifting her dress up to straddle the bike behind him. For a moment, Jack reached back, running one hand along her bare thigh; she could see the tension in his shoulders ease a little when he touched her. Jack tenderly caressed the underside of her thigh one more time before he brought his hand back to hold the handle of the bike and hit the gas. Harleen blushed under the helmet as she wrapped her arms around Jack's middle. He didn't move for a few more heartbeats, letting the engine rumble under them, reaching back with his hand one more time just to stroke her leg and lean back into her embrace. She tightened her arms around him as if she were trying to protect him, which she supposed she was.

The intimacy for both gestures, the touch of his hand on her leg and her grip around his waist, all of it sent goosebumps along with a tingling heat all throughout her body. Jack seemed reluctant to stop touching her, his fingertips dragging across her thigh before he hit the gas, grabbing the handles with both hands and took off.

Harleen wanted to ask where they were going, but instead of trying to talk, she just held on tightly as Jack sped away from the manor heading into Gotham. They drove for a while, weaving dangerously in and out of traffic, running a few lights and barely avoiding hitting a car or two. Harleen closed her eyes and tightened her grip around his waist until they finally ended up on the upper west side close to Chinatown. Jack slowed down and maneuvered the bike deftly around some vehicles until they were near an old three story brick apartment building. It was fairly plain, nothing special, a simple utilitarian building.

As Jack pulled the bike down an alley, Harleen saw that the lower floor of the building was actually a Chinese restaurant. A large sign over the top of the restaurant read TASTE OF CHINA in yellow letters on a blue background with Chinese dragons painted in the corners of the sign.

Jack pulled around from the alley to the back of the restaurant where there were a couple of large dumpsters, a few other bins and some trash littered on the ground. A blue painted back door was opened that led into the back of the restaurant. Jack hopped off the bike and helped Harleen to dismount, then he walked through the door to show that yes, it did lead into the restaurant, but sharply to the right of the rear entryway lay a set of stairs.

Taking her hand, Jack took the stairs up to a landing where a short hallway led to a couple of red painted doors. Jack walked down to the door on the left, producing a key with which he opened the lock. He held the door open for her. “Go on in,” he said calmly.
The interior of the apartment surprised her. The walls were white, not old yellow white, but the crisp bright white that reminded her of a showroom floor. In the main room was a simple red couch, a flat screen TV mounted on the wall across from the couch with several large white box shelves surrounding the set. The shelves contained a few Blurays, a couple of brightly colored vases and some books. The small living room led right into a tiny kitchen and from where she stood, Harleen could see what looked like two more rooms, her guess being a bedroom and a bathroom.

“What is this place?” Harleen asked as she stepped in, her gaze taking in the simple decorations and clean lines of the apartment.

“Sort of my secret hideout.” Jack grinned as he walked in and tossed his keys into a bowl on one of the shelves. “It's an apartment I maintain—without Bruce's knowledge—for when I need to get away. The only people that know about this place are me, Alfred and now you.”

Jack walked over to the couch and flopped down, one arm draped across the back of it. Harleen walked over and sat down next to him. She laid a hand on his thigh looking at him with concern. “Are you alright?”

Jack chuckled and said, “I will be. Promise.”

He turned to face her, his eyes searching her face for a moment. She wasn't sure what he was looking for, but then suddenly Jack reached out to run his fingers along her face. He stroked the line of her jaw tenderly before his fingers slid up into her hair. He reached around and pulled out the tie that held her hair in the braid. Harleen didn't move; she let him do what he wanted which was to unbraid her hair, running his fingers through her thick locks until they were loose around her shoulders. He smiled then.

“You look beautiful.” His voice was almost a whisper just before he slipped his hand to the back of her head, cradling her skull as he gradually drew her toward him.

Jack leaned forward and brushed her lips with his in a caress that rippled through her. Jack's mouth opened slightly as his warm, soft lips traced hers, only a slight line of blue from his eyes visible under his thick lashes while he watched her. Harleen took in a slow shuddering breath and leaned into him, pulled toward him just as Jack's tongue flicked across her lips. The feel of his tongue was a gentle tickle that made her lips tingle. Harleen's tongue greeted his, the touch at first soft, gentle...

Jack suddenly hauled her over to him. He shoved her dress up her legs, positioning her so that she was straddling his lap, not once losing contact with her mouth. Jack's kisses became more insistent, demanding. He reached for her holding onto her with desperation as his mouth hungrily glided over hers, teeth nipping at her lips, her tongue, as if suddenly Jack couldn't get enough of her, that he needed her to breathe.

Harleen grabbed his head between her hands, rising up on her knees a little, her own kisses meeting his with equal desperation. She ground her hips against him, her hands moving through his hair holding fistsfuls in her hands, bending his head back as she took from him just as much as he was taking from her. Jack's hands slid up her legs in soft gentle strokes, but then he would drag his nails down her skin leaving red marks in his wake which only caused Harleen to groan in delight. She found she liked the mix of pleasurable caresses with just enough pain to make her body feel aware, tight, wanton.

Jack's mouth glided to her throat and she gasped at the feel of his teeth against her skin. He sucked, then bit down, followed by soft kisses against her skin. He was driving her mad with want. Then his hands were behind her back, finding the zipper of her dress. She thought about stopping him...they had crossed the doctor patient line days ago, but this was new territory. And Harleen found she didn't care about that; she only cared about Jack.

The sound of Jack yanking the zipper of her dress down had her moaning against his mouth. Jack smiled gliding his fingers up her silken back until he found the strap of her bra. Within moments his nimble fingers had unhooked her bra. She felt him chuckle softly against her throat.

Harleen gasped at the sudden release of pressure from her bra strap coming loose.

Jack groaned against her neck. “Harley...mine. My Harley.”

Jack tugged her dress down taking her bra down as well. He pulled away from her mouth as he removed the fabric, his eyes heated. He stared at her naked breasts. Harleen felt like she was holding her breath, waiting to see if he would reject her. She wasn't as confident about her body as she made herself out to be...she hadn't been with anyone in ages, focused on her career, on making a better life, but now...she bit her bottom lip watching him.

Jack exhaled slowly. “So beautiful...” his voice came out in a whisper. “Oh Harley...” He slowly placed his hands over her breasts. Harleen arched her back with a soft moan. “Oh Jack, Jack...”

He squeezed gently before he dragged his fingers down over her breasts. Jack cupped her breasts, rolling his thumbs over her nipples slowly, watching the way they hardened even more under his touch.

Harleen's breath came out ragged, his touch was in equal measure fire and electricity, but then she inhaled sharply when Jack's tongue rolled over her right nipple. Jack pulled her close again, his mouth hungrily exploring the soft, creamy hills and valley of her breasts. Harleen shivered with pleasure her hands running through his thick hair holding his head to her breasts. After a few moments of licking and sucking, Jack started to bite. Not so hard that he broke the skin, just enough that there was the hint of pain again mixed with the pleasure of him sucking, licking and kissing her breasts. Jack growled twisting around and dumped her on the couch before he crawled on top of her.

He sucked the nipple of one breast into his mouth, his tongue twirled around her nipple, his teeth scraping against the tender flesh listening to the sweet sounds of her gasps of pleasure. His hands ran up her thighs, pushing her dress up until he was at her panties. The fingers of one hand were wrapped around the side of her underwear, fighting the urge to yank them down, the urge was strong...he wanted her...his...his Harley, wanted to bury his mouth in her, to taste her...

“Mine” he kept thinking to himself. Mine...she is mine. The one thing in his life besides his “work” that was completely his...untouched by Bruce, by the Wayne fortune, the Wayne name...by Gotham. She was his. His Harleen Quinzel, his Harley Quinn.

Harleen cradled his head against her breast. “Oh Jack...Jack...” she whispered softly.

“Mmmm...” Jack growled, his mouth latched to the soft round underside of her left breast. Harleen groaned, her hips rolling, looking for some sort of friction. Her whole body was hot, burning; every part felt overly sensitive. Jack's fingers were still wrapped around the side of her panties, but he didn't pull them down as much as she wanted him to, she could just feel his fist rubbing against her hip while he switched breasts, sucking, flicking his tongue over the nipple, his mouth drifting just past her nipple and biting down again. The fingers of his other hand tangled in her hair, tugging her head back.
Harleen gasped. One hand was in his hair, balling his hair in her fist, while her other hand caressed his shoulders, brushing over the fine fabric of his suit. He sucked, shifting position, placing one of his thighs between her legs now, rubbing, giving Harleen the friction she wanted.

Harleen gasped, her hips jerking. She was turned on to the point that if Jack didn't take her she might cry when they both heard Jack's cell phone go off. At first they both ignored it, Jack's mouth sliding down to start nibbling his way along her torso, but the ringing would cease only for a moment, then just start again.

Finally Jack frowned sitting up with a muttered, “Fuck.”

Harleen wanted to drag him back down, but she didn't, swallowing down a heavy sigh. She simply watched, trying to catch her breath while Jack pulled the phone out of his jacket's inner pocket. Harleen lay where she was, her dress around her waist, her breasts exposed covered in bites and slowly blossoming bruises. Jack grinned down at her, his eyes roaming over her naked breasts, the way her dress was pushed up past her hips...

Harleen giggled blushing and biting her lips, blue eyes smoldering with want.

“What?” Jack frowned sounding slightly annoyed. “Alright fine.” Jack hung up, sliding the phone back into his pocket.

“That was Alfred. Seems I received a summons.” Jack looked dangerously irritated as he sat back. Harleen pushed herself up pulling her dress and bra up at the same time.

“Court summons?”

“No, our friend Cobblepot apparently sent a message for me...the messenger won't leave until he delivers the message personally.” Jack reached over and gently turned Harleen around sliding her bra straps up her arms and hooking it back into place before he tenderly pulled her dress up, sliding the zipper up, though not before kissing the back of her neck.

“A messenger?” Harleen stood up tugging the skirt of her dress down. Jack ran his hands through his hair as he watched her. He was frustrated...he wanted her badly, but he had to take care of this—situation.

He stood up taking her hand and turning her around, pressing her up against his chest. Jack stared down at her running one hand through her hair. He brushed his lips against hers.

“My Harley...” he whispered.

Harleen reached up to cup his face between her hands. “Always Jack...I'll always be yours.”

He grinned capturing her mouth in a deep kiss before he pulled away reluctantly.

“Why don't you go freshen up before we return,” Jack purred, his fingers playing with a lock of her hair wrapping it around his fingers.

“Then we will go see what old Cobblebutt wants.”

“Alright...” Harleen purred too, enjoying the slight tug he gave her hair before he pointed to the bathroom. She closed the door behind her stopping to stare at herself in the mirror. Harleen reached behind her and unzipped the dress, tugging it down pass her breasts, then slipped her arms out of the straps of her bra to look at herself. Her neck, shoulders and breasts were covered in light bruises and bite marks. Harleen's smile was bright. He had marked her—she was his, just like he said, she thought as she ran her forefinger over her slightly swollen lips. She was all Jack Wayne's.

When they arrived back at the manor Jack pulled the motorcycle right up to the main door parking it behind a smaller car, by the looks of it a black Chevrolet Spark. On the doorstep a young man was standing in a uniform. He looked uncomfortable in a high neck navy coat with brass buttons, navy slacks with a stripe down the leg, a belt and a box-like hat that had a family crest on it. Jack pressed his lips together, his eyes going wide when he saw the cap's family crest...Cobblepot.

The young man was sipping from a cup of tea with Alfred when Jack and Harleen pulled up.

“Master Jack, this is Mr. Oswald Cobblepott's messenger Lance; he has a message that he can only hand over to you.”

Jack gave Lance a once over giggling, his earlier anger seemingly gone. “Oh...well okay Lance. I'm here.”

Lance handed Alfred back the cup looking nervous as he pulled out an envelope from his coat's pocket near his hip.

“Here you are sir.” The young man handed Jack the envelope. The envelope was made from fine linen with a wax seal that had the same crest on it as the young man's hat. Jack broke the seal opening the envelope and pulled out the letter inside, the paper making a soft rustle as he pulled it out. Opening it up, Harleen watched as Jack's eyes roamed swiftly over the paper and then he burst out laughing.

“He isn't serious, is he?” Jack looked over the top of the letter at the young man who had delivered it. The young man nodded. “Yes, sir. Mr. Cobblepot is very serious.”

Alfred frowned glancing at Jack then Harleen. “Master Jack, may I inquire...”

“Cobblepot has challenged me to a duel because I have stained his honor or some such nonsense.” Jack laughed again, genuinely amused at the situation.

Alfred frowned. “Master Jack I don't know if this is really a laughing matter. Mr. Cobblepot is quite...vehement in his views. I think he may be serious about this duel of his.”

Jack grinned. “Oh I have no doubt that he is serious, but I wouldn't be surprised if he thinks I will decline. So I gather you are to wait for an answer?”

The young man nodded. “Yes, sir. I am.”

“Well, you can tell Cobblepot that I accept his duel. Just send me the time, place and, as is custom, I will choose the weapons...which will be fencing. Oswald thinks I'm too chicken to face him...well the joke will be on him.”

The young man looked relieved to finally be allowed to go. “Thank you sir—I will let him know.”

Alfred frowned. “Your brother is not going to be happy about this.”

Jack’s grin was wide. “Oh Alfie, you just gave me another reason to do this!”

Alfred sighed. “Master Jack, Mr. Cobblepott is known to be quite good at fencing...I just don't know if this is a wise course of action.”
Jack came up to Alfred wrapping his arm around the older man's shoulders. “Alfred, remember, I'm pretty good at fencing too.”

“I do remember Master Jack...just...” Alfred shook his head while Jack gave the butler's shoulders a squeeze. “Just don't tell Bruce. I'm sure I can get this all taken care of before Ms. Vicki Vale shows up. Bruce will never have to know.” Jack chuckled softly with a shake of his head.

Alfred sighed again. “Unless you lose Master Jack, then everyone will know,” the butler warned. “Cobblepott will make sure of it.”

“Guess I better not lose then, should I? Don't worry...I won't lose. Besides I can't lose in front of my girl now can I?” Jack winked at Harleen.

Alfred looked miserable.

After dinner that night, Jack wanted Harleen to meet him in the gym. Before she went, Alfred asked softly, “Miss Harleen, might I ask a favor of you?”

Alfred smiled at her. “Please watch out for Master Jack. He has a tendency to be...reckless.”

Harleen stepped closer to Alfred, surprising the older man when she wrapped her arms around him. “I will Alfred.”

Alfred patted her back with a whispered, “Thank you Miss Harleen.”

Harleen came down to the gym wearing a pair of red jacquard yoga pants and a black revere tank-top, her blonde hair piled up on the top of her head in a messy bun. The bites and bruises showed, but since it was just the two of them here she didn't think much about it.

When she arrived, she saw Jack stretching. She stopped in the doorway to watch for a few minutes, her eyes taking in his lean, muscled form. Jack wore a pair of tight calf-length black spandex shorts and a tank-top of the same color, except there were purple striping down the sides. He had his back to her while he bent over touching his hands to the floor. Harleen let herself enjoy the view, a light blush on her cheeks because of the terribly unprofessional thoughts she was having—not that being professional with Jack during their private moments was much of a concern anymore, she acknowledged. Then Jack giggled. “Going to stand there all evening looking at me like a piece of meat Harley?”

Harleen blushed with a light giggle. “Hi Jack.”

Jack turned around with a grin. He started to say something then stopped, his eyes roaming over her neck and chest where the bites and bruises he had left on her were clearly visible. His eyes followed to the marks that disappeared under her top, a lopsided grin dancing along his lips before his gaze met her eyes again.

“Harley.” He said the name he had given her with such emotion that Harleen felt herself melting... inside. He held out a hand to her and she immediately walked over taking it. Jack tugged her close, wrapping an arm around her waist, his other hand cradling the back of her head as he kissed her. Jack pressed her body close to his. The kiss danced over her mouth and tongue causing her body to become fully aware. Harleen clung to him desperate for more, but all too soon Jack ended the kiss. He rubbed his nose against hers, his eyes smoldering as he gently nipped her lips. “Ready to help me practice for my duel Harls?”

Harleen frowned then. She wasn't uncertain of Jack's ability; she had sparred with him, but what bothered her was not knowing Cobblepot's skill. “Are you sure about this Jack?”

Jack laughed taking a hold of her hand and led her over to the mats where at the edge of the mat lay two foils.

“I'm certain. Cobblepot wants to play this sort of game, well I can play too. I like games.” Jack released Harleen's hand and picked up one of the foils. He performed a few swift movements with it before winking at her. “He isn't the only one to learn fencing.”

Jack picked up the other foil and handed it to her. Harleen cringed. “I know nothing about fencing Jack!”

“I know. Just stand there with it and look pretty for right now.” He grinned at her with an eyebrow wiggle.

Harleen frowned, but did as he asked watching while Jack went through a series of lunges and stabs. “Is there anything you don't know how to do?” she asked while watching the way his muscles shifted.

Jack grinned. “Well, I can't fly a plane very well.”

“But you can fly one?” Harleen asked.

Jack grinned. “A little, never received my license though. Now Bruce, he has his flying license and his own plane.

“I don't really care about what Bruce can do.” Harleen made a face which had Jack laughing. “You are so cute.”

She blushed. Jack went through a few more moves. “Do any of these moves have names?” she inquired.

Jack grinned. “Ah, a chance to use my French again. By the way, did you ever translate what I said to you?”

“No...I'm not good with languages. I only took enough German to fulfill the requirements at college.” Harleen frowned. “Like math—never was my strong suit.”

Jack laughed. “Then I'm going to teach you.”

He stepped forward in a lunge, his blade smacking against Harleen's making her yelp in surprise. He laughed. “That is called Attaque au Fer and this one—is called Coulé or glissade.” Here Jack slid his blade along the one that Harleen held.

“Everyone loves that move.” He gave her a wink as he stepped back and snapped the foil out. Harleen was watching him with rapt attention. He is so beautiful, she thought to herself. Just watching the way he moves is like watching live art playing out, she mused.
Jack shifted suddenly. He brought his rear leg (his left) in front of his right and sprinted toward her. Harleen squeaked in surprise holding the blade out. Jack only tapped it as he passed, turning on the ball of his foot with enough elegance to make a skilled dancer envious. “That one is called a Flèche.”

“Did you ever compete in fencing...or any of the sports you know?” Harleen asked with genuine curiosity. Jack snorted. “No. I was always seen as too aggressive, too loose with the rules and I didn't take any of it seriously enough.” He shrugged lightly. “It was all pretty silly if you ask me, but who knew I would be challenged to a duel or that fencing would come in handy?” Jack laughed

He suddenly turned, coming in close, moving fast toward her. Harleen instinctively put up the blade she held to block. Jack drove her backwards until her back was up against the wall. Jack's body was pressed up against hers, the swords caught at the hilt, his other hand having hit the wall next to her head. His voice dropped down to a warm whisper.

His light blue-green eyes dropped down to watch the heaving of her breasts as she sucked in air. He could almost feel the beat of her heart as she gazed into his face. Jack tossed down his foil, grabbing hers and throwing it away as well. He cupped her face in his hands and kissed her hard.

Harleen groaned melting into the kiss. Jack hands dropped from her cheeks to grabbed her hips, his fingers digging into the stretchy fabric. His mouth glided over hers, their tongues brushing and sliding together. Harleen ground against him suddenly, one leg wrapping around his waist. Jack caught her thigh and lifted her up pressing her against the wall harder. She wrapped both her legs around his waist gasping when Jack grabbed at the tender skin of her neck with his teeth again. His hands moved down to her rear, squeezing as he pressed her up against the wall.

He ground himself against her, pushing against her warmth. She could feel how hard he was pressing against her, rubbing, thrusting...Harleen started panting. He had her held up against the wall firmly enough that he could bring one hand over to cup her breast, squeezing gently, then pinching her nipple through the fabric of her top, eliciting a pleased gasp from her. He chuckled, hissing against her throat, she could feel the warm tickle of his breath against her neck. “You like that Harley...like it a little rough?”

“Come for me Harley...come for me...” Jack grabbed her bottom lip between his teeth. He sucked on it, pulling her lip slowly.

“Uhahhuhhh....oh Jack...Jack...”Harleen's eyes rolled. He was pressing just right, the way he was moving his hips she couldn't think straight. He yanked her shirt down. She was vaguely aware of the tear of material then his mouth was on her breast, Jack's tongue rolling over her nipple.

Harleen cried out, an orgasm ripping through her, burning like a dying star, so hot, so intense that for a moment, if she had passed out, she would not have been surprised. Jack's kisses on her breast slowed to sensual tender pecks that traveled up her neck until he reached her mouth. He moaned softly, his tongue dancing with hers.

After a few more moments of intense and sensual kissing, Jack stepped back, Harleen dropped her legs thought her knees were wobbly and her legs didn't want to hold her up. He pulled her top up before he stroked her face tenderly. “You should get some sleep.”

“We...I mean...you can...come to my room if you want.” Harleen offered quietly.

Jack grinned. “Not yet, it's not time yet. But it's closer...definitely closer, my Harley.”

Jack stepped back, smiled, reaching for her hand. “Let me walk you back.”

At the door to her room Jack cupped her face staring hard into her blue eyes. His voice was low, soft, but intense. “You are precious to me. Remember that, no matter what happens...whatever that might be...you are precious to me. Remember that.”

Jack grinned and kissed the tip of her nose leaving a bewildered Harleen swaying in the hallway.
Harleen's dreams were filled with Jack. Her subconscious conjured him naked, looking down on her with those intense eyes of his boring into her very soul. He was drawing his fingers along her jaw, a sweet caress that flowed down her neck to her breasts, yet she could feel it, her nerves stimulated everywhere. It was such a warm feeling, it curled her toes and made the butterflies in her stomach turn into a tornado. She was burning everywhere he touched her. He had just lowered his mouth to hers when suddenly she heard a strange tinkling noise. Harleen tried to push the sound away, but she heard it again, the dream dissolving like so much mist.

She woke up feeling groggy and unsatisfied, the sound of her cellphone ringing on her bedside table being the culprit that ruined her dream. Harleen rolled over grabbing her pillow, pulling it over her head, hoping the sound would go away, but at the last moment she reached over for the damn dream shattering device. When she picked the phone up, she had to blink her eyes a few more times, trying to focus on the number. Suddenly it became clear and she saw that it was her mother. With a confused expression, she pushed the button.

“Mom?” Harleen's voice was full of shock.

“No. It's me.”

Harleen frowned. It was her step-father, Doug, on the other end. “What do you want? Why are you calling on my mom's phone?” Her voice was flat and clipped.

Harleen sat up running a hand through her hair, reaching over to pick up the clock on her bedside table. It was almost ten in the morning. Damn, she had over slept.

“I wanted to let you know that your mother's funeral is today at four p.m.” Her step-father's voice had that arrogant, “I hate you” quality it had had all her life. It took a moment for the words to register. Harleen's chest constricted, she couldn't breathe for a moment, everything in the room narrowed down to just her phone.

“What did you say?” Her voice came out in a whisper.

“Your mom's funeral is this afternoon.” Her step-father repeated with irritation.

“What happened?? What do you mean funereal?? What happened to my mother?!!” Harleen tried not to, but she screamed into the phone.

“She had a heart attack this weekend—it was instant.” Her step-father sighed. “If you want to come the funeral, it's today at Musgrove Memorial Gardens. The service is at that church your mom liked to go to...” That was when the phone went dead. Doug had hung up on her.

Harleen hadn't spoken to her mother in years, not since she left home. That decision had come (actually Harleen had decided to leave nearly the first week Doug had moved in) not long after her mother and Doug had started to have their own kids, but now...her mother was dead. Whatever tie she had had in the world (excluding extended family of which there were none that she spoke to) were gone, vanished, just like that. Harleen Quinzel was adrift in the world, her one anchor...gone.

“I'm an orphan...” she whispered.
Harleen dropped her phone onto the covers of the bed, covering her face, her whole body rocked with deep sobs.

Jack sipped his coffee, his eyes constantly straying to the doorway, his notebook that he had opened in front of him, forgotten. Alfred was flipping pancakes glancing over and watching Jack’s intense interest in the kitchen doorway.

“Master Jack, maybe you should go upstairs and check on Miss Harleen? You can take her breakfast to her.”

Jack jerked in surprise, (surprise being something he seldom felt except around Alfred and now, Harley) glancing over at Alfred who smiled, already holding a tray set up with a plate of pancakes, syrup, butter, strawberries, a cup of coffee, juice and a couple of sausages. The older man set the tray down in front of Jack before he made a shooing motion at him.

The younger man laughed. “Alright. Thanks Alfred.”

“Anytime Master Jack.” Alfred smiled serenely turning back to clean up.

Jack carried the tray up the stairs until he arrived at Harleen's door. Balancing the tray carefully with one hand, he was about to knock on her door with the other when he heard the sounds of muffled crying. Jack frowned leaning in to listen. Sure enough, he could hear Harleen crying. Jack knocked. “Harley, may I come in?”

It was quiet for a moment, but then he heard a soft answer. “Yes.”

Jack opened her door, coming in sideways with the tray. “I brought you breakfast?” He turned around to see her sitting on her bed, still in her pajamas, her hair a mess, her eyes bloodshot, cheeks tear-stained. Jack hurriedly put the tray down on a nearby dresser and rushed over to her. “Harley, what happened?”

He climbed up onto the bed and wrapped his arms around her. Harleen buried her face against his chest. “My step-father called. My mother...she died...her funeral is today. He didn't even bother to tell me she...” Harleen swallowed hard on the verge of tears. “We, we weren't close after she married him...he was one of the reasons I left home as soon as I could. I hadn't talk to her in years, but...” She took a deep, shuddering breath.

Jack held her close running his hands up and down her back. “Shh...It's alright.”

Holding her tightly, Jack rocked her gently. She could hear him whispering to her, though she couldn't hear the words. Still, the soft warmth of his breath against her hair and his arms snug around her did more than anything else in calming her. Harleen wrapped her arms around his waist. He eventually laid down with her so that her head was resting on his chest. She had stopped crying, just breathing deeply, her arm around his middle.

“When is the funeral?” He asked the question softly.

“Today, at four,” she said quietly squeezing his waist.

“I'll take you, unless you don't want me to.” Jack kissed the top of her head.
“I would like that,” she murmured, squeezing his waist again.

Jack smiled and kissed the top of her head. “You go shower. Let me take care of everything else alright?”

Harleen's bottom lip trembled. “Thank you Jack.”

He kissed the top of her head again sitting up; he cupped her face between his hands staring into her blue eyes. “I would do anything for you. Always remember that Harley.”

Soon Jack and Harleen were sitting in the back of a black BMW 7 series limo-sedan. The funeral was located on the edge of a suburb outside of Bludhaven and the drive time from Gotham took almost two hours. One of the Wayne's drivers was at the wheel and Jack had seen to getting Harleen a dress for the funeral. Jack was dressed in an extra-slim three piece suit of Italian virgin wool, matched with a blue silk shirt and black tie, all tailored to fit him perfectly. To top off the look of money and sophistication he wore, Jack's hands were covered in a pair of black leather gloves. He looked devastatingly handsome, Harleen thought.

She wore a dress Jack purchased for her merely an hour before they left. He had insisted that she should allow him to do that for her. He had held her face gently between his hands, gazing into her eyes.

“Let them know that you are better than them Harley. He treated you like you didn't matter. He made your mother do the same. You are going to walk into the funeral and you are going to show them that no matter how hard he tried, he didn't tear you down.” Then Jack had kissed her and suddenly everything had been all right. So now she was dressed in a black Marina jeweled neck shift dress and a pair of black suede Louboutin heels, simple, and understated diamond studs in her ears. Her hair was down, brushed and shining beautifully. She looked like a million dollars, Jack had said, adding “I should know.”

They sat in the back of the car, Jack holding her hand in his lap between both of his glove clad hands. Harleen was done crying. She had shed all the tears her mother deserved. That was what Jack had told her, and he was right. Why should she cry anymore for a woman who hadn't valued her enough as her daughter to protect her from someone like her step-father.

During the drive with soft music playing through the speakers, Jack put his arm around her shoulders. “Tell me about your step-father...” Jack murmured softly.

Harleen frowned as she rested her head on his shoulder. “He told me from the moment he walked in the house that I wasn't wanted. Called me a whore, bitch...cunt...every name he could think of. He monitored my homework, what books I read, what music I listened to...and the worst part was, my mother let him. She never spoke up for me, not once. And it wasn't long before she started calling me names too. I was so happy the day I turned eighteen.”

“What about your grandparents?” Jack asked as he rubbed his hand up and down her arm.

“The one still alive was too senile to care. My aunts, uncles, all believed Doug...they never liked my biological father. I became everyone's target. If the sun didn't shine, then it was probably somehow my fault.”

Harleen didn't see it but Jack’s eyes narrowed slight. “Did you believe the things he said about you?”
Jack asked softly.

Harleen sighed, thinking. “For a long time, yes. I guess sometimes I still do... I guess that was one of the reasons I became a psychiatrist...to understand why I felt that way.” Jack placed his fingertips under her chin, lifting her face so that he could look into her eyes. His held her gaze. “You are worth more than any of those people. You are worth the world to me Harley. Remember that...” Then he leaned in and kissed her. Harleen forgot everything for those few precious moments when his lips and tongue were entangled with her own.

At one point during the drive, Jack started to sing softly to her, easing her troubled mind and emotions.

“...Only you can make this change in me
For it's true you are my destiny
When you hold my hand
I understand the magic that you do
You're my dream come true
My one and only you...”

Harleen blushed gazing up at him as he sang to her, a grin on his handsome face. His voice, his eyes calmed her until at one point she had dozed off with her head against his shoulder.

The church was a small quaint brick building, nothing overly grand. There were several vehicles filling the church's small parking lot and more parked along the sidewalk. Harleen frowned looking out the window. She could see people milling about speaking in small groups or heading into the church for the service. As she watched, she was able to pick out cousins, her aunts as well as other people she remembered from her childhood. She saw her half-siblings, walking into the church, and for a moment, she thought she saw her step-father. All people who had ignored her for years as if her step-father's treatment of her had been all her own doing. Jack noticed the way Harleen was looking out the window, the furrow between her brows and the slight frown on her lips. He reached out to touch her shoulder.

“Are you all right?” he asked gently.

Harleen turned around settling back into the seat. “Yeah, just...just a lot of people I haven't seen in years.”

Jack grinned as he grasped her her hand and kissed her knuckles. She smiled, enjoying the feel of the leather against her palm and the press of his lips against her knuckles.

“You'll be fine. All eyes will be on you and everyone will know that you don't need them and never did.” He chuckled pressing his lips to her knuckles one more time. “They are all just bugs Harley...they don't mean anything because they are nothing. You never needed them,” he repeated.

She blushed. “Thank you, Jack.”
He grinned. “Just telling you the truth.”

Everyone's eyes were on the slick and clearly expensive car as the driver pulled into the parking lot. Harleen glanced out the tinted side window of the car. She felt both shy and exhilarated despite the fact that she was attending her mother's funeral. She wasn't really sure how her mother would feel if she saw her daughter now...would she care? Somehow Harleen felt sure her mother would find some fault with her daughter now, despite the degree, the car, or the man with whom she arrived.

The black, vindictive part of Harleen's heart was happy to see the stares she received when Jack strolled around the car after the driver had opened the door for him. He held a black silver handled cane in his left hand as he stepped around to her side of the car. Everyone stared as Jack Wayne opened the door and took her hand. She exited the vehicle wearing the expensive clothing Jack had given to her. Only someone living under a rock would not see that she was with Jack Wayne and it was Jack Wayne wrapping her hand around his arm and escorting her into the church.

Harleen glanced at Jack while they made their way to some seats near the front of the church that had been set aside for family, (though the usher, one of her step-father's brothers tried to put them in the back only to be “redirected” by one of her mother's sisters...which probably had a lot to do with Harleen's escort and not the fact that despite everything, Harleen was still her mother's daughter.) Jack smiled at her, patting her hand after they were seated. He leaned in close, his lips tickling her ear.

“You're doing great,” he whispered. “Just look at them and think to yourself this is all a joke...all of it Harley. Everything these people have strived for, struggled for, all of it is just one big joke. Because in the end, this is where we all end up. Pickled in a pine box.”

Harleen wanted to be scandalized by what Jack had just said, but as her eyes wandered up to the coffin holding her mother's remains, all she could do was giggle. He was right! Why was she upset that a woman who hadn't really loved her enough to fight for her was dead? All her mother's preaching, scolding and viciousness came flooding back to her. All the time her step-father had hurt her both physically and mentally, the people who didn't care enough to keep in contact with her...who just didn't care..too busy with their petty little lives. Why was she caring? That was when Harleen giggled.

Jack lifted a brow at her in question, a smile dancing across his lips.

And then the service began. Harleen could see her step-father from the corner of her eyes glaring daggers at her as she and Jack, like a couple of little kids, their heads together, giggled at everything that was being said by the pastor about the good life her mother had led, how much her family and community loved her et cetera and et cetera... When her “family” started to take the pulpit and go on about how much of a saint her mother was, Harleen had to cover her mouth to stop herself from laughing out loud. Jack tickled her side causing her to squirm which had Harleen giggling even more. He winked at her, pulling her closer, his arm around her waist while the two of them snorted and chuckled during the whole service.

Finally, it was time to walk past the casket before heading to the cemetery. Harleen and Jack stepped in line with the rest of the family (though they trailed in the back just before friends and guests.) As Harleen walked up to her mother's casket she stopped and stared down. The funeral home had performed an admirable job on her mother. Her hair was dyed blonde and perfectly coiffed, her make-up done well and the dress was a simple blue dress, just perfect for being buried in, if there was such a thing as a perfect dress for that sort of thing. For a moment, Harleen was struck by how much her mother actually hadn’t changed in all the years since Harleen had left.

Holding Jack’s hand, she leaned in close and hissed. “I thought I was sad you were gone, but now I realized you were dead to me from the moment I left when you chose that fucking dick over your own daughter. Goodbye mother.”

Jack laughed aloud. “That’s my girl!”

Soon the procession of cars was on its way to the cemetery for the last leg of the funeral before heading over to the family home for the wake. Jack pulled Harleen to him once they were in the car and nibbled her ear, eliciting a laugh from her. “Jack!!”

“Mm...I can't wait to get you alone,” he whispered.

Harleen blushed as Jack's nibbling moved slowly down her neck. “I thought we might get a hotel room and stay the night before heading back to Gotham.”

“Really?” Harleen looked surprised.

Jack smiled gently, licking her mouth, but before he could say anything else, the car had maneuvered down the road, turning onto the path that led into the cemetery. The driver parked alongside a grassy, headstone covered hill where everyone was filing out of their cars, making their way to the gravesite.

Everyone in attendance stared at Jack and Harleen as they made their way to the site. There were several rows of folding chairs set out for family and guests that faced the open grave. Jack led Harleen over to the chairs, taking two seats near the front. The pastor waited until everyone was seated (or standing) before he continued, pretty much beginning where he had left off in the church, saying a few more words about the deceased.

Jack leaned in close to Harleen, his lips brushing against her ear as he said.

“Do you know what the death rate is around here?”

Harleen glanced sideways at him grinning. “What?”

“Really?” Harleen looked surprised.

Harleen glanced sideways at him grinning. “What?”

“One person at a time.” Jack giggled.

Harleen snickered covering her mouth as the pastor's eyes slid sideways at her and Jack. Jack wrapped his arm around Harleen's waist, pulling her close, his fingers tickling her side. She squirmed, the two of them continuing to act like children, much as they had in the church. Harleen had to bite the inside of her cheek to prevent herself from laughing out loud.

Jack licked her ear, which the older women behind them saw, as clearly indicated by the scandalized gasped both Jack and Harleen heard behind them. Jack glanced back at the elderly ladies and winked before he whispered another joke to Harleen.

“A passenger taps a taxi driver on his shoulder. The driver shits himself with shock, swerving, nearly hitting a bus and stops inches from a shop window.

"Fuck-me, you're jumpy aren't yer, I only tapped your shoulder," says the passenger. "Sorry," says the cabby, "It's my first day. I've been driving a hearse for twenty years!"
Both of them snorted, drawing more attention to themselves with their badly hidden giggles.

After about half an hour, the service came to an end, the coffin lowered into the ground and everyone scattering to their cars to head toward the family home for the wake. Harleen walked with her hand in Jack's back to the car. Jack squeezed her hand.

“You ready for the wake?”

She frowned. “I don't know. I haven't been back home in years. I'm actually surprised they're still in the same house.”

Jack brought her hand up kissing her knuckles. “You'll be fine.”

Harleen grinned. “You're right. Just walk in, show them they didn't destroy me, no matter how hard they tried.”

Jack held her hand while their driver guided their vehicle through the small, ancient suburb. The houses all looked to have been built around the 1940's maybe '50's. Each one looked like a cookie-cutter of the next, every lawn nearly identical, with only a few standing out because of weird lawn ornaments, flowers or different shrubs along the front. Harleen frowned, her mind flooded with the memories of her early childhood growing up on these streets. When she saw her family home, Harleen's hand tightened in Jack's. Oddly, little had changed. It was still the long ranch home, still a boring white, the lawn had a few more flowers in the flower beds around the front, but other than that, nothing had changed.

Jack's driver pulled up in front of the house. Jack leaned forward to speak with the driver.

“I'll call when we're ready to leave, which won't be long.”

The driver nodded. “Yes sir, Mr. Wayne.”

Jack slipped out, walked around to open Harleen's door, and took her hand again to help her out of the car. Just like at the church, Harleen and Jack received numerous of stares. They walked up the short cement walkway to the main door and stepped inside, ignoring every stare they received.

The small house was full of people, most of which Harleen recognized. Aunts, uncles, a few cousins, family friends...all the people who willingly cut ties with her over her mother's marriage to Doug. Harleen frowned, memories of how the house used to be flooding her mind while she looked around. When she had lived here, before Doug, her mother had had pictures of her growing up on the walls. Her mother had removed all pictures of Harleen's dad when she was little, so Harleen could not remember how her father looked. Those memories had long ago been eradicated. And then Doug had come into their lives and suddenly Harleen wasn't as important to her mother any more.

Harleen shook the pain away focusing on the now. Jack smiled at her, giving her strength with his presence and support.

Harleen was about ready to tell Jack she wanted to go when Doug came pushing through the mourners to come right up to her.

“You need to leave now,” Doug snarled glaring at Harleen, poking her hard in the chest. Then his muddied eye focus was on Jack. “You’re not welcome here either.”

Harleen felt something in her snap. She had put up with his hatred, name calling, and even the occasional slap across the face while she was growing up. He had called her a slut, whore, a tramp telling her mother that she lied, that she made suggestions to him, that she was sleeping around when she was in high school...terrible things that were wholly false.

Harleen narrowed her eyes. “I have just as much right to be here as you. I'm her daughter!”

All eyes turned toward them.

“You stopped being her daughter the moment you walked out of this house!” Doug seethed. “I only told you she died as a courtesy!”

Harleen snarled. “Well thank you so fucking much!! You turned my mother against me!”

Her words provoked Doug; his hand lifted to backhand Harleen, but Jack caught the man's wrist easily. Jack's eyes were flat, his expression cheerful, but his voice had a low and deadly quality to it.

“You touch her again and you'll regret it. You're are extremely luckly I didn't break your finger just now.”

Doug stared hard at Jack and whispered heatedly. “What are you? Her pimp?”

Jack's smile widened, but it didn't reach his eyes. He threw Doug's hand away. “Apologize.”

Doug hissed. “Take your bitch and get out of my house.”

Jack took a threatening step toward Doug, prompting the older man to take a few stumbling steps back in surprise. He was clearly not accustomed to being disobeyed or having someone stand up to him. Harleen grabbed Jack, wrapping her arms around, and glared at her step-father. “Let's go Jack. He isn't worth it.”

Jack narrowed his eyes. They seemed to almost glow, but he let Harleen pull him back. Jack smiled again. “You know what they say about revenge...it's sweet and not fattening.” With that Jack laughed taking Harleen by the hand, leading her out of what had once been her childhood home, but was now just a house she would never enter or have to think of again.

Once they in the car again, Jack pulled her close and wrapped his arms around her shoulders.

“I think we are going to be the focus of conversation for a while,” Jack said with a chuckle.

Harleen sighed, but her breath ended with a giggle at the end. Jack added, “It was pretty funny. I love it! I think we should stay the night here before heading out again for Gotham.”

Harleen blinked in surprise. “But...I...we didn't pack anything.”

Jack laughed. “Don't worry my sweet...I have everything taken care of.”

Jack had the driver take them out of the suburb and drive to a hotel on the outskirts of Bludhaven. Harleen gasped in surprise. She wasn't sure exactly what she was expecting, but it wasn't this. The hotel was huge. The large sign announced the name of the place: The Renaissance Hotel. It was a large twenty-six floor building. Harleen was certain that the place had not been here when she was little, but now it was one of several hotels that dominated the area. The driver pulled up to the main doors and a valet stepped over to open the door for Harleen. She glanced over at Jack, but he had already climbed out, quickly moving around and telling the young man, “Don't worry, I have her.”

Jack grinned and reached in to take her hand. As Jack guided her out, Harleen's gaze followed the front of the building, up, up, and up when she stepped out, counting the floors in her head.

“Jack, this place is gorgeous!” Her voice held a little note of awe.

Jack smiled. “Only the best for my girl.”

Jack turned to the young man who had come to help Harleen out. “Our bags are in the back,” he said, placing a $50 dollar bill into the young man's hand.

The valet grinned. “That you sir, right away sir!” As he dashed off to gathered their bag, Jack wrapped Harleen's arm around his. She grinned at him. “You planned this in what, less than an hour?”

Jack smirked at her. “What can I say? I'm good.”

Harleen tried the keep her mouth from dropping open as they walked into the large hotel lobby. The word that she thought of to describe the lobby was 'gorgeous.' The walls and floor of a rich brown and white marble that made the large lobby seem warm and inviting. Modern chandeliers provided the light in the vast, almost glittering lobby where several people were milling out, some sitting in the lounge area, others over by the giant aquarium that took up one whole wall. Other patrons could be seen off to the left where a large dining area with a bar filled the space. The place reminded Harleen of one of those rich luxury hotels one saw in movies. She did her best not to gape like a fool while Jack led her to the lobby counter.

As Jack led her up to the desk, the young man who had spied them going into the hotel put in a call to his editor.

Jack stepped up to the reception desk, strolling over like he owned the place (which he probably could have, if he wanted), where an older woman stood, mid-fifties, with hair that shone silver in the light which she had piled on top of her head in a fashionable messy bun. Her features were stern, but not unfriendly. She wore a white shirt with a golden-brown vest and matching skirt with her gold name tag shining with pride on her chest. Her name tag read 'Nora.'

When she saw them approach, a smile creased her face, her grey eyes sparkled.
“Hello and welcome to the Renaissance, how can I help you?” she asked in a clear voice.

On the counter sat an old fashion handled brass bell, a large book, laid open on an antique looking book-stand with an expensive looking gold and black pen settled into the seam of the book, and next to that a modern flat screen computer where Nora had been working.

Jack’s smile was charming as he leaned on the counter.

“I have a room, a suite actually, under the name Jack Wayne. I just reserved it this morning.”

The woman startled a bit when Jack mentioned his name (she clearly knew who the Wayne’s were by the slight shift in her smile).

“Mr. Jack Wayne, of course! Just a moment while I retrieve your room key and I can have someone take your luggage up to your room. How long will you be staying with us?”

Jack tapped his chin in thought. “Maybe for two days, let’s just see how thing go shall we?”

The woman turned the large open book fully to face Jack and Harleen. Jack picked up the pen and with a flair and sweep of his hand, he wrote out 'Jack Wayne.'

He handed the pen to Harleen, kissing her at the corner of her mouth. She glanced at Jack hissing under her breath. “Are you sure?”

Jack looked genuinely confused. “You're my girl, aren't you Harley? I don't care who knows we're together...especially not Bruce.” Jack grinned wide, the light seeming to catch his teeth and make them sparkle.

Harleen leaned in and signed her name under Jack's for a moment, wondering if Jack would marry her someday...if this thing they had would be...she shook her head minutely. She wasn't even sure what it was she wanted. She needed to live in the moment. The past was gone and the future would take care of itself. Not the most common attitude of a psychiatrist, but she wasn't the same person she had been when she took this job. And that was thanks to Jack.

They took the elevator up to their room traveling all the way to the 26th floor. Jack nibbled her ear in the elevator, holding her tightly against him, making her giggle again. Other people in the elevator either stared, shared a giggle, or smiled. When they finally arrived at the room, Jack lifted Harleen up in a bride-carry surprising her into a squeaking giggle as he walked her to their room. The crowd in the elevator (including the young photographer who recognized Jack) applauded the young couple (with the young man sneaking a few pictures).

“JACK!!” she laughed trying not to kick or move too much and throw off his balance.

Jack giggled as he asked, “What?”

A man who had hopped onto the elevator in the lobby, watched the two of them, quickly making notes with his thumb on his phone, even managing to get a photo...even if it wasn't at the best angle.

There were only three doors on this floor, spaced widely apart. Jack carried her down the hall to the one furthest on the right, using the card to easily open the door while holding her balanced against him. Jack pushed the door open with his hip and carried her inside.

When Harleen saw the interior of the suite, she gasped out loud. Never had she seen a room like it, not even in Wayne Manor. The room was huge (like everything about the hotel, she mused), the walls painted a warm welcoming beige with white accent walls. The floors were a continuation of the marble from the lobby, with warm fuzzy looking throw rugs and a clear glass coffee table in the middle of the room. The surrounding furniture all looking comfortable as well as expensive.

The lighting, from modern chandeliers that hung from the high ceiling, was soft, casting evening in a twilight glow. The main room contained a long plush looking couch and love seat along with a set of matching recliners, a large flat screen TV positioned on the wall over a “fake” fireplace. Across from that room, with a step leading up to it, was the bedroom. The bed was the biggest bed she had ever seen and it was round. The comforter was a clean, soft looking white, with thick heavy pillows. (She didn't quite process the idea that there was only one bed in here). But the most spectacular aspect of the room (without seeing the bathroom yet, Harleen thought) was the window that ran the entire side of the wall facing out onto the city. Jack set her down on her feet with a grin on his lips. “You like it?”

“Oh Jack!!” Harleen walked over to the window, looking out onto the city below. It wasn't as big or as densely populated as Gotham, but she thought that it was still pretty darn impressive.

Jack strolled over to her, unbuttoning his jacket as he did so and wrapped his arms around her waist, pulling her against him. “You ever think about owning the city?” Harleen frowned with a slight snort. “No, I usually only worried about getting rent and maybe owning a car.”

Jack laughed kissing the tip of her nose, then tugged at her ear with his teeth. Harleen moaned softly leaning against him.

“Why don't you go take a bath and I'll order us some room service.”

Harleen turned in his arms. Jack smiled down at her.

“What is this Jack?” she asked with a tilt her head.

Jack kissed the tip of her nose. “No question, just do.” He giggled, releasing her and turning her toward the bathroom and gave her a light swat on the rear. "Go shower or bathe. The bathtub is huge, I'll bring your night gown and toiletries to you after I order our dinner.

Harleen giggled, but she did as Jack said and went into the bathroom. She had to stop and suck in her breath. She should not have been surprised, she realized as she took in the vast the room. The inside of the bath was all dark purple marble and gold plated fixtures. If anything, the bathroom was probably the most lavish looking room in the place! Harleen knew she looked foolish with her mouth hanging open, but she had never seen anything like it.

The bathtub and shower were separate, two sinks and a mirror ran the length of one whole wall and nearly everything seemed to be crafted of polished marble! Harleen walked over to the tub to run her finger along its smooth edge. The tub was a combination bathtub and hot tub that faced another large wall-size window that looked out over the horizon. It was simply amazing. With a pleased giggle, Harleen ran the tub full of warm water, finding some hotel bubble bath in one of the cabinets under the sink, along with some thick, fluffy white towels, which probably cost more than her entire wardrobe of clothing, she thought with a smirk.
She undressed quickly (feeling a little strange with the window even though she knew she was high enough up that no one would see her). Tossing her clothing into a pile on the floor by the bathroom sinks, Harleen slipped into the tub exhaling slowly as the warm water gradually covered her body. The sweet fragrance of vanilla floating around her was highlighted by the silken pleasure of a million tiny bubbles. Harleen groaned leaning back in the tub, her arms draped along the back of it, her thick hair loose around her face as she closed her eyes.

“I could get used to this...” she murmured to herself.

She was so relaxed that she didn't hear the door softly open until Jack's smooth voice floated over to her. “Now that is a beautiful sight.”

Harleen jumped with a squeak. “Jack!”

He laughed, a deep low chuckle that resonated from his chest. He was standing by the tub holding two tall glasses, both filled with what looked to be champagne, his jacket and vest gone. He was still wearing his shirt, which he had unbuttoned to about mid-chest, the tie hanging loose around his neck. The belt around his slacks was gone and he was barefoot.

Harleen grinned, her cheeks red as she accepted the glass of champagne that Jack handed to her. Jack wrinkled his nose while grinning. “That bath looks nice—care if I join you?”

Harleen's blush deepened. “I would love that.”

Jack grinned broadly at her, showing off his perfect set of white teeth while he waggled his eyebrows at her just before he proceeded to get into the tub—with his clothes on. Harleen squealed, laughing as Jack displaced water and bubbles. He sat down beside her, laughed as well and lightly clicked his glass with hers.

“To great baths, sexy blondes and dead mothers.”

Harleen giggled, returning his toast adding, “And to dead fathers.”

They both laughed. Harleen moved closer and Jack put his arm around her shoulders with a smirk on his lips. His eyes wandered down, a slight pout creasing his brow. “The bubbles are much too high.”

She blushed leaning against him. “Well, they do pop.”

Jack laughed and downed his drink, setting the glass aside. Harleen quickly did the same. Jack took her glass then glided his fingers along her jaw tilting her face up.

“My precious Harley...” he whispered, his eyes wandering over her face just before he caressed her lips with his...a sensual draw of his tongue along the soft petals of her mouth. Suddenly Jack pulled her across to his lap. She laughed softly, the feel of the wet material under her as she climbed onto his lap; she felt funny and sexy at the same time. Jack gazed up at her. She couldn't quite read his emotions, but lust was definitely there. Jack's fingers caressed her back, his fingers skimming down below the surface of the water to grip her rear.

Harleen giggled smiling down at him, her soapy hands caressing his face and his hair. Jack pressed his front teeth into his bottom lip as his eyes wandered down to her neck and breasts where the marks he had left the day before blazed brightly on her pale skin.

“I like that I marked you,” he whispered.
Harleen rolled her hips against him. “I should mark you next.”

Jack lifted a brow. “Oh, should you now?”

Harleen giggled with a nod. “Oh yes, I should.”

She attacked his mouth, her tongue dancing along his as she wrapped her arms around his neck. He pressed her close, his hands traveling up her back, fingers sliding along her neck and shoulders. He grabbed her wet hair and pulled her head back, exposing her neck. Jack dragged his teeth down her throat, his tongue flicking out to taste the water running down her neck. Harleen groaned, her fingers balling up the wet fabric of his shirt while she rolled her hips. She could feel him, wet and tight through his slacks, hard against her hot sensitive flesh. She ground against him slowly, the water splashing in lazy waves, cresting the edge of the tub to splash onto the floor.

Jack’s hungry mouth wandered down to her breast, biting softly down on her nipple before twirling his tongue gradually around the hard nub of her nipple.

Harleen moaned in delight. “Oh Jack.”

Her whole body arched, heat racing through her. Jack dragged his hand over her shoulder, his fingers pressing into her tender flesh, gliding down her front, over the soft hills and valleys of her breasts, his eyes watching with an intense gaze as droplets slowly made their way across the map of her skin. Harleen rolled her hips, the friction of his bound erection in the wet slacks pressing against her. Jack groaned as he ran a wet hand up her side, over her breast catching her nipple between his fingers and caressing it while she moved. Her breath came in rapid pants as she kept undulating against him, pressing herself along his pelvis as she rubbed herself along Jack's length, delighted at the feel of his shaft pressing through his slacks.

Jack groaned watching her face, watching the way she moved. He reached up pulling her to him. His kisses were hot and tender. Harleen came then, arching her back, her fingers digging into his shoulders. Jack pressed her hips down on him watching her moaning peak.

Jack's eyes were hooded, his blue gaze intense as he whispered. “I want you Harley.”

He released her just before he stood up, Harleen sliding off of him with a slight splash in the water. Jack, smiling, dripping wet, his dark clothes sticking to his lean form, stepped out of the tub. He unbuttoned the shirt that was sticking to him in delightful ways that Harleen greatly appreciated.

“I left you something to change into on the hanger near the sink,” he said. “Meet me in the bedroom.” Jack gave her a smile and a wink as he stepped out. Harleen was flushed, every nerve-ending in her body was on ecstatic fire as she nodded mutely at him. Jack winked at her and tossed his wet shirt into a corner of the bathroom as he stepped out.

Harleen only saw him undoing his slacks as he strolled out of the room whistling the first part of a song before he started to sing in his perfectly wonderful voice.

“Fill my heart with song
Let me sing for ever more
You are all I long for
All I worship and adore
In other words, please be true
In other words, I love you ...”

Harleen dried off and hurried over to where Jack had set her pajamas gasping in surprise when she saw the red nightie he had bought her from the vintage shop. She held up the red nightie with a blush spreading across her cheeks.

Quickly, she combed out her hair, braiding it over her shoulder, then sprayed herself with vanilla body spray before slipping on the nightie (without panties). She looked at herself in the mirror turning one way, then the other, her heart hammering in her chest.

This was it, she thought...her first night with Jack Wayne. She squeezed her eyes shut. She was in love with him, deeply, passionately, madly in love with him. Harleen smiled at herself in the mirror, then she turned and hurried out.

Jack waited for her by the large round bed with a long tray of food, wearing only a pair of silk boxers in a dark plum, almost black color. He had taken the covers off the food to reveal rib-eyed steak, whipped potatoes, asparagus, sautéed mushrooms, and bordelaise sauce with another bottle of wine, this time, Cabernet Sauvignon.

He was setting everything up when he saw her, his eyes widening with pleasure as they glided down her figure. His smile was a little lopsided and, Harleen realized with a sigh, endearing. Harleen stood with her hands behind her back, her teeth pressed into her bottom lip, blushing with pleasure. She gave him a shy look. Jack grinned with raised eyebrows.

“‘You look good enough to eat,” he intoned softly.

“I hope you don't mind that I ordered for the both of us.” He stood up to walk over to take her hand. Harleen let her eyes wander up and down his body once before she took his hand.

“‘Not at all,’’ she murmured. Jack grinned leading her over to the bed where their dinner was set out. He poured some wine into two additional glasses.

“To new beginnings.” He held his glass up.

“To new beginnings.” Harleen smiled clinking her glass with his. They both took a sip. Harleen grinned. “I'm so glad you came with me Jack.”

Jack was cutting her steak for her as he glanced up. “I'm glad I came too. Being with you is always fun.”

Harleen laughed. “You put the “fun” in funeral. I never thought I would laugh so much!”

Jack shrugged. “What can I say? I find the humor in everything.”

They both laughed, but then Jack was holding up a bite of steak for her. She smiled as she opened her mouth. Jack slid the bite of steak between her lips, his eyes heated as he watched her tongue flick out to lick the bite. His breath came a little short. No sooner was the bite of steak in her mouth than Jack dropped his fork, his hand going around her neck and pulling her to him. He covered her mouth with his, the two of them sharing the bite of steak for a moment. They both giggled, but then Jack was gathering her up and laying back on the bed, the food forgotten almost instantly.

Jack's hands roamed up under the nightie, feeling the warm smoothness of her skin, the way her round hips narrowed to her waist then flared again at her breasts, and the fact that she wore no panties just made the whole experience intoxicating.

Jack groaned. “Harley...my Harley.”

She pushed herself up to a sitting position over him, her hands spanning over his chest. She could feel his erection straining against his boxers between her legs. She rocked her hips, rubbing herself against him, drawing out gasps from Jack and a hitch in his breath while his hands traced the curves of her figure again, the tips of his fingers slowly caressing her skin.

Jack grinned and said in a husky voice, “I really like the nightie on you.”

Harleen giggled, wiggling. “I feel pretty in it.”

Jack’s groan at her wiggling on him then turned into a laugh. “You are more than pretty, my sweets.”

Jack pulled her down forcing Harleen to drop her hands on either side of his head, his mouth going for her breasts, his lips and tongue tracing the hard outline of her nipples against the fabric. Harleen groaned, arching her back, her hands shifting to cradle his head. Jack's mouth became more aggressive, biting, sucking, while his fingernails dragged down her sides causing a combination of tickles and slight pain that she wanted to go on and on.

Jack suddenly grasped her hips and flipped her over onto her back. She squealed, which made Jack laugh.

“You are so beautiful,” he whispered looking down at her. Harleen smiled up at Jack. His hair was loose, flopping over his forehead, while his smile was both seductive and full of joy...that she had caused. That aspect made her heart soar, she made him smile! She made Jack happy...what more could she ask?

Jack ran his tongue along the bottom of his upper teeth whispering in a heated voice. “I want to taste you Harley....I want to bury my tongue inside you... Harleen shivered.

“Jack...” she said his name slowly like she was letting his name caress her tongue. Jack smiled, oozing down her body, feeling the silky texture of her nightie caressing his skin. He stopped at her hips, pushing the garment up over her stomach.

He grinned wider seeing her, the slim line of curling hair, the way her creamy hips flared out into round soft curves, the tender flesh of her thighs. The desire to bite and mark her came over him stronger than before. He spread her legs gradually, as if he were opening a flower, staring down at her, watching her open and blossom before him. Harleen's heart hammered hard against her chest, her eyes glued to Jack's face. She couldn't deny she was nervous...would he be pleased with her...find her beautiful?

Jack ran his hands down her legs, then up to her hips before he rubbed her thighs, pressing his teeth into his lip while he gazed at her. The heat in his eyes told her everything she needed to know. Jack gave her a lopsided grin before he slowly, deliberately lowered himself down to her.

Harleen cried out when his tongue touched her. Feeling the warm wetness of his tongue against her sent shivers up her spine. Harleen was gasping for air when he ran the flat of his tongue up the length of her sex, taking his time. Harleen shuddered.

“Uuhhhh!!”

Jack laughed. “So sensitive!”

Harley flushed almost as red as her nightie, but before she could respond, Jack buried his tongue against her again, eliciting a gasp of pleasure from her.

Harleen cried out, arching when Jack sucked hard against the tender spot, pulling her clitoris, gently, just enough of a tug to send more ripples up her spine and deep pools of pleasure around her groin. He continued his administrations, rolling his tongue, teeth and lips over her, licking and sucking deeply, listening to the beautiful sounds of her gasping and groaning. One of his long fingered hands glided up her body to caress the nipple of one breast, rolling his fingers over the hard bud, driving Harleen to moan louder.

He loved the feel of her fingers in his hair, tugging, pulling, her nails scraping against his skull. Finally, tonight she would be all his...and he would be hers...their bodies and fates intertwined, tangled to the point that no one could ever pull them apart.

Harleen came again with blinding force, his tongue flicking playfully against her intimate lips. Feeling the way Jack's lips caressed her, then alternated with the slight pleasurable pain of his teeth, had her spiraling out of control, her cries loud and wanton. She didn't care who heard her! She rocked against him, feeling the press of his tongue, his lips! Then suddenly his tongue was replaced by the slide of his fingers into her. She wasn't expecting the firm feel of his fingers, the sudden change had her crying out again in sheer pleasure. Jack moaned softly, pushing his fingers in and out of her, watching the way they disappeared into her, then came out glistening. She was so wet and warm...he grinned, watching the way her hips thrust up to meet his fingers before he pulled them away completely.

“Jack! Jack!! I need you!” Harleen tugged at his hair causing him to laugh against her. He rose up onto his knees, licking his lips as he did. “You taste just like I thought you would; warm, sweet, delicious...”

He winked at her. Harleen blushed, her eyes twinkling with a mixture of embarrassment and pleasure.

“My turn Jack...” she purred sitting up and reaching over to tug at his boxers. Jack swallowed, watching her. For a moment he was nervous...just a slight twinge of worry that was quickly banished. Harleen gathered herself up, the red nightie falling back into place. She sat on her knees, glancing up at him once before she pulled his silk boxers down his hips. She let out an exhale of pleasure at the sight of him. Hard, thick, and just the right length to make her mouth water.

The expression on Harley's face had him grinning with pride. She ran her hands over his hips caressing the flat, muscled plains of his stomach, the sharp curves of his hip bones, her fingertips tracing the way his muscles narrowed down to his groin. He hissed softly at her touch, the gentle way her fingertips brushed over him, touching his erection just barely, her fingers feather light. Harleen slowly circled her fingers around, brushing his scrotum, making Jack jerk even more than her touch of his erection.

Harleen purred. “Oh Jack...” She cupped him with her hand and squeezed gently, just enough to make his hips jerk.

“Harley...” he hissed her name, lacing each syllable with the pleasure of her touch, with deep passionate meaning. He ran his fingers over her face while she touched him. Harley. Yes, she thought. Harley...his Harley. Harleen was just her mask. Her fingers glided delicately over his erection. For something so hard, it felt like velvet to her touch. The desire to take him into her mouth, to feel that satin soft skin of his against her lips and tongue was overpowering. She lowered her mouth to him, brushing her lips teasingly against him. His skin felt hot, the warmth of him radiating through her. When her tongue flicked out in an experimental lick, Jack shuddered in delight. Harley sucked Jack deep into her mouth, groaning at the hot feel of his satin erection against her tongue. She thrilled at the sound of his moan, feeling him gently grasp her head. He looked down watching her, enjoying the way her warm, wet tongue danced along his sensitive flesh, the way she looked with him in her mouth. Harley sucked deeply then pulled her lips along his length.

His eyes fluttered as he groaned. “Oh Harley!!”

Jack moved his hips, thrusting slowly while she sucked, then circled her tongue over him. He hissed with pleasure, the soft feel of her lips around him, her wet silky tongue slipping and sliding against his shaft. Jack had never felt anything like it.

She groaned, licking slowly, then sucking hard, the warmth of him, the slight jerking of his hips, all of it made her not only feel powerful, but it thrilled her that she could do this to him, for him.

Jack’s shuddering with pleasure encouraged Harley to suck harder, taking him deep into her mouth. Jack’s fingers convulsed against her scalp.

Jack’s breaths were coming in pants, his hips thrusting slowly until he finally pulled away.

“Enough! Enough Harley...” Jack gasped, his whole body shuddering.

She released him with a giggle rising up on her knees.

Jack’s grin was broad and infectious. “Take that nightie off and lie back my cupcake.”

She giggled pulling the gown over the top of her head as Jack shimmied off the bed and easily dropped his boxers to the floor. He watched her, his gaze heated as she laid back on the pillows completely naked. Harley was surprised at herself, being so open and bold to lie there, not hiding, showing all of herself to Jack. Jack’s heart slammed inside of his chest while he gazed at her. He had never wanted anyone, ever. But her...she was like a drug, everything he wanted, everything he needed. She was gorgeous, smart and he felt wholeheartedly that she was the part of his soul that had been missing. The only person in all the world he was sure would understand him. He was sure of it and now she lay there in front of him naked, creamy, soft, vulnerable and all his.

Jack crawled onto the bed, moving like a predator. The blue of his eyes seemed to glow as he made his way up her body. He giggled and growled simultaneously. “You’re mine. Are you ready Harley?”

She groaned, writhing on the soft sheets. “Oh yes Jack, yes...”

He laughed leaning in to lick her breast, dragging his tongue over one of her nipples and then the other. Harley gasped. “Jack...my Jack...“

He laid down, against her, his face snuggled between her breasts. He laughed biting the side of one soft, creamy mound, making Harley squeak and giggle. He pushed her up a little higher, the pillows sliding under her hips before he started to tease her opening.

He chuckled. “You're so wet Harley. Mmm...so warm...”

Harley's whole body ached with need for him. She needed him badly and only he could stop the pain. She reached up to drag her nails down his chest. “Jack...ahh...Jack...”

Jack teased her and himself, rubbing the head of his erection against her opening, coating himself with her, watching the way she groaned and pouted for him. He laughed then, a joyous exclamation.

“My sweet, sweet Harley...” He thrust into her, deeply, pressing as hard as he could, burying himself in her soft, welcoming warmth. Harley gasped, instantly wrapping herself around him. Jack leaned in, attacking her mouth, losing control of his body, the need to slam into her, to take her, the pleasure of her warmth, her wetness surrounding him as he took her. The feeling of their bodies, connected so intimately, sent his mind spiraling into animal passions. Jack grabbed her arms, yanking her arms over her head for a moment, holding her as he made long, deep thrusts, listening to the wet sound of their love-making while staring into her blue eyes, becoming lost in their depths.

Jack growled with a grin. “Come for me, Harley... I want to hear you scream my name.”

Harley gasped, Jack felt so good that it was almost mind numbing.

She moaned. “Oh yes Jack! Yes!”

She cried out, her hands twitching into fists while her body arched off the bed. Jack grinned watching her head arch back, her mouth open as she moaned his name. “JACK!”

Jack released her hands before he kissed and nibbled down her neck, leaning on one hand to cup a breast, pinching her nipple delicately. Harley mewled, wrapping her arms around him, her fingers threading through his hair, pressing her hips up to meet his thrusts, her legs sliding down from his waist, her feet caressing the back of his calves.

Jack's eyes rolled. “Harley...” He moaned her name softly against her collar.

The heated passion with which they started didn't cool, only changed into something more tender. Jack wrapped his hands around her, cradling her head. His kisses were more delicate, tender nips and licks against her skin and lips. He moaned her name, his hips shifting and thrusting gently. Harley sucked in a shuddering breath.

“My Harley...mine,” he growled, thrusting slow, hard and deep. He ground his teeth, the warm wet feeling over her washing over him. He moved his hands to either side of her head, thrusting hard, slamming into her a few times before slowing his hips down again. Jack's brow furrowed with the effort of slowly down his thrusts. He panted her name again. “Harley...Harley...”

“I love you Jack, I love you...” A tear ran down her cheek; the emotions running through her were extreme. He felt so good pumping inside her, the feel of his hips slamming into her, then the slow gentle caress of his pulling back, then sliding deep. She reached up to cradle his face between her hands as she said it, staring into his bright eyes. “I love you Jack Wayne, only you, no matter what comes, it will only ever be you.”

Jack smiled, then whispered as if he were afraid that the big, unfair universe would hear him, the words only for her.

“I love you, my Harley. Nothing and no one will ever touch you.”
That was the moment Jack came...with a long, low passionate moan, he thrust deep, pressing the whole of himself inside her as his whole body shuddered. Harley gasped, her thighs tightening around him, peaking with him, the emotions of the moment overcoming her, their bodies were one. They were one.

Jack helped to clean up her and himself before crawling back into the bed under the rich covers. He tugged the covers up snuggling down into the pillows with Harley beside him. He pulled her into the cradle of his arms, the food cold and completely forgotten. Jack chuckled, holding her against his chest. “I meant to be a little smoother,” he whispered with a wry grin.

Harley giggled. “You were perfect.”

Jack laughed and squeezed her against him before he tilted her face up to his, brushing his lips over hers. She smiled sleepily with a giggled whisper. “Best funeral ever.”

Jack laughed. “Agreed.”

It wasn't long before Harley was sound asleep. Jack thought about waking her, taking her with him, but he decided against it. She looked so peaceful, content. He grinned. He would tell her later.

Jack slipped out of the bed walking naked across the room, heading over to his suitcase where he pulled out a pair of black jeans, a black shirt and a hat. The last item he pulled out was a straight razor.

Jack held the razor up to the moonlight shining in through the picture window, examining it. He sighed with a smile. It was a beautiful blade. After seeing how her step-father had treated her, Jack was glad he had brought it along with him.

He slipped out of the room pulling the hat down and taking the elevator. This hotel had security cameras, of course, but not on the top floor and he knew just how to avoid being seen. This time of night the hotel lobby was practically deserted. No one paid much attention to Jack as he slipped outside, making his way to the parking lot. He looked around for a bit, tapping his chin with the tips of his fingers then smiled when he saw a fairly non-descript car, a Nissan Versa...which surprised him considering how expensive this hotel was, but it worked for him. Jack easily slipped into the car, and just as easily hot wired it.

The streets of the suburb were quiet. Streetlights here and there providing pools of false safety. Jack smiled as he drove, whistling to himself. After a few more minutes, he saw the house coming into view. There were no cars parked at the house and only one light on in the living room. Jack grinned and turned off the headlights before he parked in the driveway. He sat quietly in the car waiting, but there was no reaction to his appearance. Jack slipped quietly out of the car and made his way around to the back of the house. As he suspected would be the case, the back porch light was unlit and the door was unlocked. He smiled happily, opening it and sliding inside. He made his way toward the living room where the one light was on and he could hear the sounds of some TV program mindlessly playing in the background.

Jack walked silently into the living room and stopped in the doorway taking in the room. Numerous food containers lay everywhere. The remains of the wake Jack surmised, but there were also beer cans and wine bottles. He chuckled when his eyes landed on Doug, still in his suit from the funeral, snoring loudly while he laid sprawled in a recliner.
Jack chuckled quietly. “Oh, just like you were waiting for me to come and kill you.”

Doug’s eyes fluttered. He’s head was killing him, but then he realized that there was a gag in his mouth, his hands and feet tied behind his back. He jerked and twisted in confusion trying to work himself free his heart beating rapidly in his sudden panic. His eyes darted around trying to figure out where he was when a flashlight clicked on in his face. Doug winced trying to look away, but the light followed. He snarled and struggled, but stopped when he heard a cultured, smooth voice speak.

“Must feel strange for a man like you to be in a position like this.” The man (Doug figured it was a man judging by the voice) removed the light from his eyes and came over to crouch on the balls of his feet and stare down at him. Doug frowned in confusion; it was the man that had come with Harleen to the funeral.

Doug struggled, making horrible noises at Jack.

Jack smiled. “Ah, you remember me don’t you? Jack Wayne. Not a pleasure to see you again. Harley told me how nasty you were to her while she was growing up. How you hurt her. I don’t like anyone hurting my girl...no one. So I’m here to settle that score. I’m going to hurt you, really, really badly. And then, I’m going to kill you.”

Jack stood up smiling. “I figure we have a couple of hours to play until I need to get back to Harley. I stopped by your garden shed after I picked you up...you really are a fat man Doug. Oh, that reminds me of a joke by Bob Monkhouse. When I die I want to go peacefully in my sleep like my grandfather...not screaming and yelling like the passengers in his car.” Jack giggled. “You're going to go screaming...I promise.”

With that, Jack held up his straight razor, examining it in the moonlight as he had back at the hotel. He smiled widely glancing over at Doug. “I thought about taking you home with me, letting you be one of my experiments...I haven't shared them with Harley yet, but I'm going to. I love her, you see.” Jack grinned wider still. “She belongs to me now...she is the most magnificent, most beautiful creature...” Jack turned to look down at Doug. “And you hurt her....” Jack's eyes narrowed. “I simply can't let that go. You went all this time without being punished. Well...consider me your angel of long overdue punishment. And your angel of death, of course.”

As Jack giggled and stepped closer, Doug started to struggle anew, his eyes wide in terror. Jack laughed. “You know why I use a knife? A gun is too quick, but a knife—a knife lets you get in close...let's you see what people are really like...”

Smiling, he murmured. “They are never going to find your body.”

Harley woke up smiling, her eyes fluttering for a moment then focused on Jack who was lying naked beside her, propped on his elbow, his head resting in his hand watching her.

He smiled happily. “Good morning, pumpkin.”

Harley giggled stretching her arms over head with a little wiggle. “Good morning puddin.”

Jack laughed. “Puddin?”

Harley blushed and giggled. “Yes...that's what you made me feel like...pudding...all wobbly, warm and creamy...puddin.”
Jack laughed. “I like that. Puddin...”

Harley wrinkled her nose with a grin. “My puddin...”

Jack rolled on top of her grabbing her arms and pinning them over her head, making Harley squeal. “We have the room for another day before we have to head back to Gotham...let's play!” Jack purred. Jack grabbed the comforter and yanked it over their heads.

Harley's laughter soon turned to moans of pleasure.

Chapter End Notes

Used a modified quote from "The Dark Knight"
Bruce woke up after only a few hours of sleep. He was still struggling to get accustomed to his new schedule, up during the day as well as up nearly all night, but he had only been on the streets of Gotham for a few months now. He was still having some difficulty leading two lives, keeping one separate from the other was difficult. He didn't make the headlines as The Batman every night, probably because the GCPD was keeping a tight lid on some of the Batman's activities, but also, for the last few nights since the gala, crime had been rather...pedestrian. Nothing big, no huge criminals or costumed villains. Just your typical alleyway muggings, a few convenience store robberies, all of which the Batman took care of easily.

Bruce stood up by the side of his bed, stretched his arms over his head, then slowly down to the floor before he strolled over to his desk and turned on his laptop to check the most recent headlines.

As he sat at his desk looking over the news, a story in the entertainment column caught his eye. He saw that a picture accompanied the article. The man in the photo caught Bruce's attention first, but then he actually read the headline.

“WHO IS JACK WAYNE SEEING?”

Bruce frowned as he clicked on the article. Over the story was a picture of Jack stepping into an elevator with a blonde woman. Whoever the photographer was, he hadn't found a good angle in which to capture the blonde, but the man in the photo was clearly his brother Jack.

The article discussed the fact that Jack Wayne was seen entering a luxury hotel outside of Gotham with an unknown woman. The author speculated in the article whether Jack Wayne was planning on being a playboy like his brother—who was seen out-on-the-town with several different women on almost a regular basis—or was this something more serious occurring between the mysterious blonde and the younger Wayne brother? The author also wrote how Jack Wayne had not been seen a great deal in recent years, but in the last few weeks, the younger Wayne brother had been making more and more appearances in public.

The article continued with the author writing that because Jack Wayne and the mysterious woman were seen entering a hotel together, could this be something serious with the younger Wayne? Why sneak around with the mystery woman unless Jack Wayne was either trying to keep a low profile or he wanted to keep his mystery woman out of the public eye? The article also discussed the fact that in regards to Jack Wayne's recent public outings, such as the Wayne gala, Jack Wayne had been seen with a masked blonde, the reporter pointed out, and how this particular woman might be the same one he was seen entering a hotel with. Could there be wedding bells in the near future for the younger Wayne brother? The article ended there.

Bruce sighed. He didn't really care that Jack had someone...he hoped that Harleen Quinzel's presence was good for Jack, though it rattled him to know he had hired her to take care of his brother and now she was in his bed!

He could only imagine the field day the press would have with the fact that Jack was dating his doctor...his psychiatrist. Bruce took a few deep breaths. He wasn't sure how to solve this problem with Jack. If Bruce Wayne had been a regular playboy billionaire, Jack and Harleen might not have bothered him at all. But the more the press examined the family, the more likely his secret night work... might be discovered. Bruce simply couldn't have that.

As Bruce dressed for the day, slipping into a three thousand dollar Valentino suit of light blue, he thought about the fact that Vickie Vale would be here in another day to do the family interview...he just had to make sure there was nothing linking Dr. Quinzel professionally with Jack...he could fire her but Jack had already threatened Bruce once over even the idea of letting Dr. Quinzel go.

Bruce had no illusions about what Jack might do if forced to give up Dr. Quinzel. Jack had always been possessive. Maybe Bruce needed to take the good doctor aside and have a talk with her. Bruce was fairly good at sensing someone's intentions. He didn't believe that Dr. Quinzel set out to seduce his brother, just as he didn't believe that Jack had set out to seduce her, but he needed to be sure. He decided he would take her to lunch and have a talk with her. Maybe, if Bruce was satisfied with her intentions...but they would have to come up with a story of how she and Jack met, why she was staying here...

Bruce rubbed the bridge of his nose, there just wasn't enough time to deal with this before Ms. Vale's interview. Why couldn't his little brother ever make anything easy? Bruce decided first to talk to Alfred. Alfred could always be counted on to give Bruce not just the unvarnished truth, but Alfred would hopefully give him a clearer picture of the situation between Jack and Harleen Quinzel.

Bruce made his way to the kitchen, the enticing smell of coffee drawing him to his butler who was just setting the coffee on the tray that Alfred usually brought to Bruce's room where Bruce usually took his breakfast.

When Bruce entered the kitchen already dressed for the day, Alfred glanced up startled.

“Am I running late Master Bruce?” Alfred frowned in confusion.

Bruce smiled. “No no. I just happen to be up early and needed to talk to you about...” Bruce did a quick look around. “Is Jack up?”

“I have no idea sir. He and Dr. Quinzel did not return from the funeral yesterday. They stayed at a hotel I presume.” Alfred started setting out Bruce's breakfast when the young man pulled up a stool to the counter where Jack and Harleen usually ate their meals.

“Funeral?” Bruce frowned, then he frowned deeper...the picture...

“Yes, Miss Harleen's mother passed away unexpectedly. The funeral was yesterday.” Alfred set out the eggs and toast from the tray and proceeded the pour Bruce's coffee.

“She never asked for the day off.” Bruce frowned “She never said anything.”

“From what I gathered sir, she didn't know about the funeral until the day of. Master Jack made the arrangements rather quickly to take her.” Alfred smiled. “Master Jack seems quite smitten with Miss Harleen.”

Bruce frowned. “Yes, yes he does. Has he said anything to you? I mean about the doctor. I'm just...” Bruce sighed. “How serious is this and do you think Dr. Quinzel is after Jack's money?”

Alfred lifted a brow at Bruce's plain speech. “Well sir, if I may be blunt?”

Bruce took a sip of his coffee. “Please.”
“No. I truly do not believe Miss Harleen is after his money. It is clear to me that the young woman, despite her position as his doctor, is in love with Master Jack.” Alfred stood back from the counter with his hands behind his back.

“And Jack?” Bruce cut into his eggs as he spoke.

“I believe Master Jack is in love with her. It is nice to see one of you young men pursuing something less dark and dangerous.”

Bruce looked up sharply, but Alfred only smiled a little and continued. “I have always hoped both of you would recover from your parents' deaths and move forward. I'm just happy to see Jack is starting to do that. Miss Harleen is a lovely young woman sir.”

Bruce sighed. “Do you think Jack would be angry if I fired her?” Bruce stared at Alfred, his blue eyes held that steady determination that they had held since the night his and Jack's parents died.

“I think Master Bruce, firing Dr. Quinzel would cause damage along the lines of the the death of your parents to Master Jack.” Alfred said this with little emotion in his voice, but Bruce was accustomed to reading the older man and knew Alfred would also be upset with Bruce if he let her go.

“Fine, but we need to keep her position as Jack's doctor out of the papers. If Jack is going to pursue this relationship I want it to appear as normal as possible.” Bruce finished his breakfast and stood up.

“Can you tell them both that for me?” He looked to Alfred.

Alfred wanted to tell Bruce that he should talk to his brother himself, but he knew that Bruce was too tied up in his day and nighttime activities. Alfred was well aware that Bruce saw himself as not just trying to save Gotham, and himself (even if he wouldn't admit that part) but he was trying to save Jack every night he went on the streets of Gotham. Trying to save another little brother from the edge of madness.

“Of course Master Bruce.” Alfred nodded his acknowledgment.

Bruce stopped in the doorway, his hand on the frame. Alfred watched the younger man's back, waiting for Bruce to say something more, but he simply continued out the door. Alfred sighed. The boys had been so close before that tragic night. Now he wondered if, after such a long time, they would ever have that close a relationship again.

Harley had no idea what time it was when she woke up again. Only that it was daytime since sunlight streamed in from the picture windows, but the delicious smell of coffee wafted over her, bringing a smile to her lips. Judging by the light, it might be early afternoon. She yawned, sitting up, the sheets and comforter falling away from her naked body.

Then she heard Jack's soft voice.

“I could get used to seeing that every day.”

Harley giggled pulling up the comforter and blushing, making Jack laugh. “Now that's cute, blushing after what we did to each other last night? Several times...” He licked his upper lip seductively at her. Harley giggled again with a blush brightening her cheeks.

Jack sat on the side of the bed, wearing his boxers again and a grin spreading across face. “Come here my little minx, I ordered us a hearty breakfast since we ended up not eating last night and worked off a lot of calories.”

Harley laughed wiggling to the edge of the bed where a large silver cart sat with several covered dishes that Jack was in the process of uncovering. She adjusted her position wrapping the blanket more securely around her while Jack set a plate in front of her and proceeded to pour some coffee for her.

“Now, what would my lady like? I ordered several dishes for us to choose from.” Jack waggled his eyebrows at her. “I had to pout a little to get them to make us breakfast this late, but it was worth it.” He laughed.

“Let’s see. We have Chesapeake omelets which have crab and asparagus in them, along with monray sauce. I also ordered Eggs Benedict with hash browns, Eggs Florentine...lots of egg things.” He grinned with one lifted brow. “I also ordered some vanilla Belgian waffles since I remember how much you like waffles.” Jack reached out and brushed her chin with the tips of his fingers before he continued. “Some bourbon French toast and lastly, some fresh fruit. There is also some orange juice, milk and of course, only the best coffee for my pumpkin.”

Jack put a little bit of everything on her plate as he introduced each item to her.

“Oh Puddin! This...I don't think I can eat all of this!” Harley's laugh only made Jack's grin widen. “Eat as much as you can, because I plan on working it off of you at least one more time before we head home.” He grabbed the side of the comforter tugging her closer. She giggled falling over sideways into her puddin. Jack booped her nose with the tip of his finger. Sitting beside her, their hips now touching, Jack proceeded to cut up her food before he started to feed her.

Jack grinned, taking his own bite. Harley smiled as she gazed at him. She could not remember ever being this happy, ever.

Jack tilted his head toward her. “What is it Dr. Quinn?”

Harley laughed softly. “Just...you make me happy Jack.”

“And you make me happy Harley. I won't let anyone ever take that away.” He cupped her cheek, his thumb tracing the line of her cheekbone, his eyes intent, almost frightening in their intensity.

“I won't let anyone take you from me Jack,” she echoed in a whisper.

Jack tugged her in for a kiss, his hand sliding to the back of her head holding her possessively to him. Harley's heart soared, her fingers digging into his shoulders. Jack's hands dropped to her waist hauling her back onto the bed where he rolled on top of her.

“Harley, do you swear to love me? Swear it on your life...would you die for me?” Jack laid on top of her stroking her hair back from her face as his eyes stared intently down at her. The slight green in them was lost as the blue seemed to take over, glowing with his passion for her. Jack searched her face. Harley wasn't sure what he was looking for, but she wanted him to know that she would never leave him.

“Yes Jack, yes,” she assured him with conviction. “I would die for you.” Harley felt the sting of tears pricking at the back of her eyes, the deepness of her emotions welling up inside her. She reached up to caress his face, the tips of her fingers tracing his features.

Jack frowned then as he studied her.
He caressed her chin with his thumb, then stroked her bottom lip. She wasn't sure what he was looking for, but she laid herself bare to him. Whatever he wanted from her, she would give him, no matter what it was, no matter if it hurt. She would do anything for Jack.

“That's too easy...” he whispered, a slight frown marring his brow. “Would you...would you live for me Harley...my Harley Quinn. No matter what happens, no matter what I become...will you live for me?” Jack's eyes slid closed as he waited her answer. He leaned toward her and brushed his lips against her mouth caressing her lips with a featherlight stroke that flowed across her skin. His nose brushed against hers, all of the sensations of his touch, the heat of his body lying across hers, the brush of his lips, the tender caress of his thumb; all of these little sensations were like a soft, warm breeze blowing causally across her face, a ghost of a touch, not quite fulfilling their promise. Harley groaned softly, her hands resting against his hips. Jack's voice was like warm honey, dripping with sweetness and desire.

"Careful...” he murmured, his eyes opening only a sliver, showing her that glowing line of blue. “Do not say this oath thoughtlessly my sweet, sweet Harley. I'm not asking you to simply love me, to simply be with me—this is more than that. What we have is more than just love, so much more than just fucking. You, you are me...my missing half...the thing I've been searching for...I would kill for you. Saying this, stating that you want this...it's giving me power just as I give power to you... Desire becomes surrender, surrender becomes...POWER.”

Jack licked her lips, then the tip of her nose, all the time staring down at her.

"Do you want this? Be sure...be very, very sure Harley..." he purred, his eyes searching her face. He licked her lips again. “Say it...” his voice dropping to barely a whisper. “Say it, say it, say it...pretty, pretty, pretty...” He closed his eyes taking a breath as if he were inhaling her, breathing her in while his lips playfully danced across hers, teasing her with unspoken promises.

Jack smiled. “Oh Harley, you are so good...so very good. You're mine...I am yours, come what may...”

His mouth covered hers, his tongue pressing between her lips. Harley wrapped her arms around him tugging his body down closer to her. She needed to feel him. Jack pulled the covers from between them exposing her naked body, allowing him to touch and press against her. His hand snaked up her torso feeling the soft, silken curves of her body.

“Oh Jack...”

He smiled, his words warm against the dampness against her nipple before he moved his mouth back to her neck.

“Swear to me Harley...: Jack sounded slightly desperate, that he needed her assurance, his face buried against her neck. Harley smoothed her hands down the curve of his spine reaching the edge of his boxers and shoved them down while Jack cupped the side of her breast. He shifted, using one hand to push his boxers down his hips. Harley spread her fingers wide, her hands cupping his rear giving his backside a good hard squeeze, her hips rolling upward to meet his hips.
She could feel the burning heat of his erection against her groin, prompting her to spread her legs, her core aching to feel him again. Harley stroked her legs against his hips, her feet caressing his thighs, while her hands traveled up the slope of his back, gliding across his muscled shoulders until she reached his hair. Her fingers played gently in his hair, feeling the sensation of the thick, silky locks running between her fingers. She brushed her nose against his, her breath caressed his mouth.

“I love you Jack...I love you,” she whispered.

As Jack reached between them, adjusting, he stared into her eyes. It wasn't just him staring into her, he was allowing her to stare back, that was the moment he chose to thrust himself into her.

Harley gasped wrapping her arms around him. Jack grabbed one of her legs hooking her knee over his shoulder and leaned in hissing softly. “Harley...Uummmm...”

She gripped his face between her hands staring into his eyes while he thrust hard and deep, nearly bouncing her whole body as they fucked.

“I'm yours Jack, only yours...puddin,” Harley panted.

She grabbed his shoulders and pushed with all her strength, flipping him over onto his back her gymnast skills allowing her to know the best way to roll, even if this was not what they had been meant for. Jack let out a startled laugh, the intensity of the sound melting into a moan when Harley grinned down at him, having barely kept him inside her with the sudden change of position.

Jack stared up at her grinning. “Hmmm....”

She ground her hips down on him throwing her head back. “Oh puddin, only you, only ever you...”

Her fingers dug into his chest while she rocked her hips. Her whole body arched with her movement. Jack hissed at the feel of her nails pressing into his skin, her long blonde hair brushing the back of his thighs when she leaned back in a deep arch. Her hair tickled his legs as she leaned back, arching her back in a sensual curve, giving him a perfect view of the soft bounce of her breasts while she rode him hard.

Jack reached up, dragging his hands up her sides, pressing his teeth hard into his bottom lip watching her rocking and groaning. When his hands came up to her breasts, he cupped them, her soft, satin mounds, her nipples pink and hard. His thumbs rotated in slow, sensuous circles over her nipples. Harley was panting, grinding against him. She rode him with all her strength, begging for more from him, taking as much as she could, her thighs clamped around him. She dragged her fingernails down his chest as she leaned forward again, twisting her hips. One of Jack's hands snaked down over her stomach, his fingers spread wide, flowing lower and lower until his thumb brushed through the strip of curling hair, slipping between her damp folds to roll over her clitoris. Harley gasped at the sensation of his thumb against her, which sent her over the edge into an intense orgasm.

“OH JACK!!” she screamed her whole body tensing.

Jack grinned gazing up her, experiencing her pleasure mixing with his own. His goddess. His soul mate. Jack smiled watching her shudder with another orgasm, the way her breasts bounced, the expression on her beautiful face, the feel of her nails dragging down his chest and the way she screamed his name. Jack giggled with joy. Her inner muscles squeezed around him, causing Jack to gasp. The wet sounds of her thrusting, impaling herself on his shaft had Jack groaning. He simply couldn't hold back any longer. His climax teased at the edge of completion. He wanted to hold out, but damn it she was too much.
“Uhh! Harley!” Jack hissed, his expression almost like he was in intense pain instead of ardent passion.

His hips jerked upward as his hands spasmed, slapping down to grab her thighs. Harley dropped her hands down on either side of his head, her long hair creating a golden curtain over the two of them. Her hips came up, almost too far, causing Jack's brow to furrow with the intensity of her slamming down down on him, over and over until he was clinching his teeth panting heavily. She slowed down, rotating her hips in a gentle circular motion that had him hissing. Jack groaned loudly throwing his head back as he burst inside her. “Guhhhh!!”

Harley gasped as she felt him come inside of her. “Oh Jack!” Her next climax shot through her, hot, burning, then rolling in waves of pleasurable warmth.

Harley’s arms lost all their strength and she dropped her full weight on him, feeling as if she was melting against him. Jack held her tightly, stroking his fingers up and down her back lightly with a sweet smile on his lips.

“Mmm...you are very good at that...” he purred.

Harley giggled planting soft kisses along his shoulders and chest. “You are very good at that too.”

Jack chuckled as held her close. He pressed his lips to her ear, rocking her ever so slightly. He sang softly, just for her, his voice warm and tender, a caress not just along her ear, but around her very soul.

“Every kiss, every hug seems to act just like a drug
You're getting to be a habit with me
Let me stay in your arms I'm addicted to your charms
You're getting to be a habit with me ...”

Harley giggled. “Oh Jack! You're such a dork!”

He chuckled nuzzling her neck and holding her tight against his body, he softly sang into her neck and hair.

“I used to think your love was something
That I could take or leave alone
But now I couldn't do without my supply
I need you for my own”

He rolled over on top of her, forcing her down into the mattress grinning at her.
“Oh, I can't break away I must have you everyday
As regularly as coffee or tea
You've got me in your clutches and I can't get free
You're getting to be a habit with me ”

He pressed his grinning mouth to her giggling lips, his tongue sliding, twirling with hers in a way that made her shiver from her lips to her toes, a warmth pooling around her, the warm satisfaction of their shared orgasm telling her that everything was right with the world.

Jack looked handsome as always, Harley thought—maybe just a little more so because now he was hers—wore a slim-cut suit of deep blue that brought out the blue in his eyes. She found little details about him so handsome: the curve of his lips, the lure of his eyes, even the laugh lines around his mouth. He had just handed Harley into the car. She wore a simple, sleeveless, silk and wool open back, fit and flare dress with a bow between the shoulder blades in a light red that Jack had purchased along with the black dress for the funeral. He had even paired the red dress with a pair of Christian Louboutin, sheer lace point-toe pumps with black suede detail and red sole, all of which made Harley feel pampered. She wore her hair loose, the natural waves cascading over her shoulder. (She knew Jack liked her hair down.) Jack was walking around the car, about to get in when his cell phone vibrated in his pocket. Jack pulled it out and glanced at the screen as he hit the button.

“On my way home now Alfred,” he said into the phone just as he slipped into the back seat, the chauffeur closing the door for him.

“Master Jack, your friend Lance has returned with another envelope from Mr. Cobblepott,” Alfred responded calmly.

Jack chuckled. “Let me guess. He can't leave until I give him an answer?”

“Exactly Master Jack.”

“Well I'll be a couple of hours so why don't you treat him to lunch and I'll be there as quickly as I can. Oh and Alfred, when is the Vickie Vale dinner?” Jack reached out and took Harley's hand, smiling at her. She squeezed, returning his smile.

“That would be tomorrow evening I believe, Master Jack.” Jack could hear the sound of dishes in the background and a young man's voice telling Alfred thank you.

“Ah good, could you schedule Harley and me an appointment with Frieda for this evening?” Jack picked up Harley's hand kissing the tips of her fingers lightly, grinning the whole while.

“Of course Master Jack.”

“See ya soon Alfie!” Jack hung up the phone, dropping it into his jacket pocket before hauling a giggling and squirming Harley onto his lap.

Jack shoved the skirt of her dress up, his hands running up the top of her thighs, snaking his way up to her hips when he realized she wasn't wearing any panties.

He growled playfully. “You look good enough to eat.”

Harley giggled leaning in to tease his lips with her tongue.

“So who is Frieda and should I be jealous?” Harley asked draping her arms around his shoulders, her fingers playing with the ends of his hair. Jack's fingers circled causally along her bare hips smiling all the while...

Jack laughed. “She is an older woman who has been cutting my hair for as long as I can remember. I thought I was due for a trim and that you might like to have a trim too.”

Harley giggled softly brushing her nose against his. “You think of everything,” she whispered. Jack pulled his bottom lip with his teeth, his expression one of pleasure when Harley wiggled her hips down on his quickly hardening erection.

“I do try. Wanna make this car ride even more fun?” he asked, whispering against her mouth.

“Oh puddin...” Harley giggled.

Jack chuckled glancing at the rearview mirror with his finger hovering on the button for the privacy window. The driver had been looking at them, but quickly averted his eyes.

Jack grinned. “Just keep your eyes on the road and we'll be fine,” he told the driver.

The man nodded. “Yes sir.”

Jack wrinkled his nose playfully at Harley reaching down between them, the sound of a zipper could be heard.

“Now, let's see what we can do to make this drive home more interesting.” Jack chuckled.

When they returned to the manor, they found the young man Lance and Alfred playing cards in the kitchen; from the looks of the game it appeared to be Gin Rummy. When they walked in, Lance jumped to his feet upon seeing Jack Wayne. “Sir!”

Jack laughed. “Settle down Lance. You have another message for me?”

Lance nodded, pulling out the envelope from the pocket of his very stiff looking jacket and handed it to Jack. Jack groaned, seeing another expensive envelope with a wax seal. He broke the seal opening the envelope and pulled out another note on expensive stationery. With a sigh of exasperation, Jack unfolded the paper and held it up to read the message.

Harley watched Jack's eyes move swiftly over the paper before he spoke. “Well apparently our little bird wants to have our duel the morning that Miss Vale is to be here.”

Alfred's expression only changed slightly, a tightening around the eyes.

Harley frowned. “Bruce isn't going to like that.”

Jack laughed. “No, but then again: who said he needs to know?”
Jack glanced at Alfred. "Can you find me a pen?"

"Of course Master Jack." Alfred swiftly left the kitchen, returning only a moment later with a pen. Jack set the note down on the counter, quickly scribbling out a response.

"There, now you can take that back to our bird friend."

Lance smiled and nodded. "Thank you sir," he said with relief before he quickly left.

"What did you tell him?" Harley asked while walking over to help Alfred who had started to get a few things down for tea.

Jack grinned. "Oh I agreed to the time."

Alfred frowned. "Master Jack, do you think that is wise?"

Jack pulled out some items from the refrigerator. He set out some apples, ham and brie for making tea sandwiches. Alfred stopped, frowning at the two of them until they each realized what the older man wanted and stopped helping. They both went to sit down at their usual places at the counter.

"Well, I figure we can have out little play date before Miss Vale arrives. Besides, the duel is not going to be here on the Wayne Manor grounds. The bird’s decided he wants to have our little face off on the remains of the Cobblepot estate."

Harley frowned. "What do you mean 'remains'?"

Jack shrugged reaching out and snagging a bite of apple from where Alfred had begun slicing the apples for making tea sandwiches. The butler shot Jack a disapproving look, which had Jack chuckling.

"The Cobblepots once had lands and a manor not too dissimilar from the Wayne fortune, but the story goes that the Cobblepots squandered their fortune." Jack snatched another bite of apple; Alfred paused in the making of the tea sandwiches with an annoyed air.

Alfred said softly, "My grandfather supposedly butlered for the family back in England. He had nothing flattering to say about his experience."

"As far as I know, the house on that land is nothing but a shell." Jack frowned. "Unless Oswald has come into some money to repair it," Jack mused then shrugged. "Well, we're to meet there for our little game of fencing."

Harley frowned. "You don't think he would really try to hurt you? Do you Jack?"

Jack shrugged. Of course, he thought, but said, "Nothing to worry about Harley." Jack reached over and brushed her chin with his thumb.

"If you and Miss Harleen would like, I can bring tea to you out on the terrace." Alfred clearly was becoming annoyed with Jack and his snatching of food when Jack grabbed another bite of apple. Jack chuckled standing up and taking Harley's hand. "That sounds wonderful Alfred."

Alfred watched the two of them leave. A small smile played across the older man's lips. He was happy to see Master Jack involved with someone. Now if only Master Bruce could follow in that vein...
The terrace looked out on the family gardens; as with everything else at Wayne Manor, the gardens were well maintained, the roses just starting to bloom. Though the air was still cool, spring was right around the corner and the sun shining down on them was pleasantly warm.

Alfred came out a few minutes later with their tea, some apple, ham and brie sandwiches along with some scones and fresh cut strawberries.

After Alfred had set out the tea, leaving the two of them alone, Jack poured the tea before setting a couple of the small sandwiches, a scone and a generous spoonful of strawberries on Harley’s plate.

“This duel makes me nervous,” she said quietly picking up her tea.

Jack frowned. “Why?”

“I don't trust Cobblepot. There's something about him, maybe it's just the doctor in me, but I don't think he's quite balanced.” Harley popped a strawberry into her mouth.

Jack laughed. “Of course he isn't—none of us rich people are, haven't you figured that out yet?”

Harley gave him a sour look, prompting Jack to reach across the small round table and take her hand. “Sorry Harley, but yes, Oswald isn't stable.” Jack chuckled then “He's obsessed with bringing back his family's fortune and of course he has had it out for Bruce and me since we were kids.”

Harley frowned. “Just promise me Jack, you won't trust him to play fair.”

Jack's grin was wide. “Don't worry my Harley; who said anything about this being a fair fight?”

Harley's brow furrowed. “So why has he been out to get you and Bruce exactly?”

Harley took another strawberry and Jack shrugged. “For some cockeyed reason that I never quite understood, he blames our family for his current situation. No idea why.” Jack picked up a sandwich and popped it into his mouth.

Harley frowned in thought. “Sounds like he's projecting his misfortunes onto you and your brother.”

Shrugging, Jack took a sip of his tea. “Maybe, or he could just be a cruel little turd.”

Harley nearly laughed tea out through her nose.

Jack snickered. “Enough talk about Ossie, you're going to make me think you like him.”

Harley stuck her tongue out. “Not my type at all. I like my men tall, dark and mysterious.”

Jack's grin was wicked. “Oh, I'm mysterious alright...”

In the offices of the Gotham City Globe, the local paper as well as home for the local news, Vicki Vale—her blonde hair piled on her head in a messy bun, held in place by luck and a series of pens—was sitting at her desk with the man who had provided the picture of Jack Wayne and the mysterious blonde. Vicki had her eyes narrowed as she study the man. His name was Alexander Knox. He wasn't attractive, but he had a humor about his eyes that was compelling and so far he had provided the Globe with some good leads on stories, particular his stories following the new vigilante that had been appearing with more and more frequency, the Batman.

But right now Vicki was grinning from ear to ear at Knox who had just given her a great story.
“So you’re sure you saw one of Cobblepot’s messenger boys returning from Wayne manor?” Vale asked again.

Knox grinned. “I had one of my guys stalking out the Wayne place for when Jack came back hoping the blonde might be with him. He saw the car pull in, but then he saw one of Cobblepot’s guys leaving not too long afterward. Seen the kid before, name is Lance—he is Cobblepot's messenger boy. Anyway my guy stopped my source and found out that Cobblepot has challenged Jack Wayne to a duel.”

“What?” Vicki shouted drawing the attention of everyone else in the room. She had stood up when she yelled, then quickly sat back down covering her mouth with a hand. She removed her hand glaring at Knox in disbelief. “Are you kidding me?”

Knox chuckled. “Nope, a good old-fashioned duel! Anyway, my source says that Jack Wayne accepted. It’s going to be tomorrow on the Cobblepot property. They apparently are going to be fencing.” Knox made a face that illustrated how absurd the idea seemed.

Vicki started laughing. “Oh hell, this is great! I couldn't make this stuff up! Okay, can you and or your guy get onto the Cobblepot land? I need a picture of this! Oh and any idea on who the blonde with Jack Wayne is?”

Knox frowned. “Nothing yet, but I'm willing to bet my next year's salary she's at that duel.”

Vicki giggled. “This is going to be gold! Especially right before my interview that evening!”

Knox frowned. “So, you really think Jack Wayne is as crazy as rumors say?”

Vicki frowned in thought, absently pushing a stray lock of blonde hair behind her ear. “Don't know really. That gala a few nights back, that was the first time Jack Wayne had been out in a very long time. Now that I think about it, he had a blonde with him then too.” She smiled. “I wonder if the younger Wayne doesn't have his older brother's gallivanting ways and might actually be thinking of settling down?”

She shook her head. “Anyway, you get in there and get me some pics of this “duel” that I can have tomorrow night.”

Knox stood up. “I'm on it Vicki, don't you worry.” He gave her a wink as he left his office.

Vicki chuckled. Gotham was never boring or short of interesting stories. One just had to be quick to get them first.

That night Jack came to Harley's room. She had just finished showering and was dressed for bed, a large t-shirt and a cute little pair of boxers underneath with little happy kitten pictures on them. She had just finished towel drying her hair and was brushing it out when she heard a knock at her door.

She hurried over to open the door to see Jack standing there, barefoot, wearing a pair of long blue and black plaid pajama pants and a grey t-shirt. He held a tray on which sat two slices of chocolate cake and two glasses of milk.

She laughed. “Oh Jack!” She took the tray from him as he stepped into the room. “You don’t think Bruce will get upset?” she asked as she set the tray down on her bedside table.
Jack crossed his eyes and made a face. “Pffpf! If I avoided taking actions based on Bruce being upset, I would probably never leave the estate. Who cares! Besides, you're my girl...of course I want to spend the night in bed with you.”

He surprised her by grabbing her around the waist and tossing her on top of her bed, quickly pouncing after her. Harley squealed, then burst out into loud laughs when Jack pulled her top up and started to blow raspberries on her stomach. Jack's fingers tickled up her sides, his teeth nibbling along her tummy.

“Jack!!” She laughed and wiggled trying to get away, but Jack yanked her back every time she managed to get a little bit loose from him. Harley laughed fighting back, sliding her fingers under his shirt. Jack laughed and squirmed. “Harley!!”

Harley's eyes twinkled in pleasant surprise. “Are you ticklish?!”

“Don't you dare!!” Jack grinned grabbing one of Harley's hands pinning it over her head, but she still managed to tickle him with her free hand. Jack's laugh was not just sexy she thought, but she loved the fact that it was so free...he was so open with her. Harley was distracted with listening to him laugh that she didn't react fast enough before Jack managed to grab her other arm yanking it over her head. He grinned down at her. “Now you are mine.”

She squealed wiggling, but Jack had managed to get her out of her pants to blow raspberries in other places. Her giggling moans quickly filled the room.

Harley woke in the morning, naked, to the sounds of Jack singing softly while stroking her hair. She didn't open her eyes at first; she just relaxed curled in the crook of his arm smelling the warm spice of Jack's skin.

“Your eyes of blue, your kisses too,
I never knew what they could do.
I can't believe that you're in love with me.”

He hummed softly, the tips of his fingers caressing her cheek. Harley sighed softly snuggling in closer to him.

“It's almost time to get up, my sweets,” Jack whispered.

Harley sighed, content in his arms. “I like that you sing to me so much. What were you singing?!”

As Jack leaned in to kiss her forehead, she could feel his smile against her skin. “It's an old song from the '30's, “I Can't Believe You're in Love with Me.” Lot of old singers did versions of the song, Bing Crosby, Dean Martin...”

Harley sighed in contentment. “Mm...you have a beautiful voice Jack.” Her eyes were still closed as she rolled onto her side and wrapped her arms around him. He was still naked, his skin warm and soft as she curled in close to him. He chuckled, holding her pressed against him.

“Why thank you, Miss Quinn.” He nibbled her ear, making her squirm lightly.
She giggled. “Why do you call Cobblepot penguin sometimes?”

Jack struggled. “Oh, it started when he was younger. Actually I think it's Bruce's fault.” Jack chuckled easing down to wrap his arms around her.

“We saw him at an art exhibit. He has always dressed like you saw him at the restaurant, always in an old-fashioned suit or a tuxedo. I think Bruce said out loud at that exhibit that Oswald looked like a penguin and the press printed it...and it stuck.”

Harley frowned, then giggled against Jack's chest. “I sort of feel sorry for him, but he seems so nasty it's hard.”

“Then don't feel sorry for him!” Jack started to tickle her.

“Okay, okay I'm getting up!” She laughed pushing herself up, her blonde hair in her face. She blew on the long golden strands. Jack reached over moving the long strands aside.

“You're adorable my little muffin,” he said. “I'm going to head back to my room to dress. Wear something pretty for me will you? Maybe something in red again. I like you in red and black.”

Harley blushed. “Sure thing Jack.”

“Oh...and could you wear your hair down? You don't have to, of course, but I do like it down.” Jack ran his fingers through her hair smiling softly just before he leaned in and kissed her, pressing her back against the pillows. Jack's mouth moved over hers, his tongue swirling warm and easily with her own. He pulled away from her lips reluctantly, his fingers stroked along her cheek just before he jumped out of the bed smiling.

“I'll be back in a jiffy for you!” Jack grabbed his pants from the floor, shimmying into them and grabbed his t-shirt. He stopped at her bedroom door smiling at her as she rolled over onto her stomach to watch him.

Harley smiled. “I love you Jack.”

Jack smiled softly. “And I you, Harley.”

Harley jumped up after Jack left, walking naked across her room to the closet. She flung the closet door open and stared. What could she wear that would be pretty? Harley chewed on her bottom lip pulling out a sleeveless red trapeze dress and a pair of black tights that she paired with a pair of her favorite black booties and a little black, light weight sweater shrug since it would still be cool in the morning. She brushed her hair out, pinning just the front back, the rest of it worn long and smooth down her back. She had just about finished with her makeup when a knock sounded at her door.

“Come in!” she called.

She turned just as Jack stepped in. When Harley saw him, her heart sped up, not just because it was Jack, but the way he was dressed...

Jack was wearing a pair of black riding breeches that hugged his thighs and hips in a way that made heat race straight to her groin. He was wearing a pair of knee-high boots, black soft leather riding boots, with a cream colored turtleneck monogrammed with a small purple JW, a pair of black leather gloves, and a fencing foil vinyl bag over his shoulder. Harley felt silly the way she swallowed when she saw him, but he looked devastatingly handsome in his outfit, his hair slicked back, that smile of his, his blue-green eyes dancing with mischief.

When Jack saw her, his smiled widened. He grinned, pressing his teeth to his lower lip and moved his finger around indicating for her to turn for him. Harley blushed and giggled, doing a little twist for him.

“You look good enough to eat, which I fully plan on doing tonight.” He gave her a lopsided grin and a saucy wink. “Until then...” He held his hand out to her. Harley stepped out, placing her hand in his which he held up to his lips and kissed her knuckles.

When they made their way down the stairs, Alfred was waiting for them. “Master Bruce has already left for the day, though he will be back in plenty of time for tonight's festivities. I suggest you and Miss Harleen do the same, Master Jack.” Alfred handed them each a small paper bag as he spoke. Harley frowned slightly taking the bag, the warm delicious smells of eggs and bacon wafting up from the bags.

“I took the liberty of making you each an “On-the-go” breakfast. I also have coffee ready as well.” Alfred turned and picked up two “On-the-go” coffee mugs. “And I have taken the liberty of driving the Lamborghini Huracán up front for you Master Jack.”

Jack grinned. “Thank you Alfie! That's just grand! Come on Harley, I have a duel to win!” Jack laughed taking her hand and waving goodbye to Alfred with the hand holding his sack breakfast.

The drive to the Cobblepot estate was pleasant. The estate was located fairly far outside Gotham. The landscape was nice, with a lot of old mansions out this way along with long areas of rolling hills and thick trees. Jack drove fast with only one hand on the wheel, the other on her thigh.

“The Cobblepot place should be showing up in the next mile or so.” Jack smiled, then pointed as the car crested a hill. “There it is.”

Harley looked and sucked in a startled breath. While the Wayne Manor was an old fashioned looking manor, there was still something “alive” about the place, but the Cobblepot mansion reminded her of a typical haunted house. If bats had flown out and a wolf had started to howl, she would not have been the least bit surprised. And while the Wayne Manor was in perfect condition, this place looked to be holding itself up by pure will alone. It was clearly in disrepair; Harley wondered how anyone could be living in it. Jack made a right turn down an old lane that was overgrown; the trees on either side were thick, their branches large and heavy, leaning dangerously over the road. After perhaps a mile they came to an old wrought-iron gate that was open, the gate barely hanging onto the rest of the fencing that surrounded the estate. The gate was covered in the dead remains of vines reminding Harley of something from a scary movie.

Jack drove through the gate, following the lane toward the decrepit Cobblepot Manor.

As they approached the house, Harley could see a figure standing by the door. As they came closer, she saw that it was Lance. The young man was dressed in the same, plain, old-fashioned crisp uniform, which looked strange against the backdrop of the old house. Jack pulled up, turning the car off. He leaned across Harley looking up at the old house, then at Lance.

“I guess this really is the place,” he muttered.
“It doesn’t look at all like I thought it would.” Harley frowned, unable to keep her nose wrinkling in slight displeasure.

Lance walked over to open Harley's door for her just as Jack stepped out on his side. “Master Cobblepot is waiting for you behind the manor in the gardens sir.”

Jack smiled pulling the foil bag out from the boot. “Thanks Lance.”

Lance smiled. “I—I can lead you if you want?”

“Sure, why not?” Jack smiled as he took Harley's hand.

Lance led them around the side of the manor where the crumbling remains of a brick path followed around the side of the house into the overgrown remnants of what must have been a beautiful garden at one time. There were tangles of rose bushes, a wisteria that had grown so large and heavy that it had pulled the trellis that it was growing up down, now looking like a tangled bush of purple flowers and greenery. The hedges were all overgrown, any shapes they had once held were gone now. Their shapes were now littered with flowers and trees poking up through the shrubbery like so many invaders.

Lance led them through the garden and down another disintegrating brick path until they came to what must have once been the center of the garden. The area was a circular space where a few rotting and bleached wooden benches sat in a circle surrounding the crumbling remains of a fountain that might have once been lovely in the middle of the space.

As their small group reached the area, they could both see Cobblepot. He was dressed in a three-piece suit, the jacket of which was lying across one of the benches. The vest he wore was green and black checkered, with black slacks and polished black shoes. His white shirt had a high, rounded collar with a black and green paisley tie. Again, Harley thought he might have been attractive except for the sour look on Cobblepot's face.

Lance walked over by the fountain, standing out of the way, his eyes darting back and forth between the two men. Oswald Cobblepot had his own fencing foil and with a hand behind his back; he was practicing several moves. He was fairly good, if Harley was any judge of skill, graceful, but he definitely lacked Jack's style and elegance. Harley had to admit, Cobblepot looked as if he knew what he was doing.

“Ho there, Cobblepot!” Jack grinned waving as he walked over with Harley. “Ready to do a battle?” Jack giggled whispering under his breath.

“Tweedledum and Tweedledee
Agreed to have a battle!
For Tweedledum said Tweedledee
Had spoiled his nice new rattle....”

Harley giggled, elbowing Jack who jerked, rubbing his side with a chuckle.

Cobblepot turned a sneer on his face. “Jack Wayne.”

Jack did his best to make a stern face, but his grin kept spoiling it. “Oswald Cobblepot.”
Oswald frowned as he glared at Harley. “You’re the woman from the other night aren’t you?”

Jack smiled. “This is Harley Quinn—my lady.”

“She your second?” Cobblepot asked confused. Jack rolled his eyes. “Are you serious? No, she is just here as my cheering section.”

“Fine. She can watch you lose.” Oswald’s smile was nasty.

Jack sighed, only just barely stopping himself from rolling his eyes at Oswald. Jack went over to Harley who had picked up the bag holding his foil and withdrew it for him.

Jack smiled at her, his eyes taking her in.

“You look beautiful today,” he said softly when he stepped close, wrapping his hand around hers that held the foil.

“Be careful Jack. I don’t trust him.” Harley said quietly as she frowned. Jack brushed her lips with his. “Don’t you worry my pumpkin pie, I’m not to be trusted either.” He gave her a huge smile and a wink taking the foil from her hands.

Jack turned around, walking a couple of steps from Harley before he performed a few stretches, several deep lunges, twirling the foil easily, his movements made easily and effortlessly. He did everything with a grin, the blue in his eyes catching the morning light and sparkling. He glanced over his shoulder at Harley waggling his eyebrows at her and made a kissy face. She grinned, covering her mouth as she giggled before she stepped up to him, placing her hands gently on his chest. “I love you.” She pitched her voice low, the words only meant for him.

She ran her hands up his chest, her eyes wandering down over the fabric of his turtleneck, feeling the muscles of his chest under her hands, the memory of running her fingers over him last night coming to her mind. She brought her eyes back up to his face. “Don’t trust him,” she reiterated with a whisper.

“I will be careful my sweets,” he whispered back. Harley cupped his face brushing her lips against his. Jack licked her lips before stepping away from her and turning to Oswald who had watched their little display with something close to envy.

Jack smiled. “Ready Tweedledum?”

Oswald narrowed his eyes stepping forward, his foil held up.

“Yes,” he hissed in anger.

The two men started to circle one another, Jack tall and lean, Oswald lean, though shorter. They eyed each other, their blades held in front of them in their right hands, their left hands behind their backs.

Jack giggled as his blue eyes danced with mischief. “What do you call a penguin stuck in the desert?”

Oswald glared at him. “Stop calling me that!”

Oswald lunged, his strike almost perfectly executed, but Jack danced back bring his blade up to easily parry, pushing Oswald's blade up and away. Cobblepot snarled, dancing forward again, his arm moving quickly as he did a series of hard remise moves. It was clear that Oswald had training, but Jack also had training and natural grace.

Jack laughed, his blade moving swiftly blocking each of Oswald's attacks. The sounds of metal striking against metal blocked out any other sounds in the garden. The two men broke apart, taking several steps back and eyeballing each other. Jack made a sudden move that startled Harley. He dropped his weight to the ground in a crouch, placing his hand on rough overgrown bricks of the path to steady himself as he lunged up, his arm coming up to stab at Oswald. The safety-tipped blade hit Oswald in the chest causing him to stumbled backward.

Jack laughed. “One for me, Penguin.”

Oswald snarled. “You wouldn't be so cocky if we were using real blades.”

The shorter man moved around in a slow circle, eyeballing Jack with a smug grin on his lips.

“Oh, you don't think so? I'm the one who scored a point already Ossie.” Jack sneered right back.

“Then if you're so sure of yourself, why don't we use real blades? Or are you afraid to look foolish in front of your tart?” Oswald chuckled.

Jack dropped the point of his foil down, his eyes narrowing dangerously. “Don't you dare say anything about Harley.

Oswald's smile was vicious. “Really? Afraid what you pay her to sleep with you isn't enough? That she might see that I'm a better catch? Or are you afraid pretty boy? Afraid of getting that face scarred up? Afraid of looking ugly to your whore”

Jack's smile was just as vicious as his eyes glinted with something akin to madness. “You say one more thing about Harley I'm going to make you regret it...for the rest of your life Penguin. I'm going to teach you a lesson about respect Penguin, a hard lesson...and if you're lucky, you might live long enough to learn it.” Jack's laugh was anything but humorous. “I'm not scared Penguin...Are you?”

Oswald laughed off Jack's threat. “Fine.”

Oswald motioned to his messenger boy who was standing nearby. “Lance, go to the house and get the real blades from the library.”

Lance looked between the two men, his eyes wide, but he nodded and took off at a jog for the house. Jack walked over to Harley. He set the foil down on the bag that she had placed on one of the benches. Harley wrapped her arms around his waist. “Jack, are you sure about this? I think that's what he was hoping for all along...” Jack pulled her against him, his eyes sliding sideways. He could see Oswald watching the two of them, his expression unreadable. Jack narrowed his eyes, otherwise ignoring the shorter man.

Jack smiled down at her wrapping his arms around her and giving her rear a squeeze. “I'll beat him without getting a scratch.”

Once inside the Cobblepot manor, Lance made a detour through the decaying rooms heading toward the servants wing. It was in just as much disrepair as the rest of the place, but it allowed Lance to let Knox in through a small door around the back before the duel had begun without Cobblepot being any the wiser. Lance had stashed Knox in a closet and now finally arrived back to let the reporter out.

Knox stumbled out of the closet when Lance opened the door. “Geez! I was beginning to wonder if you were going to leave me there!”

“Sorry Mr. Knox. I just finally was able to slip away. Mr. Cobblepot sent me to get the real blades.” Lance glanced behind him, as if worried that his employer would be there watching him.

Knox grinned. “They're going to use real weapons?’”

Lanced nodded vigorously. “Yeah. If you go around that side, you should be able to stay hidden and get to the center fountain; that's where they're fighting.”

Knox grinned. “Thanks Lance.”

“Just don't get caught okay? I don't want Mr. Cobblepot to know I let anyone in, he'll kill me!” Lance had headed toward the doorway, but stopped and turned to look at Knox giving the reporter a pleading look.

“Don't worry kid, I'll get a few pics and leave. No one will know I was ever here.” Knox grinned. Except for a million readers of Vale's articles...

Chapter End Notes

And of course Jack’s speech to Harley is from Suicide Squad chemical wedding scene.
PayBack Time

Oswald watched them, the two disgusting lovebirds. Jack Wayne had pulled the blonde up against his body while they waited and was kissing her...if that was what you could call it. Looked a lot like he was trying to suck her face off or choke her with his tongue. Though the blonde seemed to be enjoying herself.

Oswald frowned in contemplation. After he defeated Jack, how much would it take to get the woman to suck his face like that...or suck other things. He snickered at the thought.

Jack had his hands on Harley's waist, his forehead against hers. He grinned, his eyes locked with hers while he weaved them both in place as they waited for Lance to return. It was as if they were slow dancing to music only the two of them could hear.

“Jack...I just...real weapons?” Harley had her hands on his shoulders as she stared into his eyes, her fingers playing gently with the edges of his short hair. “This...I don't know...I'm scared. What if he..?” she pressed her lips together glancing down.

Jack chuckled. “Don't worry pumpkin. He's the one that needs to be worried. “

Jack traced her jaw with the tip of a finger. “Nothing is going to happen. If anything, Ossie is the one that's in trouble. He should have never said those things about you.”

Jack's eyes narrowed. “I'm going to make him pay for that.”

Harley looked nervous. “Jack, you can't...”

“Kill him?” Jack chuckled pulling her against him wrapping his arms snugly around her. “I won't kill him. I am going to give him something to remember me by though.” He giggled as he brushed her lips with his, his tongue snaking out to trace her upper lip.

Oswald made a snort that sounded almost like a bird's squawk. “How much he pay you? I'll triple whatever the going rate is for a high class whore these days.”

Then the little man snorted again.

Jack, keeping a hold of Harley, turned to glare at Oswald, and then slowly giggled.

“Away you three inch fool! More of your conversation would infect my brain!”

Oswald frowned looking confused which made Jack laugh all the harder. “Didn't they teach you Shakespeare in school Ossie or were you too busy skating on the ice with the other penguins?”

Oswald sneered in flaring anger. “Shut up Wayne!”

At that moment, Lance came running up with the swords tucked under his arm. He was panting and he looked nervous when he came to a stop in front of Oswald. “Sorry sir, I came as fast as I could.”

Oswald narrowed his eyes at Jack before he turned to reached for the weapons. “Whatever. You ready Jack? Or are you ready to turn tail and run?”

Jack smiled and laughed. “He who hesitates, meditates in a horizontal position!”
Oswald gave Jack a sour look as he handed the taller man one of the blades. “Here is hoping your skill equals your mouth.”

Jack took the blade and smiled. He had to admit, the rapier was beautiful. It wasn't old, but fairly new, based on a seventeenth century French style with doubled-sided blade, a fuller closed hilt, knuckle guard, and straight quillons. The hilt was wooden, covered in leather judging by the feel of it. The two blades were twins of one another. Jack smiled watching Oswald doing a few warm up moves. Jack had to admit, the little man knew his fencing moves.

Jack turned, holding the blade in one hand, while with the other he wrapped around Harley's waist pulling her against him.

He smiled at her. “A kiss, my fair lady?”

Harley giggled. “I shall bestow upon you a kiss, my champion.”

Jack waggled his eyebrows at her. Harley giggled in response to him and wrapped her arms around his neck as she kissed him. At first it was just a press of her lips, but Harley slowly opened her mouth, running her tongue along his bottom lip, encouraging him to open his mouth slowly. Jack purred as his tongue snaked out to caress her tongue in return. Harley rose onto the tips of her toes, her hands threading through his hair, deepening the kiss, her tongue sliding into his mouth while she pressed the full length of her body against his. Jack groaned tightening his grip around her waist, nearly lifting her off her feet.

Hidden within some of the overgrown bushes and doing his best not to curse too loudly, Knox held his camera up. He was extremely pleased with himself for having brought his Nikon D5 DSLR camera and not just his cellphone, because the picture he took of Jack Wayne kissing a gorgeous blonde was not only going to be a beautiful picture, it was going to be a front page of the entertainment and society section. All while holding onto a sword, too! Knox's grin was wide, snapping a few more pictures in quick succession.

Rich people never failed to entertain.

Jack grinned wickedly when Harley caught his bottom lip between her teeth tugging just slightly before letting him go.

“Be careful puddin,” she said quietly, barely above a whisper.

Jack's grin was devilish in its attractiveness. “I will...I promise my sweet.”

Harley stepped back, releasing Jack, dragging her hands down his chest before she stepped backwards out of the way. Jack turned to Cobblepot holding the sword up in front of his face, grinning the entire time. “Ready Penguin?”

Cobblepot hissed, “Don’t call me that!”

Oswald's temper had him making the first move, a swift lunge toward Jack, his sword slicing through the air where Jack's face would have been except that Jack took several quick steps back. He blocked, the swords hitting each other with a clear metallic sound. Oswald step back with a hiss. Jack smiled lifting a brow at Oswald.
Jack suddenly moved, he took two, three, and a fourth quick swipe at Oswald, who stumbled backwards and weaved out of the way, only bringing up his blade to block once. Jack grinned hopping dexterously back, sliding his eyes toward Harley and winking at her. Harley had her hands up to her mouth watching the two men, her heart hammering against her chest. She knew enough about fighting that she hoped that Jack would not be distracted by her presence.

Jack suddenly lunged again, two, three hard strikes, sword against sword, Oswald managing to keep Jack away from him. Suddenly Oswald lunged, snapping his blade up; Jack deflected at the last possible moment, but Jack misjudged and the tip of Oswald's blade slashed Jack in the face, cutting a thin, but deep wound from under Jack's right eye, up through the eyebrow. Jack hissed stumbling backwards, blood suddenly blinding him in one eye.

Oswald looked stunned for a few heartbeats, then smug as Jack put a hand to his face, his fingers coming back bloody.

Oswald laughed. “There! Ruined that pretty face of yours. He isn't as good as you thought he was, eh you little cunt?” Oswald grinned at Harley.

Harley, who had run up to Jack and was now doing her best to wipe at the blood, ignored Oswald, but Jack growled.

“Jack, stop! You need stitches,” Harley whispered emphatically, but Jack only smiled. “I'm not going to let that little shit call you names.”

Jack smiled. “I'm not going to lose, trust me.”

Harley nodded and reluctantly stepped back again as Jack turned a vicious grin at Oswald. “Pretty good there Penguin—let's see if I can do better.”

Penguin frowned for a moment, but then he had to bring his blade up quickly. Jack lunged, his arm lashing out like a striking snake. Oswald blocked, two strikes to the head, two more lower slashes, the blades ringing against each other. Jack's grinning at him was beginning to unnerve the shorter man. Oswald took several steps backwards from Jack, whose eyes never left his opponent.

Jack remained calm, staying his ground simply following Oswald with his eyes, the blade held casually in his hand while Oswald circled, looking for an opportunity. Penguin rushed him with several quick strikes, but Jack's arm moved swiftly, the clash of metal making ripples of fear run up Harley's spine. One, two, swift hits then Oswald lowered his strikes, three, four, Jack blocked each one only taking a few small steps back as Oswald circled him.

Penguin took a chance and lunged, his blade coming in close, the hand guards slamming together when Jack let him get in close, almost under his guard. Cobblepot made a stupid move and grabbed at the blade of Jack's rapier. Jack grinned, yanking his blade back, slicing open Cobblepot's palm. Oswald gasped at the surprise pain, yanking himself and his weapon backwards. He shook out his hand snarling incomprehensibly at Jack. Jack only smiled, a line of blood continuing to drip down his cheek.

In the bushes Knox was nearly having a fit. This was great stuff!!! He couldn't have set this up better if he had planned it. Not only were the two of men really, actually sword fighting, but they had both drawn blood and the blonde was weeping!! It was like a fucking movie!! It took every ounce of willpower and skill for Knox not to reveal himself and remain calm as he took pictures. This was going to be great!

Jack and Oswald circled each other just as the rain started to drizzle down. Harley glanced up, she hadn't noticed the clouds moving in. Her frown deepened as she brought her attention back to Jack and Oswald. Jack glanced at Harley as the rain began to come down harder.

Jack giggled. “Oh Harley in a wet dress. No looking at my girl Oswald!!”

Oswald grinned nastily. “Your woman might like to have a real man in her bed.”

Jack circled the shorter man with a vicious grin. “She has a real man Penguin.”

Then Jack lunged, bringing his blade up and over, then twisted at the wrist, striking Oswald's blade. Oswald held his blade up, backing away slowly his eyes never leaving Jack's. The shorter man started to feel something he wasn't accustomed to—panic. There was something in Jack's eyes, the way those blue orbs glowed with malice. For the first time since they started their little duel, Oswald wasn't certain he could win.

Jack grinned, giggling softly. He started to chant in a sing song voice.

“A man of words and not of deeds Is like a garden full of weeds...”

His sword slapped hard several times against Cobblepot's blade, while Jack, smiling brightly the whole time, continued.

“And when the weeds begin to grow
It's like a garden full of snow
And when the snow begins to fall
It's like a bird upon the wall
And when the bird away does fly
It's like an eagle in the sky...”

Jack took two steps backwards as Cobblepot lunged, their blades moving swiftly, so much so that Harley was having trouble keeping up as the sharp sound of metal against metal filled the overgrown garden. Lance had moved next to her, his young eyes large as he watched the fight.

Jack laughed, lunging, throwing Oswald off balance.

“And when the sky begins to roar
It's like a lion at the door
And when the door begins to crack
It's like a stick across your back
And when your back begins to smart
It's like a penknife in your heart “
The rain started to come down harder, drenching everyone in the garden. Knox cursed softly, looking up at the uncooperative sky; the heaviness of the rain was making it difficult for him to get decent pictures. He was wishing now he had brought a video camera with him. Jack Wayne was being pretty damn creepy right now, just like all the rumors that had said the younger Wayne brother was crazy...at this moment, Knox would believe it.
Jack narrowed his eyes, his long legs taking him around slowly. His smile was beautiful as far as Harley was concerned, though to anyone else watching there was an edge of madness to the twinkle in his eyes. Oswald was panting just a little, keeping his weapon up in front of him, his eyes focused only on Jack despite the rain. The rain was washing the blood down Jack face, causing it to stain his lips red. He smiled at Cobblepot and hissed. “Now you pay for the things you called my Harley.”

Jack giggled and pressed his attack, suddenly moving with a speed he had thus far not demonstrated while reciting the last verse of the rhyme.
“And when your heart begins to bleed You're dead, and dead, and dead indeed.”
Oswald squawked as he brought his blade up to defend himself, but Jack hammered down on him. The moment when Ossie's blade slipped, it looked like Jack might stab in him in the chest. Harley let out a scream. “NO!”

Jack pulled himself away from Oswald at the last moment, his blade dipping down to slice through Oswald's knee, the thin blade cutting through the limb like a knife through butter. Oswald gasped in shock, dropping to his other knee, then falling over when the pain raced up his leg like white hot fire, just as Jack yanked the blade out. Jack grinned viciously. “I hope you have a limp to remember me by Penguin. Don't ever challenge me again. And don't you ever insult my girl again.”

Lance had rushed over dropping down on his knees next to his employer who was holding his knee and groaning. Lance pulled out a small burner phone, dialing 911.

Penguin had turned pale and was glaring hatefully at Jack. Through clenched teeth, the little man spat, “This isn't over!! Just you watch!! I'm going to ruin you and your brother!! I promise!!”

Cobblepot was trembling from the pain, the rain making him look pathetic, Jack thought as he smiled and replied in a voice barely louder than a whisper, “Go ahead and try Cobblepot—I dare you.”

Jack tossed the rapier down onto the old brick path in front of Cobblepot before he briskly walked over to Harley, wrapping an arm around her waist. “Let's go home; this is over.”

*K

Knox took a few more photos of Jack Wayne and the woman leaving and a few more of Cobblepot limping back to his decaying manor. Knox was fighting not to giggle with glee. This was perfect!!

Jack was turning a corner in the car when the blood started to flow down his face again. Harley searched around in her purse until she found a tissue. She reached over pressing it to the half of the cut over his eye.

Jack glanced sideways at her. “Are you all right Harley?”

Harley smiled softly. “I should be asking you that. Are you all right?”

Jack smiled. “Perfect.”

Harley frowned. “What are you going to tell Bruce? You can't hide that wound.”

Jack shrugged. “The truth...why lie when the truth is so much fun!”

With his hair plastered to his forehead, Harley thought that he looked adorable despite the blood continuing to run down his face. She smiled at him and giggled with a shake of her head. “You're incorrigible.”

It was early afternoon when they returned home, Jack pulling up in front of the manor. Harley had called ahead to Alfred, asking him to meet them at the door letting him know that Jack was hurt and that he needed stitches. Alfred hadn't asked any questions, he had simply told her he would have the medical room ready when they arrived. Alfred was waiting for them at the front door, looking as calm as ever when Jack pulled the car up to the front of the house. The only expression Alfred made when seeing the vertical wound that ran down from Jack's brow to the young man's cheek, was a slight wrinkling around his mouth.

“Follow me Master Jack, Miss Harleen.” Alfred frowned for a moment before he turned away from them.

“You are both soaked. We shall avoid the carpets.” Alfred said. He turned on his heel walking back into the manor, his back slightly stiff. Jack giggled holding the tissue Harley had given him to the part of the wound over his brow to stop the blood from running into his eye. He grinned at Harley.

“I think we're in trouble.”

Harley frowned. “Oh Jack.”

He smirked and shrugged at her before he followed Alfred, holding Harley's hand as they entered the Wayne home. Alfred moved swiftly through the manor with the two younger people walking quickly behind him.

Once they were in the medical room, Alfred pointed wordlessly at the examination table while he moved to pull out a first aid kit, gloves and several other items he needed to sew Jack's head wound up.

Jack sat quietly on the bed with Harley (who he insisted sit beside him) who held his hand as they both watched Alfred. With his back still to them the older man asked.

“Did you at least win Master Jack?”

Alfred turned around, walk to the over to his patient, and set his supplies alongside Jack on the bed. The older man snapped the gloves on over his hands and carefully picked up the curved needle from the suture kit. With his other hand, he disinfected the wound before he began to delicately sew the wound on Jack's forehead closed.

“I did Alfred.” Jack grinned in response, then winced once as the needle pierced his skin.

Harley, squeezing Jack's hand, spoke with awe. “He was really amazing Alfred. It wasn't his idea to use real blades. Oswald was being rude to me then told Jack he wouldn't be so cocky if the blades were real. It was like a sword fight right from a movie! Jack was just amazing. He won by sliding his sword through Cobblepot's knee.”

Alfred, who had moved to start suturing the wound where it continued along Jack's cheek just under Jack's eye, frowned.

Jack let out a short little laugh. “Don't worry Alfie, the bird's alive.”

Alfred nodded slightly as he worked, glancing at Harley who nodded; her silent assurance seemed to make Alfred feel better.

“There now Master Jack, all sewed up.” Alfred placed a bandage over both halves of the cut. “I'm afraid it might still leave a thin scar.”

Alfred pick up the suture kit and stepped back.

Jack smiled “That's alright Alfred.”

The butler turned to gaze at the two of them. “So what are you going to tell your brother, or Miss Vale this evening for that matter?”

“Well, I was going to tell Bruce the truth...shouldn't I tell Miss Vale the same?” Jack grinned innocently.

Alfred sighed. “Go and clean up for lunch Master Jack. I would advise telling Master Bruce, but let him decide what you tell Miss Vale. Master Bruce should be home a couple of hours before Miss Vale is due to arrive this evening. I will make lunch for both of you.”

Jack nodded. “All right, come on Harley!” Jack hopped down tugging Harley with him.

“Thank you Alfred,” Harley responded thankfully, releasing Jack's hand in order to hug the older man. Alfred looked embarrassed, but returned the hug. “Go on now Miss Harleen, get yourself out of those wet things before you catch a cold.”

Jack tugged Harley up the stairs, but instead of taking her to her bedroom, he headed down the hall and turned to the left away from her own room.
“Where are we going Jack?” she asked realizing she had never been down this hall before.

“I thought we could shower together...in my room.” Jack smiled at her stopping when he came to a heavy oak door. He turned the knob, opening the door just enough for the two of them to enter. It was dark inside, the curtains clearly pulled over the windows to block out the sunlight. Jack let go of her hand to flip on the light switch.

Heavy curtains, a shade of plum so dark that they almost looked black, covered the large windows. The dimly lit room's floors were dark, highly polished wood, with a few thick, plush looking throw rugs in colors of dark purples and blues that matched the heavy bedspread. The bed itself had to be a king size bed; she had never seen anything so large in all her life. The walls were painted a dark plum color which made the room feel cozy to her rather than too dark. An antique desk sat against one wall where Jack had several papers spread about, along with jars of pens and pencils.

She saw several knives, a couple of them embedded into the expensive walls over his desk as if he had been playing darts with them, and a few embedded into the wood of the antique desk which made Harley think they had been slammed into it in anger. There was a half empty bottle of whiskey on the desk along with a tumbler that was half full, next to a dark stone ash tray that had recently been cleaned out. A pistol sat across the top of the desk with a handful of bullets scattered around it.

There were several dark paintings on the walls; one, all in black and greys that looked like a man's head was exploding into butterflies, another looked like a man melting against a window, his head partly gone...all in black, grey and white. Each painting conveyed pain, madness, and struggle.

The doors to a large walk-in closet were left open, the dim light from the room only hinting at what lay beyond. She caught a glimpse of shoes, a walking stick or two, and rows and rows of clothing.

Harley walked around, her mouth slightly open as she stopped to examine the paintings.

Jack smiled and explained, “I painted those...I haven't painted in a while, but I was thinking about taking it up again. Maybe painting you, if you would let me.”

Harley turned to look at him over her shoulder. “You'd want to paint me?”

Jack's smile broadened. “Yes I would, naked, lying on my bed...”

She blushed wrinkling her nose. “You're teasing.”

“No I'm not. I would. You are the most beautiful creature in the world to me Harley.” He walked closer, sliding his fingers into her damp, tangled hair. “You are what holds me on the brink of insanity.”

He whispered his voice caressing over her skin as he pulled her closer, his lips just barely touching hers. “When I fall, I want you to come with me. Would you go insane with me Harley?”

Harley's eyes fluttered partly closed. She wanted to tell him no...no she wouldn't let that happen, she wouldn't let him go insane. She was here to cure him, save him, but at that moment she couldn't say any of those words. All she could say was, “Yes, yes Jack. I will follow you anywhere.”

Jack purred, brushing her lips with his own. “How about you follow me to the shower then?”

She opened her partly closed eyes and giggled at him. Jack reached out grabbing her hand and led her to the master bathroom that was part of his room.
The bathroom was its own separate room, rather than just a small attached space on the bedroom. The floor was dark marble as was the top of the bathroom cabinet which held two sinks and a mirror that ran the length of the wall. On the counter were some different bottles of cologne, all expensive, Harley realized. His brush, toothbrush and some hair products were scattered across the counter and even a tube of bright red lip stick. There was the toilet, of course, along with the tub/shower combination that took up one whole corner of the room with clear glass sliding doors instead of a curtain. Harley was surprised to see a comfortable looking lounge chair with a side table in one corner of the room on which several books were piled.

Jack grinned brightly walking over to the shower and sliding open the door, leaning in to turn the water on. He let the water run over his hand for a few moments before he pulled the handle that shifted the water to emit from the shower head. With a smile he stepped back closing the door and started to strip.

He had just pulled the turtleneck over his head (which had Harley's mouth watering looking at his washboard stomach) tossing the damp piece of clothing to the side and frowned at her.

“Aren't' you going to shower with me?” he asked.

Harley blushed. “I...well...”

Jack yanked his boots off tossing them into the same corner before he started to unbutton his pants, his blue eyed gaze never wavering. “We might as well build up our appetite...some more.” Jack giggled with a lustful glint in his eyes. “And what better way than to have sex with a gorgeous blonde in the shower?”

Jack slowly slid his pants down his firmly muscles thighs. Harley practically licked her lips. Jack grinned, turned around and opened the shower door so he could step in, only to stop and gaze at her over his shoulder. “Coming?”

Harley nodded. “Yes, yes.”

She stripped out of her damp clothing, tossing the dress and shoes over with Jack's things, along with her panties and bra. It felt wonderful to get out of the damp clothing. She took the last few steps to the shower, Jack holding the door open for her, and stepped inside.

Jack pulled her against him under the shower head, his hands settling on her hips. He tilted his head back letting the warm water run over him. Harley's eyes fluttered from the water spraying across them, but she gazed at his arched neck, watching the water run down his front. She laid her hands on his chest gently caressing his pectorals, her hands running in gentle circles.

Jack's head came up with a bright grin. “Turn around. I want to wash your hair.”

Harley giggled with a warm blush, doing as he asked. “All right Jack.”

Jack reached to a shower shelf to grab a bottle of shampoo. The bottle was brand new, a bottle he had had Alfred purchase for him just for this (although the aging butler was unaware of its purpose)...just for the moment Jack had Harley as his and brought her to his shower, his room. No one except Alfred had ever been in his room. Having Harley here was another step in claiming her as his.

Jack lifted the bottle, pouring a small amount into the palm of his hand. He had picked the brand out himself based on reviews of how sexy the shampoo smelled. (He had settled on a brand from Victoria's Secret, where he had also purchased other items to eventually give to his Harley).
Jack smiled, pleased with the scent, reaching up and began to run his fingers over her scalp.

Harley moaned softly while Jack began to work the shampoo into a lather, his long nimble fingers gently massaging her scalp while he slowly piled her thick hair up on her head, working the shampoo in thoroughly. When he was done, Jack eased her under the shower head, letting the water run through her hair, his fingers carefully tugging through any tangles as he rinsed the shampoo from her hair. Next, Jack reached for the conditioner, pouring a generous amount into the palm of his hand before rubbing the creamy substance thoroughly through her hair, paying special attention to the ends of her hair. Harley let out a small laugh of pleasure. “This is so nice Jack.”

“I'm glad you are enjoying it,” he said softly. “There, we'll let that sit for a few minutes...now I get to wash your body.”

Harley had had her eyes closed, opened them now with a slight pout on her lips. “Don't I get to wash your hair?”

Jack grinned. “Next time—this time it's my turn to enjoy you...I get to wash you...worship you.” His eyes wandered down her body then back to her eyes. “My treat for winning today.” His smile was sweet, his blue eyes lustful.

She could almost feel the heat emanating from his gaze, his smile turning a touch predatory when he reached behind himself without looking and picked up the bar of soap. Jack waggled his eyebrows at her while he rubbed the soap between his hands until he had a good soapy lather. “Hmm...where should I start Harley?”

Harley giggled, her blue eyes dancing with mischief. “I think the breasts are always a good place to start puddin.”

Jack purred at the sound of his nickname. “Mmm...perhaps you are correct my little dumpling.”

He winked at her before reaching out to slowly run his soapy hands over her breasts. Harley took a shuddering breath, the feel of his slick palms running over her breasts caused her body to vibrate with pleasure. Jack focused special attention on her breasts, squeezing and massaging before his hands moved down over her stomach, the soap allowing his palms to slip and slide down the flat planes of her stomach easily. His hands danced along her stomach then spread wide to embrace the curve of her hips, then lower still. Jack's thumbs traced the the “v” of her sex in a smooth swirl before sliding down, spreading her thighs gently.

Harley adjusted her position when Jack's hands worked their way down her thighs. She spread her legs a fraction to allow his hands to wander along the sensitive skin of her inner thighs. Jack dragged his hands up and down slowly, massaging her skin as he did, taking his time to run his soapy hands over every inch of sensitive flesh. His hands gradually came up her thighs again, but this time his thumbs circled her sex drawing a sensual line from the shape of her groin up along the skin between her thighs and back. Jack let the running water rinse his hands as he plied his dexterous fingers to his Harley. She moaned softly stumbling back a little to lean against the shower wall when his thumbs delved deeper between the lips of her sex, finding her most sensitive spot. At first his touches were delicate, just the tips of his thumbs swirling over the sensitive nub of her clitoris, but as Harley started to pant, his strokes became more forceful. Jack grinned, his fingers pressing harder on her clitoris eliciting deeper moans from Harley.

her lips.

Jack rubbed harder, his thumbs rotating in slow circles over her, forcing Harley to use the shower wall to hold herself upright. Jack left one thumb on her clitoris rolling and stroking, while his other hand snaked up her body to glide over her breast, his slick fingers pinching her nipple.

Harley gasped climaxing with a cry. “UHH!! Jack!!”

He chuckled. “That's my precious...”

He continued to rub causing her body to quake. “Oh Jack!!” Harley moaned.

Jack licked her mouth just before he kissed her hard, pressing her up against the shower wall. The water ran down over them washing away the soap. Jack thrust his tongue into her mouth, pressing the length of his body against her. She wrapped her arms around him, her hands immediately coming down to grip his rear. She squeezed pressing his hips against hers feeling his hard, hot erection trapped between their bodies. Harley dragged her teeth over his tongue her voice heavy with need.

“I want you Jack...I want you...puddin...” She giggled softly, her eyes staring into his, becoming lost in the deep blue that seemed to almost glow, as if lit by some inner light. Jack grinned with pleasure. He liked the way she moaned his name...her nickname for him made him feel more than simply special to her...he couldn't put his finger on what it was, but hearing her call him puddin felt right.

Jack's hands slid down her hips again, then up, feeling the almost perfect roundness of her hips, the silken softness of her skin under his hands. He was about to press her against the wall when Harley slid down to her knees.

“Harley?” He blinked in confusion for a moment. Harley gave him the cutest yet wickedest grin when she gazed up at him. Her blue eyes mischievous just before she ran her tongue against the underside of his erection.

Jack groaned. The sudden warmth of her tongue was so unexpected that Jack stumbled forward slightly, his hands catching the shower wall to keep himself steady. Harley grasped him with one hand, careful not to hold onto him too hard, just enough to hold him firmly. She rubbed her wet hand up and down him once, then twice causing Jack to groan louder.

She leaned in to wrap her mouth around him while her hand continued to glide up and down his length. Jack's hips jerked. The warmth of her mouth was intoxicating, the press of her soft lips against his erection had him pressing his teeth into his lip as ripples of pleasure raced up from his groin.

Harley sucked hard, deep, taking all of him into her mouth, her tongue playing against the underside of his shaft, until he was nearly touching the back of her throat. Harley gradually pulled her lips away slowly, her teeth just touching his tender skin, her tongue flicking back and forth against the underside of his shaft, which caused goosebumps to spread across his skin. Jack's eyes rolled back for a moment before he could look down and focus on her. He had never seen anything as beautiful as his Harley down on her knees with him in her mouth. His ran his fingers through her hair, watching her while she licked and sucked on him, her hair twisting around his fingers.

Harley glanced up, grinning while she twirled her tongue around the head of his shaft. She loved having Jack almost melting at her touch, weak with the things she was doing to him. Her eyes danced with merriment. Jack chuckled seeing the expression in her eyes, then groaned, his hips jerking forward when she sucked again.
“Damn Harley...you are so good at that.” He grinned then gasped when she took him deep into her mouth once more. He reached down with one hand, his fingers caressing her shoulder then along her jaw, feeling the way her cheeks were hollowed out when she sucked on him.

“Come here Harley;” he purred then groaned.

She stood up grinning, but then Jack surprised her with the way he nearly hauled her up off her feet, pressing her against the wall. He hooked one of her legs over his arm, lifting her leg up high, forcing her other foot up on her tiptoe in order to maintain her balance. Harley wrapped one arm around his neck, the fingers of her other hand pressing into his shoulder. He held her there gazing into her eyes before he slowly lowered his head to her breast. Harley arched her back, easing her breasts up to give him better access just as Jack bit down on her. She groaned when he started to suck on her skin, knowing he would leave a purple mark on her. His tongue glided along the curve of her breast until he touched her nipple, then Jack bit again. Harley groaned, then whimpered when he released her nipple in order to gaze into her eyes again.

Jack smiled at her, while with his other hand he teased her opening.

“Do you want me Harley?” Jack asked, his voice warm, soft.

“Yes puddin...oh yes,” Harley moaned

Jack hissed, pressing close to her.

“Good...” he whispered then thrust into her.

Harley gasped in pleasure when she felt Jack enter her. Jack kept his movement's slow, but hard, burying himself deep before pulling back, then hard again, thumping her backside against the shower wall at the same moment he was pressing her leg up higher. He cradled her rear with the hand holding her leg up, pressing her firmly against the wall, his hips thrust hard and fast, then slow, yet deep. Harley, her hair sticking her to her face and shoulders, shuddered, her fingers digging into his shoulder.

She was panting crying out. “Oh Jack, Jack, Jack!!”

Jack trembled. “Harley...come for me Harley...”

Harley groaned. He felt good, more than simply good...she couldn't think of words that could possibly describe how he made her feel.

She screamed out his name. “JACK!” but her cries were cut off when Jack covered her mouth with his own. Jack's kisses were at once passionate and tender. He caught the high cry of her orgasm against his lips. She whimpered against his mouth. Jack slowed his thrusts down, easing into her, then pulling back gradually only to ease into her again.

“Uhh..Jack, I love you...I love you puddin...” She giggled her body tightening around him. Jack shuddered, moaning her name. “Harley...I love you...my girl...my Harley.”

She groaned feeling his member swelling as Jack gasped, coming with a hot sudden burst. Harley groaned climaxing with him, wrapping her arms around his neck, burying her moans against his throat.

Jack thrust a few more times, his legs trembling.

He eased out of her. Harley shuddered, a soft moan escaping her lips when he pulled out. He wrapped his arms around her waist pulling her closer against him, his face buried against her damp hair. They stood under the shower head letting the warm water wash over the both of them without either of them saying a word. They didn't need to.

After a few moments Jack sighed. “We should finish up and have some lunch.”

Harley sighed in contentment with a warm smile, her fingers caressing the back of his neck. “You're right.”

After they finished showering. Jack grabbed a couple of towels, but instead of letting Harley dry herself off he dried her.

She giggled as he ran the fluffy towel down her legs. “Jack what are you doing?”

He grinned. “What does it look like I'm doing? I'm drying my lady off.”

Harley blushed. “You don't have to do that.”

“I know.” He grinned and winked at her handing her another towel to wrap around herself as he walked naked out of the bathroom toweling his hair dry. She wrapped the towel around her middle and followed after him.

Jack walked out into the main bedroom and over to a closet. Harley followed after him just watching him. She was definitely enjoying watching him walk around naked. He tossed the towel he had been using to the side while Harley sat on the edge of the bed gazing at him. Jack pulled out a suit with thin purple chalk strips in a dark navy blue, a three piece suit with thin lapels.

He held it up. “What do you think Harls?”

“Oh, you will look incredible,” Harley gushed which made Jack laugh. “Why thank you Harls.”

Harley giggled standing up. “I should probably go get dressed myself.”

Jack frowned as if he just now realized that she didn't share a room with him.

“Oh, yes all right. I'll come to your room as soon as I'm dressed.” Jack walked over tossing the suit onto the bed as Harley stood up. He pulled her into the circle of his arms and kissed her tenderly. Harley caressed his face with the tips of her fingers.

He grinned. “I like you wearing only a towel by the way.”

Harley blushed and giggled. “I like you completely naked.”

His grin widened and then he kissed the tip of her nose.

Harley hurried across the hall to her room, praying that she wouldn't be caught by Bruce or Alfred wearing only a towel. She made it to her door with a sigh of relief. Once inside, she dropped the towel and headed over to her dresser where she pulled out a pair of lacy red panties with a matching bra. She slipped into them with a smile, hoping Jack would like the set. She had bought them ages ago with no real reason except she thought they were pretty. Harley stopped and gazed at herself in the mirror. There were a few new bite marks from the shower.
She blushed tracing one mark that fell into her cleavage like a secret. The hot images of Jack with his mouth on her returned, causing her to squirm a little. She loved the feel of him, the smell of him...everything about Jack Wayne made her blood run hot. With a happy shiver, Harley hurried over to her closet. She pulled out a pair of slit-leg sailor pants in black that buttoned up the side of her hip and a red boat neck dolman top that was snug around her hips. It was a casual yet nice enough outfit that she could wear it during the interview if Vicki Vale happened to find out about her. Harley was assuming that Bruce Wayne would want her hidden, but she was also sure Jack would want her with him. This way she was prepared. Harley had just finished with her make-up, slipping on a pair of red heels and had just sat down picking up the hair dryer to finish drying her hair when she heard a knock at her door.

“It's open,” she said turning to see who it was at her door.

The door opened and Jack walked in looking devilishly handsome in the suit he had shown her earlier, his wingtip bi-colored shoes highly polished, his hair slicked back and a smile on his face. Harley's heart sped up just looking at him. She smiled turning back to the mirror. She watched him walk up behind her in the mirror's reflection and she gave him a happy grin as he stepped behind her.

“I'm almost ready; just have to finish with my hair.”

Jack grinned reaching out with one hand to brush her ear. “No rush,” he assured her. “I brought you something.”

Harley turned around setting the dryer down as Jack held out a long velvet jewelry box.

“This was my mother's, but I thought it would look beautiful on you,” Jack said softly. He opened the box. Inside, laying on a bed of white velvet, was a necklace. The craftsmanship was immediately apparent, a beautiful gold, finely crafted chain that seemed so delicate at first glance that it was almost not visible, on it hung a simple, perfectly round ruby.

“Oh Jack...” Harley said breathlessly.

Jack smiled taking the necklace out of the box, Harley turned as Jack placed the exquisite piece around her neck. He carefully hooked the clasp before he leaned in and kissed her right under the ear.

His voice was low, seductive. “It looks perfect on you.”

Harley laid her fingers against the ruby. “I just...oh Jack, it's too much.” She said, though the idea of something so clearly expensive on her throat had her a little bit thrilled.

Jack wrapped his arms around her. “It's just the start Harley,” he said with some excitement in his tone. “You are going to be part of everything with me. Even the darker bits.”

He nibbled her ear making her giggle. “Now, dry your hair and let's go eat lunch with Alfred.”

Harley grinned. She didn't know what the “darker bits” were that Jack was talking about, but honestly she didn't care. Jack had her heart, her soul and she would go wherever that would take her.

When the two of them arrived in the kitchen, Alfred glanced over, noticing the way the two of them were holding hands. His old heart swelled with happiness to see one of the brothers having found Alfred was putting the finishing touches on two plates that contained Dijon-herbed crushed salmon along with creamy dill sauce and lightly roasted red potatoes. The elderly butler was placing the potatoes on the plates just as the two walked into the kitchen. The smell, thought Harley as she entered the kitchen, was absolutely delicious.

Alfred smiled when he saw them. “Ah, there you are. I thought you might like to have lunch in the glass patio this afternoon. The rain is falling lightly and it is creating quite a cozy atmosphere. I thought the two of you might enjoy it.”

Harley blushed while Jack laughed. “You think of everything Alfie.”

“I do try Master Jack.” The older man smiled. “Now, why don’t you take Miss Harleen out there and I will bring your lunch shortly.”

Soon the two of them were sitting out in the glass patio. It was a small area, only big enough to fit perhaps ten people. The patio itself jutted off the ballroom looking out onto another section of the Wayne grounds. The view was nice, trees and hills with a view of the water and Gotham in the distance. Right now, with the sun shining with a pale liquid quality through the soft grey rain clouds, the room was indeed cozy. Alfred had set the table up with a white table cloth, candles and a bottle of white Pinot Noir. Alfred had even placed some white tulips in a vase on the table. It was all very romantic, Harley thought with a small smile.

Alfred stepped into the enclosed patio carrying a tray with their lunch on it and set their plates down in front of them. “I will return later with dessert.” The older man smiled at the two of them before he left.

A grin spread across Jack's face as he poured some wine into Harley's glass for her.

Harley was blushing as she reached over and picked up her glass of wine.

“Alfred did such a nice job, it's like we are out on a date somewhere exotic watching the rain fall.”

Jack picked up his own glass taking a long sip. “Mm...yes, he thinks of everything.”

Jack leaned over and clinked his glass against hers. “To the most beautiful woman in the world.”

Harley giggled blushing as Jack gave her a saucy wink before he sipped his wine.

Bruce arrived home early in order for him to prepare for Ms. Vale's interview tonight. He wanted to do a quick inspection of the house, to make sure everything looked good and that there was nothing that would arouse the reporter's suspicion or cause her to become overly interested in anything particular. He also wanted a chance to speak to Jack and Dr. Quinzel before Ms. Vale arrived, to make sure they both understood that Vale was not to know how they met and that they were not to let her know that Dr. Quinzel was living at the manor. He would have preferred that Dr. Quinzel not be anywhere near Ms. Vale, but he knew Jack wouldn't have it. He would make a scene if Bruce tried to force the issue of Dr. Quinzel.

Bruce was tense as he strolled into the manor and called. “Alfred?”
Alfred appeared a heartbeat later. For a moment Bruce was thinking that Alfred would be a great Batman the way the older man managed to just “appear” without a sound.

“Are Jack and Dr. Quinzel here?” Bruce asked as he loosened his tie.

“Yes they are Master Bruce, they are eating lunch on the enclosed patio.” Alfred took Bruce's jacket as younger man slipped out of it.

“Thank you Alfred.” Without further comment, Bruce walked off.

Alfred watched him go with a frown. Alfred had noticed the necklace, but now he worried how Master Bruce would react to seeing it about Miss Harleen's neck.

Jack had scooted his chair around in order to sit right next to Harley. He had picked up her hand and kissed the tip of each finger. Harley smiled softly, both of them staring at each other as if lost in each others eyes.

Jack pressed her index finger against his lips when he spoke. “We should go on vacation together.
Get away from Gotham for a while. There's a family cabin that the Wayne's have owned forever in Aspen Colorado. I don't think Bruce has been up there in a while. We could go skiing, have sex in a sauna.” Here Jack waggled his eyebrows at her. “Then we could sip hot coco naked in a big bed surrounded by blankets...Oh!” he said with a sudden thought. “Or in front of a fire with a bear skin rug...you naked...a glass of grape soda in your hand giving me a “come hither” look...” Jack giggled.

Harley giggled with him. “Grape soda?”

Jack laughed. “Yes! I could pour it in your navel and drink it with my tongue.”

Harley giggled. “Oh! That would be wonderful puddin.”

Jack was just about to say something else when his brother suddenly walked into the room speaking before he even saw Jack or Harley.. “Jack, Dr. Quinzel I need to talk to you...”

Bruce's voice trailed off, his eyes focusing on Harley, but it wasn't “her” he was seeing, but rather the necklace around her throat. Bruce's blue eyes suddenly turned cold. “Jack.” His tone was flat.

Jack turned, still holding Harley's hand, raising his eyebrows in question at his brother. “Bruce?”

Bruce narrowed his eyes focused solely on the necklace Harley wore. “Why is she wearing that?”

He pointed at Harley, who touched the necklace glancing with uncertainty between Jack and Bruce.

Jack stood up, his tone immediately defensive. “Because I gave it to her.”

“You what?” Bruce turned to Jack, his blue eyes showing more passion than Harley had seen in them since she started working at Wayne manor.

“You had no right to give that to her Jack! Especially not when she is just a...” Bruce snarled, but Jack cut him off.

Jack held up a finger. “Don't you dare, don't you finish that sentence Bruce.”

Bruce snarled. “That was our mother's! You had no business giving it to her Jack.”
Jack suddenly stepped away from the table, nearly knocking over his chair as he moved in close to his brother, shoving Bruce in the chest. “I can give her mother's necklace if I want.”

Bruce felt something in him boiling over. His hand shot out before he had time to consider his actions; he slapped his brother across the face. Jack's head snapped to the side with the force of the hit, splitting his lip, causing the younger Wayne to stumble into the chair. Harley let out a gasp leading into a scream. “JACK!”

Jack turned back to face Bruce. Bruce was staring at his hand, shocked at his own action. Jack's voice was low, deadly.

“She couldn't be bothered to be here Bruce, but Harley is—Harley is here for me. Unlike the rest of my blood relatives, none of whom have EVER been here for me! Harley is! Harley is here and you know what? She is only here for me! And if I want her to have that necklace, then she is going to have that fucking necklace BRUCE!”

Bruce snarled. “What do you mean no one is here for you?! I'm your brother! And OUR MOTHER IS DEAD!”

Jack leaned toward his brother's face, as if he dared Bruce to strike him again. “Why break a trend Bruce? When I said none of my relatives are here for me I meant it...when was the last time you were here for me Bruce? When was the last time you listened to me? And yeah..she is dead. DEAD, BRUCE. She has been dead longer than I ever knew her!!”

Harley watched in horror as the two men faced off. Alfred came dashing into the room clearly brought by the sounds of fighting.

Jack was grinning at his brother, blood running down his chin, dripping slowly onto his suit. “Go ahead and hit me again Bruce. Beat me with your fists until they're bloody!! That's all you were ever good at. Even when we were kids, after our parents died, remember how many times you hit me when I said something or did something you didn't like? Or didn't approve of? Or how many times you called me crazy, insane? Well Harley doesn't do any of those things. She is my girl Bruce! You are just going to have to get used to it and if I want to give her mother's necklace you can't stop me.”

Bruce stared at his brother, his face contorting between pain and rage. “I...I was young too Jack. I made mistakes.”

Jack smiled. “And you are just going to have to live with them aren't you Bruce?”

Jack reached for Harley, taking her hand and pulling her close, wrapping his arm protectively around her waist. For a moment she wasn't sure if it was to protect her or himself.

Bruce clearly wanted to say more, but instead he hissed, saying the words he had promised himself he wouldn't, but Jack, as usual, pushed him. “I don't want her here for the interview. I don't want her here at all!”

Jack narrowed his eyes. “Well you don't always get what you want, do you Bruce?”

Jack shoved Bruce in the shoulder, pushing his older brother out of his way as he led Harley out, leaving Bruce steaming with Alfred looking pained next to him.

Once Jack and Harley were gone Bruce sighed. “Alfred...what am I going to do?”
Alfred sighed along with him. “Well Master Bruce, you certainly handled that with the grace of a bull.”

Bruce covered his face. “I just...why did he give her that necklace Alfred?”

“Perhaps Master Bruce, because he loves her.”

Bruce frowned turning to stare at him. “You really think so, don't you.” It was more of a statement than a question.

Alfred shrugged. “Love causes all of us to do things we would not likely do otherwise. Jack loves her.”

Bruce pulled out a chair and sat down, glancing over briefly at the remains of Jack and Harley's lunch. “I—you know I don't think in all this time Jack has ever reacted that way toward me.” His tone was soft, musing now.

Alfred sighed. “I have found that how much someone cares about you is directly proportional to how much you can piss them off, as it were. You care a great deal for Jack, and Jack cares a great deal about you, but now he also cares about Miss Harleen. If you try to take that away...I know you and Jack had butted heads over this issue already, and you have asked my opinion Master Bruce. Now it is your turn to either accept Miss Harleen as part of Master Jack's life, or risk the gap between you and Jack becoming wider.” Alfred gave Bruce a sad smile and left the patio.

Bruce sighed. It was so much easier beating up criminals at night, fighting the good fight. Everything was black and white, good or bad. That fight, out on the streets of Gotham, he could understand, but here, inside his own home, the one person he should be the closest to, was a stranger.

Bruce stood up and headed to his rooms to shower and change. He would talk to Jack after he had showered and perhaps had a cup of coffee.

Jack tugged Harley along with him. He almost went outside thinking to show her his experiments, but at the last moment changed his mind and instead took her upstairs toward his room. Harley let herself be dragged around. She could see that Jack wasn't ready to talk and she didn't want to force him. She could understand Bruce's feelings and it was clear to her that the brothers had never spoken together about that night, not in a meaningful or helpful way, at least and that over the years they had both built walls around the incident and between each other.

Suddenly Jack turned and shoved her up against the wall, his mouth moving hungrily over hers. Harley dug her fingers into the cloth of his vest returning his kisses and holding on. Jack licked her mouth, then her chin.

“How about we blow this interview and you and I go have some fun?”

Harley frowned. “Do you think that's a good idea Jack? Bruce seemed to think this interview was really important.”

Jack snarled. “I don't care what Bruce wants. Now. Do you want to go or am I going alone?”

Harley blinked in surprise, the question hitting her in the gut. “No, no I'll go with you.”

Jack grinned. “Good, otherwise I was just going to lock myself in my room and paint my nails.”
Jack pressed her against the wall one more time, his fingers digging into the cloth of her blouse. He pulled away and purred against her ear. “I'm going to call a boutique downtown and have them deliver a sexy party dress for you.”

“You don't, I mean...” Harley stumbled feeling like she should say or do something, but Jack cut her off placing a finger against her lips. “You in a sexy party dress, dancing, drinking...doing whatever we want! And we can make out while we wait for your dress to be delivered. Undressing you will be fun.”

Jack giggled, pressing his teeth into his bottom lip and lifting his eyebrows at her. For a moment, despite the smile, Harley saw the madness in his eyes, but what struck her wasn't the madness there, but the fact that she didn't care...it thrilled her.

Jack grabbed her hand and hauled her toward his room.

Bruce frowned, looking at himself in the mirror. He was wearing a Desmond Merrion, a ridiculously expensive suit, but it suited Bruce Wayne. He wanted to present the image of a billionaire playboy, a man with too much money, too much time and not enough...wit. He smirked with a sigh. He might as well go check on Jack. Vicki Vale would be here any time now.

Bruce stepped out of his room and made his way to Jack's room. He stopped at the door and knocked. There was no answer. Bruce gave it a full minute before he knocked again. Still no answer. With a frown Bruce headed down the stairs looking for Alfred.

He found the butler preparing dinner for their guest. “Alfred, have you seen Jack?”

Alfred sighed and turned. “He and Miss Harleen just left.”

“What?” Bruce snarled.

Jack was laughing as he sped toward downtown Gotham. Harley sat next to him in the Lamborghini, her knuckles almost white as she held on, but she couldn't keep the smile off her face especially when Jack reached over and squeezed her knee. He was dressed in a pair of black slacks clearly tailored to him by the way they hugged his hips. He had on a deep burgundy button-down shirt, the buttons undone to just above his breastbone. Over the shirt he had a silver jacket with black lapels. Harley was completely distracted by the way his throat looked, the hint of his collar...all she could think about was biting him. He had taken off the bandages that Alfred had put on over the stitches, but somehow it made him look even more desirable to Harley.

She distracted herself by running one hand down her dangerously short dress. She wore a red mini lace, backless, halter top dress with a pair of high heeled black, open-toed shoes, all of which Jack had picked out for her. Her hair was down, curling in soft waves around her shoulders just like Jack liked it and she still wore the necklace that Jack had given to her.

Jack headed into downtown Gotham driving until they hit the downtown strip area. Here the night life of Gotham was just beginning to come alive. Jack made a couple of wicked turns on the streets until he finally drove up onto a street where there were crowds of people everywhere. Jack didn't pay any attention speeding along, forcing people to scatter out of the car's way as he pulled up in front of one of the largest nightclubs in Gotham, The Empire.
The Empire was not just the hottest night spot in Gotham, it brought all sorts of well-known clients, both the local Gotham celebrities as well as celebrities from all over. Crowds of people outside were trying to get into the club, but the paparazzi milled about taking pictures of whoever was getting into (or thrown out of) the club.

When the purple Lamborghini pulled up, all the cameras turned toward the car wanting to see who was entering the club. Jack grinned at her. “Bruce wants our relationship to be secret—then we are just going to go the opposite route, let everyone know exactly who the youngest Wayne is dating. AND we are going to show them just how crazy I actually am.”

Jack took her hand, kissing her knuckles. “Ready to dance the night away my sweetling?”

Harley nodded. “Anything for you.”

Jack grinned hopping out of the car to the flurry of cameras, hurrying around to get Harley. People were watching and cameras were flashing, as he handed her out then tugged her against him, his arm tight around her waist. Jack turned and waved allowing the paparazzi to take as many pictures as they wanted.

“Hello Gotham!” he yelled.

Harley was blushing within moments at the attention as Jack led them into the club whispering to her. “Wave Harls...let them see how gorgeous you are.”

Harley waved. One of the paparazzi yelled. “Whose the woman?” Another yelled. “What happened to your face? What's the other guy look like, Jack?!”

Jack stopped at the entrance. “Gotham let me introduce you to Harley Quinn! My girl and my doctor!” He laughed spinning her around and leading her into the club.

The club was packed full of dancers and people just drinking. The music thumped loudly and hard enough that it felt like the air was vibrating.

Jack grinned. “Drink or dance first?”

“How about a drink?” Harley smiled. Jack interlocked his fingers with hers leading her over to the bar. He leaned against the counter just as the bartender came over. The bartender was a tall lean woman with long black hair pulled back into a braid that looked like it could be dangerous if whipped around.

“What can I get you two?”

Jack smiled. “A whiskey straight for myself and for my lady a Mind Eraser.”

Harley laughed and had to speak loudly just to be heard over the music. “I don't know if I like the name of that drink.”

Jack bumped her hip with his. “Don't worry, you will remember everything.” He winked at her as he laughed. Harley grinned reaching out and brushing his arm. Jack turned his hand around so that she could weave her fingers with his.
They received their drinks and leaned against the bar watching the dancers. The club seemed alive; there was a powerful energy working through the place, like a powder keg ready to explode. The sexual tension vibrated through the whole place, mixed with lots of drugs and alcohol.

Jack finished his whiskey in one swallow, putting the glass down and with a nod of his head, ordered another. Harley sipped her drink staring at the dancers, her hips moving to the music, swaying in place. Jack smiled as he glanced down at her hips, watching the way her hips swayed in the snug dress, the cloth riding up on her thighs. His attention was too focused on Harley's hips to notice the woman sliding up next to him at the bar.

“Hey handsome, wanna dance?” The woman reached over and traced Jack's ear with the tip of her fingernail.

Jack jerked his head away, turning to glare at the woman beside him. She was beautiful...or at least Jack supposed she was; she looked like the type of women his brother would go out with, dark auburn hair, green eyes...an all right smile he supposed, but certainly nothing like his Harley. She was wearing a dark blue, skin-tight dress with large stripe shaped cut-outs along the sides. She was smiling at him with her eyes slightly narrowed in an appraising manner, clearly pleased with what she saw in Jack Wayne.

“Name's Vesper, Vesper Fairchild. You might have heard of me—I'm the host of Siren of the Night on Gotham City radio.”

Jack's lip curled. “I don't listen to the radio.”

Vesper frowned, but seemed to take this in stride. “You're Jack Wayne aren't you?”

Jack smiled. “Sometimes.”

“I would love to get you on my show sometime. But seriously, wanna dance? I could buy you a drink we could get a booth and talk. I promise I can show you a good time.” She smiled, fluttering her eyes just a little.

Jack frowned turning away with a quick dismissal. “No.”

Vesper pressed her lips together. She wasn't going to give up. Even if she couldn't get him in her bed, if she could get Jack Wayne on her show...his first interview...that would boost her ratings through the roof. Vesper reached out, running a fingernail over the exposed section of Jack's chest.

Harley couldn't quite hear the conversation, but she could clearly see what the woman next to Jack was doing. She was caught between wanting to grab the other woman's hand and break her fingers...a more violent reaction than Harley was used to ever having...or letting the situation play out and see what Jack did.

Jack grabbed Vesper's hand, squeezing a little too tightly. He jerked her close and hissed. “Don't ever touch me.”

He released her hand and laughed. “You know, it's better to just look like an ass than to open your mouth and prove it.”

Vesper blinked in shock for a moment causing Jack to grin and hiss. “Is your ass jealous of the amount of shit that came out of your mouth.”

Harley started laughing. Vesper narrowed her eyes and turned, melting into the crowd without a response. Jack started laughing, wrapping his arm around Harley. “Come on my little minx, let's dance.”

The smooth sounds of R. Kelly's “Bump N' Grind” started to play. Jack downed his second shot of whiskey before he grabbed Harley's hand, barely giving her time to drop her drink onto the bar before he had her out on the dance floor. Jack moved with a grace that was no longer surprising to Harley, placing his hand on Harley's shoulder before he started weaving, sliding his back up and bumping his chest with Harley's.

She smiled, copying his move, her gymnastic skills making her movements exquisitely sexy when she rolled her shoulders and gently bumped her chest against Jack's. He gazed at her, his blue eyes virtually glowing while he watched her, his hand sliding down her shoulder, dragging his fingers along the length of her arm before he placed his hand on her waist. Jack rolled his body against hers, grinning at her with that smile that had her blood flowing heatedly through her body making her feel intensely aware of him. Harley's hips flowed against his, licking her lips, her blue eyes locked with his while her hips weaved, the music inviting them to grind and slide against each other.

Jack grinned as he yanked Harley against him, his hands sliding down the curve of her back, spreading his fingers across her rear and pressing her hips against his, swaying to the music. Harley caught the side of her bottom lip with her teeth, grinning at him as she draped her arms across his shoulders, sliding her fingers along the back of his head, playing with the short hairs along the back of his head. Jack purred, a soft growl deep in his chest.

Then suddenly Jack laughed, dipping her back, pressing a kiss at the hollow of her neck before pulling her up and twisting her around, pressing her backside against his groin. Harley laughed with him, completely trusting Jack not the drop her when he suddenly dipped her. She shifted immediately with the movements, her back to him. Jack's hands snaked down her sides, then against her hips where he pressed his hands firmly, thrusting her backside against his groin. He slowed his hip movements down, flowing and grinding against her. Harley snaked her body in a sensual curve, her arms over her head while her body weaved to the music.

People were watching them, several recognizing who Jack was, a few taking cell phone pictures.

Jack pressed her hips more firmly against him, dropping and rolling against her, one hand sliding lower down her thigh, grabbing the hem of her dress, his tongue licking her neck while they moved to the music. Harley exhaled slowly, weaving against him, his hands burning her skin. Jack ran his hands back up her body, flowing over her breasts, then down again, grabbing her ear with his teeth. Harley groaned, but then the song was over, changing into another song.

Jack whispered into her ear. “Want another drink?”

Harley purred. “Sure puddin.”

Jack laughed taking her hand and leading her back to the bar where he ordered her another drink and himself another shot. Jack pulled her close for a moment, kissing her deeply. He tilted her back a bit, his tongue playing sensually over hers. The taste of him mixed with the whiskey had Harley's body aching for him. By the way Jack pressed against her, it was clear he was having the same thoughts. He groaned against her mouth.

Jack brushed her jaw with the back of his fingers just before he vanished into the crowd.
Harley waited at the bar, sipping on her drink when the music had changed into something with a harder beat. Harley's body thumped to the rhythm. She was weaving her hips while she waited for Jack. She smiled recognizing the song “Payback Time” by the Dysfunctional Psychedelic Waltons. She started dancing in place, a little more aggressively, the warm burn of the alcohol in her system making her dancing even more sensual, her thoughts on Jack...his body...his mouth...she closed her eyes running her hands down her sides, over her thighs. The alcohol, the music, the thought of Jack all making her feel sexy, hot, wanting him to hurry back.

That was when she felt someone come up behind her and start to grind their pelvis against her backside. Harley immediately knew something wasn't right. It wasn't Jack. She turned around to see a man, tall, heavily built man with short black hair. He wasn't handsome—far from it—and he definitely gave Harley a “creep” vibe. She pulled away, but he grabbed her arm.

“Hey honey, why'd ya stop? We was having fun. I'm Frank, Frank Boles and you are?” He yanked her back against him, his hands going around to squeeze her rear.

Harley snarled. “Let me go!” She took a slap at him, but Boles grabbed her arm.

“Oh now come on, baby.” The man dropped her arm, but when Harley tried to take a kick at his groin, break away from his grip, he yanked her hard towards him, wrapping his arms around her, pinning her arms and yanking her up off her feet, pressing her body against him.

“You were dancing so nice there.” He grinned down at her. “Don't you wanna show Frank a good time?”

“Let me go!!” Harley was about to try to go for his eyes, struggling to get her arms loose when Jack stepped into Harley's field of vision. “You heard the lady—let her go.”

Frank, still holding onto Harley, turned around to see Jack standing there, his blue eyes flat and deadly. “I said: let her go.” Jack's voice was low, but it cut through the music easily, carrying a dangerous quality that Harley was beginning to recognize well.

Frank released Harley and shoved her to the side. “Oh, what you going to do about it pretty boy?”

Jack's smile was slow and deadly. “I'm going to crush your windpipe.”

Frank snarled. “Oh, you think so?”

Jack's smile widened further. “Yes, yes I do.”

Frank turned away with a laugh, but then swung back around, his fist coming straight toward Jack's face.

Jack leaned easily out of the way, the man's large meaty fist just missing him. Jack came back up, his grin in place and the mad glint in his eyes.

“My turn.”
Because I can't Hide

Vickie Vale pulled up her plain white Nissan in front of the impressively large Wayne Manor. She was able to pull her car up the drive and into the circle drive parking fairly close to the front door. As she looked at the house from her car, Vicki could see the doorway that led into Wayne manor; she had only seen a doorway that imposing in front of a church in Europe. She idly wondered for a moment if the Wayne Manor was a church...a worship site for the two brothers to remember their parents. Were the Wayne brother stuck in the past, unable to move past the murder of their well respected mother and father?

She took a breath wondering if she would get a chance to ask them. Vicki drummed her fingers on the wheel of her car in thought before she slipped out of her car. She stood by her vehicle for a couple of seconds checking the contents of her purse to make sure she had everything: tape recorder, cellphone, notepad, printed out picture of Jack Wayne and Oswald Cobblepot dueling with swords and the picture of Jack Wayne in an spectacular lip-lock with an unknown blonde. She grinned. This was going to be one fun interview with the Wayne brothers.

When she finished with her purse, she shut her car door, stopping to check herself in the window reflection.

She wore a Milano Pique Knit Peplum Dress, one of the most expensive dresses she owned, though she did have a fairly expensive evening dress.that she put almost six months worth of salary into in order to purchase it. She owned the dress in the hopes of getting to attend one of the legendary Wayne parties. It was a long shot, but one never knew where the story would take her...and she had hope.

The dress fit perfectly to her figure and the caviar color made her skin seem softer and rosy. Her blonde hair (which she wore in a Veronica Lake-style tonight) shone, complimented by the dress's color. Vicki turned left than right, the elbow length sleeves and slimming skirt accentuated her hour-glass figure, hopeful Bruce Wayne would take notice...especially if the younger Wayne was already spoken for. Both men were extremely attractive, though both in very different ways. Bruce Wayne was square-jawed, blue eyed and while he played the part of the playboy, Vicki thought there was something more to it. Bruce, to her, seemed like a fortress that she wanted to break through and see what he was hiding. Jack on the other hand was a definite mystery. The man had had a lot of trouble when he was younger based on his school records until he was pulled out of school. There were stories, of course, but none of them substantiated. Jack Wayne was tall, slender, handsome, but in a far more delicate way, and, like with Bruce, Vicki suspected there was something hidden behind Jack Wayne's ready smile.

It wasn't that Vicki was really interested in a romance, but if her looks let her get closer to Bruce Wayne, or maybe even Jack, then that was all the better; her looks always allowed her to get closer to the story.

Vicki glanced down at her shoes for a moment, the black rounded wedged heels were a little “tall” for this interview, but they made her legs look great and sometimes that was more important than comfort.

Happy with how she looked, Vicki walked up to the door and knocked. Her knuckles had barely touched the wood of the heavy door when the door opened and an older gentleman stood there dressed in a butler's standard uniform—standard for the nineteenth century.

“Miss Vicki Vale?” the older man said, his accent refined, reminding Vicki of a member from the cast of Downton Abby.

“Yes, that's me.” She grinned.

“I'm Alfred Pennyworth, the Waynes' butler. If you will follow me I will take you to see Mr. Wayne.”

Jack was laughing, moving slowly, the two men circling each other while the lights kept flashing. Jack had his fists up, but he held them up as if he were only playing the part of fighting, more of a joke than for defending himself. Frank was watching Jack with narrowed eyes, his fists up too, but he was bouncing slightly from foot to foot.

The dancers had immediately moved out of the way forming a circle around the two men.

Someone started to chant, “Fight, Fight!”

Whoever the DJ was thought he must have been funny, because he started to play some heavy bass music which went perfect with the two men circling each other and it made Jack laugh all the more.

Jack waggled his eyebrows and made a kissy face at Frank. “Come on baby, show me what kind of man you are.”

Frank snarled. “You pussy!”

Jack grinned. “Oh...is that an insult? Really? That's the best you got? Come on baby, you can do better than that!”

Jack ran his tongue over the top of his teeth grinning at Frank. “Come on baby, hit me, make your knuckles bloody.”

Frank hissed and took a swing at Jack, who ducked under Frank’s arm, twisting around with his whole body to bring his elbow up in a fluid movement. Jack smashed his elbow into Frank’s nose just before Jack jumped backwards out of the way.

Frank gasped in pain, both hands going to his nose where blood immediately flowed down his face. “You fucking broke my nose!!”

Jack giggled. “It’s an improvement, I promise. You're turn sweetheart. Hit me with your best shot.”

The look that Jack gave him was a cross between flat, violent, mixed with pure hatred and a little bit of seduction...as if this were a game of pleasure for him. Jack's grin widened as he licked his upper lip.

“Come on big boy,” Jack hissed.

Harley's emotions were a strange mixed bag between absolutely being turned on by Jack's fighting; the way he licked his lips, the movements of his body, every part of him was sensual, erotic and Harley wanted him badly. But she was also worried. There were a lot of people here and they were all taking pictures and video with their phones. No matter how this fight turned out, Bruce was going to find out about it. Harley just knew that was going to be another fight...worse than the last one.
Harley absently put her hand on the necklace around her neck. Any chance of Bruce accepting her had vanished with Jack giving her this necklace, but she found that she didn't give a damn. The only person she cared about was Jack. Part of her, the doctor, knew she had a problem, that she was becoming more than attached...obsessed? But she found she didn't care about that either.

She realized she couldn't live without him...she needed Jack.

Frank, blood covering his upper lip, shook off the pain and took another swing at Jack. Jack danced out of the way, swinging around and brought his fist down on the joint of Frank's arm. The only reason Jack didn't break the other man's arm was because he didn't want to...not yet. Frank gasped dropping to his knees. Jack walked away from him smiling, dropping down into a crouch in front of Jack. “Had enough big boy?”

Frank snarled, “I'm going to kill you.”

Frank rose quickly to his feet, charged at Jack, and took a couple of swings, first right, then left. Jack easily dodged out of the way. When Frank hit with his right hand, he over extended himself and stumbled past Jack, who turned and smacked Frank in the back of the head, not with his fist, but with the flat of his hand. The crowd started laughing.

Frank snarled, turning, taking a few more swings with his fists, which Jack simply slapped out of the way, then Jack came in close enough to Frank, getting under the other man's ineffectual guard, then he simply backhanded Frank.

Jack laughed, but his eyes were narrowed with hatred. “You really should learn when a woman says no she means no.”

Frank hissed. “You fucking pansy!!”

Jack grinned. Frank tried again to use his fists, but Jack managed to slap Frank's balled hands away a few more times making the other man look foolish. Frank came in with a low hit, his fist connecting with Jack's side, sliding under Jack defense. The hit sent the slender man stumbling into the crowd who simply pushed Jack back into the circle they had created on the dance floor.

Harley was chewing her bottom lip. She wanted to get in there and tear that man Frank's eyes out, but she stayed put, letting Jack fight. For a moment, she wondered where the club security was, but they were probably as eagerly watching the fight as everyone else.

Vicki was led to a room by Pennyworth, who bowed slightly to her, his arm extended for her to enter the room. She walked in where she found Bruce Wayne waiting for her in front of the massive fireplace in what appeared to be a library or a foyer or a...who knew? Rich people had so many rooms it was hard to keep track, Vicki thought wryly. Bruce seemed to be staring into the fire. If it had been any other man, she would have accused him of posing, but she sensed that Bruce Wayne really was lost in thought, unaware of how he looked when she walked in. Vicki strolled over toward Bruce. He looked to be brooding, staring into the fire.

“Mr. Wayne?” she asked.

Bruce turned and Vicki was struck by how handsome the man was, (although she had seen him dark hair, blue eyes, chiseled features. Hell, he could be a model! She thought.

“Miss Vale, it's a pleasure to see you.” Bruce stepped over to her, taking her hand. Instead of shaking it, he brought her hand up to lightly brush his lips against her knuckles.

She tried not to blush, but she couldn't help it; a warmth blossomed across her cheeks. “So, Mr. Wayne, where is your brother?”

She glanced around, but they were clearly alone.

“My brother Jack is...indisposed at the moment. So it will just be you and me for dinner, and please, call me Bruce.” He smiled giving her his arm.

For a moment, as Vicki wrapped her arm around his, she wondered if his brother was gone on purpose...maybe so Bruce Wayne could eat alone with her? Nah...this was supposed to be a family interview and he knew it. Maybe Jack refused? That would make for some interesting questions...or maybe Mr. Wayne was simply trying to keep his crazy brother out of the media...another idea that could lead to some interesting questions.

She grinned at Bruce. “Well if I'm going to call you Bruce, you should call me Vicki.”

Bruce smiled brighter. “Well Vicki, let us go eat dinner.”

Bruce led Vicki into the dining room and for a moment all her questions were forgotten. The Wayne Manor dining room looked exactly like a dining room in a manor should look. The walls were paneled with walnut, cherry wood? She couldn't be sure, but she was certain it was probably expensive, just like the polished wood floors. One wall had several large windows framed with heavy curtains that were currently pulled back to let in the moonlight from outside. The chandelier that hung over the center of the room was a little more modern than the rest of the furnishings; it was large and rounded with three levels of circular forms that each carried rows of crystal drops casting twinkling lights throughout the dining room.

The center of the room was dominated by a long oak table that could probably sit at least twenty or more people, though dinner had been set up at one end for only two people. The dishes, bone china, were lovely, clearly not a choice Bruce would have made, unless Vicki had him pegged wrong. Perhaps these were his mother's? They were white china with a traditional Toile pattern, goldleaf banding. The silverware looked to be just as elegant; if she wasn't mistaken, Christofle Sterling Marly silverware. There were two wine glasses on the table and a silver ice bucket—carved to match the silverware—sitting on the table with a bottle of Chateau Margaux 2010. Vicki recognized the bottle and almost gasped; that stuff was almost $1000 a bottle!

Bruce pulled out her chair for her. “Alfred will be serving dinner shortly.”

He smiled taking the seat next to her. “Is Filet Mignon all right? I'm sorry, I didn't think to ask if you were a vegetarian. Though I believe Alfred would have no problem whipping up something for you.”

Bruce's smile was definitely charming, Vicki realized with an inward smile.

“Oh no, no—filet Mignon is perfect.” Vicki smiled holding out her glass as Bruce uncorked the wine and poured some into her glass for her.

Bruce smiled. “I believe Alfred also made roasted green beans with harissa and arugula, pear, and blue cheese salad.”

Vicki chuckled. “He is quite the cook.”

Bruce nodded with a smile. “He is, from peanut butter and jelly to filet Mignon, the man can cook anything.”

Vicki laughed. This is going to be quite an evening, she thought.

Jack grinned as he slapped Frank in the shoulder, forcing him to stumble into the crowd. Frank was turned around by the people forming the circle. Jack held his arms out like he was part of a performance and he had just executed a complicated stunt. Jack gave Harley a saucy wink when Frank suddenly rushed Jack from behind, picking up the slender man right off his feet and throwing Jack over his shoulder. Frank rushed toward the crowd, intent on throwing Jack. Except the crowd acted as huge living rubber band, bouncing the two men back into the center of the dance floor. Jack tried to beat on Frank’s back and head, forcing Frank to drop him.

Frank dropped Jack onto his feet hard, but Jack maintained his balance, his natural grace and skill kept the slimmer man on his feet. Frank came in close trying to get under Jack's guard, but Jack simply slapped the bigger man hard across the face, making the broken nose Jack had already given Frank flare hot and painful. Frank stumbled into Jack, blinded momentarily by the pain in his nose. Jack slapped him another couple of times across the face, never using his fist as if Jack wasn't willing to treat Frank to the fight he wanted, instead focused on humiliating him. The older man managed to get a grip around Jack’s waist and threw him. Jack landed on his side, sliding across the dance floor, hitting the feet of some of the patrons.

Jack got to his feet giggling. “Oh look at you Frankie...that's your name right? Frankiestein.”

Jack realized only then that he was near Harley. She reached out grabbing his face turning him to face her.

“Jack? Jack are you alright?” Harley's eyes sparkled with concern.

Jack giggled. “I'm fine, my lovely. Never fear.”

He yanked Harley around to press her against him, his arm around her waist. Jack kissed her hard. His tongue demanding, his lips almost fiery. She could taste a little bit of his blood from his lips. Jack’s split lip had broken open again, coating his lips and teeth in blood. A thin trail of blood leaked from the wound already on his face from earlier today, since one of his stitches had broke open. Jack didn't seem to notice as with his other hand, Jack grabbed Harley's rear, squeezing hard. She purred with want and the crowd screamed their praise of the kiss. But suddenly Frank grabbed Jack's shoulder, yanking him out of Harley's embrace and slugged him, his fist smashing right into Jack's face, which sent Jack sliding across the floor away from Harley.

Harley screamed and leapt at Frank, going for his eyes, but he threw her off. The crowd caught her preventing her from falling. She started to go after Frank, but a couple of people in the crowd grabbed her preventing her from jumping on Frank’s back and ripping his throat out—which was what she wanted to do.

Frank laughed taking a couple of steps back, glaring at Jack, giving Jack a chance to get to his feet. “Not so tough now are ya pretty boy?”

Jack’s eyes were flat, glancing to see if Harley was all right before he grinned, his blood-coated teeth

“Oh that was a good shot there Frankie. Very good shot...now, let's see if I can do better.” Jack got to his feet slowly, acting as if every muscle in his body hurt. He gazed at Frank, then suddenly moved with lightning speed.

His right fist came out, slamming hard into Frank's cheek, snapping the larger man's head to the side.

Vicki smiled, cutting into her filet Mignon. “So, just you and your brother live here—oh and your butler. Does it ever get lonely?”

Bruce took a sip of his wine. “Not really, both of us have our hobbies, work. We have a lot to keep us both busy.” He set his wine glass down.

Vicki chewed thoughtfully and swallowed before she asked. “So, your brother Jack, he hasn't been seen a lot, but recently he seems to have been getting out there, in Gotham that is...and he has been seen in the company of a young woman. Any ideas on who she is?”

Vicki watched Bruce from the corner of her eyes while her fork stabbed into a few of the green beans. Bruce didn't answer at first, his focus on his meal, but she could see a tightening around his eyes and mouth. Clearly he had been expecting the question, but he was still not happy about it. He took a bite of his meal, chewing slowly and then took a sip of his wine before he answered her.

“My brother is seeing a young woman yes, a Harleen Qunizel. They haven't been together long, so I don't suspect there is anything serious between them, but yes, he has been going out more.”

Vickie smiled, taking a sip of her wine, deciding to come back to the question of the blonde...Harleen Quinzel, now that she had a name.

She was about to ask another question when the butler stepped into the room.

“Master Bruce, Miss Vale—are you ready for dessert?” The older man smiled gently looking between the two of them.

Bruce glanced at Vale, lifting his eyebrows in question.

“Yes, dessert sounds splendid.” Vicki smiled. The butler nodded and bowed slightly at the waist. “Shall I bring the dessert and drinks to the patio Master Bruce?”

“Yes please, Alfred.” Bruce stood, extending a hand to Vicki. She stood up after wiping her mouth and tossing her linen napkin onto the table. Bruce led her out into a long hall decorated with paintings. She gazed at them as Bruce started to tell her about some charity that Wayne Enterprises was investing in...something about building a new hospital to replace Arkham Asylum, when she noticed that the paintings they were walking by on the way to the patio were all family paintings.

“Bruce...are these all family portraits?”

Bruce frowned, startled out of his talk. “Yes, yes they are,” he affirmed. “Each is a family member or a family portrait.”

Vicki smiled at him. “Is there one of you and your brother?”

Bruce nodded with a slight smile that Vicki thought might be forced. “There are three actually, there at the end of the hall.” Bruce walked her down, pointing at a set of particular portraits as he did so, telling her their names, maybe a little of his ancestors accomplishments until he stopped at a series of four portraits. The first was a family portrait, by the looks of it, done not too long before the murder of the Wayne brothers' parents. It showed a happy, well-do-to family. Bruce looked a great deal like his father, while Jack was more delicate in his features, clearly taking after their mother Martha. The next portrait in line showed only the brothers. It showed the boys in their teen years. If Vicki guessed correctly, she would say that Bruce was eighteen in the painting while Jack was sixteen.

Bruce looked harder, his features stern, his blue eyes piercing and determined, much like the business side of Bruce Wayne, she thought. Jack was also paler than his brother; where Bruce's hair was black, Jack's was a soft, light shade of brown and where Bruce's eyes were a stern blue, Jack's eyes held something else. The artist captured the shared shade of blue with Bruce, but there was something haunted about Jack's eyes. Vicki couldn't put her finger on it. Was it the madness everyone rumored about or was it pain? If Vickie was to hazard a guess, she would have said pain—the younger Wayne brother held a lot of pain. Even though Bruce's hand rested on his brother Jack's shoulder, the painter caught the distance between the two boys.

The last two paintings were of the brothers, though not together. These paintings were solitary pictures of each brother. Bruce, early thirties, every inch the playboy in his fine suit, his hair just so, his blue eyes gazing out with determination and something else. Vicki frowned...this Bruce held a secret. The painting of Jack that hung right next to Bruce's showed a young man, late twenties, thirty maybe, but with a smile that had not been present in any of the other painting after the first one when he was little. But the smile, there was something...spooky about it, Vicki thought. Jack's eyes were not the same brilliant blue of his brother's, there seemed to be shadows lurking in the depths of Jack Wayne's eyes.

Jack laughed, slamming his fists into Frank's ears causing an intense ringing thorough the other man's head. Frank roared like an animal, taking a wild swing at Jack. Jack brought his left arm up, blocking the strike, the impact of Frank's hit against his arm vibrated through Jack's forearm and up to his shoulder, but he bore the pain as he stepped to the side to bring his right hand in low to slam his fist into Frank's side, possibly bruising his kidney. Jack slapped Frank's next swing away, twisting around to bring his left elbow up, striking Frank in the chin.

Frank gasped in pain seeing stars for a moment or two. He kept his balance and swung, managing to catch Jack on the jaw with enough force that Jack stumbled, dropping to one knee from the impact of the hit. Frank swooped in, planning on laying Jack out.

Jack, grinning a bloody smile, pushed himself to his feet, shrugging out of his jacket and then yanking at his shirt causing the few buttons that were still buttoned to burst when he ripped the shirt off, throwing it down next to the jacket. The crowd went wild, especially when Jack held his arms out and motioned at Frank with his fingers. “Come on big boy, show me what you got! To quote Shakespeare “Away, you starvelling, you elf-skin, you dried neat’s-tongue, bull’s-pizzle, you stock-fish!”

Jack giggled. “Though I suppose that insult is wasted on an idiot like you.” Jack grinned and shrugged.

Frank snarled and screamed. “You fucker!”

Jack hooted. “Oh, well damn, you cut me to the quick!! How on earth will I come back from such a witty insult?!”
Jack moved out of the way at the last moment, grabbing the hand that Frank was throwing at him, using his hold on Frank's fist to twist Frank's arm back and to the right; Jack's other hand shot out. Jack slammed the space between his thumb and forefinger against Frank's throat, causing Frank to stumble, choking and gasping for breath. Jack grinned watching Frank struggle for breath; the man's face was pale and there was a line of blood making its way slowly down his chin.

Jack started to laugh. “How’s it feel, Frankie?”

Frank's hands struggled at his throat. A bruise was blossoming where Jack's hand had hit the man in the throat. Jack took a few steps toward him, his blue eyes dull with the intent to kill the man when suddenly there was a shout from someone in the crowd. “THE POLICE ARE HERE!”

The crowd started to break up as the police shoved their way to the center of the dance floor.

“All right stand down! EVERYONE stand down!!” The cops were yelling, grabbing at anyone who happened to run in front of them, swinging them toward another group of cops who were doing their best to restrain people.

Harley rushed forward, ducking under a policeman who made a grab for her and ran over to Jack, wrapping her arms around him, stopping him from heading for Frank. People in the crowd started screaming, someone yelled for someone to call an ambulance when Frank fell to his knees continuing to struggle for a breath. One of the cops grabbed Jack from behind, breaking him loose from Harley's grip. Jack struggled, managing to get one of his arms free, turning on the ball of one foot, his movements graceful while his fist came around going straight for the cop's jaw.

Harley yelled. “NO!!”

She stepped between Jack and the police officer, closing her eyes expecting Jack's fist to hit her. But Jack, barely stopped himself from hitting Harley just in time.

She grabbed his shoulders her eyes pleading. “Stay calm Jack.”

He stared back, letting the police pull his arms behind him and handcuff him, before forcing Jack down onto his knees. Jack never broke eye contact with Harley, even when she was grabbed from behind as well. She was forced onto her knees too, but she maintained eye contact with Jack.

Harley whispered again. “Just look at me Jack, stay calm, focus only on me.”

Jack's breathing slowed, his gaze never faltering from hers, blue eyes glued to blue eyes until they were hauled to their feet and escorted from the building, Jack, now calm, didn't resist though he giggled quite a bit.

Vicki was impressed with the patio, a lovely glassed in area that allowed them to enjoy the night sky without being out in the cool air. The table was set with candlelight and setting on the table waiting for them were two crystal goblets filled with ice cream, shaved chocolate and what looked to be caviar on the top.

Bruce smiled while he pulled out the seat for her. “This is Tahitian Vanilla Bean ice cream with Amedei Porcelana and dessert caviar. One of Alfred's specialties.”

Vicki looked impressed as she took her seat, picking up the long handled spoon that lay on the plate next to the goblet. “Goodness, this looks great.”
Bruce grinned at her as he sat down. “I assure you, it is.”

Vicki took a bite and groaned. It was like she had taken a bite of heaven. Bruce chuckled at her expression. “So Miss...”

“Vicki...remember?” Vicki smiled at him.

“So...Vicki...What would you like to ask me? I mean, I'm assuming you wanted to ask some personal questions?” Bruce took a bite of his ice cream and smiled at her.

Vicki grinned. He really was charming.

“Well...” She took a bite of her ice cream. “I did want to ask why someone like you, Bruce, isn't with anyone? No plans to marry? Is your brother Jack going to marry before you?”

Bruce chuckled. “No, no plans to marry yet. I haven't met that certain someone I can share everything with.”

“Someone to share all the Wayne family secrets with, eh?” Vicki grinned. Bruce opened his mouth to answer when Alfred came in carrying a tray with two cocktails, each with a cherry floating in the bottom of the chilled cocktail glasses.

Alfred smiled. “Two tidbits.”

Bruce stood up taking the drinks. “Thank you Alfred.”

Vicki laughed. “Watch it Bruce, I might not be able to drive home!”

He chuckled. “You can always stay here, Vicki.”

“Are you flirting with me Mr. Wayne?” Vicki blushed.

“I might be.” Bruce's smile was inviting and charming, she had to admit.

Harley leaned against the bars of her cell gazing at Jack. He was across the way from her in a separate cell filled with more than a dozen others who had been arrested that night (not all from the club, a few drunks and some other misdemeanors). Jack grinned at her, occasionally blowing her a kiss. He was still shirtless, looking sexy and beaten up. All Harley could think about was getting him home and taking care of him...in several ways. Watching Jack duel Cobblepot had been sexy, but this...a full on fist fight had been damn sexy in a way she had never realized she would enjoy. She didn't know if it was because Jack had beaten the guy for being handsie with her, or just watching Jack move, fighting. Either way, right now she was aching for him.

One of the women in Harley's cell came to lean against the bars next to her. The woman (judging by her clothing, a mini skirt that was short enough that it could barely be called a skirt, a bright pink tank top and heels that only hookers or strippers usually wore) was a prostitute. She glanced across the way at Jack then back at Harley.

“That your guy?” she asked.

Harley smiled. “Yep.”

The woman laughed. “Be careful hun, that one is dangerous—you can see it in his eyes.”
Harley smiled. “I know.”

The other woman frowned looking at Harley who was staring at Jack, then shrugged. She walked back over to her girlfriends thinking that you simply couldn't save them all.

A couple of police officers came walking into the cell area. One of them was older, brown hair, a bit of a gut, had the look of a man who was tired of his job. “Okay you there, shirtless. Your turn to make your call.”

Jack grinned. “Sure thing officer.”

The other officer, younger, slim, blonde, nice looking, walked over to unlock the cell door. Jack moved out of the way grinning. “Wanna hear a joke officers?”

The older one just glared, but the younger one, whose name on his uniform read Frost, muttered quietly, “Sure.”

Jack laughed. “Two prisoners and Frank, who is a bit of a dimwit, are being executed via firing squad. The police are about to execute the first one when he yells "EARTHQUAKE!"

The police go running and the prisoner escapes before the police realize there's no earthquake. Right before they execute the second one, he yells "TORNADO!"

Of course, there is no tornado, but the prisoner escapes before the police realize that. Now it was the turn for the third to be executed. The police go "Ready... Aim...".

Then, Frank yells "FIRE!" Jack snickered.

Officer Frost laughed. “That's a good one.”

The older one, whose name was Bentley, just scowled. “Just get him over to the phone Frost.”

Just as Frost was leading Jack from his cell, they passed close to Harley.

Harley reached out for Jack as he walked by, Jack reached for her, their fingers brushing against one another. Bentley frowned at Frost. “Hey now, none of that. Break those two up!”

Frost frowned. “Sorry, Mr. Wayne.”

Vicki sipped at the ice cream cocktail with a smile. “So Bruce, tell me about Jack's mental health. Rumor has it that he has a problem with violence? That the murder of your parents made him unstable?”

Bruce paled ever so slightly. She could see it around his mouth and eyes, but it was quickly gone.

“Jack is much better than he was when we were younger. People have issues, but Jack is stable, an adult, a mature person.”

Vicki nodded. “So...”

Vickie picked up her purse and pulled out one of the photos from the duel.
“These are the actions of a mature, stable person?”

Bruce frowned as he picked up the picture that Vicki had placed on the table between them. It took a great deal of effort for Bruce to school his features. It was a photo of Jack, dueling with Oswald Cobblepot, the blade of Jack's rapier was through Cobblepot's knee...Bruce ground his teeth. He had seen the bandage on Jack's face, but had been so distracted by the fact that Jack had given Dr. Quinzel their mother's necklace, that he had failed to question the wound. But judging from the picture, this was where Jack had received the wound...and there in the background was Dr. Quinzel. Vicki took that opportunity to place another photo on the table...this one of Dr. Quinzel kissing his brother rather passionately.

Bruce looked up at Vicki, his mouth open, not sure what he was going to say, when Alfred came back into the room.

“Master Bruce, I am sorry to interrupt sir, but you have a rather important phone call. From your brother.”

Bruce pressed his lips together as he stood up. “Excuse me Vicki. I'll be right back. “

Vicki smiled picking up the photos and shoving them back into her purse before she picked up her drink. “Oh, no problem.”

Bruce hurried out with Alfred. “Did you know about the duel with Oswald Cobblepot?”

Alfred frowned. “I did sir.”

“What?!” Bruce exclaimed, startled that the older man would keep that information from him.

“Master Bruce I...I did not know they were going to be using real blades until Jack returned injured.” Alfred sighed.

Bruce let out a long tired sigh. “What is Jack calling about?”

“Well Master Bruce, he and Miss Harleen have been arrested.”

Alfred led Bruce into the library to the ground line that the manor still had. Bruce stopped, turning to look at Alfred.

“Arrested?”

“Yes sir. It seems Master Jack was involved in an altercation at some nightclub. He has been charged with a misdemeanor, but his car is still at the club and he and Miss Harleen need a ride home.”

Alfred smiled unsure. “He wanted to talk to you first. He would not say why Master Bruce.”

Bruce closed his eyes counting to ten before he picked up the phone. “Jack.”

“Hey bro!! Harley and I are down at the Gotham city jail! Can you come get us? They claim we are too drunk to drive home, which is a complete lie.” Jack giggled.

“Jack, what are you charged with?” Bruce sat down in one of the chairs near the phone, rubbing the bridge of his nose with his thumb.

“Oh don't worry, I'm filing a complaint right back! Got into a fight with some bozo who laid hands on Harley.” Jack laughed. “No one touches my girl Brucie. You know how it is...no wait, you don't.” Jack giggled.

Bruce sighed. “Fine. I'll be there in a few minutes. I'm not picking up Dr. Quinzel.”

The line was silent then Jack spoke, his voice soft, almost a whisper. “It's both of us Bruce or I'm not coming home.”

“Jack...please...” Bruce pleaded. Bruce wasn't sure why he was being such a child about Harleen Quinzel, but it was like he couldn't help it...

“Bruce. Don't,” Jack said simply.

“Fine. I'll be there for both of you within the next half hour.” Bruce slammed the phone down.

Bruce walked quickly into the room. “I'm sorry Vicki, but I'm going to have to cut our evening short. Something came up that requires my immediate attention. I'll have Alfred call you a cab and I will have someone drive your car back into Gotham for you.”

Vickie frowned. “But...”

Bruce took her hand and kissed her knuckles. “Please, call me tomorrow and we can reschedule this.”

When Vicki slipped into the cab, she pulled out her cellphone thinking to call Knox and report about her dinner when she saw that she had missed several calls from Knox. Instead of listening to the messages, she called Knox directly.

Knox was laughing. “Oh Vicki, you're going to LOVE this! Guess who got arrested?”

Vicki frowned confused. “Who?”

“JACK WAYNE! He got arrested for fighting at The Empire club! And guess who was with him?” Knox's excitement was vibrating through the phone.

“Harleen Quinzel?” Vicki was smiling.

“BINGO!” Knox giggled.

“Tell me everything Knox.” Vicki grinned in anticipation as she pulled out her notepad and pen from the depths of her purse.

The ride back to Wayne Manor was uncomfortable, Harley thought, to put it mildly. Jack was still shirtless, his jacket and shirt lost during the arrest. He didn’t seem to care in the least. He had his arm around Harley holding her against him and was nibbling her ear. Bruce was focusing on the road. His temper was through the roof, but he was controlling it...barely. His grip on the wheel of the Ford F-150 Raptor was so tight that his knuckles were white.
Harley could feel the tension in the vehicle like a thick cloud, but both brothers were ignoring each other, ignoring the tension between them.

Harley turned and nuzzled Jack, occasionally checking his face. The lip was crusted over again and the swelling looked bad, and he was developing a bruise along his jaw. The hits Jack had taken weren't life threatening and nothing had been broken, but there were going to be several fair sized bruises on him in the morning. Frank Boles had filed a complaint which prompted Jack to do the same. He probably would have let it go, but if this Frank was going to be a jerk, well then Jack was going to be a jerk right back. Luckily for Jack, one of the people arrested at the club had said he had video showing that Frank had thrown the first punch. Harley was uncertain what was going to happen from that, but the Wayne family lawyer had shown up at the jail on the heels of Bruce. He had seemed very interested in the video.

Jack purred against Harley's side. If he saw the occasional glare from his brother Bruce, he gave no indication. Instead he focused on Harley, whispering into her ear. “Stay the night in my room...I need you...”

He licked her ear, causing Harley to shiver. His lips brushed a burning trail down from her ear, along the curve of her throat, his free hand reaching out to brush his fingers over her breast. The material of the dress seemed to provide virtually no resistance from the heat of his touch searing her skin. Harley made a tiny moaning sound against Jack's neck, not wanting Bruce to hear how much she wanted his brother.

Harley glanced at Jack's hand cupping her breast, seeing that his knuckles where bloody from the fight, but the broken skin and dried blood turned her on, made her groin burn and her nipples feel as if they were aching for the need of his touch. Jack's own wants were intense, burning; his groin hurt with the need to take her. He pressed his lips to her bare shoulder, wanting to hike her dress up and press his fingers between her legs, to feel how wet he knew she had to be judging by the way she was squirming.

If it had been anyone but Bruce (or Alfred) driving, Jack knew he would have hauled Harley onto his lap and taken her right then and there, the thought of pushing that dress up her hips, pressing her down on his erection...but there was no reason to piss Bruce off any more than he already had by fucking his girlfriend in the back seat of the car, especially when he would have Harley home soon and alone in his bed. Jack grinned chuckling softly against her tender neck. The violence had aroused him intensely and he couldn't wait to get home and show his Harley just how much.

They pulled up into front of Wayne Manor after the quiet, intense drive home. Bruce turned off the car before twisting around to glare at Jack in the back seat. “We need to talk.”

Jack groaned. He had almost pulled Harley completely onto his lap. He glanced over at his brother from behind her shoulder, pulling her thick hair aside to he could roll his eyes at Bruce.

“Can't it wait 'til morning?”

Bruce’s eyes narrowed a fraction. “Why did you leave? You knew we had that interview tonight!”

Jack reached around and slowly pulled the zipper of Harley's dress down her smooth back for a number of reasons. One, now that they were home he wanted to get her upstairs and undressed. Two, Jack didn't want a lecture and stripping his girlfriend might get Bruce to stop and three...well that was simply a repeat of number two...Jack really, really needed to get Harley upstairs.
“I didn't feel like playing nice Bruce and you know what? I don't have to? What are you going to do, disinherit me? Oh right, if I remember correctly, the will doesn't allow you to do that.” Jack laughed. “Funny thing isn't it? Like our parents knew what a hard ass you were going to turn into, Brucie.”

Jack shifted his position, though Harley didn't turn to look at Bruce. She wasn't sure what to do. The doctor in her wanted to help, wanted to tell them both that they needed to talk, but that was Harleen, Dr. Quinzel talking. Harley only ever took Jack's side...so she kept her mouth busy on Jack's neck instead.

Bruce closed his eyes. “This is not why I hired Dr. Quinzel, so she could be your fuck buddy Jack.”

Jack sat up straight, his arms tightening around Harley. “I'm getting really tired of you talking about Harley like you do Bruce...real tired. You know, I don't want to talk about this now and I'm not going to. I'm going to go upstairs and yes, I'm going to fuck Harley's brains out and you also know what? She is going to do the same for me, because unlike you Bruce, I'm capable of loving someone.”

Jack turned and opened his door, managing to slip out of the vehicle gracefully, taking Harley with him.

Alfred was waiting inside the doorway when Jack came around the car and started to brush past Alfred his arm tight around Harley's shoulders. Alfred winced when he saw Jack's face.

“Master Jack...”

Jack smiled and waved Alfred off. “It looks worse than it is, though you should have seen the other guy.” Jack chuckled. “Harley and I will be upstairs. I don't suppose you could bring us some leftovers to my room could you Alfie?”

“Of course Master Jack,” Alfred said. Jack laughed then, patting Alfred on the shoulder with his free hand as he headed into the manor. Harley gave Alfred a soft smile and a nod as Jack breezed by with her.

Bruce followed behind more slowly. “He's not even sorry about what happened,” Bruce muttered.

“Perhaps Master Bruce, instead of pushing quite so much—perhaps you should give Master Jack and Miss Harleen space?

Bruce rubbed the back of his neck. “Just that everything he does reflects back on me and the Wayne name.”

“I am sure he knows that sir.” Alfred frowned. He looked back at the house, then turned. “Will you be going out tonight?”

Bruce nodded as he walked past Alfred to enter the manor. “Yes. Gotham never sleeps.”

Jack giggled tugging Harley into his room, shutting the door and pushing her up against it. He pressed his body against hers, his blue eyes lustful as he gazed at her.

“I had fun tonight,” he whispered just before he started to graze his teeth down her neck.

Harley moaned softly as Jack reached out to tug her dress down, the garment pooling at her feet. She started to kick her heels off, but Jack hissed, “Leave them on.”
She hadn't worn a bra with the dress and the panties were small, black thongs. Jack ran his hungry eyes down her torso, his hands pressed against the door on either side of her head. His grin was lopsided looking at her nearly naked body, wearing only the heels and the thong. “You look good enough to eat...” Jack whispered, still not touching her.

“Won't...ah, Alfred be here soon?” Harley glanced over her shoulder at the door Jack had her pinned against.

“I'm sure once he hears what's going on, he'll leave the food outside.” Jack giggled. “Now...I'm hungry for something else.”

Jack waggled his eyebrows, giggling while he slowly dropped to his knees, dragging his hands down the length of her body. Harley purred, grinning, watching him, dropping to his knees, his fingers hooking into the sides of her panties and dragging them down to her knees. He left the thin fabric at her knees as a sort of flimsy bondage, keeping her legs from spreading too wide. Slowly, his hands wandered up the sides of her thighs while Jack gazed up at her licking his swollen lip. Harley leaned against the door, her legs were partly bent at the knee, her hands pressed against the door to help keep her balance in the shoes. Watching the way Jack was looking at her, like a predator, gradually running his hands up and down her thighs had her hot and aching.

Jack grinned up at her, his thumbs stroking ever so lightly over her, tickling the line of curling hair not quite touching her, teasing her with just the tips of his thumbs coming close, but not quite touching her clitoris. Harley's hips undulated, weaving just slightly, wanting him to touch her more, but he only giggled as he teased her.

“You like that Harley? Hmm...my pretty, pretty girl...” Jack purred, his eyes raking down her body again. Her breathing became ragged. He loved watching the way her chest moved, her breasts rising and falling, and saw her eyes burned with lustful need.

Jack leaned in close to her sex, his lips brushing over the curling hair of her groin, teasing her by blowing gently against her feverish skin. Harley's eyes rolled closed.

“Oh Jack...” she moaned.

Jack pressed a kiss to her groin, his hands dragging down her calves until he reached her shoes. He cupped the back of her heels, scooting in closer, pressing his lips harder against her, feeling the damp pressure of her clitoris against his lower swollen lip.

His smile was wicked on his bloody lips, the way he gazed up at her with heated desire, a wicked grin..his long fingers, with his skinned and bloody knuckles...all of it was almost enough to cause Harley to orgasm right then, just looking at him, on his knees at her feet as if he were worshiping her.

Jack giggled pressing his lips to her, brushing his nose against the hair that curled at her groin. He took a deep breath, smelling her heady scent laced with desire.

“I'm very hungry indeed,” he whispered.

And then Jack's long wet tongue delved between her intimate lips. His tongue flicked over her which had Harley jerking upright against the door. Jack's hands worked their way up from the back of her heels until he found the edges of her panties where they dangled at her knees. He hooked the sides of the thong with his long fingers and dragged the thin fabric down slowly, with a nudge from his hands urging her to lift one leg, then the other, before tossing her panties somewhere behind him in the room.
Jack switched his position, balancing on the balls of his feet, spreading her legs a little wider. Her feet in the heels wobbled a bit, but the door behind her helped her keep her balance, especially when Jack's tongue moved back and forth against her, sending ripples of pleasure up through her core, spreading throughout her body.

“Oh Jack...” Harley was nearly breathless, her fingers pressing into the wood of the door using it to keep her balance, when Jack giggled against her, sucking on her clitoris sending goosebumps racing along her skin. The only coherent sound she could make was a guttural groan. She wanted to reach down and grab Jack's hair, to hold onto him, to press his mouth to her, but it was taking all her effort not to slide down the door and melt into a puddle.

Jack's hands glided up her sides then down again, his lips caressing her, his tongue sliding and slipping, flicking back and forth until she cried out again, tossing her head back and forth against the wood of the door. “JACK!”

Jack laughed, lapping at her, yanking her hips toward him. He lifted one of her legs over his shoulder, pressing one hand against the door to help balance her on one leg, while he delved deeper with his tongue, feeling the pain of her high heeled shoe against his back when her leg contracted with the intensity of the pleasure he was creating with his tongue.

Jack nipped at her, circling his tongue over her before gently putting her foot back on the floor. He stood up with a wide smile, his lips and chin glistening with her fluids. Harley looked at him through her hair which had fallen into her face, her mouth slightly open from her panting. Jack reached out tracing her bottom lip with his thumb gazing at her naked body, leaning against his bedroom door in those sexy heels, her flesh glowing with her orgasm.

“Mm...Harley.” He grinned as he unbuttoned his pants, his eyes tracing up and down her body. Harley reached out, her fingers dragging down his stomach, feeling the ripple of muscle that formed that intoxicating “V” down to his groin. She grabbed the edge of his pants and hauled him closer.

Jack laughed letting go to grasp her face in his hands, hauling her closer and covering her mouth with his, his lips and tongue hungry to taste her mouth. Harley groaned tasting herself on his lips, while her nimble fingers worked his pants open, pulling the zipper down, peeling his pants back to slide her hands against him. Jack grunted, feeling her hands against his hard erection still trapped by the cloth of his underwear. Harley squeezed lightly eliciting a groan from Jack that vibrated along her tongue.

Jack moaned. “Turn around, Harley.”

She did as he asked, turning to lean her hands against the door, arching her hips toward him, the heels highlighting the beauty of her legs as she arched her back in a sensual curve toward him. Jack shoved his pants and underwear down, groaning at the freeing of his erection, but he stood there gazing at her for a few moments. Her backside to him, her skin, pale, soft, luscious, her long blonde hair falling over one shoulder, but then she looked over at him, her blue eyes bright, need and want clear in her expression. And then she smiled. That was what nearly did Jack in, that gorgeous, perfect smile of hers.

“Mmm...Harley...my Harley...sweet, sweet Harley,” He murmured, kicking his shoes off and letting his pants drop to the floor just before he stepped up closer behind her. Jack held himself with one hand. He wanted to shove himself inside her, but instead he rubbed against her, feeling the creamy silk touch of her flesh, the warm wetness of her opening...teasing them both for a few moments. Harley groaned, pushing back against him which made Jack chuckle. “Anxious are we?”

Harley pouted. “Jack...”
Jack slid into her slowly, groaning while he slipped inch by inch into her. Harley arched her back further, moaning, her muscles contracting hard around him as his shaft filled her. Harley pressed her hands against the wood of the door, arching back into him. He felt so good buried deep within her. Jack grabbed her hips, his fingers digging into her soft skin, yanking her hips back against him.

Harley groaned. “Oh Jack...”

“Harls...my sweetling...” He smiled bending over to press a kiss to her back. Jack pulled her back just slightly before he started to thrust. He trembled for a moment. She felt good...beyond good—she felt right.

Harley loved the feel of his hands holding her hips, the power of his long, strong fingers pressing into her skin, the thrusting of his hips, his shaft embedded in her, the slapping of flesh against flesh as Jack's thrusts picked up speed.

Harley cried out, panting out his name. “Jack, Jack, JACK!”

Her whole body arched when she climaxed, her nails digging into the wood. “Uuhh...” her voice cracked when she cried out his name again. “Oh J-Jack!”

Jack hammered hard, his fingers digging into her flesh, yanking her back against him. Harley's panting, her crying out his name, the hot wet feel of her surrounding him had Jack groaning. “Harley...oh my sweet Harley...”

She gasped, her rear pressing back against him spurred Jack on, making him want to pound her harder, until he was losing control, fucking hard, deep and fast. Somewhere in the back of his mind he knew he was going to leave bruises on her skin, but she felt so good he couldn't stop himself. Jack pressed his teeth into his bottom lip, which hurt like hell, but he loved it, loved the mix of pain and pleasure.

Jack dropped to his knees, dragging Harley down with him until she was on all fours. Jack leaned in hard against her, his hands sliding down her sides. Harley dropped forward, pressing her backside up, dropping herself down to her elbows. Jack wrapped his fingers with hers, leaning heavily into her, feeling Harley hook one of her feet around his knee. Jack groaned, the feel of her rear pressed against him, the soft cream of her skin, the feel of her wet, wrapped around him, the press of her shoes against his legs He scooted back, pulling her and tugging her over onto her side.

“I want to see you, Harley,” he breathed, trembling as he worked to maintain control, rolling her over onto her back. Harley was smiling when she turned, careful to keep him inside her.

“My Jack...” she moaned.

Jack grinned, leaning forward, planting his hands on either side of her head, catching her hair which pinned her head in place. He pressed, fucking, his hips thrusting deep into her watching her face. Harley reached up, her hands caressing along his face, over his neck; she grabbed hold of his shoulders just as Jack slammed into her coming with a long deep groan. “Harley...”

She gasped, climaxing with him at the feel of his hot release, their cries mixing together for long, blissful moments until Jack collapsed on top of her.

They lay there on the floor for a minute until Jack started to nibble at her ear. Harley giggled and squirmed. “Jack!”

He chuckled. “Are you ticklish there?”
“Sometimes.” Harley wiggled, then squealed when Jack stuck his tongue inside her ear.

“AGH!! Jack!!”

He started laughing, his fingers working their way up her sides.

Harley squealed again. “JACK!!” She started laughing trying to push him off of her, but he was a dead weight refusing to move.

Harley laughed. “Jack stop!!”

He giggled pushing up to look down at her. “How would you feel about a bubble bath?”

Alfred was in the kitchen making a small dinner for Jack and Harleen while Bruce sat at the counter brooding sipping on a cup of freshly made coffee. Alfred was making a plate of turkey Reuben sandwiches cut into small bite size triangles along with some grapes and two glasses of milk. Alfred frowned as he worked; he was worried. He couldn't put his finger on what was bothering him. Of course, Master Jack getting himself arrested was uncomfortable and the fact that the brothers, after the last few years of a kind of truce, were now coming to a head. He worried too that Master Bruce's single minded devotion to saving Gotham was going to hurt the brothers. He feared Master Jack discovering what Master Bruce was doing...how he would react to the fact that Bruce had kept such a secret...

Jack grinned sitting across from Harley, a cigarette between his teeth, the tub filled until it was overflowing onto the floor with bubbles. He had one of Harley's feet resting on his shoulder. Jack carefully dragged the razor down as he shaved her leg.

“What do you think about getting a tattoo Harls?” he asked rinsing off the razor and pulling out the cigarette, blowing a stream of smoke into the air above them.

Harley blinked in surprise. “I don't know...never really thought about it before.” She wiggled her toes on his shoulder.

Jack chuckled, dropping some ash into the ash tray balanced on the edge of the tub before he ran the razor slowly down her leg again. He held the cigarette between his teeth as he spoke. Harley found that the way Jack smoked was sexy.

“I think we should. It'll be fun.”

Jack took the cigarette from his mouth, tapping it against the ash tray again and laughed.

“Fuck Bruce.”

Harley giggled while Jack switched her legs, placing the shaved one back into the water and picking up her left leg, placing her foot against his shoulder.

“Harley, can I trust you?” Jack asked placing the cigarette back between his lips without looking up from what he was doing, his eyes following the movement of the razor along her creamy soft skin.

“Of course Jack. You can always trust me,” Harley said softly watching him.
He smiled glancing up. “I want to share something with you...eventually.”

Harley’s smile was soft. “Whenever you’re ready Jack. I can wait.”

He smiled and kissed her toes making her giggle.

The next day Bruce winced as he rose from his bed. Alfred had come in with his breakfast and the morning paper just a moment ago.

Bruce frowned. “A little early this morning Alfred?”

“Master Bruce, you needed to see the headline this morning.” Alfred handed the paper to him.

Bruce sat on the edge of the bed wincing a little. Last night had been a little rough...or maybe he had been angry and had been looking for more trouble than usual, which he found—it was Gotham, after all. He unfolded the paper and there on the front page:

“JACK WAYNE: The Youngest Wayne is just looking for trouble!

Jack Wayne was involved in two violent incidents yesterday. The first was a good old-fashioned duel with one Oswald Cobblepot. The Cobblepots, who were at one time as wealthy as the Waynes, fell on hard times, losing their fortune to a series of unfortunate events and disappearing from the Gotham social circles. Oswald Cobblepot, the only son of the once wealthy Tucker Cobblepot and his wife, Ester Cobblepot, has recently returned to Gotham from parts unknown to reclaim his family's fortune and to bring back the wealth of the Cobblepot name, was seen in a duel with Jack Wayne after an incident a few nights back at one of Gotham's high end costume restaurants.

But that was not the only fight that the youngest Wayne brother found himself in yesterday. Just last night, at The Empire night club, Jack Wayne got into a fist fight with another man, identified as Frank Boles, a security officer at Blackgate prison. While the details of the fight are unknown, witnesses said it started over a woman—the same woman that was seen at the duel. One Harleen Quinzel.

Harleen Quinzel, this reporter has recently learned, is not just any pretty blonde, but Dr. Harleen Quinzel a psychiatrist fresh out of med school. It is unknown how the two met, but is this lady the one who is getting the younger Wayne brother to start becoming a regular Gotham fixture and is she the source of the recent bouts of violence that Jack Wayne had been seen participating in?

Bruce took a deep breath muttering, “Great, just great.”

Half a hour later, Bruce received a call from Wayne Enterprises telling him that there was going to be an emergency meeting and that both Bruce and Jack were requested to attend, though Bruce knew that request was a demand.

Jack frowned waking up to the sound of a fist on his bedroom door. “JACK! Wake up!”

Harley was lying next to him, naked, her blonde hair covering her face. Her back was to him, but she was pressed up close, his arms wrapped around her. Jack smiled as he slipped out of the bed, carefully removing his arm from around her before hopping out and grabbing his pants from last night off the floor. He slipped them on as he walked to the door. He unlocked it after using his foot to move the plates with the remains of their dinner out of the way. He opened it a crack and peered out.

“What is it Bruce? It's early.”

Bruce shoved the paper at Jack through the crack in the door. “Your little stunts yesterday made the paper. We are both wanted at Wayne Enterprise in the next hour. I suggest you get dressed and come on.”

Jack's eyes ran over the paper with a frown. “How'd they find out about the duel?”

Bruce narrowed his eyes at Jack.

“That how you got that?” The older brother pointed at the stitched wound running over and under Jack's right eye. Jack grinned and shrugged. “If Ossie doesn't have a limp after yesterday I'll be surprised.”

“This isn't funny Jack. Get dressed and come on.”

“Fine, let me get Harley up.” Jack started to close the door.

Bruce stopped him from shutting the door with his foot. “Jack, she doesn't need to come with us.”

Jack smiled at his brother. “Where I go, she goes. Besides...” He gestured with the paper. “She isn't a secret any more.”

“Fine, just both of you hurry up and meet me out front. I've called the driver.”

Jack walked back over to the bed, jumping on and wrapping his arms around Harley over the covers. He bounced a few times until she giggled, rolling her head over to smile up at him, her hair in her face. “What's wrong?”

“Apparently the board has called a meeting...probably over my very eventful day yesterday.”

Harley shifted onto her back with difficulty since Jack was still on top of her. “Why?”

Jack rolled his eyes. “Who knows, bunch of sticks up their asses I'm surprised any of them can take a shit. Anyway, I want you to come with me.” Jack leaned down to lick her mouth, then the tip of her nose.

Harley giggled then yawned. “All right.”

She smiled again as Jack just gazed at her. “You are so beautiful,” he whispered. “I love you.”

Harley's smile was tender. “I love you too Jack.”

“Promise me...swear you will never leave me.” Jack's smile faltered, his eyes suddenly serious.

“I swear Jack, wherever you go, I go. I'm never leaving you.” Harley's gaze was just as intent. Jack smiled kissing her softly.
“All right, let's go put on our costumes! Gotta go do some grown up shit!” Jack leapt off the bed with a laugh.

Harley had thrown on her dress from last night in order to walk back to her room. She was wondering if she was going to need to move a few bits of clothing over to Jack's room.

She dressed, fixed her hair and did her make-up quickly. Since they were heading toward Wayne Enterprises, she pulled out one of her work 'uniforms.' A pair of red skinny pants, a rather plain white blouse and an invested notched black blazer with a pair of simple, yet still fairly high, black heels. Those she admitted were for Jack...especially after last night. Harley giggled thinking about the way he held her hips, his fingers pressing into her skin...the small finger shaped bruises that she now had on her hips...

Blushing happily, she pulled her hair back into a soft ponytail, a few strands loose falling in waves around her features, highlighting her cheeks and eyes.

She had just finished her makeup, sliding in a pair of simple earrings and hooking the necklace that Jack had given her around her throat. She leaned forward putting on a light gloss over her lips when there was a knock at her door. She stood up just as the door opened and she saw Jack in her doorway grinning. Her heart slammed hard against her chest when she saw him.

He looked dashing, wearing a slim-fit wine colored three-piece suit, paired with a dark blue dress shirt and a white tie. His hair was slicked back as usual, his saucy grin on his lips. He looked...cool...she thought giggling as he walked over taking her hand and spinning her into his arms.

“Ready my sweets?” Jack brushed his lips over hers.

Jack weaved with her, his hands resting on her hips while he swayed, dancing slowly in place, spinning around gradually. He hummed softly, reaching up with one hand to caress her face. Only then did she notice he was wearing gloves.

“I'm ready.” She smiled wrapping her arms around his neck and moving back and forth with him to the silent music only they could hear.

“I think, after we are finished with the stuffed shirts, that you and I should go get a tattoo.” Jack giggled, spinning around slowly

Harley laughed especially when Jack dipped her low then brought her back up to her feet. “That sounds like fun puddin.”

Jack grinned rubbing his nose against hers. “I love it when you call me puddin.”

He kissed her tenderly. “All right, let's get out there before Bruce blows a brain cell.”

The drive to the offices of Wayne Enterprises wasn't as awful as it could have been. Bruce seemed...it seemed to Harley as if he were making a effort to be social with her, but also trying to engage Jack in conversation...small attempts to fill the gap between them.

“So...” Bruce took a sip of his coffee.
He had had the driver pulled through a drive-thru since they had neither the time for breakfast nor coffee before the three of them exited Wayne Manor. Jack had his hand resting against Harley's thigh when he spoke to his brother. “So?”

“What do the two of you have planned later today?” Bruce smiled, clearly unsure and uncomfortable.

Jack giggled. “Tattoos. Harley and I are going to get a tattoo.”

Bruce blinked, clearly not expecting that answer. “Why?”

Jack's grins widened. “Why not?”

Bruce frowned and was about to ask something else when the driver said, “We are here sirs, ma'am.”

The Wayne Enterprise tower was impressive with the giant “W” on the outside of the art deco feel to the outside. Harley had always thought so, but going into the building and seeing the interior of the place was just as, if not more, impressive than the exterior. The walls and floor were marble, with warm inviting furniture for clients or anyone else in the building working or waiting.

The three of them took the elevator up to the top floor where an all glass walled meeting room waited for them. Inside the room, as the three of them approached, Jack and Bruce walking side by side, Harley behind them slightly, they could see several men and a few women, all dressed in sober business attire. Once they arrived near the meeting place, there was a hall to the left where Bruce stopped and turned to face Harley.

“Dr. Quinzel, my office is right down that hall. Why don't you go and wait there? My secretary can bring you anything you require. Hopefully this meeting won't take very long.”

Jack tugged Harley up against him while Bruce headed on to the conference room.

Jack purred, his eyes following his thumb which he rubbed over her bottom lip.

“See ya soon toots,” he whispered.

Harley giggled. “I'll miss you.”

Jack grinned. “Don't get into any trouble without me.”

They kissed softly then he gave her a wave and followed his brother.

When they entered the conference room, Jack took the seat to Bruce's right. The room was filled with all the board members (minus one, Jack thought with a wicked grin. What was his name? McDermott? Mcturdmott? Jack chuckled silently to himself.)

Lucius Fox stood up, clearly uncomfortable once all the members were present.

“Bruce Wayne, Jack Wayne...this meeting was called by three of our board members, Ferris Boyle, Roland Daggett and William Earle in order to discuss some...issues that have recently presented themselves.”

Lucius took his seat on Bruce's other side and motioned toward Roland Daggett, a tall, slim blonde man with an expression on his face that Jack wanted to tear right off. Jack politely placed his hand over his mouth to hide the smile and suppress the giggles as he imagined actually taking Daggett's face off with a knife while the man was still alive. It was rather funny, he thought.

Daggett stood up glancing at Jack (who grinned and made a kissy face at him...he just couldn't resist!) then Bruce (whose expression was like looking at a stone statue.) “It has come to our attention that certain members of this board have caused a drop in our stocks this morning.”

Jack lifted an amused eyebrow, though Bruce's frown deepened while Daggett continued. “This person—here he looked directly at Jack—was involved in two altercations and has been charged with a misdemeanor crime. So we request there to be a vote to have Jack Wayne taken off the board.”

Bruce stood up. “Now wait a damn minute!”

Ferris Boyle stood up. “Now I suggest we simply get rid of that woman he was seen with, Dr. Harleen Quinzel. I mean, I don't know exactly what's going on and I'm sure you would be more than willing to tell us Bruce, but there were rumors starting this morning that Dr. Quinzel was hired by you to take care of your brother?” Boyle watched Bruce's face carefully, hoping to garner an answer from the older Wayne's expression, if not from his words.

Bruce opened his mouth when Daggett interrupted with a hissed, “I don't care either way. I just want this problem to disappear. Wayne stock dropped nearly .8% just this morning. Unless Jack or Bruce here can guarantee Jack's actions won't continue to reflect badly on Wayne Enterprises, I think we need a vote to take Jack Wayne off the board.”

The last of the three to call the meeting, William Earle, looked around. “Commit him to Arkham...” Earle's eyes landed on Jack. His eyes were full of...hatred? Ambivalence? Jack couldn't be sure, but Earle smiled at him. “If you commit him...finally...then I'm sure that our stock will go back up, showing that we have taken care of the problem. Jack has been a loose cannon for years. But now...two violent altercations in less than twenty-four hours? I mean, come on Bruce...get it over with. Commit your brother. We all know that's what you've been avoiding by keeping him confined to Wayne Manor...the damn video of the night club fight is on the internet, hit more than a million views before I came in this morning...everyone can see your brother is crazy.”

Jack's eyes narrowed.

Harley was sitting at Bruce's desk with a magazine she found; it was a business magazine, but she was flipping through it, wishing she had brought a book when her cellphone started to vibrate. Harley frowned pulling the phone out from her purse. The number wasn't one she recognized, but she hit answer. “Hello?”

“Yes, is this Dr. Harleen Quinzel?” the voice on the other end of the line was male, professional.

“Yes it is. Can I help you?” Harley glanced out the window of Bruce's office that looked down on Gotham.

“Yes ma'am, my name is detective Roger Peak. I'm looking into the disappearance of your stepfather.”

Harley stood up. “What?”
Harley stood up from Bruce's desk, her voice was quiet. She was pleased with herself, at how calm she sounded. “What do you mean he's missing?”

The man on the other end, Detective Peak, spoke calmly. “Apparently, the night of the funeral, your step-father disappeared. His family assumed he had left town to have some time alone. I guess he had gone off without telling his family before, so no one thought anything of it, especially after losing his wife, but he has been gone long enough without contacting anyone that they're afraid that something may have happened to him.”

Harley rubbed the bridge of her nose as she began to pace the office, the phone held tightly to her ear. “I'm still not sure why you're calling me. The family had to have told you that I hadn't been in contact with him or any of them in years. My mother's funeral was the first time I had seen him since I moved out when I was eighteen.” She could hear the shuffle of papers over the phone while Peak spoke. “Yes, they did, but we're just talking to everyone who was at the funeral and the wake, anyone who spoke to him or saw him that day. I mean did he seem, unduly upset—beyond just losing his wife, that is? Out of character? Did you notice anything peculiar?”

Harley stopped in front of the window and pressed her forehead against the glass, quickly recalling the confrontation between Jack and her step-father. She had her eyes closed, but then they opened slowly as something occurred to her. Could Jack have had anything to do with her step-father's disappearance? Part of her immediately thought, no...there was no way, she told herself. Jack wasn't capable...but a voice, deep down, whispered to her. “Yes, yes he could...you know it Harleen...you...no...not Harleen...you—Harley. You've seen it in his eyes, you know he could...but would he?”

She swallowed before she answered the detective. “I was never close to my step-father. He was a massive ass to me growing up and he was even worse when I showed up for the funeral. He only called me to tell me that my mother had died the day before the fucking funeral. So what do you think? You really think I would have noticed anything about him other than he was a giant...” Harley stopped herself. “No. I didn't know the man well enough to tell you one way or the other.”

Peak was silent for a moment, then she could almost hear him nodding. “I understand Dr. Quinzel. I'm sorry to disturb you.”

Harley sighed. “I'm sorry too Detective Peak. I hope you find him.”

She pressed the button ending the call and stared at her phone. Would Jack have killed her step-father? Or maybe he had just given him money and sent him away? She pressed her lips together as she mulled it over.

Bruce listened to the arguments, his face an unreadable mask (something he was becoming better and better at on his nightly rounds as the Batman...keeping his emotions out of the situation. Doing that had to be one of the most difficult parts of what he had chosen to do. But he had sworn to do what was right....which was stop crime, but then let the system do its job. He could not be judge and jury. But in order for him to achieve that, Bruce had to be able to distance himself from the situations he found himself in...save the innocent...detain the guilty.). The only indication that Bruce was upset, and only Jack saw it, was the slight frown on Bruce's lips, the small creases on the side of his mouth, barely there. Only someone who knew his face well could tell that Bruce was not happy. That was a sign that only Jack was used to seeing. It was an expression that had become more and more common on Bruce's face as they grew up without their parents. Anytime Jack did something that Bruce found embarrassing, too violent or just didn't understand, each outburst was proceeded by that slight frown around his lips. But right now, Bruce did nothing except listen. Jack, on the other hand, had stopped listening after the three men had made their 'suggestions.' Instead Jack occupied himself by imagining the fun he would have with killing them.

Daggett, Jack just ignored. Wanting the problem to simply go away was a typical response of someone who wanted nothing to do with anything messy...though that might mean he would have other people doing his dirty work for him. Worth looking into at a later date, Jack thought.

But the other two. Jack leaned on his elbows, locking his fingers together and resting his upper lip against his hands watching them without a word. One of them, Ferris Boyle, the one to suggest getting rid of Harley, glanced over nervously at Jack, seeing the young Wayne brother watching him with an almost dead expression in his eyes. The man hooked a finger around his collar, trying in vain to loosen his tightly buttoned up shirt. Jack smiled, but his hands covered the expression—only a slight crease around his eyes conveyed his thoughts.

The other man, William Earle...he wasn't nervous. He glanced at Jack, but his expression was smug. This was a man used to getting his way. Jack's smile grew behind his hands. Earle would be fun to kill...to watch that expression of confidence and superiority washed away under the sharp slice of a knife. Jack had to press his lips together tightly to prevent himself from laughing.

Another few minutes of debate went on before Lucius Fox stood up. “Enough. We will have to vote.”

One of the board members, an older woman...Jack never did catch her name...stood up. “Should we have the vote without McDermott?”

Lucius sighed. “Wherever he is, he has made himself unreachable. Unless his vote would be the deciding vote, I say we go ahead without him.”

Everyone else in the room agreed, and soon they were voting.

Harley sat down at Bruce's desk again and stared out the window, her thoughts spinning slowly. Where would her step-father go? She licked her lips in thought. Could Jack have done something do him? But she didn't remember him ever leaving the hotel room. As far as she knew he hadn't...but what she found really interesting wasn't whether or not Jack had done something to her step-father, but the fact that she didn't feel anything...except a certain warm spark of joy. Joy that the man who had made her growing up hell had finally gotten what he deserved...that Jack...if indeed he had done something to the man...had done it for her? He had to have done it for her, if indeed he did do anything at all.

Harley stood up and started to pace again. She had trouble sitting still, her body vibrating with energy...with pleasure at the thought of Jack killing someone for her. Should she say anything to him? She stopped and stared out at Gotham. Or should she keep it to herself? If Jack had indeed done something with her step-father, the less she knew the better—better for them both, especially if there was no body. She smiled slowly, seeing her reflection in the glass of the window. Her smile was wide...all teeth and her blue eyes sparkled with mischief. But to share that secret...to know when no one else did? She giggled.
Jack cast his vote under many a stare as he shoved his card into the small wooden box they had for such things, but he was a member of the board and they couldn't deny him his vote. When Bruce cast his vote, the looks were the same.

Lucius Fox picked up the box. “All right, I'll read the votes.”

In a matter of less than five minutes it was decided that Jack Wayne would remain on the board. Lucius Fox nodded with only a slight smile on his lips. The vote was heavily in Jack's favor.

Lucius looked at each board member. “Jack Wayne will continue on the board of directors for Wayne Enterprise, but please, Jack, be more careful.”

Jack laughed. “Of course...keep all my fighting on the down low.”

Jack winked which made several members laugh. Only the three who had called for the vote seemed uncomfortable or angry. William Earle seemed furious...which made Jack smile all the wider. Jack decided to do some digging on Mr. Earle...might be something interesting there.

Jack slammed his hands down on the table as he stood up causing everyone in the room, except Bruce, to jump. “Well, as fun as this has been folks—I have a date! Cheerio!” Jack patted Bruce on the shoulder as he stepped around his brother's chair and headed to the door. No one tried to stop him...not even Bruce. Bruce simply watched his brother stroll out, his own feelings currently mixed and confused.

Harley was sitting at the desk again, her phone out as she searched through the internet killing time and distracting herself from her thoughts. The fact that she wasn't upset about what she suspected her lover had done, both simultaneously bothered her and didn't bother her. Then the door opened and Jack walked in.

“Heya toots!” He grinned at her with his arms out wide.

Harley squealed and leapt to her feet to throw herself into Jack's arms. “PUDDIN!!”

Jack laughed holding her tightly against him. He enjoyed the way she wiggled, his hands snaking down her back to grip her rear, pressing her pelvis against his for a brief little grind. For a moment he thought about how funny it would be to have Harley on his brother's desk, but thought better of it...for now.

“So my sweets, you ready to go get a tattoo?”

Harley laughed. “Yes!”

“Then let us go and mar our bodies for eternity!!” Jack laughed as he wrapped his arm around Harley's shoulders, spinning her around and marching out of the office.

When they stepped outside of the Wayne building, it didn't take Jack long to hail them a cab. He opened the door for Harley before walking around to slip into the other side.

Harley took his gloved hand, weaving her fingers with his. Jack leaned between the two front seats.
“So...” He looked at the driver's name. “Ed is it?”

“Yes sir.” The man driving the cab was tall and slim with large oversized glasses on his sharp lightly features and his short dark auburn hair was groomed well. He wore a green t-shirt and jeans as he grinned at Jack. “It's Edward Nygma, but Ed is easier.”

Jack giggled, brushing a gloved finger along Ed's ear. “Oh, I love your name sweetheart! Now Ed, my girl and I want to get tattoos today. You know someplace we can go?”

The young man grinned as he signaled to pull away from the curb and said, “A man wants a tattoo. He goes into the shop, and sees two tattoo artists. He looks at the back of the first one and see's a really squiggly and badly done tattoo. He goes to the second and sees a really clean, well-done tattoo. he goes to the first to get his tattoo. Why?”

Jack frowned in thought, tapping his gloved finger against his lip before he answered. Jack smiled his bright smile. “Because the tattoos were on their backs, the other tattoo artist must have done the other man's tattoo.”

Ed laughed. “Just so!” he said, obviously pleased that his passenger understood the riddle. “Yes, I know a place you might like.”

Jack patted Ed's shoulder. “Take us there, my dear man!”

With a laugh Jack dropped back into the seat next to Harley tugging her over until she was practically on his lap. He nibbled her chin before he licked her mouth happily.

“So what happened?” she asked, running her fingers over his ears, brushing his hair back as she smiled softly. She loved the feel of his skin and the way his hair would sometimes fall out of place across his forehead.

Jack smiled closing his eyes, contented at the moment as he enjoyed the feel of her nails lightly brushing across his skin.

“Oh nothing really; a lot of hot air. My little exercise yesterday made the morning Gotham news and the Wayne stock dropped. They wanted a vote to take me off the board of directors—at least three of them did...” Jack told her this with little emotion. He seemed far more occupied with her hair, curling loose strands around his fingers and watching them bounce back into curls. His smile conveyed contentment, as if nothing in the world could possibly bother him.

“So...what happened?” Harley asked grabbing his hand and stopping him from playing with her hair, bringing that hand to her mouth and kissing the tips of his gloved fingers, her blue eyes studying him.

Jack shrugged. “They voted. I'm still on the board.” He waggled his eyebrows at her.

She caught his face between her hands, planting a hard kiss on his mouth. Jack made some sort of noise as he wrapped his arms around her. Harley pulled back after a moment and grinned as Jack laughed and caressed her cheeks.

“So, I still have a 'job.'” He chuckled at that.

Jack pulled her close and whispered then. “I want a really good reward for being a good boy...”

Harley giggled. “Oh I think I can give you a good reward for being a good, good boy.”

Harley licked her lips as her eyes wandered down to his mouth then back to his eyes with a smirk.
Jack grinned tugging open the front of her blouse, exposing more of her cleavage. He growled, playfully pressing lips against her breasts before his tongue traced the smooth roundness of her breasts that flowed over the top of her bra, his teeth teasing the creamy skin.

Harley moaned softly. When he raised his head to look into her eyes, she kissed him hard, her hands pressing against his chest before she slid down his body. She then shoved him against the door of the cab, her nimble fingers working quickly at the button and zipper of his slacks.

Jack propped one of his long legs along the seat grinning as she pulled his pants open, slipping his shaft out of his boxers. Jack groaned at the feel of her hand wrapping around him.

“What are you doing?”

Harley dropped down, lying on her stomach across the seat. She took a moment to brush his erection against her cleavage while she whispered.

“I'm going to give you an advance on your reward...”

She giggled just before wrapping her lips around him. Jack gasped, dropping his head back against the window of the taxi, one hand against the back of the seat, his fingers pressing into the vinyl, while the fingers of his other hand flowed into her hair. Harley groaned around him in her mouth, her tongue weaving against the underside of his erection caressing the hot silken texture of him.

Jack shuddered, his eyes rolling back. “Uhh...Harley...”

She smiled, pressing her lips down on him before pulling up slowly, then down again, her tongue twisting around the head of him, her teeth teasing against the tender flesh. Jack's hips came off the seat, his whole body tensing when Harley bobbed her head, then lowered her mouth down him slowly until he nearly touched the back of her throat. She groaned, his shaft filling her mouth, warm, hard and so soft at the same time.

He groaned loudly, his fingers convulsing, jerking against the seat and her scalp. Jack lifted his head to look down at her, only to find her incredible blue eyes gazing up at him, a smile on her wicked lips which caused him to jerk, bursting in her mouth with a very loud groan of her name.

“Oh God Harley!!”

Harley grinned holding her lips pressed around him, feeling the hot liquid coat the inside of her mouth and tongue. She swallowed, taking a few more good long pulls on him, feeling the way his body shuddered, his fingers tugging at her hair, before she finally released him.

Jack let out a long exhale of air, his whole body going limp.

He giggled. “I always enjoyed the previews...”

Edward glanced at his rear view once and grinned as he redirected his gaze to the road.

Nygma drove them downtown, taking a bit of a tour to allow them to “finish” what was going on in the back seat before he finally pulled around to park behind a tattoo parlor called “Black Gotham Tattoo.” Jack hopped out of the taxi once the cab had turned off, tossing a couple of hundred dollars at the young man. “Care to stick around, drive us back later?”
Nygma grinned. “Sure thing!”

Jack laughed. “Great, hey find a sushi place and grab us something to eat...yourself too...”

“Absolutely!” Edward smiled. “People need me, yet they give me away every day. What am I?”

Jack laughed reaching in to rub his hand through Edward's hair. “Money...you're money.”

The young man laughed.

The interior of the tattoo parlor had dark painted, almost blood red walls. Hanging on the dark walls were old pictures, photos of skeletons, Victorian women in undergarments along with photos of tattoos of Victorian and turn-of-the-century tattooed people as well as more modern tattoos done here at the shop. There were five booths in the front for customers to get their tattoos, and another three or four in the back, Harley guessed. Over on the right there was a lounge area with a long, low table piled with binders of tattoo photos, tattoo magazines and a few random paperback books. The three chairs and one long couch that made up the area all looked like they were ancient Victorian whorehouse rejects, with heavy dark wood framing deep crimson leather cushions. There was a small, thin woman with a pixie-cut of white hair, wearing a sleeveless blue tank top that highlighted the sleeve-work that ran up and down both arms; she leaned on the counter by the register.

When she glanced up from her book, her expression went from dull boredom to shock at seeing the two fancy dressed people step in. The woman's attention was glued mostly on Jack. Harley was a little jealous; the spike of emotion burned in her chest and the thought of clawing that woman's eyes out came to her with vivid clarity—so clear that for a moment Harley felt a stab of panic. She had experienced violent thoughts before (most people do, she reminded herself), but not like this. She quickly pushed the thought away.

Jack took Harley's hand and interlaced his fingers with hers as he stepped up to the counter with Harley beside him. A couple of people sat in the lounging area staring at the two of them, but Jack ignored them as he leaned on the counter and turned his smile toward the woman.

“My girl and I are looking to get tattoos.”

The woman smirked. “Really?? Well, our artists don't usually take walks in.”

Jack smiled, showing off his perfect teeth. “Not even for a couple of hundred extra?”

The woman stared at him, then put her book down with slightly lifted eyebrows. “Wait here.”

Jack watched her go then leaned his back against the counter tugging Harley flush against his body. He smiled at her, brushing his nose against hers.

“Do you have any idea of what you want?” he asked her.

Harley frowned as her lips stroked his for a moment. She leaned back to look at him and then reached up to brush the scar he was going to have over his right eye.

“No...do you?”

Jack grinned. “I know exactly what I want...I have an idea for you if you want to hear it.”

Harley giggled, her hands running up to his shoulders, feeling the rich texture of his suit under her touch. She leaned in closer licking his lips.

Jack moaned softly. “I can smell me on your breath...”

He grinned, the smile gradually inching across his face. Harley blushed, but her grin was wicked. Jack nipped her lips with a whispered, “Mine.”

He grabbed her rear, digging his fingers into her backside pressing her against his groin. She could feel that he was already becoming hard again.

Harley purred. “What should I get puddin’?”

He pressed his lips against her ear and whispered something. Harley giggled, nodding her head in agreement at the moment the young woman returned to the counter.

“Antonio says he will tattoo you both. Come on back.” She motioned for the two of them to follow.

Antonio was a tall, heavily built bald man with tattoos covering his arms and peaking out around his neck from under the t-shirt he wore. He had both ears pierced, with eyes so dark they looked black. He motioned with his head. “You the two want tats?”

The man frowned as his eyes wandered over the two of them. He was clearly trying to figure them out, but his frown deepened when he examined Jack. Harley wasn't sure what the man saw...Jack's smile never faltered. But Antonio settled down and pointed to the black chair that reminded Harley of a dentist's chair.

“Which one wants to go first?”

Jack smiled and shot a glance at Harley. “I'll go first.”

Jack, with his eyes on Harley, used his teeth to pull his gloves off and shoved them into the pocket of his jacket before he slipped it off too. He then unbuttoned his vest, handing each item to Harley. Next he pulled off his tie and then started to unbutton his shirt. Harley watched, aware that she had to look like a starving animal staring at Jack while he removed his clothing, but damn she couldn't help it...he was gorgeous and hers.

Jack sat in the chair once he had stripped off his top clothing.

Antonio nodded. “So what you want?”

Jack touched the space between his neck and shoulder covering his deltoid.

“Four aces, a skull face in the ace of spades with the words “All in” under them.”

Jack looked pointedly at Harley when he said “All In.” Something about his words hit her...this tattoo he was getting was more than simply art or simply just to do it for no real reason. Jack was giving her message...Harley blushed when Jack winked at her.

Antonio nodded. “Sounds good.”

It took a few minutes of Jack and Antonio working together to come up with the design on paper, but within forty-five minutes, the two men had the design sketched out and Antonio was applying the temporary outline to Jack's skin. The woman out front brought Harley a stool while she waited. Harley watched with interest while Antonio began to work at applying the tattoo. Jack didn't flinch at all when the needle started to work into his skin.

Harley stretched her arms over her head just as the woman from out front came over to stand next to her, both women watching the tattooist.

After a bit the woman smiled at Harley. “I'm Lexi by the way.”

Harley turned to offer her hand. “Harley.”

They shook hands, then both turned back to watch Jack and Antonio. Lexi motioned with her head. “You guys married?”

Harley shook her head. “No, we're...”

She frowned for a moment...were they dating? It was more than simply dating. Harley frowned, she couldn't think of a word for what she and Jack had so she simply said. “I'm in love with him.”

Lexi nodded. “I get it, believe me. I can tell he has it bad for you, the way he looks at you.”

Harley blushed, which made Lexi smile.

They were quiet for a while, the low hum of the tattoo needle along with Jack and Antonio's talking filled the space.

Lexi stretched. “Care if I put some music on?”

She recognized the band, Sevendust from her college days and the song, “Live Again.”

“...Can't see me. you feel me
Want me. you'll find me
I'll be your everything
Will you call
You'll need more & more
When you fall
In this world I see it more
The pain you feel that I ignore...”

Her mind wandered back to the disappearance of her step-father. Jack was still speaking with Antonio, but his eyes had moved back over to her. The way he was watching her, his blue eyes seemed to hold her paralyzed, her heart, she knew somehow was beating in time to his. He was a drug she had become addicted to and she had no way of knowing how deep that addiction was. The doctor in her told her that she was becoming co-dependent, or was it that Jack was appealing to something already deep inside her? Some aspect of her own personality she had simply been ignoring; some darkness that was always part of her. And that darkness spoke to the darkness she knew was inside Jack?

But more importantly, did she care?

The music played around her and the lyrics seemed to speak to her...

“How many times have you looked
At yourself and felt mistreated
How does it feel to know that
This life of yours is real
All of your life you've been led
To believe your nothin'
So look at yourself and start to live again...
...If you don't change you'll be nothin’ …”

Her eyes that had glassed over, staring into nothing, all the other sounds around her having disappeared except the lyrics to the song. When the music stopped, switching to another song and another band, her eyes snapped back into focus and her gaze focused on Jack. Maybe it was time for a change, she thought. And maybe it wasn't Jack who needed to change, but her.

“Okay, all done!” Antonio grinned. “Go take a look.”

The tattooist pushed his chair back out of the way, allowing Jack to hop up. There was a full-length mirror against the wall that hung to the right of Antonio's space. Jack walked over motioning Harley to follow him at the same time. He stood there examining the tattoo turning his head, stretching his neck to the side. “What do you think?”

He grinned at the mirror, his eyes on hers.

She examined it, the urge to run her fingers over it was strong, but she resisted. “I love it puddin.”

Jack grinned turning to slide his fingers long her jaw brushing her lips with a kiss before walking back over and retaking his seat.

Antonio finished up with Jack, cleaning away the blood, examining his work one more time to be sure everything looked good before he put a bandage over the tattoo.

“Leave that there for at least an hour. After that keep it out of the sun for a few weeks, put lotion on it, not too much and you should heal up just fine.”

Jack smiled as he stood up. “Your turn Harls.”

Jack laughed as he vacated the seat for her. She handed his clothing to him, which he dropped onto the stool picking up his dress shirt and slipping it on. He was buttoning up the shirt watching her as Harley started to pull up her blouse.

Harley leaned back in the seat, grinning at Jack as Antonio smiled at her. “So what do you want?”

Harley untucked her shirt, pulling it up under her breasts then undid her pants pushing them down low on her hips.

“Right under here…” She pointed to the spot under her flat stomach. “I want in fancy cursive, ‘Lucky You.’” She shared a glance with Jack who grinned giving her an encouraging nod.

“All right.” Antonio smiled with a slight chuckle. The tattooist began putting Harley's tattoo together, the three of them picking out the script, deciding on the size. It only took Antonio the time to come up with the design she and Jack liked, before putting the design together onto the transfer paper.

Harley lay back, her panty's pulled down quite low, her slacks pulled down just past her hips, but when Antonio pressed the transfer to her skin, there was something about the way Antonio laid his arm along her thigh, his gloved hands touching her hips. The way he put his hands on her hip and shifted her closer, fingers brushing briefly over her stomach...that had Jack suddenly on edge.

Jack narrowed his eyes reaching over to pick up his vest and slide his arms through the holes, his eyes narrowing further as the tattooist pressed a hand down on her, the other hand holding the needle as the man started to work. It was more than just jealousy that rippled over Jack, it was...possessive yes...but more than that...he was feeling an intense urge to rip Antonio's hands off, to break his fingers for touching her, to dig his eyes out and rip his throat open. No one touched her but him...no one! And Harley...she wasn't stopping him from touching her!!

Jack ground his teeth, the muscles his in jaw tensing, causing the tendons along his jaw and cheeks to stand out. He pressed his lips together, breathing tensely through his nose, trying to calm the violent urges.

Harley looked over at him, her blue eyes clear and beautiful. Jack focused on her eyes, her mouth, the way her smile was soft, just for him. That was his smile...the one she kept just for him.

Jack calmed himself. The man was simply doing what they were paying him for...to tattoo her. Jack decided he was going to teach himself and her how to tattoo...any other marks on her body would be put there by him and no one else.

But even while Jack worked to calm himself, the urge to kill the tattooist was still strong.

Harley sat up a little awkwardly once Antonio was done, trying to hold her slacks up without pulling them up over the tattoo. Jack hurried over to help her stand in front of the mirror. They both grinned looking at the finished product across her lower abdomen. Jack leaned close to her ear and whispered. “Imagine me licking that…”

Harley let out a soft, quiet little moan of pleasure. Jack grinned at her then walked her back over to the chair. He let Antonio clean and bandage her tattoo, though it took a great deal of effort on Jack's part to remain calm. Once she was bandaged and ready to go, Jack helped zip up Harley's slacks, standing close, his eyes on hers as he pulled the zipper up.

“How would you feel if we did some self-defense practice today? I'm feeling the need to burn off some steam.” Jack knew he needed to burn off the violent jealousy that was coursing through him. Working out with Harley would be fun and quite distracting he thought to himself.

“Sure thing puddin.” Harley grinned while Jack brushed his nose against hers, his lips just barely touching her lips. She could feel his breath brush across her mouth, teasingly. (She also thought getting him alone would be a chance for her to ask him about her step-father. She had decided that she needed to know.) But then Jack stepped back, taking away the heat of his body and the intensity of the almost kiss. He took her hand, bringing it to his lips to brush a kiss along her knuckles.

Lexi leaned on the counter watching the couple leave while Antonio put the cash into the register.

“Why don't we have a love like that?” she asked without looking at him watching while Jack pulled Harley up against him again, pressing a passionate kiss to her mouth and dipping her back slightly. Antonio glanced up just as Jack and Harley hopped into the back seat of the taxi that had been waiting for them.

“Because we're not crazy rich people.”

Lexi knocked her hip into his with a grin. “That's more than just about being rich. You see the way those two look at each other?”

Antonio nodded. “Yeah...bit intense if you ask me, borders on the scary.”

Lexi rolled her eyes pushing herself away from the counter. “You have no romance in your soul ,do you?”

He shrugged. “Hey, just not into crazy mad love like that...I'm just fine with what we have...nice and calm.”

Lexi stuck her tongue out at him.

Bruce walked into the small restaurant, but stopped in the doorway to look around. Most of the customers were a mix of tourists, families and locals who probably lived in the neighborhood. The walls were painted an inviting mint green, with one wall along the left painted black with chalk like paintings on the wall illustrating the different menu items that were offered. On the same wall, there were three built in shelves that held bottles of wine. The counter at the far end had a nice pattern of black and white zigzag that ran under an accent of mint green with a natural wood counter that matched the natural wood tops of all the tables and chairs.

Bruce was noticeable in his expensive suit. He stood near the entrance looking over the tops of patrons’ heads until he found his lunch date. He saw who he was looking for sitting at a table by himself.

As if sensing eyes on him, the man glanced up and saw Bruce. The attractive man waved his hand and called, “Over here!”

Bruce smiled and made his way over to Harvey Dent, a fairly new acquaintance, but someone he was quickly growing to respect...and like as a friend. A man with a strong sense of right and wrong and who had his sights set on the district attorney spot in the upcoming election. Harvey Dent was attractive, fair-minded and a genuinely nice person.

Bruce and Wayne Enterprises were helping to fund his campaign as the new district attorney.

Dent grinned when Bruce weaved through the other customers and wait staff.

“You arrived just in time. I got us this table but there were a couple of old ladies eyeballing me. I think they were going to take me out for the table.”

Harvey chuckled as Bruce slipped into the seat across from him.

“I hope you don't mind, but I went ahead and ordered for you since I wasn't sure how much time you have. I remember how much you enjoyed a good turkey sandwich so I ordered you one of their classic turkey clubs.”

Bruce smiled. “Thanks Harv. I appreciate the thoughtfulness.”

Harvey shrugged. “Hey, we're friends, not just two men working to better Gotham.”

A young woman at the counter called a number and Harvey stood up.

“That's us. Be just a moment.”

Soon the two men had their sandwiches and glasses of sweet tea. Bruce took a bite of his sandwich rolling his eyes in appreciation. “You're right—this place has good food.”

Bruce grinned around a mouthful.

Harvey laughed. “Yep, one of Gotham's many hidden gems.”

Bruce took a sip of his tea. “So, what did you want to see me about Harvey?”

“Well, I'm throwing a party. Okay, not me personally. It's a charity event, to raise money for revitalizing some of Gotham's poor neighborhoods, new parks, safe places for kids to hang out, some playgrounds, money for after-school programs...that sort of thing. But it's also to bring my campaign into the limelight...let people see and meet me sort of thing. It's a fund-raising carnival for this weekend. We are setting up inside Robinson Park. The ticket sales are to raise money for the Gotham Neighborhood Revitalization Project. We have a lot of people organizing it, lot of people coming. Anyway, I was hoping that maybe you and your brother Jack would show up? If we had the Wayne brothers there...”

Harvey took a sip of his tea before he added, “It would really look good. And as another enticement, I have a young woman, friend of my wife's that I would love for you to meet. I think the two of you would hit it off. Her name is Selina Kyle. She is new to Gotham. She works as an art dealer at one of the local galleries. Really interesting woman and, I might add, hot too.”

Bruce laughed. “Don't let Gilda hear you.”

Dent laughed. “Anyway, she is smart, gorgeous...just your speed. Anyway, I know your brother received some...interesting press just recently, but this would look good for the both of you.”

Bruce frowned in thought. He wasn't thinking about meeting this Selina Kyle, he was thinking about Jack and Dr. Quinzel. He was happy to participate in the fundraiser, that was pretty much a given, but he was worried about inviting Jack after the last twenty-four hours. Jack had pretty much made a spectacle of himself, though this was a great chance for Jack to get some good press by participating in an event like this. It would also help secure his place on the board if the other board members saw Jack doing something “good” for Gotham instead of getting into trouble.

“I would love to Harvey. I'll get Jack to be there too, no problem.”

Harvey grinned. “Thank you Bruce. I mean, thank you for everything you have been doing, but this will be great press for both of us.”

Bruce nodded, thinking to himself, “I hope so.”

Jack came down to the gym dressed in a pair of dark purple shorts and a plain white t-shirt. He stopped in the doorway when he saw Harley. She had arrived just a few minutes before him and was in the middle of doing some stretches. She had on a pair of red yoga Capri pants and a white tank-top that hung low in the back showing the back of her red sports bra. She was in the middle of bending down, her hands grabbing the front of her tennis shoes. Her hair was pulled back into a ponytail which bounced up and down with her movements.

She had just spread her legs out and had reached down between them, her hands flat on the mat when Jack saw her grinning at him from between her legs, her upside down smile just as lovely. But as he watched her, he felt that spike of jealousy again. He wasn't sure where it was coming from, the tattoo had been hours ago now, but looking at her...so beautiful...sexy. He clenched his fists. That someone else had touched her...touched her where only he should touch her...

Harley didn't notice the subtle shift in his expression.

“Hey,” she said with a widening smile.

Jack, who had been staring intently at her backside, then at nothing at all as his thoughts chased down a rabbit hole of anger, quickly focused back on her and he grinned in return. “You beat me down here.”

Harley giggled returning upright. “I remembered the way this time.”

Plus she had needed time to think how to go about asking Jack about her step-father.

Jack stepped fully into the gym. “So, more self-defense lessons?”

He shook out his hands. The anger—he was having trouble focusing it. Part of him knew it wasn't Harley's fault...she didn't encourage the man...it...he...Jack's temper simmered as his thoughts jumped and flitted about, making him angrier yet.

Harley stretched her arms over her head. “I meant to tell you. I received a call earlier today from a Detective Peak.”

Jack had walked past her, turned to look at her when she spoke, stopping at the stereo and putting some music on. “'Peak?”

She nodded as the sounds of Lacuna Coil started to play over the gym speakers. They were facing each other, starting that slow stalking walk, moving around in a circle. Jack’s smile was cold, his usual warmth missing as he murmured under his breath along with the song.

“Now get ready for war
It's starting today
I'm leaving the army inside ...”

Harley frowned watching Jack warily. She could see his mouth moving, but didn't hear him. “Yes.
Apparently my step-father disappeared the night of the funeral. No one thought anything of it at first.
They thought he had just needed time away. Guess he had done stuff like that before, but now they are worried—the family—he hasn't come back. They filed a missing persons.”

Jack frowned. “So?”

Harley tilted her head at him. “Did you have anything to do with it?”

Jack’s frowned deepened and his blue eyes flashed dangerously when he looked at her. “Why? Did you care about him after all?”

He moved fast, faster than Harley had ever seen Jack move. His fist flew out straight for her face.
She barely had time to block his fist before he threw another punch at her. She blocked that one too, barely, the pain of his fist hitting her arm vibrated up through her shoulders. She snarled, twisting her body and kicked Jack in the side, then twisted around from the other direction kicking him again on the other side, forcing Jack to tense in order to avoid her hitting his kidney or breaking a rib.

Jack snarled at her. “That man touching you...you didn't even stop him!”

Harley looked confused. “What man??”

“Antonio...” Jack spat.

Harley narrowed her eyes, her fists up. For the first time since meeting him, she was maybe a little scared of Jack. But as Harley glared at him, she realized that the odd thing was, she was more angry than scared. She was actually pissed at him. Pissed that he would think she wanted that other man to touch her. Pissed that he would think she cared about her step-father being dead.

“That was your idea Jack, getting the tattoo...what did you expect? And if you killed my step-father
I'M GLAD! I hope you made him suffer!!!”

“NO ONE TOUCHES YOU!!” Jack snarled. “NO ONE BUT ME!”

He rushed at her, his right fist coming up from below, under her guard. She managed to avoid his first hit, but he twisted around, grabbing her around the neck, his forearm pressing painfully against her throat. She pushed back, throwing all her weight into him, slamming his back up against the wall, once, then twice. She could hear the air exhaling from his lungs with a burst of hot air against the back of her neck. She managed to bring both her feet up and used one of the work-out machines to give her push much more leverage. Harley pushed back against the machine with both feet, slamming Jack up against the wall a third time.

Jack snarled, twisting her around and slamming her against the wall sideways. Harley felt dizzy for a split second when her head bounced against the wall, but she dropped her weight taking him with her breaking his grip. But breaking his grip wasn't enough. She twisted her body to the side, bring her elbow up to smash Jack in the chin, fully breaking his grip around her throat further, causing him to stumble backwards from her.
Harley jumped to her feet, turning toward him and brought her fist around to hit Jack hard, with as much strength as she could put into the punch to his shoulder.

“What is wrong with you??!!” she screamed.

Jack reached out and grabbed her by her biceps, his grip painful just before he threw her across the room. Harley slammed into the wall with a gasp, sliding down the wall for a moment dazed.

“He touched you!! You're mine! AND YES!! I KILLED YOUR STEP-FATHER!! I made him suffer!!” Jack snarled. “HATE ME NOW?!” He laughed suddenly, but this wasn't like his usual laughs. Something was slightly...wrong, she realized, with the tone in his voice.

His voice had a strange hitch, that communicated more than anything else the pain Jack was feeling mixed with his rage, while he stalked over to her, reaching down and dragging her to her feet by her hair. Harley twisted, despite the pain of his hand in her hair, and slammed her to the floor. Jack paused, his grip on her hair falling, as he surveyed her. She was battered, her hair flopping in clumps around her face, as he moved to stand over her, his blue eyes flashing with madness, pain and anger.

Harley leaped onto him, driving Jack down to the mat.

Straddling him, Harley started to punch at him hard and fast in the face, alternating her fists. “I DIDN'T WANT HIM TOUCHING ME!! Only you!!”

She hissed as she yelled, spittle flying from her lips. Jack kept his forearms up blocking her strikes.

Jack managed to get a hand up around the side of her neck, using all his strength to push her to the side, twisting her over. They both rolled, this time he ended up on top of her, but Harley wrapped her legs around his waist squeezing hard while Jack put both hands around her neck, his blue eyes flashing with madness, pain and anger.

Harley start gasping, struggling, her hands shoving at Jack's face. She finally knocked his chin up hard with the ball of her hand, stunning him for a moment. Jack fell forward, and Harley wrapped one arm tightly around his neck. Jack gasped getting to his feet taking Harley with him. She was wrapped around him, her legs tight around his waist and her arms choking him. He twisted around and slammed her up against the wall again, but she didn't let go, leaning in to bite down on his shoulder. Jack hissed at the pain of her teeth breaking skin. He slammed her back into the wall again, this time hard enough that she left a dent. Harley brought her arm up and rammed her elbow into his back.

Jack stumbled back, falling, both of them going down. Jack landed on his back.

Harley hissed, punching him as hard as she could. “I DON'T WANT ANYONE BUT YOU! YOU ASS!!”

Jack flipped her over, breaking her grip on him and staggered to his feet licking the blood from his lips. Harley pushed herself to her feet simultaneously. Her lips were just as bloody and there was a trickle of blood running from her nose. Jack's lips were bleeding and he had a pressure cut along his jaw with a smear of blood. Blood also oozed slowly from his nose.

They stared at each other panting.

Harley whispered. “I'm glad he's dead. I don't care that you killed him Jack. I don't care. And I never want anyone but you....ever. No one can touch me but you. I love you.”
For a brief moment Harley wasn't sure, but she thought his lip trembled. There was pain, loneliness and a deep raging madness in his blue eyes, the hurt of a young man lost in a world that could never understand him. His voice was low, the rage having seeped away.

“Only you Harley. I don't want anyone to touch you but me...I don't.” His shoulders slumped slightly. “Always be mine.”

They stared at each other for a tense moment that seemed to stretch into an eternity, then suddenly they were both closing the distance, their mouths slamming against each other, arms wrapping desperately around each other.

They could taste each others blood as they kissed. Jack yanked her hair the rest of the way out of the ponytail holder, his hands digging into her hair while he kissed her, staggering her back against the wall. Harley clawed at Jack, grabbing the ends of his shirt, yanking and tugging to move the fabric up over his torso while struggling to wrap her legs around him at the same time. He let her rip the shirt over his head and up his arms, throwing the garment away, her hands moving desperately over his body.

Jack grabbed the collar of her tank top, ripping the cloth in half. Harley gasped with a grin at the violence of the gesture, biting at his tongue and lips, blood coating her teeth.

She could feel the hard pressure of his bound arousal between her legs, his pelvis shoved hard against hers. She was wet, needing him inside her now!

Her fingers dug into his scalp, grabbing fists full of his hair, her mouth demanding from his, the two of them struggling to get closer to the other, almost clawing at each other.

Jack lifted her up, Harley's leg's going immediately around his waist. He carried her over to the weight bench where he laid her across the vinyl seat, grabbing the edge of her yoga pants once he had shoved her legs down, and yanked them off of her, ripping them in the process. Harley struggled to pull her sports bra over her head, kicking her shoes off at the same time. Jack hissed gazing at her lying naked across the bench, battered and bruised, the tattoo along her lower stomach. Lucky You...he grinned. He was lucky. She really was his.

He kicked his own shoes off, shoving his shorts down. He reached forward and grabbed her hips, yanking her to the edge of the bench before he seized her legs, tossing them up on his shoulders.

“Come here,” he hissed.

Jack didn't tease this time, didn't take it slow. Instead Jack shoved himself hard into her with a loud groan of pleasure, burying himself deeply into her yielding flesh nearly lifting her off the bench with his thrust. He shuddered to feel her hot wetness encompassing him, her body warm and ready for him.

Harley cried out, arching off the bench, reaching up and grabbing the bar of the weight that was settled across the bench crossbeam. The feel of him taking her hard and fast had Harley crying out with happiness. Jack groaned pounding into her, reaching down to drag his fingers across her breasts, hissing with the pleasure of touching her, feeling her.

He leaned forward, wrapping his hands around hers that held onto the bar, thrusting hard and fast as both of them panted loudly.

Harley whimpered with each powerful thrust. He felt good to the point that her brain seemed as if it had fuzzed out. Everything was a blank except this, this moment, the feel of him inside her, the sounds of his flesh slamming into hers.

Harley moaned louder and her orgasm rushed through her body, her mind spiraling with pleasure, all sense beyond the primal gone. She didn’t care what he did to her, she loved him, come hell or high water, she belonged to him.

Jack arched his head back. “Harley...”

He let go of the bar to lean back, his hands going over her thighs to press his fingers into her soft flesh.

His mind seemed to be coming back from the brink. As if fucking her, taking her and being with her, was calming to his soul, that he was connecting to the other part of himself that he so desperately needed. To have her...to never be alone again...to know she was his...belonged to him. Jack yanked out of her, which made Harley gasp in desperation.

Jack growled. “Turn around, now.”

Panting, Harley grinned, standing up and turning around, the bench between her legs, she reached out, grabbing the bar, glancing over her shoulder at Jack with a wide grin. Jack caught his bloody bottom lip between his teeth, smirking, his eyes roaming over her backside, licking his lips. She held onto the bar, arching her back to him. Jack dug his nails into her backside, dragging them down her hips, smiling at the sight of the red marks he left on her skin. Before he took her, he pressed his lips to her spine, then scraped his tongue along her back to her hip where he bit her hard. Harley cried out, the pain of his teeth flashing across her skin.

“Oh puddin!!” She groaned, arching into his bite.

He stood back with a laugh, grabbing her hips just before he plunged deep into her again, both of them shouting together when their bodies came together again. He yanked her back against him pounding hard and fast, growling with the intensity of their joining. Harley held on to the bar, her knuckles turning white, arching back against him, wanting Jack to be as deep in her as possible. She wanted to feel all of him, every inch.

Jack leaned forward to wrap his arms around her waist and pushed up, forcing her upper body forward so that she was leaning her body against the bar. Jack snaked one hand up to grab her breast, squeezing while his pelvis slammed forward hard and deep, thrusting his shaft into her body. Jack panted heavily as he pressed his lips to her shoulder, reaching over her to grip the bar with one hand, his hand next to hers, just as he dragged his teeth along her skin, biting her again, hard enough to bruise. But as the pain mixed with the pleasure coursing through her, Harley cried out, her climax ripping through her body.

“JACK!!” She could barely catch her breath.

Jack hissed against her shoulder, the hand on her breast easing up to grip her neck, long fingers pressing into her flesh, forcing her head back gently where he placed a tender kiss against her forehead. Harley’s eyes rolled open to gaze up and to the side, to see that smile, his blue eyes smoldering only for her. Jack pressed his teeth into his lip, with one final thrust, he burst hot and fast into her. Together they cried out.

* Jack had tenderly brought Harley to the floor afterward. At first they had laid naked beside each other, panting, struggling to bring their breathing back under control.
Harley was grinning at him, but then she suddenly reached out and hit him with her fist in his shoulder.

Jack growled. “Ouch!”

He narrowed his eyes playfully before he pounced.

He laughed as he jumped on top of her, starting to tickle her sides with his long fingers gliding up her waist. Soon he had her screaming with laughter.

“Call me daddy!” He laughed. “Call me daddy and I’ll stop!”

Harley squealed wiggling and kicking until she finally screamed, “DADDY!!”

Jack chuckled, ceasing to tickle her, but he remained on top of her.

He laid over her, resting on his elbows on either side of her head while gazing down at her. He stroked her hair back from her face gently, tracing her bloody lip with his thumb, his fingertips gliding over the split at her elbow that he had caused, the sweat of their fucking smeared the blood along her brow.

“I love you Harley,” he whispered.

She smiled reaching up to brush her fingers along the quickly blossoming bruise on his jaw that she put there.

“I love you too Jack.” She smiled tenderly.

She thought that she could become lost in his eyes forever...

Jack frowned, just a slight crease of his lips before he said. “Would you marry me?”

Harley blinked in shock. “Marry you?”

He nodded. “I don't want you to leave me. I don't want to lose you. I need to know that you are the one thing in my life that I have—only you.”

“I will always be yours. Always Jack. Yes. Yes, I will marry you.” She brushed his face with her fingers gazing into his eyes.

Jack's voice dropped. “Would you keep all my secrets Harley?”

She stared at him. What other secrets did he have? Were there other deaths? Did she care?

Harley smiled. “Yes. All your secrets are mine too.”

The next morning Jack came whistling into the kitchen. He had a healing cut along his cheek, the swelling on his lip had gone down, but there was a bright bluish purple bruise along his jaw. If anyone saw him they could see he had clearly taken a beating.

Jack wasn't dressed for the day yet. Instead he was wearing a pair of lounge pants of purple paisley, a white t-shirt and a pair of lime green socks. His hair was still a mess, not his usual greased back look. Long locks of it were falling over his forehead and into his eyes, but his smile was cheerful. Alfred was just putting the coffee on when Jack strolled in.
“Morning Alfred!”

Alfred turned his head with a smile, but then frowned when he saw Jack, not just in his pajamas but the state of his face. “Up early Master Jack and...not dressed I see.” (Alfred had seen the condition of both Jack and Miss Harleen's faces yesterday at dinner. They had told him that their self-defense class had become more...realistic than intended.)

Jack was grinning ear to ear. “I am here to bring breakfast in bed to the future Mrs. Wayne.”

Alfred was pulling out a couple of coffee cups when he stopped. “What?”

Jack giggled. “I asked her to marry me.

Jack grinned putting a finger against his lips. “Shhh...It's our secret.”

Alfred nodded looking shocked, but then also pleased. “Master Jack!”

Jack laughed and threw his arms around Alfred who returned the younger man's embraced, coffee cups still in his hands.

“Oh Master Jack! You have made this old man very happy.”

Jack laughed releasing him. “Now I just gotta go buy her a ring!”

Alfred chuckled. “Indeed sir.”

Jack stepped back taking the cups from Alfred. “How about some Belgian waffles this morning? Is that all right?”

Alfred smiled. “Of course Master Jack.”

Alfred began taking out the ingredients he needed to make waffles and asked, “Master Jack, are you going to tell Master Bruce?”

Jack frowned. “No. At least not right now. I want to find Harley the perfect ring first. Then we'll tell him.”

Alfred nodded. “Of course Master Jack. Go on and take your coffee up. I will be up presently with your and Miss Harleen's breakfast.”

Jack grinned. “Thanks Alfred.”

Alfred watched Jack leave, taking some coffee with him, and sighed. He was happy to see that one of the brothers had found love, but something bothered him. He wasn't sure what it was, but he suspected that this engagement might just be another stone in the wall that was being created between the two brothers.

Jack came back to his room carefully easing in while balancing a tray with coffee, cream and sugar on it into the bedroom. Harley was awake, though still naked in his bed. She was sitting up, the comforter covering her breasts. She had her phone in her hand and seemed to be reading something when she turned at the sound of him stepping into the room. A bright smile blossomed across her face. He could see the traces of their fight there in her face, but she was so beautiful...Jack grinned wider carrying the tray over.

“Coffee, my sweets! Alfred will be bringing up some waffles in a little bit.” He set the tray down on the beside table before jumping back onto the bed and grabbed her, pushing her back against the pillows, both of them laughing. Jack grinned down at her brushing his fingers through her hair gazing at her contentedly.

Harley returned his smile. She reached up to brush her fingertips along his lips, bringing a smile to his lips then. He kissed the tip of her finger.

“I have so much to tell you,” he whispered. “Things I haven't shared with anyone...” He brushed his nose against hers.

Harley closed her eyes, their lips hovering just barely touching.

Jack whispered. “We are going to have so much fun together. My Harlequin.”
The remains of their breakfast were littered over the floor and around the bed while the nub of a smoked cigarette and its last dying ashes sent a lazy trail of smoke into the air from an ashtray on the bedside table. Jack and Harley giggled, the covers pulled up over their heads; only the movement of the shapes underneath and the occasional moan, grunt or laugh indicating that someone was in the bed. A few beams of sunlight worked their way through the slit in the heavy curtains providing just enough light for the two figures in the large bed to see as they laughed softly and finally pulled the blankets back.

Jack chuckled as he dragged his fingertips down Harley's spine and watched the enticing way her body wiggled at his touch, or the way goosebumps rose along her flesh. She faced away from him with her head resting on her hands and her blonde hair a tangled mess about her head. He grinned as he caught his bottom lip with his teeth and ignored the slight pain the gesture caused while he examined the pale creamy slopes of her rear while he made intricate, invisible designs on her almost perfect backside, only marred by a purple bruise that he had put there himself just last night.

“Think we should get up?” Harley asked dreamily, her voice slightly muffled by her hair and being turned away from him.

Jack chuckled. “Maybe,” he allowed. “I thought I might teach you a new skill today since you seem to be picking up hand-to-hand so well.” Jack giggled and added, “Ouch.”

He leaned forward to press his lips to her backside before he playfully scraped his teeth along her skin. Harley giggled softly before she rolled onto her side and tossed her hair back. She smiled at him with a twinkle in her blue eyes.

“Oh? And what kind of skill would that be?” She asked, the innuendo clear in her voice.

Jack chuckled. “Mm...we'll come back to that...” He giggled, pulled her against him and rubbed his nose against hers. “No, I thought I would teach you to shoot.”

Harley frowned. “A gun?”

Jack laughed. “Usually it's a gun, yes.”

“But...I don't know, Jack....” Harley frowned. “I'm not really comfortable with guns.”

Jack grinned and rolled her onto her back before he climbed on top of her. He nestled against her, feeling the warm, soft, dampness between her legs, rubbing himself against her, his member hardening almost instantly. The feeling of her damp opening rubbing against him had him growling softly, deep in his throat. He inhaled her scent. She was like a drug; he just couldn't get enough of her. Her skin was like silk against him...she was his madness, his disease...he smiled knowing he would kill for her or because of her. What was it Gomez Addams said? I would die for her. I would kill for her. Either way, what bliss.

Harley groaned as she grinned at him and bucked her hips once teasingly which set him giggling. Jack grabbed her wrists when she started to stroke his back and yanked her arms over her head. Harley grinned wickedly at him and her eyes danced with mischief when she wiggled her body.

“You gonna tie me up puddin’?”

Jack growled with pleasure at the suggestion. “Later...I just might, but right now I was thinking it would be good for you to be able to handle a weapon...a gun...knife...maybe even a hammer. I saw this movie once...woman took out several men with two claw-headed hammers all by herself. It was pretty hot.” Jack grinned as he pressed his erection against her. “She was covered in blood by the end of the scene.” He nipped at her bottom lip with his teeth.

Harley groaned at the feel of him; the pain as he tightened the hold on her wrists made the pleasure that much more intense. “All right Jack. I'll learn to shoot, to use a knife...even a hammer—whatever you want puddin.”

Jack smiled as he brushed his teeth along her chin while he hissed softly, “It'll be fun. You just imagine people's heads exploding when you hit the clay discs...it's fantastic. Well except for maybe really blowing people's heads up...”

Jack laughed.

A slight frown creased Harley's brow just above her nose and turned the corners of her lips down almost imperceptibly. “Clay discs?”

Jack nodded as his mouth and teeth nibbled down her neck. “Yes...mmm...skeet shooting...”

Harley closed her eyes and smiled. She enjoyed the feel of Jack's lips and teeth on her skin, but a small part of her—the part of her that knew the road she was on was becoming more dangerous—whispered heatedly to her that his statement was a warning sign. 'He has killed Harleen...you know of one, but don't you think there are others? Don't you?' Harley pushed the voice away. She didn't care...did she?

Bruce frowned as he ran his thumb and forefinger down the lines around his mouth. It was the next morning and he had been trying to get a hold of Jack to ask him about the carnival and if he would make an appearance, but his text messages were being ignored. Bruce felt frustration with his brother, but figured Jack would still show up, no matter how late he received the text about it from Bruce. That was one thing Jack never could stay away from—carnivals, the circus...his younger brother had always loved those sorts of things. Bruce smiled at the memory of Jack, not long before their parents' death, threatening to run off to join the circus after he and Jack had gotten into a fight about something. Bruce wasn't sure what it was about now...a bicycle? No...he couldn't remember, but he did remember after they had become distracted with the idea of running away to the circus they had tried to make their own circus.

Jack, having always been good with his hands, had cut up some of his jackets to make a collar and coat for their corgi, Edison, and they had made themselves a center ring where death defying tricks would be performed by the two brothers. Bruce would never forget the look on their mother's face when she caught them. Especially because she caught them the moment Jack was walking the tightrope with clown make-up on his face, white face paint covering his skin, bright red lips and nose, black around his eyes and that big silly grin painted on his face, making his already large and bright smile even bigger as he balanced on their little rope. He had held a poker from one of the numerous Wayne Manor fireplaces in his hands; Jack had even gone so far as to paint his nails green from their mother's polish collection. (Jack's clown make-up was actually their mother's makeup that the boys had 'borrowed' from their mother's vanity...except the white face paint—that was actual paint. The amount of scrubbing Jack had gone through to get the paint off...Bruce chuckled at the memory of his little brother pouting.)

Bruce remembered their mother yelling at them and Jack yelling back about this was why he was going to join the circus because no one here understood his art...Bruce chuckled. Jack was always the most visibly passionate of the two of them, who always had only a loose hold of his emotions, whereas Bruce was always more subdued. Yeah, a carnival—Jack would be there, he shouldn't worry about it...and he was confident Jack would be on his best behavior. He hoped. Having Dr. Quinzel with him...Bruce sighed and glanced down at his desk. His left hand lay on top of the polished wood; his knuckles were raw, the skin still had that bright red look where the skin had come off when he had punched the hell out of that rapist last night. Bruce knew he had almost gone too far last night, but he was angry with Jack, the board...with everything and then this punk, attacking women in his city. Bruce frowned as he folded the fingers of that hand into a fist and slid it under the table. He really needed to work on his control.

A few phones calls by Jack later that morning had bought Harley a tweed hunting vest of dark brown with suede shoulder guards, reinforced to take the recoil from a weapon, and deep pockets for carrying shotgun cartridges. Jack had also purchased her a pair of hunting pants, highwaisted that fit her perfectly somehow, a white long-sleeve blouse to wear underneath and a gorgeous pair of dark brown, knee-high hunting boots with a pair of matching retro, large frame sunglasses. When she had finished dressing, braiding her hair into a loose French braid that fell down her back, all Jack could think about was getting her out of her outfit again.

Jack was dressed in a similar fashion; his waistcoat though had a personal touch, an embroidered purple “J” on the breast and, unlike Harley, he wore a pair of dark brown leather gloves that were clearly made for him judging by the way they fit his hands. The gloves were tailored, with buckles across the wrists, made from the finest, softest leather. He wore similar snug fitting pants, a white, long sleeved shirt and the boots he had worn to the duel with Cobblepot. His brown hair was slicked back and his blue eyes danced merrily as he picked up a pair of maverick flow sunglasses, sliding them up his nose.

“Oh look at us! We make a perfect pair! Even our bruises match!” Jack giggled.

Harley giggled along with him while she ran her hands down the front of the waistcoat she wore.

“Why the outfits though Jack? I mean we're just going to shoot clay discs right?”

“And this afternoon, you and I are skeet shooters,” Jack explained with a lopsided grin.

They made their way outside into what Harley thought of as a rather lovely early Spring day. Jack led her along the side of the house heading toward the back. Harley had seen the back “lawn” of Wayne Manor before, which wasn't really a lawn, but rather a long tract of land that led off into the distance, a clear field of expertly cut green that ended in a row of thick trees. Beyond that she was pretty sure would be the stone fence that surrounded the property.

Today the expanse of green was disturbed by a clay disc skeet...shooter thing...she had no idea what the contraption was called, only knew what it did. It was set up to flip the clay discs out into the air curving along the expanse of green. There was also a chalk line that started from the edge of the machine and moved out to create a chalk path. The path curved from there to the machine and arched into a semicircle that Harley guessed was to designate where the shooter was supposed to stand. A plain fold-out table stood near the skeet shooter that held two shotguns lying ready, with two large cartons of cartridges.
Next to that was another small fold-out table, with a white table cloth laying across it where Alfred had set a stainless steel coffee urn, along with two small coffee cups that were made of plain white china, along with matching plates, and plain stainless steel utensils. On the table were also three plain ceramic covered dishes, which, when Harley’s curiosity got the better of her, she peaked under to find one held bacon, egg and cheese sandwiches, another contained what looked to be apple crumb coffee cake and the last covered dish contained almond cherry muffins. Harley shook her head in disbelief.

“How on earth does this man do it? I mean, you didn't decide we were going to skeet shoot until just a couple of hours ago! This...this had to have taken more than a couple of hours! I just...does he have a super power?” Harley set the lid back down on one of the dishes when she turned to look at Jack who was lighting a cigarette, her blue eyes wide.

Jack chuckled taking a pull on the cigarette before answering. “He does! He is a butler, one of the best in the world at what he does.”

Harley laughed. “Fine, fine don't tell me about Alfred's superpowers....and after I agreed to marry you.” She smiled at him in such a way that Jack's heart sped up and he wondered how quickly he could take her back to the room...or against the wall. He giggled while she continued.

“So...skeet shooting? Why not just go to a shooting range?” Harley asked with genuine interest.

Jack smiled as he walked over to the table and picked up one of the shotguns.

“Oh, we do have a small shooting range,” He said with a glance over his shoulder at Harley. She caught a glimpse of his eyes behind the dark lenses of his sunglasses.

“So of course you do,” she said mostly to herself as she walked over to stand beside him and watched Jack tilt the shotgun, double checking that it was empty before he reached over to pick up a cartridge from the table and sliding the ammunition into the chamber. Without looking, his cigarette held between his lips, Jack deftly snapped in several cartridges as he spoke and made certain that Harley could see what he was doing.

“But there is something visceral about shooting a moving target that you can't really get from a shooting range. This, isn't the same either, but it is a bit more...thrilling.” Jack grinned as he pulled back on the action while holding the cigarette between two fingers. Harley clearly heard the the smart clicking sound of Jack pumping the cartridges into place while he gave her a wink from behind his glasses.

“After you learn to use a shotgun, I'll teach you how to shoot a handgun...and how to hold and use a knife.” Jack grinned broadly, obviously excited by the idea. Harley grinned back, his excitement contagious; she would learn anything he wanted to teach...anything at all.

Jack pointed. “Stand back over here and just watch first, all right?”

Harley nodded and moved to stand where Jack indicated, behind the chalk line that she assumed Alfred had marked on the grass.

Jack walked to the machine, dropping into a crouch as he adjusted the skeet shooter before he walked back over to the chalk line, handling the shotgun with the ease of familiar use. He held onto the grip, tucking the stock firmly against his shoulder, the slowly ascending trail of smoke from his cigarette created a halo around him. Harley watched Jack intently, the sparkle in his smile as he brought the barrel of the shotgun up, sighting down the barrel just as the skeet shooter let a clay disc fly. Jack shot, then pumped the barrel, his first shot shattering the clay disc, the next shot taking the second disc just as swiftly and easily and his third shot disintegrating the last clay disc.

Harley started clapping. “Oh Jack, that was amazing!!!”

Jack laughed as he held the shotgun out from his body as with his other hand to his stomach he took a bow. “Thank you my sweetling. Okay,” he said with a twist of his lips into a grin. “Your turn.”

Harley walked over to the table with Jack where he put his cigarette out in the ash tray. She picked up her own shotgun and, with a few mild pointers from Jack, loaded in the cartridges successively. Jack grinned his approval and motioned her over to the line. Harley stepped over, carefully pointing the barrel of the shotgun to the ground though she had the safety on.

Jack stepped next to her and began to explain how to utilize the sight on the shotgun and the difference between using the sight and “shooting from the hip.” Jack cocked an eyebrow as he looked at Harley. “For now, let's just have you use the sight to aim, yeah?” Harley nodded and took a deep breath. Jack walked over to the skeet shooter and crouched, adjusting the machine so that the clay discs didn't come out quite as fast for her as they did for him.

“Whenever you're ready Harls!”

Harley brought the shotgun up. It felt good to have the weapon in her hands. She couldn't really say why, but there was something powerful about it, something dangerous.

The disc flew; her first shot missed.

Jack called out. “Picture someone you hate Harley, someone whose head you would love to see explode!”

The next disc flew. Harley imagined the girl from her classes in college when she was a freshman, the perfect Sally Wuthers; pretty, popular (Sally, Harley would find out, had been a cheerleader in high school and that charisma followed her into college with guys and women throwing themselves at her, wanting to be in her bubble of influence.) Sally was a brunette with green-eyes, well-dressed, from a rich family, gifted with pretty much all the things that Harley had to fight all her life for. Love, acceptance and people falling all over themselves—even the professors—to be near her. Sally had been the teacher's pet in every class despite them being in college where supposedly that sort of thing didn't happen. For Harley, in many ways, it was like being in high school again or even in her own home. Harley remembered hating Sally, hating her prefect family, perfect life...perfect looks...everything...it was easy to imagine Sally's head on the clay disc when it suddenly flew up and this time Harley's shot was dead on, shattering the disc into bits.

Jack cheered. “That's my girl!!”

The last clay disc flew and Harley hit it with a wicked grin dancing across her lips as the disc shattered. Jack giggled as the remnants of the clay disc scattered over the manicured grass. “Okay, tell me who you just shoot?”

Harley blushed as she lowered the weapon. “There was this girl in college...Sally...God I hated her! She was such a bitch...had everything going for her...everyone liked her...except me.” She laughed “I just imagined her face and it was easy after that.”

Jack wrinkled his nose with glee. “Perfect—you are perfect.”

He walked over to Harley to wrap his arm around her waist and yank her against him. “You are perfect for me, my little Harlequin...just perfect.” Jack caught her bottom lip with his grinning teeth as his blue eyes sparkled behind his glasses. Harley hissed at the flash of pain, but then Jack let go of her lip and kissed her hard, his tongue demanding, his teeth hitting against hers, their almost wounded lips from their fight the night before drawing just enough blood for the kiss to taste of it.

It was afternoon, the sun having just reached its peak and beginning its gradual descent, when Alfred came out onto the back lawn. Jack and Harley were laying on the grass, their waistcoats discarded and now being used as pillows for their heads as they lay side by side. They were pointing at the clouds seeing shapes and making each other laugh. The shotguns lay on the table, a smattering of used cartridges around the weapons. On the other table, there were scattered remains of food, most of it gone. Alfred smiled when he saw the two of them lying in the grass together. He hadn't seen Master Jack this happy since before his parents' murder. It is nice to see one of the boys so happy, finally, the older man thought. The other cheery thought was that perhaps soon there would be little Waynes running around the lawn. Alfred smiled and stopped at a respectful distance.

“Master Jack?”

Jack arched his head back looking at Alfred upside down. “Yes?”

“Your brother, Master Bruce has been trying to get a hold of you. You have not been answering his calls or his texts.” Alfred raised an eyebrow at Jack, the only sign of Alfred's disapproval of the younger Wayne avoiding his brother.

Jack groaned rolling over onto his stomach. Harley smiled as she look at Alfred upside down and waved. “Hey Alfred.”

Alfred smiled and suppressed a laugh. “Hello Miss Harleen and how are you this afternoon my dear?”

“T'm great. Thank you for the food Alfred. It was perfect as always.” She smiled at him and Alfred blushed. “You are very welcome Miss Harleen.”

Harley giggled. “Jack won't tell me if you have super powers or not.”

Alfred chuckled. “Only the best training that an English butler can receive and a family that I care for Miss Harleen, which includes you my dear.”

Harley blushed. “Thank you Alfred.”

Jack easily jumped to his feet without using his hands, reaching down to grab Harley's hand and hauling her to her feet and into the circle of his arms where he stole a peck on her lips, playfully pushing her sunglasses up her nose before turning back to Alfred. “So where is he?”

“The call is inside Master Jack, on the landline.” Alfred indicated with a glance toward the manor.

Jack sighed. “Okay. Come my darling Harls, let us go see what my elder brother wishes of me!”

With a dramatic hand movement, plus grabbing her around the waist and into his arms for another stolen kiss, he clasped her other hand with his and the two of them began to skip toward the manor as if they were doing a cheerful tango, making Alfred chuckle thinking to himself. “Young love.”

Jack held Harley's hand, his fingers laced through hers and swung their joined hands between them as they walked into the manor and headed toward the library where one of the few landlines in the manor house was installed. He let go of her hand after he pressed a quick kiss to her knuckles, tossed his sunglasses onto a desk and hopped up onto one of the long walnut tables in the room next to the small round matching table that held the phone. Jack picked up the phone and pressed the receiver to his ear just as Harley flopped into one of the chairs across from him. The chair was your typical Victorian winged-backed chair; the leather was a deep burgundy with brass accent buttons. She had dropped her sunglasses onto the table next to her.

Harley smiled broadly as she stretched her legs out, her right leg crooked just a little, bent and wobbling her leg back and forth on the heel of her boot, the other leg spread out making her look not just wanton, but sexy. She smiled at Jack, her blue eyes hooded, gazing at him under her thick dark lashes, running the tip of her tongue between her teeth, the forefinger of her left hand between her teeth giving Jack seductive looks. She played with the buttons of her blouse with her other hand, popping open one, then another. Jack wrinkled his nose with a grin at her, his blue eyes glued to the slow exposure of her cleavage.

“Hey bro what's up?” he said into the phone, his gaze never leaving Harley.

Bruce frowned on the other end at Jack's causal greeting but he maintained a civil tone.

“I've been trying to get a hold of you since yesterday...anyway. Harvey Dent, a friend of mine who is running for DA is holding a fundraiser. His campaign is sponsoring a carnival tomorrow night to raise money for revitalizing some of Gotham's poorer neighborhoods. He has invited us to attend.”

Jack grinned at the news. “A carnival? Really?”

Jack giggled softly and motioned for Harley to unbutton a few more buttons. She licked her finger and slid open a few more buttons until her shirt fell open to show off the lacy black bra underneath. Jack stuck his tongue out at her, imitating licking her. Harley giggled and pressed her teeth into her bottom lip.

Jack kept his eyes on Harley as he replied to Bruce. “That sounds like it might be fun. You sure you want me out in public? Never know what I might do!”

Bruce was silent for a moment before he answered. “Not funny Jack, and before you say anything I am fine with Harleen Quinzel being there with you. Just promise...no fighting or too graphic public displays of affection. Please.”

Jack made a face which had Harley chuckling, then he held his two fingers up in a “V” and waggled his tongue between them making a terribly obscene sound which had Harley squealing with laughter at him.

Bruce heard female laughter in the background, but refrained from comment, knowing exactly who it was.

Jack snickered. “Sounds great bro. Of course Harley and I will be there. I promise we'll be on our best behavior...or close to it.”

Bruce sighed. “Thank you Jack.”

Jack frowned. “Yeah...yeah you're welcome. I gotta go.”

Jack hung up the phone, hopped off the table and slowly stalked over to Harley who grinned up at him brightly, her blouse fully open as she slouched in the chair. She had unbraided her hair so that the long tresses fell around her shoulders seductively and over the tops of her breasts that were being pushed up by the black bra she wore.
"You are a bad, bad girl Harley Quinn." Jack purred as he reached forward to run the back of his gloved fingers along the curve of one breast. The feel of the leather against her skin was erotic; she moaned softly before she giggled. "You like that about me."

Jack growled as he dropped down to his knees between her legs. "Oh yes—yes I do."

Jack ran his tongue along her cleavage while with his nimble fingers (despite the gloves) he reached around to swiftly and easily unlatch her bra. The fabric snapped away to expose her breasts when Jack shoved the offending piece of underwear out of the way.

Jack giggled. "Oh, now that is very nice."

He slowly cupped her breasts and squeezed gently before rolling his leather clad thumbs over her nipples. Harley groaned, her eyes fluttering close with the pleasure of his touch. Jack leaned in, still cupping her breasts, his teeth scraping against her neck while Harley's hands started to work at the buttons of his shirt. She pulled the cloth back, seeing the tattoo at his neck that spread down this skin. The tattoo was still healing like her own, but seeing it made Harley squirm with want.

Jack purred against the tender flesh of her throat. "Bruce wants us to go to a carnival tomorrow night...a fundraiser..." His tongue licked up to her ear where his teeth grabbed hold of her lobe sharply. His gloved thumb and forefinger pinched her nipples hard. Harley jerked, sliding down further in the library chair.

Jack stood up suddenly and walked quickly to the library doors.

"What are you doing?" Harley asked as she pushed herself up.

Jack grinned over his shoulder. "Locking the doors, no reason to give Alfred a heart attack."

Harley giggled as she rose to her feet and moved behind her chair.

Jack gave her a lopsided grin. "Are you going to play a game?"

Her giggle was cute, but laced with passion. "You have to catch me Jack."

"Ohh I do, do I? Mm..." Jack walked slowly towards her and unbuttoned his shirt as he did, his blue eyes following her every move. Harley slipped out of her shirt and bra, wearing only her pants and boots grinning at him playfully. "You gonna get me puddin? Mmm...Master Jack...Mistah J?"

Jack laughed. "Oh, calling me names, huh?"

Harley giggled again as she pushed back from the chair, her eyes dancing as she shook her hair out. She started to turn to run to the other end of the room, but Jack was quick—extremely quick—cutting the distance between them in no time. Coming up behind her, he wrapped his arms around her, pinning her arms to her sides and lifted her up as she kicked out with her booted feet. Harley squealed hitting a table with her feet, knocking it over and sending the lamp and books crashing to the floor. Jack was laughing as he hauled her back then stumbled forward with her, pressing her up against one of the large library windows that was nestled between two wall length book cases. Jack licked her ear.

"Mm...just too slow Harley...you can never get away from me." Jack held her with one hand, his other coming around the front to unfasten the button on her pants, his hand sliding between her legs once he had the fabric loose enough. His fingers brushed against her, gentle despite how tight his arm was around her torso, or how hard he had her pressed up against the glass of the window with his weight keeping her in place. One handed, Jack worked her pants down, his fingers of his other hand caressing her softly, teasing her with their gentleness while he yanked her pants down her thighs roughly.

“Tell me you're mine Harley, tell me,” Jack hissed against her ear. She could feel him struggling with his own pants behind her.

Harley groaned feeling his member, hot against her backside when he had succeeded in getting his pants down to his thighs. He grabbed her hip with one hand in a painful grip, but Jack's lips against her throat and then her ear were tender, brushing against her skin, his tongue a hot, wet tease as the tip of his tongue glided over her ear. He pressed her hard against the glass, his mouth moving down to the curve of her shoulder where he bit into her skin hard enough that she knew he had bruised her before he whispered again.

“Tell me Harley.”

“I'm yours Jack...only yours...” Harley moaned and arched her head back as Jack's fingers between her legs rolled and caressed until she shuddered, her climax stiffening her whole body.

“JACK!”

He scooted back from pressing her against the window, removing his hand from between her legs, his fingers glistening. Harley whimpered at the loss of his hand, but Jack bent her over, running his hands up the curve of her back before reaching with one hand to grab her hair, giving her thick hair a gentle tug. Then he pushed her forward. Harley braced her hands against the glass while Jack grabbed her hips with both hands and took her from behind with a powerful thrust into her, burying himself deeply.

She cried out, arching, her hands pressed flat to the glass. “Uuhh!”

Jack groaned, his eyes rolling closed, his fingers digging into her hips, slamming her back hard and fast against him. He growled, snarling his pleasure to the sound of their flesh slapping together.

“Harley, Harley!!”

Harley gasped. “Oh puddin!!!”

She peaked at the same moment that she felt him jerk, filling her, yanking her hard back against him.

Alfred had just finished up cleaning most of the skeet shooting equipment and the remains of Jack and Harleen's brunch. He had just returned to the manor and was planning dinner in his head when he decided to ask Master Jack how he would feel about Chicken Fettuccine Alfredo for dinner that night when he stopped at the library door, his knuckles poised over the wood, ready to knock when he heard the clear sounds of moaning and grunts of....

Alfred paled, then blushed quickly turning away. “I'll asked them about dinner...later.”

Friday night came quickly. Jack was visibly excited about going to the carnival, which made Harley love him just that much more. They were in the process of dressing in Jack's room.
Harley grinned as she applied her makeup and watched Jack behind her from the mirror. Jack was practically giddy with excitement. He had told her stories about his plans to run away to join the circus any time he and Bruce's playing disintegrated into a fight. How he had always loved the clowns, the way they could make people laugh.

Jack wore jeans (which Harley found sexy, those long legs of his clad in jeans, clearly tailored to his slim build, like all his other clothing), a dark shirt which was a shade of blue so dark that you could only see the color of it when the light hit the material just right. The sleeves of the shirt were rolled up to his elbows (again, Harley was struck by how sexy he looked), the top couple of buttons were undone, giving a hint of his tattoo hidden beneath. He had paired the shirt and jeans with a black vest, buttoned up, along with a gold chain across the front. He wore a pair of brown and black oxfords with dark purple socks to finish the look. He was just finishing up slicking his hair back, running his fingers through his hair, assessing himself in the bathroom mirror. His blue eyes met hers in the mirror. Jack chuckled. “Here.”

He held his hand out. “Let me see your lipstick.”

Harley's expression conveyed her confusion, but she picked up the tube of lipstick, a liquid lip gloss called “drama red.” Jack twisted open the tube pulling out the applicator, then leaned forward and drew the soft applicator across his lips. Harley swallowed watching him. She caught her bottom lip between her teeth studying his reflection as he applied the deep red to his lips and wondered how that could be so incredibly sexy. Jack's blue eyes glanced at her reflection in the mirror beside him and grinned at her when he was finished. “What do ya think sweetheart?”

Harley pressed her lips together, pulling her teeth across her bottom lip before she replied. “I love it Jack.”

He grinned, the red framing his perfect smile made her feel a rush of heat. Jack leaned forward, studying his eyes and placing a finger under one, tugging the skin down for a moment.

“Eyeliner! I need eyeliner!”

Harley quickly looked through her make-up bag coming up with a thick liquid pencil (almost thick enough that it resembled a marker). “I use this to make cat eyes.”

Jack giggled. “Ooh perfect!”

Jack turned to face her. Harley leaned in close to his face, her left hand gently holding his chin to keep his face steady as she carefully traced his eyes, the thick dark lines that she drew around his eyes made the blue of his iris blaze more beautifully from his face.

Harley licked her lips and tilted her head to study her work before she declared. “You look amazing Jack.”

Jack laughed and grabbed her face between his hands to kiss her, her own laughs muffled against his lips. Luckily the gloss was fairly good quality and didn't smear much. Harley giggled, using her thumb to wipe away the slight smear on his bottom lip and Jack did the same for her, both of them gazing hungrily at the other.

After Harley finished with her own make-up, she reached over and picked up her hair brush. She started to brush her long hair out, her eyes still on Jack. She simply couldn't get enough of him.

Jack glanced sideways at her taking in her overall appearance. She looked gorgeous in a red mini dress that hit just at her thighs, showing off her gorgeous long legs. The rayon dress tied at the front (which he knew he was going to enjoy untying later) with a crew neckline and shift silhouette. She wore a pair of red bike shorts underneath, which was a shame as far as Jack was concerned. He had tried to convince her the fun they could have if she only wore a thong...or even better...nothing at all. But since there were going to be kids at the carnival, Harley insisted on being decent...despite Jack's pouting.

The dress itself was sleeveless, and since the evenings could still get very cool, Harley had a black sweater to cover her arms. The shoes she intended to wear were the boots that Jack had purchased for her yesterday. Right now the boots were sitting by the bed. She was standing in the bathroom barefoot, looking adorable...good enough to forget all about the carnival and for them to just have fun here. But Jack had told his brother they would show up...so... Jack reached out to take the brush from her hand.

“Here, let me.” He smiled and moved to stand behind her with the brush.

“I think tomorrow we should head into Gotham to work on designing you a ring.” Jack smiled happily at the thought as he ran the brush gently through her hair, followed by the fingers of his free hand.

“Designing a ring?” Harley frowned in confusion, but Jack only grinned. “No mere simple diamond for my girl, no. You need something special, unique—like you.”

“Jack, you know, I don't need a ring,” Harley assured him. “Just knowing you want to marry me is enough.” Harley met his eyes in the mirror, but Jack shook his head in disagreement.

“I want everyone to know that you're my girl, that no one...no one can touch you but me. That you are going to be mine.”

Harley smiled blushing. “I love you Jack.”

Jack set the brush aside and wrapped his arms around her from behind as he kissed her ear and whispered. “My Harlequin.”

When they arrived downstairs, Bruce was waiting for them. He looked nice, though Harley felt he looked slightly uncomfortable in his casual clothes. It seemed as if the man had been born in a suit. While Jack managed to wear suits and make them look comfortable and casual, Bruce seemed to have the opposite issue. There was just something about Jack...and not just because she was head over heels in love with him...he just had a way about him and a suit for him was just an extension of his personality.

But Bruce, Bruce wore his suits like they were suits of armor, protecting him from something. But what he was wearing tonight? Bruce was dressed in a pair of khakis, a button down white shirt and casual sports jacket thrown on over that with a pair of brown loafers.

He actually smiled when he saw Jack and Harley. “You two ready? Wait, are you wearing make-up?”

Jack laughed. “Yes I am big brother and don't I look divine? Don't answer that. Let the festivities begin!” Jack dramatically threw his free hand (the other holding Harley's hand) into the air with flair.

Bruce actually laughed. Harley realized it was the first time she had ever seen the other Wayne brother show any emotion beyond anger, brooding or annoyance. Bruce smiled at his brother. “I haven't forgotten about you running off to the circus Jack.”

Jack laughed. “I still might, you never know. Can you just see the headlines? Younger Wayne gives up fortune to become a clown!”

Bruce chuckled. “You always were a clown.”

The brothers were laughing together as the three of them made their way to the car waiting outside.

The carnival set up in Robinson Park was far larger than Harley had expected. Actually, she wasn't sure what she expected, but this wasn't it. The whole of the park had been cordoned off for the event. The entrance to the park had a large banner hanging above it announcing the event sponsored by Harvey Dent for District Attorney. Jack laughed with delight as soon as they walked through the entrance after purchasing their tickets. Bruce stopped for a moment after getting his tickets to look at the carnival spread out before them.

“They really outdid themselves. Reminds me a bit of that circus we went to as kids...remember Jack?” Bruce glanced over to his younger brother as he spoke.

Jack nodded. “Yeah...yeah I do.”

The smells of cotton candy, funnel cake and a million other scents that reminded Jack of his childhood along with the bright, multiple colored lights and the cranked music from the many rides. For a moment Jack's eyes looked distant. He murmured, his voice a little wistful, “Remember Dad taking us to play all the games?”

Bruce walked up to stand on Jack's other side. “Yes, I remember.”

Harley watched the two of them, for a moment, two boys, two brothers sharing a memory.

Bruce nodded. “Mom always protested, but sometimes she was worse than Dad about the rides.”

The two men laughed softly.

“Boy, your friend Harvey Dent and his gang went all out here.” Jack took a breath and changed the subject. His arm around Harley's waist tightened, his fingers digging into her side, not painfully but firmly. It was clear to her, the doctor part of her as well as the girlfriend, that the memories Jack and Bruce had just been discussing were both pleasant and painful. She couldn't imagine what it must have been like for them to not only lose their parents, but to witness their murders. And now both men had a bridge between them...

Jack started walking, his arm tightening around her again as if he needed the reassurance of her. Harley snaked her arm was around his waist wanting to give him the reassurance that she was there with him, for him. She gave him a squeeze, pressing his body against hers. Jack glanced sideways at her, a soft smile on his lips. It was times like these that Harley remembered she had been brought to Wayne Manor as his doctor, that Jack was suffering, and deep down in a dark part of his soul Jack was still reliving that night. She frowned at the thought of the little boy lost in the darkness...the tragedy that shaped him...

As the trio walked deeper into the park they could see that families were everywhere, several news crews covering the event. Someone from the Gotham Free Press called out.

“Bruce Wayne!!! Jack Wayne!! Gotham Free Press! Give us a smile!”

Jack and Bruce both turned at the sounds of their names. Jack grinned, a perfect smile, holding Harley tightly against his side.

Another photographer yelled. “Gotham Gazette, who’s your lady friend? And did you come stag Bruce?”

Bruce just smiled and waved off the question.

Jack chuckled moving away as he waved his free hand at the reporter. “Hey now, not about me guys! Focus on the event!”

Bruce who had been answering a few questions from another reporter glanced at Jack with a nod that said he was happy with Jack's answer.

Harley grinned and pressed a quick kiss to Jack's cheek which made Jack laugh. “Look at me behaving myself!”

That was when Bruce heard a male voice that he recognized call his name over the reporters. “BRUCE! JACK! Over here!”

Bruce saw his friend Harvey, dressed in jeans and a white polo with his wife Gilda—who wore a long boho style flowered skirt with a matching dark blue blouse—on his arm and another woman, dressed in black jeans and a loose yet attractive halter black top with a leather jacket over the top, standing next to Gilda. Gilda was a petite brunette woman with short hair, but Bruce's attention was immediately drawn to the other woman, tall, well built, with short black hair and intense brown eyes. Their eyes seemed to catch each other immediately.

Harvey let go of his wife to pull Bruce into a hug, smacking him hard on the back. “So glad you could make it and you must be Jack?” Harvey stuck out his hand. Jack took it, giving his hand a good shake.

Bruce frowned at Jack's introduction, but he held his tongue. This was the second time he had heard Jack refer to Dr. Quinzel as Harley and now the added Quinn was odd...pet name maybe?

Harvey took Harley's hand holding it between both of his. “Pleasure to me you too.”

Bruce's attention was drawn to the woman with Harvey and Gilda. Harvey smiled. “This is my wife and better half Gilda”

Gilda laughed and patted him on the chest. “Harvey!”

Harvey gave his wife a quick peck on the cheek before he continued. “Bruce, Jack, Harley, I would like to introduce you to a friend of my wife's, Miss Selina Kyle. Selina, this is Bruce and Jack Wayne and Harley Quinn.”

Selina gave a coy smile. “It's a pleasure.”

Bruce took her offered hand and surprised not just Selina but himself when he kissed her knuckles instead of shaking it. “A pleasure Selina.”

Selina smiled with a light laugh. “A bit old fashioned don’t you think?” Her voice was rich, sultry, and had Bruce smiling. Selina was—svelte, was the term Harley would use to describe her.

Jack grinned. “Oh you seem to have my brother's full attention...you have no idea how difficult that is to get Ms. Kyle.”

Bruce released her hand, suddenly looking embarrassed. Harvey laughed.

“Well, have fun everyone. This is a night to raise money and enjoy some of the best that Gotham has to offer. Bruce, would you mind escorting Selina this evening?”

Selina started to protest, but Bruce smiled at her. “If you would allow me?”

He offered his arm to her. Selina looked at his arm then at him. She seemed to mull the situation over for a moment before she finally linked her arm through his. “Who am I to say no to a gentleman?”

Bruce laughed lightly. “Well thank you Miss Kyle.”

“Please, call me Selina.”

Jack and Harley slipped away from the other two couples to go explore the carnival. Harley's eyes were a little wide as they walked through the festival area. This was a new experience for her. Her family had never gone to carnivals...at least not with her. She remembered after her half siblings were born they would go, but Harley had always done something that annoyed her stepfather...she would end up grounded for such and such reason as the rest of the family would go. So this was extra special for her, her first time and it was with the man she loved.

Jack laughed. “I'm going to have to win you the biggest most obnoxious teddy bear tonight.”

Harley couldn't help the girlish giggle while she hung onto Jack's arm.

From the darkness around the edges of the carnival, a tall heavily built bald man with a red bandana wrapped around his head stood in the bushes along the edge of the event with another man, this one smaller, almost weasel-like in his thinness, but with a constant tick of one eye.

The bald man grinned. “There, that's him Weasel—from the picture.”

He grabbed the smaller man next to him by the shoulder and yanked him over to point at Jack Wayne laughing with some blonde while they fed each other cotton candy, Jack Wayne licking the blonde's fingers.

“That's the mark. Go tell the boss he's here. I'll follow.” The larger man glared down at the weasely man who nodded quickly.

“Gotcha Pinhead!”

The smaller man turned and ran deeper into the forested area of the park, away from the lights and sounds of the carnival, heading toward a large concrete pipe opening that ran under the park. There were rusted bars in front of the pipe's entrance, now mostly gone. The bars had originally been put there to keep animals and people out of the piping; otherwise people and animals could wander down into the sewer and get lost, die and never be found again. A lot of people, the lost, lonely and uncared for wandered down into the Gotham's sewers never to be heard from again. At the entrance of the tunnel there were remains of a camp, the ashes of a fire, a scrap of clothing, a puddle of blood.

Now, this was a entrance to the domain of some of the gangs of Gotham.

The little weasel of a man looked around hurriedly to make sure no one saw him before rushing into the darkness of the tunnel. He stopped once he was inside, letting his eyes adjust before he started to move carefully, keeping one hand along the tunnel's rough surface. He could see his goal up ahead, an orange glow that caused shadows to dance along the curved walls. He didn't have far to go before he heard the sounds of their boss and the other members of the gang.

Waylon Jones picked his teeth with a piece of bone, his large frame slouched down in the tunnel. He and his men were not too far in the tunnel, but deep enough no one would stumble across them by accident; though if anyone did, they were deep enough no one would miss whoever found them either.

Waylon scratched his arm with a clawed hand. His skin was dark greenish grey, covered in the leather hide of a crocodile. He wore only a pair of jeans and that only because he was still enough of a man to need or want the protection. His mouth was full of deadly teeth which he was picking the remains of his dinner from while he waited for the signal. He had at least five other men with him milling around waiting, smoking and speaking in hushed voices. There were another four outside looking for their target. He heard footsteps before anyone else and glanced down into the darkness. Weasel saw the glow of Croc's eyes first before he came into the small pool of light made by the fire burning in the metal barrel next to Croc.

“We spotted him boss. He's with some blonde.” The smaller man nodded eagerly.

Croc grinned fiercely. “Get them both then. She might be worth something too. Go put the word out. It's time.”

When Jack saw that a live band was playing and a makeshift dance floor had been set up, he grabbed Harley's hand and dragged her over grinning like a school boy.

Jack laughed, his voice warm and sending pleasant chills down her spine when he spoke.

“Never pass up a chance to dance, especially with my girl.”

Jack twirled Harley on the dance floor, bringing her body up against his, pressing his left hand to the small of her back, weaving his hips with hers while holding her other hand with his right, out from their bodies. Harley stared up at him, her eyes shining in the lights strung around the makeshift dance floor. Her free arm was around his shoulder, the fingers of her hand stroking the back of his neck, the world around them forgotten while they danced. Jack weaved, turning her in a circle, his gaze never leaving hers. The live band (called Ashes on Sunday) had just finished a rock song when Jack and Harley decided to step onto the dance floor. They had begun a slow song, the blonde woman, dressed in all black, short black miniskirt, fishnets, ankle boots and a black halter top, held the microphone close to her lips as she purred.

The song was a cover of Lana del Rey's “Ultraviolence.” The woman at the microphone, her voice smooth like warm honey sang with her lips almost brushing the microphone that she held between both hands.
He used to call me DN
That stood for deadly nightshade
'Cause I was filled with poison
But blessed with beauty and rage
Jim told me that
He hit me and it felt like a kiss
Jim brought me back
Reminded me of when we were kids
This is ultraviolence
Ultraviolence
Ultraviolence
Ultraviolence
I can hear sirens, sirens
He hit me and it felt like a kiss
I can hear violins, violins
Give me all of that ultraviolence...

Jack's smile was intoxicating. The red of his lips, the eyeliner around his eyes made the blue brighter than the stars, the lights dancing over his features made his lips shine, an alluring smile on those dramatically red lips. The effect had Harley wanting to kiss him, to grab his hair and force his head back, her mouth attacking his, smearing his lipstick...

Jack chuckled as if he sensed what she wanted. He pressed her hips against him, weaving to the music, turning in an easy circle, his long legs gliding them across the space with ease making Harley feel as if she were floating in his arms. Jack ran his tongue over his perfect teeth, grinning at her, doing a quick step spin before he dipped her low whispering at her and singing to her.

“I love you the first time
I love you the last time
Yo soy la princesa, comprende mis white lines
'Cause I'm your jazz singer
And you're my cult leader
I love you forever,
Later, they were walking along the edge of the carnival. Harley giggled and rubbed her nose into the huge pink teddy bear that Jack had just won for her at the water balloon game. He grinned proudly, his hand in hers. Here the colored lights were dimmer and they could talk, the music only a dull hum in the background.

“This is fun,” Harley said softly squeezing the fingers of his hand that held hers.

“Yeah, it is. What do you feel like doing next pumpkin?” Jack brought her hand up to kiss her knuckles.

“Hmmm...we did the Ferris wheel...AND almost got asked to leave...” They both chuckled.

“And we rode the carousel...and almost got asked to leave...” Harley giggled and Jack let out a belly laugh. “We're running out of places to make out!”

Harley giggled with him before she asked, “Hmm...do you want to ride the 'Vortex?'” She said the word “Vortex” in a deep scary voice.

Jack chuckled. “As long as you're not prone to vomiting...”

Harley started to respond when suddenly out of the darkness, a man grabbed Harley from behind, his hands digging into her hair, pulling her head back and yanking her from Jack so suddenly that her nails tore across Jack's palm. She dropped the bear as she struggled and bit down on the arm that had gone around her neck. Another man emerged from the shadows to immediately jab a syringe into Harley's neck in the next instant. She made a choking sound, but Harley was down before she could utter another sound, sinking into the arms of the man who had grabbed her.

Jack had started to lunge, a snarl on his lips. “Let her...”

Another three men that Jack hadn't seen grabbed him from behind, seeming to form from the shadows, one shoving the barrel of a gun in Jack's mouth while the other two grabbed Jack's arms, yanking them painfully behind his back. Jack started to fight, pulling his weight forward to throw the men behind him off balance, slamming his forehead into the nose of the man holding the barrel of the gun to him, breaking it with a loud crack. The man gasped dropping back to grab his nose as blood splashed everywhere. “He broke my nose!”

That man slammed his fist into Jack's face, knocking his head back. Jack giggled, opening his mouth to say something, his teeth bloodied, but the one holding Harley placed a knife to her throat, the point digging into her skin as she lay unconscious in his arms.

“Now, now, Mr. Wayne, don't want anything permanent to happen to your girl here now do you? I mean, if you don't care about her, by all means fight. I'll just stick this knife right through her throat and out the other side.” The man, tall, muscled with greasy black hair and a nose ring grinned brightly.

“I mean as far as we know she ain't worth a dime.” He pressed the blade to her neck to make his point, drawing a drop of blood that welled up before it slowly started to run down her pale neck. Harley never flinched.

Jack hissed and stopped moving, though his eyes danced with rage.
“I'm going to tear your throat out.” Jack's voice was low with menace.

“Yeah...whatever rich boy. Drug him.” The greasy man grinned.

The one with the broken nose glared at Jack as he pulled a syringe from inside his jacket and slammed it deep into Jack's neck trying to hurt him. Jack didn't react, taking the pain like it was an old friend.

The contents of the syringe hit his bloodstream like a bolt of fire, but just as the pain flared to life, it was gone, replaced by darkness.

When Jack woke the first thing that assaulted his senses was the smell. It had to be the most disgusting scent he had ever encountered. He could taste it on his tongue, feel it on his skin. The next thing he noticed was that, oddly, whoever had taken him, they hadn't gagged him, which meant they must have him somewhere where they felt safe enough that no one would hear him yell for help. The next thing that he was aware of was the pain in his arms, which were held over his head. He could feel the rust of metal handcuffs pinching into the skin of his wrists. The chain between the cuffs was hung on a hook or nail—he couldn't be sure—but his own weight was pulling painfully at the muscles of his shoulders. Jack opened his eyes slowly, though the remains of the drug in his system made him dizzy as he tried to focus.

“Ah, yer awake.” The voice was rough and reminded him of the sounds of boulders rolling over concrete. Jack blinked several times as he tried to bring his vision into focus. It was dark, but he could see a faint light in here, a pale orange glow, though he couldn't determine it's origin. He did see the shadow of someone, someone huge whose eyes seemed to glow in the darkness, yellow eyes, staring at him, watching him.

The figured stepped closer, moving out of the shadows. The light danced across the man's features.

Jack blinked in surprised. “Holy shit...a crocodile?”

The creature laughed, the sound deep and grating. “Yer funny white boy. Everyone calls me Croc, Killer Croc.”

Jack frowned. “Dull, but to the point I suppose.”

“Ha ha...very funny keep it up and I'll take a bite out of you.” Croc stepped closer and grabbed Jack by the face, his claws digging into the smaller man's skin. “So how much you think your brother will pay for you, slightly damaged?”

Jack's eyes narrowed. “Who do you think I am?

Croc released Jack's face, but not before shoving his chin hard to the side, the tips of his claws dragging across Jack's skin leaving cuts over Jack's upper lip and along on his jawline, both deep enough to leave scars. Jack winced.

Croc chuckled deep in his chest. “I ain't stupid. I know who you are, Jack Wayne, the bad little brother to Bruce Wayne who I'm betting will pay top price to have his baby brother back.”

Jack followed Croc's movements with narrowed eyes. He could feel the sticky trickle of blood running down over his lips and his jaw.

Jack smiled. “Why won't crocodiles attack lawyers?
Croc turned, confusion clear in his alien looking yellow eyes. “What?”

Jack giggled. “Professional courtesy!”

Jack continued to laugh while Croc stared at him in confusion. Croc snarled as he took a large step forward and backhanded Jack.

Jack chuckled against the pain, spitting blood before he spoke. “Where is she?”

Croc grinned and showed rows and rows of deadly sharp teeth. “The woman?”

Jack's upper lip curled, making Croc laugh louder. “She's here, somewhere. Want to save us the trouble, tell us who she is...or isn't. If she ain't worth anything, told my boys they could have her for fun, though I might give her to them anyway. We can still make a buck off of her even if she is a bit spoiled when we give her back.”

Something in Jack's eyes, his expression changed. Croc saw the shift...it was...eerie and from what Croc had seen and done, eerie was not something he usually felt.

“You hurt her in any way...I will hunt you down and kill you slowly.” Croc was silent for a moment staring, unnerved by the sudden change in Jack Wayne's expression and demeanor, though he was quick to hide it. He laughed in his gravelly voice.

“Yeah, you keep telling yourself that pretty boy.”

Harley was in a small, dank room with a damp floor that smelled horrible. When she came to, the first thing she did was get sick. Her head was pounding, her tongue tasted as if there was a film on it and she felt like shit. The room she was in felt to be made of bricks when she managed to feel around, determining that the space was small. There was standing water, which was where most of the smell was coming from and there was a faint hint of light in the distance that allowed her to see the bars in front of her. Harley made her way carefully over to the bars, stopping when she heard the sounds of tittering and scraping claws...rats...

Harley shivered with distaste. Where the evening air had only been slightly cool, this place was cold. She could feel the chill seeping into her bones. Harley leaned against the bars trying to figure out where she was, but also she was desperately hoping for a sign of Jack. But all she saw was more water and bricks.

“Hey!! Hey!!! HEY anyone there?!?” she called out.

A figure suddenly appeared in front of her, his rough dirty hands going over hers and pinning her hands to the bars.

“Hey there pretty!” he hissed.

Harley gasped in shock and jerked away, but her fingers were held, pressed painfully against the bars.

“Hey there pretty!” he hissed.

Harley leaned back as the man transferred his grip up her arms. “Come closer pretty girl. Croc says we all might get a taste of ya! I wouldn't mind getting a little taste now.”

Harley didn't scream. That wasn't her style. She was scared, downright terrified, but she wouldn't give this creature the satisfaction of knowing that so instead she hissed, “I'll bite your tongue off if
That was when a deep rumbling voice filled the space with laughter.

“You and your boyfriend are really amusing. I expected whimpering spoiled rich people, but you both got a little backbone...I like that.”

The man holding her arms was suddenly knocked in the head falling to the side and disappearing into the shadows. The sudden release of her arms had Harley stumbling backwards into her “cell” hitting the water of the floor and causing the smell to increase in intensity.

The figure didn't quite come into view since there was so little light, but Harley saw the glow of it's eyes. “Name's Killer Croc...remember that. You and your boyfriend are my pets until Bruce Wayne pays for you. If he doesn't pay...then you, sweetmeat, get to be mine and my boys. Though I like the look of you...might keep you for myself.” He chuckled leaning in to sniff at her.

“Where's Jack?!” Harley pushed herself to her feet.

The creature laughed. “Don't worry, he's fine. You really should start worrying about yourself now, shouldn't you?”

Bruce was turning around from the cashier, two large soft pretzels in his hands. Selina Kyle was sitting at one of the park benches waiting for him. Selina Kyle had to be one of the most interesting women Bruce had met. She was simply fascinating, beautiful...and he was genuinely enjoying her company.

He was just about to walk toward her when a kid, no more than sixteen, dirty, looking like he might be living on the streets or worse caught his eye and grinned at him.

“You Bruce Wayne?”

“Yes, yes I am.” Bruce frowned as he watched the kid warily.

“I gots a message for you from Croc and his gang. He says he has your brother Jack and the woman. They want five million or you start getting body parts. Croc says he has your number, he'll be in touch within the hour. You get the cops involved, he says then he gets to have dinner...part of your brother and the girl.”

The kid gave Bruce a vicious grin before he took off at a run and disappeared into the crowd before Bruce could respond.

For a moment Bruce didn't move, the gears of his mind working in overtime. Croc? Who was Croc? And they claimed to have Jack and Dr. Quinzel?

Bruce dashed over to Selina to hand both pretzels to her. She opened her mouth to say thank you, but he shoved both pretzels at her before Bruce was digging his phone out of his back pocket. Selina frowned; by the look on his face, something was wrong, very wrong.

Bruce's fingers hit his brother's number. The phone rang, and rang and rang, but Jack never picked up. Which wasn't unusual, but his blood ran like ice through his veins. Bruce hung up and tried again...nothing.

“Bruce? What's wrong?” Selina reached out and laid a hand on his arm.
Bruce frowned as he slipped his phone into his back pocket. “I need...I need to go. It...it was a pleasure, Selina.”

Bruce smiled absently at her and took off at a run, pushing his way through the crowds. Selina stood up watching him go with a frown marring her features. Something was definitely wrong, she didn't need to know the man to figure that out.

Bruce called the driver, the minutes waiting to get out of the park were some of the longest of his life.
He couldn't believe that someone had kidnapped Jack and Dr. Quinzel. Once he was in the back seat of the car, Bruce pulled out his phone and put a call in to Alfred.

“Alfred, we have a problem.”

“Sir?”

“Jack has been taken.” Bruce frowned. “They are going to contact me within the hour.”

“Taken sir?” There was a slight edge of panic to Alfred's voice.

“Kidnapped. They want five million...I. Batman will take care of this, but if he fails...I want the money gathered.” Bruce's voice had a hitch in it.

“I can't...I can't let anything happen to him Alfred. Not again.”
Batman's eyes narrowed. The lights from the computer screen danced across his masked face as he leaned against the console and examined the computer screen, his face a mask of concentration. Alfred stood behind him, his eyes going from the map of the sewer system that ran under Gotham, to Batman, worry clear on his face.

Batman reached out to run a finger along a highlighted red line. “This would be the most logical entrance into the sewers from Robinson Park.”

Alfred frowned as he stepped closer. “It is also the only entrance big enough to get two unconscious people through without being seen. That area is heavily overgrown, probably not easily seen from the main paths of the park.”

Batman nodded. “It looks like this area leads deeper into the old unused system of tunnels. It wouldn't take much to carry two people deep into that area...if you didn't know your way around, it would also be easy to become lost.”

Batman's voice was low as he puzzled out the problem.

Alfred glanced at Batman and then back at the computer layout. “Are you sure you shouldn't inform the police sir? There are only a few hours before morning and they could be anywhere under the city by now.”

Batman turned to look at Alfred. “I can do this quickly and quietly. The police will cause...” he held back a sigh of frustration. “It will be safer this way...” Alfred said nothing else, though a slight tightening around his eyes conveyed his disapproval. The phone on the console rang then; Batman reached for it, picked it up and held it to his ear.

“Bruce Wayne.” His voice changed to that of Bruce Wayne, a variation from the voice of Batman he had been using just moments before.

The voice on the other end was like gravel. “Ah, the famous Bruce Wayne.”

“Are you Croc, the one who has my brother?” Batman's hand tightened around the phone, the plastic making a groan of protest.

“Yes, I am and I do. Oh and the woman, don't forget about her. Unless you're not interested in paying for her—she has other uses.” Croc laughed. “Back to business. Five million for the two of them. You have twenty-four hours or I start sending body parts...I'll even be nice and start with a finger instead of an ear.” He laughed on the other end of the phone.

Bruce's mouth was set in a hard line. “Is this only about the money? I can't come up with that kind of money in twenty-four hours...And don't lay a hand on either of them...”

“Please, you're Bruce Wayne...you can do anything you set your mind to. Though if you want...I can go ahead and send that finger to you to get you motivated. Whose finger would you like? The pretty blonde's or your little brother's? Or both? I can send you one of each.” Bruce could hear the smile in the man's voice.
Bruce snarled in agitation. “I need proof of life.”

Croc snarled. “Calling me a liar?”

Bruce stood his ground. “I need proof of life.”

“Fine.”

Bruce could hear something in the background and then he heard Jack. “Bruce?”

“Jack! Jack! Are you alright?” Bruce tried to keep the panic out of his voice, but he his usually reserved and rigid demeanor cracked.

“I don’t know where Harley is Bruce...they have Harley.” Jack's voice, usually cool and collected— albeit with an undertone of mockery or amusement—now held an edge of panic to it when he spoke of Harleen.

“Don’t worry Jack...I'll give them the money and I'll get you both back. I promise.” Bruce started to say something else, but then Croc's voice came back on the line. “There, happy Mr. Wayne?”

Bruce pressed his lips together and then anger caused a tremor to his voice. “Where do you want the money?”

Croc laughed. “I'll call you back and let you know....twenty-four hours Mr. Wayne. Or your brother and the woman both lose a finger.”

The phone went dead.

Alfred looked to Batman whose voice came out in a low growl. “Twenty four hours...five million dollars or he starts sending me Jack and Harleen’s fingers.”

Alfred paled. “Sir...I...”

Batman tossed the phone down. Both of his hands dropped to grab onto the console as his head drooped down. For a moment he said nothing. If it had been Bruce there with him, Alfred would have tried to provide him some sort of comfort...but it wasn't Bruce right now; it was the Batman. Alfred frowned in worry, but said nothing.

Batman snarled. “You start calling in funds from any place you can find them at this hour until the banks open. I'm going to the sewers. I'm going to bring them home Alfred.”

Harvey frowned. It was getting late and the carnival was beginning the slow crawl toward closing. The crowds were significantly thinner, a few odd couples and some families with fatigued children here and there. The cleaning staff were coming out of the wood work, so to speak, cleaning up the paths and pulling the trash cans along to clear away debris and trash. Harvey frowned deeper as he realized he hadn't seen Bruce for a while and the last time he saw Jack Wayne and Harley Quinn was when they had been on the dance floor—that had been a couple of hours ago. But after that, they seemed to disappear. Harvey didn't know Jack Wayne enough to say whether or not his behavior was unusual, but for Bruce, Bruce would have come by to say good night at least, not simply disappeared. He thought about calling Bruce to figure out where he was when he saw Selina walking swiftly toward him and Gilda.

“Selina? I thought you were with Bruce?” Now Harvey really was worried. Gilda, who had been holding her husband's hand, let go to walk over to her friend. “Is everything all right?”

Selina frowned. “Something happened. I'm not even sure what exactly. Bruce was acting strange. I don't know him well, but this seemed pretty strange to me. One minute he was picking us up a couple of pretzels, the next...”

Harvey frowned as he stepped up beside his wife and laid his arm around her shoulders. “Strange how?”

Selina shrugged. “I saw some kid come up to him and say something. Looked like whatever it was upset Bruce. He was really distracted after that, said he had to go.”

“That doesn't sound good,” Gilda said looking over to her husband. Harvey pressed his lips together in thought. “Selina, do you mind taking Gilda home for me?”

“Harvey?” Gilda turned to lay her hands on his chest.

Harvey smiled at his wife and reached out to cup her face with one hand. “I'm going to drive by Wayne Manor, make sure everything is all right with Bruce and his brother. Something just feels wrong, honey.”

“I can come with you,” she said softly, but Harvey smiled and kissed her forehead. “You and Harvey junior...” He touched her flat stomach making her laugh. “Need your rest. I'm sure it's nothing.”

Gilda sighed and relented. “All right...I mean if you don't mind Selina?”

“Of course not!” Selina hooked her arm through Gilda's. “Don't worry, Harvey. I'll get her home safe and sound. Tell Mr. Wayne I hope everything is all right.”

Harvey nodded. “I will, thank you Selina. I'll be home before you know it honey.”

Gilda smiled. “Love you.”

“Love you too.” Harvey grinned and brushed her lips with a gentle kiss before he turned and headed off.

Selina and Gilda made their way toward the parking lot where Selina had parked her black Chevrolet Corvette. Both women slipped into the seats and Selina hit the gas to speed out of Robinson Park.

“So, Bruce Wayne...” Selina said with a smile.

Gilda laughed. “Oh, you won't get much out of me. I only just met him. All I know comes from Harvey and the papers. The papers paint him as a billionaire playboy with a head for business. Harvey said he is a lot more complicated than that.”

Selina smiled. “What about his brother?”

Gilda frowned. “I know even less about him. The papers paint him as a trouble maker. He was arrested not that long ago. Harvey invited him along with Bruce to help with the Wayne Enterprises public image. He seemed nice enough though. His girlfriend is pretty and seems sweet.”

Selina nodded. “For some reason, I had the impression this might have something to do with his brother...”
Gilda turned to look at her. “Really? Why?”

Selina shrugged. “Call it feminine intuition.”

Jack closed his eyes and took several slow, deep breaths to help himself focus his mind on the task at hand. Whatever they had drugged him with was still in his system, making it hard for him to focus clearly, but all he had to do was think about Harley. That Harley needed him. It was difficult, more difficult than he thought it would be, but he kept trying.

He worried about her. Where was she, had they touched her, had they hurt her? He hadn’t seen her, or heard her...nothing to tell him where they were keeping her. He had no idea what was happening to her.

Keeping his mind from wandering to the worst case scenarios was difficult. His mind kept giving him images of her hurt, bloody, or worse. He could feel the rage building, but he had to harness it...control the rage, but it was mixed with fear and fear was something he hated. Right now fear wasn’t useful to him. His fear for Harley threatened to overwhelm him. The rage was better.

Jack’s mind wandered a bit while he worked on his wrist, stopping for a moment when his fingers cramped. He jerked with pain when he put too much pressure on his opposite arm, the shoulder pulling dangerously close to dislocating. He smiled slightly thinking about Dante's Divine Comedy...because this certainly felt like a level of hell. He started to murmur to himself while the pain of working his wrist free became simply part of his current existence.

“Through me you pass into the city of woe:

Through me you pass into eternal pain:

Through me among the people lost for aye.

Justice the founder of my fabric moved:

To rear me was the task of power divine,

Supremest wisdom, and primeval love.

Before me things create were none, save things Jack muttered under his breath. “For she doth make my veins and pulses tremble....my Harley.”

Jack giggled and pulled his mind away from thoughts of Harley to put all his attention toward what he was doing again—which he acknowledged was incredibly painful—as he repeated lines of the Divine Comedy to himself. It gave him something to concentrate on besides the pain. His mind narrowed its focus on three things: the movement of his wrist; the lines he remembered from the Divine Comedy; and the pain. Oddly though, the pain was exhilarating.

Jack slowly worked the one hand, twisting his arm painfully, tugging down, then back to the slow back and forth motion of his wrist while he tried to keep his weight balanced. One of the cuffs was not as tight as the other, providing a possible opportunity, one which Jack would exploit given time. Back and forth, turning the wrist in its handcuff, one way, then the other. The rusted metal had begun to cut into the skin of his wrist slowly, tearing away the flesh until blood began to coat the metal, making it slick around his wrist. Jack giggled.
Jack's mind wandered again. Maybe this really is hell, he thought. He had been to hell before...

Darkness, pain, old memories surfacing and memories best left forgotten; the darkness and the pain made his mind drift back and he remembered his parents' funeral. Everything was black and grey as he stood beside Bruce with Alfred behind them, all of them dressed in black. Jack hated the color black though sometimes he wore it to remind him of funerals and death.

His parents' coffins, side by side, were the center of his attention. Jack cried bitterly, heart-wrenching sobs for his loss. His broken collarbone hurt, his arm in a sling held tight to his body, but his heart hurt worse. Hopelessness...a lost little boy, and Bruce had hit him in the shoulder, told him to stop crying, to grow up, but that had only made Jack cry harder. Bruce had focused his pain on anger...he was so angry.

Alfred had put his arm around Jack, let the boy lean against him for support while Bruce had stared at the two caskets, his blue eyes hard with something—determination. Jack remembered feeling weak...that his big brother was so much stronger than him. Jack was a cry baby, but Alfred had held him and whispered that it takes a different strength to show your emotions and that there was no dishonor in crying for his parents...

Jack's mind drifted again. The pain in his wrist, the painful tugging against his arms a distant thought as the memory of the wake floated through his mind...Bruce and him fighting. Jack crying and Bruce shaking him. Bruce telling him that he had to be hard...or else the bad man that killed their parents would win. Jack had pushed his brother with his free arm, yelling that Bruce was horrible...why didn't he cry?

"Why aren't you crying?!" Jack's little boy voice was shrill with pain.

Bruce pushed back and knocked Jack flat on his back, causing Jack's arm that was in the sling to jerk, sending ripping agony through the little boy. Jack cried out and Bruce ran away, yelling.

"You are stupid Jack!!! I hate you!!"

Jack was hurt and suddenly angry. He pushed his pain aside and gave chase. Adult Jack laughed. That was when they found a new hell of a different kind.

The well.

The two boys running from the manor, yelling at each other. Bruce heading into the woods on the property...and stumbling into the well. They fell together when Jack tried to grab Bruce. Jack landing on his brother...more pain...then the two boys huddled together in complete and utter darkness. Bruce calling for help, but no one hearing them...Bruce putting his arms around his little brother, Jack leaning against his chest. Both boys trying to protect and comfort each other when the bats came...

Jack's mind brought him back to the here and now. He could feel a trickle of blood as it gradually flowed down his arm; some of the of the blood was being soaked up by the cuff of his shirt while the rest trickled a crimson path down his arm. The burn of his skin tearing away from his wrist and the cool metal gradually wearing away the flesh, becoming sticky with blood, the flow of blood, the way his hand cramped, the heavy pull on his shoulders threatening to dislocate his shoulder—all of it was becoming a distant ache. He was aware of the pain, but it wasn't in the forefront of his mind. It seemed as if Bruce always led him into dark places, Jack mused.

Then he smiled, followed with a giggle that bubbled up when he felt a new trail of blood begin the descent down his arm. He was hyper-aware of every detail of the pain, the slow warm roll of blood down from his wrist, the tearing of flesh, the tug against the ligaments of his shoulder. Jack visualized the drop of crimson traveling down, leaving a path, staining his shirt, traveling further down his arm, and then the blood made its way down his torso. Jack could visualize the tearing of his skin away from his wrist, the feel of the metal becoming slick, coated in his blood. Soon his hand would be free, and once he had one hand loose...

Then he heard the sound of someone lumbering down the tunnel. There had been someone in here earlier to check on him, but the man had only stuck his head in to make sure the captive still hung there by his arms before leaving Jack alone in darkness again.

Jack had been alone for the last half hour allowing him to gradually work on his wrist.

Jack heard the figure coming closer, then the muffled exchange of voices. He was immediately assaulted with the smell of reptile. Jack raised his head to look toward the entrance. The large shadow of Croc, his kidnapper, blocked most of the light that came from the tunnel as he stepped into the room. Jack stopped what he was doing, turning his head to face the shadow as it approached.

Croc's deep voice filled the small area where Jack was being kept.

“Well, your brother's got twenty-four hours. Which finger you want to lose first? Eh? Or maybe you want to pick for the pretty blonde? She don't need all her fingers for what I could do to her.”

Croc chuckled then made several snapping sounds with his jaws, his razor sharp teeth coming together much like the sound of a real crocodile—Jack guessed—closed its jaw. Croc laughed again.

Jack only smiled, but it was vicious, all teeth and no humor in his smile, not the smile of someone who was scared.

“You touch one hair on her head and I will make you beg for me to kill you,” Jack hissed.

Croc snorted. “You really are funny rich boy.”

Croc reached out and patted Jack's face with one clawed hand before he slowly dragged his clawed thumb over Jack's lips, bearing down at the last moment to cut deeply into Jack's skin, creating a thin bloody line. Jack glared back, never flinching at the pain.

Croc grinned and murmured. “Tsk, tsk, pretty boy. Looks like those cuts I gave you on your pretty face are going to scar. Too bad. Think your pretty blonde will still want you all scarred up, missing fingers?”

Croc didn't wait for an answer. He turned and yelled over his shoulder into the darkness behind him.

“Pinhead, get in here and watch him. I'm going to go check on his girlfriend. I might have my own deal to make with her. Girl might be craving some crocodile meat...”

Croc laughed and grabbed himself as he turned to Jack.

“I'll be back and we can decide on a finger.”

Jack followed him with his eyes as Croc left. Jack's eye twitched at the corner while his teeth ground against each other.

Harley shivered. The cold was seeping into her bones, deeper even. She could feel the chill settling into her very core. She had heard the term “teeth chattering” before, but she had never experienced it until now; she was so cold.

She smelled him before he appeared. That thick reptilian smell along with something else...the sewer? She knew it was the leader who called himself Croc before he appeared at the bars of her cell.

“Hey there, pretty girl.” He chuckled as he opened her cell door and stepped inside. He was big enough that he took up nearly all the space inside. Her chest constricted like he was sucking up all the oxygen too. She was terrified, but she was going to be damned if she let him know that. As Croc entered the room, his sheer size forced her back against the wall. To further make her feel cramped and threatened, he rested his large clawed hands on the brick wall above her.

“So...waiting to see if Bruce Wayne is going to pay the five mill for the two of you...though now I'm thinking I should have asked for seven...or maybe I'll just keep you for a prize, eh? I like my meat soft and tender you know.” He chuckled again, the sound like rocks rolling together. “Or maybe you would like to make a separate deal...just between you and me?” His tongue came out and licked across his jaw...a forked tongue.

Harley was trembling from fear and the cold, but she glared up into his yellow eyes.

“You can try, but I'll make it the worst mistake you ever made.”

Croc laughed, reaching out to run his fingers through her hair, but Harley jerked her head away from him, glaring all the while. “You know girlie. I really like you. You got fire. Too good for that pretty rich boy. Why don't you stay...get to be a real...Croc's girl, eh?”

Harley spat at him. Croc growled in surprise. Even in the weak light, she saw the rows of razor sharp teeth. She pressed herself back against the wall ready to do whatever she had to do defend herself, but instead Croc pushed off the wall and yelled.

“MO! Keep an eye on her! I'm going to grab something to eat.”

Croc turned and smiled at Harley. “Think it over pretty. You, me...could be fun.” He winked at her just before he ducked through the door of her cell, stopping outside to lock it and say just loud enough for her to hear him.

“I might have to find someone to eat...” He chuckled and lumbered away.

Harley stayed pressed against the wall, shivering after Croc left. After a few moments, Harley lunged forward and vomited into the stale water around her.

She wasn't sure how much time had passed. In the darkness, it was endless...time had no meaning. Harley couldn't be sure if they had been kidnapped only a few hours ago or days ago. But she waited and listened, the damp and chill taking up residence in her very core to the point she wondered if she would ever be warm again.

Harley pressed herself into the corner of the room, crouching down despite the water, trying to make herself small. Being trapped, alone, in the dark, with nothing to tell her how long this would last, reminded her of the times she had been locked in the closet when she was little, pressed into the corner of the small space, hidden behind the clothing even though she knew the monster put her here...he knew where she was....

When she would misbehave, (which could be anything, from a wrong word to a wrong look) her step-father would lock her in a closet for hours when she was. She would lose track of time...sometimes the darkness had seemed endless and empty. Other times it had crawled with fear...not knowing if or when he came back if he was going to ignore her or hit her.

Harley frowned and closed her eyes for a moment as the room seemed to shrink. No; that was a long time ago. She had worked past that...and besides. He was dead...because of Jack.

Harley's heart squeezed painfully in her chest. Where was Jack? Had they hurt him?

When she was sure she was alone, Harley made her way over to the bars again, doing her best not to slosh the water around her too much as she tried to see how the door to her 'cell' was locked. She wasn't sure what she was hoping for, a way she could break it or maybe...she didn't know.

When she leaned against the bars, the light from down the tunnel was flickering, providing just enough light to see that every visible surface was covered in slime or rust. The bars were greasy with mildew and moss, but they were still solid. Harley leaned against the rusted bars, pressing herself hard against the metal, trying to see something, anything, but the dim orange light made the shadows heavy and thick, instead creating unnatural shapes in the shadows rather than illuminating anything with useful clarity. Wherever the light was coming from, it was too far away from where she was to be of any help.

Harley chewed her bottom lip in frustration. She felt disgusting, heavy, as if she could barely move her own body. She closed her eyes, calmed herself, and tried to listen, to see if she heard anything that might help her, to hear if anyone else was about besides her...anyone at all. But she heard nothing, just echoes of things far off; the water...the constant dripping sound that came from everywhere and nowhere...

She was about ready to return to the back of her cell to try to think about what she needed to do...trying not to worry about Jack (which was like asking herself not to breathe since Jack was all she could think about besides her own safety) when a hand shot out between the bars and grabbed at her yanking her back and almost off her feet.

“Hey pretty.” The voice had a leer in it.

Harley gasped in surprise and yanked herself away, the man taking a few strands of her hair with his fingers as she turned to face her attacker. The man who had grabbed at her grinned, pointing at her with his chin and ran his tongue over his upper lip. It was enough to make Harley's skin crawl even more that it already was.

This was a different guy from the one that she had seen earlier, the one who had grabbed her arms before Croc appeared. This one was younger, maybe twenty-something with his head shaved into an uneven mohawk that flopped dirtily to the side.

“Hey, hey you know...we don't need you...you be nice to me—I let you go.” The man grinned at her showing off teeth that probably hadn't seen a tooth brush in a decade.
“What do you mean be nice to you?” Harley asked, her arms wrapped tight around her chest. She had a pretty good idea what he wanted. She shivered with disgust...but...

He grinned and licked his lips. “You...you, ah do me a favor. I'll let you go.”

“What about Croc?” She stepped closer, swayed her hips a little, licked her lips seductively.

It was difficult to be “seductive” and not just because she was freezing, filthy and disgusted by the environment and the situation, but she ran a hand down her front, her attention on thoughts of finding Jack. His eyes went immediately to her chest and lingered there. Harley smiled. She realized that she had possibly found a way to get herself out of this cage.

Batman/Bruce downloaded a schematic of the sewers, both old and new, that ran under Gotham. He could only hope that the map was accurate enough to get him through the tunnels and to wherever the kidnappers were keeping his brother and Dr. Quinzel. Bruce tried not to think too much about Jack...what was happening to him at the moment, but instead Bruce focused on finding them.

He was just turning to head to his car when his cell phone rang. Batman grabbed it off his belt without looking at the display before he hit the button.

“Is he safe?” Bruce asked, his voice pitched low. “Bruce?” It was Harvey.

Bruce closed his eyes and pulled the cowl off, stopping to lean against the cave wall.

“Harvey I...I wasn't expecting it to be you.”

“Bruce, what's going on? Is who safe?” Bruce could heard the deep concern in his friend's voice as Harvey continued. “You left the carnival without a word of goodbye, stood up Selina. What's going on, buddy?”

“I...Harvey I just...” Bruce took a deep breath. “It's Jack and Harleen...I mean, Harley. A man calling himself Croc—he took them from the carnival and they are demanding five million dollars in the next twenty-four hours or they'll start sending me body parts.”

“WHAT? Bruce, did you call the police?” Harvey, who was driving while he spoke had his phone sitting in a speaker slot built into his car so that he could keep his hands on the wheel while talking. But when he heard Bruce's revelation, Harvey lost control of his car for a split second.

“I don't want the police involved Harvey. I...I can come up with the money. I just need time.” Bruce couldn't keep the choking sob out of his voice as a wave of fear washed over him...the fear that he might fail Jack yet again.

“Five million Bruce...I mean...in twenty-four hours...there's no way anyone could put that together in time.” Harvey frowned as he drove, switching lanes to head to Wayne Manor. “Look, I'm coming. I'll see what...”

“No...Harvey. Don't...it's...” Bruce struggled. “I have some of my people looking into it...I mean...”

“Bruce...we're friends. Let me help.” Harvey offered softly.

Bruce chewed his bottom lip. He wasn't used to asking for or accepting help, but he nodded.
“All right, but I'm not going to be at the manor while I try to get the money together. Just contact me by cell.”

Harvey smiled. “You got it. I'll see what I can do. Tell me what you know about who took your brother and his girlfriend. I'm going to head to my office and see what I can dig up on the kidnappers for you.”

“Thank you Harv.” Bruce smiled faintly.

“That's what friends are for, Bruce.” Harvey smiled before hanging up and making a U-turn back toward Gotham.

“Hehehe, you do me a favor, I let you go, sure thing pretty.” The mohawk guy was leering at Harley and continued to lick his lips. Harley put on her best smile slowly pulling on the tie at the front of her dress letting it fall open.

“Well, if you want me to do you a little favor....?” She smiled raising a brow at him. “I'll do anything to get out of here.” She dropped her voice to a whisper, making herself look and sound sweet and defenseless.

The guy grinned. “They call me Mo...you know...Mohawk.” He laughed.

Harley gave him a sick smile, but Mo didn't seem to notice, his full attention on her breasts as she reached around to untie her dress, letting it fall just enough to show more of her breasts, keeping the guy's attention on her chest.

“Well, Mo....why don't you come on in here...and I promise I'll do you a really good favor.”

Harley ran her fingertips down her cleavage, licking her lips as she did so. Mo started to giggle and Harley heard the sound of heavy metal keys in a lock. Her heart was hammering in her chest, the fear was making her hyper alert, but there was something else, something more than fear...she was angry. Angry that she didn't know where Jack was, alive or dead...hurt...angry that this...this...fucker would think that she was that defenseless, that...desperate, that she would do whatever he wanted knowing that he wasn't going to let her go. Unless he really was stupid...that he would think he could waltz in here and use her. She was angry that this Croc person, monster...thing, had taken them both, that he would dare try to kidnap Jack! That he was teasing he was going to rape her! She was furious that anyone would think of her as just some plaything! Some scared powerless woman!

Well, Jack had not only taught her how to defend herself...he had just begun to teach her something else...like with her step-father...some people deserved to die. Mo stepped in, closing the door behind him with a soft clank of metal, but she noticed he didn't lock it. Clearly he didn't see her as a threat. Mo immediately reached for her, but Harley put a hand on his chest and shoved him up against the wall.

Mo chuckled at her action. “Oh I like that, anxious for a real man, eh? Tired of your rich boy?”

“Oh yeah...I promise to do you right,” Harley purred. “Pull your pants down for me...I'm going to make you feel something you've never felt before...” She ran her tongue over her teeth and smiled in the dim light. Mo swallowed and hurriedly worked at his pants, his dirty fingers stumbling in his hurry to get everything undone. Finally, with apparent glee on his face, he shoved his pants down to his knees, his erection clear in the dim light leaking into the cell. Harley grinned. She moved closer, pressing her body up against Mo. Mo was practically shaking with anticipation when Harley reached down and grabbed his balls.

Harley didn't keep her nails long. Instead she kept them short and neat, but when she grabbed a hold of Mo's balls it was like she had taken five tiny daggers and shoved them under his skin. The man's reaction was instant. He sucked in a breath, his eyes going wide enough that she could clearly see the white's in the dull light. But Harley didn't stop there. She slammed her free hand over his mouth and nose, pressing her weight against him, muffling his screams, pressing his head against the wall with all her strength. Mo began to thrash, her fingers on his genitals dug in hard, squeezing with all her strength, her hand against his mouth pressing down hard enough that she could feel his teeth against her hand.

Harley sneered hissing. “This will be something you will never forget.” Mo lifted one arm as if to strike Harley, but she was quicker.

Then she twisted with all her strength. She didn't stop when she could have, not when his knees buckled and he started sliding down the wall, his muffled cries making her palm damp, slick with saliva and mucus. His hands grabbed at her hand that was currently crushing his testicles, but he didn't have the strength to pull her hand away, only to scrape his fingers uselessly against her hand as he tried to pry her off. Instead Harley followed him down the wall when he started to slide, continuing to twist as hard as she could, until her arm was trembling with the effort and she felt the dampness of blood against her fingers. Her eyes flashed with something primal, almost madness. That was when she let go of him.

Mo started to collapse, having dropped to his knees with a splash that sent the stink of the water filling the room anew. Harley snarled, took a step back, but then she rushed forward again to slam the palm of her hand up and into his face, shattering the man's nose in a burst of blood, knocking him back into the wall where his head hit with a sickening thunk against the slimy brick surface. For a moment Mo did nothing, he seemed suspended before he slipped down into the several inches of dank, mucky water that covered the floor of her cell.

Harley didn't realize that Mo was unconscious. She was just too scared and angry. But even if she had realized he was no longer a threat, her fear and anger were mixed in a dangerous, twisted combination of pure rage—which meant she probably couldn't have stopped herself if she had wanted, she would later realize. When he collapsed into the water of her cell, having ceased moaning moments ago, Harley snarled and started to kick Mo.

She kicked him and hissed, “You fucking piece of shit!! You—if you hurt Jack I swear to God I am going to come back and find you!! I'll cut your balls off and make you eat them!! You think I would ever let filth like you touch me!!?”

Harley kicked and kicked and kicked, angry tears cutting clean lines across her cheeks until the water began to turn a murky crimson, a slow puddle of red expanding from Mo's corpse. Harley seethed, her hands were clenched into fists at her side and her whole body trembled.

Harley took several deep breaths. The air tasted like sewage on her tongue, with a slight coppery flavor in the dank air, but it was enough to calm her down. She dropped down to her knees in the thick water and quickly searched the body. Mo had a couple of joints on him, a dull knife and nothing else...no gun or other weapon, just the dull blade. Part of her was insulted. Clearly he had not seen her as a threat, but to have it confirmed even more by his lack of weapons...she was insulted. Harley took the knife and stood. She only gave the corpse a quick glance before she rushed over to the bars, pushing until the door creaked open, the key still in the rusted lock but the door hadn't been secured by Mo when he came in here to take advantage of her.

Harley smiled, turning to grab the key and pushed the cell door closed, locking it before she spun around to examine her surroundings. Wherever she was being kept, the tunnel only ran in two directions, left and right, each end passing into darkness. From here she couldn't see anything else.
Down the left side of the tunnel she could see a metal trash can with something burning inside, providing the orange glow she had seen from her cell, but beyond that, either end was nothing but shadows.

She pressed her lips together. For a moment she was overwhelmed. Jack could be anywhere...wherever here was, but she had to try. Jack would try for her. Harley, terrified but determined, moved to the left, gripping the dull bladed knife in her hand.

Batman arrived at Robinson Park at the rear entrance. He slipped the car inside the park, easily finding a place to hide it among the thick undergrowth and densely packed area of trees where the Batmobile's dark colors would prevent anyone from seeing it unless they simply stumbled over it. He stepped out of the car and immediately hit the button on the side of his cowl that would bring up the sewer map. The entrance he was looking for was perhaps a mile on foot from his current location.
He switched the map off, turned on his night vision before he took off at a jog, and moved off to find the entrance to the sewers.

It only took him a couple of minutes to find the entrance. The bars that were supposed to block entrance into the piping were long gone. He frowned about to head in when his phone vibrated against his hip. Bruce picked it up. “Bruce here.”

“It's Harvey. I wanted to let you know I discovered some information on your brother's kidnapper.”
The way Harvey spoke, it was clear he was slightly distracted.

“Go on,” Bruce said simply.

“Well, he is known as Killer Croc. His name is Waylon Jones, supposedly born looking the way he does. He can hold his breath underwater for an extremely long time...expert swimmer, enhanced strength...ex-wrestler. He's been arrested for robbery, murder...he supposedly ate someone. He has been associated with the mob on more than one occasion...not sure if any of this helps Bruce.”
Harvey sighed.

But Batman smiled. “It does help Harvey. Thank you.”

“Is there anything else I can do Bruce?” Harvey asked his sincerity clear in his voice.

Bruce smiled. “Not right now, but I'll keep you in the loop okay?”

“All right. I'll be waiting by the phone if you need me Bruce.” Harvey hung up. Bruce smiled and slipped the phone back in place. Harvey Dent was a good man.

Batman carefully stepped inside, but there was no one here, no guards...nothing. Which could only mean that they were deeper down, someplace where they felt safe. Batman adjusted his night vision and started to make his way deep into the sewers.

Jack pressed his lips together, the pain racing down his arm, but his hand slid through the cuff, free.
He flexed his fingers, the pain from the torn skin around his wrist and hand made him smile in satisfaction. Jack hissed slightly, the pain peaked for a moment, but he quickly ignored it, his eyes roaming over to the man guarding him. The big, muscle-head of a man stood with his back to Jack, a gun at his side, but he never moved...clearly he didn't hear anything or was simply ignoring Jack.

With Jack's hand coming free, the sudden shift in his weight had Jack's other arm pulling dangerously up, threatening to dislocate his shoulder when his weight unexpectedly tugged hard on his one wrist. He reached up with his now free hand and grabbed the bloody cuff, holding on and trying to distribute his weight. The tips of his shoes were just barely touching the damp ground, causing him to scrape the floor as he held on, keeping his weight from wrenching his arm out of the socket.

The sounds of his struggling finally drew the attention of the man who was supposedly watching him. The man was big, all muscles and little else as far as Jack could see, turned and glanced at him before turning away again. Pinhead...that's what Croc had called him. Jack smiled. Let's see how easy he is to provoke, Jack thought to himself with a vicious grin.

Jack laughed. “Pinhead...what kind of name is that?”

The man turned around to glare at Jack over his shoulder with a sneer. “Shut up you. Croc said to watch you, didn't say you had to be in one piece, so keep quiet or I'll make you sorry.”

Jack laughed. “You, make me sorry? Right. I'm terrified.... I'd like to see things from your point of view, but I can't seem to get my head that far up my ass.”

Pinhead frowned for a moment as if he couldn't quite figure out the insult. He glanced over his shoulder again at Jack before putting his back to him and started to leave.

Jack just continued. “Your birth certificate is an apology letter from the condom factory.”

Jack started laughing, his body swinging a little with his laughter.

Pinhead growled. “Stop it or I'm going to come over there and make you stop rich boy!”

Jack smiled, his blue eyes dancing, his body swinging just a little bit.

“The only way you'll ever get laid is if you crawl up a chicken's ass and wait.”

Jack grinned wider when he saw Pinhead's shoulders tense just before he turned and stepped over to Pinhead moved swiftly for a big man, pulling his gun up and held it to Jack's forehead. Jack smiled bigger clearly enjoying himself as he whispered in a sing-song voice.

“It looks like your face caught on fire and someone tried to put it out with a hammer.”

Jack giggled, his body swinging back and forth.

Pinhead snarled. “Shut up rich boy or I'm going to put a bullet through your head!!”

“Oh please...and piss off your boss Croc? Really? I'm worth far too much alive Pinhead baby...far more than you...” Jack giggled. “You know...I wasn't born with enough middle fingers to let you know how I feel about you.”

Pinhead snarled. “The boss won't care if yer a little beat up!”

That was when he hit Jack across the face with his pistol. The metal hit Jack hard in the mouth, splitting his lip. Jack tasted blood as the liquid flooded his mouth. Jack grinned, his white teeth stained red. “Oh hit me again baby. I like it rough.” Jack leered at him.
Pinhead looked disgusted and upset...he was used to people he pistol whipped...stopping...they stopped talking. But this guy...

Jack grinned. “Calling you an idiot would be an insult to all stupid people.” Pinhead snarled and hit Jack again, knocking Jack's head to the side in a splatter of blood. Jack laughed, his lips split, blood dribbling down his chin as he continued to laugh at Pinhead.

“SHUT UP!” Pinhead shouted.

Jack grinned. “Ohh! Make me big boy.”

Pinhead snarled. “You motherfucker...”

He hit Jack again, blood flying in an arc in the dim orange light, splattering across Pinhead's face, but Jack only grinned wider, seeming unaffected by the pain. Pinhead was about to hit Jack again, his pistol raised up high. Jack was grinning at him with red bloody lips, his eyes wild, but at the last second Pinhead thought better of it. He was shaking with rage, but Pinhead turned to leave and Jack hissed. “Big mistake.”

Jack dropped his freed arm, wrapping it around Pinhead's neck, yanking back as hard as he could to lock his fingers around his own shoulder creating a lock around Pinhead's neck. At the same time, Jack lifted his legs up and wrapped them around Pinhead middle, pressing his feet back against Pinhead's stomach, the heels of his shoes digging in and with all the strength he could muster, Jack used the muscles of his legs to press backwards so that Pinhead couldn't get a hold of Jack's feet to pull Jack's legs away.

Jack hauled back, his left hand still chained in the cuff, wrapped around the chain, pulling his body up with all his strength as he pressed his forearm against Pinhead's throat. Jack's fingers dug into his own shoulder painfully as he concentrated on strangling Pinhead. Jack's blue eyes were flat, devoid of emotion, as he pressed his advantaged, digging his forearm into the other man's throat.

Pinhead had dropped his gun during Jack's initial attack, but he reached up to claw at Jack's forearm. His fingers managed to wrap around Jack's much thinner arm, but Jack was surprisingly strong.

Jack laughed. “Oh no, come on—are you having fun yet?” he hissed in Pinhead's ear as the man gasped for breath, barely able to make a sound.

Jack pressed with his forearm, instead of pulling back, this time he hunched his body forward, his legs tightening around the man's middle pressing with all his might. Jack smiled just slightly as he closed his eyes focusing on choking the life out of Pinhead. The mass of Pinhead's body started to drag on Jack, yanking hard on Jack’s arm that was still cuffed above him.

Jack let the body go, releasing his choke hold and his legs at the same time. The large man continued to make a few oddly shallow noises before all signs of life disappeared just before his body hit the floor, the sound of splashing water was minimal. Jack looked down at the dead body with a grin. “Oops.”

Batman moved silently yet quickly, following the map overlay that his visor was displaying before his eyes. The smell of the place was incredible, but mixed with the stink of waste water, mildew and other scents he wasn't sure of, Batman smelled smoke. The burning smell wasn't clean, like the smell of burning wood. This was murky...as if someone was burning garbage. It wasn't just the smell that made navigating difficult, but the sounds too. They carried in these tunnels. The sounds of water, rats, and who knew what else. He was sure he had heard someone moving behind him, but no one ever appeared and the voices he heard...whispers, could have come from anywhere. Batman took a few deep calming breaths and focused on the map; it was still his best bet.

Batman followed the scent of burning trash. It was a good possibility that the smell of burning trash could mean people were present and besides, it was the only clear thing to follow down here next to his map display. The map was giving him a basic route to follow, but he was quickly discovering that it wasn't accurate. The map gave him the known tunnels under Gotham, not the forgotten or, as he had seen several times already, a couple of 'new' tunnel openings, clearly made by someone digging with who knew what. The remains of bricks and debris lay in front of these new openings that led into the sides of other tunnels showed that people had indeed been down here, altering the environment. The new entrances led into old forgotten sections of the sewer.

Batman had stopped to examine the map when he heard the sound of voices ahead of him. He cocked his head and listened. It sounded to be four men and the sound of a fire crackling. He turned off his night vision letting his eyes adjust to the darkness. There, he could see a barely discernible flicker of light in the distance. Batman moved silently, following the tunnel toward the light, listening to the voices as they gradually became more coherent.

“I don't know about this, I mean...Jack Wayne fine, but that woman. I don't like it, she wasn't part of the deal. Should have drugged her and left her somewhere.”

Another voice laughed. “Oh come on, don't be such a pussy. The ransom went up from three million to five with the woman. Croc knows what he's doing.”

“If he gets it. What if Wayne don't want to pay?”

“Look, you worry too much, let Croc do all the thinking.”

“See now I don't like that either! Why are we working for that freak, eh?”

Batman heard the sound of smacking, like a hand hitting against clothing.

“Shut up, you want him to hear you. You know that stuff about him eating people...it ain't just stories. It's true. So let's do this job, get paid and get out of here.”

Then Batman heard the sound of running feet, clearly coming from a path somewhere ahead of him. He closed his eyes. Judging by the sound, the echo...it was a tunnel down to the left.

“Biggy! Come quick!” Another voice joined the group, younger...twenty? Batman frowned listening.

The one named Biggy growled in response. “What is it?”

“I went to take Pinhead a beer and he's dead!” the younger man had a whine in his voice as he spoke.

“Whatcha mean he's dead?” Batman could hear the frown in Biggy's voice.

“I mean he's dead” the young man repeated. “He's in that Wayne guy's cell. Lying on his face in the water...he ain't moving!”

* Batman frowned.
“Whose with that Wayne guy now?” Biggy asked.

“I left Job and Weasel with him. They got their guns on him, but all he is doing is swinging there and insulting them—and laughing a lot. It's creepy man. Biggy, you gotta come check it out...”

There was the sound of movement. Batman was fairly confident by the sound of flesh hitting flesh that “Biggy” had just slapped the other man. “Then how could he have...you know, never mind I want to see Pinhead for myself.” Batman heard the sound of boots on brick. He waited until the footfalls were faint. He figured that left him two, maybe three men...Batman came around the corner like a shadow, moving silently and swiftly.

He had been correct; there were three men standing around a metal trash can, the contents of which, were burning. Batman didn't wait. He rushed up on one man, a shorter man with a full dirty beard. Batman's fist shot out swiftly and caught that man in the side of the head; the bearded man was down before he knew what hit him, his head snapping to the side; he fell, hitting the floor hard, his head bouncing....and he didn't get up again.

One of the other men, tall, skinny, with a beak of a nose, pulled a gun, but Batman swooped down on him grabbing the wrist of the hand holding the weapon and yanked him forward, his other hand snapping out to hit the man in the nose, breaking his nose instantly. Batman grabbed him by the back of the head as the man groaned and fell forward. Batman brought his knee up at the same moment that he drove the man down, right into his upraised knee, knocking the air from his lungs and dropping him. Batman kicked the gun away into the darkness just as the other man, a big guy with long dark hair and missing an eye pulled a blade out and charged. He wore no eye patch to hide the empty socket, giving the goon the appearance of having a half-skull face.

Batman used his cape, twisting to the side while throwing the cape out; the knife became tangled in the cloth. Batman yanked on his cape to pull the man's tangled wrist toward him and making his attacker stumble forward. Batman grabbed him by the neck and lifted him off his feet to slam him forcefully against the brick wall of the tunnel. Held off the tunnel floor by the Batman, the one-eyed man started to whimper. “Don't kill me!!” “I'm not going to kill you...I'm going to hurt you, but how much I hurt you depends on how you answer my questions,” Batman growled. “Now, tell me where Jack Wayne is.”

Jack grinned, his teeth still bloody from the pistol whipping he had received from Pinhead as Biggy (who looked as if he had been beaten in the face as a child), the young man who had come to get him named Brad (how boring Jack thought, just like a...Brad...brown hair, dirty...the kind of person you would walk by without a second look), Job (a little more interesting since the kid had dyed his hair purple), and Weasel all entered the small room and all of them looked down at the body of Pinhead. It was really comical, the looks on their faces, which had Jack laughing again.

Biggy dropped down to his knees to check for a pulse before he rolled Pinhead over. Pinhead's eyes were open, the whites gone completely red. His lips looked swollen and his tongue stuck out, making him look grotesque in the dim light. All the men in the room gasped and stepped back except Biggy who looked up at Jack, his eyes narrowed. “Tell me what happened.”

Jack grinned. “He didn't like my jokes...I thought they were pretty funny myself.”

Jack's laugh echoed off the damp walls.
Biggy snarled and reached out to grab Jack by the throat. “Tell me what happened rich boy!”

Jack choked for a moment, but grinned as Biggy pressed his fingers into Jack's neck.

“Oh, now you know you can't kill me.” Jack smiled sweetly.

Biggy hissed at the captive man. “I can hurt you.”

Jack grinned a bloody toothed grin. “You can try.”

Biggy snarled and pushed Jack's face to the side before he turned to the men in the room. “Weasel, you and Job get the body out of here. Brad, check his cuffs. I'm going to get Croc.”

With that Biggy stomped out of the room. Weasel and Job looked at each other and shrugged. They reached down, each grabbing an end of Pinhead and carried him out. Brad watched them go before he turned to look at Jack. Jack was swinging slightly as he smiled at Brad.

Jack made a kissy face at Brad, who frowned and stood there staring at Jack, unwilling to move. It was clear to Jack that he was calculating the risk of checking Jack's restraints versus what Biggy would do to him if he didn't check. Brad came to the conclusion that Biggy was the bigger threat as he quickly looked over his shoulder at the way his friends had gone, carrying Pinhead's body and then back at Jack. Brad still seemed unwilling to walk over to Jack, but he did, slowly approaching Jack with the same caution he would a snake. Jack only smiled wider.

Brad reached up, checking Jack's left hand first, then, as he reached up to check Jack's right hand, Jack's legs came up swiftly to wrap around Brad's waist, yanking the young man forward and causing him to lose his balance at the sudden shift of weight. Jack's free hand shot out, grabbing Brad around the side of his skull, Jack's thumb pressing into Brad's eye. The younger man started to scream while Jack pressed as hard as he could, until there was a sickening popping sound. Brad let out a blood-curdling scream as Jack chuckled gleefully.

Batman encountered two men moving a dead body fairly quickly, and just as swiftly, he had both men unconscious when he heard the scream echoing off the walls.

He left the men he had knocked out on the floor and took off toward the sounds of pain. He followed the sounds the best he could when he turned around a corner to see another burning barrel. He heard another cry that abruptly stopped.

Batman stopped in his tracks. He looked around, but no one had responded to the sound of screaming. He frowned and made his way more slowly. He could see what looked like a darkened doorway. When he stepped around to peer into the room he saw Jack Wayne, his face bloody, hanging by one arm and giggling to himself, a body at his feet.

Jack looked up and his eyes widened.

He giggled again, with a different quality in the tone. “What the hell are you? A giant bat? Though I suppose we have a giant crocodile man, so...why not!” Batman spoke quietly. “I'm here to rescue you.”

Jack swung on his one arm that was still held above him and giggled. Batman stared at him for a moment.
Bruce felt a spike of pain. Jack, his baby brother looked terrible. The dim light showed the blood on his brother's face and he could see the bruises and cuts that were littered on his brother's pale skin. But what really made Bruce’s blood run cold was the laughter...the giggling. He remembered Jack after the school incident, those times when he found Jack alone laughing and talking to no one...the violent outbursts, but it was the giggling that haunted Bruce. Jack had done that a great deal when they were younger...after their parents murder...laughing at nothing...except whatever it was that Jack was thinking about.

Bruce pushed his emotions aside. That was not Jack hanging there and right now they were not brothers. He was the Batman...that was a victim he was here to help. Batman dropped down to check the pulse of the man at Jack's feet. Jack watched him with a sudden frown on his pained features.

“He's not dead...blind in one eye now, but not dead...too bad really. If only I had gotten a better grip,” Jack muttered more to himself with a simple grin. Batman stood up slowly and walked over to Jack, but Jack's free hand lashed out to grab Batman by the shoulder. Jack's grip was powerful, surprising Batman with the strength of it. Batman did his best not to show his surprise at Jack grabbing him. He glanced down at Jack's hand gripping his shoulder. The wrist was a wreck, the skin gone leaving a bloody mess behind. The sight made Bruce sick...that Jack had done that to himself. No, he thought. Bruce had allowed it to happen...he hadn't been there for his brother. Batman shook his head slightly. No...focus.

Jack tilted his head with a knowing smile. “I remember you. You were at the party. You went after that gang. But why are you here?” Jack asked with genuine confusion.

“You brother sent me,” Batman said, his voice a low growl.

“Bruce...Bruce sent you?” Jack seemed confused as Batman pulled something from his belt and worked at the other cuff that held Jack suspended. Batman caught Jack when he released him. Jack stumbled into the larger man, allowing Batman hold him up as he wrapped his arms around Batman's neck. It took a couple of seconds for Jack to get his feet under him before Batman started to lead him from the room.

“We need to get you out of here,” Batman stated gruffly.

Jack reached out and grabbed Batman’s shoulder again. His blue eyes were filled with pain and what looked to Batman to be worry. For a moment Bruce was surprised at Jack's reaction. Jack never showed concern about anything, but this...

Batman stopped moving to let him speak.

Jack's voice was a plea. “No, no you can't...Harley...they have my girlfriend...my fiancee! You...you have to help me find her!”

Bruce frowned in confusion. “Fiancée?” Outwardly, he said nothing to reveal his surprise, but nodded. “I'll...I need to find that man, Croc, the one who took you. I need to get him into police custody. I'll look for her...she is probably with him.” <

Jack nodded. Batman took Jack by the shoulders. “I'm going to give you directions how to get out of here while I go and take care of this Croc. Go, don't look back, head straight to the police.”

Jack frowned, but then nodded.

Batman gave a quick nod and turned to leave, easily disappearing into the darkness of the sewers.

Jack stood there staring after him.
He smiled...there was no way he was going to trust a Bat to find his girl. Besides...he really wanted a pair of crocodile skin boots. Jack's smile turned nasty before he stepped out of the cell. Jack laughed and then slowly let out a sigh of satisfaction as he set off into the tunnels.

Harley stopped, her blue eyes wide.

The darkness was all consuming, she could see nothing, the little light that had been behind her was long gone...swallowed by the darkness. She used the wall to guide herself along, but every sound was amplified, echoed, and confusing. She kept stopping and turning, certain that she heard someone, or something. It was as if she could hear everything, every sound, her teeth chattering, the sounds of rats scurrying around her feet, ghostly voices, sometimes sounding close, other times far away and the constant sounds of dripping water.

She had just started moving again when heard what sounded like a growl.

Dante's Divine Comedy 1472
We Are All Mad Here

Batman moved carefully, his boots making minimal sound as he stepped through the watery gunk that lined the bottom of the tunnel. He stopped for a moment to bring up the holo-map, then tried to determine where he was on the virtual map. Batman's eyes narrowed as he compared his location to his surroundings...which was turning out to not always be the same. According to the map, the old Gotham railway—dating back to the 1800's—was still under here somewhere. Some of the sewer tunnels were connected to it, though it was hard to see where. Batman almost groaned in frustration. That means Croc or Dr. Quinzel could be anywhere in this vast maze, he thought. The only saving grace was when he found an old generator.

The generator looked old, rusted, but a quick inspection showed him that it was still in working order. Batman frowned wondering why it wasn't in use, unless this Croc person had more mutations than simply his skin. Harvey had sent a photo to Bruce's phone a few minutes ago showing a humanoid crocodile-man, a strange hybrid. There a number of additional crocodile-like mutations that Killer Croc could have that would not require him to need the light to see. The other reason for not using the generator could also be a mental game with Croc; keep your people in the dark, use low tech lighting, a good way to keep them on edge.

Batman decided to take the risk of turning the generator on. The light could work to his advantage limiting Croc's own night vision, if indeed that was part of Croc's game...and perhaps the light would give Dr. Quinzel hope that someone was coming for her.

The loud roar of the generator coming to life echoed down the tunnel walls. The sounds raced further into the sewers...the echoing roar sounding for all the world like a great beast awakening. Anyone down here for hundreds of yards in all directions would probably have heard it, but Batman felt confident most of Croc's crew would have no idea where the source of the sound was coming from.

As Batman watched, the lights flickered on overhead, blinking into existence and leading down the old brick tunnel. The light wasn't great, a weak, yellowish glow that only illuminated small circles, leaving the surrounding area in darkness, thicker than before in their contrast with the light. Some of the lights didn't come on at all, while others exploded, leaving only a few circles of false safety leading into the darkness beyond.

Batman frowned and touched his ear piece. “Are you there?”

“Here sir.” Alfred's voice came through loud and clear.

“I found Jack, gave him directions to get out. Hopefully he will go straight to the manor or the police station.”

Bruce could hear the relief in Alfred voice, though the older man remained calm. “Thank goodness sir. May I ask why you did not escort him out?”

“Croc wasn't with him and Dr. Quinzel is still missing. She might be with Croc. Let me know when Jack arrives home,” Bruce said as he walked slowly, moving along the tunnel quickly and carefully.

“Will do sir. Miss Harleen is still missing?” Bruce could hear the worry in Alfred's voice.

“I...she wasn't with Jack. I'm looking for this Killer Croc now and hoping Dr. Quinzel is with him.” Batman moved carefully. The way sounds, even the smallest sound of crunching glass under his boots carried down here, and made it difficult to specify where the sounds were coming from or what was making them.

He could hear the doubt in Alfred's voice.

“Sir, I don't think Master Jack is going to leave without her.”

Batman stopped, turning to look behind him, then forward again. “Why not? I'm on the case.”

“Sir, why should he trust Batman? And even if he knew your true identity...why sir would he trust you to find her? Master Jack knows how you feel about her and he hasn't always shown a...deep respect for the rules.” Alfred said the words calmly, but Bruce could sense that Alfred was...scared.

“Contact me in a hour if you haven't heard anything from him all right?” Bruce snarled. “I can't go back now or I will lose this chance to find Croc.”

“Will do sir—and sir, be careful. I hope you find her.”

The darkness was like a creature; it was watching her, breathing around her. Harley had stopped dead in her tracks when she heard the roar, the sound seemed to race down the tunnel toward her, but nothing happened, the sound dying away, leaving her skin feeling tight and her heart racing. She turned around, her eyes open wide, adjusting to the darkness, but she still couldn't “see” anything.

She whispered to herself only to hear her own voice...it was lonely yet a little comforting to hear herself speak. “Now what was that? Croc? A big rat? It...it didn't sound like Croc...did it?” she asked herself.

She went still and quiet, tried to listen over the sound of her own breathing, but nothing else roared, snarled or made any sound...except her. It made her doubt that she had even heard anything. She kept listening but now all she could hear was the dripping of water somewhere and silence...that dull hum of...nothing.

She was just about ready to start moving again, her mind on finding Jack, when she heard something strange behind her. The air had a weird electrical charge to it. As she turned around, it looked for all the world like the world's biggest lightning bug was racing toward her!

And then a series of lights seemed to come racing down the tunnel at her, snapping into life. Harley barely stopped herself from letting out a startled scream. The lights raced toward her just barely giving her time to shield her eyes from the yellow glare before the glow was racing away and heading in the other direction.

The lights flicked on, a few bursting into a spectacular blast of twinkling glass, then continued to race toward her and away. Harley turned and huddled against the slimy brick wall as the bursts of light hurried past her off into the other direction splitting the darkness into isolated pools of yellow light. Harley waited a few heartbeats, remaining crouched down as if she were afraid of the lights grabbing her as the glow raced away. She had covered her eyes instinctively from fear and that almost primitive knowledge that the lights were going to hurt her eyes. She kept her hands over her eyes, peaking slowly through her fingers before she finally stood up and removed her hands. Carefully, she unshielded her eyes, giving herself a chance to adjust to the illumination. She looked around...The light only provided small circles of “safety” or rather the illusion of safety, since once in the light you could see even less outside the circle's glow; the darkness on the edges was deeper and more menacing. She couldn't see anything down either end of the tunnel she was in...she couldn't tell how far it went, if there were any turns, rooms or alcoves....only more shadows.
Harley muttered to herself. “Great, just great. Well, I guess the lights can guide me? Maybe?”

She saw no one and nothing dangerous at the moment; so with a sigh, Harley stepped away from the wall and started to walk. She had just wrapped her arms around herself to try to stay warm when her foot hit something. She squeaked, jumping back as suddenly the tunnel echoed with the sounds of some object clacking against the wall and rolling along the floor of the tunnel. Harley shoved her fist into her mouth to stop herself from yelling. Whatever she had hit was hard. Metal?

She snarled at herself. “GOD Harley, stop acting so stupid!”

Harley looked down, trying to see what she had hit. There! The light glistened off of something at the edge of the pool of light. She stepped closer, crouched down and reached out to nudge it with her finger before jumping back, almost falling on her rear when the piece of pipe rolled away from the light and into the darkness again.

Harley snarled again. “Fuck a duck Harley! Stop acting like a scared little girl!”

Her voice echoed down the tunnel making her press her lips hard together and her eyes to widen. She giggled. “Oops,” she said softly.

Harley crouched down again, reached for and picked up the pipe. It was cold, slimy and rusted, but as she stood, holding it in her hand, she realized that it had a good weight to it.

Harley grinned as she took comfort in the feel of the pipe. “I could really bust some heads with this...”

She swung the pipe around a few times, feeling the way the metal cut through the air. She turned and slammed it against the wall; the pipe hit hard, sent vibrations up her arm, and echoed through the tunnel, but it felt good. She grinned, all teeth and no humor. She was going to crack some heads and when she found Jack...whoever had him was going to pay for it, for touching one hair on his head! Harley giggled and tossed the dull blade; this pipe was more her speed. Then Harley heard the growl again. She turned, trying to determine where it was coming from, but the sound simply reverberated down the tunnel walls...it could be from anywhere. And just as before...it was gone.

Jack moved swiftly, but quietly. He could move without a sound when he wanted to; it was something about him that had always irritated Bruce when they were younger until Bruce started to do it himself...moving stealthily. Jack chuckled remembering how he and Bruce would play tricks on each other...moving up behind the other one and scaring them. It was all fun and games until Jack had tackled Bruce to the ground and surprised him by punching Bruce in the face, bloodying his nose.

Jack grinned at the memory. Bruce was good, but Jack was always just a little bit better at the sneaking around.

Jack ran his fingers along the slimy walls as he moved along the tunnels, his thoughts drifting as he walked. He remembered the cave again. Two boy huddled together, the sounds of bats shrieking around them. All he and Bruce could see were the tiny red eyes staring at them. Bruce held him whispering.

“I won't let them hurt you Jack. I won't let anything hurt you, I promise.”

Of course all of Bruce's promises had been lies...they (not the bats, the world...it was the world) had hurt Jack. The torture at school until Jack fought back. The whispers behind Jack's back...the youngest Wayne is unstable...Bruce should let them put him away. Did you hear what he did to that other child at school? Didn't they say he was experimenting on some animals? If only they hadn't lost their parents. Blah blah blah...Jack snarled and muttered to himself, “They just never understood....no one understood me, until Harley.”

Jack chuckled to himself then. His beautiful Dr. Quinn...medicine woman! He giggled at his joke. She accepted him...loved him just the way he was...killed her step-father. Harley understood why it had to be done. And she was happy he had done it! Just imagine how she will feel about the others...about this. Jack had made up his mind—some how, some way, Croc was going to die for this.

Jack shoved those thought away for the moment. Right now finding Harley was the most important thing in the world, which led Jack's thoughts back to Batman.

“Mm...Batman,” Jack said aloud mostly just to hear his own voice in the darkness. “Now what is your story, Bats? What made you put on a batsuit and run around.? Inquiring minds want to know! I want to know...my brother sent you?” He giggled with a shake of his head.

Jack glanced around at the darkness that surrounded him. Why did everyone always fear the dark? The dark and clowns. He never could understand those fears. Darkness and clowns were both fun. When he had been sent away to boarding school, the bullies liked to use small dark places to try to scare the younger kids. He remembered getting locked in the basement by that bully Roger...it wasn't just being locked in the basement, it was being locked in “the room” in the basement.

The small room was located in the back of the basement. It had an old, rotten wood door. Jack remembered how creepy the door had looked when he was a child, the group of school boys going down into that basement to frighten each other. There was a rusted old padlock on the door, as well as a latch lock, and a warning sign that someone had nailed to it: “Do Not Open.”

Of course, as such things are, the padlock was never locked and it was always a game to dare someone to open the door or even to just touch it. The day that the bullies had shoved Jack into the room and locked him inside, Jack learned everything that was behind that old wooden door. The room didn't have much in it, a few old holiday decorations (long forgotten judging by their state of decay, along with a few odds and ends of long forgotten things.) Other than that, it was a dark, dirty, tiny room, nothing in and of itself that would be considered scary. There were a few pipes carrying water to the school above that made moaning, gurgling sounds, but that was pretty much it.

But this tiny room located in the school's basement had been the place where nearly all the ghosts stories and wild tales of murders in the school originated from that groups of boys told in the late hours of the night to try to scare each other.

Jack chuckled to himself. Everyone had been scared of him when he hadn't cried and screamed that day they locked him in the there. Jack had already faced his fears by then; that tiny room had been just that, a tiny, dark room. Though of course Jack had told the other boys horrible things about the room...so the day when he had finally put Roger in that room and locked him in (with a dead animal, of course, to make the situation more fun) Jack had received a couple of smacks of a ruler across his palms and suspension which had involved mostly solitary confinement, trapped in a small, dark room with only one window, barred like the window of a cell, a door locked from the outside, a sickly yellow light that hung from the ceiling and nothing else. Jack had told himself over and over again that he had preferred the solitary confinement...that he didn't mind the silence...it gave him time to think...

As Jack moved along, his mind continued to ponder the costumed crusader. Bats...the Batman...wonder what happened to that poor sap that he was running around Gotham dressed as a giant bat? Jack had seen the papers...the Batman had been around for a few months, going from an interesting side story to sometimes making the front page...such as with the events at the gala. Jack found him interesting, but until now he had just thought of the Bat as one of the blossoming crazies that lived in Gotham. But Bruce had sent him?

Bats...Jack mused. He had never given bats much thought until the day in the well with Bruce. Jack shook his head pushing those memories away and continued to walk. He had maybe traveled for what seemed forever when Jack had found a busted out section of tunnel. He could see the flicker of flames from that direction, so he stepped through and into this new area of tunnels, the bricks here seemed, older, the color a darker shade and the smell reminded him of the wet smell of ancient stone in a cavern. He followed the path indicated by the glow of fire light in barrels until he found the “cell.”

It was similar to the room he had been kept in, but this one was rank with knee-high stale water in it. There was a burning barrel down the way from it (the source of the firelight he had followed), though that didn't provide enough light to look inside.

Jack whispered. “Harley?”

His voice cracked and he could taste blood on his tongue from his split lip.

Jack narrowed his blue eyes, trying to distinguish shapes in the darkness of the little cell, hoping to see something. His blood ran cold for a moment as the thought that something might have happened to her...What if? Jack shook the thoughts away and again tried to see into the room, to see anything in the inky darkness of the cell to tell him one way or another if Harley was in there. His heart raced. Harley...she had to be all right. Jack's fingers wrapped around the rusted bars, he was holding them so tightly his knuckles were turning white as his gaze tried to pierce the darkness. Then, with a vicious snarl, Jack yanked on the bars at the same moment he thought he saw something moving in the water, a darker shadow among the blackness, but it was too dark to tell for sure. Jack growled in frustration.

“If they fucking...” He yanked back on the metal bars, for a split second letting panic drive his actions.

Jack had just decided to see if he could pull the barrel with the low burning fire closer to the cell when the lights above burst to life with a series of hisses and pops of a few ancient bulbs.

Jack ducked when a shower of sparks rained down on him, frowning and shielding his eyes. The light threw him off for a split second, but it allowed him to look into the cell, where he saw a body floating face down in the water that covered the floor of the cell.

For a split second Jack panicked...Harley? The light reflected off the body...no...it was male if the shape was any indication. The yellow glow allowed Jack to see the cell door more clearly and the key still stuck in the lock. Jack reached over and pushed open the door, the metallic sound of the cell door opening filled the small space with a loud rasp of ancient metal moving. He stepped down into the cell, sloshing water as he made his way toward the body. He frowned as he studied the floating corpse, he heard the sounds of rats skittering away in the darkness along the edges where the water didn't reach, their tiny claws scratching against stone.

Jack stepped closer to the body, his relief washing through him, settling his heart. He knew it wasn't his Harley, but he rolled the body over anyway and lifted a brow. The man's pants were down and his privates were a bruised and twisted mass of bloody flesh. Jack stared for a moment before he chuckled, which quickly developed into a full blown laugh. He couldn't be sure, but something told him Harley had been here. He started laughing hard enough that he had to bend over, gasping for breath.

“What is the definition of pure agony my friend?” Jack asked the dead man.

Jack nudged him with his finger, watching the body bob in the water. “A meat mincer!”

Jack laughed more, tears pricking the corner of his eyes.

Smiling as his laughter died away, he looked around but there were no other clues to where Harley was or had gone. Nothing. Jack stood there for a moment staring at the dead man before he stepped out and looked both ways.

“Which way would you go?” Jack whispered to himself, obviously not the way he had just come or else he would have seen her... After a moment he turned to his left and began moving carefully. As Jack crept along the tunnel, the shaft began to widen until it was wide enough for four people to walk abreast. The smell here was actually worse and water started dripping from the ceiling in heavier drops. Jack lost track of the time, but it had that feel of endless walking. He could see that the brick was changing...looking older, more moss covered.

The further Jack walked, the heavier the water that ran through the bricks overhead became, until there were places where the water came pouring down, like miniature waterfalls, pooling on the ground and running downward. The sound of running water was not comforting. Jack stopped and looked up at the ceiling. There were only one or two lights working along this section of tunnel; most of the lights were out and the one over his head looked like the bare bulb was full of water, dangerous.

“Hmm...under the river maybe?” Jack mused as he studied the ceiling. He glanced back over his shoulder the way he had come, but there was little light that way. Ahead he could see a couple of turns, some alcoves. Here and there the brickwork reminded Jack of some he had seen up above in the older sections of Gotham, late Victorian maybe.

He had just started to walk again when he saw shadows moving ahead of him. He heard a voice drifting down the tunnel toward him.

“Croc said to go bring the prisoners to the main arena area.” The voice was male, thin, reedy sounding.

“Why?” A voice...maybe female asked, though it's gruff tones could have been male.

“I don't know. I don't question Croc...maybe he's going to show them to his pets. I heard he was going to start sending body parts to Mr. Wayne if he didn't pay up on time.”

The man who had spoken before chuckled. “That sure would scare the pants off some rich boy and his girl.”

The female voice answered. “I thought he said after twenty-four hours...it ain't been that long has it?” There was a pause before the woman continued. “Croc's pets scare the shit out of me.”

“Well come on, we better go get them before Croc decides to use one of us to feed those things,” The reedy voice man answered.

Jack pushed himself back into an alcove when he heard the footsteps approaching. It was difficult to judge with any certainty, but by the footsteps Jack would guess that there were four of them coming this way. Jack pressed himself against the wall, letting the shadows drop over him. He held his breath and remained absolutely still.

Jack watched the group come into his view; two men, two women. They walked past him without noticing him, too busy talking among themselves. All of them were dirty, raggedy, but with that feral, hungry look that said they would tear anyone apart they needed to in order to survive. Jack narrowed his eyes watching from the shadows as they walked by...go after them or head toward Croc? Except he couldn't be sure of Croc's location...a guide would be helpful. Jack turned toward the “minions” making their way down the tunnel. And he smiled. The fact that they were coming for him and Harley meant that Croc didn't have her.

Jack pressed his lips together to suppress a giggle as he stepped out from the shadows to follow the four. He didn't need all of them—just one.

“I don't know why we have to go get that rich bitch and that millionaire brat,” one of the men muttered. This one sounded like a whiner, his voice high-pitched as if his voice had never gone through the adolescent change to a deeper tone. He was stomping, making enough noise that even if Jack hadn't been moving quietly, there was no way any of them could have heard him over the stomping and splashing of that one man. This guy was tall with an average physique, sported a buzzed haircut, the kind of cut that immediately yelled “asshole.” The asshole wore torn jeans and a leather jacket with patches sewn all over it. He wore two big hooped earrings and a chained nose ring that hooked from his nose ring to his left ear. The woman he was complaining to had short pink hair, wore shorts and combat boots along with an anarchy t-shirt. She had a knife she was flipping nervously in her hand.

“Shut up Joey,” she muttered.

The other man walking with them, the one who had been speaking when Jack first heard their group, laughed.

“Yeah Joey, shut up.” This one grinned sideways at Joey showing off two missing front teeth. “That blonde is kinda a cute...I might ask Croc to let me have a go at her.”

Joey snorted. “Lucky, you ain't that lucky. Besides, you ain't going to ask Croc anything—you're too chicken shit!”

Joey started to make chicken noises.

The woman next to him, short, brunette with a lopsided bob, her face pockmarked (Jack couldn't be sure, but he would hazard a guess that she was a drug addict...and by the look of her face, meth), pale and homely, dressed all in black, fishnets, motorcycle boots, shorts and a tank top all of which made her look even paler and sickly, punched Joey in the shoulder. She laughed, showing off rows of rotted teeth.

“Shut up Joey.”

“Make me Lucille.” Joey sneered as he rubbed his shoulder.

“All of you—shut up.” The pink haired woman stopped and glared at the three of them.

“Sorry Angel,” the three said together.

The one called Angel snorted. “Let's just go get them and bring them to Croc. Then Croc said we could eat. I'm starved.”

The four started again, moving along quieter with Angel in the lead. Jack had stepped back into the shadows, watching them with narrowed eyes and a slight smile. This is going to be fun, Jack thought. The smile that danced across his face was the smile of a man who planned to be covered in blood soon...

The group walked slowly, occasionally speaking still, though much quieter now. Jack could tell by the way they were staying relatively close to each other that they were uncomfortable here in the sewers even if their movements betrayed a familiarity with their surroundings. He noticed none of them commented on the fact that the lights were on. Maybe they expected it?

Jack stayed in the darkness, moved quietly along behind the group and kept out of the pools of light, his steps taken with care as he walked. Once or twice he made a slight misstep that caused a pebble to skitter across the floor or a tiny splash of water. But if one of them stopped, saying something about hearing something or other, the rest of the group of laughed and made fun of the worrier. Jack grinned; their own fear was working to his advantage. Just as Jack hoped, one of the group slowed, dragging behind...not staying with the group. It was the meth-head...

Jack smiled as he saw his opportunity. He slipped up behind the straggler...the woman named Lucille. She had made the fatal mistake of stopping to light a cigarette. She had just finished getting the flame on her lighter to catch the cigarette, when Jack moved up behind her. He was taller, healthier, stronger, deadlier—despite his current ordeal—and determined to find his Harley. He wrapped one hand over her mouth, shoving the burning cigarette past her lips, smashing it against her teeth and into her mouth, ignoring the burn of the end against his one palm. She made a choking noise, but Jack cut the sound off swiftly, his fingers pressing down on her cheek, his thumb pressing hard against the other side of her face as he held her mouth closed.

Jack's other arm went around her neck locking his fingers against his shoulder creating an unbreakable lock. Jack stepped backwards, lifting her up off her feet. She struggled, her hands digging at his arms and her feet kicking, but he ignored her struggling and simply carried her by her neck as he slipped into the darkness. Once he had stepped away from the group, who were continuing to walk away from him and his victim, unaware that she was missing, Jack pressed his back against the wall, hidden in the shadows. He held her tight against his body, bringing his thumb and forefinger up to hold her nose, his hand still covering her mouth.

Jack leaned against the wall, smiling while he choked the life out of her. He didn't move, holding himself still while she struggled; the only effort Jack showed was in the twitch of his facial muscles and the occasional tremor of his arms. Her efforts to break free were growing less and less frantic. Jack kept his position, holding the woman against him as she slowly stopped fighting, watching her friends turn around a corner. Jack giggled in her ear. “There, there, just let go...let me tell you a poem from Keats...

Jack's voice was smooth, gentle, his lips against her ear like a lover's kiss...

“O soft embalmer of the still midnight,

Shutting, with careful fingers and benign,

Our gloom-pleas'd eyes, embower'd from the light,
Enshaded in forgetfulness divine:
O soothest Sleep! if so it please thee, close
In midst of this thine hymn my willing eyes,
Or wait the "Amen," ere thy poppy throws
Around my bed its lulling charities.
Then save me, or the passed day will shine
Upon my pillow, breeding many woes,—
Save me from curious Conscience, that still lords
Its strength for darkness, burrowing like a mole;
Turn the key deftly in the oiled wards,
And seal the hushed Casket of my Soul.
It only took fifteen seconds for her to lose consciousness, then Jack started to count mentally to himself, his arms trembling only slightly from the pressure he maintained.

“One-one thousand, two-one thousand...” he smiled while he counted, feeling the change as she started to struggled again, her body deprived of oxygen, convulsed, her hands grabbing desperately at his arm around her throat, though Jack was sure she wasn't truly voluntarily reacting...just her body's last effort to survive. He held her there until he finished counting, a complete two minutes had passed before he stepped down from the wall and eased her into one of several alcoves that provided darker shadows to hide her body. Jack searched her pockets, coming up with a switchblade. He grinned like it was Christmas morning, pushing the switch with his thumb, the blade popping out. Jack laughed.

“I bet you forgot you had this didn't you? Oh this is perfect! Thank you.”
Slipping the knife into one of his pockets, Jack moved her around, so that her legs her bent and her head rested against her knees. At first sight she looked to be sleeping. Jack grinned and patted her head before he turned and walked causally after the others.
Harley shivered. The cold and wet were making it harder and harder for her to move. She wanted to just stop and make herself small to try and conserve what little heat she had, but she kept moving instead. She was hoping she would find Jack, or a way out where she could go for help, but the tunnels seemed to move and twist endlessly in the darkness.

She turned into an archway and stepped through to find herself in a large room with a domed ceiling. Harley stood with her mouth hanging open as she looked around. The size of the place, tucked underground like this, was disorienting. She seemed to be standing on a balcony of some sort. There were several ways to get into this room; the large circle had at least four different entrances that she could see from her position on the balcony.

Harley frowned in confusion. This didn't look like part of a sewer system at all! If she were going to take a guess, she would say it looked like part of a subway instead, and as she walked further in she could even see the remains of rails down on the floor below her. As she looked closer at the ceiling there looked to be the remains of tiles...like for a mosaic!

The floor of the room was covered in a thin film of water, with piles of broken bricks and other debris littered around the room. Whoever had turned on the lights had turned them on in here too, providing a safer route for her to walk around the balcony that circled the room. She could see some of the safety blockades, metal pipes and other various debris. But along with the remains of a mosaic on the ceiling she could see, under the grime what might have been painting, a mural on the walls.

Harley finally located some stairs that led down into the room. She took them quickly, hopping down the stairs two at a time. When she arrived at the bottom of the stairs, she heard something moving down here. She turned around and her eyes went wide as two shadows emerged from one of the tunnels.

Jack smiled to himself, taking a few silent steps as if he were dancing, a hand to his chest, his other hand out as his waist weaved to a song only he could hear. He made his way closer to the man named Lucky. Jack had to swallow down his laugh. Lucky wasn't so lucky since he was the next person to die!

Lucky stopped and leaned against the wall of the tunnel.

“Come on Angel, can't we stop for a minute? I need a cig.”

Angel kept walking. “Lucky, stop whining and come on.”

Angel and Joey kept walking while Lucky continued to lean against the wall and muttered just above a whisper, “Stop whining...blah blah...”

Jack leaned against the wall right next to Lucky. “Yes Lucky, stop whining—it isn't becoming.”

Lucky's eyes widened as he turned to stare at Jack just as Jack brought the switchblade up and let the light catch the blade for a moment. In less than a heartbeat, the taller man's arm snapped out in several quick thrusts; Jack shoved the blade into Lucky's gut, one, two, three, four, five times. Lucky made a gurgling sound and started to slip down the wall. Jack shoved the blade into the man's stomach again and ripped it upward as he smiled and opened Lucky's abdomen as if Jack were gutting a fish.

“You know...here's a hard life lesson for you Lucky. A hard life and death lesson really...not that you have much time to enjoy the knowledge—an epiphany in a minute!!” Jack laughed softly and leaned in close as Lucky stared at Jack in horror. The dying man's mouth moved, but the only sound coming from Lucky's mouth was the soft gurgle of blood bubbling past his lips and running from his mouth down his chin.

“You really should pick better friends Lucky. I mean...seriously...look at them,” Jack said with a glance in the direction that Angel and Joey were walking. “They didn't even turn around to check on you. Such a shame...”

Jack yanked the knife out of the other man's gut and watched Lucky slip to the floor with blood leaking from the side of the man's mouth. He continued to stare in horror at Jack, the light behind his eyes gradually fading away. Jack grinned brightly just before the blade slashed out to slice Lucky's throat open, a curtain of blood running down the man's front. A few drops splashed against Jack's already soiled suit. Jack reached forward to search Lucky's pockets before he pulled out the pack of cigarettes. Jack searched again and came back with Lucky's lighter.

Jack smiled at the dying man. “Sorry, seemed to have lost mine somewhere.”

Lucky's eyes were still on Jack while he thumped out a cigarette, stuck it between his lips; the cigarette was stained with Lucky's blood as Jack flicked the lighter on and held it to the cigarette. He grinned as he lit it and took a long pull on the burning stick, then grinned down at Lucky.

“You know...you guys all brought this on yourselves. Taking me is one thing, but you took my girl. Can't let that stand.”

Jack stood and blew out a trail of smoke in the direction that Lucky's friends had gone. The last thing Lucky heard as he bled to death was Jack hushed, but sensual voice singing in a whisper as he walked away.

“If I didn't care more than words can say
If I didn't care, would I feel this way?
If this isn't love then why do I thrill?
And what makes my head go 'round and 'round
While my heart stands still?
If I didn't care, would it be the same?
Would my every prayer begin and end with just your name?
And would I be sure that this is love beyond compare?
Would all this be true if I didn't care for you?...”

Batman stopped and cocked his head at the sound. He couldn't be sure, but he thought he heard a woman's voice and then he could have sworn he heard...singing? Jack? It sounded like Jack, but in these tunnels it was difficult to discern anything with clarity. He brought up his map...then snarled in frustration and hit his earpiece. “Alfred.”

“Yes sir?”

“I need a map of the old railway stations that used to run through Gotham. I'm thinking these sewers connect to those old tracks. I keep finding tunnels not connected to the sewer. By the architecture I'm thinking this is late 1870's brick work...maybe a little later.”

“I'm on it Master Bruce. Any luck?”

Batman sighed. “Not yet but I think I just heard someone, going to check it out. Contact me when you have those blueprints.”

“Of course Master Bruce.”

Harley's eyes widened as the sound of steps came closer. She turned toward where she thought the sound was coming, realizing that the sounds were accompanied by the forming of shadows in one of the four entryways into the room. She ran across the room, dived into a pile of rubble and tried to make herself as small as possible. She dug herself quickly into the pile, hiding among the remains of bricks, tiles and just as she moved her head to the side, she realized that there were skeletons in the pile. Animal skeletons, and...human, she realized in shock. Human skeletons? Harley's eyes widened when she realized she was staring into the empty sockets of a skull...a human skull. She bit down hard on her bottom lip to prevent herself from making a sound as she realized what else was mixed in with this pile of trash.

There were other things she soon discovered; bits of meat, soda cans, take-out cartons, bottles and others bits and pieces of trash she couldn't identify mixed in the pile. Harley shuddered in revulsion. She had to press her lips together as the urge to vomit raced up her throat and burned the back of her mouth. She adjusted her position carefully, finding a spot where she could look into the main area. Two men—both average...nothing special—had entered to chamber, but they were both armed. Harley narrowed her eyes as she followed their movements. She could see that one of them was armed with a pistol which he carried in the back of his pants—not easy for him to get to if she moved quickly. The other man had a what looked like a bowie knife strapped to his thigh...she couldn't be sure from her vantage point, however.

Harley took a deep breath through her nose. On one hand she was relieved...neither of these men were Croc, but as she narrowed her eyes with hatred, she realized the one with the knife...he looked familiar. Harley frowned as she remembered. She had been grabbed from behind. She had twisted her head only catching a glimpse of her attacker before the other man had shot her full of something that knocked her out...the one with the knife—he was the one who grabbed her hair, who held her. And the other man...he might be the one with the syringe, but she couldn't be sure. Not that it mattered. Harley felt that dark, angry thing inside her twist and shudder. The thing that was happy that Jack had killed her step-father, that had taken joy in the violence...in killing that man who wanted to use her...and now...she knew that thing in her...that darkness wanted to kill these two men for what they had done to her and Jack. Harley closed her eyes as a spike of intense emotion bubbled up. Jack. Oh God, where was Jack? She needed to find him and one of these men might know where he was. Harley watched as the two men stepped further into the room; they were close enough now that she could hear their conversation.

“Croc is going to bring them here? Why?” the man with the knife asked. His accent was thick; he wasn't from Gotham, Star City maybe. He was taller than Harley, but not as tall as Jack or Bruce. He had muscles, but not the kind of guy who went to the gym. The other man was similarly built with greasy black hair and the kind of face that made Harley want to break his nose.

“Croc wants to tease them,” the other explained. “He is going to bring his pets in...do a bit of the “super villain” scare tactics for fun.” The man with the dark hair laughed. “It'll be fun!”

“I don't know....” The man with the knife rubbed the back of his neck, but his friend elbowed him in the side.

“Don't be getting soft.” The other man chuckled.

The two men had just made their way closer to where Harley was hidden. She knew she didn't have a lot of time to make a move before they were out of her reach...

Harley popped up from her hiding spot, her pipe in her hand held like a baseball bat. She slammed the pipe into the lower back of the man with the gun first, holding the pipe low and putting all her strength behind the swing. She then raised the pipe up, her teeth together in a growl, her fingers already aching with how hard she was holding onto her pipe as she hit him hard across the back of the head. Blood blossomed on the back of his head before the man staggered and dropped.

The other man shouted in surprise and anger as he pulled his knife from his thigh sheath, but Harley shouted and swung her pipe at his hand, cracking his wrist. The bones made an actual snapping sound from the impact before she leapt over a large block of cement, her makeshift bat over her head as she screamed, bringing down the pipe on the man's shoulder. The guy with the gun had risen to his feet, staggering a bit, looking slightly disoriented, but he pulled his pistol out and raised his arm. Harley saw him from the corner of her eye. She twisted around gracefully and swung her pipe like she was about to hit a baseball, but instead the pipe slammed into the gunman's chest, knocking the air from his lungs and cracking his breast bone with the power behind her blow.

He stumbled backwards with a gasp of exhaled air from the strike Harley delivered. She laughed as she ran at him, swung her pipe low and smashed him across the knee, breaking the gunman's kneecap with a loud crack that echoed off the walls of the old room. She then snapped the pipe up, catching him under the chin, shattered his jaw, teeth, a spray of blood bursting from his mouth before he fell backwards and dropped the gun. Harley spun around on the balls of her feet, giggling madly and swinging her pipe already at the other man.

The man with the knife tried to take a stab at her in a desperate attempt to get under her guard, but Harley was moving in a dance of death, her pretty face covered in dirt, grime and now splatters of blood; the grin on her face would make Jack proud. Her bat swung left, slamming her attacker across the face, then right, then back again. Harley laughed loudly as she swung her club, back and forth, four times, smashing the man's face and turning it into a bloody mess, unrecognizable by the time she stopped and his body dropped to the floor. Droplets of blood had splattered against her face, against her soiled red dress, but she didn't care; she didn't care when she tasted the blood on her lips, or the sweat dripping down her brow. All she cared about was that this man stopped moving.

Harley was panting, breathing hard through her teeth, her giggles slowly dying down. Her whole body was trembling, the pipe feeling slippery in her hands.

She growled. “No one—no one touches me but Jack. Ever!”

That was when she heard the sound of applause. “You really are a spitfire, ain'tcha?”

Harley turned to see Croc standing in the archway, two large crocodiles at his side on chains that he had wrapped around each large, scaly fist. Behind him were four more of his gang, all of them armed. Croc grinned. “Take her boys.”

Jack smiled serenely, following behind Joey and Angel, the two of them blissfully unaware that their friends were no longer behind them. Joey had looked back once and Jack, staying in the shadows had waved. Joey had simply grunted, with a quick wave back and a shrug before continuing on.

Jack started to hum as he made his way closer to Joey. If Joey thought anything was strange about one of his companions humming, he gave no indication.

Joey stopped for a moment to lean against the wall. “Angel, I think you took a wrong turn. I'm pretty sure we're lost.”

Angel, whose voice seemed to drift from further away snapped back. “I know where I'm going Joey, just shut up.”
Jack moved out of the darkness so quickly that Joey didn't have a chance to make any sound before Jack had grabbed the back of Joey's neck, the switchblade pressed between Joey's lips so far that the blade scraped against his front teeth. Jack smiled whispering. “Why so serious Joey? Mmmm?”

Jack wrinkled his nose with a sincere smile. Joey stared back at him, his eyes wide to the point that the whites glowed in the dim light. Jack grinned. “Let's put a smile on that face.”

Jack ground his teeth in a vicious smile and dragged the knife up one side of Joey's face, then, twisted his wrist elegantly, he slashed the other side before he winked at Joey, and moved the blade across Joey's throat, cutting off the cry that had just started to erupt from the man.

Angel frowned when she arrived at the cell where the woman was supposedly be kept. She peered inside, both hands on her hips, narrowing her eyes trying to see. She thought she saw a shadow of a body floating and bobbing in the water, but whatever it was, was at the back of the cell just out of reach of the light.

“Joey? Come look at this! I can't tell what it is.”

She felt Joey walk up beside her and Angel pointed. “That...”

But she didn't get a chance to finish her sentence when the shadow that she thought was Joey standing next to her formed into someone else. Jack dropped his arm around Angel's shoulders, his weight leaning against her, a bloody knife in his hand dangling easily from bloody fingers, casually almost, while Jack leaned against her.

“You know Angel. I knew who I was this morning, but, I've changed a few times since then.”

Jack grinned at her. Angel had gone very still, turning just enough to look at him. She recognized Jack Wayne, not just from the kidnapping, but she had seen his face plenty of times lately in the paper. Croc had showed them all his picture, talking about easy money and soft rich boys. Yet here he was with a bloody knife that she thought might be Lucille's blade. The handle...maybe...Angel started to shift her weight from one foot to the other, her hand moving gradually, but Jack felt the shift. Quickly he adjusted his hold on the blade, turning its point toward Angel. If the blade was not enough to halt her, the look in Jack Wayne's eyes did.

“No, no, no—we can't have that now can we? I need your help my dear. See, I'm looking for my girl AND you are going to take me to Croc to see if he knows where she is.” Jack smiled pleasantly and turned Angel around the way that they had come. For a moment, at the edge of the circle of light, Angel could see a slowly spreading pool of blood, mixing with the water on the floor. Her heart stopped as she whispered, “Yer crazy.”

Jack chuckled. “I believe it was Philip K. Dick who said, 'It is sometimes an appropriate response to reality to go insane.' And reality has always made me a touch...crazy. Besides sweetheart, we're dealing with a giant crocodile man. I think reality has little bearing on this situation.” Jack laughed softly. “Insanity aside... we find ourselves in hell and I am sure my girl has gone deeper. So...lead me to where the crocodile sits at the center of this labyrinth so that I can find her and you just might live through tonight.”

Jack gave her shoulder a squeeze and started to push her forward, but not before he disarmed her, taking away her knife she had tried to reach for and, after a quick search, he also removed her lighter and a pocket knife.
“All right, let's go,” Jack said pleasantly as if she were taking him on a tour. He giggled softly and recited in a sing-song voice that had Angel's blood running colder than the times she had seen Croc take a bite out of someone.

Jack whispered:

“How doth the little crocodile
Improve his shining tail,
And pour the waters of the Nile
On every golden scale!
How cheerfully he seems to grin,
How neatly spreads his claws,
And welcomes little fishes in,
With gently smiling jaws!

Jack laughed as he held onto Angel's shoulder. “Don't you just love Lewis Carroll?”

Batman received the map of the old rail system from Alfred after only twenty minutes. The man was a genius when it came to research. Bruce smiled. There was no way he could be Batman without Alfred backing him up.

Batman gave the blueprints a quick study. They showed a vast system of 'caverns' and rails, but as Batman was quickly learning, there were unmarked doors, storm drains, and places where tunnels had collapsed, filling in the sections with impenetrable debris. But, with the help of the maps and blueprints Alfred had discovered, Batman was finally making headway toward what he suspected was the center. According to the blueprints, the center looked to be an old station, with four main entrances, though there also seemed to be a few smaller ways into the same large area. He didn't appear to be too far away from one of the entrances. He was hoping that Croc might be located at the center...it would make sense, being the biggest open space down here.

While Batman moved quietly, he paused when he heard voices. He stopped and listened; up ahead, the voices echoed, but he had a clearer idea of where the source of the sound was coming from...

“So you got yourself free, little girl.” Croc chuckled. He had Harley tied up in such a way she looked almost as if she were caught in a spiderweb. She was hanging upside down, her long blonde hair dusting the floor of the vast cavern they were in, her dress indecently hanging upside down, but the ropes had stopped it from showing more than her bike shorts she wore under the dress. He had tied her right next to the trash pile of bones and other remains. His two pet crocodiles rested, unmoving nearby. Waylon grabbed her hair forced her head up, though her blue eyes blazed with hate.

“Killed two of my men. Pretty good for a rich boy's girlfriend. Though I get testy when my people get killed.” Waylon flexed his claws, the tips of which scraped against her scalp painfully. “But lucky you. You still got time...and I want the money more than I want to eat you.”
Harley glared at him then sweetly, her voice a singsong...

“Never smile at a crocodile
No, you can't get friendly with a crocodile
Don't be taken in by his welcome grin
He's imagining how well you'd fit within his skin.

Waylon snarled at her, letting go of Harley's head which caused her to swing back against the brick wall. She winced when the back of her head bounced against the hard surface.

“Yer not funny girlie,” Croc hissed between sharp teeth.

“I don't know. I think I'm pretty hilarious.” Harley grinned.

Harley swung a little bit as she giggled. “You know, I have a PhD. I could help you. I mean clearly you have issues...eating people? In my expert opinion, you have EDNOS or you're a binge eater. It could also be that you're trying to consume to be human...you know like if you eat enough people it will make you human. I hate to tell you this...it don't work that way big guy.”

She grinned widely. “You clearly have some issues...kidnapping? And from the look at your pile over there, not just cannibalism, probably murder...unless you're a necrophiliac on top of everything. So I would also diagnose you with impulse control issues and maybe a good dose of schizophrenia...” Harley giggled again.

Croc snarled. “SHUT UP!” He backhanded her causing her body to swing back, slamming against the brick wall harder this time.

That was the moment that Batman came rushing into the room from above. He leaped over the side of the balcony and landed in a crouch, looking menacing in his black armored attire. “ENOUGH! Let her go Croc!”

At that same moment that Batman landed on the floor of the chamber, Jack came racing from one of the four main entrances, holding onto his captive by her hair. Angel, a knife to her neck started to try to pull away from Jack, but he yanked her backwards, releasing her hair to wrap his arm around her shoulders, yanking her against his chest. He narrowed his eyes at Croc and Batman.

“Let my Harley go or I will kill her.” He smiled sweetly, blood staining his lips and teeth. To emphasize his point, Jack pressed his blade to Angel's throat.
Much Madness is divinest Sense

For a moment, no one moved. It was as if all the air had been sucked from the room; time had stopped moving. Everyone looked at everyone else. Batman's gaze rested for a long moment on his little brother, whose face had blood on it. The eyeliner that had surrounded his eyes earlier than evening was now smeared in dark circles around his eyes, the red that had been on his lips was stained redder by blood and smeared across his chin and up one side of his mouth. The look on Jack's face made his stomach roil and his blood run cold. Jack had an odd, crazed gleam in his eyes that reminded Bruce of the way Jack had looked when he was younger, when Jack had problems...

Jack saw Harley hanging upside down, tied up like a piece of meat. He could see the beating she had taken reflected in the bruises and bloodstains on her face. Jack felt something in him spread, as if the darkness inside him that had been leaking out found a hole and flooded through him. Jack smiled and showed off his perfect teeth, seemingly out of place on his blood and make-up stained face.

Harley only had eyes for Jack; when she saw him her heart slammed inside her chest and her breathing picked up. He was the most beautiful thing in the room and he was here, alive...

Harley was the one to break the silence when she yelled, “JACK!”

Batman's gaze turned to Harley and then back to Jack. “Let the woman go,” he said to Croc and his gang. Then, “Mr. Wayne, we can do this without bloodshed.”

Jack looked at Batman and tilted his head to the side as if he didn't understand English.

“I don't know Bats—can I call you Bats? Or Batsy! That's even better!! Anyway, I don't really see any way out of this without some bloodshed. Do you?” He smiled at Batman and tightened his hold on Angel, the knife drawing a thin line of blood along her throat.

Croc snarled. “Kill the Bat! And get me Jack Wayne! ALIVE!”

That was when there was an explosion of movement. Croc loosened his hold on the chains that he had held around his fists, released the crocodiles and with a clawed finger he pointed at Batman.

“Dinner time timoun! Go get him!”

To Batman's surprise the two creatures immediately made their way toward him, moving surprisingly fast with their owner close behind them.

The four men that had been in the room with Croc when Jack and Batman arrived were each armed with some sort of weapon; two of the men, a ginger-head man and another with a shaved head, each held a couple of knives, another held a baseball bat over his shoulder and the last man had a couple of clawed hammers that he was flipping and catching by the handles with a grin on his ugly face. They moved toward Jack, spreading out as they walked.

“Croc didn't say ya had to be in one piece rich boy.” One of the men sneered. He had a shaved head and a fairly bushy mustache covering his upper lip. Jack grinned brightly as he pulled Angel tighter against him. Jack leaned close and giggled against her ear.

“I guess the next question dear, is how much do they care about your well-being?”
Angel's eyes darted back and forth, following their movements as they approached her and Jack. Angel felt the bottom of her stomach fall out and her bottom lip trembled. It was clear from the looks in their eyes that her safety was not their concern, she wasn't so sure her “pals” cared if this mad man killed her or not.

The small group of four spread out to flank Jack, trying to back him against a wall and take away any maneuvering room he had, but they were being obvious, which was rather pitiful Jack thought. Jack smiled as he continued to hold his blade against Angel's throat, his other hand around her upper arm, though he was fairly confident she was going to try to break free at any moment. His fingers dug into her biceps painfully as he slowly walked backward, letting them corner him, his blue eyes darting to each man carefully keeping an eye on them as well as quickly calculating what moves he might make to kill each one.

Jack surmised he had two choices where Angel was concerned—let her go or kill her, but that first option meant he would be facing five instead of four attackers. Killing her was just too easy, not really any fun and definitely not a challenge. Jack decided to break even. He grinned at his attackers before he hissed in Angel's ear.

"Some angels are destined to fall, I'm afraid."

With that, Jack shoved Angel before him, stepping back to drop into a crouch, and in one smooth motion, he hamstrung one of her legs. The switchblade slashed through her thigh muscle easily with the force of Jack's arm behind the sharp weapon. Angel screamed as she pitched forward, the one now bloody leg giving out and sending her crashing into one of the four coming for Jack, a ginger-headed man with too many facial tattoos to be attractive and a long couple of wicked looking knives. He looked startled as Angel pitched forward into him. Luckily for Angel he had enough sense to grab for her with the one hand not holding a knife or else he would have skewered her.

Jack grinned, waving the bloody knife at the four men. “Ah look, perhaps chivalry is not dead! Okay boys, who's up first?”

The crocodiles moved surprisingly quickly, their short legs propelling them forward at an astonishing speed. Batman performed a back flip, managing to kick one of the animals in the snout, snapping its jaws closed just before he landed in a crouch. Bruce's eyes darted over to Jack, his heart pounding not for worry for himself, but for his baby brother. He was about to try to make a dash for his brother. (The worry about Jack killing anyone settled like a cold stone in Bruce's stomach...Jack's mental state was frail. Bruce could feel that fear like ice creeping through his veins, but he had to push those thoughts away, confine them. Right now he had to think about surviving this fight with his own life.) But his thoughts were shattered when his head snapped back with enough force that his neck cracked loudly and his saw stars before his eyes.

Croc's accent rolled out thicker as he chuckled having rushed Batman quicker than the vigilante had thought possible. The giant man caught him unawares, slamming his fist against the side of Bruce's head while Bruce's mind had been focused on his brother.

“My babies ain't the only crocodile ye get to play with ...Batman is it? Ain't that what the papers call you, the Masked Crusader or is it the freak with the wings? You know what they call me back home? They call me Killer Croc... Either way you're going to be my next meal. Never had bat before.”

Croc lunged at Batman, his jaws opened wide. His claws scraped across Batman's uniform, tearing the enforced fabric too easily, cutting into the flesh underneath. Batman hissed with pain; a minor wound really, but he would have to be at his best during this fight. He threw his arms wide to knock Croc's hands away as he stumbled backwards, but he managed to keep his footing.

Batman dropped both his hands to his belt as he tried to put some space between him and Croc and Croc's pets while at the same time reaching for the weapons he needed. The fingers of both hands brushed against the items at his belt that he was looking for, two specially made batons. The batons were held to his belt in such a fashion that he could easily break them away and extend them fully with little effort. His fingers finally gripped the two instruments and he yanked the two collapsible weapons free from his belt. The batons were special, designed to autolock at the moment he jerked his wrists; the weapons extended to their full length and locked into place. Each one had a urethane rubber tip over the hard ends that made a hit from them painful...bone breakingly painful for a normal person. Batman wasn't really sure the effect would be the same on a man-sized crocodile.

Batman snapped the batons out with a practiced gesture, making sure to keep them parallel to his thighs, close to his body. The two batons expanded at once while Batman twisted his body with the skill and grace of an experienced martial artist to avoid Croc's next slash while at the same time crossing the batons in front of him. Bruce turned as one of the crocodiles rushed him, bringing both batons down with solid strikes on the crocodile's open jaws. He then spun around swiftly as the other crocodile came in close, snapping its jaws at his calf. Batman swung the batons down in a quick double strike, a hard cross hit, two fast strikes on the other side of its jaws, and then another hard smack on the creature's snout with enough force that when the jaws snapped shut, several of the crocodile's teeth broke off with the power of Batman's hit.

Batman was about to turn toward Croc, but the hybrid came in fast. For a large man, Croc had a disquieting swiftness that kept surprising Batman, who didn't really expect the big man to move that quickly; he had thought the first time attack from Croc had only seemed quick because he was distracted. He had thought the initial burst of speed had been a one time thing...but apparently not. Croc's lunge forced Bruce to backpedal. Bruce hit the wall, but he pushed back, using the solid surface to lunge forward. He knew he couldn't let himself be pinned in a tight area with no room to maneuver.

Batman raced forward, taking quick hard steps, his booted feet planting hard on the ground, his arms a blur in front of him as his batons slashed down through the air with punishing force, hitting each of Waylon's grasping claws, forcing the two-legged crocodile to take several steps backwards or risk taking several more hard hits to the shoulders and torso.

Batman was doing his best to force Croc into the more maneuverable open area, but Croc surprised him again when the large man jumped at Batman. The crocodile man's whole body swung toward him, clawed feet slamming Batman in the chest, knocking the air from his lungs, but also knocking him to the ground.

Batman hit hard and rolled with the collision. Bright spots sparkled in his vision, but he managed to get on his feet just as the two crocodiles, in a sort of swift wobbling gait that might have been amusing if not for the fact they were both deadly, raced toward him. The prehistoric looking creatures crossed the ground with frightening speed. Batman launched himself up from the ground, kicking up to his feet, but the creatures were already close enough to take a bite out of him.

Harley started to struggle with all her strength—she had to help Jack! She swung a little more aggressively with her struggles, but Jack needed her. It was difficult, not just because she was bound up so tightly that she could feel the beat of her heart between the pull of the ropes around her legs, arms and torso, but also because she was hanging upside down. In addition to the blood rushing to her head, the swinging caused her vision to blur, which was slightly nauseating while she worked through the pain of trying to get her hands free. It became increasingly difficult for her to focus because her head was pounding painfully from hanging upside down for so long. She squeezed her eyes shut and focused on twisting her wrists back and forth, ignoring the way the ropes bit into her skin. Jack needed her. She could do this. She had to do this.

Jack grinned as he held his hands up in a close fighting stance, the knife held so that the blade was facing his forearm. He waggled his eyebrows at the four men who had just watched him hamstring their friend. He had glanced toward Harley once, his rage almost taking complete control of him, but he smiled and breathed through his nose. He would kill them all for what they had done, for hurting his girl, and especially for daring to even touch her.

Angel was crying, dragging herself across the ground between them, the ginger haired man having dropped her to face Jack. Jack noticed that none of them came to her aid.

Jack made a “Tsk Tsk” noise of shame watching her crawl away.

“Really? None of you are going to help her? Sad...very sad. Where is your chivalry?”

None of the men spoke, their attention on Jack.

Jack sighed and focused his attention on his adversaries. He winked at the man with the hammers.

“You wanna go first, handsome?”

The ginger elbowed his friend. “Go on Hammers, get him!”

Jack thought the man named Hammers was ugly...and that was being generous.

Jack laughed. “Hammers? Seriously? You guys really need to work on your nicknames...it's just sad.”

Hammers stepped away from his friends, spinning the hammers in his hands. He grinned, which as far as Jack was concerned, was really not something this Hammers guy should do a lot of...it was not a good smile. He had buck teeth, a couple of missing bottom teeth and greasy brown hair. He reminded Jack of a dog with mange.

Jack frowned with faked concern. “I have a very serious question for you...Hammers is it? What do you think of the human race? I mean as an outsider, what's your opinion?”

Hammers frowned, stopping in mid-stalk to stare at Jack. By the expression on his face, he clearly had no idea what Jack had just say. One of the men with a pair of knives started to laugh until one of his friends smacked him on the back of the head. “Shut up Steve, you asshole.”

Jack chuckled. “Ready Hammers?”

Hammers snarled. “I'm going to fuck you up rich boy!”

He raced toward Jack, who laughed.

Hammers swung his arms in a quick series of four slashes in the air, creating a sort of heavy swooshing noise with the backs of the hammers facing outward. Jack didn't move back, but instead he bent his knees, leaning backwards gracefully, the claws of the hammers gliding over Jack's face and chest. Jack leaned dangerously far backwards coming up on the balls of his feet. He giggled, immediately coming back up, holding the switchblade so that the blade was upside down and its length faced his arm. Jack lurched forward, making a few quick slashes, leading with his right leg. He brought his right arm around in a smooth curve, sweeping under Hammer's guard, the blade cutting into Hammers' side when the man tried to spin out of the way. Jack danced past him and turned around as if he were simply finishing a dance move. The cut on Hammers' side wasn't deep, just enough to make Hammers jump back with a hiss of pain.

Jack smiled just before he glided around behind Hammers moving with the grace of a dancer. Hammers just barely blocked the knife with one of his hammers, but Jack ducked down and slid the knife along the metal neck of the claw hammer hard enough that sparks flew just before the knife stopped in the claw of the hammer. He moved under his opponent's strike, twisting and forcing Hammer's arm to twist with him. Hammers turned just as Jack pulled his knife free, but the whole maneuver threw Hammers' balance off. Jack came forward again using his shoulder and head to duck in under Hammers' side, driving the other man back. Hammers growled as he brought his elbows down on Jack's back, once, twice, and a third time before Jack let go and jumped back out of reach. Jack simply grinned at Hammers.

“You know, I'm slightly impressed. But considering that you are probably not the sharpest tool in the shed I wouldn't get too excited about it Hammers.”

Hammers cursed. “You motherfucker!”

Jack giggled. “Oh now tsk tsk, we don't have to bring our mothers into this...especially considering mine is dead Hammers.” Jack's voice dropped to a deadly hiss.

Hammers rushed at Jack.

Jack brought his arms up blocking furious man's first two swings with his forearms, the metal handles of the hammers striking Jack's arms. It was painful; Jack's face twitched with pain, but other than that he gave no indication he felt anything else and it certainly didn't slow him down. He swung his arms out, forcing Hammer's arms wide. Jack chose that moment to lash out, the heel of his left hand striking Hammers in the chest with a powerful blow that shoved Hammers backwards. The strength Jack had in his slim frame was surprising to Hammers, who was further taken by surprise when Jack followed this move with a front snap kick, hard in the stomach that sent the man stumbling back into his friends.

The man holding the baseball cursed. “This is stupid! Come on Hammers!”

Jack laughed. “Let me guess, your name is Baseball? Or Ball or just plain stupid?”

The man with the bat snarled. “Shut up!”

The two men rushed at Jack who just laughed. Baseball (as Jack was thinking about him), lunged in and swung his bat at Jack's head. Jack ducked under the bat, bounced up and twisted, his left elbow crashing into the Baseball's nose, crushing it. The man hollered in pain as a flash flood of blood came from his nose. But Jack immediately twisted to the right, his blade slashing across the man's face slicing open his chin to the bone. Jack danced back, panting from the exertion of the fight and his ordeal, but he still smiled. Baseball gasped in pain as he backed away, one hand over his nose and chin both, trying to use his bat one handed just as Hammers came at Jack from behind. Jack dropped into a crouch, twisting around on the balls of his feet, his right leg snapping out at the last moment to slam the heel of his expensive shoes into Hammers shin. Hammers toppled with a yelp of pain.
“I'm tired of this,” Jack growled as he stood and glared down at Hammers. For a moment Hammers saw something far deadlier in Jack Wayne's eyes than he had ever seen in Croc's, and it scared him. But he only had a reprieve of two heartbeats before Jack jumped on him to bury the blade in Hammers' thigh.

The man screamed.

Jack giggled while panting and a bead of sweat ran down his forehead, but his smile was radiant.

“There you go Hammers...you get to bleed to death...I'm pretty sure I hit the artery.”

Baseball yelled, “You son of a bitch!!”

He ran at Jack with his bat held high over his head, ready to smash Jack's head to pulp. Jack mused while moving...apparently they were losing interest in keeping him alive.

Jack hopped to his feet and turned just as Baseball brought his bat down.

Harley worked furiously at her bonds. She could hear the sounds of fighting, but she knew if she opened her eyes she would be distracted or at worst, she would panic. Luckily her hands had been tied in front of her which made it easier for her to move them back and forth, working to loosen the rope. No one paid attention to her now, so Harley worked more vigorously at shifting her hands up and down, back and forth. The rope was rubbing against her skin, tearing away at her wrist, burning her skin, but she kept at it. When the ropes had started to grow slightly slack, she began to twist them back and forth even harder, crossing her wrists to the side. It hurt, burning so badly that she hissed with the pain, but she kept at it. She twisted and twisted and the burn was incredible. She brought her hands to her mouth grabbing onto the rope with her teeth; her body had began to swing back and forth while she worked causing her to swing dangerously close to the wall, but with her eyes closed she didn't notice. Her whole focus was on freeing herself so that she could get to Jack.

Batman swung his batons for what would be a finishing strike on most opponents, but Croc blocked them with his forearms; the weapons made a dull thudding sound against Croc's hide. If it had been any other man, those impacts would have broken their arms, but Croc only laughed.

“Going to take a lot more than a couple of sticks to put me down Bat-boy.”

One of the crocodiles took a snap at Batman; he was forced to move out of the way, but as he took a sidestep, a large scaled fist slammed into his face, splitting his lip when his attention was distracted by the potential bite. Bruce tasted the coppery flavor of blood in his mouth as he danced out of the way; the second pass missed him, but just barely. This fight was wearing him out, but Batman kept going, he had to—he was not going to die down here and neither was his brother.

Croc chuckled. “You ain't so tough.”

Batman bared his teeth against the pain in his jaw from the punch and swung two hard strikes from the side at Croc. One strike caught the mutated man against the side of his face causing a ringing in Croc's ear that had him wobbling to the side, but Batman hit him again on the other ear, then again on the previous side, a couple of quick chops that had Croc grabbing his head and trying to back way from Batman.

Batman then leapt up, spinning in the air while tucking his legs and holding the batons over his head.
He brought his batons down on either side of Croc's head, smashing them into his shoulders. Croc lashed out, one clawed hand hitting Batman in the chest and sending him flying backwards, but Croc had felt those hits.

The baseball bat caught Jack in the shoulder with a loud crack. Jack absorbed the pain and stumbled back a step. He hissed through his teeth as the shock of the blow vibrated through his shoulder and down his arm. For a moment he almost dropped the knife, his fingers going numb, the hit weakening his arm. Luckily the man's swing wasn't hard enough to break Jack's shoulder or dislocate it, but Jack would have a hefty bruise within a few hours. Jack rolled to his feet, panting, his eyes narrowed, and his hand holding the blade trembled with pain, but Jack smiled. His voice was a hiss between his teeth.

“You are really starting to piss me off Baseball. Be a dear and just fuck off.”

Baseball's eyes widened in surprise...that was not the reaction he was expecting. He was expecting Jack to go down, to be whimpering in pain. For a moment he had no idea how to react to someone who didn't respond like he expected.

So instead he stuttered, “M-m-my n-name's Jake.”

(The ginger and Steve were both watching the fight with the confused look of two men not sure if they should help or get the hell out of there.)

Jack grinned widely as he wiped the back of his hand across his mouth, a smear of blood left a streak across Jack's hand. “Well, Jake...I'm afraid I'm going to have to kill you.”

“That's it! I don't care what Croc wants! Kill him!!” the ginger yelled.

The ginger and Steve held their knives at the ready, (both of them clearly having little experience with knives because they were holding them all wrong, Jack noted) came at Jack in a rush. Jack managed to back away from the first couple of wild slashes from both men. The one named Steve lunged at Jack again, slashing wildly. One of the slashes, more by accident than by design, connected. The knife cut across Jack's side, ripped through cloth and bit into flesh. Jack felt the warm spread of blood and the burn of the cut, but he again he didn't react like most people would under similar circumstances; instead he smiled wider.

Jake took a swing with his bat again, trying to knock Jack's legs out from under him, but Jack—despite his mounting wounds and fatigue—kicked up, hitting Jake's bat, causing the wooden bat to miss and for Jake's arm to jerk upward. At the same time, Jack slashed with his own knife, cutting across the forearm of the ginger opening a wide gash. Jack was panting from exhaustion, but he was grinning wildly, dancing under the guard of the man named Steve. Steve had a thick, almost military style flattop and was carrying a huge Bowie knife...but clearly he had no idea how to use the knife properly. Steve held it wrong, trying to stab at Jack with it. Jack smirked, hopping a bit on his left leg, he quickly brought his right leg up, pivoted to the side, his foot snapping out and striking the man in the throat. His attacker dropped his knife and grabbed at his throat gasping and choking for air.

Jack couldn't help the laugh that bubbled up, seeing that. “Yeah, those are handmade Sutor Mantellassi shoes! Almost three thousand dollars a pair and worth every penny!”

Jake took a another swing at Jack. The bat swung through the air with a heavy 'whoosh,' but Jack ducked under the bat. He popped up immediately, hopping lightly on his feet, taking a fighting stance. He kept his blade in his right fist, his arms close to his body. Jack winked at Jake just before he twisted, bringing his back leg around and jumping up with the opposite leg to kick Jake in the chest, sending him flying to land in a heap of rubble on his back.

Jack chuckled. “Yeah, I'm going to have to get another pair of these shoes.”

The ginger was the last man standing.

He snarled, “Fuck this,” as he pulled out a gun and shot at Jack.

Harley gasped when her hands came free. She swung wildly as her hands snapped loose, her body twisting in a circle, but right now she was thankful for her gymnastics skills which allowed her to have the strength to curl upwards. Her fingers began the hard work of trying to loosen the ropes that held her upside down.

Bruce glanced to his brother at the very moment he saw the man shoot Jack with a smart sounding “bang bang” noise as the gun fired. The younger Wayne brother jerked to the left, then as Jack went down, the man shot him again. Bruce saw Jack collapse on the floor as Harley screamed.

Forgetting everything, Bruce started to go to his brother yelling. “JACK!”

Croc turned at the sound of a gunshots and yelled. “NO, YOU FUCKER!!!”

Croc twisted back to face Batman when he saw his meal ticket fall to the ground. He snarled at Batman and took a vicious swipe, not intended to kill. Instead the swipe slapped the Batman across the side of his head, knocking his face to the side. Batman felt the displacement of air, turned at the last moment back toward Croc, avoiding the claws cutting toward his face, but the swipe was still strong enough to knock Batman off his feet and send him flying across the floor to slam into a pile of debris.

Croc snarled in angry frustration just before he took off with a shrill whistle. The two crocodiles turned at the sound and moved swiftly, following their master as Croc vanished down one of the tunnels. The ginger who had shot Jack Wayne looked panicked and followed Croc, disappearing down the sewer with the one named Steve following close behind.

Harley had dropped free from her ropes at the same time the crack of the gunshots echoed off the walls of the enclosed chamber. She hit the ground hard, knocking the air from her lungs in a painful exhalation. She rolled onto her side, facing toward Jack at the moment the man shot him. Her scream was wrenched from her lungs when she saw Jack fall.

She forced herself to her feet, limping and stumbling, gasping for air, but she had to get over to him. Tears were falling from her eyes, but she wasn't aware of them when she finally arrived at Jack's side and dropped to her knees. “Jack! JACK!!”

He lay on his side, his eyes open with a smile on his face. Harley rolled him onto his back where she could see one gunshot wound that had ripped through his clothing at his left shoulder—he red stain was spreading, the fabric of his shirt soaking up the blood. She started to tear the cloth aside to see the extent of the damage.
Jack reached up to cup her face. “Harley. Harley, I thought I had lost you...” His thumb stroked across her lips. She smiled sadly and closed her eyes for a moment. “I thought I had lost you too.”

Jack chuckled weakly. “Still want to marry me?”

Harley giggled softly at his words. “More than ever. You need me. Look at all the trouble you get into.”

Jack chuckled again, but he winced in pain when he started to move, trying to sit up.

“Stay still,” Harley ordered. “Let me look at it.” She looked down at him, examining the wound. She was a doctor and had gone through the proper medical training, but her residency had not involved dealing with gunshot wounds. Still, she recalled that applying pressure to the wound to stop the bleeding was the first step. It did look as if the bullet had gone clean through the meaty part of Jack’s shoulder however, and from the level of blood loss and placement of the wound, his artery had not been struck. She didn't see a second bullet wound, just the one.

Jack growled and started to push himself up. “Did they hurt you?”

“Jack I'm fine—just—please stop moving,” Harley pleaded.

Jack started laughing then. “It's a flesh wound Harley. Even that close of a range, he only hit me the once, then that idiot missed?” Jack snorted in amusement. “How does anyone miss at that range?!”

Harley swallowed wiping her eyes with the back of her hands. “Jack, it's not funny!”

“I don't know sweets...It kinda is.” Jack grinned at her then, his eyes bright despite everything. Harley shook her head and cradled his head on her lap; then she kissed him.

Batman staggered over to Jack and Harley and dropped heavily into a crouch. “How bad is it?”

Harley brushed one more kiss against Jack's lips. “It looks like a flesh wound. Jack says he was only hit once.”

Batman nodded, his tone neutral. “All right. Can you both walk?”

They both nodded, though Harley carefully helped Jack to his feet. Batman frowned as he stood up. He went to check on the woman, unconscious, hamstrung. The other man had been stabbed in the thigh and was losing a lot of blood quickly. Batman hurriedly went to the man and did what he could to stop the bleeding, tying off the man's leg. The one with the baseball bat was out cold. It looked like they would all live.

“Let's get you two to the surface and call the police.”

Jack frowned as he studied Batman before he finally spoke again. “I guess...thank yous are in order.”

Batman shook his head. “No need—just doing my job.”

Jack narrowed his eyes. Something about the man was...somehow familiar, but he just couldn't put his finger on what it was right now.

The next couple of hours were a blur. Batman had contacted someone on the way out of the sewers and when they arrived at the surface, police and EMT’s were waiting for them. Jack and Harley were led over to one of the ambulances, the two of them refusing to be separated. Batman led a group of police into the sewers to recover the woman Angel, the man Hammers, the man named Jake and the young man who Jack had blinded in one eye...the only bodies recovered came from Croc's debris pile but no other bodies were found nor mentioned. (Batman had neither discovered Harley's kills nor had he found the others that Jack had killed...the bodies lost in the maze of tunnels that made up the Gotham underground. Any bodies in Croc's trash pile had no direct connection to Jack or Harley...or at least the GCPD did not pursue further than to think Croc had a few fresh meals waiting for him, Jack and Harley would later discover.)

Statements were taken and the two of them were rushed off to the hospital.

The morning sun shone into Jack's hospital room. The room was an expensive private hospital room with a large picture window that looked out onto the Gotham skyline. The walls were painted in a soft blue instead of the dull white of most hospital rooms, giving the room a more inviting feel. The room also came with a large flat screen TV on the wall and several comfortable chairs for visitors, and even a desk.

Jack sat up in bed and watched the sunrise from the window of his hospital room. He had his head leaned back against the pillows and soft, warm blankets lay across his legs. He had been cleaned up and sewed up, a bandage across his shoulder over the bullet wound, both his wrists wrapped up, stitches and another bandage along his side, and a few tiny stitches on the cuts to his face from Killer Croc (that was what he had overhead one of the nurses call the monster that had kidnapped them. She had said the cops had started calling him that after Batman had given them the name.) By the time they had arrived at the hospital the press had already arrived. Jack and Harley had been brought into the emergency room under flashes of lights from cameras and the shouts of reporters.

Jack closed his eyes for a moment. Bruce hadn't been at the hospital when he and Harley arrived. Jack wasn't really sure exactly when his brother had arrived. Something about the fact that Bruce hadn't been at the hospital when he arrived bothered Jack more than he would like to admit. Did it hurt to not have his big brother waiting for him when something this...dramatic had happened? Did Bruce not care? Or was this just..? Jack didn't know...Maybe he expected something like this from him, that Bruce thought so little about his brother that his being kidnapped hadn't really phased him?

When Bruce did arrive, he acted oddly and Jack had noticed that Bruce looked as if he had been in a fight. Bruce had laughed it off when Jack noticed...a bad date, he had said. They hadn't talked much beyond that, just a few quick words to make sure Jack was all right before Bruce went outside to speak with the press.

Jack sighed as he opened his eyes again. Jack's left arm was in a sling and he had an IV stuck in his arm. It was all rather annoying. He hadn't been able to see Harley yet either and no one would tell him where she was or how she was doing. Once they had arrived at the hospital, the two of them had been separated immediately. He had heard Harley yell for him and he had punched one of his nurses in the face trying to get free of them, until someone had shoved a needle into his arm, sedating him. He didn't remember much after that until he woke up here.

Jack let out a breath staring out the window again. The pain killers that were being pumped into his system from the IV were making him sleepy though he was trying to fight it...he was waiting until they thought he was calm before he tried to make a break for it and find Harley. He had tried to leave once already, but there were police stationed outside his door who were under orders for him to stay in his room. The flash of anger had nearly been more than Jack could control...he had almost made a grab for the nearest cop's gun, but he had gone back inside his room reluctantly. Getting himself thrown into the nut ward wouldn't get him any closer to Harley, so he had behaved himself...for now. That had been only a couple of minutes ago.

There was a knock at his door just before someone opened it.

Jack looked over and nearly bolted out of the bed when he saw Harley. She wore multiple bandages too, Jack noticed, which made the simmering anger he had burning in his chest flair for a moment. He was going to find Killer Croc and he was going to kill him, Jack promised himself. She was being wheeled in by a young woman with long brunette hair and mocha colored skin. Harley grinned brightly when she saw him.

“PUDDIN!” She immediately jumped from the chair and rushed over to him yanking her own IV with her, which elicited a surprised yelp from the nurse. Jack had his arms open and enveloped her in a hug pulling her close to him and burying his face against her neck.

“Oh God Harley.” He held her tightly.

Harley squeezed him back careful of his wounded shoulder.

Her voice cracked with emotion. “Oh Jack, Jack...”

Jack scooted over and Harley immediately crawled into the hospital bed with him pulling her IV stand with her to rest it next to the bed. Jack lifted his arm allowing Harley to nestle into the crook of his arm, her body against his as he pulled the blankets up to cover them both. He held her close ignoring the other woman, all his attention on Harley. He caressed her face holding her chin for a moment and stared into her eyes. No one and nothing else existed for that moment but Harley.

The woman who had wheeled her in chuckled softly. “Be careful. Not sure how long I can give you guys before I'm forced to take Harleen back to her room. But I did hear you are both going to be released in the morning, but you didn't hear it from me.” The woman walked over and did a quick check of Harley's IV, adjusting the tubing to make sure Harley wasn't pulling it too much before walking around and doing a quick check of Jack's IV as well.

Harley turned to the woman and smiled. “Jack, this is a friend of mine. We were in a few college classes together. This is Holly Vest—she is a nurse here at Gotham General...well obviously, but she was able to get me in to see you.”

Jack smiled at Holly. “Thank you.”

Holly blushed and shrugged. “Well, when I realized it was Harleen who was brought in along with the press and then she told me about you two...of course I had to get her in to see you. You both went through a traumatic experience. It's my professional nurse's opinion that you both need each other. Besides, Harleen said you two are engaged?”

Jack, who was only looking at Harley nodded at Holly's question. “Yes we are.”

“Wow, engaged to a Wayne...” Holly shook her head then seemed to come to herself. “Well, I will be back in an hour...maybe longer if I can finagle it. I might be able to bring you guys some breakfast.”

“Thanks Holly.” Harley smiled, but Holly just waved her off. “Don't mention it.”

Holly moved the wheelchair to the corner of the room before slipping out quietly, letting the door swing closed behind her. Jack and Harley didn't notice, their eyes only on each other. Jack cupped her face sliding his hand out of his sling (careful of his IV and the bandages on his shoulder) his touch gentle, his blue eyes gazing into hers. He didn't say anything, just brushed his nose against hers, his lips caressing along her lips not quite kissing her yet.

“Are you sure you're all right? You look adorable in a hospital gown...though I want to get a look at the rear view sometime,” Jack said in a whisper with a light chuckle, his eyes roaming over her face then back to her eyes again.

“Yes. I'm fine. You?” Harley was tracing his face with her fingertips as if she wasn't quite sure he was real. Her touch gently grazed over the bandages on his face and the concern in her eyes made Jack smile. No one had never been this concerned about him before, not like Harley. Jack kissed her then, his lips dancing over hers, his tongue meeting her tongue, the warmth of her kiss making him smile.

Jack pulled away from her mouth with a chuckle. “I'm good, I promise. Though...I'm angry too. That Croc got away....him and the man who shot me. I really hate unfinished business,” Jack concluded with a slight narrowing of his eyes.

Harley was quiet. She shifted her position in order to rest her head against his chest, her hand against him stomach. “Jack, I need to tell you something.”

“Hmm?” Now that Harley was here with him Jack had relaxed enough that the pain medication in his IV was starting to make him feel drowsy..

“When we were trapped down there...I—I did something terrible.”

Jack ran his fingers up and down her arm drowsily. He sighed, contented for the moment, not worried overly. “What did you do?”

Harley's voice was quiet. “I killed...someone...actually more than one person. I—I killed three people.” Harley said it in a whisper. She wasn't sure what she thought would happen by confessing, but she wanted—no—she needed Jack to know.

“I killed this man who wanted me to...” She shivered. “Anyway, I killed him. Then I killed two other men...I beat them to death with a pipe.”

“Do you feel bad about it?” Jack asked. He was smiling, but Harley couldn't see it from her position with her head on his chest, his fingers continued their lazy caress along her arm making her drowsy too.

“I...no,” Harley said quietly, realizing that she did not feel bad about killing those men. “And I'm not sorry I killed them Jack...not the least bit sorry. They deserved to die and—I enjoyed it. I wanted them dead...it was...” She searched her tired mind for a moment, then said, “Exhilarating.”

Jack was quiet, but then he started to laugh. The sound started low, then gradually exploded into a full on belly laugh. Harley sat up to look at his expression. He grinned at her, reaching for her and covering her mouth with his, his tongue sliding into her mouth pressing her close. His mouth moved hungrily against hers, taking the breath from her before he released her. His hand cradled the back of her head holding her close, his nose pressed against the side of hers.

“I killed four of them Harley.” He giggled softly before he continued. “I'm so proud of you. You're strong enough that you don't need me, which means more because you want to be with me. You're not with me to protect you. You don't need protecting. Besides, do you have any idea what it does to me to know you—you can kill Harley? How do you feel?” He licked her lips and Harley purred. “I feel...good. Powerful. Do you think they know?” Her eyes darted toward his hospital door.

Jack laughed. “I don't think so. No one has said anything. That Batman person didn't mention it either.” Harley giggled and Jack grinned in response. “It's our secret, pooh bear.”

Jack kissed the top of her head; his smile was huge and gorgeous. Harley settled back down against his side smiling too. Jack tugged the blankets a little higher over the two of them. That little ball of darkness in her seemed to crack open and spread. Harley couldn't find the compassion to care that she had killed those men. It didn't matter. What mattered was that Jack was happy with her and she was happy with herself. Wrapping her arm around his waist she sighed, content. She could feel the way he was relaxing as he held her close. It wasn't long before the two of them had dozed off.

* Batman was down in his cave, more relieved than he could possibly express that Jack and Dr. Quinzel were relatively unharmed—considering. Croc's hideout was still being sifted through by the police, but Batman had tapped into their computers to follow the investigation. It was clear from a debris pile that Killer Croc had killed at least two or more people. Two fresh bodies had been found in a pile with the remains of others. It would be a while, but Batman was sure DNA would connect some of the bodies to missing persons in Gotham. Batman had no idea how long Croc had been in Gotham planning his kidnapping. There might be more victims down there, but the sewer system was massive. His brother's victims; Angel Mendez, Jake Hills, Brad Scott and Erik “Hammers” Perkins were all going to live, though it looked from the hospital records that Angel, Brad and Erik were going to be maimed for life, and Jake Hills...the man with the baseball bat, was going to be disfigured.

Bruce sighed. It could have been so much worse. He had to be relieved that at least no one had died on his watch.

* The next day Jack and Harley were both released from the hospital. (With a little help from the nursing staff and a few words from Bruce Wayne, Jack and Harley were taken out a back entrance to avoid the press.) Jack, dressed in a pair of loose fitting dark blue sports pants and a plain white t-shirt (his arm was going to be in a sling for a few more weeks) and Harley, who was dressed in a pair of yoga pants and a red t-shirt (clothes bought and sent over by Alfred) were each in a wheelchair waiting at the front of the hospital. While they sat on the curb outside the hospital waiting for their ride, Jack had reached across the short distance between them with his good arm and took hold of her hand. Harley looked over at Jack with a broad smile just for him. He squeezed her hand, his eyes only on her.

Alfred pulled up in the Wayne family's Bentley Mulsanne, a long, stylish gold colored car. Alfred stepped out of the vehicle once he had pulled up, the relief in his expression clear as he saw the two of them.

“Master Jack, it's good to see you in one piece.” Alfred smiled at the younger man.

Alfred smiled. “It's nice to see you well too, Miss Harleen.”

Harley let go of Jack's hand and stood up. She walked over to Alfred and wrapped her arms around him. “It's nice to see you Alfred.”

Alfred gave her a quick squeeze with a whispered, “It does this old man good to see the both of you.”
Harley gave him a kiss on the cheek which made Alfred blush. Jack who had just stood, laughed. “Hey now, no making moves on my girl.”

“Never Master Jack. Why, it would be unfair.” Alfred smiled and Jack burst out laughing.

Jack was surprised to come home and find Bruce waiting for them; he hadn't really expected to see his brother at all. Bruce stood in the doorway, dressed casually in a pair of dark navy slacks and a button down white shirt. He looked—off—to Jack, though Jack couldn't put his fingers on the reason why exactly. The swollen lip...supposedly from a woman, didn't sit right with Jack, but what Bruce did in his private time wasn't any of Jack's business...just like what he did wasn't any of Bruce's. But when Jack stepped out of the vehicle, Bruce hurried up to him and wrapped his arms around his brother.

“I'm so sorry this happened Jack.”

Jack frowned and hugged Bruce in return awkwardly with one hand. “It's...ah, not your fault. Guess we shouldn't be surprised considering who we are.” Jack smiled awkwardly.

Bruce stepped back and walked over to Dr. Quinzel and took her hand between both of his. “I'm sorry you were dragged into this Dr. Quinzel.”

Harley smiled. “It's fine. I'm just glad neither of us were more seriously hurt.” She glanced at Jack, her gaze resting on his bandaged shoulder for a moment.

Bruce smiled and then turned. “Well, I'm sure you two need some rest. I've hired some extra security to walk the grounds around the manor. And ah, Dr. Quinzel, before you go rest, may I speak to you in private?”

Harley frowned slightly and glanced at Jack once before she turned back to Bruce. “Of course.”

Bruce offered her his arm before he led her inside. Jack frowned as he watched them step inside, a crease forming between his brows. Alfred frowned. “Come along Master Jack. Let's take you upstairs, then I'll bring you some tea and you can relax.”

Bruce led Harley over to the drawing room, escorting her to one of the plush winged back chairs that sat near the fireplace that dominated one of the walls. Harley sat down and glanced around the room. It was a warm, comforting room decorated in browns and burgundies, with a few old portraits on the walls, paintings of past Wayne patriarchs, a few landscapes and of course, more books. Bruce walked around the long walnut table that dominated the middle of the room. Bruce sat down and leaned his elbows on his knees, bringing his fingertips together. He was quiet for a moment staring at the hardwood floors of the drawing room.

Harley waited patiently, her hands folded in her lap. She looked down at her wrists, which were covered in bandages at the moment from where she had worn them raw getting loose from the ropes that had held her. She studied the way the white gauze was frayed at the end; the medical tape looked old already. Finally Bruce spoke.

“What you and Jack have been through is...horrific. I would like to have someone come and talk to the both of you, to help you both through your situation. I would usually have asked you to help Jack, but given the change in your...relationship...plus the fact that you too were kidnapped...” Bruce sighed. “Sorry, I'm doing this wrong. I have asked Dr. Joan Leland from Arkham Asylum to come by and speak to both you. Help you both through the events of the kidnapping.”

Harley frowned for a moment, then nodded. “That is probably a good idea. Thank you Mr. Wayne.”

Bruce’s expression was not quite a frown, yet not a weak smile either. “Call me Bruce.”

Harley looked taken aback, but she nodded. “Bruce.”

Bruce nodded then quietly said, “I know I haven't been supportive of your relationship with my brother. I...well...” he sighed and sat up straight. “You make Jack happy from what Alfred has said and I can't—I can't be angry about that. Though I wish your relationship had come about in a different way I won't stand in the way of my little brother's happiness. I just wanted to make sure you knew that.”

Harley nodded. “Thank you...Bruce.”

Bruce took a breath and stood with a nod. “Well, I'm sure you would like to rest. Dr. Leland will be coming by tomorrow afternoon.”

Harley stood as well. “Thank you, for...everything.”

Bruce nodded again and quickly strolled out of the room to leave Harley feeling not accepted so much as on the road leading toward acceptance. She wondered how he would feel if he knew she had killed three men...no matter how justified...or about Jack's killings. Then she smiled and shrugged.

Harley made her way upstairs to Jack’s room. She knocked lightly on his bedroom door before she stepped inside and then she closed the door gently behind her. She found Jack sitting at a card table set up at the foot of his bed. There was a tea set on a trolley next to him along with a plate of what looked to be cherry scones. He was playing with a deck of cards one-handed.

Harley thought a moment how innocent he looked. His usually slicked back hair had fallen to the side of his brow. He was still wearing the sports pants and t-shirt, but he had tossed the shoes and socks into a corner of the room as he sat with his legs stretched out, his feet crossed at the ankles playing with the cards.

With his good hand, Jack was using his fingers to slide the cards into two stacks in the palm of his hand, his long fingers making the movement look easy. Then, weaving the cards together before he cupped his hand, and held the cards upside down and shuffled them again. He was doing the one handed shuffling easily, gracefully, clearly an expert at it. He continued to shuffle one handed before he switched to doing a one-handed spin cut, spinning the cards with his fingers forming a butterfly then folded them back into a deck, easily, and doing so with the easy grace of someone who had done the trick a great deal. He continued until he turned and noticed Harley standing there watching him.

“Never saw anyone do that with cards one handed before,” Harley said with a smile. She walked over to him, swinging her hips just a little. Jack gave her a lopsided grin as he watched her walk over to him and marveled at how even after having just been released from the hospital an hour ago, she managed to look seductive in her yoga pants and a t-shirt.

Jack purred. “Mm...I can do a lot more card tricks, if I get a treat for it?”

Harley chuckled. “Oh, you want a treat do you?”
Jack chuckled. “Course I do!”

Harley strolled over to him and Jack lifted his arm, allowing her to carefully sit on his lap. She ran her fingers along his jaw. “Did you take your pain pills?”

Jack made a face. “I don't need those things. I have an extremely high threshold for pain.”

Harley kissed the tip of his nose. “Just promise me to take them before sleeping.”

He sighed, but he smiled at her. “Sure thing, cupcake. Anything for you.”

Harley giggled and tilted his face up to brush her lips across his, but then her smile fell. Harley suddenly grasped his face between her hands, her kiss becoming desperate, pained. Jack tossed the cards onto the table, wrapping his one arm around her. Harley caressed the sides of his neck, her smile returning as she leaned in to nip at his lips. At first it was soft and playful, but then her emotions overwhelmed her. She had almost lost him...she couldn't imagine her life without Jack. Her kisses became desperate, her fingers nearly clawing at his hair while she kissed him, tugging him toward her. Jack had closed his eyes at the start of the kiss, but when she choked on a sob he opened his eyes to study her. Harley's eyes were still closed, but tears were streaming unchecked down her cheeks causing him to frown. His poor little harlequin.

Jack reached up with his one hand and gently tugged on her hair, pulling her mouth away. He looked sternly at her when she finally, willingly released his mouth and sat back a little to make eye contact with him. She rested her hands on his shoulders as her fingers gently caressed his neck.

“We're all right Harley. No crying. Nothing can hurt us. Remember, we hurt them back....we gave them what they deserved. No one can mess with us...no one. And, we got away with it...no one knows what we did.” He grinned brightly and reached up to stroke the corner of her mouth with his lips. “No one but you and me against the world.”

Harley smiled with a small chuckle. “I don't care about them, I don't care that I killed any of them. It was...fun. Is that terrible of me to say?”

Jack laughed. “No, because I thought it was fun too.” He chuckled again. “I never thought I would find someone like you...someone who understood. You and me, we are like two peas in a pod.” He reached over and touched the tip of her nose with his, brushing his nose against hers.

Harley giggled and ducked her head. She took a breath. “When I saw you get shot, Jack...I...I can't live without you. I won't live without you.”

Jack laughed gently at that and gave her a wink. “I'm hard to kill my little dumpling...very hard to kill.”

He stroked her face, his thumb brushing her lips once more. “I won't live without you either...ever. Together, always and all the world shall burn if it tries to keep us apart. Love is merely a madness...”

Harley smiled as she laid her forehead against his. “Quoting Shakespeare?”

Jack chuckled. “Only the best. I am going to show you things Harley...all sorts of things. Just you watch. I have secrets that only you will ever know...”

Harley frowned slightly then whispered to him. “I will burn everything to the ground Jack, everything, if it meant being with you.”

They kissed, slowly, tenderly as if just discovering the wonders of each others tongues and lips for the first time again. Harley's mouth moved over Jack's, tasting deeply from him, her tongue caressing his, stroking, swirling and twisting with his tongue. She couldn't get enough of his mouth, his tongue, his lips. Jack pressed his hand to her back, his hips jerking up just enough that she could feel how hard he was for her, how much he wanted her. She cooed softly and pressed back. Jack smiled against her lips.

Harley groaned as her hips began to move of their own accord and rubbed against him. She grabbed the back of Jack's chair, her hands on either side of him, and ground her hips against his erection even harder. The intensity of need he sparked in her always made her feel out of control. Her need for him was overpowering; her desire was a hot intense flame that was threatening to consume her if she didn't have Jack. God, she had almost lost him! She needed to take him, to know he was alive, that they both were alive. Harley dug her fingers into the back of the chair continuing to grind against Jack, her hair framing her face, her eyes half lidded watching him. Her grinding caused the chair to creak and groan. The feeling of her on top of him, the way she rubbed herself against him...he wanted to tear her apart...to have every part of her. He growled, jerking his hips up, the damn clothing between them was preventing him from feeling more of her, it was killing him! He urgently needed her, needed to feel her engulfing him, surrounding him.

Damn it all, he needed to fuck her! Needed to know they had won, they were both alive. It was gloriously thrilling.

Jack growled and his hand on her rear squeezed. “Get your clothes off Harley.”

Harley stood up, shoving the table out of the way with her rear just before she began to strip. Jack lay sprawled across the chair his erection clear by the bulge in his pants as he watched her with intense blue eyes, studying her every movement. He pulled his teeth over his bottom lip with a grin. “You are so beautiful,” he hissed watching her pull her shirt over her head, the creamy mouthwatering reveal of her breasts driving him mad with want. Then as she slid her pants down her hips, his breathing picked up at the sight of her. She stood in front of him naked, his Venus, his harlequin. Harley blushed, smiling softly and reached out for his hand.

“Come on,” she purred and tugged him to his feet. She led him over to the bed where she turned him to stand with his back to the bed. She gently lifted his shirt over his head, careful of his arm and the sling, but with a few seconds work, they had it off him. She stroked her hands down his chest, standing close, close enough that he could feel the heat radiating off her body, but not close enough that her body was touching his. The tease, he thought.

Once she had his shirt off. Her fingers caressed over his pecs and along the flat plain of his stomach feeling the muscles contract under his skin at her touch. Harley smiled; his skin was like satin. She traced each of his nipples with the tip of a nail, his nipples tightening with the contact. Jack licked his lips, but didn't touch her, letting Harley do what she wanted.

She dragged her fingers down his torso, tracing the bandage at his side. She leaned in, kissing him, her mouth pressed to his and her tongue rolling with his, causing Jack's knees to go weak with need. Her hands wandered lower until she wrapped her thumbs over the band of his pants, slowly lowering them at the same moment she gradually went down on her knees breaking the kiss. Jack watched her, his gaze steamy while her eyes stayed locked with his.

Harley gently lifted each of his legs helping him to step out of his pants, tugging them away and tossing them to the side. She gradually ran her hands up his legs, squeezing his thighs, her thumbs stroking his testicles gently, but firmly, drawing an excited hiss from Jack, his hips arching a little. Harley grinned and brushed her face against his erection, her lips teasing past the head of his shaft, her nose brushing over the tip before her cheeks passed over him feeling the hot satin of his shaft against her cheeks. She gazed up at him licking her lips, then ever so gently scraped her teeth over the head of his shaft causing Jack to shudder.

“Harls,” he grunted with a shudder.

She smiled up at him and then her tongue slowly licked the under side of his erection like she was licking an ice cream cone, her eyes fluttering close. Her hands slid up his hips again, her thumbs pressing against his hips while she pulled him forward into her mouth with a muffled groan. Jack pressed his teeth into his bottom lip as he watched her. Harley grinned at him and her eyes danced while her tongue twirled around him, licking and flicking, thrilling him until his knees struggled to keep him upright. Jack groaned and reached down with his one hand to grab her hair and ease his erection into her mouth slowly. Harley sucked harder. His reactions had her body aching, her groin tightened with need.

She dragged her teeth along him which had Jack's legs going wobbly. She caressed his stomach with one hand, the flat of her hand traveling up his torso, pinching a nipple before she dragged her hand back down. She didn't bob her head this time, she simply sucked hard on him until he was shuddering. “Damn it Harley! You're going to suck the life out of me.”

She gave him one more hard suck, lowering her mouth until she had him all the way to the back of her throat for a brief moment, then dragged her tightened lips up, enjoying the salty taste of him pooling on her tongue when he jerked.

Jack groaned. “Almost Harley, almost...”

She rose to her feet, causing Jack to growl, his head dropping back with the intense pleasure of that teasing tongue of hers. When she was standing again, Harley grinned at him.

“Lie down Jack,” Harley cooed softly placing the tips of her fingers against his chest and pushing him back against the bed gently. He grinned and lay down, careful of his arm. Once he was on his back Harley crawled onto the bed, straddling his hips.

She licked her lips and ran her hands along his chest. “I love you Jack. I love you.”

Jack smiled as he reached up with his one hand to caress his fingers over her breasts and relished in the way she arched her back. “Ti amo Harley...Sei tutto per me. Never forget you're mine. Mine alone.”

“Italian?” Harley's giggle made Jack grin wider and wrinkle his nose playfully at her. “Senza di te la vita è un inferno,” he whispered, reaching up to drag his thumb over her lips. “La tua bocca mi fa impazzire.”

Harley had no idea what he was saying, but it didn't matter in the least.

“Oh Jack...always yours!” Harley rolled her hips, sliding up and down his shaft which was pressed toward his stomach. She groaned; he felt so hard, so hot. Jack groaned too as he watch her while she used him to pleasure herself, feeling the wet slide of her against him. He reached up, his fingers dragging across her lips, pulling her bottom lip down. His smile was seductive, snarky almost. Harley groaned as she licked the tips of his fingers when he dragged them over her chin and down her throat. Jack wrapped his hand around her throat, squeezing softly and causing Harley to roll her hips over him. She reached down and dug her fingers into his skin.

Jack moaned and squeezed her neck just a little harder before he dragged his fingers down between her breasts. “Hurt me Harley, hurt me good.”
Harley groaned in response and drove her hips harder, sliding up and down his length. It was torture to feel how wet she was and not be inside her, but watching the way she used him, feeling that wetness of her...it was almost like when she was licking him...it had Jack grinning with anticipation for when she did start to fuck him.

Jack hissed when her nails dug in hard against his chest; she dragged her nails down, leaving angry red marks in her wake. Her thrusting over him, sliding along his length, rubbing her intimate lips against him, the waves of her movements intensified. She was bringing herself quickly to an orgasm, jerking with pleasure each time she moved along him, her nails breaking the skin as she clawed at his chest. His reached up again to drag his thumb over her bottom lip hard. Harley groaned and bit his thumb, pressing her teeth down on the digit, swiveling her hips when she came.

“Yes Harley yes...” Jack watched her, his voice low and warm like honey, his expression one of enamored worship watching her take her pleasure. He pulled his fingers down her throat, then over her breasts, pinching one of her nipples which made Harley cry out, her body bending like a bow. He felt the sweet warmth of her fluid coating him when she came again.

She jerked and gasped, her orgasm causing her body to vibrate, but it just wasn't enough. She lifted her hips and grasped him with one hand, holding him steady, their eyes meeting just before she pierced herself on him.

Harley cried out loudly when she plunged him deep inside her. “PUDDIN!”

Jack cried out. “Harley! God Harley!”

Harley dropped forward on her hands smiling down at him, her blonde hair forming a golden curtain while she slid her hips up and down his length, pumping him hard, then slow. Jack wrapped his one arm around her, sliding his hand down to her rear and squeezed while she continued to move. Jack thrust his hips up to meet her, both of them gasping together. Jack's hand caressed her back, stroking her silken skin along her back. His hand glided up her spine to her shoulders where he grabbed a fistful of her hair yanking her mouth down to his, devouring her kisses while he thrust up into her, pounding her in quick movements. The sounds of their gasping breath, the occasional creak from the bed and the wet sounds of their bodies coming together filled the room.

Harley stopped and grinned at him as she pull herself off of him. Jack gasped at the sudden loss of contact. “Harley, what...?” he started to ask, but before he could finish the sentence, Harley had turned her back to him, sliding back onto him. Jack growled with pleasure. Harley leaned forward, her hands on either side of his legs, her hips moving up and down as she rode him. Jack panted as he watched her, the way she was grinding her hips, her round smooth backside. He reached out and squeezed her rear with a grin, watching the way his erection appeared and disappeared inside her in a warm, wet thrust of her body. She twerked her hips a few times causing Jack to jerk and shudder, grinding his teeth together.

The new position had Jack hitting her in new ways. Harley tightened around him, her hips undulating against him, then she surprised him when she leaned back all the way until she was lying against him. She rolled her body a little more heavily to the right to avoid his wounded arm, but Jack didn't care. She felt incredible and the small amount of pain was well worth it. Jack groaned against her ear and then he pressed his teeth into her shoulder. Harley gasped, her inner muscles holding him inside her. Jack grinned and licked her neck while his free hand squeezed her breast, then tickled along the flat plains of her stomach until he could slide his fingers between her legs. He rubbed slowly at first, listening to her little gasps of breath, feeling the way her body jerked against him when he rubbed a certain way.
Harley whimpered, the feel of his fingers touching her, stroking her clitoris.

Jack continued rubbing until he had her mewling.

Jack purred. “You're so wet Harls...”

She giggled as she looked over her shoulder at him. “That's what you do to me puddin.”

He was enraptured by her as she turned back around to face him, her hair a mess, her lips bruised, her perfect skin marred by their shared experience, but damn she was gorgeous.

Once she was facing him again, squeezing him inside her, making him shudder with her very expression, he yanked her down to him, his fingers tangled in her hair again holding her hair tight in his fingers.

“Fuck me Harley,” he hissed softly.

Harley's smile was slow and sensual, a coy grin. She rolled her hips, then started to pump him faster, with long, flowing, gliding, arching thrusts against him. Jack hissed, yanking her head closer, grabbing her bottom lip with his teeth holding her lip painfully, but she loved it, climaxing with a loud groan. “UH, Puddin!”

The intensity of her orgasm had Jack releasing her lip, throwing his head back against the pillows, his hand fisting in her hair tightly, his body jerking into hers as he spilled himself inside her in a hot rush.

“Uhh...fuck Harley!”

Harley continued to thrust, but her movements were slowing, lazy almost. Jack jerked again and hissed with pleasure; every moment of her hips was almost too intense for him to process. He closed his eyes with a moan, “Harls...”

Harley peppered his face and neck with kisses.

“I didn't hurt you did I?” she asked softly.

Jack laughed. “I could have sworn I asked you to hurt me.”

She giggled and lightly smacked his chest. “You know what I mean.”

Jack grinned brightly. “You hurt me just the right amount pooh bear.”

Harley's giggles changed to a moan as she slowly pulled off of him. Jack made a low growl. She moved over to his side curling up against him. Jack smiled as he wrapped his good arm around her.

“Oh...Bruce wanted me to tell you. He has asked a Dr. Joan Leland to come to talk to both of us.”

She felt more than saw Jack make a face. “What about?”

“Our shared traumatic experience,” Harley said softly while she ran her fingers over his chest and traced the angry red marks she had made. Then she sat up. “Let me get something for us to clean up.”

Jack nodded with a frown as he put his hand behind his head. “Can you grab me a cigarette?”
He grinned as he watched Harley walk across the room naked. She grinned over her shoulder at him. “Sure puddin—where are they?”

“There should be some over on the desk.” Jack’s eyes followed her every movement across the room as she walked into the bathroom. He heard the water running for a few moments before she returned with a damp rag.

She smiled. “Let me puddin.”

Jack smirked watching her clean him off, running his teeth over his bottom lip, watching her handling him, cleaning then leaning down to place a kiss on the tip of his shaft.

“Mmmm...give me a couple of minutes and I want to go again.” Jack grinned.

Harley giggled. “You’re terrible.”

“Yes, yes I am.” Jack laughed, watching her toss the rag into the bathroom and walk to the desk. She pulled a cigarette out from the pack she found next to his notebook. She made her way back to the bed, sitting on the edge and placing the cigarette between his lips before she opened the lighter and flicked it, a flame springing into existence that she held against the cigarette’s end. Jack moved his arm back and held the cigarette taking a few puffs on it until the flame had started the end burning nicely. Jack took a long pull holding the smoke inside his lung for a couple of seconds before letting it out slowly.

“So, we get to meet a doctor together.” He laughed as he held his cigarette between his teeth and reached out to grab Harley just before she started to get up. Even one handed, he was strong as he yanked her back causing her to stumble and land on top of him.

“Jack!” She laughed, but he refused to let go! “In bed, woman! We’re traumatized!”

Harley laughed and crawled into the bed. She settled herself down beside him after tossing his lighter and cigarettes onto the bedside table. “Mm...puddin.”

Jack took another pull on the cigarette then softly murmured.

“Much madness is divinest sense
To a discerning eye;
Much sense the starkest madness.
’Tis the majority
In this, as all, prevails.
Assent, and you are sane;
Demur — you're straightway dangerous,
And handled with a chain. “

Harley, who was slowly becoming sleepy curled against Jack's side and murmured, “What was that puddin?”
Jack smiled and blew smoke at the ceiling. “Nothing dear, just a little Dickinson.”

Harley giggled sleepily. “DICKinson.”

Jack chuckled. “Harley, you have a dirty mind.”

“I know.” Harley giggled and snuggled closer. Jack leaned over and put his cigarette out in the ash tray by his bed. “You want to know what the volcano said to the other volcano?”

Harley smiled kissing his side as she murmured sleepily. “What?”

Harley gave him a light smack in the side. “That's terrible!”

Jack grinned, lying back to wrap his arms more securely around her. He could see a glimmer of the sun through a small gap in the curtains as he said quietly:

“I know, but it's true.”
Harley woke to the sounds of Jack singing to himself. She smiled at the sound of his voice; she thought he had an elegant singing voice that simply moved through her very soul. She rolled over onto her side, her hair a curtain of yellow gold over her eyes. She could see him sitting at his desk, wearing only his boxers, his bare feet crossed at the ankles under his chair, his torso bent over his desk. He seemed to be writing (easily with his left hand she noticed) while he sang. She smiled contented, watching him. She could only see his back and the halo of smoke that surrounded his head when he set the pen down and picked up the cigarette in the ashtray beside him. She liked Jack's back; it was a very nice back she thought. She loved the way the muscles created a sculptured look down his spine, curving out to his hips and ass. She grinned wide, her eyes lingering on his lower back thinking about his naked backside and her nails raking across it.

She could see some bruises that she hadn't noticed before, marring his shoulders and of course at his right shoulder were the bandage that covered the exit wound sat, a dark bruise hinted at under the bandage. For a moment the pain and image of him being shot raced through her mind making her chest constrict and her eyes sting. She had come so close to losing him. Never again, she swore silently to herself, never again.

She stayed on her side watching and listening to him. Jack set the cigarette back in the ashtray and started to sing again in that low whisper. After a few moments she could hear the words of the song he was singing to himself in a low melodious voice.

"Why do birds suddenly appear, ev'ry time you are near?
Just like me, they long to be close to you.
Why do stars fall down from the sky, ev'ry time you walk by?
Just like me, they long to be close to you.
On the day that you were born the angels got together.
And decided to create a dream come true.
So, they sprinkled moon dust in your hair of gold,
And star-light in your eyes of blue.
That is why all the boys in town follow you all around.
Just like me, they long to be close to you... "

Harley couldn't stop herself from sighing. Jack stopped singing; It was clear he sensed her watching him. He turned around to look at her over his shoulder and grin at her.

"Morning sleepy head,” he said quietly.
Harley giggled, immediately letting the images of Jack falling, the sight of his blood, fade away as she sat up and stretched her arms over her head. Jack watched with appreciation as the sheets fell away showing her naked torso, her blonde hair falling down over her breasts, the pink nipples only barely visible through the tangles of her golden hair.

“What time is it?” Harley asked with a yawn.

Jack reached over on top of the desk and picked up a discarded Patek Philippe watch. Jack held it up examining the face with a slight frown.

“It's nearly eleven,” he said before tossing the watch carelessly back on the desk.

“Eleven! Oh crap! Dr. Leland is coming this afternoon!” Harley jumped out of bed. Jack grinned as he watched her race to the bathroom naked. That was a sight he could get used to, a naked Harley running around his room all the time, Jack thought to himself.

After a few minutes he heard the water turn on in the shower.

Harley had just turned on the water, the warmth washing over her exhausted figure as she leaned her head back and let the water run down her with a long drawn-out moan. She closed her eyes and smiled as she let her thoughts drift. She had killed three people. She had never thought she would kill someone, but she had, and she felt nothing, at least no guilt and perhaps some satisfaction. The only thing she thought about was that it was funny how she felt no guilt at all, and on top of that, Jack was proud of her. Jack thought it was funny too. She giggled softly and moved her face back and forth under the water when something occurred to her. She should have started her period.

It should be around the time, but nothing had happened. She frowned for a moment, then pushed the thought away. The way periods worked, she could just be late because of all the drama that had been going on in her life lately. She had been late in the past. The thought was quickly forgotten when she reached for the shampoo...

Jack sat at the desk for a long minute...finish what he was working on or jump into the shower with a naked Harley? He glanced down at his notes. He was writing down the details of those he killed during his kidnapping, details of the way he did it, the way they died. He also had a list of those he wanted dead, he had added a few names while he sat here writing and Harley slept. It was all very interesting information and pretty darn funny he thought. Here these kidnappers thought they had a fool-proof plan yet he had come in and killed nearly all of them! It was funny. Funny how plans could change...upset the order and everything fell into chaos, he thought. He grinned as he closed the notebook. He could work more on that later, right now there was a gorgeous naked woman in his shower, a naked blonde he couldn't resist. He jumped to his feet and hurried into the bathroom, sliding his boxers down as he went. He kicked them to the side as he walked into the bathroom and pulled his arm out of it's sling while he yelled.

“Hey wait for me Harley!”

Harley hadn't quite heard him since her head was under the water. She squealed with laughter when Jack hopped into the shower and wrapped his arms around her from behind to lift her up off her feet.

“HA!! Caught you!!” Jack laughed and swung her around in a circle in the shower.

“JACK!!” Harley giggled, her eyes squeezed closed since she had water and shampoo running into her eyes.

“Put me down! You'll break your stitches!” She giggled, but Jack continued to hold her up off her feet.

“Jack your shoulder!!” Harley started to panic and Jack reluctantly put her down, but spun her around to face him. With a swift movement he shoved her up against the wall, pressing a deep kiss to her mouth before she could protest further. She groaned, feeling the length of his naked body pressed against hers—every naked inch of him. He smiled against her mouth as he rubbed his hips up and down against her groin. She could feel how hard he was, that burning heat of his erection teasing her. He shoved a hand between her legs, forcing her to spread her legs further, and then he dipped his finger into her causing Harley to gasp, her body arching into his hand.

“You like that Harley?” he asked licking her lips as he did so.

He thrust his fingers into her a couple of more times, smiling with pleasure at how wet she was for him. He didn't shove hard, but slow, ever so slowly, teasing her as he slid his long fingers in and out. Harley hissed with pleasure, but then Jack pulled his fingers away. Harley made a soft whine that quickly melted into a gasp when Jack pushed himself between her wet legs. The heat of his erection seemed to radiate up through her groin, making her want him even more, if that was possible. Jack chuckled against her mouth as he slid his hands up and down her torso.

“Wanna get a little dirty first?” Jack purred before the tip of his tongue tickled over the front of her teeth.

Harley groaned. “Yes but I don't think we have time.”

Jack made a pouty face. “Why not? I can wash your hair at the same time.”

Harley giggled and walked her fingers down his chest. “Oh you can, can you?”

“If that's what you want Harley girl, though I'm hoping to be a little more distracting...” Jack grabbed her bottom lip in his teeth pulling for a moment before letting her lip go and crushing his mouth to hers. Harley moaned. She ran her hands down his stomach, then to his groin, wrapping her hands around him. Jack moaned at her touch when she started stroking him, her wet, still slightly soapy hands moving up and down his shaft; she made him jerk his hips slightly.

Jack hissed again with pleasure at the feel of her wet hands on him, he thrust his hips into her hands' embrace, growing harder with each stroke.

“Mm...baby, pumpkin pie...my Harley girl.” He moaned against her mouth. Harley knew she should stop him. She should tell him no, they didn't have time, he would pull his stitches, but damn it she wanted him. She was weak, letting Jack lift her leg up over his good arm pressing her back against the shower wall. She was weak against him, Harley knew she would do anything for him, anything he asked. She would kill a hundred people if he asked her.

When he shoved himself inside her, Harley cried out in delight.

“JACK!” He filled her to her core shoving her leg back against her torso.

Jack smiled against her lips. “Mmmm...Harley...my Harley girl.”

Jack's thrusts were hard and fast. Harley climaxed quickly, sliding up and down the wet shower wall with each of Jack's thrusts, her hands digging into his biceps. Within minutes, she was ready to slide down the wall and melt into a puddle.

Jack groaned easing her leg back to the shower's floor.

“Okay, now you can shower.” He laughed softly.

Harley giggled. “You're funny.”

“I do try.” Jack chuckled before he kissed her again.

They remained leaning against each other, their foreheads pressed together and catching their breath while the warm water ran over them. Jack rubbed his nose against her playfully.

“Think you can do the eyeliner and lipstick again?” Jack asked. “I really enjoyed that.”

He grabbed the soap and lathered up his hands before he started to run them down her body. Harley hummed happily, wiggling with the movement of his hands. She grabbed the shampoo and poured some into the palm of her hand before reaching up to start rubbing the thick liquid through his hair.

“Course I will puddin, makes your eyes pop. I love it. If we have time I'll paint your nails too. Black would look good.”

Harley smiled contented, her fingers working over his scalp.

Jack chuckled closing his eyes and enjoying the feel of her fingers in his hair. “I would like that a great deal Harls.”

She smiled. “Anything for you puddin, anything in the world.”

Downstairs, Alfred was just setting tea out for Jack, Harley and their guest (Bruce had informed Alfred of the doctor that would be coming to talk to them both about their experience. Alfred hadn't said much about it, though he didn't feel Master Jack would enjoy the idea. As for Miss Harleen, he wasn't sure. Perhaps Dr. Leland was a colleague?) Alfred had just finished setting out the plates, tea cups and was making his way back to the kitchen when he saw Jack holding Harley's hand, their fingers threaded together, coming down the stairs with a slight bounce in their steps like a pair of happy children. Despite what they had been through, they looked like a lovely young couple. (Though it pained Alfred to note the sling on Master Jack, as well as the stitches on his handsome face. Miss Harleen had bruises and cuts as well...it bothered him to see them both hurt like that despite how cheery they both were right now.) Jack had his hair slicked back, eyeliner around his eyes making the blue of his eyes appear electric (even his lips seemed to have a red tint to them though Alfred couldn't be sure and Alfred noted the nail polish on Master Jack, black, matching Miss Harleen's. Young people, he thought with amusement.)

The young master looked handsome and well despite the sling that held his left arm or the cuts on his face that had visible stitches. Alfred sighed; Master Jack had clearly removed the bandages from his face on his own. Jack wore a white button down shirt, with a slim fitted double vest that had two layers to it. The outside layer was a warm tawny brown, with gold colored buttons on the corners in the front—though that part of the vest was unbuttoned—and pockets on the sides. The inside layer of the vest was a taupe and black plaid with four gold colored buttons running up the “v” of the vest (these buttons were buttoned up, the inside vest was shorter than the outside layer leaving a section that showed the bottom half of Jack’s white shirt.) This morning Jack was lacking a tie, his white shirt opened, a few buttons showing off his slender throat. The sleeves of his shirt were also rolled up to his elbows. He had paired the shirt and vest with a pair of taupe slacks and a pair of Italian calfskin Oxford Brogue wingtip shoes. Jack looked casual yet maintained a clear air of wealth about him.

Harley looked like a breath of spring. She wore a tea-length swing dress with a boat neckline. The top of the dress was black and sleeveless, but the skirt was red with large white pokadots. (Unlike Jack, any bandages she had were still in place). She wore the dress with a pair of round toed, chunky heeled black shoes that had a strap around her ankle. Her long blonde hair was loose around her shoulders. Most of her bruises and cuts were hidden by makeup (or bandages). But it was her smile and the twinkle in her blue eyes that really made her look devastatingly beautiful, Alfred thought.
They were a perfect couple.

Alfred was all smiles. It did his heart good to see the way Jack and Harley looked at one another.
Now only if Master Bruce could find someone to make him smile like that.

Bruce was on his way to meet with Lucius Fox. He was dressed in a sleek Ermenegildo Zegna navy blue suit with a pair of Salvatore Ferragamo black leather loafers clearly communicating the rich playboy look of Bruce Wayne. Bruce tugged at the bottom of his jacket and ran his hand over the deep black colored tie he wore. Fox had some new tech that he thought Bruce would find interesting, which is why Bruce was heading to Wayne Tower. After that he was supposed to have lunch with a new investor...a man whose name he couldn’t recall at the moment, but he was sure he would remember once he saw him. Bruce was contemplating what he should do after lunch, what would be fitting of a playboy such as Bruce Wayne, something that would have the papers complaining about him and his attitude so quickly after his brother's kidnapping. Bruce hated to do it; he didn't want Jack to think that his Bruce Wayne persona was a reflection of his true feelings, but he was trapped —in order to save Gotham, and his brother, he needed to be the Batman, and Bruce Wayne needed to be his persona. His thoughts were interrupted by his phone ringing. He pulled it out of his pocket to examine the caller id and frowned. It was not a phone number he knew well, though he recognized it. It belonged to Selina Kyle. The memory of him getting her number rose to the surface of his thoughts. Bruce felt his heart speed up a few beats remembering her that night at the carnival, black hair and green eyes like he had never seen before...Bruce held the phone to his ear.

“Miss Kyle, how may I help you?”

Her voice was like a purr, deep and soft. “Hi Bruce. I heard about your brother. I just wanted to call and let you know how happy I am that everything worked out all right, that he is safe and Dr.
Quinzel too. Are they both doing all right, Bruce?”

Bruce looked out the window watching the city streets of Gotham flash past while he spoke. “Yes, you seem to be.”

“I heard Jack had been shot.” Selina’s voice held real concern.

“Yes, luckily it was not as bad as it could have been and...Batman was there,” Bruce finished.

“I had heard that on the news, that Batman was responsible for finding and rescuing them. I’m just glad someone got to them before anything worse happened. I mean, I heard that the kidnapper was some guy they are calling Killer Croc? The papers said a lot of gruesome things, but anyway, you've probably heard more than enough about that. How are you doing?” Selina's voice was, Bruce was learning, always sultry, but also held a strong note of sympathy.

“Me?” Bruce sounded completely stunned. “I...I'm fine, just happy to have my bother back.”

Selina purred into the phone. Her voice held a teasing ring, but Bruce could hear the true and deep compassion behind her words. “Well, I would like to assess that for myself. I was curious if you were free for dinner?”

“Tonight?” Bruce asked surprised.

He could hear the smile on her lips by the tone of her voice. “Well it doesn't have to be tonight, but it can be if you would like.”

Bruce frowned, but then nodded. “Tonight.”

Selina laughed softly. “Perfect! How about I pick you up tonight around eight?”

“Ah...sure. Do you need my address?” Bruce asked. He wasn't used to being the one who was picked up.

“Oh I know where you live Bruce. See you tonight, and wear something fancy.” Selina hung up, leaving Bruce chuckling. “This should be fun,” he murmured to himself.

Jack and Harley walked into the reception room where Alfred had set up tea for their afternoon “meeting.” The room was small. For the manor it was a small room, Harley noted. She thought it would make a nice size studio apartment! The walls of this room were painted an eggshell white, with four love seats situated around a low sitting oak coffee table. The loveseats were all a soft cream color with thick plush cushions that made you want to sink into them. The room's floors were hardwood with a large oriental rug in golds and reds that both softened the floor's appearance and gave the room a cozy atmosphere. It was one of those rooms that could easily be sterile, but whoever had decorated this room had made sure to add little touches that gave the room a homey feel, from throw cushions that matched the colors of the rug, to paintings of landscapes that littered the walls among the family photos of the Wayne boys when they were little. The windows in this room were tall and thin with heavy beige curtains that were currently open to let the sunlight into the room. Everything in the room was aimed toward comfort and intimacy.

On the table, surrounded by the loveseats, sat a three tiered silver tray which held sandwiches cut into tiny squares on one level. Jack stepped close and examined the contents of the tray with a grin.

“Alfred made a great traditional high tea it seems.” Jack smiled at Harley and pointed at the top tier. “These are Irish baked ham, wholegrain mustard on white bread. These next to them are egg and cress sandwiches with mayonnaise and granary bread, really, really good; I highly recommend.”

Jack pointed to the second level. “Here we have cherry scones and shortbread, and the last tier here has honey shots and mini raspberry and white truffle cheesecakes.”

Harley groaned. “Everything sounds fantastic!”

Jack laughed in agreement. “When Alfred does tea time, he always goes all out.”

There was a large china tea pot sitting on the table with a tea cozy of soft grey over it and from the smell, the tea was earl grey. Alfred had set out the best china dessert plates and tea cups along with the silverware. Harley was impressed—everything looked perfect.

Jack flopped down onto one of the sofas and yanked Harley's hand so that she fell beside him. He grinned happily, wrapping his arm around her waist and pressing her hip close to his.

“Ready to lie through our teeth honeycakes?”

Harley giggled. “Yes I am puddin’.”

They both giggled, leaning their heads together. Jack stroked her jaw gently with his free hand. “‘Love looks not with the eyes, but with the mind, And therefore is winged Cupid painted blind.’” He licked her lips, tracing them with his tongue. Harley giggled her eyes staring into his. Jack gently traced her bottom lip with his thumb. Harley snapped at his thumb, causing him to chuckle, snatching his hand back. He let go of her chin and reached for the tea. Next to the pot sat a china sugar cup and a container of creamer which Jack moved closer before he started to pour; that was when they heard the deep bong of the front door bell.

“Oh! I guess the doctor is here!” Jack grinned, seemingly eager now to meet with the psychiatrist.

A few moments later, after Jack had poured Harley's tea and was in the process of pouring his own, Alfred stepped into the room. “Master Jack, Miss Harleen; may I introduce Dr. Joan Leland from Arkham Asylum.”

The woman who entered the room and stood before them was lovely, with flawless dark skin, her black hair cut in a no nonsense pageboy that hit just under her ears. She had large light brown eyes and an easy smile. Jack was actually surprised by how young she was to be a doctor but then again, so was Harley. Dr. Leland was dressed in a knee-length dark navy pencil skirt, a simple light blue blouse and her doctors white coat which held her name tag precisely in place, which Harley thought was a bit much for a house call, but different doctors had different quirks...Dr. Leland wore her lab coat—Harley killed bad guys. In her hand she carried a simple briefcase. She smiled as Jack and Harley stood to greet her. Alfred left quietly, bringing the doors to a close without a sound.)

Jack stepped over to their visitor and put his hand out to her. “Pleasure to meet you Dr. Leland or can I call you Joan?”

Leland took his hand. “Joan is fine.”

They shook hands. Jack noticed she had a firm handshake and her smile seemed genuine.

Joan's first impression of Jack Wayne was that he was an extremely handsome man. Tall, slender, the makeup on his eyes made them leap out from his face. He was already a dynamic individual, she could tell that just from looking at him, his posture, body language; there was definitely a magnetism about him. The touches to his face, the black eyeliner and if she wasn't mistaken, lipstick on his lips highlighted his best facial features. She could see a shadow of his older brother in his looks. The two men were quite attractive, but whereas Bruce Wayne had a more “playboy” feel about him, Jack seemed much darker, as if a shadow lurked in Jack Wayne's psyche. But Leland would bet her career on it that both men had a “darkness” about them. She had read about the murder of their parents. Hell, everyone who lived in Gotham knew the story. She had to wonder how that event had really affected both men. But that was not what she was here for today.

Dr. Harleen Quinzel stepped forward and offered her hand. “I've read several of your articles and papers Dr. Leland. Especially your article on violence and mental illness,” Harley said with a smile while they shook hands. Dr. Leland actually blushed. “Well thank you Dr. Quinzel. I looked up your work before coming here. You wrote a very expressive article on how criminals need mental health counseling in lieu of retributive options. Quite impressive.”

It was Harley's turn to blush. “Thank you.”

Joan's first impressive of Dr. Quinzel was mostly based on Dr. Quinzel's scores in college and the papers she had written. And intelligent young woman like herself, pretty, the kind of woman who could have gone an easier route in life by using her looks, but instead had chosen a degree in mental health. Seeing Dr. Quinzel in person did not alter Joan's impression; a bright, attractive young woman.

Jack laughed softly. “You two need to compare notes sometime.” Then, with a bright smile, Jack motioned Joan over to the sofa across from them and picked up the tea pot again. “All right you doctors, come sit down. Tea, Joan?”

“Thank you, yes.” Joan sat across from them while Jack grinned and poured the tea easily with his off hand into the teacup that faced Dr. Leland. He set the pot down and pointed, “Sugar, cream and of course help yourself to the tray of foo— if you don't Alfred will pout.”

The three of them laughed. Dr. Leland made herself a modest plate while Jack and Harley did the same. Jack crossed his legs, resting his ankle against his opposite knee. Harley sat right against him, their shoulders pressed together. Leland opened her briefcase, pulled out a notebook and a small hand-held recorder. “Do you mind if I record our conversation?”

Jack glanced sideways at Harley who shrugged. “Not at all Dr. Leland, go right ahead.”

“Thank you, Mr. Wayne.” Leland set the recorder down on the table between them.

“Oh call me Jack, please.” Jack grinned.

“You can call me Harley instead of Dr. Quinzel, or Harleen works too,” Harley piped up just before she took a small bite of scone and snuggled in against Jack.

“Harley?” Leland asked.

Harley blushed glancing at Jack. “It's a nickname Jack gave me.”

Dr. Leland was actually burning with questions about how Jack Wayne and Dr. Quinzel met, but, that was not what this meeting was about either. She would have to bite down on her own personal curiosity and focus.

“Oh I see. So, Jack, Harley. Mr. Wayne, I mean your elder brother Bruce, tells me you two are engaged.”

Jack nodded. “Yep...though oddly I don't remember telling him.” He glanced at Harley. “Did you?”

Harley shrugged. “Certain things over the last day or so are a bit cloudy.” She giggled apologetically.

Leland nodded. “Well, all right. So you are both engaged. That's nice. May I ask how you met?”

Harley giggled lightly and nodded. “Yes, we just ran into each other.”

Jack stroked Harley jaw, gazing into her eyes. “True love is finding someone whose demon's play well with yours.”
Harley smiled staring back at him. It was clear, that for a moment, they forgot about Dr. Leland in the room with them.

Joan had a lot more question, but she didn't pursue them at the moment. “Now I'm only going to ask a few questions today. Please feel free to tell me anything you wish, but don't feel that you have to communicate anything that makes you uncomfortable.”

Leland opened her notebook, folding the top away and pulled a pen out from her briefcase. “Well, I guess the first question I will ask is do you both feel that you need to see a psychiatrist after your experience?”

Jack, who had leaned back against the cushions of the sofa, his arm in its sling resting against his stomach looking completely relaxed. Harley was leaning against him. They both had their legs crossed, but they somehow looked like two of a kind to Dr. Leland. She couldn't put her finger on it, but there was something...united about them, more than simply a loving couple. It was as if they shared a secret.

Leland pushed the thought away; she didn't want to make assumptions.

Harley held Jack's other hand in both of hers, their hands resting on his lap. Jack glanced at Harley who smiled, the two of them seemed to share a moment, a communication, as if they were speaking without words. Leland noticed how careful Harley was about Jack's wounded shoulder, getting as close to him as she could without causing him pain. Their hands, held together, seemed sweet on the surface, but she just couldn't shake the fact that something about their relationship, just from this first meeting was...abnormal. They were close, clearly, but she felt as if there was an underlayer of something—something else. Again she scolded herself, she was making judgments based on little to no information.

“No, I don't think either of us feels the need for a doctor,” Jack spoke softly.

Leland wrote this down then continued with a note that the two of them seemed to be able to silently communicate together. “So, I know it hasn't been that long since your experience, but any trouble sleeping?”

Harley giggled. “Nope, not at all.”

Jack grinned down at Harley wrinkling his nose at her playfully, then looked back at the doctor.

“Nope, we both sleep like the dead.”

They both laughed. Leland glanced over to Harley. “Surely you as a doctor know that therapy after such a difficult experience can be helpful.”

Harley smiled. “Yes, for people who actually need it. Not everyone needs therapy, doctor.” Harley gave Leland a steady yet challenging look. Leland frowned ever so slightly and wrote that down in her notes.

Jack grinned down at Harley before he leaned in planting a quick kiss against Harley's nose. Harley smiled, gazing into Jack's Wayne's eyes with something that Leland would have labeled almost...madness. A chill ran up her spine, but Leland quickly dismissed the thought. Wrong word and poor assumptions, she told herself. She didn't have a lot of experience with love herself, this was probably just that they were deeply in love with each other, still in the stages of lust too; that would explain the feeling she had, that was all. Harley tilted her head up. Jack growled softly just before he kissed her again, but this time on the lips. Despite Leland being in the room their kiss immediately transformed from innocent into something else. A deeply passionate kiss, the kiss was intimate enough that Leland felt uncomfortable. She turned her head away when the two seemed disinclined to stop their kiss. A quick glance showed that Jack had removed his hand from Harley's and had grabbed her knee tugging her closer, their tongues sliding against the other...neither one of them seemed concerned about her presence.

Leland frowned dropping her gaze and making a few notes. It was a little odd to her how dependent they seemed on each other, not the normal dependency of a couple, but something deeper, possibly problematic, especially considering their recent trauma. Granted this was a first meeting, but...They definitely seemed to be presenting a united front against her. At least that was what it felt like. She glanced up at them again. No, they were still kissing. Jack's hand had moved up to Harley's hip and Harley was holding onto him desperately, her hand on his throat, almost as if she were about to choke him. Harley's whole body turned to him in a sensual curve, as if she wanted to crawl right into his lap.

For Dr. Leland it almost felt as if she were being pulled into the eye of a storm.

On the outside they looked like a perfectly normal happy couple, but there was definitely something that seemed off. Leland averted her gaze again. She just couldn't put her finger on what it was, just a vibe. Perhaps it was just that they were being particular relaxed about their situation, which in and of itself could be a coping mechanism, and they were a newly engaged couple who clearly had different views about pubic displays of affection than most people. Maybe she was being old-fashioned. It wasn't like the rich weren't known for being eccentric. That was what this could simply be, an eccentric behavior, an intense coping mechanism, throwing themselves into their passion for each other after a near death experience.

Leland told herself to stop being judgmental and simply wait...hoping the kiss was all that was about to happen. Jack cleared his throat. “Sorry doc, after thinking I might have lost her...” Jack smiled as he traced Harley's jaw once more.

Harley giggled softly. “Sorry Dr. Leland.”

“It's quite all right and very understandable.” Leland had made note of Jack's statement and she sighed with relief; that was probably all it was that was bothering her. They had lived through hell and came out the other side with a greater appreciation of life. That made sense.

“Have you had any other issues since the incident? Fears that you did not have before? Like I say this is a short time after what happened, it may be too soon for either of you to recognize anything about your experience being reflected in your everyday life, but that is why I'm here, to help you through anything that might come up.” Leland smiled, making another note in her notebook.

“Anyway, today I am going to leave you both some reading materials. I want to stress, this is not homework, just some information on PTSD for the two of you to look out for in each other. I told your brother that I will arrange a series of five visits over the next five weeks so that we can get together and talk, see how the both of you are doing. Does this sound good to the two of you?”

Jack and Harley looked into each others eyes. But it was Jack that spoke. “Sure thing doc!”

*Leland went over the reading materials and then the lists of behaviors that they both needed to watch out for: agitation, irritability, hostility, social isolation, destructive behavior, flashbacks, fear, anxiety...after a bit, everything she said seemed to run together until Jack was ready to groan loudly with his boredom. But finally Leland stood.

“So, would the same time next week work for the two of you?” She had put everything back in her briefcase and was straightening her skirt. Again she noticed the way Jack Wayne and Dr. Harleen Quinzel looked at one another before he spoke. “Same time next week is fine with us doc!”

Jack stood, tugging Harley up with his good hand. “We'll walk you to the door.”

“That's not necessary.” She smiled, but Jack made a rude noise. “Of course it is! Besides, you say that, but I guarantee you that you'd get lost.” He chuckled, then said, “Everyone does.”

Jack and Harley stood in the doorway of Wayne Manor watching Dr. Leland drive off. Jack groaned. “God, five weeks of pretending!”

Harley laughed. “It'll put your brother's mind at ease.”

Jack made a face, a shadow crossing over his eyes. “I don't know about that. I think he is just looking for reasons to commit me to an asylum.” Harley frowned at the bitterness in his voice, but then Jack grinned making a complete turn around in his attitude. “I think we should do something fun now.”

“Fun?” Harley smiled running her hand up and down his back.

Jack grinned. “We are going to go to the Gotham City Country Club!”

Jack laughed. “We are going to play some tennis!”

Jack made a rude noise and waved his free hand in dismissal. “Blah, minor difficulty. Besides sweets, I'm ambidextrous! Come on, we need to change into our country club tennis costumes!” Jack giggled hurrying back inside. Harley hurried after him.

“I don't have a tennis outfit Jack!” Harley frowned and Jack laughed, starting toward the stairs. “Harley haven't you figured it out yet, one phone call I can have anything I want! You will have a hot sexy tennis outfit in a manner of minutes!” Jack kept giggling, taking the stairs two at a time with Harley grinning, stopping to yank her heels off so that she could keep up with him.

Within the hour Jack had a tennis outfit delivered for Harley.

They were upstairs in Jack's room and he was lying across the bed in his bedroom waiting for her to come out of the bathroom to model the outfit for him. Jack laid on the bed propped up by the pillows, wearing a pair of white shorts with deep purple stripes along the sides that almost looked black. He also had on a white polo shirt with an purple embroidered “J” on the breast; the white shirt had the same shade of purple trim along the ends of the short sleeves and along the edge of the collar. He wore a pair of Louis Vuitton Regatta sneakers, which had a Velcro strap instead of ties, also in white with the almost black, purple trim and a pair of purple socks. He wore a pair of round, purple-lensed sunglasses on the tip of his nose and had the heel of one foot lying on the toe of the other, his arm in the sling, his fingers tapping against his stomach while he waited.

Jack groaned loudly. “Come on Harley!! Don't make me go in there after you!”

“Shush! I'm hurrying!” Harley called back.
Jack groaned loudly again before he reached over and grabbed his cigarettes. He pulled one out, stuck it between his lips and was just about to light it when Harley finally came out. Jack stared, his mouth falling open, the cigarette disappearing into his sling. Jack had ordered her a sleeveless tennis dress, with crossed straps in the back. It fit against her perfectly, showing off the beauty of her figure. About mid-hip it dropped into a pleated skirt. Underneath she had on a pair of short white bike shorts (more like tight panties than shorts) paired with a pair of brightly colored Adidas tennis shoes. Harley had pulled her hair back into a high ponytail which bounced when she walked. As she came into the room she did a spin for him. Jack sat up and gave her a long, loud wolf-whistle. “Now that is sexy.”

She giggled. “You know I haven’t played tennis since—well, I think high school! Geez! And only a few times before I focused on gymnastics.”

Jack grinned. “You'll be fine! Come on, we have some rackets hanging on the wall in the gym. AND we are going to take the Lexus! It will be fun!”

“Jack, tell me you aren't planning on driving?” Harley asked, stopping to look at Jack with her hands on her hips just as Jack jumped up easily from the bed and headed to the bedroom door.

Jack rolled his eyes. “Fine, I'm not driving. You are.”

Harley frowned. “Please tell me it's an automatic.”

Jack paused in the doorway and looked over his shoulder at her with a smirk. “Ah, I'll have to teach you how to drive manual one day...Come on, pumpkin!”

When they arrived outside the front of the manor, Harley was carrying the tennis bag with the rackets, some tennis balls and a few other odds and ends in one hand, her other hand in Jack's hand. She stopped dead upon seeing the car waiting for them on the gravel drive.

Harley gasped at the sight of the vehicle. Never had she seen such a gorgeous automobile, and since coming to Wayne Manor she had seen some nice cars. Jack grinned brightly like a kid with a new toy.

“This, my sweets, is a 2018 Lexus LC 500 delivered this morning for Bruce, BUT since he isn't here we are going to test it for him!”

Harley couldn't help but stare. The car was gorgeous, painted a dark caviar color that seemed to shimmer in the sunlight. Jack opened the driver's side door for her. “The interior is black leather with satin metallic trim AND it's an automatic.” Jack giggled.

Harley stood and stared inside the car. “Jack, Bruce is going to kill us if we take this car.”

Jack burst out laughing. “Oh, come on Harley! No he isn't. He'll be annoyed—he is always annoyed—but come on! We nearly died, we need to live!”

Jack held the keys in front of her face. “You know you want to drive it Harley. No one in Gotham has one.” Jack wiggled the keys making them jingle. “It can go zero to sixty in four seconds.”

Harley giggled and snatched the keys from him. “Get in!” she urged him with a giggle.

Harley, wearing a pair of oversized sunglasses, whooped loudly in excitement. “WOOPEE!!”
Jack yelled too. “YAHOO!!”

The Lexus sped down the road into Gotham with the two of them laughing. Jack was nearly in tears laughing while Harley hit the gas and the car raced into Gotham moving smoothly and nearly without a sound. They headed to the outskirts of the city where the Gotham City Country Club was located, where Harley took advantage of the lower traffic volume and wider lanes to open up the car.

Jack grinned as they approached the country club. He pointed at the tall stone fencing that surrounded the place; a plaque on the outside showed the name, Gotham City Country Club est. 1890. “Supposedly a Wayne has been a member of this country club from it's beginning in the 1890's with Bruce and me being the most recent, obviously. I haven't been here in ages, though; I was banned for a year after I set off fireworks inside the indoor pool when I was sixteen.”

Harley laughed. “You didn't?”

“I did. It was hilarious!! You should have seen everyone run!!” Jack slapped his knee laughing at the memory. “Bruce was so mad at me! Of course when is Bruce not mad at me? I figure if he is going to be constantly pissed, I might as well give him a reason.”

Jack chuckled and reached over to squeeze Harley's knee as he continued.

“Then I was banned again when I was twenty-two for putting flash grenades in the holes on the golf course. I was banned for two years that time.” Jack grinned brightly.

“Are you sure they are going to let you in?” Harley chuckled, glancing sideways at Jack as they pulled through the gates.

“Fuck yes! I'm a Wayne! They can't keep me out permanently as much as they would like to. The name carries too much weight and money and they fucking love Wayne money. So they can only ban me for short periods of time. Though I haven't been back since the flash grenades. So it's been...” Jack counted on his fingers flamboyantly. “Six years.” Jack laughed. “They will be so happy I'm back!”

The main building of the country club was a vast stone building with two floors that contained an elegant restaurant, a gym with all the latest in exercise equipment, an indoor pool and an inside running track. Outside, the club had a vast golf course, tennis courts, outside swimming pool and tracks for horse riding.

Jack pointed. “Just pull up through the drive there.”

Harley drove up and turned the car off as Jack instructed. A young man in a uniform with thick black hair, green eyes, the sort of face that would make cheerleaders swoon, wearing black slacks, a light blue polo shirt with the name of the country club on the breast, eagerly came out to the car which he was looking at like it was a naked woman who had just pulled up. Jack grinned getting out of the car at the same moment as Harley.

The young man had moved around to the driver's side and gone still when Harley stepped out. Harley wasn't paying him any attention, but the young man was staring at Harley like a hungry dog. Jack glanced over the roof of the Lexus, and stopped, staring at the young man. Jack's eyes narrowed, twitching slightly, watching the way the valet's stare had moved from the car to Harley. He was giving Harley a clearly visible up and down stare that Harley didn't notice at all. She bent over, reaching into the back to pull out the tennis bag. The kid looked right at her ass without even trying to be sneaky about it. Jack's hands balled into fist, pain rushed down from his wounded shoulder, but the pain only intensified his rage.

Harley stood up, turning around with the tennis bag when she noticed the man standing behind her.

“Oh hi! I'm guessing you want the keys right?” Harley smiled at the valet, who grinned. “Yes, ma'am. I'll go and park the car for you.” Jack's lip curled when Harley placed the keys in the young man's hand with a smile. The man's eyes kept following Harley even after she dropped the keys into his hand. She made her way around the car on her way to Jack, a seductive roll to her hips that was just for Jack, but the kid was staring at her hips openly. Jack's gaze was hard, but he was smiling. Harley walked into his embrace without another look at the valet, completely unaware of his staring at her. Jack turned and smiled, gazing over the rim of his sunglasses at the young man. “What's your name?”

The young valet, whose gaze had been on Harley's legs in the tennis dress, realized he was being spoken to and his eyes shot back up. “Oh, I'm Roger sir.”

Jack nodded. “Roger. I'll remember you.”

Jack grinned with a wink before he turned Harley toward the country club entrance.

Harley glanced at Jack with a question in her eyes, but Jack turned her around wrapping his good arm around her waist. “Let's go get a court Harls.”

He glanced over his shoulder once as the young man drove off with the car. The smile on his face did not reach his cold, now hard eyes.

The lobby inside the country club was a semi-circular room with a large information counter dominating the back end. The room had a high domed ceiling that held a large modern crystal chandelier. The room was decorated with several comfortable looking chairs and sofas scattered throughout the room and long glass coffee tables that all held vases full of fresh flowers. The windows circled both the ground floor and the second floor allowing a large amount of sunlight to shine into the lobby, which made the highly polished wood flooring, the vanilla walls and of course the glass tables, seem to shine and reflect the light back into the room, creating an illusion that the room was much bigger.

Jack led Harley up to the counter with a bright smile across his stitched face. “So, any of the tennis courts open today?” Jack leaned on the counter with his good arm and looked at the young woman standing behind the counter, whose name tag read, “Charlotte.”

She smiled, perfect lovely white teeth, long brown hair that had been perfectly styled, Charlotte wore a uniform similar to Roger outside. “Yes, we do. Please sign the book sir and may I have your member card?”

Jack grinned as he pulled out his wallet, opening it with one hand easily and sliding the card out with his thumb before flipping it to her between his forefinger and middle finger. He handled the wallet and card like Harley had seen him doing last night, easily and with one hand. She grinned, always impressed with him. Jack set his wallet on the counter and signed the book in a fanciful script. “Jack Wayne and fiancee,” he said out loud while he wrote, glancing sideways at Harley and winking at her.
The young woman had taken Jack's member card over to the computer where she was typing information in when she stopped and stared at the computer. “Could you excuse me for a moment, Mr. Wayne?”

Jack smiled with a twinkle in his eyes. “Of course!”

The young woman smiled at them both, though Harley thought that the woman had a slightly confused look on her face.

Harley frowned and watched Charlotte leave. “What's up you think?”

Jack giggled. “She's going to get the manager because I'm sure there is something in my file that popped up on the computer when she put my name in.” Jack leaned against the counter. “Then he will come out and lecture me about behaving myself even though it's been six years. Or at least warn me about doing anything that might get me banned again.” Jack chuckled and then muttered. “I wonder if the manager is still Mr. Dulmacher?”

“Mr. Dulmacher?” Harley asked, but that was when a portly man in a black suit exited from a set of doors off to the right (probably offices Harley mused) and stepped up to the counter. He had thick hair that was brushed back with an almost pompadour style, clearly dyed blonde. (At least Harley was pretty confident it was dyed. She had never seen that shade of blonde in nature; plus it made his hair look like a wig, it was so unnatural looking on him.) He had a perfectly trimmed mustache and goatee that were nearly white and a pair of half-circle silver framed glasses perched on the end of an impressively long nose.

When Jack saw the man, he burst out into laughter. “OH MY GOD!! Bobby, you're still the manager?”

The older man pressed his lips together forming a hot, white line of anger. “I would appreciate it, Mr. Wayne, if you would call me Mr. Dulmacher—or at least my proper name, Robert.”

Jack chuckled shoving up his sunglasses so that the light reflected off the purple lenses. “Sure thing Bobby. So, you here to lecture me?”

Mr. Dulmacher's eyes twitched with annoyance, but he continued. “I'm sure you are aware of the rules, Mr. Wayne; they haven't changed a great deal since last you were our guest.”

Jack waved him off with his good hand. “Of course, of course.”

Mr. Dulmacher took a deep breath turning his attention to Harley. “And you are?”

Jack piped up. “My fiancee, Harley Quinn. We are just here to play a little tennis Bobby. I promise, no trouble.” Jack had dropped his good arm down and elbowed Harley. She glanced down and saw that Jack had his fingers crossed.

Mr. Dulmacher sighed. He glanced at Jack's arm in the sling and thought to himself, “Maybe Mr. Wayne will behave. He's been away from the club for a few years perhaps... and he is here with his fiancee. She might be the calming effect Mr. Wayne needs. Besides, I can't keep him from the club.”

Jack was smiling in satisfaction. He knew there was nothing Mr. Dulmacher could do to him until he actually did something, and then the only thing he could do would be to ban him for a set period of time. Bobby was screwed. Jack's smile widened a fraction.

“We—I—appreciate your paying attention to the rules. Please enjoy yourselves.” Mr. Dulmacher said stiffly. He gave Jack and Harley a smile that didn't quite reach his eyes just before he walked off. Jack chuckled.

“I think that man was here on the day they opened the doors in 1890's! He probably came with the land.” He giggled.

Harley chuckled too as she picked up the bag. “You are bad Jack.”

Jack smiled pleasantly. “I know.”

Jack glanced at Charlotte. “I'm assuming the tennis courts are still in the same location?”

“Oh, yes sir.” Charlotte giggled. “You can either walk out this way and take the path to the left or you can use a golf cart, sir.”

“Thank you ever so much Charlotte.” Jack smiled pleasantly, eager to be off.

“You are very welcome Mr. Wayne, Miss Quinn. Have a good time!” Charlotte waved with a bright smile as they walked away.

Jack and Harley walked to the tennis courts, hand in hand while the sun shone down brightly. The walking path was crushed white stone with brightly colored flower beds running along the sides. The courts were located a short distance away from the main country club building. There were six sets of clay tennis courts, all with a faint bluish tint. There was a high black chain link fencing that surrounded the courts and the whole area was then surrounded by carefully groomed pine or spruce trees; Harley couldn't be sure since she little about trees, but she admitted that the view was pleasant. When they arrived at the courts there were only a couple of people out here playing. One person was actually using a ball machine by themselves, the balls flying across the court. Jack had to stop himself from bursting out laughing when one of the balls hit the guy in the stomach.

Harley snorted on a laugh too. Jack, snickering, quickly motioned Harley over to the side where the entrance gate stood partly open.

They chose an unoccupied court to the far left, away from everyone else—that way no one would bother them and they could play any way they wanted. Harley set the bag down at the corner of the court and pulled out the two rackets, handing Jack one and taking the other. She pulled out the container of fresh, new tennis balls and the two of them walked onto their court.

Jack chuckled. “I guess you're going to have to do the servicing pumpkin.”

Harley grinned. “Will do puddin!”

They each took their side of the court. Harley grinned at Jack and held her racket and ball ready as she wiggled her hips playfully. “Ready?”

“As I'll ever be!” Jack called back, holding the racket in his left hand and grinned brightly. Harley laughed and tossed the ball up, smacking it easily across the net. Over the next half hour Jack and Harley played. Harley was laughing whenever Jack would jump up and hit the ball yelling at the top of his lungs. “YAHTZEE!!”

His antics had them receiving dirty looks from the other people on the courts, but Jack wasn't paying any attention. Harley was laughing and started yelling “YAHTZEE” back every time she hit the ball until they were both laughing to the point of tears. They were having such a good time just messing around that they completely forgot about anyone else being on the courts.
Jack ran across the court, hitting the ball one handed back at her and yelled.

"Jump higher Harley!! It makes your skirt go up!! I love it!!" Jack laughed.

Harley giggled turning around and bending over after she hit the ball, wiggling her butt at him.

"Hit this Jack! I dare you!"

"Oh I will, just wait 'til we get home!" Jack waggled his eyebrows at her suggestively and hit the ball back. Harley squealed, twisting around and barely hit the ball back in time. Jack yelped laughing, missed the ball and turned around. He saw a couple standing there watching them with smirks plastered on their faces.

"Jack Wayne. Now isn't this a surprise?" The man's voice dripped with clear derision. He was what Harley considered a “Ken doll” type of guy. He was tall, blonde with hair styled to the point it resembled plastic or synthetic hair. He had dark blue squinty eyes, a chiseled jaw and a sculpted nose. He had one of those tans that spoke to hours in a tanning booth rather than being outside, and the type of body that said he had paid for a lot of it, with every inch of him being sculpted to perfection, but with a clear artificial look to him. He wore a tennis outfit that had that polished, expensive look, every inch of him in pure white. He held a tennis bag over his right shoulder with his hip cocked and an arrogant sneer on his lips.

Harley felt her lip immediately curl in irritation; this was definitely the type of guy she had encountered in college who felt that he could buy anything, including people. Next to him was a young woman that came up to his shoulder. She was slim to the point of not looking healthy with a bleached, almost white blonde ponytail and watery light grey eyes, but with that fake cheerleader smile, her teeth so white they looked plastic and breasts that had that “too perky” look that was usually associated with breasts that were probably more plastic than flesh. She also had the perfectly sculpted nose and lips that had had one too many botox treatments.

Jack stopped and grinned. “Well if it isn't Troy Randell and his little girlfriend Tiffany.”

Tiffany, who surprised Harley with her high pitch whiny voice, droned back. “His wife now.” She held out her left hand showing off a diamond the size of an acorn.

Jack snorted. “Oh shit! Really? Well, I suppose you two are a match made in hell. So what do you want Troy?”

Harley had walked around the net to stand beside Jack. Jack reached around Harley with his good arm, wrapping his arm around her waist and noticing the way Troy was looking at her, a look that was a cross between a sneer and very clear lust.

Troy narrowed his eyes at Jack. “I thought my eyes were deceiving me when I saw you. Aren't you supposed to be in Arkham or something by now?"

Tiffany jeered. “Didn't you see on the news the other day Troy? Someone kidnapped him.”

Troy laughed in what Harley thought was a slightly higher pitch than was comfortable to bear; she had a quick image of her smashing her tennis racket into Troy's perfectly bought teeth. “Guess they couldn't stand you either,” the blonde man said with a smile that was anything but pleasant.

Harley felt Jack stiffen next to her, his arm tightening around her slightly, the tennis racket pressing against her a little painfully as he tried to control his temper.

“So, Jack, who'see your friend?” Troy raked his eyes over Harley. Harley could feel the building fury in Jack, the tension in his muscles, the way his arm tightened around her waist, even the subtle change in Jack's breathing.

“This is my fiancee Troy.” Jack managed to say the name in such a way that uttering the name sounded as if it tasted bad on his tongue. Jack smiled, though it was a flat smile. Then Jack hissed a whisper at Harley. “We were in school together and here.”

Troy gave Harley a jerk of his chin. “Hello Harley.” He said her name with a curl of his lip.

Tiffany pursed her lips together and gave Harley a haughty look. “You clearly don't belong to the club do you?”

Harley frowned, but Jack responded. “Is there something you actually wanted Troy or are you just going to stand around sucking in all the oxygen and breathing out bullshit? If it's nothing important, go away.”

Jack started to turn around when Troy hissed, “You know what Wayne? You are a blight on the good name of this club. They shouldn't let crazy people like you in here. Doesn't matter how much money your family has—it can't make you have any class.” Troy frowned glancing at Jack's hand holding the racket. "Is that nail polish you're wearing? What are you some sort of fruit?"

Jack smiled pleasantly. "You know Troy, acting like a dick won't make yours any bigger."

Jack turned around with Harley, rolling his eyes as he continued. “Geez Troy, you just cut me to the quick. I don't know how I will ever recover from that insult.”

“You know what, you think you are so great Jack? I challenge you to a game of tennis. Winner stays at the club, loser never shows up again.” Troy grinned, wrinkling his nose.

Harley hissed under her breath at Jack. “I'm not that good at an actual game Jack.”

Jack leaned in close to her ear and whispered back. “Oh, we aren't going to play to win.” He gave her a bright grin and winked. “We are just going to hurt them.” Harley gave him a quizzical look and a small smile before Jack turned back to Troy. “You know, Troy, I’m jealous of people that don’t know you. Anyway... playing against a wounded opponent just makes you look pitiful, but because I hate your guts, I accept.”

Troy grinned. “Be prepared to lose you loser.”

Jack made like he was going to vomit. “Ouch. I hurt Troy. Geez Troy, I bet your brain feels as good as new, considering you never use it.” With that Jack walked with Harley to the other side of the net.

Once they had put some distance between themselves and the Randell's, Jack leaned into Harley giggling. “Okay cupcake, this is what we are going to do. It's true: in our current state we can't beat them and I'm betting Troy knows that. Which is why he is doing this. If I was at my best he knows I would mop the floor with him. So we aren't going to worry about winning, we are just going to concentrate on hurting them.”

“Hurting them how?” Harley glanced over to see Troy and Tiffany stretching and bouncing in place like they were about the participate at Wimbledon.

Jack giggled. “I want you to aim for them. Hit the ball toward them—legs, torso, face...whatever, just try to hit them as hard as you can with the ball.”

Harley snorted and then laughed. “Okay Jack!”
Jack grinned at her, dropping his racket to grab her by the back of the head and plant a knee melting kiss on her lips. He pulled back with a grin. “Let's teach them a lesson baby.” Then he smacked her on the rear.

Troy took a few practice swings. “Why don't you losers serve.”

Jack tossed the ball to Harley with a grin. “Go ahead pooh.”

Harley smiled and winked at Jack taking up her position. She narrowed her eyes, looking toward Tiffany. Jack happily watched while Harley bounced on her feet just before she tossed the ball up once, twice then on the third she slammed the ball with her racket right to Tiffany. The ball zipped through the air and slammed hard into Tiffany's thigh before she could deflect it with her racket.

Harley giggled and yelled. “YAHTZEE!”

Jack burst out laughing.

Tiffany squealed. “OW! You STUPID BITCH!”

Harley pushed her sunglasses up her nose and shrugged with a perfectly innocent smile. “Fault. Sorry?”

Troy grabbed the ball and threw it back over the net; Jack caught it one-handed.

“Tell your girl to serve it right!” Troy yelled.

Jack grinned at Harley over the top of his glasses. “I guess I'm to tell you to serve it correctly.”

“Oh dear, did I serve poorly. Sorry!” Harley giggled. “I'll do better this time!”

With a wicked grin at Jack, Harley served the ball and Tiffany hit it back, but Jack was the one to hit the ball when it came over the net, aiming it for Troy. Troy dashed forward, but the ball hit him right in shoulder with a dull WHACK!

“Ow!” Troy yelped with a stumble and nearly dropped his racket.

“Yahtzee!” Jack snickered and shot a glance sideways at Harley. “Hey Troy, you should really try smiling more!”

Troy narrowed his eyes and rolled his shoulder. “You idiot! Fine, we're serving!”

“Oh you go right ahead, Troy!” Jack waved with his racket and whispered out of the corner of his mouth to Harley. “He'd raise the entire IQ of the state just by leaving it. Wonder how long it will take to figure out what game we're playing?”

Harley giggled “Too long, I'm sure.”

Jack laughed and smacked Harley playfully on the rear with his racket before they moved back to position. Harley bent her knees, holding her racket at the ready and winked at Jack, which had her fiance grinning brightly. Troy took a few moments of pretending to hit the ball until he finally served the ball toward Harley. She danced across the court, hitting the ball with all her might at Troy. The ball flew over the net and smacked Troy in the hip. Troy yelped and stumbled. Jack and Harley laughed until they were tears in their eyes.
Tiffany yelled, “You did that on purpose!”

Harley blinked, looking innocent. “I would never! I'm just not very good, I'm afraid.”

Tiffany jerked her shoulders in what Harley supposed was intended to be indignation. “Obviously, you cow!”

Harley blinked in disbelief, standing up with one hand on her hip and her racket over her shoulder. “Whoa, cow? Really, that the best you got Tiffany? I swear you are proof that evolution can go in reverse!”

Jack snorted, nearly doubling over with laughter. “That’s my girl!”

Tiffany wiggled with frustration. Harley laughed. “Shut up Tiffany! You'll never be the man your mother is! You gonna serve or just stand there looking like an ostrich?”

Tiffany's bottom lip trembled as she looked at Troy. “What did she just call me?”

Troy growled in frustration. “Just serve the ball Tiffany!”

Tiffany, pouting, grabbed up the ball and served without even attempting to line up the shot. This time Jack hit the ball back, a normal hit. Harley smiled guessing where Jack was going, take a few normal hits at the ball before aiming again...throw the victim off and make them think it was over before you whammy them again. The ball bounced, making a smart smacking sound as it hit the court or was swatted by rackets. They played normally for a good two minutes before Jack took a hard slam at the ball when Tiffany smacked it back toward him. Jack sent the ball ricocheting across the net and straight into Troy's chest knocking the air from him with the bonus of knocking Troy off his feet, his ass slamming into the court with a satisfying smack.

Jack grinned brightly and whispered only loud enough for Harley to hear, “Yahtzee!” before out loud he said, “OOPS! Sorry!”

Troy coughed a few times, struggled to his feet. Tiffany raced over to him and rubbed his back as Troy stayed bent over for another minute trying to catch his breath.

Troy finally stood up and growled, “Get another ball Tiffany.”

Tiffany looked ready to argue, but she pressed her lips together instead and ran over to their bag. She pulled out a container of tennis balls, rolled one out and moved back over to Troy who stood straight again. He snatched the ball from Tiffany and narrowed his eyes at Jack. He didn't give Jack and Harley a chance to get into position before he served the ball. Harley was the one to get the ball; she raced over, leapt into the air. For a moment, Jack was entranced at the sight of Harley as she leaped into the air and the little skirt ruffled up. Her bike shorts underneath highlighted her ass perfectly, which brought a big grin to Jack's face. Harley slammed the ball hard enough that it made a whooshing noise through the air and slammed hard into Tiffany's fake boobs with a hard smack. Tiffany flew right off her feet to land on her ass, then flat onto her back with a low groan.

“Uhh...” She laid there and didn't get up.

Troy was so angry that he grabbed the ball without checking on Tiffany and returned it with a hard hit, the ball zipping quickly over the net at Jack, but Jack grinned brightly and was ready as he held his racket in his left hand like a bat. When the ball raced toward him, Jack's grin widened just a fraction before he swung. He hit the ball with enough force that the sound it made was like a bullet zipping through the air. Troy raced like a fool—yet again, Harley and Jack noted—toward the ball. He swung his racket wide throwing himself to the side to hit the ball, going too far, just as Jack knew he would. The ball raced right where Jack wanted and slammed into Troy's groin with a sickening, dull thudding sound.

Jack grimaced and giggled at the same time. “Oooo...wow.”

Troy went down like a sack of potatoes, hitting the court and curling into himself.

Harley made a face. “Wow, that had to hurt.”

Jack giggled as he walked over and took Harley's hand. “Let's go!”

The two of them jogged over to their bag, threw their stuff in to the chorus of groans behind them. Together, laughing and holding hands, they took off at a run back to the country club's main house.

Only Happens When I Dance With You

Bruce was thankful for the shower that he had installed in the back room of his office and for the change of clothing he kept in an adjoining closet. Otherwise he would have been late for his date with Selina Kyle. Bruce smiled while he worked his tie through the loop. She was a devastatingly beautiful woman, intelligent, and intriguing, he thought. There were layers to her that he hadn't found in any other woman, and that was after only one meeting!

Bruce had texted her earlier to let her know he would be at Wayne Tower instead of at his home since she was going to be picking him up. That was another aspect he liked about her, it made him feel as if he was being taken out instead of the...taker-outer...Bruce laughed at himself. It was nice to feel like he was the one being treated this time. When he had been finishing up some last minute work in the office this afternoon, trying to free his schedule in order to go to the race track for some driving practice, he received the call from the country club complaining about Jack and Harley attacking some of their guests. But once he had gotten the details, Bruce had been hard pressed not to laugh. Bruce had to admit he had been a little bit amused when the manager described the attack.

Fairly typical Jack and if Bruce knew his brother, the couple had probably deserved it, though Bruce would never admit that to Jack. He was the elder brother and had to present a more level head where Jack's antics were concerned. After the call, Bruce had almost called the date off. The management had wanted to ban Jack yet again, but Bruce had come up with a compromise—he would get Jack and Harleen to apologize to the Randells. The management and the Randells had agreed on the condition that it was a public apology at the country club. Now Bruce only had to convince Jack to do it. But Bruce wasn't going to worry about that tonight. This evening he had a date with a beautiful, fascinating woman.

Bruce looked at himself in the mirror and ran his hands over his hair one more time. His outfit was a cross between formal and casual. He decided to go without the tie after he had finished tying it and realized how stuffy he looked with the tie on. He removed it and tossed it. Now, he was just wearing the white shirt with the top buttons undone, light khaki pants and a two-button navy blue blazer. He still looked to be made of money, but without rubbing it in anyone's face. He had just put a few dabs of cologne on when the buzzer went off.

The voice of Bruce's secretary, Mrs. Caroline Crown, drifted into the room through the intercom.

“Mr. Wayne, sir, you have a guest here to pick you up.”

Bruce pushed the button. “I'm on my way, thanks Caroline.”

Bruce arrived downstairs and was about to head out the door when he saw Selina Kyle through the glass front of Wayne Tower; she was leaning against a black convertible Mazda MX-5 Miata. She wore a short, sleeveless black evening dress and a pair of knee-high black boots. Her smile was gorgeous when she saw him through the glass and there was something about the way she had done her make-up around her eyes that made the green color seem to glow. Bruce found it to be highly alluring. As soon as Bruce stepped through the door, she waved. “Over here!”

Bruce felt something he never felt with other women—butterflies in his stomach. There was simply something about Selina Kyle that made Bruce feel like a young man who had somehow managed to get the prom queen to notice him. As he approached, Bruce took her hand and kissed her knuckles. “That is quite a dress Miss Kyle, and quite a car.”
Bruce smiled, his voice warm with genuine pleasure.

Selina laughed and if Bruce wasn’t mistaken, he thought he saw a dim blush on her cheeks. “Why thank you Bruce, get in!”

Selina drove them to the Gotham Bar and Grill on Twelfth street and Vine. She moved and weaved through the traffic with the ease of a seasoned race car driver. Bruce did his best not to grab onto the door frame while she drove.

Once they had parked and made their way inside the restaurant, they were met by the greeter at the door. The man was a tall, medium built man with muscles sculpted for looks more than function, with dark hair and a dark, pencil thin mustache, wearing the typical outfit of black slacks and white shirt. When he saw them he waved and laughed.

“Selina! It's been a while, come on in—and who is your handsome companion?”

“Hey Samuel, this is the one and only Bruce Wayne.” Selina grinned as she took Bruce's arm.

Samuel stopped short, his hand extended in mid-shake, looking frightened or was he simply intimidated? Bruce could not be certain, but he took the man's hand and shook it, smiling pleasantly. “Pleasure to meet you.”

Samuel seemed to come back to himself, returning the gesture. “Pleasure to me you Mr. Wayne.”

“Please, call me Bruce.” Bruce smiled again and Samuel visibly relaxed. “Your usual table Selina?”

“Yes please,” she purred giving Bruce's arm a squeeze while gracing him with a pleased smile.

Samuel led the two of them over to an intimate table that was located in a corner, near the window looking out onto the street. It was a lovely, clear night outside with couples walking hand in hand, people just enjoying the rare cool of an early summer evening in Gotham.

They took their seats with Selina ordering a bottle of wine. She glanced at Bruce. “I'm sorry, you don't mind if I pick the wine?”

Bruce shook his head. “Not at all. I trust your tastes.”

Selina grinned. She folded her hands in front of her and rested her chin against the interlocked fingers. “So, everything is happy at home now?”

Bruce nodded. “Yes, well...yes, I believe so. Dr. Quinzel and Jack seem to be recovering. I'm just glad the whole incident is over and my brother was returned home safely.” The wine came then and Selina picked up the bottle to examine the label. It was a bottle of Sandlands Syrah. She nodded her approval to the waiter who smiled before leaving. Selina returned her attention to Bruce while with a smile, she popped the cork and poured some wine into his glass before pouring her own. She set the bottle down between them picking her glass up and taking a sip. “So, tell me about Bruce Wayne.”

Bruce chuckled softly, glancing at his menu. “Not much to tell. Most of what there is that's worth knowing has usually been printed in the papers.”

Selina laughed. “Please. That is a persona. I'm curious about the real Bruce Wayne.”

Bruce glanced up. “What about Selina Kyle? Now that is a subject that I'm interested in.”
Selina laughed. “Oh you know...small town girl, runs to the big city to make it big. Realizes that was all a dream and chooses a different path.” She sipped her wine before setting her glass down and picking up the menu. “I highly recommend the steak and Australian lobster.”

Bruce nodded with a twinkle in his eyes. “Then steak and lobster it is.”

Selina grinned. “I like a man who listens to a woman.”

Bruce returned her smile. “I listen to anyone who gives me good advice.”

Selina chuckled. “I’ll remember that.”

Back at Wayne Manor that same evening, Jack was downstairs in the kitchen with Alfred, who had an apron over his butler uniform, and held up a spoonful of creamy potato soup for the younger man to take a sip from. Jack, now dressed in grey pinstriped slacks and a white button down shirt, leaned forward to taste it. He glanced at the ceiling, rolling the substance over his tongue then grinned. “That is perfect Alfred!”

Alfred smiled. “Thank you, Master Jack.”

“Is the table set up yet?” Jack asked as he walked over to open the refrigerator and take a look at the dessert inside, a hazelnut chocolate cheesecake.

Alfred stirred the soup as he glanced over his shoulder. “I had a couple of the gardeners take one of the dessert tables and a couple of chairs out to where the willow tree sits. I even had them set up one of the umbrellas from the patio. I also had them put a vase of cut roses on the table.”

Jack grinned pleased. “I appreciate your help Alfred. Harley will love the roses!”

Alfred turned around with a smile. “Is this a special occasion, Master Jack?”

Jack grinned brightly. “Nope, just wanted Harley to feel special.”

Alfred smiled softly in approval and nodded.

Upstairs Harley was putting on the dress that Jack had bought her without telling her. She found it hanging on the back of the door of her bedroom door when she had come inside to pick up a few things to move into Jack's room. Jack had told her he wanted her to stay in his room from now on. She had just grabbed a pile of clothing when she turned around to see the dress hanging there. The dress was an A-line scoop neck chiffon evening dress in black. The dress was asymmetrical; the front part of the skirt fell just below her knees then flowed back into a lovely floor length. The sides of the dress at her waist were cut out showing off the sides of her waist and wrapped around to expose her lower back. There was a note attached to the dress that stated:

“Get ready, I will come pick you up. J.”

Harley giggled as she took the dress down and hurried to get ready. She showered, dressed (the dress fit her perfectly when she put it on) and had just sat down to do her hair and makeup when she noticed yet another gift sitting on her vanity, a long velvet jewelry box. Harley reached forward and picked it up, opening it slowly. Inside the box was a diamond and ruby drop pendant. The ruby was pear cut dangling from a diamond on a silver chain. Harley sucked in her breath reaching out to touch the necklace, her fingertips just barely stroking the gem. “Oh Jack,” she said breathlessly.

She swallowed, finishing her makeup before she took her hair, parting it and with the help of a curling iron, Harley styled her hair to look a great deal like Rita Hayworth's with thick curls around her shoulders. She had just finished with her lipstick, leaning down to slip on a pair of deep red high heels with a bow on the side of her ankle where there was a strap, when there was a knock at her door. Harley hurried to her feet rushing for the door and opened it.

Jack stood at the door wearing fitted double vested dark grey pinstriped suit. He paired it with a silver and purple paisley striped tie and a pair of two-tone leather wing-tip Oxfords. Harley noticed that this time he had done his own make-up, with elegant lines highlighting his eyes and a shade of red that made her want to kiss his lips even more than usual. He had even freshened up his nail polish from earlier. Having his arm in the sling did not take away from the smart, attractive image he projected. Jack bowed at the waist. “My lady?”

Harley giggled. “Jack, you look amazing.”

Jack wrinkled his nose at her with a chuckled, “You look pretty darn amazing too my little harlequin. And you do the necklace justice I must say.”

He held out his hand taking hers and tugged her toward him; her body lined up perfectly with his (despite the arm in the sling.) “So my sweet thing, dinner with me tonight under a weeping willow? Dancing afterward and hot fucking later?”

Harley laughed. “Yes to all of the above!”

Jack grinned brightly showing off his perfect teeth. “Then come along sweets! A night of enchantment awaits!”

Selina smiled tilting her head at Bruce. Their food had been served and Bruce smiled. “This smells delightful.”

Selina laughed lightly. “It tastes even better.” She picked up her knife and fork cutting into the thick meat. “So how do you know Harvey and Gilda?”

“Well, I'm supporting Harvey's bid for the DA and hopefully in the future, mayor of Gotham. I think he can do a lot of good. We have become really good friends, seeing eye to eye on a lot of things that need to happen in Gotham.” Bruce popped a bite of steak into his mouth.

Selina nodded as she picked up her wine glass. She was about to say something when she saw Harvey and Gilda working their way over to their table. “Well speak of the devil.”

Jack led Harley out to the gardens, past the more formally tended gardens, out past the walking trails of crushed rock that twisted through the gardens and heading toward an ancient looking willow tree with branches heavy with yellow green leaves. Under the tree was a round table set with a white table cloth and two chairs. Hanging from many of the branches of the willow tree and providing a soft warm glow on the table were lanterns. On the table were covered platters and a bottle of wine chilling in a bucket of ice.

“Oh Jack, it's beautiful!” Harley gasped in astonishment.
Jack grinned pleased with himself, leading Harley over to the table, pulling her chair out for her.

“This was my mother's favorite spot. I remember coming out here with her. She would sit under this tree with me on her lap and read me stories for hours on end. Just the two of us.” Jack's voice was soft with memories. Harley reached out and touched his hand. Jack looked into her eyes and gave her a wide smile. “Now this tree is going to be all about you and me.” Jack brought her hand up and kissed her fingertips before releasing her hand.

He took his seat across from her and reached across the table to take her hand again. “Will you marry me?” Jack asked with a wide grin.

Harley laughed. “Didn't you ask me that already?”

“Yes Jack, yes yes yes I will marry you!” Harley squeezed his hand.

Jack laughed. “Good! Now that you're going to be my wife, I want to make new memories.” He kissed her hand before pressing her knuckles against his cheek. “My soul-mate,” he said in a hushed voice. “My partner in crime, my lover, my girl.”

“Oh Jack...” Harley's eyes stung a little, causing her to blink rapidly.

“Bruce! Selina! How great to see the two of you!” Harvey reached over grabbing Bruce's hand. Bruce swallowed his bite at the same time standing up with a chuckle. “Harvey, nice to see you! Gilda!” Bruce took her hand and kissed it.

Gilda blushed, her hand resting on her stomach. “Sorry to bother you, but Harvey insisted on coming over and saying hello, even though I told him not to—I hope we're not ruining anything.”

Selina laughed glancing at Bruce. “It's fine. Why don't you two join us?”

Bruce nodded. “Yes, please.”

Gilda started to protest, but Selina hooked her arm though her friend's and guided her to a seat. “Come on Gilda—it's fine. The more the merrier.”

It took a couple of moments, but a waiter brought over a couple of extra chairs and the four of them were sitting around the table together, Selina ordered more wine and asking for a couple of menus.

Harvey patted Bruce on the arm. “I'm glad we ran into you. I was hoping that I could invite you and your brother to dinner next week. I wanted to extend my apologies to your brother and Miss Quinn over what happened.”

Bruce frowned. “But Harvey,” he protested, “it wasn't your fault.”

Harvey frowned. “Well, I feel like it was, and I would love to treat you, your brother and Miss Quinn to dinner.” Harvey smiled at Selina. “We could have a couples' dinner. If you want, Bruce, we can make it a working dinner, I have some things I wanted to discuss with you, like my stance on masked vigilantes...I would like your input since Batman had a bit part in rescuing your brother.”

Bruce paled slightly at the mention of Batman, but his smile masked it. “I think that will be a wonderful idea. I mean, if you would like to go Selina?”
Selina smiled and purred. “Sure thing Brucie.”

Harvey grinned. “We can go to that new French restaurant that's opening next week. I just happen to know the owner.”

Selina lifted an impressed eyebrow. “Really?”

Gilda smiled. “Yes, Harvey helped him with some legal troubles a while back and they have been friends ever since.”

“It's always good to have friends.” Harvey smiled.

“Indeed.” Bruce returned the smile and sipped his wine.

Harley giggled softly as Jack leaned over to feed her a bite of lobster. He grinned a little lopsided, his blue eyes glued to her lips. He liked to watch the way her lips moved, the simple act of her chewing; licking her lips with that pink tongue of hers was enticing.

Jack whispered. “You ever see those women that have sushi eaten off their naked bodies?”

Harley chewed and swallowed before she answered. “I've seen articles about it, why?” Harley picked up her wine to take a sip.

Jack licked his lips, his eyes raking over. “It's called nyotaimori and I want to do that with you...naked in my room while I eat sushi off of you, and then eat you, slowly.” Jack emphasized the point by running his tongue over his lips.

Harley giggled, a blush blossoming across her cheeks which had Jack laughing. “Why Miss Harley, did I embarrass you?”

Harley laughed. “No,” she protested and then said, “maybe...”

Jack waggled his eyebrows. “And after the things I've done to you...and plan on doing?”

Harley giggled taking another sip of her wine. Jack smiled, stood up, took his sling off and tossed it onto his chair. “Dance with me Miss Quinn?”

He put his hand out to her. At first, she thought to protest him taking the sling off, but instead Harley stared up at him. “Why thank you Mr. Wayne.”

She placed her hand in his, wrapping her fingers around his hand. Jack tugged her to her feet and into his arms. There was no music playing, just the breeze through the tree, and the distant sounds of night insects. Jack tugged her body against his; if it hurt him at all he didn't show it. He wrapped one hand around her waist, the other holding her hand against his chest while he started to sway with her. Jack hummed softly then sang under his breath while he weaved Harley back and forth under the lanterns.

“It only happens when I dance with you

That trip to heaven till the dance is through

With no one else do the heavens seem quite so near

Why does it happen, dear, only with you? “
Harley smiled into his eyes completely enamored. Jack spun her around, then out before he pulled her back into his arms, weaving in place. He pressed his lips against her ear continuing to sing to her.

“Two cheeks together can be so divine
But only when those cheeks are yours and mine
I've danced with dozens of others the whole night through
But the thrill that comes with spring when anything can happen
That only happens with you ...”

He turned her around with him, kissing her cheek and then down to her neck, brushing his lips up the slope of her neck before he whispered with a smile in his voice, “I think tomorrow we should go ring shopping.”

Jack turned, caressing his nose against hers. Harley licked his lips and purred a response. “That sounds fun Jack...”

Jack laughed, nibbling her lips. “My girl deserves a proper ring on her finger, let the world know who you belong to...”

“You Jack, I belong to you,” Harley murmured against his lips.

He twirled her around with a whispered, “I belong to you Harley.”

Jack then surprised her when he dipped her back. Harley laughed as Jack explained. “We are quickly approaching the fucking part of the evening.” Jack growled with a waggle of his eyebrows just before he brushed his teeth across her bottom lip then over her chin.

Harley squealed and giggled when Jack brought her back upright. He twirled her around again right toward the willow tree. He pressed her up against the trunk of the tree, his mouth covering hers. The kiss was hot, passionate, greedy. Harley kissed him in return with just as much vigor, her teeth sliding against his tongue. He rolled his body along hers, his pelvis thrusting against hers, pressing her back against the tree. Harley gasped and hissed, pressing her hips back against him. Through their clothing she could feel the heat of his body, making her desire spike. She wanted, needed to claw at him.

Jack pressed her back, breaking the kiss to lean down and mouth her breasts through the dress, his hands slipping down, then up her sides, grabbing fistfuls of her dress, shoving the cloth out of the way. He lifted her dress further until he could hook his hands under the skirt. Jack grinned pulling back just enough to brush his nose against hers.

“Why Miss Quinn, you aren't wearing any panties.”

Harley gave Jack a sly look. “Why Mr. Wayne, I ain't wearing any panties am I?”

Jack laughed. “My little minx.”

He purred just before he brushed his teeth over her chin. “You're a bad girl and I love it.”
Harley groaned, her hands sliding into his hair. “I'm all yours Jack, all yours.”

She pulled his head down to her neck where Jack bit down on her skin, sucking at the same time his fingers stroked against her, sending shivers of delighted heat through her entire body. Jack teased, rubbing hard, his finger dipping into her which earned him a cry of pleasure from Harley.

He thrust his finger into her with a whispered, “That's my girl.”

Harley whimpered, pressing against his finger, his thumb stroking over her until she cried out again. “Jack!”

He pulled his fingers away, causing Harley to shudder breathlessly. He scrambled a moment or two to pull his slacks open, shoving them down to his knees at the same instance as he lifted her up higher, sliding her against the trunk of the tree and shove himself deep inside her. Harley gasped the moment Jack entered her. He grabbed one of her legs under his good arm, lifting her leg high and giggling in appreciation of how flexible Harley was while he thrust hard and fast, burying himself deep into her yielding body, the warm wet sounds of him entering her, pulling out and entering her again mixed with their desperate panting. His free hand, Jack wrapped around her throat, squeezing just slightly, not enough to hurt her, but firmly, and causing her to grin at him.

Jack moaned. “You're beautiful Harley, my pumpkin, my poo, my baby girl.”

Harley whimpered, her fingers grabbing fistfuls of his hair, her head back against the tree completely ruining her hair do.

“Oh Jack!! Jack!” Her whole body bounced up and down against the tree.

He pounded harder into her hissing. “Harley...My Harley!”

Harley dropped her hands to Jack's shoulders holding on, grabbing fistfuls of his suit jacket in her hands while Jack bounced her up and and down against the tree trunk. Harley came with a loud groan.

“Oh Puddin’!”

Her body clamping down hard around his member caused Jack to burst, pressing his body tight against her hissing. “Harley, oh god Harley...”

The rest of the dinner had been nice if not exactly what Bruce had been expecting. Harvey and his wife stayed the whole time with him and and Selina, talking about this and that. It had been, well, normal, something Bruce realized he was lacking in his life. Bruce had decided to get Gilda something nice for the baby she was expecting though he wasn't sure what; he would have to ask his secretary. But part of Bruce felt sad, this was all an illusion...normal. No one knew what he did most nights....no one could ever know but Alfred. Then there was Jack.

Bruce pushed his thoughts aside as he drove up to the gates of the manor, hitting the button inside the vehicle that opened the gates. Bruce drove through, heading toward the manor when he saw what looked like lanterns hanging from the old willow. Bruce frowned, curious. What on earth, he thought to himself. He slowed his car down trying to see what was going on when he slammed on the brakes.

The light wasn’t perfect, but he didn’t need it to be to see that Jack and Harley were up against the willow...
Bruce quickly turned away and hit the gas a little too hard speeding up the drive.

Harley woke with a start, squealing when Jack wrapped his arms around her and blew raspberries against her shoulder. “Wake up!” he yelled.

“Ack!! Puddin!!” Harley squealed.

Jack nibbled on her shoulder. “Come on!! I wanna go ring shopping!!” He started tickling her until Harley was squawking for him to stop. Jack kept at it until Harley kicked him. He laughed, but let go, giving her a chance to roll right out of the bed and onto the floor.

“JACK!! Ouch!” Harley yelped.

Jack propped himself on his elbows looking over the side of the bed at her. “Shouldn't have kicked me now should you pooh.”

Harley stuck her tongue out at him. “You're horrible.”

“Yes, yes I am.” Jack grinned brightly. “But so are you.”

Harley wrinkled her nose at him and hopped to her feet. She was completely naked (just like Jack). She turned and ran to the shower. “Last one in the shower is a rotten egg!”

Jack jumped up. “Hey!! Harley!! No fair, I gave you a head start!”

“You're just a sore loser!!” Harley yelled back.

Jack laughed as he ran into the bathroom where Harley was squealing and soon the both of them were laughing together.

Soon, the two of them were dressed for the day. Today, Jack was in a pair of black trousers, a white dress shirt with a black blazer over that and a pair of black and purple two-tone wingtip Oxfords. Harley thought he looked good enough to drag him back inside and rip his clothing off.

Harley wore a pair of red business causal pants that had a bow around the waist and a sleeveless lace black top and black high heels that had a strap around her ankles. Her hair was down and loose around her shoulders and she wore the ruby necklace from last night around her neck.

Both of them had their makeup on, nails painted and grins in place, ready to attack Gotham in the day light.

Jack, refusing to put his sling back on after last night despite Harley's protests, grinned. “I feel like taking the bike today!”

He held the door open for Harley who frowned. “Jack, do you think that is a good idea with your shoulder?”

Jack laughed with a shake of his head. “Nope.” He giggled causing Harley to laugh despite herself.

The day was turning into a warm one in Gotham as Jack drove the motorcycle into the downtown shopping area of Gotham, weaving in and out of traffic easily. Neither Jack nor Harley were wearing helmets, letting the wind blow through their hair. Harley tightened her thighs around Jack's hips and held her arms up and yelled, “YAHTZEE!!” as loud as she could, bringing a laugh to Jack's lips as they zipped between a couple of cars and rushed through an intersection just as the light changed.

Jack pulled up in front of Gotham's Graff jewelry store, a high end jewelry store known for its diamonds. This particular store was known for the jeweler Anton Ricci, who was on staff here. Jack hopped off the bike, grabbed Harley around the waist and nearly lifted her off the bike before yanking her against him.

He kissed her hard on the mouth and whispered, “You make me happy Harley.”

Harley wrapped her arms around his neck, her hands smoothing his hair back as she hissed softly. “You make me happy too Jack.”

Neither one of them cared that people were staring (or that a few people, who clearly recognized them from the news, were taking pictures or video.) Jack grabbed her rear, yanking her hard up against him, biting her mouth while growling softly. Harley responded by grinding up against him.

Jack sighed happily, finally releasing her mouth. “Let's go get you a ring my sweets.”

The inside of the jewelry store was all marble and dark wood glass displays with lighting designed to give the place a warm and comfortable atmosphere, with the light in the cases designed to make the gems inside sparkle and glitter with an almost unrealistic glow. Jack was practically skipping as he came inside, his hand in Harley's.

Harley looked around, her eyes wide. She had never in all her life seen so many jewels, gems, gold or silver in one place. It was a little intimidating to know how much money was in this place—and the people! She looked around seeing a few couples in here, and though she wasn't an expert on clothing, it was clear to her that everyone shopping in here wore expensive outfits. Harley felt slightly under dressed, but Jack completely ignored everyone as he headed straight to one of the woman standing behind a display, tugging Harley along with him.

The woman at the counter was tall, thin to the point that her cheekbones looked like they would cut anyone who dared to touch her. Her hair was styled to the point of stiffness, pulled too tightly back, tugging her skin back in the most gruesome way. She wore a black pencil skirt and matching black blouse, but when she saw Jack, her stony face broke into a rather frightening smile. Harley immediately thought...Stepford wife, yup.

Jack grinned, leaning on the counter. He glanced at the woman's name tag. “Helga. I need to talk to Ricci.”

Helga's smile dropped. “Anton Ricci only talks to patrons with appointments.”

Jack rolled his eyes. “Tell him it's Jack Wayne. He'll see me.”

Helga looked unsure for a moment; she started to protest again. Jack held up a finger at her as his eyes narrowed. “Do it.”

Haughtily, Helga snapped her mouth closed and turned around to march into the back. Jack grinned watching her go before he stood up and wrapped his arm around Harley's waist. “So I was thinking, something with diamonds and rubies, what do you think?”
Harley had just opened her mouth to reply when a young man came dashing out from the back.

“JACK!!”

The young man that came rushing out was wearing a pair of black slacks, matching black vest and a white shirt. He was short, maybe five feet four, with a black, thin, handlebar mustache and goatee that ended in a point as if he were trying to be an old time devil or vaudevillian. The shorter man ran around the counter and nearly slammed into Jack, wrapping his arms around him. Jack laughed hugging the man in return. “Anton!!”

Anton laughed and stood back looking up at Jack. “Ah, man I heard about the kidnapping. Geez, you know how to get yourself into trouble don't you man! So, when are you going to hook me up with One-armed Alex again. I haven't hit the races since the last time you, me and Frank were there causing trouble.”

Jack laughed. “Well, you know what they say, you aren't having any fun unless you're getting into trouble. I promise, I will get you in contact with Alex soon, but right now...”

Jack patted the man's back before he turned Anton around to face Harley. Jack threw his arm out like a game show host. “Anton, I would like you to met my fiancee, the magnificent Harley Quinn.”

Anton's eyes widened as he looked Harley. “Wow, you are the woman that's agreed to marry Jack?”

Harley smiled doing a little curtsy. “Yep, that's me.”

Anton walked over and took her hand, kissing her knuckles.“Well Miss Quinn, you must be crazy to marry this guy.” Anton grinned pointing over his shoulder with a thumb at Jack.

Jack laughed walking around Anton to wrap his arm around Harley's waist. “Yes, yes she is...” Jack turned to look at Harley stealing a soft kiss before directing his gaze back to Anton. “How is Frank by the way?”

“Oh my baby is doing good. He is off in Central city doing some business, though he will back for the weekend.” Anton grinned then motioned them to follow. “Come on you two, come to my office and let's talk.”

Anton led them into the back of the jewelry store where Anton's office was actually his work space. The space was dominated by his workbench and several locked cabinets that Harley guessed contained precious metals, jewels and the tools of his trade. Anton pulled a couple of folding chairs from against the wall, setting them up near his workbench. Jack sat down in one of the chairs, but instead of having Harley sit in the other chair, Jack tugged her over to his lap causing her to giggle. Jack wrapped a hand around her thigh, his other hand on her hip. Anton sat at his workbench and steepled his fingers, his elbows resting on the bench.

“So, what can I do for you, Jack? Are you here to have a ring designed for a certain beautiful woman?” Anton winked at Harley.

Harley blushed as Jack gave her a squeeze, his arms tight around her. “Yes indeed, I want you to design my girl here an engagement ring.”

Anton grinned happily pulling out a drawer at his workbench. From the drawer Anton took out a pad and pencil. “So, tell me what you have in mind.”

After nearly forty-five minutes they had a design; a black gold band that held a circle of rubies and diamonds, all radiant cuts and in the center a large 2.15 radiant cut diamond. Jack and Harley looked over the design that Anton had put together on paper.

Harley squeaked. “Oh Jack it’s too much!”

Jack grinned. “It's perfect! Nothing is too good for my girl.”

Anton grinned pleased with himself and looked between the two of them. “Give me two weeks and the ring should be ready. This will be my top priority.”

Jack stood and pulled Anton into a hug, not your typical “guy” hug, but a genuine, affectionate hug. “Thank you Anton. Maybe we, the four of us, can get together and do some betting or a game of cards?” Jack winked at him.

Anton laughed. “Oh I know better than to play cards with you Jack, but yeah, that would be great.”

Anton stepped away from Jack and turned to Harley. He grabbed her, wrapping his arms around her in a snug hug. Harley looked startled, but she hugged him back just as affectionately. Anton let go and held Harley at arms length.

“You must be something pretty special to hook our Jack.” He leaned close to her and whispered against her ear. “Keep him safe, he has a gift for finding trouble.” Anton stepped back with a gentle pat to her arm. Harley smiled in return. “I plan on it.”

Anton nodded and turned back to Jack. “Frank is going to adore your girl. So when can I expect an invitation to the wedding?”

Jack and Harley both smiled and said together. “No idea.”

Anton put his hands on his hips and stared at the two of them like a scolding mother. “Well, get to picking a date you two.”

Jack and Harley had just stepped out of back room, and into the main showroom of the jewelry store, leaving Anton in the back to get to work. Jack was discussing where they should go for lunch when two people walked into the jewelry store. Jack stopped dead in his tracks and his arm around Harley's waist tightened. Harley frowned at the shift in Jack's face, her eyes following Jack gaze. There, having just walked in, were Troy and Tiffany. Troy was dressed in a pair of white slacks, a white polo with a pink blazer over the top, his hair still maintaining that “Ken” doll look. Tiffany wasn't any better. She wore a pair of bright reddish-orange slacks with a leopard print, sleeveless top and beige ballet flats. It was clear to anyone that the clothing was expensive, even if the taste of the Randell's clothing was questionable.

Harley started to open her mouth to say something, but Jack hissed back without looking at her. “This is going to go one of two ways. Either Troy will see us and stomp over here to hit me, Tiffany might even try to hit you. OR—and the mostly likely choice since Troy is a coward—he will try to start a battle of wits, which will include being extremely loud as he tries to draw as many people into the fight as he can while hurling insults. Either way, this is about to get messy.” Jack's grin was wide. “It's gonna be great.”

No sooner had the words come out of Jack's mouth than Troy turned and saw Jack and Harley standing there smiling. The way Troy's face fell was comical, but Tiffany's was even better. Her hair looked as if she had had it done at “The Wives of Orange County” boutique, her make-up was too perfect, her nails too long and whoever had outlined her lips looks as if they had been going for the “evangelical TV pastor wife” look. When her expression dropped, Harley giggled thinking Tiffany was in serious trouble of losing her entire face with the way her expression struggled not to fall from all the botox (as with everything the Randell’s did, Harley guessed, moderation was not something they believed in), but gravity was winning.

Troy recovered first and sneered. “Well if it isn't Jack Wayne, you cheating pile of shit and his bitch.”

Jack lifted a brow at Troy with a grin. “Whoa there Troy, such language.”

People in the jewelry store turned to look at the confrontation between the two couples.

Troy walked over to Jack and pushed him in the chest. “You and your paid for cunt here did that on purpose yesterday.”

Jack’s eyes narrowed slowly. “What did you call Harley?”

Troy sneered again. “You heard me.”

Tiffany, in a surprising moment of common sense, hurried over and grabbed Troy by the arm. “Troy not here! Not like this!”

Troy yanked his arm free from Tiffany. “You're just a sad little throwaway son, you know that Wayne. I'm sure your parents were glad to get killed just to get away from a whiny little brat like you.”

Jack’s eyes narrowed. Only Harley saw the slight twitch in his cheek, but Jack continued to smile. “Oh Troy. Do you realize that people just tolerate you? That Tiffany here is only with you for the money?”

Tiffany let out a little squeak which made Harley snicker, thinking to herself that apparently Jack had hit the nail on the head with that last remark.

Tiffany’s tiny little eyes flashed at Harley. “What are you laughing about you...you gold-digger!”

Harley made a face at Tiffany and stuck her tongue out. “Oh shut up Tiffany, you're not pretty enough to be this stupid.”

Tiffany’s mouth flopped open and closed, she clearly didn't know how to respond to Harley's insult. Harley smiled. “I have a PhD, don't even try Tiffany.”

Jack snorted grinning at Harley. That was about the time the manager, a short, bald man in a black suit came hurrying over, putting himself between the two couples. “I'm going to have to ask you both to leave if you are going to continue this behavior.”

Troy turned on the manager. “Shut up! I could buy this shop and kick you on the street, you urchin.”

Jack sighed directing his attention to the manager. “Sorry about my friend here, I'm not sure how he even survived infancy.”

The manager glanced sideways at Troy, but smiled at Jack. “Indeed. Could you move outside please?”

Jack smiled with a little nod. “Of course.”

Jack started to guide Harley around Troy and Tiffany, when Troy grabbed Jack’s upper arm, digging his fingers in as he did his best to hurt Jack, but Jack didn't respond to the pain except to raise an eyebrow at Troy, glancing down at Troy's hand then back at Troy. “You should move that unless you want to lose it. And believe me Troy,” Jack's voice was low and devoid of emotion. “That is not an idle threat.”

Troy hissed low, dropping his hand but kept his voice pitched low so the manager didn't hear him. “You are nothing Wayne...” He shoved Jack's shoulder forcing Jack to face him (Jack letting him) and stepped right up to Jack's chest thrusting his own chest forward in an effort to intimidate Jack. “You will never be half the man that your brother Bruce is.”

Jack just continued to smile, not moving an inch back from Troy. Jack's calm response to Troy caused the other man to feel a chill run up his spine. “Troy, you are one of those people who would be enormously improved by death.”

Troy blinked at the insult, but Jack continued. “Your biggest problem is that your little brain is primitive, you have no self-control, or maybe it's because you took three-fourths of your penis and shoved it into your personality?”

With that Jack took Harley's hand in his (Harley had her free hand over her mouth trying not to laugh too loudly, but she was having a difficult time of it) and walked around Troy and Tiffany, heading for the door. Troy yelled back at him making a spectacle of himself. “Yeah, walk away Wayne! You know you couldn't beat me in a fair fight!” Jack stopped. Harley felt the tension in his muscles. He turned to glanced over his shoulder at Troy. “You know Troy, I don't care enough about you to hate you.” With that Jack pushed the door open and stepped outside, but just before they were out of ear shout Harley turned and waved, shouting. “I hope your day is as pleasant as you are!”

Once they were outside Jack sighed. Harley looked at him with concern. “Are you all right?”

“Yes, just...you know I think we may have to do something permanent about Troy and Tiffany.” Jack mused walking with her down to the parked motorcycle, but he stopped short beside the car that was pinning the motorcycle in...which had to have been deliberate. The car was a white convertible 2017 Mercedes-Benz AMG SL Base with black leather interior. Jack smirked tilting his head, letting go and walking around the car, studying it. Whoever owned the car had parked like an asshole, angling the car in such a way that no one could accidentally scratch the paint by parking near it (besides the fact that whoever owned the car was pinning Jack's motorcycle in. He would have to carefully walk it out of the spot in order for them to use the bike).

Jack stopped when he came to the front of the car and grinned. “Now will you look at this.”

Harley walked over to look at what Jack had noticed. He pointed and Harley saw the vanity license plate that read “TroysBaby.” Jack laid his fingers against his chin tapping it.

“Oh let me guess who this belongs to.”

Harley wrinkled her nose. “Those vanity plates are creepy.”

Jack laughed then slowly grinned. “How much time do you think we have?”

Harley tilted her head looking at Jack before she glanced at the jewelry store. “They just walked into the store. After that little confrontation, I would say they are going to want to spend a little more time than they were planning just to show off and to make sure the manager knows they have money to Jack's grin was wicked. “I think I can work with that.”

Harley smirked narrowing her eyes. “What do you have planned?”

Harley stood guard watching the Randells through the store's picture window, while Jack took off down the street at a jog. He was gone a good twenty minutes. Harley started to become worried, but when he returned he had a brown paper bag full of supplies that he had said he needed to 'fix' Troy's car.

Jack came jogging up with his bag. Harley had been leaning on the bike, pushed up when she saw him. Jack grinned. “They still inside?”

“Yes, I think they are looking at necklaces or something. It looked like Troy was arguing with Anton about something earlier. They are still in there. So what did you go get?” she asked pulling down the side of the bag to look inside. Jack giggled. “I bought us a cornucopia of pranks my sweet!” Jack set the bag down on the sidewalk. “The first thing we are going to do is dump this pound of sugar into Troy's gas tank. Then I bought a gallon of paint and some wire.”

Harley frowned. “What's that for?”

“Oh you'll see and I bought some spray paint for each of us too.” Jack was giggling. “And! A tennis ball for the exhaust.” Jack tossed her the ball which Harley caught easily.

“Would you do the honors my sweetling?”

Harley giggled and hurried over dropping down to a crouch behind Troy's car and shoved the tennis ball as far up the tail pipe as she could, standing up and giving it a few good kicks before grinning at Jack.

Jack took the can of paint and set it carefully in the backseat, he pulled the lid off, then set it on top of the paint can, lifting the handle. From there he tied the wire around the handle carefully drawing it out before he tied it around the stick shift of the car. Next, Jack poured the sugar into the gas tank, all of it, careful not to spill much on the sidewalk.

A few people walked by and glanced at them, but did nothing to stop them or even stopped to ask them what they were doing. Harley figured it was a case of “not wanting to get involved” or “crazy rich people.”

Jack then eased his way out of the car. He grabbed the two cans of spray paint and tossed one to Harley. She grabbed it out of the air easily, giggling.

“Pink?” she asked.

Jack grinned wide. “Of course, you saw his jacket. Had to be pink. Mine is orange in honor of Tiffany's God awful pants.” They both started laughing.

“What should we write?” Harley asked examining the car.

“Eh, let's not write anything...just draw dicks...you know my sweet, the classics.” Jack grinned which caused Harley to burst out laughing.
After well over an hour, Troy and Tiffany left the jewelry store in a huff. Troy was complaining as he stomped out. “I just can't believe the service in that place! I guess I shouldn't be surprised, I mean they let trash like Jack Wayne walk in there.”

Tiffany saw the car first, stopping in her tracks, though Troy kept walking around to his side of the car before he noticed the brightly colored orange and pink dicks painted all over his new car. For a moment Troy didn't do anything but stand there staring. Tiffany, her hands over her mouth watched him in horror waiting for the explosion, which came a split second later.

“WHAT THE MOTHERFUCKING HELL!!! Who did this??!!” Troy started screaming. People on the sidewalk (who had been walking by snickering at the penis graffiti on the car for the last fifteen minutes, a few stopping to take pictures) either hurried away or a few stopped to film as Troy literally stomped his foot and screamed. “WHO DID THIS??!”

Tiffany rushed over. “Troy, Troy stop it! You're making a scene.”

“A scene!! A SCENE!! Do you see my car??!” Troy kicked his car. Tiffany grabbed his hands. “Troy, come on lets go home, it's just some paint you can have it fixed.”

Troy breathed heavily through his teeth before he finally yanked the door open. “Fine, get in Tiffany.”

Tiffany hurriedly ran around the car and hopped in, buckling her seat belt. Troy slammed the key and revved the engine. The moment he did, the tennis ball shot out of the tailpipe like a bullet, smashing into the headlights of the car behind them shattering the glass. Troy and Tiffany yelped turning around. Troy cursed, turning back around and ripped his car out of the park space, as he did so, ripped the gear shaft back and forth, the wire became taunt and the gallon of paint in the back was ripped off the seat, bright pink bubblegum paint spilled across the black leather. The bright pink paint splashed Troy and Tiffany. Tiffany screamed as did Troy at the same time that he yanked his car into traffic to the sounds of honking horns and cursing people. Troy tore down the street disappearing, accompanied by the sounds of honks and screeching tires.

A week later.

There next session with Dr. Leland would be tomorrow, but right now Harley had other things on her mind.

Harley was in the bathroom with the pregnancy test that had arrived that morning. She had ordered it online and managed to hide it among her things until she could slip it into the bathroom with her. She didn't want Jack to know; she wasn't sure why, except she was scared. She had it sitting on the counter waiting. The little white stick seemed to dominate the bathroom sink glaring in its whiteness.

Jack had gone downstairs to wait for the delivery of their outfits for the dinner tonight with Harvey Dent and his wife. They were going to the opening of a new restaurant, just a casual dinner between friends.

Jack was just excited to dress up again. He had insisted on new clothes for them both. Harley smiled. Jack loved playing dress-up; his love of clothing was fun and she found she enjoyed playing dress-up too. She picked up her toothbrush and squeezed some toothpaste onto the bristles focusing on the task of brushing her teeth and NOT on the test that sat near the sink. She was hoping the results would be ready before Jack came back up the stairs with the new dress.

She spit and rinsed her teeth before she started to pace back and forth again. What would she do if she was pregnant? Would Jack be happy or furious? Harley stopped and looked at herself in the mirror. Today she was looking younger than usual with light makeup and her hair was up in pigtails. She wore a simple pair of red shorts and a buttoned white blouse that she had tied around her middle. Jack and she were supposed to go out and play some miniature golf today before going out to dinner.

Harley stared at the test. It was angled in such a way that she couldn't see it from where she was presently standing. She licked her lips, then nervously started churning her bottom lip. She slowly reached for the pregnancy test, picked it up, and wrapped her hand around it so that she couldn't see the results. She took a deep breath, looking at herself in the mirror. “You can do this Harley,” she said out loud staring into her blue eyes before she nodded with false confidence. She opened her hand then turned the test around and looked down to see the two pink lines that indicated that she was indeed pregnant.

* Jack walked into the room carrying two garment bags with a big smile plastered on his face. In one bag Jack held his new suit and the other held Harley's new dress. With his other arm, he held two shoe boxes with new shoes in them. Jack called out happily: “Harley, our costumes for the evening are here!”

He hummed, grinning as he laid the garment bags across the bed. He had purchased Harley a gorgeous A-line/princess, off the shoulder dress with a sweep train of chiffon and a ruffled split front to show off her sexy legs. He had purchased for her a pair of black high heel sandals with cutouts along the sides that were decorated with rhinestones and a strap that wrapped around her ankles—he loved ankle straps, they made Harley's legs that much more sexy. Jack's suit for the evening was a navy blue three piece suit, slim cut to highlight his own figure with a vest that buttoned at an angle, a white shirt, a striped navy and silver tie along with a pair of two-tone wingtip navy blue leather oxfords. He had even bought Harley a new ornament to wear, which was a surprise, a pair of square and pear ruby teardrop earrings, set in rose gold. Jack held the jewelry box in his hand smiling down at the earrings, tracing his fingertip along the red jewels when Harley came out of the bathroom. Jack looked up smiling, ready to show her the earrings when he saw that she looked...wrong. Jack frowned, his Harley looked pale and stunned.

“Harley? You all right pumpkin?” Jack snapped the case closed and tossed the earrings down onto the bed. He walked over to take Harley into his arms. “Hey, what happened pooh bear?”

Harley's bottom lip started to quiver. She thought she knew how she was going to tell him, but instead she simply placed the pregnancy test in his hand. Jack frowned in confusion turning the plastic stick over and stared at it. The two pink lines seemed to leap out at him. Jack stared, unable to form a coherent thought for a few seconds before he spoke.

“Harley? Are you—are you pregnant?” Jack's voice had dropped to a mere whisper.

Harley nodded just as tears started to flow down her cheeks. “Yes. I noticed I was late last week, but when I didn't start...”

Jack tossed the test onto the bed and grabbed Harley's face in both hands, pressing his mouth to hers. His kiss was slow, just a sweet pressing of his lips over hers, first one angle, then the next, his mouth traveling lightly over hers as if he was using his lips to gently feel each inch of her own in a loving caress. With just the tip of his tongue, Jack licked her lips urging her to open her mouth. Harley let out a soft moan, her arms going around Jack's waist holding him tight against her.

After another minute Jack laid his forehead against hers. “Thank you Harley,” he whispered.

“Thank you?” Harley asked confused.

Jack smiled brushing his nose against hers. “You've made me so happy. I have you and now we are going to have a baby. A little Jack or Harley, a person created by the two of us. Our own family.”

Jack laughed and reached down grabbing her under her rear and lifted her up in the air, spinning around with her. “We are going to be parents!! How awesome is that?”

Harley laughed with Jack carrying her to the bed and tossing her down before jumping on top of her heedless of the garment bags or the earrings. Leaning on his arms above her, Jack grinned. “I think instead of miniature golfing we are going to do something else to celebrate you making me a daddy.”

Harley giggled, her previous fears completely vanished. “What's that?”

Jack waggled his eyebrows and shimmied down her body, his fingers working at her shorts. He loosened them before grabbing them around the band and yanked them off of her. Harley squealed and laughed. “Jack!”

She was about to say something else, but before she could utter another word, Jack's tongue was taking long, slow licks from her that had her body vibrating with pleasure.

Jack stepped up behind Harley, wrapping his arms around her waist and gazed at her in the mirror. She was dressed in the long red dress he had purchased for her, the earrings dangling from her ears, the top part of her hair pulled back and held in place with a small gold clip, the rest falling in soft blonde waves around her shoulders.

“You look good enough to eat,” Jack whispered against her shoulder, placing a kiss there. The kiss left a perfect lipstick mark of his lips which he almost wiped away, but then decided against it. Then he chuckled. “Oh right, did that already.”

“Jack!” Harley laughed.

Jack winked at her licking his lips. “Mmm...”

Harley giggled and blushed. Jack turned her around to face him, cupping her face in his hands. “We should tell Bruce tonight.”

“Are you sure?” Harley looked pale at the mention of telling Bruce about her pregnancy.

“Yes, positive!” Jack grinned stealing a quick, careful kiss so as not to mess up either of their lip sticks before he took her hand. “We should get downstairs. I'm sure Bruce is about to have a fit and while that would be as funny as hell to watch, I'm actually looking forward to some dinner and dancing with my girl.”

With that, Jack took her hand tugging her along with him as he swept from the room.

Bruce was indeed waiting for them downstairs. He was dressed in a fairly typical black suit, white shirt affair, but he had taken extra care with his hair and had even added a gold tie clip to his suit.
Alfred was with him by the door, the two men talking when Jack and Harley, laughing and holding hands came rushing down the stairs.

“Sorry Bruce! Harley was repainting my nails for me to match my suit.” Jack laughed holding up his free hand to show that the nails were now indeed a shade of dark navy that looked almost black until the light caught the color and showed the deep blue.

Bruce made no comment on his brother's nail polish, but he did smile. “You two look very nice.”

Jack bowed while Harley curtsied, both of them giggling.

Bruce frowned, curious. “You two seem inordinately happy.”

“Well, I got some good news today which I'm going to share at dinner so everyone can share in our happiness!” Jack gave his brother a mysterious look. Bruce's frown deepened as he studied his brother and Harley. They both seemed to be excited about whatever this news was they had for him, but they wanted to wait until the restaurant, Bruce shrugged. “All right well, let's get going.”

The three of them walked out where one of the Waynes' cars was waiting. This time the vehicle was a seven-seater Volvo XC90 in a metallic blue color. The inside of the vehicle was cream colored with leather seats. A gentleman in the front wore a driver's outfit complete with black hat and black suit.

The three of them stepped into the vehicle, with Jack carefully handing Harley in. Bruce sat down in front of them while Jack and Harley took the back seats. After the driver turned down the driveway and headed out of the gate, Bruce turned around. He smiled at both of them leaning on his arm.

“Apparently this restaurant has an old-fashioned floor show. I believe Harvey said the show was acrobats? Not sure now, sort of a Cirque du Soleil type of performance.”

Harley grinned. “That's sounds fun.”

Jack nodded clearly distracted. Bruce frowned at his brother. Acrobats would have usually had Jack excited, but he didn't seem to care as much as usual. Bruce cleared his throat. “Jack?”

Jack glanced at Bruce, his attention had previously been on Harley, whose hand he was holding in his lap. “Yes?”

Bruce eyed his brother carefully. “Are you all right?”

Jack glanced at Harley with a smile on his face. She whispered encouragement to him. “Go ahead. I can tell you can't wait 'til the restaurant.”

Jack smiled widened before he turned to his brother. “Harley's pregnant!”

“What?” Bruce's voice dropped to a hushed tone, the shock on his face clear as day.

Jack continued grinning, his smile bright. “My Harley is pregnant! I'm going to be a dad!”

Jack brought Harley's hand up to his mouth where he kissed her knuckles leaving a light red print of his lips behind. Bruce stared then slowly he smiled. “You are going to be a daddy?”

Harley nodded affirmation. “Yes, he is.”

Jack waited. He would never admit it, but he was worried about Bruce's reaction. There was still that little boy deep down, hidden in the darkness, that wanted his big brother's approval and whether Bruce approved or not, Jack was happy that his girl was pregnant, that little boy still wanted Brucie to be happy with him and for him.

Bruce smiled at the both of them. “I'm going to be a uncle.”

All three of them laughed.

The new French restaurant was called The Monte. Tonight was its opening night and the place was filled to capacity. The driver dropped them off in front after a lengthy wait, but soon Bruce was leading them inside to where a maitre d' waited at a pulpit looking up names in the reservation book. The man was tall, thin with white blonde hair and grey eyes, but with a nice, friendly smile, wearing a tuxedo. When he saw them, it was clear he recognized the Waynes immediately.

“Ah, Mr. Bruce Wayne, Jack Wayne and friend. I will have someone escort you to your table in just a moment.” The maitre d' waved his fingers and a hostess in a french maid's outfit seemed to appear out of thin air. The young brunette smiled at them. “Right this way please—the Dents are already waiting for you.”

The inside of the restaurant was elegant, with cream colored walls, crystal chandeliers everywhere and round tables with crisp white tablecloths and cushioned chairs. In one corner was a piano, and of course a stage that was just slightly raised above the main floor and extended into the middle of the dining area. The wall that faced out toward the street had large curved windows with elegant, lacy white curtains while the other walls were decorated with classic Monet paintings.

Harvey and his wife had a table right along the stage area, close enough to provide a perfect view of the stage, but not so close that any performers would accidentally cross the table. Bruce's eyes immediately zeroed in on Selina who sat at the table with Harvey and Gilda. She smiled, her cat-green eyes focused on Bruce. Selina wore an asymmetrical black evening dress, a black lace choker around her slender throat and her lips were ruby red as she smiled at him.

Harvey was leaning close to Gilda whispering something to her over the sounds of a live four string quartet that was currently playing “Anything Goes” when she caught sight of Bruce and company being led to their table.

Harvey stood. “Bruce, Jack, Harley! You all look so wonderful tonight. I'm happy you three could make it.”

Harvey was dressed in a silver grey suit while Gilda, who didn't stand, her hand resting on her belly, was wearing a forest green maxi dress that looked simply stunning on her with her pregnant belly. For a moment, when Harley saw her, she was struck by the idea that she would look like Gilda in a few months. Harley glanced at Jack who was clearly thinking the same thing. Jack brought her hand up and kissed her knuckles smiling at her, his blues eyes dancing.

“Come on everybody, sit and let's order some drinks!” Harvey smiled and motioned everyone to sit. Bruce took the seat next to Selina who purred, “Hello Bruce—you look very handsome tonight. Black suits you.”

Bruce smiled taking Selina's hand and kissing it. “Black suits you as well Selina.”

Jack sat next to his brother with Harley on his other side; he pulled her chair closer so that their knees were touching. Under the table he stroked the chiffon away from her thigh and placed his hand on her bare leg giving her thigh a squeeze. Harley giggled glancing at Jack through her lashes while Jack's hand slid up her thigh.

Outside on the roof of the building next to The Monte, Lester Buchinsky, or as he was called by his professional working name, the Electrocutioner, prepared to enter the restaurant. He adjusted his suit allowing the electricity to arch over his fists and up his arms for a moment as he grinned. He was being paid good money by Mayor Hill to go in there and kill Harvey Dent.

Mayor Hill had been made aware recently that Dent was doing a lot of digging, digging that was starting to make connections between Hill and the mob in Gotham. If Dent made the connections, his making district attorney would give him the power to go after Mayor Hill, and Hill really couldn't afford that...there was far too much money at stake. Electrocutioner didn't really care about any of it. He was getting paid a great deal of money, and it was fun getting paid for something he would be happy to do for free. Flexing his fingers one more time, Electrocutioner backed up and took a running leap across the roof, landing on the roof of the restaurant. He walked across the roof, finding the door that led down from the roof and made his way inside.

Dent smiled, looking over the top of his menu. “All right, I want everyone to order whatever they want, this is my treat and before either of you Waynes try to protest, I won't hear it. This is something Gilda and I discussed, so no arguing. Now, I hear the roasted salmon with lemon saffron sauce, provencal style vegetables and fresh herbs is excellent.”

Selina grinned. “Oh I do love fish. I think that's what I'll order.”

Gilda smiled. “The same for me.”

Bruce chuckled. “Well I think I will order the filet of turbot with Comté crust and Champagne sauce.”

Jack and Harley, shoulder to shoulder were looking over the menu together. “Hmm...I think grilled filet mignon with black truffle sauce what do you think my sweets?”

Jack glanced sideways at Harley.

Harley grinned. “That sounds...”

Before Harley could finished her sentence there was an explosion of electricity that ripped across the ceiling of the restaurant, shattering the chandeliers. Screaming started as the lights went out, there was another arc of lightning that ripped through the ceiling, this time the jolts of lightning created cracks in the plaster above, sending hunks of plaster raining down on the people below. Customers started to flee, but no sooner had the lights gone out and the crowd started to panic, than Electrocutioner dropped down smashing into the table where Dent and the others were sitting.

Electrocutioner stood up, electricity racing up and down his arms and along his back and head. He laughed, turning to face Dent. “Say good bye, Mr. Dent.”

Harvey had been knocked back to the floor. He looked up into the crazed killer's face just as electricity shot out toward him him. Gilda screamed, but at the last moment, the electricity arced, looking as if it would slam into Dent, but at the last second, Harvey was yanked out of the way—but not far enough, the electricity ripped through half of Dent's body.

Bruce was hit with some of the jolt when he dragged Harvey out of the way, the blast missed his friend's heart but still hit Harvey hard. The jolt raced from Harvey, traveling up and into Bruce. The electricity threw Bruce backwards into another table causing him to slam into it hard enough that the table broke in two.

Jack and Harley had been blasted backwards from the table, large chunks of ceiling falling down on the two of them. Jack gasped, pushing himself to his feet, trying to dig himself out his only thought for Harley. He cried out for her. “HARLEY!”

He didn't see her at first as he stood up, stumbling slightly, but then he saw her, the electricity arcing through the place highlighted her red dress. She was still by the table, still standing, weaving in place, and had started to take a step toward him when Electrocutioner reached out and grabbed her, yanking her off her feet and against him. The man yelled. “GIVE ME DENT OR THIS WOMAN DIES!”

The electricity was arcing from the man, lighting up the whole of the restaurant as he yelled again. “WHERE IS DENT?!”

Harley screamed, not in fear, but like a crazed animal. Her lessons with Jack rushed back to her as she tried to get a hold on the man, a hit, anything. The man had her around the waist which freed Harley's arms and legs. She drove her elbow up and back, catching him painfully in the chin. Buchinsky hissed in pain when his jaw snapped shut, causing him to bite his tongue, the coppery taste of blood filling his mouth. Harley kicked, then slammed her heeled shoe down on his instep which resulted in Buchinsky howling in pain. Buchinsky growled. This woman was proving to be more of a handful than he had thought she would be. She was fighting his grip, kicking, hitting, biting. Buchinsky finally hissed at her, “Shut up, ya cunt!” He gave her a zap against the side of her head that knocked her out, her body going limp.

Bruce had pulled Harvey and Gilda to the other side of the stage. Half of Harvey's face was covered in black and angry red burns that traveled down his face and over that half of his body. Harvey's suit was smoldering in places and the flesh visible beneath was blackened. Harvey was unconscious, his head in his wife's lap. Gilda was sobbing. Bruce crouched near them, watching the Electrocutioner, cursing when he saw the man grab Harley.

Bruce turned to Gilda. “Stay here, try not to make a sound. I'm going to get help.”

Jack saw Harley go limp and his rage started to blind him. He stood, snarling, his whole body trembling with the urge to kill this man, to rip his throat out. Jack hissed in fury, “I'm going to kill you!”

*

Bruce debated leaving for a moment, but this situation needed Batman, not Bruce Wayne. He just needed enough time to change into his suit. Just as Bruce stood up, staying slightly crouched, ready to find a way out to call for the Batmobile, he saw his brother. Jack had walked closer to the Electrocutioner.

Jack snarled, his eyes flashing with hatred. “LET HER GO!”

The Electrocutioner turned, dragging the unconscious Harley with him. The man smiled at Jack. “Bring me Dent and you can have the blonde back.”

Bruce cursed. He needed to go now while Electrocutioner was distracted, while he could, but his brother... Bruce shook his head and turned, he had only minutes for Batman to get here and stop this.

Jack reached down picking up a steak knife from the debris around him, his knuckles around the knife were white. Jack's eyes turned deadly and he smiled, but it was cold. “Let her go, now.”

Electrocutioner wrapped his hand around Harley's neck lifting her up off her feet. The electricity arced near her, though Buchinsky kept it from hitting Harley just yet.

“You heard my demands little man, give me Dent and you can have your bitch.”

In the next breath of each man, there was a crash and Batman dropped through the ceiling in front of Electrocutioner to land in a crouch.

Buchinsky cursed. “Fuck! One step closer and I kill the woman!”

Batman hissed, his voice deep and menacing as he stood, a creature of darkness, the arcing lightning from Buchinsky actually making Batman seem more menacing. “You have nowhere to go—let the woman go.”

For a moment it looked like Buchinsky would let her go. He looked around realizing that his choices were limited. Jack for a moment felt something like relief when he saw Batman, the same man who had helped save both him and Harley weeks ago.

But then Electrocutioner smiled. “Let's see which you want more Batman, to catch me or save the woman.”

With that Electrocutioner held Harley up by her neck, brought his other fist back, electricity dancing around his fist in a dance of deadly light. Jack’s eyes went wide. He screamed, his voice going shrill. “NO!”

Batman charged forward, but it was too late. Electrocutioner's fist slammed Harley in her diaphragm. For a moment her whole body was lit by the electricity before she flew across the room to land hard against the stage where she lay unmoving.
The sound of complete rage and anguish that ripped from Jack's throat when Harley was thrown almost stopped Batman in his tracks. He watched his brother race across the dining room to fall to his knees at Harley's side; she wasn't moving. Jack scooped her up, turning to glare at Batman.

“What are you doing? Go after him!” Jack nearly screamed in his rage. Bruce could see the madness rear its ugly head in Jack's gaze. Bruce felt his heart plummet...if Dr. Quinzel was...No...he couldn't think that way. He couldn't let personal feelings stop him from doing the job he had to do.

But, for a moment, it was Bruce and not Batman that almost stayed, stayed to help his brother, his friend Harvey, the people he cared about. Jack was right, however; he had a job to do and that was to capture the Electrocutioner. Batman glanced toward Jack, his voice deep as he yelled, “Call 911!”

Then the Batman disappeared to follow the Electrocutioner.

Jack watched him go, rage at the man who had done this, who had hurt his Harley, seemed to fill every part of his being. Jack turned back to Harley cradling her in his arms. Her dress was burned and blackened. He could see her stomach underneath in patches where the dress was destroyed, burned; the tattoo on her stomach was barely visible through the remains of the burned dress. There were angry red blisters forming on her skin where her attacker's gauntlet had touched her. Jack reached for his phone, then stopped when he felt something hot and wet against his legs where Harley's body lay across him. He looked down and saw the blood covering the bottom of her dress, soaking through and into the material of his slacks. Jack stared with a hushed, “No...”

He wrapped his arms around her, cradling her head gently against his chest and whispered, tears starting to smear his make up as they ran down his cheeks. “Don't you dare leave me Harley, don't you dare.”

Batman could see the Electrocutioner; the man wasn't subtle. The man was pounding down the street using his powers to throw cars and people out of his way. Batman couldn't be sure if he was trying to escape or not, or perhaps he was just stupid. Batman was betting on stupid because no one smart would leave a trail like that to follow. Bruce cursed as he used his grappling hook to lift himself up higher just as a flying SUV that Buchinsky threw down the street towards him sailed by Batman, just missing him. The SUV continued tumbling head to tail down the street, scattering onlookers, until the vehicle crashed against the side of a building to the sound of shattering glass and crumpling metal. The man was causing more damage and chaos out here, as if failing in his murder attempt he just wanted to destroy as much as possible. Batman muttered to himself, ”Stupid.”

His mind flashed back to Harvey and Harley, hurt or worse back at the restaurant, but most especially his mind went back to the look on his brother's face, the pain visible in his expression. Bruce had not seen a look like that on his little brother's since the death of their parents. He needed to stop Buchinsky before anyone else was hurt. He had to stop Buchinsky for Jack, especially for Jack, whom Bruce knew could not suffer another loss of someone he loved. Batman pulled out a batarang from its clip. He hand landed on a light post, his eyes flashing toward Buchinsky, looking for that tell-tale weakness. There. Batman saw it when Buchinsky turned, there was a power pack on his back helping to generate the electricity he used to attack. Batman needed to hit the power pack on Electrocutioner's back, disable it, which would take away Electrocutioner's only advantage, then Batman could subdue him.
Batman pulled his arm back, ready to throw, the batarang held between his fingers, when Buchinsky turned and threw his hand out, a bolt of lightning arced and raced along the pavement toward Batman. The man roared. “You're going to die Batman!”

Batman threw himself to the side, diving out of the way just barely in time. He dove off the side of the light post and landed hard on the roof of a car, denting the roof in the process. The sound of the electricity hitting the spot Batman had just occupied, blasting the light pole into a rain of sparks, caused it to fall, crashing into several parked cars. The bolt continued blasting a hole in the pavement around the now downed light post. The charge in the air made Batman's hair stand on end under his cowl.

“You're no match for me Batman!” Buchinsky yelled with a laugh.

“Give it up Electrocutioner!” Batman yelled back calmly.

Batman stepped forward and threw his batarang. The sharp-edged device flew threw the air, the blades ripping through Electrocutioner's shoulder. The man jerked back with the impact, the blade cutting through not just his flesh, but through the wires that ran from his pack through his costume cutting off the supply of electricity. The cut wires snapped and hissed next to Buchinsky's ear causing a couple of shocks, but nothing that he couldn't handle. He hadn't made it this far without a number of shocks in the past. What Buchinsky didn't see was Batman rushing toward him until at the last second when Buchinsky turned and the Bat slammed his entire weight into Buchinsky, driving the man back and into one of the parked cars along the edge of the sidewalk. Buchinsky brought his other hand up, which still had power, slamming the fist into Batman's side, directly in the ribs.

Batman hissed, his teeth clamping together as the shock wave of electrical current raced through his body. The pain hit him in a jolt as the electricity arced over the entire half of his body where the Electrocutioner's fist hit, but thanks to Alfred and Fox, the suit was insulated not just against heat and cold, but also electricity. So while he still felt a shock of the electricity, it wasn't the disabling jolt that Buchinsky had hoped it would be.

Batman hissed and grabbed Buchinsky around the throat.

“That's enough,” he snarled before he slammed Buchinsky's head against the hood of the car, once, twice until Buchinsky stopped moving, the big man's body going limp in Batman's hands. Batman let go and the large man sank to the ground. Batman rolled him over and cuffed him before letting himself lean against the car, panting. This superhero stuff was a lot harder than Bruce anticipated when he made the decision to become the Batman. The police raced towards him and the downed Buchinsky, guns drawn. No time to rest, he thought as he aimed his grappling hook and yanked himself off the street, disappearing into the darkness. He had to admit, it felt good to put the bad guys down.

Harley eyes flew open and she immediately cried out, sitting straight up in bed. Buzzers and beeping starting going off on the medical monitors that were stuck all over her body, monitoring her heartbeat, blood pressure, and who knew what else.

Harley snarled and cried out. “JACK!”

She immediately started pulling IV’s out of her arm and throwing herself out of the bed, only to hit the floor as her knees gave out and she stumbled.

A nurse came rushing into the room. “Miss Quinzel, Dr. Quinzel please!! You need to go back in bed now!"

“Where’s Jack!! Where’s Jack!” Harley screamed and surprised the nurse when Harley’s fist snapped out and knocked the nurse off her feet when her fist connected with the nurse’s jaw. Two more nurses burst into the room, each moving in such as way as to try to surround Harley who had grabbed her IV stand to use as a weapon. Both the nurses were shocked that the slim blonde was being so...combative. One of the nurses yelled for a doctor while the second tried to calm Harley down.

“Miss, it's all right—you're in the hospital. No one here is going to hurt you.” On Harley's right, that nurse had her hands up trying to keep her voice soothing. “You need to get back into bed, you were hurt during an attack.”

Harley looked around panicked. “Where's JACK!”

A second later, Jack came racing into the room sloshing coffee as he burst through the hospital room door. He was still in his suit, though the jacket was missing and he had a couple of bandages on his face from cuts he had received. He looked tired and pale, but when he saw Harley he smiled. “Harley?”

Harley let out a squeak, dropped the IV stand, and rushed forward, stumbling into Jack's arms. He dropped his coffee onto the nearby table and grabbed her up, lifting Harley up into his arms. He grabbed her legs carrying her bridal style back to the bed, holding her body tight against him. Harley nuzzled his neck, burying her face against him, her arms around his neck. If the burns on her hurt, she gave no indication, all her attention on Jack.

“Oh Jack,” she whimpered softly.

“Shhh...I'm here now,” Jack said, his voice soothing. He laid her down and despite the nurses’ protests, climbed into the bed with her. He held her tightly though he gently tugged one of her arms from around his neck, laying the arm out so that the nurses could put her IV back in.

Jack cooed softly to her. “It's all right, no one here is going to hurt you. I won't let them, you know what I would do, don't you?” He brushed his fingers down her jaw. “You are my only one, you know that Harley, the only woman I have ever been with...there has never been anyone but you...”

Harley groaned softly. He could tell she was in pain and he wasn't sure if she could hear him, but he continued to speak smoothly to her, easing her head down against him. Jack held her head against his chest and stroked his fingers through her hair. One of the nurses injected something into her IV and Harley slowly eased back to sleep. Jack held her, turning to get more comfortable in the hospital bed, but he never stopped stroking Harley's hair. After a few minutes, when she seemed to be resting again, Jack sighed. He should never have left for the coffee. That was stupid, he thought to himself. He should have been here when she woke, the first thing she saw should have been him.

Jack sighed again. The pain in his chest rushed though him turning his blood cold. He would have to tell her when she woke up about the miscarriage. He closed his eyes, though he suspected she knew by her reactions just now.

Jack closed his eyes against the pain in his chest. Each time he found happiness—each time something happened that was good, something equally evil happened to take it away from him. He was tired of it, tired of letting this city take from him. First it took his parents and twice it tried to take Harley from him, but now, it took his child. Jack closed his eyes, tears forming under his lashes and slowly ran down his cheeks. Life is full of random injustices, he thought. He was not going to let the city take anything else from him, ever. Jack closed his eyes and tightened his arms around Harley.
An hour later when a nurse stepped into the room, Jack was still holding Harley, his long fingers working gently through her hair. The only movement he had made to make himself comfortable was to kick off his shoes, leaving them to lay on the floor. He was humming softly, alternating between the humming and singing words gently.

“Only you can make this world seem right
Only you can make the darkness bright
Only you and you alone can thrill me like you do and fill my heart with love for only you...”

The nurse smiled. She hadn't seen anything as sweet as Jack Wayne holding his girlfriend and singing to her while she slept; it was precious the nurse thought. The nurse made her way over to the bed and checked Harley's vitals, then put another dose of something into her IV. Jack glanced over at the nurse, his eyes narrowed slightly. The nurse smiled. “It's just a mild sedative to let her keep sleeping and an antibiotic for the burns. I will need to change her dressing soon, but not right now. You're fine Mr. Wayne, you don't have to move.”

Jack whispered, “Thank you.”

She gave him a smile. “Can I get you a blanket? Or would you like me to turn on the TV for you?”

Jack started to say no then changed his mind. “Sure, the TV on would be great, thank you.”

The nurse walked over to get the remote that was hanging from the bed, handed it to Jack before she walked over and stood on her tip toes to turn the set on.

“Just call if either of you need anything. The call button is on the remote too.” The nurse smiled and slipped out again.

Jack settled back against the pillows holding Harley when the Gotham nightly news came on. The top story was the attack on The Monte restaurant and the assassination attempt on Harvey Dent.

Vickie Vale was reporting. Jack grinned watching her wondering when they would hear from Ms. Vale again for another family interview. He figured after he was hauled off to jail and then the kidnapping she would be dying to get through the gates of Wayne Manor again.

Vale continued with the news cast while Jack mused about the interview, Jack only partly paying attention to what was being said.

“There has been no update on Dent's condition. All we know at the present is that Dent is in Gotham General Hospital, under the best care. In related news, the Electrocutioner had been apprehended by Batman, the new vigilante who had been stalking the Gotham streets and was associated with the rescue of Jack Wayne from a criminal called Killer Croc. The Batman...” Vicki stopped, putting her hand to her ear. “Wait, we have a story just in. Apparently the Electrocutioner was being transferred to Blackgate prison when there was an attack by several masked men, all heavily armed. Several prisoners escaped, including the Electrocutioner. We have confirmed that two police officers were killed in the escape.”
Jack sat up straighter in the bed, his eyes widening in rage. He escaped? The man who murdered his child and hurt his girl escaped?? Jack ground his teeth, hissing under his breath. “Batman.”

The news story changed with the promise of updates on the developing story, but Jack wasn't paying attention any more. He was focused on the fact that Batman had failed him. Killer Croc escaped and now Electrocutioner. If Batman had just taken that extra step...

Perhaps it was Jack Wayne's turn to bring a little justice...

“Are you all right?” Jack asked as he drove.

It was two days later. Harley had been released from the hospital and Jack was driving them home. He had picked her up in Alfred's car instead of one of the Wayne cars in order to cut down on them being noticed by the press. The press had pretty much started camping out, waiting for news on Harvey Dent and hoping for a chance to talk to anyone else who had been at The Monte. Jack didn't trust himself not to lash out at any reporter who harassed Harley.

When the doctor released Harley, she had suggested another few days of rest and that Harley might want to talk to someone about her loss, but otherwise she was doing well. As for the burns, Harley would only have light scarring. (Nothing a few tattoos wouldn't cover Harley had joked). Jack hadn't told Harley yet that the man who had attacked her had escaped. He didn't tell her because he wanted her to focus on healing. But he also wanted to surprise her, because when he found The Electrocutioner, Jack wanted to bring Harley with him for a bit of...justice. But that was later—right now she needed to heal.

“I'm all right Jack. I'm just—I'm sorry Jack.” Harley still looked pale and right now she looked so very young sitting next to him in the car. He had brought her some comfortable clothing from home, yoga pants and an oversized t-shirt of his, along with some bunny slippers he had bought special just for her, bright pink slippers with happy bunny faces on them. They made little squeak noises when she walked which had her giggling. He loved her smile and her laugh. If she could giggle at the slippers, then she would heal.

“Why are you sorry?” Jack asked with genuine confusion.

“Just...the...” Harley rapidly blinked back her tears before she was forced to start wiping them away with the back of her hand.

Jack reached over and squeezed her thigh. “Hey, we can try again sometime. Yeah? I'm just happy you weren't hurt worse. I...I couldn't live without you Harley. You're my girl. My only girl.”

Harley covered his hand with her own. “The same. I couldn't live without you Jack.”

Jack smiled. “We need to do something fun together, get your mind off of gloomy things. Put a smile on your face.”

Harley smiled and leaned against his shoulder. “You always make me smile puddin, but yeah, you're right. Something fun.”

When they arrived home, Alfred was waiting at the door. (Bruce had sent flowers that were waiting... upstairs for her since he couldn't be there when Jack brought her home.) The butler put his professionalism aside and embraced Harley as soon as Jack helped her out of the car. The older man wrapped her in his arms and hugged her like he would his own daughter. “Miss Harleen, are you well?”

Harley squeezed back. “Yes, I promise I'm fine Alfred.” Her face was muffled against his shoulder, but he noticed a hitch in her words. Alfred gave her one more squeeze. Master Jack had told him about the pregnancy and the loss of it. Alfred had felt the loss almost as keenly as Jack. To have children in the house would have been...Alfred dismissed the thought as he hugged Miss Harleen one more time.

Alfred released her and stepped back. “I made some macaroni and cheese under Master Jack's advisement as some comfort food you might enjoy, along with an apple pie. I can bring them up to your room if you like Miss Harleen.”

Harley, holding Jack's hand, smiled. “That sounds fantastic Alfred, but actually I would like to eat in the kitchen with both of you. I just...this is home to me.”

Jack grinned pulling her hand up and kissing her knuckles. “That sounds perfect my sweet and this is your home, forever and always.”

Jack then tugged her into his embrace, stoking his hand across her cheek whispering. “My little harlequin.”

Jack and Harley were sitting at their usual spot in the kitchen, each with a plate of macaroni and cheese, large slices of apple pie with vanilla ice cream on top and large, tall glasses of chocolate milk. Alfred was brewing some coffee as well. He had his own plate of food on the counter at the insistence of Jack and Harley.

“So what could we do for fun, you think? Croquet maybe? Or we could shoot clay pigeons again?” Jack asked before putting his apple pie laden fork into his mouth.

“I like both ideas.” Harley smiled. Just being home with Jack made her feel better. This, right here, was enough to make her feel as if the last few days were nothing but some bad dreams.

Jack sat up straight then. “I know what we can do tomorrow!”

Harley blinked at Jack over the rim of her chocolate milk glass. Jack smiled brightly. “There's a polo match tomorrow, a charity event! I forgot all about it! We should go. I know I can still get us VIP tickets! We can dress up and I can introduce you to one-armed Alex—he will definitely be there!” (Jack had intended to contact Alex regardless, but a day trip for Harley would be perfect).

Harley's smile was bright. “That sounds fun Jack! I've never been to a polo match before.” Though she smirked at the name of this friend of Jack's...one-armed Alex? But meeting someone Jack considered a friend was not just interesting, it made her feel closer to him each time he showed her some aspect of his life like this...meeting someone he called a friend.

Alfred nodded. “Ah yes, a good polo match. Yes, you could both have a wonderful afternoon. I highly approve.”

Jack grinned. “We can play a board game today and we can paint each others nails.” Jack held one of his hands up showing that the polish was chipped before he giggled and reached for her hand. Harley smiled at him; the love in her eyes for him was beautiful Alfred thought as he watched the two young people. If only Master Bruce...

Bruce was in his office. He had his eyes closed as he attempted to use some of his training to calm his breathing. He was angry about Electrocutioner's escape. Not just the escape, but the death of those police officers too. He blamed himself. He had been racking his brain for the last few days trying to come up with something that might have prevented the escape, but he couldn't think of what it could be. He hadn't counted on whoever Electrocutioner's employer was having the means to break him out of prison before he even arrived. The only way that man could have escaped was if he had had help on the inside. After some quick research with the batcomputer, Bruce had learned that Buchinsky was mostly just a hired thug. Dent had no ties with the man and had never been involved with any of the Electrocutioner's prior arrests or prosecutions. Therefore, the only reason for him to attack was that he was hired to...but who hired him?

Bruce chewed his lips. He was supposed to be emptying his thoughts, trying to find inner peace in order to allow him to focus, not thinking more about what had happened, but he couldn't seem to avoid wondering who hired Buchinsky to go after Dent. What was so important about Dent that someone would want him dead? When Harvey was better, Batman might have to pay him a visit.

Bruce stood up to start pacing when his cellphone rang.

He saw the number and a smile spread across his face as he answered with surprise. “Selina?”

“Yes it is. I thought I would call in and check on my favorite billionaire.”

Bruce laughed. “I'm all right.”

“Oh good. How are your brother and Harley? I was worried about Harley—she looked bad.”

That was the moment Bruce realized he didn't remember seeing Selina after the chaos started. Like a cat, she had just disappeared.

Bruce debated telling her about Harley, but at last he said softly, “Harley was pregnant. She wasn't far along, but she miscarried.”

Selina was quiet for a heartbeat. “Poor Harley.”

“She's fine otherwise,” Bruce added, feeling as if the words were hollow in light of the news.

“I'll send her some flowers,” Selina said.

They were both quiet before Selina found her voice again. “Would you be free for lunch tomorrow at say...the Gotham Charity Polo event?”

Bruce smiled. “Yes, yes I would.”

Upstairs in their room (Jack moved all of her things into his room while she was in the hospital, made space in his closet for her, which Harley found to be the sweetest gesture), they were sitting across from one another, the chess board set out between them. Sitting on the table were two bottles of nail polish as well. Harley had enjoyed painting Jack's nails. This time they decided to match their colors painting each others nails red and black, alternating the two colors. Jack took his time painting her nails, somehow managing to make the simple act of blowing on her nail polish sexy. The way he would purse his lips, then gaze up at her with his intense blue eyes had Harley feeling all quivery and happy inside.

Right now though, Harley was looking over the chessboard, studying it. Alfred had just been by, dropping off some mail that had arrived for Jack and delivering the bottle of bourbon that Jack had requested.

Jack took a long pull on his cigarette glancing through the mail when he stopped short. One of them didn't have a return address, which Jack found strange. He removed the cigarette, tapping off the ashes in the ashtray before he opened the letter. As he scanned the pages his eyes narrowed.

Harley glanced up immediately seeing the shift in his features.

“Jack? Everything all right?”

Jack handed her the paper. Harley took it while Jack poured himself a shot of bourbon.

Harley frowned. “It's a bill for $4000 from Troy for damages to his car.”

Jack snorted. “Yep.” He picked up his cigarette, taking a long drag.

“How does he even know it was us?” Harley asked handing it back to him.

Jack shrugged setting the end of the paper on fire with the end of his cigarette. “He may not; just taking a shot in the dark.”

“So what are we going to do?” Harley asked.

“How would you feel if we pay in person. Not right now. I want you to rest, but later, when you're feeling better?” Jack gave her a decidedly wicked grin.

Harley giggled. “That sounds perfect.”

Later that night Harley laid curled on her side asleep. She was wearing the red negligee Jack had bought her, making her look soft and sexy lying in his bed. Jack was standing at the side of the bed, wearing only his pajama pants and watching her. He reached down and stroked his fingers through her hair with a smile. She is beautiful, he thought to himself, so beautiful. He couldn't sleep yet—he had work he needed to do. Jack walked over to his desk and pulled out the laptop that he kept in a drawer.

Once the computer was up, Jack started to hack into the Gotham City Police files looking for information on the Electrocutioner. Jack was good at computer hacking. Not as good as some who did it for a living, (such as his friend Alex) but he was decent enough not to get caught and hacking into files at the police department was one of the simpler hacking jobs. He found the Electrocutioner's file easily enough and leaned forward reading it. Nothing extraordinary was in the file; the man's real name was Lester Buchinsky, basically a hired thug with an electricity producing suit. Jack smiled. So someone hired Buchinsky...going to the polo match would serve two purposes tomorrow then, to take Harley out and get her mind off things, but to also find his friend Alex.

Alex was a numbers guy, he was who you went to in order to place bets, buy weed, but Alex's main source of income came from information. Alex was an information broker, and not just any information broker, but THE information broker in Gotham. If Alex couldn't find it, it simply couldn't be found. If anyone could get Jack information on finding Buchinsky, it was Alex. The only downside was that Alex was expensive, but hell, Jack thought, it's only money.

After shutting down the computer, Jack went to check on Harley once more. He enjoyed looking at her, watching her sleep, knowing that she was safe here with him. He leaned down and kissed her forehead. She looks so peaceful, he thought. He wanted to crawl into bed with her, wrap his arms around her and hold her tightly against him, losing himself in her scent, but he needed to go outside to his secret place first. He needed to practice something that he had been working on since the night after Harley was hurt, since the night Gotham had tried to take from him again.

Jack slipped on his tennis shoes and grabbed a t-shirt that was lying across the back of his chair, pulled it on over his head, and then he made his way silently down the stairs. The manor was quiet at this time of night. Jack made his way outside, easing the front door closed before he turned along the path that led to the back and around the gardens. It was pitch dark; no lights highlighted the area. He found his way by memory until he was at the door to his secret place. He ran his hands over the door, finding the lock easily as he had so many times in the past, opened the door silently, and slipped inside. He had recently cleaned out his...experiments, their bodies gone where no one would find them and no trace left of them ever being here.

He picked up a flashlight he had resting on a table just inside the door and made his way to the back of the area where the electrical muscle simulator he had purchased online sat. With a few adjustments, he had altered the device, making it into what he needed, a way to arm himself against the Electrocutioner.

He picked the device up and set it on a tray table next to the chair he had, an old dentist chair rigged up with straps. Jack flopped down onto the chair, strapping down his ankles before he pulled his shirt off over his head, laying it across his lap and then reached for the device. He pulled the wired pads out carefully, attached them to his chest, biceps and his abs. He then strapped down one wrist, he would have to leave the other free. Jack reached over and set the flashlight down so that the light shown straight up to the ceiling. He adjusted the device, picked up the mouth guard that had been on the tray and stuck it between his teeth. Jack grinned. When he met the Electrocutioner face to face, he would be ready. With a wide grin, Jack hit the device causing bolts of painful electricity to race through his body.

The next morning broke bright and warm. They would be heading out to the Gotham Polo Classic Charity event and Jack, as usual, had ordered new outfits the day before. (Costumes, you always needed the right costume, he reminded Harley). He had bought Harley a red wrap Issa sundress with a matching pair of red wedge sandals along with a wide brim straw hat that had a large red daisy on the side and large red-framed sunglasses. Jack wore a pair of white slacks, a white polo and a blazer in a shade of purple so deep that it almost looked black with a pair of white dress shoes and his purple shaded sunglasses, and a white, straw telescope hat adorned with a purple band. Jack grabbed Harley's hands and spun her around the room once they were both dressed.

“You look incredible!” He grinned happily at her. Jack let her go long enough for Harley to do a spin, the skirt of the dress fluttering in a gorgeous way around her long legs.

Harley stopped and admired Jack with a giggle. “You look good enough to eat.”

Jack pulled her into his arms and dipped her back kissing her softly.

“My girl,” he whispered.
Harley reached up and ran the tips of her fingers along his cheeks then back over his ear whispering back, “I love you Jack.”

“And I love you my cupcake.” Jack smirked lifting her to her feet again. “All right! A day of rich food, making fun of snotty people and watching horses! Oh, and let's not forget,” he added with a waggle of one eyebrow. “Illegal gambling!”

With a laugh, Jack hooked Harley's arm through his and together they danced out of the room and down the stairs.

Today Jack decided since they were going to a polo match that they should look every inch the rich couple. So they were taking the Rolls Royce Wraith coupe, a slick black and silver vehicle with a red leather interior.

Jack drove nearly silent running car through Gotham, heading to the outskirts. Luckily the polo charity event was not being held at the country club, but instead was being held at the Gotham Hill Polo Club.

Harley was impressed as Jack drove up the road to the main entrance of the club. Like the country club, the Polo club had a large stone fence with a huge metal gate that had the images of polo riders twisted into the metal. Once they were through the gate, they were directed along with several other expensive cars to a large open space that was being used as a parking area. Once Jack had parked the car, they followed the other guests to an area where golf carts were being used to transfer people out to the polo field.

Harley leaned closed to Jack and whispered, “There is a lot of money here.”

Jack grinned. “Yep. This is one of those events, like the ones my brother likes to hosts, where all the who's who of Gotham come out to watch polo and donate money. A chance for all of them to feel good about themselves and to look good too. Bunch of hypocrites really. Some of them are here to wash away their guilt over how they actually make their money, others are here to simply try to look good, but most are here just to show off how much money they have and wallow like pigs in their own self importance. None of them really see what they are. I mean, I have money—why feel guilty about it? Besides, like everything, it's fleeting...none of it will really matter in the end.” Jack curled his lip.

“I hate most of them,” he said and then tilted his head. “No, I take that back. I pretty much hate all of them. None of them are 'real,' not like you.” Jack pressed a kiss to her ear.

Harley sighed happily wrapping her arms around Jack's arm and leaned her head against his shoulder really examining the people, trying to see them as Jack did. Jack was correct, of course. She could see it, most of them were whispering, hissing and pointing at each other. Watching them through the lenses of how Jack saw them, they were disgusting. All of them trying to be more important that the other one, bloated with their deformed sense of values...and self-importance. They didn't care about the charity; all they cared about was how they looked by donating large sums of money, trying to buy morals and to gain recognition as someone of importance.

The golf cart dropped them off at the field where Harley could see that there were folding chairs set up in the fenced off area and from here she could see large tents where people were milling about.

“I bought us VIP seating yesterday; just follow me my sweet.” Jack curled her arm through his and led her off down one of the paths that snaked around the areas where people were standing around talking, to another area that was cordoned off. This area had a very large series of covered areas along the length of the polo field. Inside, under the canopy, were several seats that were shaded under it. At the entrance to this area, a young man dressed all in white, took tickets and gave them each a lanyard with a pass hanging from it.

Once inside the VIP area, Harley could see that there were couches and armchairs instead of the fold-out chairs she had seen coming up here. These chairs were arranged in little intimate spaces, each circling its own private table. There was a young woman stationed at the entrance to each covered area. When Jack and Harley walked up the young woman smiled. She wore a black skirt, white shirt and black blazer with a name tag that stated her name was Georgia.

“May I see your tags please?” Georgia asked with a bright smile.

“Of course Georgia dear.” Jack held up his lanyard and Harley did the same. Georgia checked them out then pointed. “You are located in section C—enjoy your afternoon.”

Jack grinned. “We will Georgia, thank you.”

Jack led Harley to their section. The seating was the same here, but there was an open bar as well as food being served. Jack escorted Harley over to their set of seats. “I will be right back with our drinks my sweet. You just sit there and look pretty ’til I get back.” Jack winked at her before he set off toward the bar. Harley grinned watching him walk away. She loved the way Jack walked; he had an elegance about him that was enticing and, well, it made her want him...badly.

With a sigh, Harley took that opportunity to look around. She recognized a few people from TV, Mayor Hill, the present DA...there were a couple of news personalities and a LOT of socialites, wealthy men and their...she could only guess mistresses by the way they looked and the extreme age differences. There were a few wives too. Harley thought she saw Selina Kyle, but the woman was lost in the crowd fairly easily.

Jack walked up to the bar and leaned against it, glancing back at the crowd of wealthy people while he waited his turn to order drinks. He had just started to turn back to the bar when a voice he recognized yelled.

“Well, if it isn't fucking Jack Wayne.”

Jack turned to see One-armed Alex. Alex didn't look like he belonged among these people at all. He was tall, a little pudgy with a mop of unkempt brown hair and, as his name implied, Alex was missing an arm (he had an artifical limb, but Alex never wore it.). Unlike everyone else here, Alex was wearing jeans, but he at least had on an old white polo with a navy blue blazer over the top, and a pair of old, dirty, beat-up high tops that might have been white a few decades back, all of which looked like it had been purchased at Wal-mart. It always impressed Jack with how Alex could get into these VIP events looking the way he did, but Alex knew people, a lot of people and he knew secrets, a LOT of secrets. Jack just made sure that Alex didn't know any of his secrets. He liked the guy and didn't want to have to...dispose of him for knowing too much.

Alex grinned downing his glass of liquid; from the looks of it he was drinking a vodka martini. Jack chuckled at the drink. “Bit high class for you Alex?”

Alex grinned. “Hey, the fucking drinks are free for me, might as well get the fucking fancy ones. By the way, like your fucking nails.” Alex chuckled motioning at the bartender with his empty glass, while Jack gave Alex the middle finger getting a few looks from people milling around close to Jack laughed placing his order to the bartender. “Give me a 100-year old cigar and a long island ice tea.”

“So I got your message. You want me to do some hunting for you? This guy fuck you over?” Alex asked after Jack had picked up the drinks and started over to the cheese table. The table was loaded with plates and several types of expensive cheeses and crackers. Jack filled up a plate.

“Yes. I need everything you can tell me about one Lester Buchinsky. Most importantly, I need to know where to find him. He also goes by the moniker, the Electrocutioner.” Jack spoke softly glancing at Alex.

Alex nodded. “So what you want this fucking guy for...whoa, wait a minute. Electrocutioner? Ain't that the fuckhead who fucking tried to kill Dent? You were there or something?”

Jack turned balancing the plate and drinks. “Look, you don't want to know right?”

“Fuck right I don't want to know. That's how I stay alive.” Alex smirked.

“Then don't ask. Just tell me where to find him.” Jack spoke softly, but his eyes were deadly serious.

Alex nodded. “Whatever you say Jack. Fuck that guy.”

Jack started to walk toward Harley with a chuckle. “The usual fee?”

Alex shrugged. “Sure thing man.”

“So come on, I want you to meet someone.” Jack grinned starting to make his way toward Harley.

Alex immediately saw her sitting there with her legs crossed, his mouth fell open. “Who the fuck is that?”

Jack grinned. “That's my girl.”

Alex blinked. “Seriously? Fuck man, this whole time I thought you were gay or something.”

Jack laughed with a slight shake of his head. “Or something? Harley...she is someone special. She owns me and I own her.”

Alex frowned glancing sideways at Jack. There was something about the way he said it, that they owned each other...but the rich were weird, something Alex had learned a long time ago.

Jack grinned at Harley setting the drinks on the table. “A long island iced tea for the most gorgeous woman here and I brought some cheese and crackers too.”

Harley smiled reaching for her drink glancing toward Alex. “You must be One-armed Alex,” she said.

Alex smirked. “What gave it away?” he asked with a motion of his stump that gave Harley the impression he was pointing at her with it.

Harley laughed. “The one arm.”

Both men laughed as Jack motioned for Alex to take a seat. Jack sat next to Harley picking up his drink and putting a hand on her thigh.
“So you're Jack's girl. I have to say he has fucking good taste.” Alex grinned reaching out and taking Harley's hand surprising her by kissing the back of her hand.

“So what do you do exactly?” Harley blushed at the compliment taking her hand back.

“Oh I am the fucking numbers guy mostly. You want to place a bet, I'm the guy you come to, at least here in Gotham.” Alex grinned leaning back with his own drink in hand.

“You need some information, want someone found? I'm your fucking go to guy.”

Jack smirked. “And if you haven't guessed, he likes the word fuck.”

Alex chuckled. “Fucking right I do.”

The three of them laughed together.

Bruce arrived at the event a little later than he intended, but as he stood at the tent entrance looking around for Selina he was caught by surprise when he saw Jack and Harley. They were speaking with One-armed Alex. Bruce Wayne didn't know the man, but Batman had heard of him. An information broker who dealt with anyone from politicians to crime bosses. He frowned wondering what Jack was doing with the man when his attention was diverted by the stunning vision of Selina Kyle sauntering his way. She was wearing am ankle-length sleeveless sundress in leopard print. She had on a wide brim black straw hat and large sunglasses. She glided over to him with a gorgeous smile on her perfect lips. She stopped when she was in front of him and tilted her sunglasses down. “Glad to see you made it Bruce.”

Bruce smiled. “Lunch and polo with a beautiful woman? I wouldn't miss it.”

Selina chuckled reaching out and taking his hand. “Come on, let's go get a drink.”

Selina led Bruce to the bar. She signaled the bartender.

“So what would you like?” Selina asked leaning on the bar and removing her sunglasses. Bruce again was struck by how beautiful her eyes were, a cat-like green.

“Ah, how about a Summer Scotch.” Bruce smiled.

“Mm...nice choice. I will have a Barbados Rum Punch please.” Selina smiled at the bartender then brought her attention back to Bruce.

“So, when are you going to invite me to dinner, just the two of us?” Selina grinned.

Bruce looked a little flustered which had her laughing. “Oh you are sweet for a billionaire playboy and most eligible bachelor in Gotham.”

Bruce frowned which only made her laugh more. “Oh please, I read Bruce. Saw you were voted most eligible again this year. What is that, six years straight?” Selina asked picking up their drinks and handing Bruce his with a grin.

“Five, but who's counting,” Bruce said with a chuckle.

“Mm..” Selina walked over to a set of chairs and sat crossing her legs. Bruce sat opposite from her with a smile that seemed natural with her nearby.
“So polo?” Bruce asked sipping his drink.

Selina smiled. “I just like the outside and the horses.” (To herself she thought that she also liked to practice her old skills, like picking pockets while she was here too.)

Bruce chuckled. They were quiet for a little bit watching as the game began, the horses and their riders rushing across the field. Bruce found himself to be more nervous with Selina Kyle than he was with other women. There was something dangerous about her, something that drew him. He sipped his drink looking over at her and smiled. “How would you like to have dinner at my place this Friday?”

Selina, who had glanced out at the game, turned back to him grinning ear to ear. “I thought you would never ask.”

Jack was rubbing Harley's leg while Alex was telling some story that involved a group of prostitutes and a priest, when Jack saw Troy Randell. Jack felt his jaw stiffen. The man was dressed all in white and he was talking to the some senator. A second later, Jack saw Tiffany in a white, extremely short sundress stepping up beside him with a couple of drink. Jack narrowed his eyes watching the two of them. Apparently the universe was trying to tell him something since this was the third time the Randell's had managed to show up in the same place as him and Harley. Suddenly their lazy afternoon seemed soured.

Jack watched them for a couple of heartbeats before he stood.

“I think it's time for Harley and me to get going.” Jack tore his eyes away from the Randells, but not before Harley followed his gaze and saw the couple. Jack felt her squeeze his hand.

Alex stood up, grinned and patted Jack on the back. “I'll get a hold of you soon man.”

Jack nodded. “Thanks Alex.”

Jack and Harley had almost made it out when a hand landed on Jack's shoulder. Jack turned, his free hand forming into a fist, but then he stopped when he saw it was his brother.

“Bruce?”

Bruce smiled. Standing behind Bruce was Selina.

“I didn't know you were going to be here,” Bruce said in a friendly tone. He surprised both Harley and his brother by reaching out and touching Harley on the shoulder. “How are you feeling?”

Harley smiled softly. “Better, thank you.”

Bruce squeezed her shoulder. “I'm so sorry Harley.”

Harley smiled. He used her name, she noted with pleasure, the one Jack gave her. “Thank you.”

Selina smiled and stepped forward. “Why don't you guys join us?”

Jack glanced at Harley; they both glanced toward Troy and Tiffany who had yet to notice them. “Thanks Bruce, but I think Harley and I have had enough of the snobbishly rich for one day. Besides, Harley is a little worn out.”

With that Jack gave his brother a smile before he and Harley took off. Bruce watched them go with a quizzical look, but Selina wrapped her arm through his. “They probably just need time together Bruce. Come on—let’s finish our drinks.”

Bruce watched his brother go before he turned around and went back to their seats with Selina.

Two weeks passed. It was two weeks of Jack and Harley just spending time together while she recovered. Jack took her horseback riding, delighted to learn that Harley knew how to ride a horse. They set up their own miniature golf course on the Wayne Manor lawn and played well after dark. Jack purchased a badminton set which turned into a game of them trying to hit one another with the birdie instead of really playing. They spent afternoons where Jack taught her card games and magic tricks, with their evenings spent curled in bed together watching horror movies and laughing together. They had gone into the city to pick up Harley’s engagement ring and a lazy afternoon of a picnic lunch at Robinson Park, with Harley now wearing her engagement ring.

Dr. Leland had called to see if they needed to reschedule their talk, which happily for Jack and Harley she was more than happy to do. (After the loss of the pregnancy, the good Doctor didn’t want to push the suffering couple until they were ready.) They both knew they were going to have to continue their sessions, but not right now. Now was all about the two of them.

Today they were outside with paint guns that Jack had bought that morning, playing in the wooded part of the manor grounds.

Harley had her hair up in pigtails, dressed in a pair of red overall shorts with a white t-shirt. She had on a red baseball cap with red-tinted goggles over her eyes. She had cut holes in the hat for her pigtails which Jack had found adorable. There were already a couple of splats of different colored paint on her hips, thighs and back where Jack had hit her, but Jack was equally rainbow splattered from the hits Harley had managed to make on him.

Harley pressed her back against the trunk of a tree with narrowed eyes as she listened for Jack.

Jack was wearing a white t-shirt (splattered with paint) and purple jeans, his own purple baseball cap on backwards and purple tinted goggles over his eyes. Harley had seen him creeping through the trees and had quickly dashed behind a thick oak tree, but he had gone silent. She edged her way around the tree, her eyes narrowed more.

They were running even, six to six. Jack was thrilled that she was keeping up with him. He had seen her from the corner of his eye and dived down silently into some thick bushes. That was when he saw her turn around the trunk of a tree. Jack licked his lips and aimed for her hip. He wanted to get her ass, but she was in the wrong position for that, so hip it was....Jack took aim and...

WHACK! Harley yelped jumping in the air when a ball of yellow paint smacked into her hip.

She threw herself into some bushes, thankful that there were no thorns and growled, “JACK!”

Jack laughed from his hiding place.

Harley yelled. “I’m going to get you!!”

“You can try, monkey face!” Jack yelled back with a snicker.

He was exceptionally happy today. Harley was pretty much back to her old self, though there were a few nights he held her when she cried still. Those nights, his rage burned bright, but he held it in check, knowing he could get his chance for revenge and so would Harley. He smiled wickedly, just thinking about it. Jack moved in a crouch, trying to see where Harley had gone to when he heard a zip, then yelped as something hit him in the back.

“YAHTZEE!!” Harley's giggling voice yelled. Jack, grinning, spun around on the balls of his feet and fired. He still didn't see her, but he heard Harley yelp.

Laughing Jack yelled back. “YAHTZEE!”

“I don't know how you did it, but you cheated!” Harley yelled back with a giggle.

Jack took off toward the sound of her voice. He could hear her cursing under her breath and it sounded like she might be struggling with her gun. He crept quietly, taking each step with care until he saw her. She was cursing at her weapon; her paint gun seemed to be jammed. Jack grinned walking up carefully behind her until he had the paint gun aimed at the back of her head and whispered, “Yahtzee.”

Harley cursed, “Shit,” and dropped her weapon.

Jack was grinning from ear to ear. “Turn around slowly.”

Harley stood up and turned, sliding her goggles up on her forehead before holding her hands up at her sides. She was smiling, but doing her best to look serious, but she couldn't seem to hold the frightened look, especially when she kept giggling. Jack chuckled too, holding the paintgun on her.

“Hmmm...now that I have you what should I make you do?” Jack asked her.

Jack waggled his eyebrows at her. “Anything I want, eh?”

Harley giggled again taking a step backwards. “If you can catch me that is...” With that she took off turning on her toes and dashing away. Jack stood there for a moment staring.

“You did not just run...”

He burst out laughing and tossed his gun down, yanking off his goggles and tossing them away as he took off after her. Harley hadn't gone far before Jack tackled her from behind, the two of them going down on the grass at the edge of the forested area. Harley struggled, kicking and twisting, laughing the whole while, but Jack turned her over, pinning her body under him.

Jack curled his body over hers, one hand resting against the top of her head while his other cupped her face, taking a kiss from her. Harley stopped her struggling, seeming to melt against the grass. Jack kissed her softly, taking his time to fully explore her mouth with his tongue. Harley sighed happily, her hands tracing down his sides. She groaned when Jack moved his mouth down her throat, planting kisses along her neck while his hand snaked up her body, squeezing her breast through her clothing, he pressed against her, undulating his hips in slow easy movements, causing Harley to gasp when he rubbed just right.

Jack giggled against her neck, his nimble fingers unhooking one of her overalls straps. “Right here, right now Harley. That's what I want...”

Harley closed her eyes, arching her head back while Jack's tongue licked up her neck just before he unhooked the other side of her overalls. Harley's hands moved over his shoulders, her hands coming up to cup his face again. “I love you Jack, I love you...”

Jack rubbed his nose against hers.

“You are the only one for me Harley, there was never anyone before you...it will always be you.”

Harley frowned staring into his eyes as the meaning of his words sunk in.

“Oh Jack...” Harley sighed softly, pulling his mouth down to hers again. His kisses were passionate, his tongue sliding against hers, lips gliding over hers. Harley melted beneath him.

Jack pressed his hips against hers, pressing between her legs; she could feel the hardness of him struggling against his clothing.

She thrust back with a groaned, “Jack!” her moan caressing his lips.

Jack pulled away from her mouth, sitting back on his knees and grabbed her overalls yanking them down her body and off her legs, then he grabbed her panties, pulling them down just as he had with her overalls. Harley lifted her legs letting Jack pull them off of her. Jack tossed the overalls and panties aside giving her a wicked grin before he laid down between her legs, hooking them over his shoulders and sliding his hands under her rear, lifting her up to his mouth. Harley arched trying not to cry out too loudly when Jack's tongue licked up her, causing her whole body to jerk.

Jack chuckled pressing his whole mouth to her, sucking on her clitoris, his tongue rolling around gradually. He alternated from moving his tongue quickly to slowing his movements down to the point that Harley was whimpering.

She pulled on his hair panting. “Puddin! Puddin!”

Harley's hips thrust against his mouth as Jack's sucking became more vigorous, almost bringing her to climax before he would stop, teasing her mercilessly. He liked the way her shoes felt on his back, the press of her soft thighs against his cheeks, the way her legs jerked and vibrated when she came close, just before the muscles of her legs tightened before orgasm, the roughness hitting against his still healing wound sending a shock of pain through him. It was all delicious. Everything about her made him hard, needy. She is perfect, he thought sucking deeply on her. He dropped her rear down gently before laying himself flat on the grass, continuing to suck and caress her with his tongue. His hands glided up her sides, stopping at her waist where he ran the tips of his fingers along her sides.

Jack pressed his whole mouth to her again, running his tongue in gentle licks, sucking on her clitoris slowly, just as he would kiss her mouth or suck on her tongue. Harley threw her head back with a groan of pleasure, her hips rolling with the movements of his tongue.

Harley's whole body arched. She reached down grabbing fistfuls of Jack's hair, her hips thrusting against his tongue. Jack let one of her legs go, letting her lay it down flat against the grass while wrapping his arm around her other leg and laying his cheek against the inside of her smooth, warm thigh. He continued kissing her, running his tongue in gentle licks, using the whole of his tongue, flat against her, but now he added a finger to her, thrusting his long forefinger into her, slow and gentle. This was their first time having sex since her miscarriage and he wanted it to be all about Harley. All about the woman he loved.

He adored the little gasps of pleasure she was making, the groans, the way her body rolled under his touch. Jack continued to move his finger in and out, twisting it just a little, almost agonizingly slow while his lips and tongue moved over her in gentle passionate kisses. He careful added another finger, sliding his fingers slowly into her, then almost out, twisting them around and sliding them back in. Harley whimpered, groaning when his fingers entered her again, but added his mouth again, creating a seal and sucking while moving his fingers just a little, not fully pulling his fingers out, just small movements, hitting her perfectly, that which someone had called the g-spot.

Harley cried out loudly, her whole body arching. “Uuhhhh...Uuhhh...oooh...JACK!!”

Jack continued sucking and licking at her, when she came, drawing out her orgasm into another, feeling the delightful pull of her fingers in his hair until she let go and dug her fingers into the grass and dirt beside her hips, jerking against his mouth and fingers. Finally he released her, grinning down at her, his mouth and chin covered in her fluid.

“That's my girl,” Jack hissed. Harley dragged her teeth over her bottom lip. “Oh Jack, that was amazing.”

Jack chuckled. “Been reading up on how to do better. I want you to always feel like putty in my hands baby girl.”

Harley giggled and blushed. “Come here Jack.”

Staring down at her, Jack slowly undid the buttons of his jeans. Harley watched, still breathless rubbing her lips together until he had pushed his pants down. She loved his erection, loved how hard and thick he was, how he felt inside her. Waiting these last few weeks had been agony, but now she reached for him greedily. Then he surprised her, forcing her over on her stomach. Harley gasped and then giggled. Jack yanked her up on her knees, spreading her legs with his thighs. He grabbed her hips, yanking her toward him to shove himself inside her wet and yielding body. Harley's back arched, her fingers digging into the grass when Jack entered her. “JACK!”

Jack growled in pleasure. “Harley!”

He had wanted to go slow, but he couldn't, he just couldn't. He needed to pound her, to bury himself deep into her as far as he could.

Harley groaned. “Yes, yes, yes! Jack!! Harder!!”

Jack growled again, digging his fingers into the soft flesh of her hips and yanked her back against him pounding harder, the sound of flesh slapping against flesh and their mixed moans and pants mingled together until Jack felt Harley's body tighten around him. He shuddered when Harley yelled. “JACK!! YES!!” She came with a long low moan of his name on her lips. “Jack...oh Jack, I love you!”

He yanked her back one more time and burst, his body giving her everything he had until his body grew weak and he fell forward driving her down to the grass, his weight on her back. Harley struggled to find her breath again, made a little more difficult with Jack's body on top of her, but she loved it. Jack covered her ear and shoulder with kisses.

“Mm..I love you Harley,” he whispered against her shoulder.

Later that same day, Jack and Harley were at the inside pool in the manor. Jack was watching Harley swimming back and forth, doing laps across the pool. She was wearing a 50's style polkadot red and white bikini, her blonde hair pulled back into a ponytail. Jack was lying in one of the lounge chairs, a bottle of Bowmore fifty-four year old scotch and a glass on the table beside him. He was sipping his drink watching Harley swim, thinking about getting her out of the swimsuit when his phone vibrated. Jack picked it up glancing at the text message.
“Found what you are looking for...A.”

Jack smiled and texted back. “Where?”

The text back read. “Go to My Alibi in center city. He will be there.”

Jack texted back. “Any news on the croc?”

“No yet, slippery, still working.”

Jack’s smile widened, he texted back. “Thanks for the one, expect transfer within the hour.”

“Always a pleasure...A.”

Jack looked up, watching as Harley lifted herself out of the pool. He grinned wide, watching the water running down her back, knowing how excited she would be for what they were going to do tonight.

Harley stood in front of the mirror, her hair up in pigtails, wearing only her bra and panties. “What does one wear to go killing puddin?”

Jack was dressed in black slacks, a dark forest green vest, white dress shirt and a long black jacket with tails that reminded Harley of a Regency era coat. He even had on a pair of black and white wingtip oxfords with a matching set of black leather gloves. He had dark eyeliner around his eyes and his lips were a bright glossy red. Harley loved the way he looked with his nails painted too. He was sliding a long knife into an inner pocket of the jacket as he glanced over at her.

“Well, I would be perfectly happy for you to go just like that.” Jack giggled and Harley grinned wrinkling her nose at him.

“Perv.”

Jack belly laughed. “Oh, you know it my sweets.” He winked at her and moved over to the closet with a hand to his chin in thought. “Mmm...let me see.”

Jack started flipping through clothing in the closet. “Ah, here we go.” Jack pulled out a pair of black leggings and a red and black striped corset with black lace over the top of it that Jack had bought for her, but she hadn't worn yet. He next pulled out a pair of black leather boots.

“Oh and before I forget...” Jack grinned standing on tiptoe to pull something down from the top of the closet. He grabbed the item then set them down with the corset. Harley glanced down to see a pair of elbow length, black leather gloves. Harley grinned, pressing her teeth into her bottom lip, her cheeks rosy with pleasure that Jack had bought her gloves.

“There you go sweets! Now you just need a couple of weapons.” Jack grinned, sliding another knife into his jacket on the other side where there was another inner pocket. Jack walked over to his desk searching around until he came up with something. “Harley, here catch!”

Harley had just pulled the leggings up when she snatched the item out of the air. She grinned when she saw that what he had thrown was a pair of brass knuckles. Jack grinned and winked at her. Harley giggled setting them down near her boots. “Thank you puddin.”

Jack dropped down to a crouch, pulled open the drawers down below and pulled out two .45 semiautomatic pistols. He balanced on the balls of his feet checking the chambers and reaching inside the drawer to come up with ammunition for the weapons, loading them. He slipped off his jacket and pulled out a shoulder holster, one under each arm. He slipped both the guns into the holsters before slipping his jacket back on. Jack opened another drawer and pulled out another pistol, this one smaller, a .380 along with a shoulder holster. He walked over to Harley and set them down next to her.

Harley took her bra off, grabbed the corset and wrapped it around herself, hooking the latches in the front while she spoke. “I’m not sure if a knife would work for me. When I was in the sewers, I really liked the pipe I used.” She grinned as she remembered beating those two men.

Jack frowned picking up his cigarettes and thumping the pack against his palm, sliding one out and putting it between his lips. He pulled his lighter out and lit the cigarette, then slowly smiled.

“I know the perfect weapon for you! Come on, we need to go to the garden sheds.”

It was almost midnight when the two of them slipped out of the manor and made their way to the shed located around back and down one of the paths from the manor. Jack opened it and turned the flashlight on that they had brought with them. Inside there were a variety of tools, all deadly if used correctly, but Jack was after one item in particular. He shined the light around with Harley standing behind him until the beam of light landed on the item he had in mind. There, leaning against the wall was a long handled ten pound sledgehammer.

Harley squealed when she saw it. She walked over and picked it up with a broad grin. “Oh Jack, this is perfect.”

Jack motioned her to follow him out of the shed. “Give it a few swings,” he encouraged her. “See what you think.”

Harley hurried out and almost immediately started to swing the sledgehammer around with a squeal of delight. “Oh, I love it!!”

Jack watched her with a smile of delight. His girl was perfect, he thought watching her. After tonight he was going to tell her about his experiments, his other killings and his ideas for making Gotham a better place. He giggled as she made a swing that was slightly too wide that had her almost losing her footing, but she squealed and laughed, recovering quickly. Her gymnastics training definitely helped.

“Ready Harls?” Jack asked with a grin.

“I'm more than ready,” she said with a growl as she winked at him.

Jack drove the motorcycle through downtown Gotham city, heading toward the Alibi. The bar was located on a corner of an old brick building dating back at least three decades. The outside was covered in old concert fliers, sales ads and job offers along with a healthy dose of graffiti. There were a handful of motorcycles out front, maybe a half-dozen, a couple of old cars and a bicycle. There was a bouncer at the door, a short, but stout bald man with a denim vest on, jeans and biker boots.
Nearly every inch of him was covered in tattoos. He was leaning against the wall near the door smoking a cigar when Jack and Harley pulled up, parking their bike at the far end. Jack's knives were concealed, but Harley had her sledgehammer strapped to her back over a leather jacket that belonged to Jack. They walked up to the door, the man giving them a once over, but when Jack reached out to push the door open, the man did nothing to stop them.

Inside the bar was all cheap wood paneling, neon red lights, and sticky floors. The bar was a fairly typical old wood bar with a few stools, the back wall lined with a mirror and shelves with bottles of alcohol. There was a cheap pool table in one corner, an ancient looking jukebox, some scattered tables and maybe about a dozen people in here, all of them men except two women who Harley immediately pegged as cheap whores. The walls were decorated with old framed pictures; someone had put a stuffed deer head up with a stuff boar next to it. There were some nude posters on another wall, all looking like they had been hanging there since the 70's.

Everyone in the bar turned to look at the newcomers, including the large man sitting at the bar, Lester Buchinsky. Lester, Jack noticed as he and Harley stepped up to the bar, didn't have his full electrical suit with him, but he was still wearing a couple of gauntlets. Even in the dim light Jack could see the power pack at the small of Buchinsky's back that powered the gauntlets he wore. Jack smiled, taking a seat on the stool next to Buchinsky while Harley sat down next to Jack. The mercenary gave no indication that he recognized either one of them. The ancient jukebox was playing Metallica's “Turn the Page” as all eyes watched Jack and Harley with undisguised scorn.

Jack motioned at the bartender with two fingers. The bartender came over, an average size slim, long haired man with sleeve tattoos and a wife-beater shirt on.

Jack smiled. “A shot of Jagermeister and a Manhattan for my lady here.”

The bartender sneered. “We don't do fancy drinks, bub.”

Jack’s smile never wavered. “You don't do them 'cause your stupid or because your patrons have no taste?”

The man stared at Jack, then shrugged. “Fine.”

A couple of minutes later Jack had a shot of Jagermeister and Harley had an perfectly acceptable Manhattan sitting in front of her. Jack picked up his drink, took a sip, and glanced over at Lester. Harley turned on her stool to face the bar, smiling pleasantly at the small crowd who was watching the two of them warily, some with open hostility. A few had moved their jackets aside, or adjusted their stance to show that they were armed, whether with blades or guns. Harley counted; with Buchinsky and the bartender, there were a thirteen people in the bar.

Harley smiled and pulled out her brass knuckles, sliding them over her gloved fingers like she was putting on a ring before reaching back and loosening the sledgehammer, moving it to the side to let it fall head down next to her stool with a heavy thunk. Buchinsky glanced sideways at Jack who was openly staring at him.

Jack smiled at Buchinsky. “You're the Electrocrutioner correct?”

Lester turned his head to sneer at Jack. “Whatcha want pretty boy?”

Jack downed his drink and motioned at the bartender who poured him another. “You were at The Monte a few weeks back remember?”

Buchinsky turned around to fully look at Jack, his eyes glanced to Harley sitting behind Jack, then back at Jack again. Buchinsky sort of recognized the woman, but he couldn't place where. Jack's smile was cold. “You did two things that night that I simply can't forgive. First: you hurt my girl; and second, you caused her to lose our baby.”

Lester sneered. “Yeah, well maybe you should be thanking me so you don't have that cunt hanging around with some squealing brat, eh?"

Jack’s eye twitched as he said in a low voice, “And you're rude on top of it. Manners maketh man or so said William Horman.”

Buchinsky frowned in clear confusion. “Who the fuck is that?”

Jack sighed. “Harley?”

The music on the jukebox had just changed to “I'm Going to Hell” by The Pretty Reckless, when Harley stood up.

Harley moved surprisingly swiftly, grabbing up her sledgehammer and with a strength born of rage, she came around Jack with a yell.

“YAHTZEE!” and using her whole body to swing, she swung the sledgehammer in a half circle, the head of the hammer slammed into Buchinsky's shoulder with a sickening sound of bone breaking. Harley let go of the handle as the hammer knocked Buchinsky off the stool. That was when the bar erupted into chaos.

Jack hopped off his stool, crossing his arms under his jacket, grabbing his pistols in a smooth practiced move and flung his arms out. He fired at the bartender just as the man came up with a cut-off rifle, two shots, one to the gut, the other to the face. With his other gun facing out to the bar, Jack shot the nearest man, an average built guy with a faux mohawk who had stood up, reaching for his pistol, but Jack shot him in the gut, then two bullets to the face. The whole while Jack was grinning, a laugh bubbling up. Jack ran at the polo table in the split second it took him to shoot the mohawk guy, surprising the four men there when he hopped up onto the table, kicking a pool ball hard enough that the ball flew up and struck one of the men in the chest, the ball’s impact knocking the air from his lungs and causing that guy to stumble backwards, falling to the floor. Jack grinned, aimed his gun at that man and shot him in the chest.

Jack spun around, going down on one knee while the other three men at the table were struggling to pull their weapons out. Jack shot another man struggling to yank his knife out, this one short, chubby and bald. Jack did two quick shots to that man’s throat, then jumped on the dead man (who hadn't fallen yet, not realizing he was dead) wrapping his arms and legs around him. Jack spun the man around, using him as a shield against the bald man's friend, a mangy looking blonde. The blonde man had managed to free his own gun, bringing it up to fire at Jack.

Jack spun around, twisting the dead man’s torso and holding on so that when the blonde man shot, he ended up shooting his friend's corpse instead. Jack rode the dead man to the floor, shooting the blonde man in the hip before he somersaulted to his feet, now between two tables. The doorman came stumbling in with his own gun, but Jack, giggling, shot him in the head.

Harley moved swiftly after letting go of the sledgehammer. She didn't have time to check on Buchinsky before she dropped into a crouch and rolled on the balls of her feet, pulling her own pistol and shot a tall skinny man with an eye-patch. Her shot hit the eye-patch man in the kneecap shattering bone. Harley followed that by racing toward him and hitting the same man in the face with her fist that was armed with the brass knuckles. The eye-patch went down and Harley leapt on him before he could fall completely, riding him to the sticky floor where she pounded into his face with her brass covered fist as hard and fast as she could. One of the women in bar, a brunette, heroin-addict skinny, had yanked a knife out and screamed at Harley.
“GET OFF HIM YOU CUNT!”

The smile Harley gave her was all teeth and vicious, with little speckles of blood on her cheeks. Harley brought her forearm up, blocking the brunette's first swing with her knife that came down at Harley. (The background music changed to “Wicked Ones” by Dorothy, whoever had put money in the thing must have done so just before Harley and Jack stepped inside.)

Harley rose to her feet at the same time and punched the woman in the stomach with her fist as hard as she could, once, twice, three times in quick succession, then Harley swung around to the woman’s back. The brunette managed to slash out when Harley spun around, the blade slashing across Harley's thigh to leave a deep, bloody cut. Harley snarled, grabbed the brunette around the back, twisted the arm holding the blade with her, trying to pin the brunette’s hand that had the knife between them. Harley reached for the brunette's knife hand, but the brunette twisted with her so the two woman were facing one another again. The brunette, with her free hand, hit Harley across the face, her fist striking Harley in the mouth busting her lip. Harley still managed to drive the woman down to the sticky wood floor, having greater strength.

They struggled, rolling for a bit, knocking into some of the chairs. The other woman, a blonde, screeched, “Let her go!”

The blonde woman rushed to help, but Harley twisted off the brunette just enough to do a backward kick, catching the blonde in the chest and knocking her back into a table while she and the brunette struggled with the blade in the brunette's hand. Harley had managed to get the other woman twisted around again and on her back, using her own hand to hold the brunette's hand that held the knife. They struggled for a couple of seconds before Harley's superior strength won. (The background music had changed to Lynard Skynard...the jukebox was skipping songs quickly, simply adding to the chaos.) Harley hissed down at the brunette.

“I fucking HATE this music!!” spitting blood from her bleeding lip as she snarled.

Harley put all of weight on the other woman's outstretched arms and forced her arms down. The brunette's arms gave out under Harley's weight, the knife plunging straight into the hollow of her throat.

Jack started laughing. He shot another man with a buzz-cut in the eye and that man's friend, an average looking guy, twice in the chest. He chuckled when he heard Harley yell how much she hated the music, so he shot the jukebox which caused the machine to jerk and the song to jump and change to an Iron Maiden song “The Evil that Men Do”. Jack snorted before he slid both guns back into their holsters, yanking out his knives when another man—this one was built like a linebacker—had pulled a bat from somewhere. The linebacker took a swing at Jack who ducked it, taking several graceful steps, dodging the bat swings with an easy weaving back and forth.

“Oh, this is getting fun! Oh, hey gents.” Jack chuckled when his back hit the wall.

The linebacker with the bat cornered Jack, two of his friends moving to flank Jack. One of the men with the linebacker, a bald man who sported an impressive beard, Jack thought, had also pulled a knife, and their last friend, a man with a wild unkempt head of hair drew a small pistol.

“Oh, you must be the Moe, Larry and Curly of the evening.” Jack grinned.

The linebacker snarled. “Laugh it up. I'm going to crack your head like a melon.”
Jack chuckled. “Oh, you think stupid?”

“Who you calling stupid?” The man with the frizzy hair leered.

Jack giggled. “I don't think you're stupid. You just have bad luck when it comes to thinking.”

“Larry” snarled and started to bring up his weapon, but Jack ducked under his arm, holding his blades facing downward. Jack came up under the man's gun arm and slashed his throat, blood spurting out in an arc as the man gurgled. The linebacker, “Moe” took a swing at Jack hissing. “You son-of-a-bitch!”

The bat nicked Jack's shoulder with enough force that Jack spun around to face the man, but Jack was grinning.

Jack charged forward, stepping to the side to avoid “Curly's” lunge with the knife and buried one of his blades to the hilt in “Moe's” gut. Jack swiftly brought his second knife up and slammed it in an upward stroke, deeply under the man's jaw. Jack drove the body around toward “Curly” before he yanked his blades out to throw Moe at his friend. “Curly” went down to the floor under his friend's weight. But before Jack could lunge in and finish “Curly” a man jumped onto Jack's back.

Harley narrowed her eyes watching the blonde woman with a knife in her hand.

“Come on bitch,” the blonde woman hissed.

The blonde jerked in response, lunging and slashing forward. Harley ducked and stabbed the woman in the side, but hit nothing vital. Harley jumped back yanking her blade with her, taking several quick steps back. The blonde woman surprised Harley when she kicked out, her foot catching Harley in the knee, sending her crashing backwards to the nasty (now even nastier with blood on it) floor. Harley rolled out of the way just as the woman lunged down on her. Harley rolled away and into her sledgehammer.

Harley sprang to her feet, dropping her blade and grasped the sledgehammer handle with both hands. She twisted around with a yell. “AAHH!!!”

Harley swung the hammer to the side, catching the blonde in the hip with a loud crack of metal hitting muscle and bone. The woman went down with a scream. Harley let go of the hammer, the impact sending the hammer flying past the blonde into the bar with the loud splinter of wood. Harley turned, searching frantically for her knife. She dived under a table grabbing at her blade.

It was the blonde man whom Jack had shot in the hip who jumped onto Jack's back. He still had his gun and tried to shoot Jack in the head, but Jack yanked his head back hard, crushing the blonde man's nose. The shot slipped and ripped across Jack's front, burning a bloody graze, but otherwise doing little damage. Jack buried one of his knives in the blonde's thigh, which caused the man's grip on Jack to loosen. Jack let go of the blade leaving it in the man's leg and grabbed him with his free hand, twisting the blonde around and then slamming him into the edge of a table.

Jack grabbed the man's hand that held the gun, slamming it three times in quick succession until the blonde dropped the gun. During this, Jack dropped his other knife, but he managed to yank the one Jack grinned. “Wanna see a magic trick?” Just before the man could respond, Jack slammed the blade with all his might into the blonde man's eye.

Harley scrambled to her feet to turn just as the blonde woman, one leg dragging, slashed at her. The blade cut across the top of Harley's breasts, painful, but not deadly. Harley lunged back avoiding the worst of the blade and kicked out, her booted foot hitting the woman in her hip that Harley hoped was broken.

The blonde stumbled back with a screech of pain. “SHIT!! YOU BITCH!”

Harley grinned with bloody teeth. The blonde, losing all sense, tried to charge Harley, but Harley only laughed and charged her back. The blonde held her blade up high, too high, her eyes crazed with pain. Harley, at the last moment wrapped her arm around the blonde's arm that held the knife, yanking her forward then with all her strength, Harley brought her fist down on the bend in the woman's arm using her fist with the brass knuckles. The blonde screamed as her arm broke with a loud snap of bone. Harley let her go, doing a spinning kick to her already damaged hip that sent the blonde crumpling to the floor.

Jack stumbled back with a laugh, yanking his blade out of his latest victim's eye when a shot rang out, hitting him in the shoulder, ripping through the cloth of his outfit. Jack jerked with the shot, ripping across the skin of his shoulder, another flesh wound, just burning across his shoulder and through his nice jacket.

Jack didn't waste time, he spun on the balls of his feet like a dancer in the middle of a tango spin and threw his blade, striking “Curly” in the throat. Jack laughed as he saw the shocked look on “Curly's” face as he sank to the floor, blood bubbling from between his lips and out of his neck.

Jack stepped backwards, still laughing and ran right into the arms of the Electrocutioner. Lester snarled wrapping his beefy arms around Jack. The gauntlets sent a shock through Jack's body. Jack jerked with the initial current of electricity, but the weeks of shocking himself provided him with a level of tolerance Lester wasn't prepared for when he grabbed Jack.

Jack laughed while the electricity raced over his body.

Harley turned as the lights in the bar flickered in response to the suddenly influx of electricity from the Electrocutioner's gauntlets. She saw the Electrocutioner's back, arcs of electricity racing from the pack on his back and along his arms. She heard Jack's laugh.

Harley screamed. “JACK!”

She raced toward the bar and grabbed her sledgehammer. She picked it up and swung with all her might, her hammer smashing into Lester's back and into the electrical pack at the small of his back. There was a burst of light as electricity shot from the pack and raced up the Electrocutioner's back and down the handle of the sledgehammer. Harley screamed as a jolt of electricity raced up her hammer causing her arms to jerk. Her hands clenched, then released in a spasm causing her to let go of the handle. She dropped to her knees with a gasp of pain, her arms aching all the way to her shoulders.

Lester let go of Jack, jerking, spasming with the overload of electricity. Jack broke the man's hold on him and stepped back for a moment to watch the smoke as Lester's hair burned until he saw Harley on her knees behind the Electrocutioner.

Jack, a few burns on his clothing, rushed over to her, dropping down to one knee. “Harley?”

She smiled. “I'm fine Jack.” She giggled. Jack helped her to her feet holding her close for a moment and kissed her.

“Give me a second cupcake.” Jack walked over to where Lester had fallen face first to the floor. Jack checked his pulse. “Ah, still alive sweets.”

Jack pulled one of his guns, sliding his hand into his slacks pocket and pulled out a handful of bullets, he slipped them into the nearly empty magazine. After that, he pulled out his pack of cigarettes, lighting one and took a long pull, blowing out a long line of smoke. Harley hopped onto one of the stools, spinning herself around giggling. She expected him to shoot Lester, but instead he walked around the bar, putting a bullet in the head of each person in the bar, making sure they were dead. Harley jumped up, sliding across the remains of the bar, looking over the liquid that was still intact, grabbing a bottle of whiskey and two glasses. She poured the amber liquid into the glasses, leaning on part of the bar that was still there after shoving the bartender out of the way and sipped on her drink watching Jack. Jack walked back over to the Electrocutioner.

“So baby, what do you want to do?” Jack walked over and picked up his drink, downing it in one swallow. Jack smiled sliding his weapon back into its holster before reaching over to take Harley's hand and helped Harley to walk around the bar, just as the music on the jukebox changed. They were both bloody and hurt, but Harley smiled.

“I wanna make him suffer puddin.” Tears appeared in her eyes as Harley whispered. “I want him to suffer for what he did to us.”

The music on the jukebox had changed to something mellow, the sounds of “Wicked Game” started to play, but a version by a group called Stone Sour.

“Dance with me puddin?” Harley grinned at him, tears running down her cheeks, smearing her make-up and the blood that streaked her face.

Jack ran a finger over the tops of her breasts, smearing her blood across his fingers. He slowly brushed her blood over his bottom lip before he grinned. “Of course my sweets.”

Jack held her hand, the two of them walked in a circle smiling and staring into each others eyes as they moved among the bodies and blood. Jack came up behind her, his hands placed gently on her shoulders, they weaved together for a moment before he took her hand and spun her out from him. He tugged her into his arms, Harley placing one bloody gloved hand in his equally bloody gloved hand, her other hand resting on his shoulder, Jack's other hand on her waist. They smiled into each others eyes weaving back and forth as the music played.

The world was on fire and no one could save me but you

It's strange what desire will make foolish people do

I'd never dreamed that I'd meet somebody like you

And I'd never dreamed that I'd lose somebody like you
Jack spun her out again then back into his arms lifting her up, wrapping his arms around her rear, neither of them bothered by the wounds they had as he smiled brightly up at her and spun her around. Harley put one arm out, her other around his neck smiling down at him with such love that it made Jack's heart swell. Jack lowered her slowly, running his hands up her back, pressing her against him. Harley wrapped her arms around him, staring into his eyes while the song played. Both of them, their faces bloody, their lipstick and eye make-up smeared smiling at each other. Jack kissed her, moving his mouth over hers, their tongue sliding together while they weaved in place to the music.

What a wicked game you played to make me feel this way
What a wicked thing to do to let me dream of you
What a wicked thing to say you never felt this way
What a wicked thing to do to make me dream of you ….
Lester came to slowly. His head felt heavy, but the first thing he was aware of was that his body was wracked with pain. He was fairly sure his shoulder was broken, or at least dislocated. He had been burned, he could smell it, the smell of burned hair that seemed to float around his head. But the next thing he was aware of was the smell of blood, cigarette smoke and alcohol. The next thing that he focused on was the sound; it was quiet except for the sound of “Sympathy for the Devil” playing on the jukebox, and the clink of balls on the pool table, rolling hitting each other.

When Lester tried to move, he found that he was tied up tight enough that he could only move his head. He was sitting up, tied to one of the chairs in the bar. He tried again to move, but he was bound up tightly, his arms twisted behind him, wrapped with wires from ...well he had no idea what they were from; the only reason he knew they were wires was that he could feel them against his skin on his forearms, he knew the feel of wires from his work with them, it was as if he could feel the current that ran through them vibrate against his skin.

As he opened his eyes, his vision focused slowly in the dim light from the bar, he looked around carefully, not wanting to move his head too quickly, it hurt too much to move with any speed. What he saw made his heart rate increase. Everyone in the bar was dead.

Lester pressed his lips together in shock at the mess around him. There were bodies lying everywhere, seeming to cover every inch of the bars floor space. Blood was splattered across the floor, the few tables that were still standing upright and along the walls. But what made the whole scene even more eerie was the giggling and whispered voices of the only two people alive in the place. Lester glanced over to see the two people that had walked into the bar earlier, the pretty boy and the blonde woman who had come in with him. They were by the pool table, the man showing her how to play, leaning across her body in an intimate fashion. Even among the carnage, they seemed like a silly happy couple, the man flirting with the woman playfully.

Jack smiled and licked Harley's ear, catching the lobe of her ear in his teeth and pulling gently before he let go. He leaned over her, enjoying the feel of her backside pressed against his groin. “Now, hold it steady and let it go easy.”

Harley giggled, glancing sideways at Jack. “You know I know how to do this right?”

Jack grinned, wrapping his arms around her waist and licking her ear again pressing his groin against her rear. “But I love showing you how to, my pumpkin.”

Harley giggled and wiggled her backside against Jack, enjoying how her playfulness made Jack growl playfully. Jack turned her around, causing her to drop her pool stick as he lifted her up and set her on the table pressing himself between her legs. Jack grabbed her backside pulling her to the edge of the table. Harley grabbed Jack's head, her fingers digging into his hair as they kissed long and hard. Jack's hand snaked up her torso to squeeze her breast, making Harley groan loudly. Jack purred against her mouth especially when Harley wrapped her legs around his waist, locked her feet behind him, and forced his mouth closer, her teeth dragging across his tongue. Jack chuckled, his fingers wrapping around the edge of the corset she wore and pulled the garment down just a little to yank her closer. For a moment Lester thought they were going to go at it right there on the pool table, but after a few moments of intense, heated kissing, the man stepped away from the woman.

Jack licked her lips with a purred, “When I get you home I'm going to fuck you long, hard and deep.”

Harley giggled. “Good,” she hissed back as she ran her gloved fingers down his chest.

Jack let go of her reluctantly and walked around to where he had an ashtray balanced on the edge of the pool table. He used the tip of his shoe to push one of the bodies out of the way as he picked up his cigarette that was balanced at the edge of the ashtray, burning a trail of smoke into the air. Alongside the ashtray sat a bottle of Evan Williams Kentucky straight bourbon whiskey and two shot glasses. Jack picked up the bottle, poured two shots and handed one to Harley. She slipped off the pool table and strolled over to him taking the drink. She downed it with a shudder.

“Ack, the stuff is harsh puddin.”

Jack chuckled taking his shot before putting his cigarette back between his lips and hopping up on the side of the pool table to face Lester.

Lester snarled at his captors. “Let me go, you fucking crazies!!”

Harley dropped her shot glass on a table as walked over to position herself between Jack's legs, running her gloved hands up and down Jack's thighs as she leaned back against him. Jack wrapped an arm around her shoulders, pulling her against his torso, blowing out a line of smoke from between his lips before leaning down and licking her ear again.

Lester frowned, watching them kiss and thinking to himself that they were really nuts, when the man slid his hand down her neck and over her breasts, squeezing one causing the woman to moan against the guy's mouth again. For the second time in a matter of minutes Lester thought the two of them were going to go at each other right there in front of him. Lester was about ready to yell something else at them when they stopped, seeming reluctant to part before they both looked at him and smiled. That gave Lester the creeps. For the first time since he regained consciousness, Lester was beginning to doubt he would get out of this alive.

Jack hopped down from the table after Harley moved from between his legs. As he jumped down he took Harley's hand in his, weaving his fingers with hers. Together, they both waltzed over to the Electrocutioner, each of them pulling up a chair to sit in front of him. Harley sat and crossed her legs. This close Lester could see that she was covered in speckles of blood that had dried across her face like freckles and had even sprayed into her blonde hair. Jack sat beside her. Lester could see he was covered in blood too. They both smiled at him again. He was wishing they would stop with the smiling, it was really making him uneasy.

To cover his building fear, Lester snarled and spit, but neither Harley nor Jack reacted with anything but smiles.

“What the fuck is wrong with you people?! What do you want from me?” Lester hissed and struggled against his bonds. “When I get free, I'm going to rip your fucking heads off!”

Jack picked up one of Lester's gauntlets that had been sitting on a table nearby, ignoring the outburst as he held the gauntlet up for the larger man to see. “While you were out, I played around with your gauntlets and what was left of your power pack after my sweet Harley here hit you in the back. I’ve taken the power pack, and made ourselves a sort of poor man's electric chair.” Jack grinned with pride.

Harley smiled. “My puddin's gifted.”

Lester snarled. “What the fuck do you two want? Money? I got money...”

Jack snorted. “Pffft...money? Please. You know who I am? I'm Jack Wayne—I hardly need your money Mr. Buchinsky. No, no, I”m here for something much more fulfilling...Revenge.” Jack smiled and whispered to the bound man. “They say, revenge is a confession of pain and you, Mr. Buchinsky, have caused us pain.”

Harley nodded in agreement.

Buchinsky frowned in confusion. “Revenge? For what?”

Harley stood up so quickly that Lester didn't see her move, but before he could react, she was right in front of him and had slapped him hard across the face.

“For what you took from us!!” she hissed, nearly screaming. Jack hurried over putting his arm around her shoulders and guiding her back from Buchinsky.

“What the fuck are you talking about, you crazy bitch?” Buchinsky spit blood out, her slap hard enough with the brass knuckles on her hand that she had split his lip.

Buchinsky looked at them both with genuine confusion.

Harley grabbed his face again breaking free of Jack's hold, her nails (despite the gloves) digging into his cheeks. “You took our baby, that's what.”

Jack gently tugged her away again from Buchinsky and into the cradle of his arms. Harley wrapped her arms around Jack and shuddered, burying her face against his neck while Jack glared at Buchinsky.

“Harley was pregnant when you attacked her, tried to use her as a shield against Batman at The Monte; remember now?”

That was when Buchinsky realized where he knew these two from, that job a few weeks back...the failed attempt on Harvey Dent's life. Buchinsky stared at the two of them, clearly not sure what to say or do when Jack smiled, pulling something from his pocket while keeping one arm around Harley. Lester saw the power pack for his gauntlets; he traced the wire that led from the power pack, to the floor and up to the chair that he was tied to...where he lost track of it.

Jack giggled. “We are also here to correct a grave error on the Batman's part. I mean, really? Giving you to the Gotham police. Well, we saw how that turned out. Batman really needs to think before gives criminal low-lifes like you over to them. It's really sad, Batman could do so much more, but he is only a half measure.” Jack sighed. “Well, now that we're here everything will be as it should be.”

Jack handed the power pack to Harley.

“Would you like to do the honors, my love? The first hit to see how my little experiment works?” Jack purred.
Harley lifted her head seeing what Jack was handing her. “Yes, I would puddin.”

She took the device with a vicious smile.

Lester hissed. “You two are crazy!”

Harley and Jack both burst out laughing. Jack chuckled, stepping close to his prisoner and slapped Buckinsky across the face. “You know, whatever doesn't kill you makes you stranger. That is why madness is a clearly underrated concept. Madness is just a different sort of sanity! When everything becomes too much...when the “order” of things makes no sense at all, you realize you’re just differently sane! Then you see the world as it is, understand that reason and logic are just illogical! But, I also like to think that madness is just a new way of seeing the world...the correct way of seeing the world. You see, Batman letting you live? That was crazy!! You managing to escape from the cops? Madness! Harley and I are just correcting a grave error. We are just putting the world on a track that we see as the correct one. You may see that as crazy, but Harley and I see it as the correct way, the way of true justice.”

Jack smiled and walked back over to Harley wrapping an arm around her waist and pulling her close.

Buchinsky thought he was ready for whatever these crazies had cooked up. He wasn't the Electrocuitioner for nothing. He had worked with electricity for a long time, he had been electrocuted dozens of times. There was nothing they could do to him, he thought, that was until that bitch flipped the switch on the power pack.

* Jack and Harley stood back as bolts of electricity ran through Lester Buchinsky lighting him up like a Christmas tree. While the man was jerking around in his chair, his muscles spasming and seizing, Harley giggled. “You think he will bite his tongue off? I mean, I read about electroshock therapy where they forgot the tooth guard and the patients bit their tongues off.”

Jack laughed. “Oh hell, that would be funny.”

They both laughed sitting back in their chairs and watched Buchinsky twitch and jerk.

Jack frowned tapping his finger against his chin when Harley turned off the juice. “You know sweets. The more I think about it, the more I realize, killing him would be too easy.”

Harley, her face lit up by the dance of lights as the lights in the bar flickered. She watched Buchinsky jerk and twitch with a certain gleam of pleasure in her eyes when she flipped the switch on for a few moments longer, then flipped the switch off. (Harley was only dimly aware of how far down the rabbit hole she had gone when she was enjoying torturing someone, but this man had stolen something precious from her and Jack, something...beautiful. She wasn’t sure what it said about her...she would think she would know being a doctor of psychiatry and all, but it was hard when she was so in love that she couldn't see beyond that.)

“What do you mean puddin?” Harley dropped the power pack on one of the tables as she stood up.

“Killing him for what he did is just too easy.” Jack repeated and turned to face Buchinsky. “So, why were you there at the restaurant that night?”

Panting, Buchinsky looked up at Jack. “I tell you, you'll let me go?”

Jack glanced over his shoulder at Harley who shrugged signaling that the situation was Jack's to control at the moment.

“All right,” Jack nodded agreement. “We'll let you go if you tell us.” Jack pulled his chair closer to Buchinsky and sat, crossing his legs and rested his elbow on his knees, his chin in the palm of his hand to give Buchinsky his undivided attention. Harley walked around to the back of the bar looking for something better than cheap whiskey to drink.

“I was hired by Mayor Hill. To get rid of Dent.” Buchinsky groaned, adjusting his shoulders as much as his bonds would allow.

Jack pursed his lips. “Really? Now that's interesting...you know why?”

“Because Dent was digging into things he shouldn't have been, that's all I know. Now let me go!”

“Of course we'll let you go, but first we have to make sure you won't tell anybody about us.” Jack smiled and stood up.

Harley giggled watching Jack with a look of complete love and devotion.

Jack stood up and walked over to where Harley was pouring herself a small glass of peppermint schnapps she had found behind the bar. Jack searched around as Harley sipped her drink until he found the ice box. He opened it up and dug around until he came up with an ice pick.

Jack grinned brightly. “Even this shitty place has an ice pick, isn't that just grand my sweets?”

Harley frowned with a questioning tilt of her head. “What are you going to do with an ice pick?”

Jack skipped around the bar with a broad grin on his lips. “Well, there was a time when I went through a phase where I was fascinated with mental illness. During that precocious time, I read about how they used to do lobotomies using a special tool called an orbitoclast. You see...” Here Jack had walked around in front of Buchinsky showing him the ancient looking ice pick he had found. “Now Harley is a psychiatrist, so she already knows all about lobotomies, but I'm sure you are curious aren't you Lester?” Lester shook his head vigorously back and forth, fear tightening his stomach muscles almost as much as the electricity had.

Jack smiled and continued. “You see, what you do is you go through the eye-socket, placing the pick just so...” Jack illustrated where the pick was placed by placing it against the inner corner of his own eye. “And then, you use a hammer to break through the thin layer of bone to enter the brain. You twirl the pick around to cut the fibers, maybe twirl a bit of brain matter along with it. Then, you repeat the same procedure through the other eye.”

Jack grinned like a kid who just aced his class presentation as he continued. “It's called a transorbital lobotomy...takes maybe ten minutes, in and out. Boom! You're a whole new person! Or...a non-person I suppose...it all depends on how good I am.” Jack beamed at his captive.

Harley giggled. “Oh, I remember reading about lobotomies. The transorbital lobotomy can have all sorts of results. It's one of the reasons they aren't really done any more...but I've always been curious about how they were done.” Harley smiled pleasantly.

Lester looked between the two of them. “No, no, no!! Please!”

Jack chuckled. “Oh, stop being such a big baby. Harley—want to help me lay our patient down? It comes with a money back guarantee...geez.” He grinned at Lester with a waggle of his eyebrows. “Though I suppose if I mess up, you'll be too much of a vegetable to ask for your money back. Win win.”

“Sure thing puddin.” Harley walked over and together, with Lester struggling. They laid him back on the floor, still tied securely to the chair. Lester jerked and fought, but he was weak from the electrocution and he was tied up too thoroughly. Jack grabbed Lester's legs, pulling him out a bit before he straddled Lester's chest.

“Harley my love, I need something to hammer with...something small.” Jack smiled down at Lester. “If you don't mind waiting a moment. Actually, how would you like to hear a joke while you wait?”

Jack grinned. “A man sat down at a bar and told the bartender, "I bet you three hundred dollars that I can piss into the cup all the way over there on the other side of the bar and not miss a single drop." The bartender said, "There is no way you can do that. Sure, I'll bet you three hundred dollars." The man then begins to undo his pants and begins pissing. He starts pissing all over the bar, spraying on the bottles and the bartender, not making a single drop in the cup. The bartender starts smiling and laughing and says,

"That's it, you owe me three hundred dollars." The man then gets up and walks over to the pool table and starts laughing and shaking hands with the men standing there. He walks back to bar, sits down and starts laughing at the bartender and hands him the money. The bartender asks, "Why are you laughing? You just lost the bet." The man said, "I'm laughing because I bet those guys over there one thousand dollars that I could piss all over you and your bar and you would still be laughing when I was done."

Jack started laughing. Harley popped from from behind the bar giggling. “Jack, that is terrible!”

Jack grinned. “I know!”

Lester started to yell and thrash. Jack, still laughing, jerked with his movements. Harley, giggling, dropped back down behind the bar again, still looking for something for Jack to use as a hammer for the ice pick, when she came back up again and tossed Jack a dish rag. “Here—for his mouth.”

“Thanks sugar plum.” Jack caught the rag out of the air and jammed it deep into Lester's mouth. The man choked on it, continuing to jerk and thrash, but at least now he was quieter about it Jack thought. Harley, who was looking under the bar, searching for anything that Jack could use as a hammer blinked in surprised when she saw the wooden mallet, a tiny thing, laying under the counter. She reached for it wondering what on earth it could be for when she remembered seeing something about kegs of beer being opened with mallets. That must be what the little wooden mallet was for, opening kegs. As she stood up with the mallet in hand, Harley grinned thinking to herself, the sledgehammer was too heavy, but this...a little bigger, that might work. She mulled this over as she walked over to Jack.

“Look what I found.” She smiled as she held up the mallet.

Jack grinned. “Perfect—just like you Harls.”

Harley blushed handing Jack the mallet. He reached out, but instead of grabbing for the mallet, he grabbed her wrist pulling her down and stealing a kiss. Harley started to yelp, but the noise was quickly sealed off by the press of his lips against hers. Harley reached out with her free hand and wrapped it around Jack's head, tugging him even closer to her as they kissed over Lester.

Jack reluctantly let Harley go with a sigh. “Okay Harls, you want to watch or do?”
Harley grabbed a chair and scooted it closer. “You do one side, I do the other?”

Jack smiled at her. “Perfect my sweets. So equitable! Okay...” Jack looked down at Lester. “Let me know if this hurts, will ya?”

Lester struggled, but he simply couldn't move except for his head. Harley came over after a couple of seconds, squatting down behind Lester and grabbed his head none-too-gently. The large man continued to struggle, but the tiny blonde woman was surprisingly strong. She grabbed his head, her fingers digging her nails in and held his head in place.

Jack grinned down at Lester with a whispered, “Yahtzee,” just before he brought the tiny hammer down.

An hour later, Harley was straightening up Lester's clothing as they stood outside the bar. She stood on her tip toes with a cloth and wiped a trail of blood that had started to flow down his cheek from one of his eyes. Harley grinned patting Lester's chest. “There ya go big guy.”

Lester stared down at her while Harley grinned. His face was slack, his eyes had a dull vacant look; there was clearly no one home inside. He just stared at her, his mouth hanging open.

Harley smiled again and whispered, “I hope some part of you is still in there, seeing all this, but now you're trapped in your own head. You can't speak, you can't feed yourself or go to the bathroom without help. This is what happens when you take something, something precious. You get to live the rest of your life like this...trapped in a hell you can't escape.” She grinned up at him patting his slack cheek. She then turned him around and gave him a little shove. Lester started walking, slowly, with sort of a Frankenstein's monster gait. He never turned around, simply kept walking. Harley grinned brightly watching him walk away before she turned on her heel and headed back into the bar. Inside, Jack was taking bottles of liquor and pouring them all over the bar, over the bodies while the jukebox—sounding like it was on it's last legs—began to play “Arson's Lullaby.” (While Harley had been busy sending Buchinsky off, Jack had gone around picking up anything that the two of them had dropped; knives, guns, and the sledgehammer, which now sat by the door.) When Jack saw Harley step inside, his face blossomed into a bright smile. “There she is: the most beautiful woman in Gotham. Get our little boy on his way?”

Harley giggled walking over and throwing herself into Jack's arms. “Yep, he is now wandering the streets as helpless as a baby.”

Jack wrapped an arm around her waist, yanking her up on her tiptoes just before he took a kiss from her. Harley wrapped her arms around his neck tightly. Jack spun her around while he kissed her, the two of them holding on to each other as if their lives depended on the contact. Jack finally sat her down on her feet, tossing the bottle of booze he had been holding with a bright grin and the shattering sound of glass breaking.

“I think this place is ready to burn. I found some cotton balls back in someone's office. Perfect fire starters; I swear someone was just begging for us to burn this place to the ground. They also had so much cheap rum, vodka, tequila and whiskey back there it's a wonder this place never burned down before us.”

Harley grinned. “Can I start it?”
Jack laughed, pulled out his lighter, and handed to her. “There you go pumpkin pie.” He giggled softly. “Burn the place down.”

Harley giggled too and walked over to where Jack had set up the cotton balls on the pool table. She could smell the heavy odor of alcohol that he had liberally sprinkled on the table and she could see that some of the balls were soaked in the fluid while others were dry. She flicked the lighter to life and carefully, she held it to the balls of cotton. The cotton swiftly caught on fire and almost instantly the fire spread out from the small pile of cotton balls which were quickly consumed. The fire rapidly followed the flow of alcohol and within a few heartbeats, the fire had already quickly spread.

Laughing, Jack grabbed Harley, hauling her off her feet and out of the bar—grabbing the sledgehammer with one hand—to the outside slamming the door shut behind them. Laughing they both ran for the motorcycle, with Jack getting on and swiftly shoving the key in and hitting the gas almost at the same time. Harley grabbed the sledgehammer, and with a little help, strapped it to the side of the bike. The engine purred to life as Harley climbed on behind Jack.

Inside the bar it took less that four minutes before the place was engulfed, flames burning through the ceiling to lick up through the cheap roof shingles.

Harley yelled, her hands out over her head crying out with joy. “WOOHOO!!! FASTER JACK!!”

Jack grinned broadly, hitting the gas and sped the bike through the streets of Gotham both of them laughing as he weaved dangerously through traffic.

At one point Jack reached back. “Come here Harley.”

Jack pulled her around to the front of the bike, managing to keep the bike from skidding as Harley pushed herself up and while holding onto his shoulder she spun herself around so that she was facing him while he drove. She wrapped her arms around his neck, covering his mouth with hers. Jack reached up with one hand, grabbing a fistful of her hair while he kissed her, keeping one eye on the road. Harley leaned back, grinning wickedly at him as she leaned on his shoulder with one hand and with the other she started to undo the front of her corset. Jack grinned biting his tongue between his teeth as he watched her.

She finished and tossed the corset away, the garment falling to the highway, instantly disappearing under the wheels of a passing car so that she was wearing only the leather jacket of Jack's. Jack growled. “Mmm...Harley...”

She giggled in return. “Jack...”

Jack revved the bike taking the turn to head back to Wayne Manor while Harley wrapped herself around him, her lips, teeth and tongue moved over his throat biting and sucking while she pressed herself against him, her skin feeling on fire with the need for Jack to touch her. Jack ran a hand up her back under the jacket, his gloved fingers caressing down her spine while Harley's hands moved through his hair. Harley grabbed his bottom lip with her teeth, wrapping her legs around his waist and grinding against him while Jack drove. She let go of his lip, her fingers grabbing fistfuls of his hair and forcing his head to the side so she could suck on his throat. Jack groaned, his eyes rolling at the feel of her teeth on his neck. She sucked hard, leaving a bruise in her wake, her tongue dragging down his neck. Her fingers worked at the collar of his shirt opening the top two buttons in order to allow her to lick his collar. Jack hit the gas, the bike picking up speed as Harley bit down on his collarbone with enough force that Jack hissed in joyous pain. She moved her hands down to unbutton his vest, then back to the buttons of his shirt, yanking it open, the wind whipping his shirt. and vest back exposing his chest. Harley purred running her gloved hands over the skin of his chest.

Jack groaned at her touch. “Harley, my girl...” He hissed when she bit down on his nipple. His hand moved up to her hair, holding a fistful of the thick blonde locks while she ran her tongue over his nipple before biting again, her sharp teeth holding his nipple while her tongue played over the sensitive surface. Jack jerked when she moved to his other nipple, taking a bite of him that had him pressing his teeth into his bottom lip, wincing with pleasure. She licked his chest one more time and grinned at him looking into his blue eyes just before she lowered herself backwards.

Harley laid back against the bike, her hair framing her face. Jack's lips twitched gazing at her, hot, sexy, lying back just asking him for it. Jack grinned running his free hand down her torso, then up again, running his gloved fingers over her breasts which caused her to arch her back dangerously. Harley groaned. She wanted him badly; her body aching for him. After what they had just done together, she wanted Jack so badly that the ache for him was painful.

Jack covered one of her breasts with his mouth, sucking hard, which caused Harley to groan reaching back to grab the handles of the motorcycle. Jack chuckled squeezing her breasts together and circling his tongue over her nipples.

“Harley,” he hissed against her skin, his teeth scraping against her nipples sending goosebumps of pleasure up her spine. He leaned back, grabbing one of her legs, placing it over his shoulder as he reached for the zipper on the back of her boot, tugging the zipper down and tossed her boot down beside the bike. He did the same with her other boot before he grabbed the sides of her leggings, pulling them down her hips, stripping her naked on the side of the road.

Harley groaned, giving Jack a seductive look while she grabbed the handles of the bike again laying back, the leather jacket falling open. Jack undid the front of his slacks grabbing one of her legs and settling it on his shoulder, wrapping her other leg around his hip before he thrust into her. Jack used his long legs to balance on the bike while thrusting into her hard and fast, pressing himself as deep as he could into her, needing to be buried inside her. His need for her was overpowering.

Jack hissed. “Damn it Harley, uuhhh...Harley!”

Harley arched, using the handles of the bike to keep her balance while Jack moved. The leather of his gloves skated across her skin, his fingers digging into her hip, holding her steady while he pounded into her with reckless abandon. Her eyes rolled closed, for a moment the feel of him made her want to cry, to scream, to lose her mind...perhaps she was losing her mind to him but she just didn't care. He made her feel powerful, beautiful; his thrusts filled her, sending ripples through her entire body which caused her to gasp into an almost instant climax. “Jack...uuhhmm...puddin!”

Harley rolled a little, her leg on his hip dropping to the ground. Jack grabbed the leg that was on his shoulder, wrapping his arm around her leg, holding it pressed against his chest and his other hand held her hip while he continued to thrust hard and fast, keeping her balanced on the bike. Harley reached up with her hand, grabbing fistfuls of his shirt and his vest, holding onto him. The entire bike bounced with their movements. Jack slid his hand from her hip, over her stomach, to rest between her legs, his thumb rolling over her clitoris in a gentle caress. Harley groaned, the warm tickle of her building orgasm rippled through her from her groin spreading out to suffuse through her entire body. Jack's eyes rolled closed as he thrust deeply, the warm wet feeling of her surrounding him made him feel more alive than anything, these moments of intense happiness and contentment were something he still wasn't use to having and now...she was fully part of him. She had killed with him without any reservation, no hesitation...it was one more of the many things he already loved about her. Jack opened his eyes to look down at her, the dim streetlights cast a soft glow over her skin, her eyes closed, her mouth open in complete abandon, fucking in the open where anyone could see them and she didn't care.

When he touched her, rubbing his gloved thumb over her clitoris again, stroking up and down alternating between a slow circle, and a rough stroke, Harley cried out, her knuckles on the bike handles turned white when she came with a loud moan.

“JACK!! Uuuhh...Jack.”

Jack's grin was wide, pumping her hard until he felt as if his very being would explode. He rolled his thumb over her, pounding a little faster until they came together, both of them cry out into the darkness as one. Jack yanked her back up to him, wrapping his arms around her, holding her tightly as he leaned her back down against the bike, both of them panting.

He chuckled, nuzzling her neck. “Let's go home pumpkin pie.”

Harley purred against him, her arms tight around her neck. “Okay puddin.”

Jack gathered her boots and leggings from the side of the bike handing them to her after he had zipped up, though he didn't allow her to dress, or to move behind him. He wanted her to stay right where she was, naked except for the leather jacket, facing him. Harley giggled wrapping her legs around his waist, the boots and leggings between them. She wrapped one arm around his neck, pressing her face to his neck while he drove them the rest of the way home.

Once they arrived at the manor, Jack parked the bike out front. Then, both of them giggling, Jack threw Harley over his shoulder and snuck in, trying to be quiet and get up the stairs without waking Alfred or Bruce (if he was home, Jack never knew most of the time). They made it up the stairs, both of them continuing to giggle loudly like a couple of kids out past curfew.

It was nearly seven in the morning as Jim Corrigan watched the Gotham City Fire department put out the last of the flames at The Alibi. He took a drag on his cigarette as the fire chief walked up to him. The man had said his name, but Corrigan hadn't really listened.

“So how many dead?” Corrigan asked.

“Hard to tell, but I think maybe a dozen or so. But we found some bullets. I don't think the fire killed all of them. Won't know for sure. The fire burned the bodies pretty badly, don't know if we'll ever be sure what happened.”

Corrigan threw his cigarette butt on the pavement and crushed it with his toe, ignoring the dirty look he was getting from fire chief Joe next to him.

“This place is a known bed of crooks and hired thugs. Probably just a drug deal or worse, gone wrong and everyone got caught up in it,” Corrigan muttered. The fire chief started to say something, but Corrigan sneered. “Look, you did your job; now let me do mine.”

The man glared at him then shrugged. “Fine, no skin off my nose.” He muttered quietly to himself, walking away from Corrigan. Corrigan sighed. It was too much paperwork to go chasing down blind alleys looking for who might have killed whom in that shit hole and he sure as hell didn’t care about the lives of a bunch of lowlife thugs. He would just pass the coroner a little dough to just write this off as death by fire. Some asshole probably set the place alight with a misthrown cigarette butt...who really cared. No one was going to mourn for these ass wipes. With that, Corrigan walked back to his car, slipping behind the wheel and headed back to the office to write up his report, thinking about what he wanted for lunch.

The next morning Jack and Harley were lying in bed naked together, only a hint of morning sunlight shining through a space in the curtain. They had a bag of gummi bears resting between them and were feeding each other the candy and giggling. Harley rolled over onto her stomach licking the back of one gummi and sticking it to the end of Jack's nose. He grinned crossing his eyes looking at the red bear on the end of his nose. He grinned at her then rolled over to grab her, causing Harley to squeal as he attacked her pressing his mouth to her stomach and blowing loudly making terrible noises. Harley kicked her feet, laughing hard enough that tears were running out of the corner of her eyes.

“JACK!! Stop it!!”

Jack blew another raspberry onto her stomach. He lifted his head smiling at her. “How do you feel this morning?”

Harley grinned down at him, popping a gummi bear into her mouth then feeding him one as she whispered. “Is it weird that after last night I feel...free?”

Jack laid his head on her stomach. “No. You are finally free of the shackles of society my sweet. You now see that the world and its laws and rules are all just fabrications...there really aren't any laws or rules except the ones we make for ourselves.” Jack kissed her stomach. “It's just you and me against the world, as corny as that sounds.”

Harley stroked her fingers through his hair. “It doesn't sound corny at all puddin.”

Jack smile squeezing her. “I think today we should go wedding dress shopping.”

Harley blinked stunned. “What?”

Jack kissed her stomach and sat up. “I mean, I know you're usually supposed to go with your girlfriends and your mother, but I thought since you didn't have any of those that you would like to go with me?” Jack smiled lifting his brow at her, looking innocent and so incredibly handsome with his hair flopping over his brow. Harley giggled blushing.

“Oh Jack, I would love to go with you!”

Jack's grin widened even more as he sat up and straddled her. “I think we need to set a date! Our actual wedding date! Like next week...no...next month? Gotta have time to plan a HUGE wedding! Make everyone who is anyone in Gotham come. It will be the wedding of the ages!! A spectacle!!"
Sitting on her naked, Jack threw his hands into the air.

Harley laughed wrapping her arms around him and dragging him back down to her. “Where would we have it?”

Jack laid on top of her, resting his elbows on either side of her head, grinning down at her. His blue eyes seemed to glow with merriment as he reached out with his teeth and playfully brushed them over her chin before he spoke.

“Here at the manor, we could have it in the ballroom or outside on the lawn. It will be gorgeous! I can just see it, you walking toward me...”

Jack smiled in contentment before he continued. “I mean, we have the money, might as well spend it and make a big splash in the society papers! They love that shit. Besides, I want everyone to see my girl. To see that the most wonderful girl in the world is going to be my wife!”

He wrinkled his nose playfully at her. Harley giggled stroking his hair back behind his ears before she pulled a gummi bear out of the bag next to her and fed it to him.

Bruce looked at himself in the mirror and straightened his tie. He ran his hand lightly over his hair and smiled before he left his bedroom. He came trotting down the stairs whistling. He was in a good mood, despite the fact that the Electrocutioner had escaped or that he still hadn't found Killer Croc. Today he was able to put his “Batman” worries aside.

Bruce couldn't remember the last time he had been in a good mood, not like this anyway. He was meeting Selina again today for lunch, then he was taking her with him to look at some paintings he was thinking of buying; particularly a Picasso. “Nude, Green Leaves and Bust.” Actually Bruce wasn't very much interested in the painting itself, but Selina seemed rather interested and while Batman would never be swayed by a pretty face and big green eyes, Bruce Wayne was, which was why they were heading to the auction house for a look at the pieces that would be up for auction this weekend. Bruce had planned on going to the auction anyway to purchase a couple of paintings to donate to the Gotham Art Museum in his mother's name, but with Selina's help he might make a larger donation of artwork. Selina knew her stuff when it came to art.

She had mentioned several other pieces that she thought Bruce might be interested in, Picasso's Moulin de la Galette...there was quite a list of expensive paintings at this particular auction, many of which the Gotham Art Museum would be pleased to have added to their collection by Mr. Bruce Wayne.

Bruce had just turned to head into the kitchen to grab a cup of coffee when he heard Jack and Harleen laughing...and was Alfred laughing too? Bruce lifted a brow. He could only recall a handful of times he had actually heard Alfred laugh fully. He smiled and made his way to the kitchen.

When Bruce stepped through the doorway and the first thing that he noticed was that Jack and Harleen had decided to dress in such a way that they matched. Jack was wearing a deep red suit, with a black dress shirt underneath that was opened just past his collar showing off a bit of chest and black on black wingtip oxfords. Jack was always noticeable, but today he had outdone himself.

Harley was dressed in a vintage style summer dress that was red and white polkadots with black trim. The dress was a backless halter style that hugged her figure in all the right places. She had her hair done to the side to show off her back and she wore a pair of vintage black heel peak toe heels. She was also quite noticeable.
They both looked good, Bruce had to admit, a young, wealthy couple, happy and healthy. He had to chuckle to himself on the last part. If he had known the best way to keep Jack from spiraling further down into possible...well anyway, if he had known the best medicine was to find him a girlfriend, Bruce would have done it long ago.

Jack was the first to see Bruce when he walked into the kitchen. He jumped up and surprised Bruce by throwing his arms around him. “Bruce, Bruce I'm getting married!!!” Jack was excited like a child at Christmas time.

Bruce chuckled hugging his brother back a little uncomfortably. Bruce and Jack were not huggers...at least not to each other, so this sudden display of affection was...odd. But

Bruce smiled and went along with it. “Yes, so I've heard.”

Jack grinned, letting Bruce go and taking his seat again where he grabbed up a slice of toast that had been cut in half, covered in butter and strawberry preserves, taking a huge bite as he continued grinning at his brother. Bruce smiled in return. (Jack could eat his weight in chocolate and never gain an ounce Bruce mused. He was always amazed that Jack stayed in peak physical shape despite his eating habits, not that toast and jam was bad, it just made Bruce aware that Jack could eat just about anything he wanted without consequence, a far cry from Bruce's daily workout regimen.)

“So what are the two of you doing today?” Bruce asked as he reached into the cabinet for a travel mug for his coffee. He smiled in appreciation; the coffee today was kopi luwak.

Harley grinned, her cheeks rosy. “Wedding dress shopping.”

Bruce stopped in mid-pour of his coffee. “Really? I mean...have you two set a date?”

Jack grinned. “I want it to be next week, but since I want a huge wedding that will leave Gothamites talking for decades—next month.”

Bruce tried not to show his shock. “Next month? I—I mean...isn't that a bit fast? If you want enough time to plan and...”

Jack gave his brother a quizzical look. “Why not? I mean, money can buy speed as well as everything we need for a wedding, AND it's not like Harley and I aren't already like man and wife...I mean we fu...”

Bruce held up a finger in warning. “Don't you dare finish that sentence.”

Jack grinned. “Anyway...I want her to be officially Mrs. Jack Wayne...or I could be Mr. Harley Quinn...Oooo I like the sound of that!” Jack reached across and took Harley's hand.

Harley giggled, folding her fingers with his, the two of them staring at each other.

Bruce frowned. “Wouldn't it be Mr. Dr. Harleen Quinzel?”

Jack made a face. “Blah, that sounds wretched. We should get your name legally changed.” Jack turned to Harley, who was smiling, though the look in her eyes was thoughtful at the suggestion.

Bruce sipped his coffee before putting a lid on it. “Well, we can discuss it later if you like Jack, but I need to get going.”

Jack grinned. “Oh, we must, because Harley and I want to be married here at the manor. Have fun Brucie.”
Bruce stopped in the doorway (the thought of the two of them getting married at the manor actually was a wonderful idea. Their mother would have been tickled. Bruce could almost hear the whisper of his mother’s voice, filled with happiness and excitement to have one of her boys getting married. Their father would be the same way, though he wouldn't show it as much).

Bruce turned to his brother in the doorway of the kitchen. “You too Jack, Harley...” He nodded his head to Alfred before he stepped out.

Harley was waiting for Jack in the doorway of the manor. She had a red scarf tied around her hair which she had grabbed under Jack's advisement. She had her sunglasses on, a little black clutch purse, and she was even wearing little black matching gloves. She looked as if she stepped right out of the 1950’s. As Jack always said, costumes, costumes, costumes!. She was beginning to wonder where he was when she heard the purr of a motor, and Jack came around the corner in a 1952 Buick Skylark convertible in shining black with white leather seats. Jack had another pair of round-lensed sunglasses on, but these had black lenses instead of his typical purple (Jack liked to make sure everything went together...themed costumes!) and a pair of black drivers gloves. He tilted his sunglasses down to look at her over the top of them and gave her a wolf whistle. Harley giggled.

“So what do you think?” Jack draped an arm across the seat and grinned at her.

“How many cars do you two own?” Harley asked while she stepped up to the car to run her black gloved hand over the hood. Jack's grin was wickedly naughty.

“Well, this one isn’t supposed to be driven, but how can we not?! It matches our clothing!” Jack patted the seat next to him. “Get in my little sex kitten, let's go find you a dress.”

They drove (within the speed limit this time) to one of the most expensive and well-known wedding boutiques in not just Gotham, but in the world. The establishment was one of those stores where people would book appointments years ahead of time, but Jack, on a whim had called and somehow had arranged them an appointment. Harley was always amazed at Jack's skills at talking people into things; the money helped, but Harley suspected that it had a lot more to do with Jack's charm than his money.

Jack parked the car in front of the store to a great deal of stares. The two of them looked like they were actually part of a movie set with their matching color scheme clothing and car. A few people even took pictures before they stepped into the Gotham Brides and Soiree shop.

Harley had to stop herself from gasping when they stepped inside. The place was huge and immediately reminded her of a museum. The ceiling was high and vaulted, with a large crystal chandelier hanging from the middle of the room and track lighting everywhere, all of it soft giving the place a light, clean feel. Everything was white, or champagne colored—the walls, the lights, the pillars, even the desks were some shade of white. The only color came from the light brown or white plush couches everywhere and the occasion colored wedding dress on display. As soon as Jack and Harley walked in, an older woman dressed in a black dress, with hair so black it was clearly dyed that color, came rushing up to them.

“Jack Wayne and Miss Harley Quinn I presume?” She had a slight British accent.
Jack’s smile was beautiful, Harley thought, as he took the lady’s hand and bowed over it, kissing her knuckles. “That's us and you must be Mrs. Archer, the lady to whom I spoke via the phone?”

Mrs. Archer smiled. “Yes, but please call me Martha.”

Jack grinned. “Well, we insist that you call us Jack and Harley.”

Mrs. Archer smiled again. “Well, you must be the bride?”

Mrs. Archer stepped up to Harley surprising her when the older woman embraced her. “You are a very lucky young lady; he is quite the catch! Not anyone could call me up and get a special appointment.”

Harley giggled. “I know. He is very special—you have no idea.” Harley looked at Jack when she said that, her eyes sparkling.

“Now...” Mrs. Archer stepped back. “You're here for a dress?”

Jack took Harley's hand. “Yes, we are planning on getting married next month.”

Mrs. Archer beamed. “Oh how lovely, well if the two of you will follow me I have set aside a private room for the both of you. Now being so close might limit our choices, but you have such a lovely figure my dear, I am sure we will have no problem finding you something.”

The room the lady led them to was cozy, more like a private boudoir. The room came with a sitting room for Jack and a large dressing room for Harley to try on dresses behind closed doors. The room also had three mirrors around a small pedestal that would allow Harley to step up and see the dress from all angles.

The young couple sat on the couch in the sitting room, facing the consultant who had taken the seat across from them.

She smiled. “May I offer you each a glass of champagne?”

Jack glanced at Harley who nodded.

“Yes thank you,” Jack said with pleasure. Mrs. Archer brought her hand up and waved with two fingers at someone neither Jack nor Harley had seen until she stepped out for a moment and nodded leaving the room quickly.

Mrs. Archer smiled at the two of them. “So tell me what you are looking for in a dress.”

Harley glanced at Jack blushing. “A ballgown, sleeveless with a sweetheart neckline.”

Jack beamed at her. “That was just what I had in mind. Though I want something one of a kind, something no other bride will be wearing. Only something extra special for my girl.”

The two of them giggled. They held hands, their fingers interlocked when they spoke. Though at the mention of unique, they could both almost see the dollar signs appear in Mrs. Archer's eyes.

Mrs. Archer smiled. “Perfect. All right, while my assistant Meg brings you your drinks I will go and pull a few dresses to get us started.”

The older woman stood up and left with a big smile on her face. A few moments later the aforementioned Meg showed up with two flutes of bubbling champagne on a serving tray.
She was a beautiful young woman with raven black hair done in a modern 40's style (naturally black, unlike Mrs. Archer), with deep blue eyes and an hourglass figure. The way she bent over to hand Jack his glass, clearly displaying her cleavage in her tight black dress, had Harley hating Meg instantly. There was just something about the way the woman was smiling at Jack with her thick red lips, perfect white teeth...Jack took the flute with a smile. “You know they say champagne is like duct tape—it fixes everything.”

Meg twittered, bringing her fingers up to her lips with a giggle. “Oh, that's so funny.”

Harley narrowed her eyes. Oh, she could see what this one was doing. Jack Wayne, wealthy younger brother to Bruce Wayne, handsome, elegant and rich... and just because he was here dress shopping with his fiancee clearly didn't mean a thing to this Meg who was standing next to Jack's chair. Harley squeezed her flute until the glass groaned in protest. She had to make a conscious effort to stop herself, taking a sip instead. Harley had felt jealousy before, but this, this was white hot rage that someone would dare to flirt with Jack, her Jack. No one—no one touched Jack. He was hers. (It didn't occur to Harley that her thoughts were following the same lines that Jack's had on the day they had received their tattoos...)

At least Jack seemed oblivious to Meg's obvious flirting when he leaned over and grinned at Harley. “A toast my sweets?”

Harley smiled in return and clinked her glass against his as Jack murmured, “To us against the world.”

Harley's smile widened. “To us against the world,” she repeated as she took a sip glancing up at Meg who frowned, giving Harley just the barest of a sour look. Harley thought to herself, Yeah, you better just give up sweetheart or I will make you sorry.

That was when Mrs. Archer came back, her arms loaded with dresses which she began hanging up on the hooks against the wall. “All right, I brought some of our one-of-a-kind dresses. These are the only ones, the designers had these on display at their runway shows only.”

The dresses were gorgeous, Harley thought. Jack and Harley stood up walking over to inspect them when Jack stopped, his eyes widening. “Harley, look at this one.”

Mrs. Archer smiled. “That is a Lazaro. This dress is an ivory and wisteria embroidered bridal ball gown, strapless sweetheart neckline, natural waist, box pleated skirt, chapel train.”

Jack grabbed the dress and shoved it at Harley. “This one, you have to try on this one.”

Mrs. Archer led Harley over to the dressing room. “Well, let's not keep your fiance waiting!”

Harley giggle and let herself be led into the dressing room. While Harley was busy changing, Meg walked over to Jack. Jack was sitting on the edge of his chair, leaning forward with his elbows on his knees and his fingers steepled between his legs. Meg leaned against the side of his chair, taking on a stance and expression that she knew were seductive.

“So ah, how long have you two been together?” she asked with a smile.

Jack looked over as if just noticing Meg. “Not long, but long enough.”

Meg nodded. “That's nice; don't feel like you're rushing into this then?”
Jack didn’t look at her as he whispered. “Not at all.”

Meg pressed her lips together. She had managed to seduce a handful of wealthy husbands-to-be. It was fun taking men right out from under their brides-to-be while the dumb bitches were trying on their wedding dress! But it was also a great way to make a few bucks on the side, whether it was lavish gifts, payoffs not to tell the fiancées or blackmail...men were so easy. But this one...this was Jack Wayne, she had heard about him and his brother. Lots of money, one of the wealthiest families in the world. Now, if she could just get him to just pay attention to her. She reached up, unbuttoning a few buttons when the dressing room door opened.

That was when Harley stepped out of the dressing room. Jack’s mouth fell open. He knew Harley was gorgeous, knew without a doubt that she was the most beautiful woman in the world. No one could tell him otherwise, but seeing her step out in that wedding dress, Jack was sure his heart stopped.

Harley smiled and performed a little spin, the dress flared out beautifully spinning with her. Meg stepped back giving Harley a hateful look.

Harley giggled. “It fits perfectly, do you believe it?”

Harley glanced over to Jack, her cheeks red and her eyes sparkling. Jack stared back at her. This is the man I am going to marry, Harley thought. The man who sees my darkness, who brought it out and loves me even more for it. Harley smiled at him, her heart pounding inside her chest.

Jack stood slowly before he walked over and took her hands. He held her arms out, looking at the dress before he started to walk her around then tugged her into his arms. He grinned, taking her right hand in his and danced her slowly around the room, his eyes only on her. Harley smiled up at him as Jack sang very softly.

“Something in the way she moves
Attracts me like no other lover
Something in the way she woos me
I don't want to leave her now
You know I believe and how...”

Mrs. Archer was grinning. She had seen a lot of people in love, but these two, they were something special. She had never seen anything like it before, but they were definitely different, cut from a different mould. Meg frowned, narrowing her eyes at the two of them, thinking to herself that this one wasn’t going to be easy, but she was up for the challenge because the payday would be even bigger. All men were weak and not any of them was ever really “in love.” Not even these two. She just had to find a way...

Jack spun Harley around then held her out at arms length. “I don't know about you sugar plum, but I think this is it.”

Harley smiled and looked down at herself. The dress really was perfect. The ivory looked good against her skin and the wisteria, the light purple reminded her of Jack. It wasn't a traditional dress and it wasn't perfectly white...it really was perfect.
“This is it,” she said in a whisper. “This is my wedding dress.”

Jack danced her around the room one more time singing softly.

“Somewhere in her smile she knows
That I don't need no other lover
Something in her style that shows me
I don't want to leave her now
You know I believe and how…”

Bruce was smiling just a little as he walked around the auction house with Selina on his arm. She was stunning today, wearing a black and white Japanese inspired sheer bottom white floral maxi dress with a pair of high heel black sandals that made her the same height as Bruce at the moment. Her green eyes flashed brightly from under the wide brimmed black straw hat she wore with cut-outs along the brim. Bruce noticed that she was receiving quite a few looks as they walked the auction house together. They were done looking at the paintings and Selina was trying to convince Bruce that he should have a party. “It would be fantastic! A huge party to show off the paintings. You could have a masquerade party.” Selina grinned. “Since you said you want to donate whatever you buy to the art museum, you could even ask for donations for the museum or for arts in schools...something like that. Rich people love that.”

Bruce burst out laughing. “You're right, rich people do love that. Actually I was going to donate the paintings I buy in the name of the Martha Wayne Foundation...a charity event might not be a bad idea. Allow a personal showing of the paintings, raise some money with a silent auction on some additional artwork…” His mind turned with the possibilities.

Selina grinned. She could see the thoughts swirling through Bruce Wayne's mind. She almost felt guilty for what she was planning because she actually liked Bruce Wayne, a lot. He wasn't at all what she was used to in rich, philanthropist playboys. Bruce Wayne actually cared. But, she had been hired to do a job and stealing from a private home was so much easier than an auction house. Now, if Bruce held the party that would make her job even easier still...but there was that nagging part of her that liked the guy...a lot.

On the way home, the wind in their hair, Harley asked. “What are you going to wear for our wedding?”

Jack grinned. “Something purple, a shade that matches your dress I think.”

Harley, who had a hand on top of her head against the wind blowing off her scarf grinned. “I like that Jack, a lot.”

When Jack and Harley arrived home they were both surprised to find Dr. Leland's car in the driveway. Jack looked sideways at Harley. “Did we have an appointment?”

Harley giggled. “I guess we did, I don't remember.” They both laughed climbing out of the car. Once inside they found Alfred was waiting for them. “There you are Master Jack, Miss Harleen. Dr. Leland has been waiting for twenty minutes I believe. I tried to reach you, but you were not answering your phone Master Jack.”

Jack laughed that off. “Sorry Alfred, but I have good news.” He glanced sideways at Harley who was grinning like a cat.

Harley grabbed Alfred in a hug. “I found my wedding dress!”

Alfred looked shocked for a moment as he stood within Harley's embrace, but then he hugged her back, tears in the older man's eyes. “You did Miss Harleen?”

“Yes!” Harley squealed. She let Alfred go with a broad smile. “Would you walk me down the aisle Alfred, when Jack and I get married? I mean...I don't have a father and you have been nothing but supportive and I would understand if you...”

Alfred pulled the younger woman close, hugging her again. “I would be honored Miss Harleen.”

Harley felt her eyes sting with unshed tears. “Thank you Alfred.”

Jack wrapped his arms around both of them hugging them together. “This is going to be epic Alfred! Just epic!”

Alfred smiled and stepped back after Jack released them and quickly wiped his eyes. “Well, you two should go into see Dr. Leland. She has been most patient.”

Jack took Harley's hand. “Come along cupcake!”

Dr. Leland was sitting on one of the small sofas in the same room they had met in before, dressed in navy blue slacks and a light white summer blouse and her white coat. She was working on something in her notebook, sipping her tea, when Jack and Harley entered. Jack grinned. “We are so sorry Dr. Leland, your visit completely slipped our minds!” She smiled. “It's quite all right. I had called asking if this would be all right, though we had agreed to wait a couple of weeks, but since I am going out of town I wanted to see you both before I left. I left a message.”

Jack flopped down tugging Harley with him onto his lap, both of them giggling. Dr. Leland smiled. “You two seem in good spirits.”

Jack grinned. “Yup. Just returned from dress shopping.”

“Dress shopping?” Leland set her cup of tea down. Harley nodded. “Yes, picked out my wedding dress today.” She held out her hand with the engagement ring. “I didn't have this last time you were here.”

Dr. Leland took Harley's hand and examined the ring. “That is very unusual and beautiful.”

Harley blushed. “Jack designed it for me.”

Leland smiled releasing her hand. “So, I can assume you are both feeling fine after the events at the restaurant?”

For a moment, Leland noticed the shadow that passed over both their features, but it was quickly gone. It was Harley who spoke. “It was...devastating, but Jack showed me how to deal with the pain. It was a revelation.”

Leland picked up her pen. “And what was that?”
Harley smiled closing her eyes, her smile was small but lovely. “He showed me how to focus, how to use my pain and how to let go.”

Leland frowned. “Let go?”

Jack giggled and sang, squeezing Harley tight against him while with the other hand he dramatically threw that hand out and sang, his voice surprising Dr. Leland with how pleasant it sounded.

“Let it go, let it go

Turn away and slam the door

I don't care

what they're going to say

Let the storm rage on.

The cold never bothered me anyway…”

Jack and Harley giggled together like school children. Leland frowned. “So, you are just letting your feelings about the miscarriage go?”

Harley grinned. “Not in the way you're thinking, but yes.”

Leland frowned writing this down. “And you Jack, how do you feel about it?”

Jack squeezed Harley. “That the world is full of injustice and that sometimes we have to right the wrongs ourselves.”

Leland wrote that down then looked up at the two of them. “What do you mean by that?”

“Well, look at Batman for example. Isn't that what he is doing? Righting wrongs...though I don't think he goes far enough. Sometimes he fails...more than sometimes.” Jack muttered the last bit under his breath.

“What was that?” Leland looked up from her notes.

Jack motioned. “Nothing doctor.”

“So you don't feel that the law rights wrongs?” Leland asked.

Jack tilted his head at her with a smile. “There is what is right and there is what is just. Often two completely different things and sometimes what is “law” isn't always right. Besides, none of it matters. All of it, laws, right, wrong, justice...it's all arbitrary. What's a law in one country is considered a sin in another. If something were to happen to that, if our laws were to vanish, people would turn on each other in a heartbeat. Where do you think justice, law, right and wrong would be then? No, it's all just imaginary.”

Leland nodded. “Why do you feel this way?”

Jack was gazing at Harley. He leaned towards her to kiss her softly across the lips. He was about to answer when Dr. Leland's phone started to vibrate from where she had placed it on the table. She picked it up and made a slight face. “I'm sorry, I need to get back to the asylum.”
She stood gathering her things, shoving them into her briefcase, clearly whatever reason she needed to return to the asylum for was important.

“That’s quite all right doctor,” Jack said as he stood up with Harley.

“Same time in say, three weeks?” Leland asked as she slipped her notebook into her case, locking it with a smart snap.

“Of course,” Jack agreed taking Harley’s hand. They walked Dr. Leland to the door and waved good bye.

Jack snorted on a laugh. “She would be so disappointed in us.”

Harley giggled. “Yes, yes she would.”

Since the evening was warm and Bruce hadn’t come home, after a light dinner with Alfred, Jack and Harley went skinny dipping in the pool. Jack was watching, treading water, while Harley dived under the water, her blonde hair floating around her like a mermaid’s as she swam up to grab his hips. She had just opened her mouth to lick him when his damn phone went off...again.

It had been vibrating on and off all night with text messages and nude photos from Meg from the bridal shop. He hadn’t mentioned them to Harley because they had had a pretty wonderful day and he didn’t want to upset her, but....

Harley's head popped above the water when she had felt he was distracted. She saw him toss his phone back onto the tiles.

“Again?” She glared at his phone. “What is going on?”

Jack pulled her close. “It's nothing sweets. Just...that assistant from the bridal shop.”

Harley wrapped her arms around his neck and her blue eyes flashed dangerously. “What? Meg?”

Jack nodded. “I'm not sure what's up with her, but she's been sending me text messages and...photos.”

Harley actually snarled. Jack blinked in surprise, but a grin spread across his face. She was angry! Harley shoved Jack in the chest, pushing him away from her and pulled herself out of the pool picking up his phone. Jack watched her, standing there naked, water running down her body. He watched her as she went through the texts, which had become more and more explicit, the last few accompanied by photos...extremely risque photos of Meg. Harley could see that Jack hadn’t responded to any of them, but that wasn’t the point. This bitch thought she could move in on her man, on what was hers. Harley’s eyes narrowed as she turned to glare down at Jack in the pool.

“We're going out.” She tossed the phone at him. Jack easily caught it before it fell into the pool.

“Tell her you'll meet her, pick someplace private, someplace no one is going to hear us.”

Then Harley stomped off. Jack grinned, watching her go before he whispered to himself.

“My girl is so damn sexy.”
Jack hummed softly as he drew the straight razor along his jaw, then wiped the razor on the towel that hung across the sink before he drew the blade again across the other side of his jaw. He was standing in front of the mirror wearing only his purple and black striped boxers while he shaved; his suit was in the bedroom lying across the bed. It was a Brook's Brothers suit of light tan, with a plaid white and dark brown vest, and white shirt with a brown tie. The suit was expensive and eccentric. Jack had a pair a brown and white oxfords sitting on the floor by the suit and a pair of matching dark brown leather gloves laying across the shirt and vest. While Jack shaved he watched Harley in the mirror where she stood behind him.

Harley had just finished with her hair. She had piled it on top of her head holding it in place with a couple of lethal looking hair sticks (though Jack had stressed that they needed to think of another way to kill Meg that didn't involve bashing or poking her eyes out with hair sticks. Something that would leave little or no evidence of their interference.) Jack smiled while he shaved and watched her, the look in her eyes, the way her tongue stuck out from between her teeth in concentration. He thought she looked adorable, especially since she had on an old pair of glass-lensed glasses and one of her own dresses (not one that Jack had bought her) as part of her disguise. The dress she was wearing was a spaghetti strap, A-line mini pink dress (sans bra) that showed an almost indecent about of her back, with a pair of pink heels (all of which she had bought ages ago). Jack preferred her in red and black, but she looked good in pink and white too, he thought.

Jack had finished her outfit by giving her a pair of white gloves (they had been his mother's but Jack never mentioned that to Harley.) All he said was that they should wear gloves, just like the night at the bar—no prints. Jack continued watching her behind him as she put the final touches on her hair and make-up, watching the way she drew the lipstick across her lips. The image of those lips on him, leaving red marks behind...He grinned.

“"You look so cute," Jack said as he finished with the razor.

Harley giggled and stuck her tongue out at him. “So you said we were going to drug her? With what?” Harley asked as she walked back into the main part of the room to grab her shoes. Jack turned the faucet on and cupped his hands with water to give his face a vigorous wash and dry before he walked back into the bedroom to dress.

“I'll show you before we leave and tell you just how to administer it.” Jack grinned at her as he picked his slacks up from the bed and stepped into them. Harley walked over to him with a slight slink in her step. Jack watched her, loving the way the short dress showed of her long shapely legs.

“Don't let her kiss you," Harley whispered as she wrapped her arms around his neck. He could see she was deadly serious. He also noticed how good she smelled, like vanilla cookies. It made him want to eat her up.

Jack smiled. “I won't.”
Harley brushed her nose against his with a whispered, “Good.”

She grinned, brushing her lips against his, her tongue snaking out to lick his lips slowly. Jack grinned, purring, his hands grabbing her hips and yanking her back against him. Harley grabbed the back of Jack's head, her fingers seizing his hair, yanking him into a hard kiss, punishing in its desperation. Jack dropped his hands from her hips, sliding them under the skirt of her dress and around to grab her rear which he squeezed hard. Harley growled in response before she pulled away.

“We better get going,” she whispered. Jack sighed, his eyes dropping closed for a moment as if he needed a second to get himself back under control. “Let's go get this taken care of sweets.”

Harley sighed, her anger quickly returning. “Where are we going again?”

She walked over to grab her purse while she spoke. Jack grabbed his shirt and started running his fingers up the buttons. “It's a nightclub called Luscious. Known for its sex, drugs, and drinking. More of a nightly rave where pretty much anything goes. The Gotham PD has busted the place I forget how many times, yet it keeps coming back in a different location.”

Harley smiled, giving Jack a significant look. “And how do you know about the place?”

Jack looked innocent. “Me? I know nothing about it.” He giggled when Harley glared at him. “I might have gone a time or two with Alex for a high stakes, illegal poker game...maybe.”

Harley giggled. “Next time there's a game bring me?”

Jack reached out and grabbed her hand to tug her close. “Of course. You're my girl—wherever I go, you go. Anyway, I thought it would be a good place to start, put her at ease thinking this is going to go as she plans. That is until we spike her drink.”

Harley giggled. “We better hurry if we're going to get there early enough to make our purchases.”

Jack stole another kiss. “Yup you're right my sweetling. First though, let me show you what I have in mind for her drink.”

After they were both dressed, Jack led Harley by the hand outside. He took her around to his special place. Harley said nothing, letting Jack lead her to the old, mostly hidden servant house. He unlocked it and stepped inside, still holding her hand. He picked up the flashlight he had left by the door and turned it on, spanning it over the walls. Harley looked around with her mouth open. The place was like a mad scientist's lair complete with a chemistry set. No, Harley corrected herself, calling it a set was a disservice. Jack had a full-fledged lab. The room contained several hospital beds, an old dentist's chair, and other equipment that she couldn't even begin to identify in the dim light.

“What is this place Jack?” Harley turned around slowly, her eyes wide, but what made Jack's heart do a little flip was the smile on her face. She understood, he knew she would understand! That she would be excited.

Jack motioned her over to where Harley could see what looked like a small refrigerator unit. Jack dropped to a crouch and opened it up. Inside she could see several vials of a glowing green liquid. Jack's smile was infectious as he pulled a vial out. “This is my own invention. I call it laughing gas...which is a really dull and stupid name, I know, but until I come up with something better, laughing gas it is. Anyway, storing it like this keeps it dormant and once it warms to room temperature it becomes active for twenty four hours before it begins to degrade.”

Jack grinned at her. “Well in high doses, it causes the patient to laugh themselves to death. Their faces become rigid with this wide grin. Their skin becomes pale, their lips blood red...”

Harley gasped then giggled. “That body! The one they found months ago...the laughing person...that was you?”

Jack stood up handing Harley the vials before he took a bow. “That was me sweets.”

Harley giggled. “Oh Jack.”

Jack grinned; Harley got him. “Anyway, in low doses, a drop or two, it makes the patient very susceptible to suggestion...my suggestion. They become euphoric, inhibitions decline...like most drugs. You put a couple of drops in Meg's drink she'll do anything we want.”

Harley held up one of the vials up examining it in the light of the flashlight. Her smile was wicked and it made Jack want to throw her down and take her right there on the floor of his private sanctuary...his girl...his perfect girl.

They took the Lexus Sedan since it would allow enough room for the three of them when they left the club and the car wasn't so unusual that it would be noticed. Jack drove with Harley sitting beside him. She kept sliding her hand down between his legs, squeezing and massaging as if to remind him what he had waiting when they were finished tonight.

Jack rolled his eyes with a groan. “Damn it Harley.”

She giggled. “Sorry, I'm excited.”

He giggled too and whispered, “My little murder kitten,” which made Harley beam with pleasure.

When they arrived at the Luscious, Jack parked along the street down from the club. The club was located in a less than stellar Gotham neighborhood, but Jack wasn't worried about the car. Luscious knew where its money came from and made sure that their patrons' vehicles were well watched. They had arrived half an hour before Jack was to meet Meg, more than enough time for the two of them to split up and make a few illegal purchases. Jack had told Harley illegal drugs were available in the nightclub as readily as purchasing alcohol.

Before they exited the car, Jack grabbed the back of Harley's neck, yanked her to him and kissed her hard. Harley moaned and leaned into the kiss, melting against him in the front seat of the car. Jack pulled away just enough to whisper. “It makes me feel good that you would kill for me Harley.”

Harley smiled and stroked his face gently. “Anything for you puddin.”

He grinned brushing his nose against hers. “All right, let's go.”

The inside of Luscious was huge, not at all what Harley was expecting, though she wasn't sure exactly what she was expecting. The lighting was all reds, purples and blues. The place was two stories, though the second floor was more of a balcony that wrapped around the entirety of the club. Littered throughout the place were other smaller dance floors, where poles had been placed. Women were dancing on the poles as well as a few men. There was a large packed dance space with a stage that took up the whole back end of the club. A live band was playing a cover of Broken Bells “Holding on For Life” while couples, or large groups of people danced with each other.

Around the edges of the dance floor were booths with purple leather seats (at least in the lighting they looked purple) with round tables and the walls around the booths were covered in a quilted looking material which only cut down on the music slightly. There were a few free standing tables and chairs, along with a large free standing bar off to the right with a wrap around counter and stools all around. The bar was manned by four bartenders, two women and two men. People on the dance floor had neon colors painted around their eyes and on other portions of their faces, blacklight makeup making them glow in the clubs lights.

Jack brushed his hand down Harley's arm, clearly reluctant to leave her, but they both knew for their plan to work Meg couldn't see them together. Harley glanced at Jack briefly watching him walk off to the bar. Her chest tightened and she sighed before taking a deep breath and headed out onto the dance floor. The music had just changed to a cover of Katy Perry's “Bon appetit.”

Harley moved with the music, her body weaving sensually among the other dancers. She closed her eyes letting herself go for a moment, letting the music dictate her movements. A couple of guys approached her and tried to dance with her, but Harley just ignored them and moved away while she kept an eye open for someone selling drugs.

A short, average built, plain looking guy with longish brown hair and simply dressed in jeans and a t-shirt, while sporting a fanny pack (which really made Harley lift an eyebrow as she saw him over her shoulder) came up behind Harley and ran his hands up her hips. “Hey gorgeous, I love that cute little librarian look you got going, wanna check my books out? I like the gloves too...kinky.”

Harley spun around about to slap the guy, but when she saw his face she knew she had found who she was looking for. The man had the look of someone who sold and used party drugs, (the look being that he didn't exactly blend in with the rest of the crowd. He looked “too normal”and the fanny pack was a dead giveaway.) Even in the dim club lighting she could see that his pupils were dilated and there was an alertness to him that was unnerving. Harley put her arms over her head, weaving her hips back and forth with a sensual smile on her lips. “I might if you have something to check them out with...”

The guy grinned. “Hey, I got anything you need sweetheart. I got ecstasy, cocaine, heroin...even some weed. You name it, old Walter's got it for you or can get it.”

Harley grinned wider, her eyes dancing with mischief over the top of her frames. “Well Walter, I want a little bit of everything.”

Jack was doing his best not to watch Harley, but it was next to impossible. The way she moved her hips back and forth, the arch of her back when she turned around, the dress exposing nearly all of her back right down to...Jack growled low in his throat. He could imagine himself running his fingers down her spine, following that seductive curve, biting, sucking on her skin, hearing those little moans she made. His eyes traveled down her torso where he imagined himself buried between her legs taking slow deep licks of her, tasting her on his tongue. He was so involved in imagining Harley that for a moment he was unaware of Meg until she reached out and squeezed his knee.

“Hey handsome.”

Jack didn't jump, but he turned so swiftly that Meg was the one to jump. She saw the look in his eyes —deadly—but just as quickly it was gone, replaced by the seductive blue.
“Well, hello there.” Jack gave her a grin that she thought could get him on the cover of GQ.

Meg was dressed in a tight, short black dress with a neckline that plunged nearly to her navel. She was attractive, Jack supposed, but she lacked the luster, the beauty that Harley possessed. He grinned to himself as he thought that Meg was like a rock next to a perfect rare red diamond like Harley; there simply was no comparison. But Jack put on his face and smiled, letting his eyes roam over Meg while keeping his real feelings in check. Though he didn't have to fake his laugh of delight when Meg smiled. “So, what did you have in mind tonight Mr. Wayne?”

“Oh, a little of this and a little of that.” Jack laughed again. “Can I buy you a drink?”

Meg smiled scooting her stool closer to Jack and laying her hand on his thigh. “I would like that very much.”

Jack motioned the bartender over. “Give me a whiskey straight and for the lady?”

Meg smiled. “A rum and coke.”

Just before Jack turned to face Meg, he caught a glimpse of Harley from the side. He saw a man reach out for her, grabbing her around the waist and yanking her up against him. Jack ground his teeth; the rage that shot through him was hot and burning, the need to lash out, to cut that man's throat and watch him bleed was strong enough that Jack almost stood up, but at the last moment caught himself. No, no, Harley could handle herself and they were here to deal with the Meg problem...though he might add that little man to the list...maybe have Harley bring him along. Two killings were as easy as one...

On the dance floor, Harley had managed to slip Walter the money he wanted for the drugs, which she surreptitiously concealed in her purse. Harley was becoming angry with Walter though, since the man would not keep his hands off of her no matter what she did. She had stopped herself from slapping him, no need to draw unwanted attention, but damn he was handsie! Harley supposed he thought she was playing hard to get or something. She did her best to ignore him. She bent down and rolled her body up with the music, the skirt of her dress flipped up which gave a nice view of her rear and the tight bikini panties she had on underneath, blood red just like Jack liked.

The music changed again, this time to something slower by Lana Del Rey “Body Electric.” Harley started to walk off the dance floor, catching a glimpse of Jack at the bar with Meg which sent a spike of rage through her. Harley pressed her lips together in a thin white line, but Walter came up behind her, wrapped his arms around her waist and pulled her up against him, grinding along her back side. The look on Harley's face might have been comical except for the murder in her eyes. She moved with him for a few seconds letting the man grind himself against her while her eyes were glued to Jack. She could see Meg squeezing Jack's thigh, her hand creeping up his leg. Harley was trembling with rage, but she swallowed it down turning around to face Walter. She smiled, dropped her arms on Walter's shoulders while she weaved her body to the music, moved with a seductive curve of her hips which allowed her skirt to flip. She caught her bottom lip between her teeth as she slinked down, her hands moving down Walter's chest, partly to play her part, but also because she was livid with rage that Meg was touching Jack, that Jack was letting her touch him!! The more “sane” part of her thinking told her he was playing a part too, he had to play a part if she was going to get to kill Meg later, but that didn't stop the insane anger at the Jack from flaring up in her chest.

At the bar, Jack pretended to laugh at something Meg had said while doing his best acting at not shuddering at Meg's touch. He wasn't even really sure what she had said because he had taken the opportunity to turn and see Harley shimmy down Walters body, an action that sent fury burning through him. He snarled, physically rising out of his seat, but Meg grabbed his arm. “Oh hey, you wanna dance?”

Jack turned to look at her like he had forgotten all about her (which he had for a split second) before he sat down. “No, no, sorry. Thought I saw someone... anyway, you were saying?” He pulled his pack of cigarettes out of a pocket, took one out and put it between his lips before pulling out his lighter and lighting it. (The Luscious allowed smoking as well as all the other things that went on inside). Meg reached over and snagged Jack's lighter. He lifted a brow at her in surprise. She tried grinning seductively at Jack. “Light me one?” She handed him back the lighter. Jack barely controlled his sneer, pulling his pack of cigarettes out and removing one for her. Meg took it, licking the end of the cigarette suggestively. For a moment Jack thought he might actually get sick, right there or he would burst out laughing. Either option was possible, it was hard to decide on which reaction or both, but instead he pressed his lips together to prevent either reaction and lit Meg's cigarette for her while she fluttered her eyes at him. He supposed that to a regular guy she was attractive, but he found her repulsive and needy.

Mentally Jack fumed, his mind distracted by the image of Harley on another man. If Harley didn't get over here soon to spike this bitch's drink, he was going to go over there and kill that man dancing with her with his bare hands, put his cigarette out in his eyes, or thrust his thumbs through the man's jugular and tear out his throat—fuck the consequences! That made Jack smile, the image of himself choking the life out of the man touching Harley, watching as the plebeian choked out his last. Jack chuckled which made Meg smile flirtatiously again.

Jack grinned wide, displaying his perfect, white teeth. “Oh, you have no idea.”

Harley pushed Walter away from her with a coy smile as soon as the song changed. “I need a drink.”

The band changed to a song by Kongos “I'm Only Joking,” the beat of the music vibrating through the club. Harley didn't wait to see what Walter did, but she quickly made her way over to the bar, pushing people out of her way. She was careful, going around Meg by putting other people between her and the other woman until she was at the bar, taking a seat right behind Meg. The woman was focused completely on Jack, unaware of Harley sitting right behind her. Harley kept herself from sneering, just barely as she glanced at Meg's drink at her elbow.

Harley motioned for the bartender with a gloved finger. “Yes, can I have a Mai Tai?” Harley asked with a sideways glance at Meg who was completely oblivious, her attention fully on Jack and on touching him. Harley had to bite her tongue to stop herself from lashing out when she saw Meg lean in and rub her hand along Jack's chest making some coy comment about how he felt under his clothing. The bartender gave Harley a grin and a nod as he came over to take her drink order.

“A Mai Tai, anything else?” The bartender, a handsome guy Harley supposed, but she didn't really care. That was when Walter's voice piped in. “And give me a Mind Eraser! The lady's drink is on me.”

“Sure thing Walts!” The bartender grinned and set about making their drinks. Harley had to suppress a groan. God, this man was like a fucking cockroach! She thought to herself. She frowned wondering how she was going to spike Meg's drink without this dope seeing her when an idea came to her. She smiled and opened her purse, fingerling the syringe inside with the vials of Jack's concoction glowing softly. She glanced at Walter as the bartender set their drinks down in front of them, a wicked little grin on her ruby red lips as she carefully stuck the syringe into the vial in her purse.

“Hey, Walter, you wanna try a new drug?” Harley asked, gazing at Walter from under her lashes. Her smile promised Walter things she would never deliver on. Walter had picked up his drink taking a sip when he glanced sideways at Harley and lifted an eyebrow at her. “Oh, whatcha got? I mean I’ve tried nearly everything and I provide nearly everything.”

Harley grinned. “Oh, this will knock your socks off! It's new, not even on the market.” She pulled the syringe out of her purse and showed it to him. Walter’s eyes widened at the softly glowing liquid. “What is that?”

“It's... it's called...the giggles.” Harley smiled. She and Jack needed to work on a name, but it wasn’t like Walter was going to get to tell anyone else about it anyway. Walter’s eyes followed the sensual movement of Harley’s hand as she weaved the drug in front of him.

“What's it do?” he asked.

Harley giggled. “It drops all your inhibitions, makes you giggle, everything is funny. You have no fear, nothing can stop you. It's the perfect high. And the best part is that it's untraceable, and lasts for hours.”

Walter frowned and shrugged trying not to look overly excited by something new. Besides, he thought, maybe this would be something he could add to his inventory. “Sure let's give it a go.”

Harley grinned and squeezed half the green liquid into Walters drink. He watched as the liquid swirled through his drink like a snake and seemed to fade like gas, disappearing into the liquid.

He smiled. “Giggles, eh?”

Harley grinned. “Go ahead, give it a try.”

Walter downed his drink in one swallow, which only gave Harley a heartbeat's amount of time to put the rest of the drug into Meg's drink that was at her elbow while both the bartender and Walter's attention was elsewhere. Jack had said it would take less than half the drug to caused the effects they wanted. Harley hoped he was correct. Jack saw Harley squirt the green glowing liquid into Meg’s drink, watching it dissolve in a matter of seconds. He glanced over Meg's shoulder to see Harley leaning forward across the bar and the two of them shared a silent exchange. Harley smiled then gestured ever so slightly over her shoulder. Jack shifted his position and caught sight of the man she had been with on the dance floor. As if they could read each others minds, Jack knew instantly what Harley had done...His grin widened as he thought to himself, “God, I love that woman.”

After finishing her drink (and Walter finishing his as well) Harley was back on the dance floor, moving with Walter to the sounds of Lady Gaga's “John Wayne.” She was smiling, her arms over her head weaving her hips and keeping an eye on Walter. She was watching for when he started to react to the drug. She was about ready to vomit or claw his eyes out every time the guy grabbed at her. Luckily, he would get distracted selling drugs here and there to patrons in the club, but once he was done he was grabbing for her again!

The little weasel, she thought.

Harley smiled when she finally noticed that Walter's movements were slowing down and he was giggling a LOT. Harley danced to the music, rolling her back, sliding her hands down her legs and arching her backside while licking her lips, her eyes wandering over to Jack and Meg where they still sat at the bar. Her flirty gazes and movements were for Jack who was burning with jealousy and desire watching Harley from the corner of his eyes. Harley couldn't help her giggle. Making Jack jealous was fun. She could see the burning rage in Jack's blue eyes every time Walter grabbed for her, grind against her or ran his hands down her legs. Jack's rage was mixed with pure lust for her in his eyes. It thrilled Harley to her core. She was doing her best to not completely turn around and dance for Jack, but it was difficult. She turned around once, arching her back and sliding her hands down her legs, bending over for Jack to see her red panties. Jack's eyes narrowed as he watched her. Jack had grabbed Meg's hand at one point, dragging her giggling out to the dance floor. He was a ball of rage and lust. He wanted Harley right now, he wanted to tie Harley down and do filthy things to her with his mouth and fingers, the image of her on her knees with his dick in her mouth...or his dick inside her, his hands around her throat while she grinned up at him, her blonde hair a tangled mess around her face while she dragged her nails painfully down his stomach. God, he was seething with need for Harley but at the same time he wanted to break every bone in that man who was all over her! He could imagine dragging a knife over that man's throat, watching the flesh separate and the blood running down, making him watch as he bled to death while Jack took Harley...fucking her up against the wall. Jack growled. Meg giggled thinking the lustful growl was for her.

Jack shoved Meg around a little roughly, but she didn't seem to care. Meg started to dance, doing her best to seduce Jack, (though with Jack's drug in her system, her attempts were clumsy, which made Harley snicker.)

Jack's dancing was graceful, but not as sensual as usual, far more sedate, Harley noticed. Meg kept throwing herself at him, or rubbing herself against him trying to get Jack to grind against her, but he was barely willing to touch her. (Now if this had been Harley, Jack would have been all over the dance floor. He loved to dance, but he just couldn't bring himself to do it here with Meg. He wanted Harley in his arms.) Luckily with the way the woman was acting, it was clear his drug in her system was working.

Harley giggled when Jack caught her eye and he crossed his eyes with a grin at Harley just as Meg wrapped herself around him and started a slow grind against Jack's pelvis, leaning in to try to kiss him. Harley's eyes narrowed dangerously when she saw Meg was rubbing her body against Jack, grinding and pressing her breasts against Jack's chest while whispering something against his ear, right before Meg ran her tongue along his jaw. Harley felt that white hot spike of hate shoot through her. The image of cutting Meg's tongue out flashed before Harley's mind making her smile.

Jack maneuvered Meg closer to Harley, whose attention had been diverted back to Walter who kept grabbing her rear and yanking her hips against his pelvis no matter how many times she pushed him away. Jack caught Harley's eye and motioned with his eyes.

It was time to go.

* Jack arrived at the car with a giggling Meg first. He opened the back door. “Okay, in you go!” He practically shoved her into the back of the car.

Meg giggled. “Where are we going Jack? Someplace more private? Oooh, is this real leather?” She rubbed her hands along the seat with a snicker.

Jack chuckled. “Oh yes, much more private.”

Jack slid into the driver's seat which had Meg pouting. “Don't you have a driver or something? I mean, you're rich right? We could have some fun in this back seat.” She licked her lips at him. Jack barely suppressed rolling his eyes.

Jack turned around to grin at her. “I am very rich my little peanut, but you'll see why I don't have a driver soon enough. Oh, here comes the rest of our party now!”

Harley was almost carrying Walter as he leaned heavily on her, his arm around her waist. “This is the best night of my life!!” Walter giggled. “I ain't never got the hot girl to go home with me before! I mean, usually I would have gotten slapped by now! Or they only wanna fuck for free drugs! But you are different!” With that Walter slapped her ass hard enough that Harley yelped, jumping a little. She ground her teeth opening the back door and shoved Walter in.

“Oh yeah, I'm different all right,” Harley muttered. “Go on in there Walter and we can get to the real party.” Harley opened the back door, shoving him inside and slammed the door before getting into the front seat with Jack.

Meg looked confused though not “alert.” “Who are these people baby?” Meg smiled with a confused, dazed look.

Jack grinned. “It ain't a party without friends, Meg. I mean, you're up for anything right? Isn't that what you said? Anything I want?”

Meg seemed to have problems focusing her thoughts until she giggled with a nod. “Yup, anything!”

Walter giggled. “Hey another hot chick! This is my lucky night! We gonna have an orgy or something?”

Harley shared a giggle with Jack. The two of them looked at each other with their shared secret before they both turned to look in the back seat and at the same time said,

“Or something!”

Jack reached over to run his hand up Harley's leg giving her a squeeze, then he hit the gas yanking the car out into traffic causing his passengers in the back to go flying to the right side of the car. They heard Meg and Walter slam against the door. Harley and Jack giggled in expectation of the fun to come.

* *

Before they headed off to their ultimate destination, Jack drove them to a twenty-four hour liquor store located a couple of miles from the club. Jack parked the car, leaning over to whisper to Harley.

“Watch this, they should be quite susceptible to suggestion right now.”

Jack handed Meg some cash while Walter just laid in the backseat occasionally giggling to himself.

“Now Meg dear, since we're going to have a private party, I need you go pick up some drinks. Can you do that for me Meg?”

Meg giggled. “Sure thing handsome.” She stumbled a little getting out of the vehicle, but she managed to navigate herself into the store. Through the store's glass front, Jack and Harley could see her picking up bottles of booze and stumbling to the counter. The young man at the register, maybe twenty-four, was watching her, his eyes firmly on Meg's hips and breasts. He rang her out without asking for an ID. A minute later she was back with a paper sack full of drinks. She dropped into the backseat and handed the bag to Jack.
“I did it!” She giggled, clearly pleased with her accomplishment.

Jack and Harley opened the bag to peer inside. Jack chuckled. Inside were two bottles of spiced rum, a bottle of Absolut Vodka, a bottle of Seagrams whiskey and lastly two bottles of Beefeater London dry gin. Jack grinned at Harley then turned around. “Ya did good Meg, very good.”

Meg squealed with happiness and Harley grinned. “Now it's a party!”

The satellite radio in the car was playing “Carousel” by Melanie Martinez. Harley giggled singing along, leaning against Jack's shoulder.

“And it’s all fun and games,
'Til somebody falls in love,
But you've already bought a ticket,
And there’s no turning back now....”

Jack grinned and sang with Harley, his hand on her thigh, slipping up higher until his gloved fingers were teasing at the edge of her panties.

“This horse is too slow,
We’re always this close,
Almost, almost, we’re a freak show
Right, right when I’m near,
It's like you disappeared,
Where’d you go? My dear, you're a freak show!...”

Meg was listening to them thinking that something was wrong, as if she should be feeling something...fear? But she didn't feel anything except humor and she wanted to laugh at anything and everything. “Oh Jack, you have a great singing voice. Would you sing for me?”

Jack glanced in the rearview mirror. “Sure thing Meg.”

Meg grinned and leaned back, her dress riding up. The man next to her had lit a joint and didn't seem to care at all what was going on. Maybe he was right. She reached over and snagged the joint making Walter frown. “Hey man, you could ask.”

Meg took a hit and passed it back with a smile and a nod. Walter nodded. “I only sell the best.”

Meg giggled. “Yeah you do.”

Walter squeezed her leg. Meg thought for a moment she should protest, but it seemed too much of an effort as she leaned against Walter, the two of them giggling.

Jack drove into a seedy part of east end Gotham. The place he took them to wasn't the nicest, but the motel was used to having fancy cars staying for a couple of hours at night. The motel had a huge blue neon sign that read. “Gotham's Moonlight Rendezvous” across the top. The sign underneath read the rates starting at $10 per hour. Jack turned around and smiled at Walter. “Walter old boy, I'm going to give you money to rent us a room for the next twenty-four hours. You head on in there, but only tell them it's for you and your girl.”

Walter looked dazed. His giggling had increased during the drive, as had Meg's fits of giggling and laughter.

“Okay!” Walter giggled again, sliding out of the car once Jack had handed him the money. While Walter was inside Harley frowned in thought. “How did you know about this place?”

Jack laughed and squeezed her knee reassuringly. “Alex brought me here once for my birthday. Bought me a girl and everything. It's one of the reasons he thought I was gay or not interested in sex because I wasn't too pleased with his gift.” That was the moment that Walter came out again, weaving a little bit with his giggling, key in hand. As soon as he was back in the car Jack took the key and drove them around to the back of the motel. The four of them piled out and Jack, with Meg hanging on him like a rag doll, and Harley holding up Walter, headed into room 13B.

Jack unlocked the door, standing aside after opening it, grinning at Harley. Meg and Walter headed in first, but when Jack and Harley stepped into the room, the two of them burst out laughing. The room looked like it had been decorated with the cheap “brothel” aesthetic firmly in mind, as if the proprietor had seen one too many vintage erotica pictures and tried to decorate the room accordingly. The walls were deep red and black velvet wallpaper with a large red bulb light in the dead center of the ceiling's light fixture which made everything look as if it had been covered in a light film of blood (at least to Jack and Harley). The bed's comforter was a truly horrible shade of puce and the furniture was all dark cheap wood with the same shade of puce in the cushions of the chairs.

Jack giggled. “Well, here we are kiddies! Who wants to have a party?!”

Harley turned and locked the door balancing the paper bag of booze on her hip, while Jack gave Meg and Walter a little push toward the bed.

Jack grinned motioning at Harley. “Harley my sweet!”

Harley, with a wide smile, turned and handed Jack the paper sack of liquor she had carried in, which Jack placed on a table beside the bed, proceeding to take out the bottles of alcohol. After setting them down, he went over to the bathroom that contained a large sink, a mirror and a plastic ice bucket with four little plastic cups wrapped in plastic. Jack unwrapped two of the little plastic cups carrying them back over to the table of liquor setting them down.

Harley walked over to the small table that had a couple of chairs, hooking her foot around a leg and tugging the chair out from the table. She set her purse down as she slid into the seat, then pulled out another vial of Jack's drug, setting it on the table before she pulled out the syringe she had used earlier at the club.

Meg frowned in confusion, watching Jack, then Harley. Jack and the woman who she thought she recognized, but couldn't place seemed to command her attention though they had said or done nothing unusual. When Meg could grab and hold onto a thought, Meg realized she felt odd; her face was beginning to hurt from smiling, but no sooner would her brain lock onto that thought than it would slip away, fluttering from her grasp. Meg had wandered over to the bed to sit on the edge of the flat mattress. When Harley placed the vial of glowing liquid on the table, Meg seemed mesmerized by the glowing green fluid. Meg's pupils were fully dilated and her smile seemed...stiff, as if the muscles in her face were fighting not to smile.

Harley took out the syringe and broke the seal on the vial by stabbing the needle into the top of the vial and slowly filling the syringe with the glowing green liquid.

“It's something that is going to make tonight even more fun,” Harley said with a smile and a quick glance toward Jack.

Walter started giggling. “Oh, more of that! Cool!! It's called the 'giggles,’” he said, clearly proud that he remembered what Harley had called it.

Harley smiled at Walter. “Come here,” she said seductively motioning with her finger. Jack pulled out a cigarette, lighting it from where he leaned against the wall watching his girl work her magic.

Walter came right over, pulling up the other chair to sit in front of Harley like an eager child about to receive a gift.

Harley motioned at Walter. “Give me your arm.” Walter did so willingly holding his arm out to her with an excited grin. “Oooh, you're going to inject it this time!! Cool!”

“Give me your belt there Walter.” Harley smiled setting the syringe down on the table.

Walter lifted up his fanny pack and quickly slipped his belt off which Harley took and used to wrap around his arm. For a moment she was reminded of when she was a doctor. The times she helped administer sedatives to patients, as she looked for and found a vein. With a professional air, Harley tapped Walters arm until she found a good vein and picked up the syringe. Easily, and with professional skill, she slid the needle into the vein—careful not to jiggle the needle—and injected the fluid. Walter jerked, hissing in pain when Jack's invention hit his blood stream, but in the next breath he was giggling.

“Aw man, this stuff is great!”

Jack watched Harley work, blowing out a ring of smoke, grinning. She looked damn sexy in that too-short dress, her legs crossed, dosing up that ass Walter with Jack's own concoction. It was enough to make a man laugh. Jack grinned with a soft chuckle before he pushed himself off the wall, turning back to the bottles of booze, holding the cigarette between his teeth while, with gloved hands, he opened the spiced rum and poured one of the cups full of the golden liquid.

Meg looked at Jack as he handed her one of the cups of rum. There was a question in her eyes that hadn't quite reached her lips.

“Oh, I promise I'll go next Meg. I mean, unless everything you told me you would be willing to do was a lie Meg. I really hate liars.”

Meg stared up at Jack confused as she took the plastic cup of rum, but, once Walter had vacated the seat, she stood up and walked over to Harley, downing the rum as she sat down. Harley grinned and refilled the syringe. She took Walter's belt and wrapped it around Meg's upper arm, then felt around until she found a vein. Harley wasn't gentle this time; she plunged the syringe into Meg's arm hard, causing the other woman to yelp and try to yank away. But Jack had moved to stand behind Meg. He dropped his hands onto her shoulders and leaned down, the smoke from his cigarette creating an eerie effect around Meg's head.

“Now now Meg dear, you wanna be my friend don't you?” Jack pulled the cigarette out, his lips against Meg's ear were like a gentle caress. “Don't be such a baby. You said you would do anything for me didn't you?” He ran his other hand down her arm in a caress. Meg stared into his haunting blue eyes and nodded. “Yeah, yeah I will, anything you want.”

Jack's smile was cold, wicked. “Good.”

Harley was smirking at Jack, a laugh in her eyes, but she said nothing.

Meg gasped in pain again as the liquid burned through her veins, but in the next instant she was giggling. “I did it. Anything you want, anything at all.” Meg smiled up at him.

Jack laughed, and the breath from his laugh tickled her ear. “Now don't you feel better?” He patted Meg's shoulders straightening up and taking a long drag on his cigarette.

Meg giggled. “I do.”

Harley took all the drugs she had purchased from Walter out of her purse, laying them across the table like candy. She glanced over at Walter who was giggling almost uncontrollably while staring at a painting of what looked like a gas station or something on the wall. Harley smiled and cooed.

“Oh Walter, come here.” She crooked a finger at him while Meg stood up and wobbled a bit, giggling, back toward the bed.

Walter turned with a hiccupsing giggle, stepped over to Harley. “This giggles stuff is great!”

Harley wrinkled her nose playfully. Jack turned around from where he had been leading Meg back to the bed and poured her another drink. “Giggles?” He gave Harley a questioning look.

Harley laughed. “We really need to work on the name.”

Jack chuckled. “I like giggles.”

Harley winked at Jack, bringing her attention back to Walter. “Walter, can I have your fanny pack?”

“Oh sure thing!” Walter took the pack off handing it to Harley. Harley took it, opened the zipper, and her eyes widened in surprise. The inside of the pack was stuffed. Not only did Walter have more drugs, but he had syringes, plastic cards for dividing the cocaine, plastic spoons for the heroin and money...lots of money.

Harley took all the money out that she had paid for drugs, dropping it back into her purse though she left the rest of it in the pack. She set the rest of Walter's drugs out on the table then turned to Jack who was playing with the radio next to the bed. He was flipping through channels while Meg giggled and rolled on the bed like a little girl, from one end of the flat mattress to the other.

Harley leaned on the back of her chair watching Jack. “What are you doing?”

“Every party needs music!” Jack announced before he settled on a station.

“Ah, here we go!” Jack grinned and turned. Jack started to dance across the room, his cigarette dangling from his lips, one arm out, the hand of his other arm on his chest as the jazzy voices of the Andrew Sisters started to play, “Near You.” Jack grinned at Harley waltzing over to her and taking her hand.

“Dance with me sweetling.”

Harley giggled as Jack took her hand, lifted her to her feet and spun her around, waltzing with her and singing softly. Walter clapped his hands watching them while he giggled.

“There's just one place for me!

Near you!

It's like heaven to be

Near you!

*

Times when we're apart

I can't face my heart!

Say you'll never stray

More than just two lips away!

If my hours could be spent

Near you

I'd be more than content

Near you!

There is just one place for me!

I'm happy when I'm near you!

It's wonderful as heaven!

A special kind of heaven

But only when I'm near you!

Jack danced with Harley, laughing as he sang around the cigarette. “Rest of my days...all of those happy, happy days...Near you!”

He swung her out and back into his arms at the same time reaching over to put his cigarette out in the tiny ash tray by the bed, just before he dipped her at the end of the song. Holding her there, Jack gave her a deep, mouth-watering kiss. Harley groaned; it felt like it had been hours since they had kissed, days, ages—too long. Walter immediately started laughing and clapping his hands even louder while Meg simply kept giggling.

The song on the radio changed to Louis Armstrong. Jack lifted Harley back to her feet, brushing her chin with his leather clad fingers before he let her go. Holding a hand to his chest and his other hand out, Jack danced over to the radio and turned the music down so that “When Your Smiling” played softly in the background. Jack turned. “Now, Meg, Walter, you two are going to take all the drugs on that table.” He pointed at the table where Harley had set everything out.

Walter giggled. “Really? Cool.” He walked over and flopped down into the chair that Harley had vacated just moments ago to dance with Jack. He grabbed up the bundles of cocaine and started to empty them onto the table.

Meg was smiling as she reclined on the bed, but she looked confused. “Why?”

Harley sat down on the bed next to Meg. Her glasses had slid to the end of her nose as she studied Meg over the top of her frames. “Well Meg, you're going to take all those drugs with Walter because you have a borderline personality disorder and bipolar tendencies. Which is why you go after men who are already taken. You have deep-seated daddy issues, I think. You have real or imagined abandonment issues, which is sad really. I mean, did daddy leave you and your mommy behind for another woman? Or did daddy used to sneak into your room at night?” Harley smiled, walking her fingers across her palm, but there was a bit of a sadistic edge to her lips when she smiled at Meg. “You have chronic feelings of emptiness which you try to fill with men, money, alcohol and drugs. I mean, walking over there and taking all those drugs and drinking all this liquor is really just what you've been trying to do all along. But now you feel out of control. Your life is spiraling away from you Meg. It's time to end it.”

Meg stared at Harley. Jack's drug in Meg's veins made everything this woman said make sense. She was empty and she had always been empty. Her dad had abused her and no one would listen, she had felt unwanted and she had wanted to destroy all those fake happy couples. If she couldn't be happy then why should they?

Walter was already snorting the cocaine, having sloppily chopped it up into lines, leaning down to snort the white power, then breaking out into giggles which simply blew some of powder across the table. Walter licked his fingers and wiped the table of the drug before sticking his fingers in his mouth with a child-like grin. Jack chuckled walking over to sit by Walter, pouring him some of the vodka and sat the bottle and the plastic cup down in front of Walter.

“Have a drink my friend. Vodka is awesome water.”

Walter, his face covered in cocaine, grabbed the whole bottle of vodka and started to chug it down with a grin. Jack snickered watching the guy with a shake of his head. Harley stood and made her way back over to the drugs. She stopped at Jack's chair, leaning over to kiss him. Jack growled reaching up, making a fist in her hair, pressing her mouth down on his, the kiss hot and passionate. He let her go slowly, reluctantly with a whispered, “I love you Harls.”

Harley smiled and whispered, rubbing her nose against his. “I love you puddin.”

Jack whispered back, “I wanna get you home and fuck you.” Harley giggled reaching into his jacket and taking his lighter just before she reached over to grab a couple of the little balloons of heroin, one of the spoons, and a syringe, along with a handful of ecstasy. She winked at Jack, then walked over to sit by Meg again. Jack watched the swing of her hips like a hungry man.
“Now Meg, you want to fill that void don't you?” Harley asked as she opened some of the heroin and set the little rock on the spoon before lighting the flame from the lighter under it.

Meg seemed confused as she watched the flame from the lighter dancing under the spoon. She had leaned over to grab a bottle of alcohol while Harley had walked over to the men and was nursing the bottle of spiced rum against her chest.

“I—I guess...yeah. I do...” she whispered.

“Daddy didn't want you. Mommy didn't want you...nobody wants you Meg. Why are you still here?” Harley's voice was soft, gentle, almost hypnotic as she spoke. Jack's drug working through Meg's system made Meg giggle and nod. “Yeah...yeah, you're right.”

“You want to feel good again Meg?” Harley asked filling the syringe.

“I...I do...” Meg frowned though she still giggled in little fits. “I want to feel good again.”

Harley reached out and took Meg's arm, her voice soothing. “Let me help you.”

Harley plunged the heroin into Meg's veins.

Across the room Jack was laughing and watching while Walter grabbed a handful of ecstasy, shoving them all in his mouth and downed them the vodka.

“Walter my friend, you have no limits do you?” Jack laughed crossing his legs and clasping his knee. Walter giggled, his chin and cheeks covered in cocaine. “Oh hell no, man! I like to party!!”

Jack's smile was slow, seductive. “Why don't you go lay on the bed there with Meg. I think she is ready for you now.”

Walter grinned stupidly, standing up and waddling over to the bed. Harley had just put a handful of ecstasy in Meg's hand. “Go ahead, take the pills. You will feel good again.”

Harley's tone was gentle, almost tender.

Meg did as she was asked, taking the handful of pills with a swallow of rum, just as another song came on the radio, Doris Day singing “Again.”

“Ah, my Harley girl, come dance with me.” Jack stood up and walked across the room to take her hand and twirl her into his arms. Harley laughed. “Again?”

Jack twirled her around the room. “What can I say? I love to dance with you.”

While the music played Jack slow danced with Harley moving in a graceful circle while Doris Day's voice drifted through the room.

“Again, this couldn't happen again

This is that once in a lifetime

This is the thrill divine

What's more, this never happened before
Though I have prayed for a lifetime
That such as you would suddenly be mine
Mine to hold as I’m holding you now and yet never so near Mine to have when the now and the here disappear
What matters…

Jack stared into Harley's eyes, smiling softly his arm around her waist, his hand holding hers against his chest while they moved together. Jack grinned. “Only you forevermore, my sweet Harley Quinn.”

Harley giggled, smiling into his eyes. “Only you my puddin, my Jack…”

Jack spun her around and whispered. “You were always meant for me. There was never anyone else.”

Jack grinned. “My girl.”

“When this doesn't happen again
We'll have this moment forever
But never, never again (never, never) We'll have this moment for ever But never, never again (never, never)”

On the bed Walter's teeth clenched down tight, biting off the tip of his tongue. Blood spilled down his chin as his jaw locked in place. In the next few moment, Walter's body started to seize. Jack and Harley spun slowly around in their dance. Jack swayed with Harley, brushing his lips against hers, but not quite kissing her. Their eyes were only for each other.

The song ended, flowing into Bing Crosby singing “Temptation” catching the last of Walter's seizures that were violent, thrashing on the bed like a fish out of water before he stopped altogether, absolutely still.

Meg tried to push herself up to a sitting position, but she was having trouble, as if her body would not obey her commands. Harley stepped away from Jack and sat on the side of the bed as Meg started to struggle to speak. Meg couldn't get her mouth to work; it was if everything in her body was out of her control. She was slobbering on herself as she stared up at Harley.

Harley smiled. “A year ago, this is where I would have called 911, but you made a big mistake going after my puddin Meg, a big mistake. And now you are going to learn a lesson, a permanent and short learned lesson which doesn’t give you a lot of time to enjoy your new knowledge, but there it is Meg. Don’t mess with anything that is mine.”
Harley smiled watching Meg struggle. The other woman weakly grabbed at Harley's arm. “But, but…”

Meg started gasping for breath, her breathing slowing, the gasps becoming less and less audible until Meg convulsed, then went still her eyes staring at nothing. Harley grinned then sighed and stood up.

“Beating her to death would have been far more satisfying,” Harley muttered standing up and walking over to where the remains of the syringe and vial with Jack's concoction lay. She flopped, pouting, into the chair, shoving the vials and syringe with Jack's drug into her purse.

Jack laughed pulling her to her feet and into his arms. “I'm sorry, pooh bear. But this way it just looks like a junkie and her supplier overdosed. A tragic death that happens all the time in Gotham.”

Harley stuck her bottom lip out which had Jack laughing. “Come on sweetie. I know something that will make you laugh again.”

* *

Jack drove to a convenience store where he bought all the toilet paper they had in the store, duct tape, a couple of bars of soap, all the boxes of plastic forks they had AND plastic wrap, along with all the cartons of eggs. Harley frowned helping Jack load everything into the back of the car.

“What are we doing?” she asked again after getting into the passenger seat.

“While you were in the bathroom at the convenience store, I called Troy and Tiffany's house. They aren't home.” Jack giggled waggling his eyebrows.

Harley pressed her lips together trying not to smile. “Are we going to tepee their house?”

Jack giggled. “Yes, yes we are!”

* *

Troy and Tiffany Randell had a predictably expensive home located right outside the Gotham City limits inside a gated community. With a couple of hundred dollars, the guard at the gate (who Jack and Harley learned hated the Randell's) let them through with a grin.

“I don't know what happened. I didn't see anything.”

Jack laughed handing the man another hundred. “Good man.”

The house was only a few years old, with grey brick and white siding, two towers, twelve bedrooms and eight bathrooms with a huge front lawn that had that almost plastic look of green grass too green to be natural and a long grey brick driveway. The house didn't look like a place anyone would actually live in.

Jack drove up the driveway and stopped, parking behind the Randell's Lykan Hypersport. Jack leaned close to Harley as they both looked out the windows at the place.

“Do they have security cameras?” Harley asked.

Jack grinned. “Yup.”

“So, they're going to know it was us?” Harley asked.

“Yup.” Jack giggled.
Harley laughed. “Well, what are we waiting for?” Harley kicked her heels off and jumped out of the car barefoot, racing to the back. Jack yelled. “CHEATER!!”

He leapt out and raced around to the back door on his side. Harley had already pulled the back door on her side open and was pulling out the boxes of plastic forks. “So what do I do with these?”

Jack giggled. “Break as many of them as you can and spread them everywhere! Stick them in the grass, anywhere they'll go!”

Harley giggled and set to work, spreading the plastic knives around the huge lawn breaking a few every so often. She dumped them on the lawn, in the bushes, racing back to grab another box as she continued to litter the forks everywhere in the flower beds, throwing them in the tree branches.

Jack grabbed the soap and rubbed the soap over all the windows he could reach on the house and on the car. He rubbed soap on the front door and the door knob before he headed back and grabbed the plastic wrap, then walked over to the car. He grinned, opening one box of the plastic wrap and started to wrap it around the car. Harley, finished with her forks came over to help Jack. They were both laughing as they raced each other around the expensive car, wrapping it in layers and layers of cheap plastic wrap.

Giggling, Jack pointed at their car. “Grab the duct tape will you sweets?”

Harley skipped over to the back seat of their car, pulling out the couple of large rolls of duct tape Jack had purchased and together they finished up with the car by duct taping the plastic to it.

Jack grinned standing back with his hands on his hips. “That is good work, my sweetie pie. Good work indeed.”

Harley giggled, grabbing the corners of her short skirt and curtsying. “Thank you Mr. Wayne. I do try to help.”

Jack grinned and growled at her. “I was having some pretty damn dirty thoughts about you tonight...”

Harley giggled. “Oh, you were, were you?”

Jack waggled his eyebrows at her. “Oh I was...but before we go...two more things to do, the toilet paper!!”

Harley squealed running back to the car, the two of them pulling the toilet paper from the back seat and the trunk. It required a few minutes of yanking the plastic wrapping on the paper off, but soon Jack and Harley were doing their best to be quiet and failing as they ran around the house and yard of the Randell’s throwing toilet paper everywhere laughing as they chased each other across the lawn, throwing toilet paper at each other too!

After about half an hour, the two of them had successfully covered the whole front the house, all the bushes, flower beds, the car (an additional layer of toilet paper just for the fun of it) and the trees in toilet paper. Harley stood with her hands on her hips, barefoot in the Randell's front yard when they were done, admiring their work.

“It's kind of beautiful,” Harley said softly as a breeze blew through the toilet paper. Jack wrapped his arm around her waist. “I suppose it is.” Jack smiled, gazing at Harley's profile. He whispered softly, “I was proud of you tonight.”

Harley turned to face him, a blush on her cheeks. “Really?”
Jack chuckled. “The way you pried Meg's brain like that...pulling her apart. That was a thing of beauty my little murder kitten.”

Harley squeaked with pleasure wrapping her arms around Jack's neck. “You think so puddin?”

Jack nodded brushing his nose against hers. “Oh yeah, it was gorgeous.” He held her tightly brushing his lips against hers. “It was hot.”

Harley giggled, flicking her tongue over his lips.

Jack purred holding her tighter. “Wanna go back to the club? I wanna dance with you some more before I fuck you silly.”

Harley nipped at his lips. “Mm...yes puddin, sounds fun.” Jack, his eyes roaming down to her breasts pressed against his chest, his hands on her waist rolled down to grab her rear. “Mm...Harley...”

She giggled, she could feel how turned on he was, but she pulled away from him and took one of his hands tugging him toward the car. “Not here on the Randell's lawn...eeeww....”

Jack laughed. “All right let's go.”

They walked to the car and started to get when Jack saw the cartons of eggs on the back seat. “Harley! We can't leave yet! The eggs!”

Harley, who had pulled her door opened stopped. “The eggs!”

Giggling, they both grabbed a couple of cartons of eggs. Jack grinned at his girl. “You take one side of the house and I'll take the other?”

Harley wrinkled her nose at him, her eyes dancing. “Sounds like a plan puddin!”

It only took the two of them maybe ten minutes to go through six cartons of eggs, covering the front of the Randell home (and the plastic wrapped, duck taped, toilet papered car) in the splattered remains of eggs. Jack laughed. “It's a masterpiece!”

Harley laughed. “Come on puddin, let's go!”

* *

Jack, all smiles now, escorted Harley back into the Luscious. The music pounded, the lights flashed, people gyrated, and Jack, with his arm around Harley's waist, took her to the bar. “So sexy, what can I get you?”

Harley laughed. “Mm...how about some sex on the beach?”

Jack laughed. “Yes please.”

He motioned at the bartender and ordered her drink along with his, a White Russian. They sat at the bar sipping their drinks when the music changed to Lana Del Rey's, “Gods and Monsters.”

Harley smiled standing up. Jack reached out for her frowning. “Harley?”

Harley took his hand. “Follow me.”

She led him over to a pole that wasn't being used at the moment. Harley grinned, pushing Jack into a chair positioned in front of the pole before she walked over to the pole. She started to move with the music, holding onto the pole, arching her back, smiling at him while she spread her legs wide and slowly swayed her hips. Jack flopped back into the chair with his drink, watching while Harley walked slowly around the pole, her eyes on Jack as the lights, purple, blue and red danced across her. Jack smiled when Harley stopped, wrapping a arm around the pole and leaning backward reaching up to pull the sticks from her hair and toss them away, allowing her blonde hair to fall down in thick gold waves. Harley licked her upper lip, pulling the glasses down to the tip of her nose, smiling seductively at Jack, spreading her legs and shimmying down to a wide legged crouch, holding onto the pole with one hand while she ran a hand along her thigh before she stood up again and tossed the glasses away.

Harley twisted around, leaning backwards to grab the pole, spreading her legs and while still leaning backwards as far as she could, her torso undulated as she smiled at Jack. Jack licked his lips watching her. Harley smiled, using her teeth to pull the gloves off her hands while she stared at him, lifting one of her legs and swinging it around, then she pulled herself up gracefully, twisting around. She grabbed the pole again and lifted herself up the pole, spinning with her legs out, once around the pole before she brought her legs in, wrapping them around the pole to do a full spin. She raise her legs up so that she was upside down and spread her legs, spinning around, the skirt of her dress falling back to show her red panties.

Jack's breath quickened watching her (he was unaware that her dance had caught the attention of a few other men and a couple of women who were watching with fascination and a little bit of lust). Harley demonstrated her gymnastic skills as she wrapped one leg around the pole, pointing her other leg out as she spun to the music. She switched legs, doing another spin before she brought her free leg back, catching her foot with her hand and spun around the pole in a sensual arched twist.

Jack caught his bottom lip in his teeth painfully, the lust in his eyes burned brightly while he watched her. Harley let go of her foot and spun herself down, dropping her feet to the floor. She arched her back, one hand touching the floor as she held onto the pole with her other hand, whipping her hair back out of her eyes, her gaze only on Jack. She straightened up, walked around the pole once, weaving her hips before she caught the pole with both hands, pulling herself up sideways, then further up the pole, hooking one foot around the pole, her other leg straight out, spinning slowly. She dropped herself to the floor again, then lifted herself upside down, parting her legs and spinning before wrapping one leg around the pole again. She couldn't quite see Jack's face with her hair in her eyes. She hooked a leg around the pole, bringing her other leg around, but not hooking it around the pole and spun again, upside down, lowering herself slowly down the pole until her hands could touch the floor. Harley left one leg hooked to the pole and arched her back, her other leg arching backwards, before she brought the leg back to the pole, finishing the slide down to the floor. She rolled onto her stomach and grinned at Jack.

The few other people who had been watching clapped and hooted. Jack walked over to Harley taking her hand, lifting her up to her feet and into his arms. He grabbed a fistful of her hair, kissing her hard. Harley wrapped her arms around his neck returning his kiss savagely. Jack lifted her up, wrapping his arms under her rear and carried her to one of the booths at the back of the club, a little off to the left of the pole Harley had just used. There were a few other people in the booth since it was a large one that formed a half square against the wall. The seating was large enough for maybe ten to fifteen people, but when Jack walked in carrying Harley a few people quickly vacated the booth.

Jack turned around sitting down, his hands running up her dress, squeezing her backside, pulling her panties down just a little to run his fingers along the cleft of her rear, tickling her softly. Harley grinned arching at his touch. She hissed. “My Jack...”

Jack shifted his position to settle her more securely on his lap, squeezing her rear and pressing her up against him. He grinned against her lips when Harley cupped the sides of Jack's neck, running her thumbs along his cheeks, stroking slowly, nipping at his lips and tongue. She ran her fingers around to the back of Jack's head, grinding her pelvis against him.

Jack groaned softly, his clothing felt tight, burning against his skin. He needed to feel her, touch her. Jack pulled away from her lips, breathless.

“I hated seeing you dance with him. I hated him touching you,” Jack growled, his mouth brushing against hers when he spoke, his fingers digging in painfully when his brought his hands up to grab her waist. “I hated it with every fiber of my being Harley. I hated you for letting him touch you. No one touches you Harley, no one but me,” Jack hissed. There was a combination of anger, lust and hurt in his eyes when he stared up at her. He reached up and grabbed her throat in a sudden painful grip. Harley stared back, her lighter blue eyes reflected much the same feelings as Jack's. She grinned when he grabbed her neck, loving the feel of his fingers pressing into her skin.

Harley hissed. “I hated her touching you. I wanted to break each of her fingers. I wanted to hurt you for letting her Jack! I wanted to hurt you badly!” Harley's fingers in his hair scraped against his scalp, the nails hurting slightly as she held his thick hair in handfuls, forcing Jack's head back. Jack grinned at her. She ran her tongue up his throat, feeling the slightly rough texture of his shaven skin against her sensitive tongue. Her teeth scraped the skin of his chin, then she bit him, not painfully, but just enough to warn Jack that she could hurt him. Grinding on his crotch became harder almost as if she were fighting with him more than caressing him as Jack's fingers skimmed down to her body from her throat until he came to her hips. He grabbed her hips, pressing her forcefully down on him, his grip both pleasurable and painful.

He suddenly let go. Jack reached up to grab a fistful of her hair and yank her head back. Jack forced her face to his, staring hard into her eyes. “I'll kill whoever touches you.” With his other hand he dragged his fingers firmly down her throat again, and over her breasts, pinching her nipples through the thin fabric of her dress, rolling the sensitive bud between thumb and forefinger in a caress that was a mix of pleasure and pain.

Harley's eyes fluttered closed. “Puddin, only you, only ever you…”

Jack let go long enough to yank the straps of her dress down, exposing her breasts and pulling her closer, his mouth covering the nipple of one breast while his hand in her hair forced her head back. The two of them forgot anyone else around them; their need for each other was all consuming. Jack switched breasts, sucking hard on her other nipple, the tip of his tongue twirling the hard bud causing Harley to arch and groan. She started to undulate her hips, brushing back and forth across the hardness of him between her legs. (The music playing in the background had changed to “Dangerous Woman” by Ariana Grande.) Harley moved with the rhythm of the song, her fingers pulling at his tie, popping the buttons of his expensive shirt to get to the skin underneath. Jack released her hair, letting her sit up a little straighter which allowed her to unbutton the vest, yanking it open, digging her nails down his chest through the fabric of his shirt. Jack hissed feeling the sharp press of her nails through the fabric.

“Harley…” He groaned her name looking up at her, his blue eyes burning with lust and maniacal love. Harley smiled down at him running the tip of her tongue from his lips, over his nose, rolling her pelvis against him. Jack tugged her dress a little lower until Harley pulled her arms through the thin straps. (They were both completely unaware of the man who had started taking pictures. He worked for the club, taking stills of the dancers for the website, but when he saw Jack Wayne going at it with some woman, the man turned his attention to them. The flash of his camera mixed with the other lights. They were completely involved in each other, ignoring the rest of the world around them.) Jack reached down between her legs, his fingers sliding under the thin fabric of her panties, caressing the curling hair before delving deeper.

Harley moaned arching backwards, her hands on his shoulders. Jack held her, one hand on her back the fingers spread while his other hand rubbed her slowly. The warm leather of his glove stroked slowly up, then down, his fingers moving just slightly. Harley gasped breathlessly. “Oh Jack...uhh...yes...”

Jack grinned watching her, the lights dancing around her skin as he continued to stroke her, his fingertips rolling in gentle circles against her clitoris until she was panting, her hips moving against the strokes of his fingers. Jack caught his bottom lip in his teeth watching her. She was completely his...

“Harley...come for me Harley. Tell me you're mine...”

Harley dug her fingers into his shoulders painfully, while rolling her hips against his fingers. “Uhhuhhuhhh...Jack...oh Jack...ahhahh...yes, yes...I'm yours, always yours puddin, always...UUuuhhh forever...JACK!”

Jack yanked her against him with his free hand when she came, his fingers still pressed against her, feeling her vibrate against him, shuddering. (The background music changed to Meg Myer's “Desire.”) He slowly extracted his fingers, releasing his hold on her long enough to slip himself free from his confining slacks. With a shift of position, he pulled her panties aside and plunge into her warmth and wetness. Jack pressed his teeth into his bottom lip, his eyes rolling with pleasure at the feel of her around him.

(The man taking pictures moved around to get a few more good shots.)

Jack pressed her down hard. “Harley, my girl, say it.”

Jack shuddered tugging her down to kiss her, his hands traveling up her back, a deep kiss, his tongue playing along hers, his teeth scraping along her tongue. “Touch yourself Harley, I wanna watch you play with yourself.”

Harley giggled brushing her nose against his whispering. “You are so naughty Jack.”

“Only for you Harley, only for you.” Jack grinned at her in a way that Harley knew was special, a smile all for her. She thrust her hips forward on him and caused Jack to roll his eyes partly closed with the pleasure of feeling her. Harley caught her lip with her teeth. He watched her fingers stroke down to where her panties were pulled aside. The music thumped in time to their thrusting, the light twisting and weaving of their hips as the two of them fucked for anyone to see.

Harley leaned back, one hand on Jack's shoulder, holding on tightly, grasping hard, feeling the muscles underneath his clothing, while her free hand glided down her stomach, under her skirt and between her legs. Jack lifted her skirt up, holding the cloth against her stomach, his other hand cradling her rear. He watched her fingers stroke down to where her panties were pulled aside. The dim lights danced over her, making her movements seem dream-like, the feel of her, the squeezing and thrusting of her body had Jack jerking upward, his thrusts struggling to meet hers.

Jack watched, his breath shallow, while Harley rubbed her fingers over herself, the lights dancing over her. He loved the way she groaned with her bottom lip between her teeth. She was all his, his, he thought, feeling her inner muscles contract, squeezing him while she touched herself.

Jack hissed. “God Harley yes...”

Harley’s eyes rolled closed, her body arched as her fingers brushed over her clitoris. Jack gazed at her, his little murder kitten he had called her earlier tonight, it made him grin. His baby, his girl, his pumpkin pie.

Jack groaned, his voice breathless, thrusting up with each breath. “Mmm, yes Harley yes...”

Harley cried out. “Aah!! Puddin! Jack!! Oh, Jack I love you!”

Jack grabbed her, wrapping his arms around her, pressing her body up against his. (The music had changed to “Crazy in Love” by Sofia Karlberg). Harley barely had time to pull her hand away from herself, wrapping her arms around Jack's neck before he had yanked her close.

He twisted around, laying her on the seat of the booth. When her back hit the cushion of the booth's seat one of her legs dropped to the floor, the other went around Jack's waist. He grabbed her leg that was pressed against the back of the booth, forcing it back against her body while he reached up to smooth her hair back from her face. He groaned fisting his hands in her hair. He thrust hard and deep staring into her eyes.

“I love you Harley,” Jack whispered just before he surprised her by biting down on her shoulder. The bite was hard, painful, but it felt so good at the same time. Harley gasped arching her back, throwing her head back and held onto Jack groaning. “Yes, Jack yes!”

Her eyes rolled closed when another orgasm rippled through her, a building burn that crashed and spread throughout her body in a warm wave of pleasure. Jack pressed in hard, wrapping his arms around to cradle her head. His hips rolled in hard, short thrusts then he slammed hard into her when he came with a heated burst of passion that felt almost as if it was ripped from his body.

They stayed laying on the bench staring at one another. Jack chuckled brushing the tip of his nose against hers, his tongue caressing her lips while his thumbs gently stroked her temples. “I never thought I would find someone who would see the world the way I do Harls. I thought I would be alone, forever. But now...” Jack reached for her hand that had her engagement ring on it and kissed the knuckle of the finger right in front of the ring and whispered. “Vena amoris.”

Harley smiled. “What does that mean?”

Jack grinned. “It means, vein of love. That is why the ring goes on this finger, or so the stories say. The Romans thought a vein from here ran straight to the heart. You, Harley, are my heart.”

Harley tenderly ran her fingers along his cheeks before tracing the shape of his lips. “I love you puddin. Forever. You'll never get rid of me.” She giggled. Jack grinned capturing her mouth in a passionate kiss while the music played around them. (“Mama Forgive Me” pumped through the club).

The man sneaking pictures grinned and took off. He would have the pictures ready in a matter of hours and then he would be making a pretty decent wad of cash by the time the morning sun was high in the sky.
Dream a Little Dream

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes.

Bruce was humming to himself as he showered, scrubbing the shampoo through his hair, his thoughts on his date last night with Selina Kyle. He had had a lovely evening with Selina, one of those dates that was so good it almost didn't seem real. He had rented out the entire Gotham Art Museum for the evening, paying to have the restaurant that was attached to the museum cater dinner for them. He had even arranged for a string quartet. They had eaten lobster with Beluga caviar, white truffles along with white burgundy. Then they had danced. It had been one of the most wonderful evenings that Bruce could remember. Selina was an elegant dancer; Bruce smiled at the memory. Selina was everything he could possibly want, beautiful, intelligent, funny...Bruce sighed as he stepped out of the shower and toweled off.

He walked over to his closet and lifted out his clothing for the day and began dressing. He had just slipped into a pair of expensive black slacks and he had just pushed his arms into his dress shirt when he sat down at his desk thinking to check his email while buttoning his shirt. He had just brought up his email when he saw an message from Gail Simone.

Gail worked for the local gossip paper, The Gotham Star. She, unlike many of her fellow reporters for the Star, tried to make sure any stories she published at least held a grain of truth. Most of what the Star published were indecent pictures of local and not so local celebrities, kept tabs on the local Gotham elite, looked for scandalous stories about local politicians, and pretty much told tales about the love lives of the rich and famous. Bruce himself had ended up in the paper on more than one occasion, usually in small articles discussing his latest fling, but Gail always tried to keep any stories on the Wayne family neutral and to warn him of any potential...issues that involved the Wayne family.

As Bruce opened the email, he saw that Gail had added several attachments to the email. Her note was simple. “The Star just bought these pictures, wanted to give you a heads up. These were taken at the Luscious, a notorious night club known for its drugs, drinking and other activities.”

Bruce frowned and downloaded the images, then expanded them on his computer. When he saw the pictures Bruce's face flushed bight red. He started to click them away but had to stop himself. No, he needed to go through them...no surprises. He clicked through the pictures, his ears burning red with embarrassment. The photos were of Jack and Harley being intimate in the nightclub...in public.

Bruce clicked the pictures away and pinched the bridge of his nose. He sighed thinking to himself, at least they're engaged. At worst this is just a few pictures of Jack and his fiancee having public sex. Embarrassing (if not to them, then to Bruce at least), but not detrimental...though it might cause another vote on whether or not to let Jack stay on the board. Bruce could only hope that the board would dismiss it as vulgar, impulsive and nothing else. Bruce sent a message back to Gail.

“Thanks for the warning.”

No sooner had he sent the email than he received another email from Gail. This one had the title line “And another”

Bruce groaned. “What now?” he muttered and opened the email. Gail had written. “Received these just half an hour ago.”
Bruce reluctantly clicked the pictures and groaned out loud. These were of Jack and Harley throwing toilet paper...and plastic wrapping a car? The photos weren't good, probably from a security camera. The only reason Bruce knew it was Jack and Harley was because he had just seen the sex pictures (which were of much better quality.) Bruce groaned out loud. “God damn it Jack!”

As Bruce sat there he thought to himself that it was odd; he had hired Dr. Quinzel to help his brother, yet there she was, engaged to him, having public sex and vandalism...Jack was definitely having a stronger influence on Dr. Quinzel than she was having on him. Bruce rubbed his jaw. It worried him, to say the least. Jack was out in the public eye more and more with Dr. Quinzel. Granted these things, public indecency and vandalism were minor, but where would it stop? Would it stop there?

Bruce closed his eyes then went back to checking his other emails. There was one from Lucius Fox. “Hi Bruce, I just wanted to let you know that there has been a missing person report filed for McDermott by a cousin of his... Seems he never came back from vacation. No one has heard from him. Just thought you would want to know before you came in. Fox.”

Bruce frowned. He was about to reply when his phone rang. Bruce stood up, tucking his shirt in as he walked over to where he had left his phone on the bed. He smiled when he saw it was Selina. All his worries melted away.

“Selina.” Bruce smiled holding the phone between his shoulder and ear while he reached into his closet to pull out a dark red tie and the jacket that went with the slacks. Unlike Jack, Bruce seldom wore a three-piece suit, it just wasn't his thing. Jack on the other hand, always took dressing up very seriously. An outfit for every occasion and Jack always took pains to look his best at all times. Jack had been like that when they were children, but after their parents' death it almost became an obsession for Jack. He was always talking about costumes to hide the real you...Bruce frowned then dismissed the thought.

“Hey Bruce, just wanted to see if you are free for dinner tonight. My treat this time.” Selina's voice was a soft caress against Bruce's skin even through the phone. He liked listening to her talk.

“Sure, what did you have in mind?” Bruce smiled wrapping his tie around his neck and started tying it.

“I thought maybe you would like a home cooked meal,” Selina ventured softly.

Bruce stopped moving. Did that mean what he thought it meant?

“Maybe we could finish with breakfast...if you wanted. We could discuss what sort of party to have after you buy the painting...” Selina sounded as if she was trying to find a good excuse to have Bruce stay over without being obvious.

Bruce grinned at himself in the mirror. “I would love to Selina.”

It was late afternoon before Jack and Harley decided to get up. Jack reached over and picked up his phone that was lying beside him on the bed. The song, “The Knight” by Disturbed was playing telling Jack who was calling before he picked the phone up. He looked at the screen seeing Bruce's name and sighed. After a couple of moments of reluctance Jack answered. “Hey Bruce.”

Jack was sitting up in bed completely naked, his dark hair was lying parted to the side, flopping over his brow, he kept threading his fingers through it and pushing it out of his eyes.

Harley was naked, lying on her back, her arms under her head on the pillow as she watched Jack paint her toenails. Jack grinned at her as he put the phone between his shoulder and ear continuing to paint her toenails.

Bruce sighed. “I tried calling you earlier.”

“I was sleeping with Harley.” Jack replied as he held Harley’s foot up with one hand and blew on the nails which he had pained a bright, cheery red.

Bruce sighed again. He is always sighing around me, Jack thought. “I received two emails this morning from Gail at the Gotham Star.”

“Ooo, anything interesting?” Jack knew about Bruce’s friend Gail and what her job was..to keep the Waynes out of the gossip columns as much as possible.

“Someone sold the Star pictures of you and Harley...” For a moment Jack panicked. Had someone seen them leave with Meg and Walter? “...having sex in public at that club the Luscious.”

Jack blinked, then giggled slightly. “Are you serious?”

“Yes, I am,” Bruce said in his serious tone, the tone Jack usually heard while speaking with his brother. “Some amateur photographer who worked at the club snapped some photos of the two of you and they are pretty...revealing. But that isn't the worst of it. I also received some photos from a security camera of the two of you vandalizing a house?”

Jack giggled, his gaze meeting Harley’s. “Yeah we did. It was the Randell's house.”

“What?” On the other end Bruce groaned. “Are you serious?”

Harley covered her mouth, giggling against her palm while Jack laughed and answered. “Yeah we did, BUT we didn't break anything!”

Bruce hissed back. “Jack, we just had a vote about your behavior and whether you should stay on the board of directors. This...this is going to force another vote.”

Jack smiled continuing to paint Harley’s toenails. “Bruce, if they call a vote just let me know.”

“I might not know...” Bruce started to say, but Jack cut him off. “Don’t even pretend you wouldn't know even if they tried to keep it secret from you. If they tried to hold another vote, you let me know. I know exactly what to do to sway the vote, okay?”

On the other end, Bruce did not look happy and that translated in his tone. “Just—damn it Jack—can't you just stay out of the papers? Act responsibly and look what you've done to Dr. Quinzel? She is going right down that path with you. Don’t you even think about her reputation as a doctor?”

Jack made a face mocking Bruce's words. Harley could hear what Bruce had said, but she was laughing at Jack's antics.

“Fine Bruce, it's not like I do it on purpose you know, and Harley is my girl. We do things together. That's what couples do, not like you would know though, would you?”

Bruce started to snap back, something cruel about Dr. Quinzel, but he stopped himself.

“Fine, just...stay out of trouble.” Bruce hung up.

With a sigh Jack resumed what he had been doing, tossing the phone onto the bed.
“You okay?” Harley asked softly.

“Apparently someone took photos of us fucking at the club last night,” Jack muttered. “Sold the photos to the Gotham Star.”

Harley frowned. “Gotham Star? Seriously?”

Jack nodded. “Oh and there was a security camera—like we thought—showing photos of us vandalizing the Randell’s house.”

Harley laughed. ‘Well, we knew that was going to happen.” They both chuckled. After a couple of seconds Jack sighed. “Think we may have to find out who this photographer is...have a happy little chat about respecting boundaries.”

Harley grinned. “You're right puddin, you're always right.”

Jack smiled at her, then changed the subject.

“I thought today we would go out for coffee...have lunch...go shopping...you know, like a normal couple.”

Jack giggled, glancing up from Harley's foot to her eyes. Normal was something they were way beyond now, Harley thought as she smiled at him. She giggled too and wiggled her toes. Jack kissed the tip of her toes before he continued. “And then we could go skating!

“Skating?” Harley frowned. “Like ice skating?”

“Pffft! Nah! Roller skating!” Jack grinned. “We're going to go out for coffee, lunch, shopping for skating outfits and a pair of good old-fashioned roller skates! None of those roller blade things!!”

Harley laughed. “Because we have to have the right costumes for roller skating.”

“Exactly, my precious!” Jack grinned picking up her other foot and started to paint the nails. “But first toenails!”

Harley giggled wiggling down into the soft mattress and blankets watching her puddin. “Can I paint yours?”

Jack smiled looking up at her. “Of course my sweet, it's always good if our make-up and nails match isn't it?”

Harley had finished dressing before Jack. She gave Jack a kiss after she had finished with his makeup and headed on downstairs to let Alfred know what they were up to today and that he wouldn't be needing to make them lunch, but they would be home for a late dinner...maybe.

Jack had given her a playful smack on the rear when she left.

“Love you toots.”

Harley had spun around, her face alight with love and happiness. “I love you too puddin.”

She found the older man in the kitchen sitting at the counter polishing the silver. Harley skipped into the room with a bright smile. “Hey Alfred!”

Alfred was in his butler's uniform, but he had laid the jacket over the back of the chair and was wearing rubber gloves and an apron as he polished the silver utensils.

Harley frowned. “Wow, why all the silver?”

Alfred smiled when he saw Harley. She was looking rather adorable this afternoon dressed in a white with black geometric patterned silk-jersey dress with a split V neckline and short cap sleeves. The dress was short, stopping just at the top of her thighs and she had on a pair of black nubuck leather, thick heeled sandals with a thin ankle straps, her toe nails and fingernails painted a bright red. Her long blonde hair was worn loose and her make up was light and fresh. Alfred thought she looked young, lovely and in love. He was so happy to see her recovering from the trauma of a few weeks ago and he was doubly happy to see the engagement ring on her finger.

“Good afternoon Miss Harleen what can I do for you? Oh, I decided to polish the silver because I suspect Master Bruce may be having a party soon. Just butler intuition.”

Harley grinned. “Oh really?” She frowned slightly in thought, but continued. “I just wanted to let you know that Jack and I are going out for lunch, shopping and skating!”

“Skating?” Alfred asked with a slightly confused look.

“Rolling skating!” Harley clapped her hands.

Alfred chuckled. “Really? That sounds fun my dear.”

“It does doesn't it? Jack wants to go buy skates and skating outfits...not sure what that is, but he says...” together she and Alfred repeated the same lines. “Always wear the correct costume for the correct event.”

They both laughed. “Master Jack has been doing that since he was quite young. He has always had a love for dressing up. It's nice to see him have someone to share it with Miss Harleen.”

Harley blushed. “Thank you Alfred.”

He smiled and nodded. “Will you both be home for dinner?”

“Not until late, Jack said.” Harley smiled and Alfred nodded. “Just call me dear and I will have something ready, no matter the time.”

“Thank you Alfred.” Harley started to leave, but she quickly came back and hugged Alfred surprising him (careful of the silver and the polish in his hands). “You are like the father I never had, you know that. I mean...”

Alfred set everything down and hugged her back (without putting his hands on her back, just using his arms). “I know exactly what you mean Miss Harleen. I feel the same about you and Master Jack and Master Bruce. You three are my family.”

Harley squeezed him one more time. “Thank you.”

Alfred smiled. “Of course.”

Jack came trotting down the stairs. He wore a light cadet blue suit with a white dress shirt, minus vest or tie this time. He was also wearing a pair of matching white and blue striped socks with a pair of light cognac colored leather derby shoes. He stopped on the last step when he saw Harley waiting for him in the front entrance. She had her phone out and a pair of ear buds connected to the phone in her ears. She was dancing in place listening to something he couldn't hear. He grinned watching her, the way she was moving her hips, her body weaving to the music. He sighed smiling, his features capturing a combination of lust and happiness gazing at the woman he loved and who loved him in return. Harley made him happier than anything or anyone ever had until now...She filled something in him that he hadn't realized had been missing, empty until she stepped in. She was his soulmate, his red thread of destiny, the person who had been fated for him always. His killing partner, she understood him, understood everything. He leaned on the banister watching her move around, then she started to sing which made Jack smile even wider. Her voice was lovely.

*I couldn’t love a man so purely Even prophets forgave his crooked way
I’ve learned love is like a brick you can Build a house or sink a dead body
I’ll bring him down, bring him down, down
A king with no crown, king with no crown
I’m just a Holy Fool, oh baby he’s so cruel
But I’m still in love with Judas, baby
I’m just a Holy Fool, oh baby he’s so cruel
But I’m still in love with Judas, baby...

*Harley put her hands behind her head as she rolled her hips, sang and turned around. Her eyes were closed while she sang, rolling side to side, her legs set wide apart moving to the beat of the song when she opened her eyes. Harley squeaked jumping a foot when she saw Jack leaning casually against the bannister, holding his left wrist with his right hand and watching her with a grin on his handsome face. After his blue eyes roamed up and down her figure, Jack waggled his eyebrows at her with a broad smile.

She yanked her earbuds out of her ears. “Jack! How long have you been standing there?!”

Jack’s grin was wide. “Don't stop, I was enjoying the show sweets. Particularly those hip sways...I really enjoy those...”

Jack swayed his own hips in imitation taking the last step down with a slight bounce.

“I do love how you move,” Jack purred grabbing her hips and yanking her up against him. He weaved a few times, his fingers pressing into her hips, enjoying the feel of her.

Jack growled. “Grr...my pretty girl...”

Harley blushed, dropping her arms around his shoulders holding her phone and ear buds in one hand.
while she ground her pelvis against his...the man made her want him constantly. His blue eyes stood out looking almost electric with the dark eyeliner around them. He smile was cherry red and oh how she wanted to have him leave lipstick marks all over her body.

“Are you ready?” she purred jerking just slightly when Jack's hands roamed behind her to grab her rear and squeeze.

“Mmm. Yes...I suppose...” He chuckled gazing down at where their bodies where pressed together. “I can't wait to taste you on my lips again,” Jack whispered, gently rubbing his nose against hers. “I want to drag you upstairs and throw you down on the floor, push that dress up and fuck you hard Harley,” Jack growled. He was giving serious consideration to hauling her back up the stairs and doing just like he wanted BUT he had promised her a day out.

Harley was squirming. Just his voice, the warm and liquid way he spoke ran like slow, thick drops of honey on her skin. She ached for him. If he had said they were going back upstairs she would have gone willingly, but instead Jack sighed letting her go.

“Wanna take the bike?” he asked when he let her go.

Harley pouted a little, her bottom lip sticking out. Jack laughed. “I promise later to spend hours tonight between your legs; teasing… sucking, sipping, tasting you...”

Harley giggled. “Promise?”

“I swear my sweets.” Jack grinned. “So, the motorcycle...”

“In this dress?” Harley asked looking down at herself.

Jack grinned. “Oh yeah, in that dress, we might not make it home...you could ride up front...remember?” Jack grinned, his tongue at the corner of his mouth.

Harley giggled. “You're bad.”

Jack took her hand. “That's one of the things you love about me!”

Harley grinned. “One of many puddin. I'm crazy for you.”

Jack brushed the back of his fingers along her cheek. “I'm crazy for you too my pumpkin.”

Soon they were heading into the city, Harley was sitting on the back of the bike, her arms around Jack's waist, her head laying against his back. She was wearing her sunglasses, casting everything in a warm darkness. She loved the way he felt, her arms around his body, she could smell his cologne, the delicious scent of his clothing, his hair, his skin...the man drove her nuts—he was intoxicating. She squeezed her arms around him and kissed his back.

With a cigarette in his mouth and sporting his round purple shades, Jack grinned when he felt the pressure of his fiancee’s lips against his back. He had one hand on the bike, the other behind him on her leg, feeling the warm silk of her skin under his fingers. Harley had pulled the bottom of her dress down as much as she could, but it still road up her long legs. Jack caressed her thigh as he drove them into Gotham, happy to feel her bare-skin under his fingers. He pinched her playfully before he brought his hand back to the hit the gas, rev the bike, and speed dangerously through the Gotham city traffic on their way downtown.
Harley giggled and let go of Jack once to throw her arms up in the air, the wind whipping her hair. Harley yelled at the top of her lungs. “I LOVE JACK WAYNE!!”

Jack laughed zipping between cars, his smile was all perfectly straight white teeth and bordering on maniacal happiness.

They ended up pulling in front of Gotham's Caffè Coffee Shop and Bakery.

Jack snorted as he hopped off the bike, removed his sunglasses, and slipped them into a pocket of his blazer. In a sarcastic tone Jack said. “I love the name, Gotham's coffee, coffe shop and bakery. But I'll let it pass because they have great coffee.”

Jack laughed then as he helped Harley off the motorcycle. He held her hand, while with her other hand she pulled her dress down and straightened herself up. Jack reached forward with his free hand to push a lock of her hair behind her ear and stared into her eyes.

“My beautiful girl,” Jack whispered. Harley brought his hand up that was holding hers and kissed his knuckles. “My puddin,” she whispered in response.

Jack grinned, tugged her close and weaved her arm through his before they headed into the shop.

The inside of the cafe was busy. Harley took her sunglasses off and looked around with a smile. The smell of rich coffee filled the air around them. She could hear music playing softly in the background, Lana Del Rey's “Because of You.” The walls of the cafe were all exposed brick, with a dark tile flooring and an exposed grey ceiling. The counter was also exposed brick with a nice, curved, light grey marble top. The baristas behind the counter had what Harley thought of as a “typical” hipster look, with one man having on a pair of skinny jeans, a long, squared off beard and a red and white plaid shirt. Another was also dressed in skinny jeans, a white short sleeved button down shirt with his hair shaved on the sides. The last man behind the counter wore jeans, a red and white striped t-shirt with a sweater vest, a little bowler hat and a handlebar mustache. All of them were so pale the sun might actually reflect off of them, Harley thought. The young woman who was working at the register had on a pair of bright yellow overalls, a white and black striped shirt and a HUGE pair of black framed sunglasses.

Holding Harley's arm, Jack leaned close. “What would you like, my sweets?”

Harley smiled looking up at the chalkboard menu that hung above the registers.

“Mm...a large cold-brew vanilla caramel?”

Jack grinned. “Then that is what you shall have.”

He brushed her chin with his fingers, a gentle caress, his eyes only for her; Harley almost melted on the spot. Jack grinned and nipped at her lips softly before they walked up to the counter coming within ear shot of the four baristas who were having an intense discussion of the merits of veganism and the ills of dairy. The young woman had just stated that she thought one could still eat meat or dairy and that it could be done humanely.

Sweater-vest groaned and cut the young woman off. “You know that's a lie! The happy cow is a myth! Don't you know anything Jill?”
The young woman frowned looking as if she had been slapped. Jill started to say something in protest when the sweater-vest moved his hand in front of her, snapping his fingers in her face in a dismissive gesture, clearly giving no regard to her opinion as he muttered, “You don’t have any idea what you’re talking about Jill. People like you are the problem.” Jill started to open her mouth when she saw that they had customers. She stopped and smiled at Jack and Harley.

Jack and Harley stepped up to the counter, Jack holding Harley’s hands, his fingers threaded with hers. The young man glanced at them, his eyes roaming over their clothing, noticing Harley’s engagement ring. For a moment his lip curled slightly; clearly he had made a judgment about them based on the way they looked. Jack blinked in surprise at the look the kid was giving the two of them. Wayne Enterprises donated money to the ethical treatment of animals and as far of Jack knew, Wayne Enterprises did not involve itself in animal experimentation or inhumane treatment, but this kid had made a decision on what kind of people they were in an instant. Jack really hated that. He had been experiencing that sort of treatment his whole life, the less stable Wayne brother...

The young man asked with a dismissive tone.

“What’s your order?”

Jack narrowed his eyes slightly glancing at the young man's name tag. “Hello, Zane. My girl would like an iced vanilla caramel and I would like an iced coffee with a shot of cream (usually Jack had his coffee black, but since this kid was having a fit about dairy, Jack decided to push a button just for the hell of it.)

Zane frowned slightly. “Soy milk?”

Jack grinned. “Nope, cow milk please.” Jack leaned his hand on the counter grinning from ear to ear. “I have a question Zane: If vegetarians eat vegetables, what do humanitarians eat?”

Zane frowned looking disgusted and ignoring Jack's joke. “Do you have any idea how bad dairy is for you? People like you are promoting cruelty to animals. It's because of the blindness of people like you that dairy continues to be consumed by the blind and stupid public!”

Jack and Harley continued to stare Zane, then Jack whispered. “What do Vegans fear the most? Nutritionists with facts.”

Zane glared and snarled. “Fine.”

Zane turned away and returned to his discussion. “You know how bad dairy is for you Jill?” Zane had turned to the girl, but his voice was carrying throughout the coffee shop. “Anyone who drinks dairy is a killer! They may not have done it themselves, but they are perpetuating the killing of cows and the systematic torture of them.”

The young man with the squared off beard frowned. “You going to the protest in Bludhaven against that dairy farmer convention?”

Zane stopped in the middle of making a drink. “No man, I ain't got the time for a rally. Besides I have to work ’til close tonight and tomorrow night.”

Jack, who had led Harley over to a table, narrowed his eyes watching Zane. As he watched he noticed the young man put soy milk in their orders.

Jack whispered. “You know, I really hate people who push their views onto others, but then have no time to stand behind them, especially when they are being a jackass to everyone else.”
Harley giggled. “I agree puddin.”

Jack sighed with a smile. “I think later tonight my dear we might have to come back here and teach our little social justice warrior a thing of two about standing behind your words and not fucking with other people.”

Harley giggled. “I hate that guy...and that sounds fun puddin.”

Jack grinned catching her chin between his thumb and forefinger as he whispered close to her lips. “My little murder kitten.”

Harley giggled blushing. Jack leaned in to brush his lips across hers when Zane called their order. Jack rubbed his nose against Harley’s before he walked up to get their orders. He didn’t pick the order up; instead he stood there looking at the drinks, then with a smile he called.

“Hey Zane. You did these drinks wrong.”

Zane turned around. “What are you talking about?”

“I watched you, you put soy in them, which I’m fairly confident I said ‘no’ to earlier.”

Zane walked back over. “What is your problem man?”

Jack smiled serenely. “Clearly my problem is you, Zane sweetheart.”

Zane hissed. “Don’t call me sweetheart.”

Jack grinned pushing the drinks back at him. “All right darling. Why don’t you make the drinks the way we requested or if that is too hard for you, why don’t we ask Jill, she is clearly the more intelligent of the two of you.”

Jill who was reloading the front display with scones looked over at the exchange, her eyes going wide but she was trying not to smile.

Zane started to open his mouth to say something else, but Jack held his finger up. “It’s so simple to be wise. Just think of something stupid to say and then don’t say it Zane.”

Jill hurried over because it was clear Zane was about to lose his temper. Jill smiled taking the drinks. “I will make you new ones and a coupon for two free coffees next time you are in.”

Jack grinned at her. “Why thank you Jill. It’s nice to see someone who can act with some intelligence and civility.” Zane lifted himself up to his full height and haughtily walked away.

Across town at the Gotham City hospital, Bruce took the elevator up to the floor where his friend Harvey Dent was being kept. Dent was still in the hospital, though Bruce had heard from Gilda that they would be releasing Harvey in the next week. Bruce had been up to see him since the accident, but Harvey had been on so much medication that he didn’t even know Bruce had come to visit.

Today Bruce carried a vase of flowers with him to give to his friend, but he stopped at Harvey's hospital door; he could hear crying inside. Bruce frowned, it sounded like Gilda. Bruce took a step back when the door opened and Gilda came rushing out running right into Bruce.

“Gilda? Is everything okay?” Bruce caught her, nearly dropping the vase of flowers “Oh Bruce!” Gilda wrapped her arms around him. “It’s Harvey. He...he just isn’t himself right now.” She realized she was holding onto Bruce and released him taking a step back wiping at her tears.

“Gilda, you know you can tell me anything.” Bruce gave her a reassuring smile.

Gilda looked at him, then noticed the flowers, for some reason that caused her to burst into tears again. “Oh Bruce, Harvey just isn't the same anymore. Since the accident it's as if there are two different people in there. My Harvey, my husband, the man who was so honest and good—but, but there are times it's as if there is another Harvey. Oh Bruce, he even sounds different at times. He told me to leave, that he never wanted to see me again. I just...I don't care how disfigured he is, I still love him, but he doesn't believe me!”

Gilda started to cry again. Bruce frowned walking over and setting the flowers down at the nurses station and pulled Gilda into an embrace. “It's all right Gilda. Why don't you go home? I'm sure you need the rest. I'll go talk to Harvey all right?”

Gilda nodded taking a step back and running a hand down her pregnant stomach. “Okay, okay, thank you Bruce.”

Bruce smiled. “Anytime Gilda.”

Bruce watched her walk down the hall to the elevator, crying the whole way. Bruce frowned turning back toward Harvey's hospital door. He waited a heartbeat before he pushed the door open and stepped inside.

Harvey was lying in his hospital bed turned away from the door when Bruce came in. “Hey Harvey?”

Bruce stepped closer and moved around the foot of the bed.

He wasn't prepared for what he saw.

The last few times he had been in here to see his friend, Harvey had had half his face covered in bandages, but the bandages were gone showing that half of Harvey's face was destroyed—not destroyed, Bruce realized. Half of Harvey's face was gone. The eye on that damaged side of Harvey's face was still there, though the lids around it were completely gone leaving a watery, bloodshot angry orb; his upper lip was pulled back, creating a permanent sneer, the flesh burned away and replaced by red, angry looking muscles and only bits of healing melted skin. Bruce could see the bone of Harvey's jaw exposed beneath the remaining skin.

“Harvey?” Bruce stepped closer and Harvey's eyes finally focused on him.

“What are you doing here?” his friend's voice was deep, strange, completely unlike the voice Bruce was accustomed to hearing.

“I ran into Gilda, she seemed upset.” Bruce looked around for a chair and pulled the one near the wall closer.

“I told her I don't need her any more,” Harvey snarled.

“Do you want to talk about it Harvey?” Bruce frowned, but Harvey smiled at him, a gruesome glimmer in Harvey's eyes.

“Bruce Wayne, the handsome playboy. Are you thinking about stepping into my shoes? Becoming Gilda's shoulder to cry on?” Harvey hissed the words at him.
Bruce frowned. “Harvey what's wrong—this isn't like you.”

Harvey sat up. “Get out! I don't want to talk to you! GET OUT!!”

Bruce stood. “Harvey...”

“GET OUT!”

Bruce frowned, but he left. He wasn't sure what was wrong with his friend, but this wasn't at all like Harvey. Bruce sighed as he stepped onto the elevator. He wasn't sure what he could do to help Gilda, but he would at least offer.

But for now he was going to focus on his date with Selina; it was selfish, but Bruce didn't know what he could do.

In the hospital room Harvey snarled, his voice deep. “You know he is going to take your wife don't you?”

Harvey's voice reverted back to normal. “Bruce is my friend. He wouldn't do that.”

The other voice hissed. “You have no friend Harvey, only me.”

Jack and Harley were walking down the sidewalk, looking like a stunning, high class couple with their sunglasses on smiling in the late afternoon light. They had had lunch in a small sandwich shop and now Jack had stopped and bought them ice cream cones at a local ice cream shop. He was grinning brightly, his arm around Harley’s waist. He had never been so happy, at least not that he could remember, not since he was very small. He remembered getting ice cream with his parents and Bruce once, not too long before his parents had been murdered. It was funny, now that he thought about it, Jack hadn't had an ice cream cone since that time. But today it had felt...right. Harley was his “new” family.

She was all he needed, all he would ever need he thought.

Jack smiled watching Harley walking beside him, studying the way her pink tongue slid across the white cream, the way she licked her lips, her lips pressing against the white...

“I could watch you lick an ice cream cone all day,” he whispered against her ear.

Harley giggled, his lips tickling her ear. She gave him a wickedly seductive look, licking the ice cream slowly. Jack purred. “Harley, you are going to cause me to drag you down an alley and take you right now if you don't stop.”

“Promises, promises.” Harley giggled moving her tongue up and down the ice cream.

Jack grinned.”Woman! You are tempting me!” he warned her around his growing smile, which only made Harley giggle more, licking her ice cream slowly. Jack sighed. “Shoot, we have reached our destination.”

Harley looked up at the store's sign. The place was called Gotham Five Stride Skate shop. From the window she could see not just roller skates, but skateboards, inline skates, knee pads, helmets, you name it, it seemed this place had it, along with t-shirts and other clothing for casual skaters and outfits for people who participated in roller derby. Jack stood looking inside the window, licking his cone with a contemplative air.

“I would love to see you in a roller derby outfit.” He said it softly, but Harley grinned. “If you want I will wear one...it would be fun.”

Jack grinned at her, his blue eyes dancing. “You're making all my little boy sex fantasies come true Harley Quinn.”

Harley wrinkled her nose at him. “I intend to make every single one come true, puddin...Every. Single. One.”

Jack giggled. “God I love you.”

Harley laughed as she leaned over and licked his cone making Jack shiver.

Once they were finished with their ice cream, they headed inside the shop. The guy at the counter had the typical “skater guy” look. He had long blonde hair that reached to his waist, long black skater shorts, red and white checked socks and a t-shirt with a large marijuana leaf on the front and a pair of round John Lennon glasses. When they came in, the man was all smiles. “Hey there! I'm Trey, let me know what I can help you with. And by the way man, I dig the suit!”

Jack grinned. “Why, thank you Trey. My girl and I are here for skates, clothing and a roller derby outfit for my girl.”

Trey grinned. “All right man. Hey you gunna go to the tryouts today at the rink?” Trey smiled at Harley who glanced at Jack. “Tryouts?” she asked turning back to Trey.

“Yeah man, the Gotham City Sirens are having tryouts...I think they might be starting in the next hour or so.”

Harley grinned at Jack who gave her a significant look and whispered. “Little boy sex fantasy.”

Harley giggled. “Guess I’m trying out for the Gotham City Sirens.”

After nearly a hour of picking out clothing and skates, Jack and Harley left with two pairs of roller skates. Jack's were white with little pink pompoms on the toes which had made Harley giggle. He had the box with them under his arm. Jack was wearing a pair of black skater shorts with a purple, athletic-cut t-shirt which highlighted his trim figure and the sleek muscles of his calves and arms, along with a pair of pink and purple striped socks and a pair of purple high tops. Somehow he managed to look elegant even dressed like a skater. Harley thought he looked adorable.

Harley's skates were black with red laces. She was wearing the outfit that Jack had bought her for the derby try-outs, a pair of red and black striped socks that reached up to her knees over a pair of black fishnets, a pair of extremely short booty shorts in red and black sparkles, a black and white striped sleeveless tank top with a red sports bra underneath. While inside the store, she had pulled her hair up into pigtails which stuck out the sides of her black helmet that was littered with glittery red hearts, along with black knee pads and elbow pads.

Jack grinned at her looking her up and down slowly as he bit his bottom lip. “You 're hitting a lot of my kinks, Harley. My little boy sex fantasy come to life...” He laughed with glee making a grabby motion at her while he stepped closer. He grabbed her hip with his free hand, tugging her up against him. Jack ran his hand down her side and then moved it around to squeeze her rear.

“Mmm...” he purred.

Harley blushed and giggled wiggling in his grasp. “Perv.”

“Mm...that alley...but with your skates on...” Jack’s grin was wide. “Me tugging those short, shorts down, sliding my fingers between your legs...”

Harley giggled, wiggling against him. She could feel how hard Jack was while she ground her pelvis against him, wanting to let him drag her down some dirty alley and take her up against the wall.

She shivered, reluctantly asking, “Are you ready?”

“More than ever.” Jack pinched her backside making her squeak.

Harley had her arms wrapped tight around Jack enjoying the speed of him driving the bike swiftly through the Gotham City traffic until they drove up to the front of the Gotham City River Rink. The place was a large, older building which was about the size of two football fields. The outside sign looked like it would have been perfect back in the 1970's. The sign was neon with 70's aki style font done in white, pink and blue neon that wrapped around the sign, forming an arrow that pointed at the roller rink with the name Gotham City River Rink in blue neon and a flaming roller skate wheel over it along with a smaller sign underneath that announced that this rink had two, equal size skating rinks inside.

They stepped off of the bike and headed into the rink. They pushed the metal double doors open together and stepped inside.

The interior of the rink was much cooler than the outside. The lights were dim, which helped lower the temperature, and created a muted atmosphere. As they walked in they could see the the entry way which led to the two skating rinks, one for everyday skaters, then the other rink where the derby tryouts were being held.

The young woman at the ticket booth had hair dyed a white blonde with a bright pink streak in the front over one eye. She had thick eye make-up and was wearing a purple halter top that read “Gotham City Sirens.” When she saw Harley and Jack walk up to the counter to purchase tickets she grinned, popping her bubblegum giving Harley a once over.

“You're just in time! The tryouts are about to start.”

Harley glanced at Jack and grinned. “Great!”

The girl sold them their tickets and pointed down the hall toward the entrance. “Your fella can watch on the sidelines, but just go on to the far end, there is going to be a red-head named Ivy, she is taking down the names of those trying out.”

The young woman leaned in close. “And don't let her intimidate you. She's a scientist and she sometimes comes off as huffy. Okay, well good luck!”

Harley took their tickets and the two of them headed off toward the indicated direction.
Jack bumped her hip with his. “You know anything about derby skating?”

Harley grinned blushing. “A little...I might have actually gone to a match or two when I was in college.”

Jack chuckled. “Oh, you are full of surprises my sweet. I love it.”

Harley grinned at him.

The all-skaters floor wasn't too full they noticed as they walked by. This rink and the derby rink both had benches positioned around them. There were a few skaters on the floor of the all-skaters rink, Maître Gims “Mayweather” was playing as the skaters danced or simply skated around the rink. Jack and Harley kept going, heading over to the other rink which was designed slightly different than the regular rink. While the common rink was just a flat surface designed to be skated on, the one that Jack and Harley were approaching was designed for speed and derby competitions.

The roller derby rink had a “track” that stood in contrast to the floor where the skaters had to stay during a game. Right now there were several women on the floor of the rink warming up. As Jack and Harley walked closer, they both saw the woman who was standing near the entrance of the rink with a clip board. She was a beautiful woman, her looks the sort that made people do a double take. Her vibrant red hair was pulled back in a ponytail. She wore an almost completely green outfit of booty shorts with a little skirt ruffle, a t-shirt with Gotham City Sirens across the chest, along with black and green knee socks. Her skates were black with green stripes. She was in the middle of writing something and speaking to a young woman standing in front of her when Harley and Jack stepped near.

The woman looked up from her writing and narrowed her eyes.

“No men allowed,” she muttered.

Jack grinned. “I'm just here to cheer my fiance on.”

“Are you Ivy?” Harley asked.

“I am. My name is actually Pamela, Dr. Pamela Isley, but on the team I'm known as Poison Ivy. So are you wanting to try out?” Ivy asked, only sparing Jack a brief glance.

Harley giggled and nodded. “Yep.”

“Okay, what's your name?” Ivy smiled.

“Harley, Harley Quinn.” Harley grinned.

“Okay Harley, get your skates on and start warming up, we'll be starting tryouts in just a sec.” Ivy wrote her name down, then walked off. Harley hurried over to sit with Jack who had sat down on the lower bleachers and was pulling her skates out of the bag he had carried in for her.

“You going to be okay? These are new skates. I don't want you hurting your cute little feet” Jack asked with a smile, but Harley laughed. “I'll be fine I promise. This will be fun!”

Harley finished tying up her skates and stood up. Jack's grin was a little lopsided, his eyes roaming over her. “You look incredible. Now get out there and kick some ass sweetheart.”

Harley giggled and wiggled her rear at Jack before heading out onto the floor. All the women who were trying out were doing laps on the track. Harley hadn't been skating in a while, but it only took her a few minutes to get herself into a rhythm that had her gliding across the floor.

She grinned brightly. She had forgotten how much she liked skating. She had skated a lot as a kid before things became really bad at home. Then she had skated a few times in high school along with her gymnastics. The last time she had been roller skating was in college when she and a couple of girlfriends had gone skating on a lark at one of the parks. They had been wearing inline skates. Her friends had wanted to go to the park to try to pick up guys, but Harley had just wanted to skate, have fun. It had ended badly...Harley shook her head, no, no looking back, only forward. She came around the circle picking up speed as she did so and saw Jack, his eyes glued to her. When she skated by she waved. Jack blew her a kiss.

Ivy came skating out onto the floor. “Okay ladies, I'm going to break you up into two teams of five. We are going to do a series of jams, both teams need to designate a jammer. Each team's jammer scores points by lapping members of the opposing team. Each team attempts to hinder the opposing jammer while assisting their own jammer to get around the floor. The more laps your jammer can make the better.” Ivy stopped for a moment to look at each of the women before she continued. While she was speaking, she was joined by a couple of other women, both of whom wore T-shirts with the “Gotham City Sirens” logo on them.

Ivy put her hands on her hips as she continued to speak, skating slowly down the line of women. “Everyone else on your team is called a blocker, you have one jammer and four blockers, got it?”

Everyone nodded. Ivy smiled. “A jam usually lasts about thirty minutes, but we're not going to go for that long since this is just a tryout. I want to see what you can do and quickly because I have better things to do than watch a bunch of little girls.” She stared at each of them in turn.

“I will call time when I'm ready. Jammers, you will focus on lapping the other team's members; after the first couple of minutes, someone has to switch with the jammer. We will do this until everyone has been in the jammer position. The rest of you, blockers, you can use any form of physical force, body contact, changing positions, shoulders, hips, thighs, whatever helps to get your jammer to score while keeping the other team's jammer from making any points. You cannot use upward or downward motions with your elbows, no grabbing, pulling or holding, no hitting above the shoulders, no hitting in the back of the head, or legs, no intentional tripping, and lastly, you cannot use your head to block or hit anyone else in the head.”

Ivy looked around at each of them. “Okay, let's get out there and skate.”

One of the women who had joined Ivy, a short woman with long dark auburn hair and a tattoo on her chest just visible above her tank top, walked over and started pointing out individuals, dividing them into teams of five.

“I'm Aggie, just do what I tell you and we'll get along fine. Remember ladies, this is fun!” With a smile, Aggie began to point each woman into her position. They gathered in a tight circle, small, tight groups of four, four from Harley's group, four from the opposing group, the two jammers were next to each other, ready to move as quickly as possible. Once everyone was in position Aggie grinned. (In the background Sweet's 'Ballroom Blitz' started to play, clearly whoever was in charge of the music was having fun.)

“Okay, get out there and skate!” Aggie motioned just before she blew her whistle and immediately organized chaos ensued.
Harley was among the first women to try out, taking up the position of a blocker. Harley and two of her teammates created a barrier, trying to block the other group's jammer, but they only managed to block her for a couple of seconds before she broke through their block. Harley took off after the jammer, her feet flying across the smooth surface, grinning when the other team's jammer broke free of their group. She loved the feel of the wheels under her feet, the power in her legs; the rush was wonderful and the speed was exhilarating. Her other two teammates rushed to catch up with her, each of them catching the other by the shoulders and spinning around to try to form another blockade. Harley and her three teammates, their hands on each others shoulders tried to form a wall to block the opponent jammer from getting past them. The jammer slammed her shoulder into their group then twisted around, just barely managing to leap to the side, staying in the lane while avoiding becoming stuck by the blockers.

Harley hissed, but then she saw one of the opponent blockers gaining on their jammer. Harley broke free of her teammates and put on some speed as she took off after the woman who was hot on the heels of their jammer. Harley skated around, twisting her body to the side to put herself in front of the other team's blocker. Harley used her shoulder and her hips to slam into the other woman's side. The young woman, a brunette with an asymmetrical bob, lost her footing when Harley rammed into her, her skates going out from under her, dropping her on her rear. Harley grinned skating around the fallen woman once before taking off to try to protect their team's jammer from further interference. Two of the opposing team members were rushing up swiftly, twisting around and blocked Harley's team's jammer. Harley rushed forward and slid into one of the women using her body to knock the blocker to the side before twisting around and used her body again to block the second one.

(Whoever was in charge of the music was having fun picking songs for the derby tryouts; the next song was Bombshell Blonde by Owl City)

Jack was watching from the bleachers, his legs crossed and his chin resting in his hand, his elbow on his knee, and a wide grin on his face. Harley was gorgeous skating across the floor, using her body like a weapon; the way she twisted around and threw herself against her opponents was a thing of beauty. Jack grinned like a school boy, Harley was his dream girl in every way possible. He was so turned on right now that he actually squirmed a bit. The only way he could be turned on more was if she was bludgeoning these women...Jack grinned imagining Harley with a bat, skating back and forth cracking the bat across the back of her victims' legs... Jack sat up straight for a moment. That's what his girl needed! A bat!

The whistle blew; a couple of women were motioned out of the group to be replaced by others who were trying out. The next woman in Harley's group took up the jammer position. Harley, along with two others were left on the floor to keep skating as blockers. This time the women on Harley's team, locked into a group of three and their hands on each others shoulders acted as a moving blockade to the other team's jammer, their formation was tighter. One of the opponent blockers tried to make a break through them, trying to provide an opening for her jammer to get through, but Harley broke off and swung around, ramming her hip and her torso into the other blocker hard enough that the woman fell. Harley then swung around putting herself in the way of the opponent jammer, skating backwards as she continued to make a nuisance of herself to the jammer and any of the other team's blockers. She wasn't afraid to use her hips and shoulders to slam blockers aside. Harley grinned wickedly, clearly enjoying herself.

At the edge of the rink, Ivy had her eyes on Harley. She was impressed. Not only was Miss Quinn pretty, which was always a plus, she had a killer figure and looked good out there on the floor, but she had a knack for this...with her trained up even better, they just might get to the world cup competition. Ivy grinned and blew the whistle. Time to see if she could play all the roles. “Quinn!! Take up the jammer position!”

Harley glanced over at Ivy and nodded. Everyone stopped and took up their new positions. The whistle blew and the match began. Harley took off and almost immediately two women skated in front of her putting their shoulders together to block her getting past them. Harley grinned, narrowing her eyes and skated right up into them. She slammed her shoulder sideways into the space at the two women's waists, twisting her body sideways before she forced her way between them using her hips to knock the space open, just before she skated through, completely breaking the block. Harley took off, putting on speed having broken free, but as she came around the curve of the lane, a redhead seemed to come out of nowhere to rush up to block Harley's progress. Harley crouched and leaned heavily to her left, twisting her body at an angle, and slammed herself to the side, right into the left hip of the red-headed blocker hard enough that Harley sent the redhead rolling off her feet and crashing into the bleachers.

That was the moment the whistle blew again. All the ladies stopped, Aggi and Ivy motioned them all to the center of the rink. “Okay ladies, we have made our decision.”

Ivy held up her clipboard. “All right. Rachel Smitters, Alice Geha, Harley Quinn and Jessie Frain, welcome to the Gotham City Sirens! Training camp starts at the beginning of September and lasts ten weeks, you'll get information sent to your email. As for the rest of you, we have another tryout day in two weeks, feel free to try again. Until then, all of you get free passes to the next five games, watch how it's played in action. Just see me or Aggi for details. Welcome aboard ladies!”

Everyone clapped. Jack leapt to his feet and yelled. “THAT'S MY GIRL!! WOOHOO!!”

Harley blushed bright red smiling at Jack when Ivy came over. “So who is that guy again? He looks familiar.”

“My fiance, Jack Wayne.” Harley smiled glancing back at Jack.

Ivy frowned. “As in Wayne Enterprises Wayne?”

Harley nodded. “Yep, Bruce Wayne is his older brother.”

Ivy nodded narrowing her eyes at Jack before she turned back to Harley. “Well, it's nice to have you aboard. Let me get your email and phone number.”

Harley skated back to Jack after exchanging her information with Ivy. Jack was standing on the edge of the rink with his arms wide open. Harley skated right into them.

Jack grinned. “You looked amazing out there! You can slam into me anytime, good looking.”

Harley laughed wrapping her arms around his neck. "I'm glad you thought so.”

“I'm looking forward to coming to every game and getting embarrassingly turned on by watching my girl on a pair of skates.” Jack grinned waggling his eyebrows.

Harley laughed. “Get your skates on and come skating with me.”

Jack chuckled and nodded eagerly. “Right away pumpkin.”
Across town, the sun was just starting to set when Bruce pulled up in front of Selina Kyle's apartment building. He had just stepped out of the black and blue BMW i8 he had just recently purchased. Alfred had “jokingly” told him that he was going to need to add an addition to the garage at the rate that he bought cars. Bruce had laughed, but as he drove the BMW to Selina's apartment building Bruce contemplated the Alfred was probably right. He should be thankful that Jack didn't use his own money to buy cars, but was content to use whatever vehicles Bruce bought. For a moment Bruce frowned in thought, he had no idea what Jack did spend his money on...except clothing and more recently, Harley. Bruce smiled. He had to admit it was nice to see Jack getting out and spending time around people with Harley. Though he really needed to stress to Jack about appropriate behavior in public...Bruce lost his train of thought as soon as he pulled up in front of Selina's apartment, his mind instantly on the beautiful brunette.

Inside Selina was looking around to make sure everything was just right. This wasn't her place. As much as she liked Bruce Wayne she would never take him to her actual place. This place was part of her cover. Not only would it destroy the illusion of who she was if Bruce saw her real home, but she didn't like anyone knowing where she really lived, let alone what she really did for a living. The apartment wasn't too grand, but it was nice. It belonged to a friend of hers who was an art dealer and part time fence. The place had only one window that faced out onto the street, a small living room space with flat screen TV, comfortable couch, that was attached to the equally small, though fully functional kitchen and one bedroom with a bathroom a short way down the narrow hall. The walls were plain white, but decorated with local artists' work.

Despite the false home, false job, her name was...real and she had actually cooked dinner tonight for him. She had made Striped Bass, asparagus, turnips and littleneck clams. Cooking was a skill she had ended up picking up for a job she had worked in France. She grinned, the smell of the bass was delicious, if she did say so herself.

That was when there was a buzz from downstairs. Selina hit the speaker. “Yes?”

Downstairs Bruce hit the respond button. “Bruce Wayne.”

Selina laughed. “Come on up.”

Jack was skating backwards with his hands behind his back as he grinned at Harley. The music that was playing was Katy Perry's “Swish Swish” which Harley was taking to heart, swishing her hips back and forth while deliberately staying out of Jack's reach. She wasn't wearing her helmet, but she still had the knee and elbow pads on which Jack found incredibly sexy, his gaze raking over her. She grinned at him turning, weaving her legs back and forth, her arms over her head as she winked at Jack, then she spun around and wiggled her rear at him teasingly.

Jack groaned with a laugh. “Killing me! My little killer!”

Harley stuck her tongue out at him. He looked adorable with the pink pompoms on his white skates, his slim, muscled legs...she wanted him, but making him wait for it was fun. Jack grinned at her knowing exactly what game she was playing.

He smiled, running his tongue along his upper teeth hissing. “You tease.”
Harley smiled, her body moving sensually just before she did a spin, swishing her hips back and forth again.

She giggled and skated close enough that Jack could finally grab her. He brushed the tips of his fingers along her sides, skating backwards, then he surprised her by twisting away and around her, his left leg back like a figure skater as his fingers reached out and brushed against her arm in a sweet caress. He did a full turn around her, keeping his eyes on her, a wide grin on his face, before twisting gracefully back around, returning to skating backwards in front of her waggling his eyebrows.

“I had an idea, my delicious little cupcake.”

Harley giggled weaving her hips, lowering herself down to a crouch. She grinned looking up at him while swishing her way back up. “What was that puddin?”

Harley turned to skate backwards next to him. His blue eyes were dancing with mischief.

“I think before we go home tonight we need to buy you a baseball bat AND...” Jack turned around, skating a circle around her again, his hands behind his back. He returned to skating backwards next to her and said in a quieter tone, “I think we should try your new bat on a special vegan.”

Harley giggled liking where this was going. That little prick Zane had annoyed her more than she had let on. “Oh?”

Jack nodded. “Yup. Heard he had to close tonight...”

Harley giggled. “Oh, the poor baby.”

Jack turned to face forward, reaching for Harley. This time he did grab for her, yanking her off her feet and throwing them both off balance. With a squeal of laughter from Harley and a couple of chuckles from Jack, they both lost their footing on the wheels for a moment and then both went down in a heap laughing, tangled in each other’s arms. Jack was on his back with Harley having landed on top of him. He grinned up at her.

Harley gasped. “Jack are you all right?” She checked his head, her fingers moving delicately in his hair.

“I’m fine Harley really.” Jack grinned squeezing her hips.

One of the other skaters stopped. “You two all right?”

Jack smiled. “Never better.”

Harley grinnned down at Jack dropping down to kiss him. Jack wrapped his arms around her pressing her down on him. She could feel how turned on he was pressing between her legs. Jack grabbed her rear, squeezing. His tongue slowly explored her mouth pressing her hips down on him. Harley wrapped her arms around his head her hands in his hair, her hips grinding against him, without her really thinking about the fact they were in the middle of a skating rink. They were starting to become completely lost in each other when a whistle was blown.

“HEY! Not on the floor!”

Jack and Harley looked up to see a young man in a polo with the rink’s name across the chest glaring at them. Harley looked down at Jack, taking the time to run her thumb along his chin where their lipstick had smeared together. Jack wrinkled his nose at her, reaching up to do the same. They both giggled getting to their feet, holding hands as they quickly skated off the floor.
Once they were off the skating floor, Jack held Harley's hand, pulling her past the bleachers.

“Where are we going?” Harley asked glancing around. That was when she saw the restroom doors.

“Jack what are you doing?” Harley was giggling when Jack went over to the women's bathroom. He knocked, rapping his knuckles against the door. When no one answered, he looked around before opening the door and dragging her inside with him. Harley giggled.

Jack quickly yanked her in with him turning around to lock the door. It was a one stall bathroom with a medium size, typical counter that had a sink embedded in the counter, a toilet and a fairly large mirror. Thankfully, it appeared to be fairly clean too. Jack immediately pressed Harley up against the wall covering her mouth with his own. Harley groaned wrapping her arms around him, they both slipped a little bit on their skates, the floor in here just a tad slicker than the one for skating.

Jack hissed. “I want you. I couldn't wait, seeing you out there on those skates...the little shorts...you are such a tease Harley.”

Harley giggled running her hands along his back and down to snake her fingers past the band of his shorts. “Mm...me a tease? What about you? Those little pink pompoms on your skates?”

Jack laughed. “What can I say, I like pompoms.”

Harley giggled. “Ooh? Is that another little boy sex fantasy I need to know about?”

Jack kissed his way down her throat, reaching up under her tank top to shove her sports bra up, exposing her breasts. He shoved her shirt up attacking her breasts with his mouth. Harley groaned, his tongue doing slow, tender figure eights over her nipples.

Jack switched breasts, smearing his lipstick across her skin, with a breathy reply. “Yes...get you a little cheerleader costume..one of those little skirts...nothing underneath...”

(The roller rink's music filtered in through the bathroom. Cheap Trick's “I Want You to Want Me.”)

Harley moaned as Jack's teeth scraped along her nipples, his hands sliding down her torso, his fingers pressing hard against her skin. Jack pulled away spinning her around to face the mirror, the wheels of their skates making the spin easy. He pushed her up against the sink counter grabbing her shorts, the top of her fishnets and yanked all of it down past her hips to her knees. Harley gasped, grinned in the mirror at him. Jack smiled at her in the mirror, dragging his hands down her backside just before he slid his fingers between her legs. He stroked her watching her reactions in the mirror. Harley threw her head back, her lips parted as she groaned, thrusting her hips back when Jack's fingers entered her. He grinned watching her expressions in the mirror. He loved the look of abandon on her face, her lips red, the blue of her eyes glowing with desire, his fingers moving in and out of her feeling her warmth and wetness on his hand. She cried out, arching her back with a cry. Jack couldn't continue, he needed to be inside her.

Jack shoved his shorts down and thrust into her without preamble. Harley cried out arching her back, her hands gripping the edge of the counter. Jack buried himself deeply, dropping his hands over hers, their fingers interlacing. Jack thrust hard watching Harley's face in the mirror, watching her body jerk with his hard thrusts. She groaned, gasping when he thrust, her blue eyes locked on his in the mirror. Jack grinned at her, his blue eyes alight with lust. He pressed a kiss to her ear, then her neck, then her shoulder, biting down on the flesh of her shoulder, catching exposed skin and the cloth of her shirt in his teeth, his lipstick leaving red smears on her skin and clothing. The bite hurt, but in a way that sent shivers down her spine. She wanted more.

Harley gasp. “Jack! Harder Jack, harder!”

Jack grinned, looking at her in the mirror, her skin under his teeth, jerking his hips upward burying himself deeply into her. He let go of her shoulder leaning back, continuing to hold one of her hands down with his while he dragged the other hand down her side to her hip. He gripped her hip painfully, only breaking contact with her eyes in the mirror in order to glance down, to look at their bodies connected, to watch the way he slid into and out of her. The way her backside jiggled when he slammed into her. Harley reached behind her with her free hand, grabbing his hip, digging her nails into his flesh, urging him to thrust harder, tearing her nails across his skin leaving bloody marks. Jack's hiss turned to a groan of pleasure at the spike of pain, thrusting harder, pressing her forward against the sink.

Harley cried out, her orgasm rippled through her hard and fast. Jack hissed again, the roller skates caused them both to roll a bit with each thrust. Harley grabbed a hold on the faucet with her free hand, her other hand was being pressed hard against the counter with Jack's hand over hers holding it down against the flat surface, his fingers between hers. Jack wrapped his arm around her waist thrusting hard, the slap of flesh against flesh mixed with the sounds of the music from outside filled the small space. Their eyes met in the mirror. He gazed at the bounce of her breasts, the jump of her pigtails when he slammed into her. Jack grinned, his lipstick smeared along his chin.

“Again Harley, I wanna hear you cum again...” Jack grinned showing all his teeth. He reached up to grip her throat, grabbing her under her jaw. Harley arched her back, her eyes rolling back while Jack pounded against her. She climaxed again with a cry which was drowned out by the sounds of Bohemian Rhapsody playing outside the bathroom door. Jack came with her, shuddering. For a moment he was sure he was going to collapse, his knees felt weak, the skates causing them both to slide forward against the sink. Jack wrapped his arms around her laying his head against her shoulder.

“I love you Harley.” He whispered. “I love you.”

Harley whispered. “I love you puddin...I would die for you. I would do anything for you.”

Jack chuckled, pulling out, causing them both to groan at the loss of contact. He turned her around, one hand going up to grab one of her pigtails and giving it a playful tug.

“I would die for you, but living with you will be far more fun.”

They both burst out into giggles.

It was nearly 8:30 pm when Jack and Harley left the roller rink. They had taken the time to go retrieve their clothing from the bike and change back into what they had been wearing earlier that day. After changing, Jack drove them to a sports store on the corner of 5th and SW Knox St.

*

When they arrived at the sports store, Jack, held Harley's hand as he led her over to where the baseball bats were on display. They had wooden bats, aluminum bats...pretty much anything someone would want in a bat.

Jack grinned. “Pick out whatever you want pumpkin.”
The grin that Harley gave Jack had his heart racing. His little murder kitten, he thought. His little killer. He was so proud of her, pleased with her. He giggled, how could he have been so lucky?

He watched as Harley picked up a bat and swung it, making a face as she did so. Jack leaned against the wall watching her picking up bats and swinging them. She was like a work of art, he thought to himself. The thrill it gave him to see her swinging that bat, imagining what she was going to do it with it sent pleasurable chills up his spine. Harley was on her fifth bat, this one a black aluminum one, and had just started to swing it when a young man came over to them.

He wore a blue polo and black slacks with a name tag that read Kevin. “Hi! I notice you've been trying to choose a bat—maybe I can help you?

Jack narrowed his eyes for a moment at Kevin. The kid couldn't be more than twenty-one, and he seemed harmless enough.

“My sweetie here is looking for a good bat.” Jack smiled.

Harley stopped swinging the one she currently had and used it to lean on as she gave Kevin a once over, though she didn't say anything which unnerved the young man.

“Well, what sport do you play? Baseball, softball...” Kevin looked between the two of them.

Harley grinned. “I want a bat that I could use to smash the head of a rat.”

Jack snorted on a laugh, but didn't say anything.

Kevin swallowed. “Well, ah..I could recommend a good baseball bat.”

Harley grinned. “Okay, whatcha got?”

The young man walked over and pulled a bat from a rack and handed it to Harley. Harley squealed when she saw it. It was painted red with a black handle. She glanced at Jack with a significant look. Jack only smiled. Harley's best colors...

Kevin smiled at Harley's reaction. “Umm...The Northern Yellow Hard Birch is a great bat. It has been proven to be flexible and have a high surface hardness, making it great for rebounding and extremely durable. Bats of this kind are great for both practices and games and you'll find that they don't splinter when broken. Birch is also an excellent choice for a fungo or fly ball hit.” Kevin looked proud of himself when he finished.

Jack and Harley snickered. Kevin had clearly memorized his little pitch for the bat, but Harley didn't care; when she took it from him and swung it, the bat felt “right” in her hands.

“Puddin, I think this one is it!” Harley grinned and swung it again, the bat making a nice “swoosh” sound through the air.

Kevin grinned pleased because this would be over a hundred dollar sale! “Is there anything else I can help you with?”

Jack smiled. “Yes Kevin, there is. I would like a cricket bat.”

Kevin looked between them. “For cricket?”

Jack grinned showing all his teeth. “For rats.”

“Ooh okay...just follow me.” Kevin smiled and led them over to the cricket bat display. He pulled one down. “Well sir, I would say judging by your height...6'2’”?” Jack grinned and nodded. Kevin continued. “You want a long handled bat with a long blade.”

Kevin turned examining the cricket bats that were hung on the wall for display before he pulled one down. “Here sir, try this one. This is a Kookaburra Surge 100, has been handmade using Grade 5 English willow with a Pro Shield Face and painted back.” Again Kevin seemed to have flawlessly repeated his little speech with a smile.

Jack took the bat and held it by the handle. The cricket bat was purple and white with black across the handle. When Jack swung it, he did a nearly perfect cricket batter stance. Kevin smiled wishing to himself...please buy it, that bat would be another hundred and forty dollar sale! His boss might consider him for the assistant manager position if he made this sale!

Jack swung the bat again, a grin spreading across his face. “Perfect. We'll take them both! You my friend Kevin are a very good salesman.”

Kevin beamed with pleasure. “Thank you sir!”

Jack hopped on the bike holding Harley's hand as she climbed on behind him with the bats in her arms. Jack grinned. “How about tomorrow I teach you to drive this motorcycle?”

Harley grinned. “I would love that!”

Jack laughed. “I would like that too! Get to hold onto you while you're driving...sexy.”

They laughed moving through traffic back to the coffee shop.

Bruce laid on his side running his fingers down Selina's back. She purred and snuggled into the pillow. “That feels nice,” she whispered.

Bruce smiled. “Everything you do feels nice.”

Selina chuckled and rolled over onto her side. They were both naked having just made love. Selina reached up and stroked his face thinking to herself...damn him. Damn Bruce Wayne for being such a great guy, sweet, considerate, fantastic in bed...she knew she shouldn't have invited him over, but she just couldn't seem to help herself. As with most things, if it seemed unattainable, she wanted it all the more, but with Bruce, she had him...and still wanted more. That was really bad in her business. Bad for her all around because attachments were dangerous...but...Selina smiled. “Want to stay for breakfast? We could finish discussing the masquerade party for the paintings you're buying.”

Bruce wanted to tell her he couldn't, wanted to give her one of his old excuses he had used on so many women, but he simply couldn't, because unlike all those other women, he did want to stay...

“I would love to Selina.” Bruce smiled laying down and tugging her into his arms. She nestled her head against his chest and wrapped an arm around his waist.

Bruce sighed thinking to himself that maybe Gotham could wait...one night.

Zane had his earbuds in as he walked out the back of the coffee shop, jumping down the steps to throw a bag of trash into the dumpster. There was one weak, backdoor light on over the door to the shop that did little to illuminate the alley. His bike was parked back here too, chained to the dumpster. He sang along to The Strokes as he walked over and lifted the dumpster lid.

“Some people think they're always right
Others are quiet and uptight
Others they seem so very nice nice nice nice (oh-ho)
Inside they might feel sad and wrong (oh no)
Twenty-nine different attributes
Only seven that you like
Twenty ways to see the world (oh-ho)
Twenty ways to start a fight (oh-ho)
Oh don't don't don't get up
I can't see the sunshine
I'll be waiting for you, baby
Cause I'm through Sit me down
Shut me up
I'll calm down
And I'll get along with you...”

Zane was so involved in his singing that he didn't notice the two people standing in the shadows of the alley both of them smiling, a halo of smoke around the two figures. Zane turned, hopping back up the steps to lock the coffee shop door and turned to walk back to his bike, when a shadow lurched at him and something struck him in the knees, the pain almost incomprehensible.

Harley giggled bringing her bat around in a vicious swing and hit him hard enough that his knees made a loud crack, the knee jerking inward at the moment Harley snarled, “I hate that song!”

Zane yelled falling over and off the step to hit the pavement. He started to reach out (for what neither Harley or Jack could guess), but Harley brought her bat down on his arm with a satisfying “thunk” and “crack” accompanied by Zane's scream of pain. Harley quickly put her heeled foot on his mouth smothering any further cries.

Harley looked down at him with a grin. “You upset my puddin. I don't like that.”

Jack walked up to Zane, tapping his cricket bat against the toe of his shoe, taking out his cigarette and blowing a long line of smoke. “You know...Zaaannnnnee...” Jack drew the young barista's name out. “I came all the way back here because your superior attitude and your lecturing others on daaaairrry, was annoying, YET you stated you just didn't have the time to go to a rally against the things you say you despise so much.”

Jack drew the word “dairy” out as he smiled down at Zane while he leaned on his cricket bat, crossing his left foot over his ankle. “See, now I stand by my beliefs. I came ALL the way back here just to kill you. You know why? Because—and it's worth saying again—I stand by my beliefs, Zane. One of which is taking down superior assholes such as yourself who are going to be lecturing others, yet can't stand by his beliefs...I mean...if you're going to be an asshole, commit to it! Go to the fucking rally! Get out there and make yourself heard instead of fucking with peoples orders and trying to make your fellow baristas feel like shit. Don't you agree Harls?”

Harley looked down at the whimpering Zane, her baseball bat on Zane's ear while her shoe was still on his mouth. “I do puddin, I agree completely.”

Jack sighed taking a drag on his cigarette. “Well, considering I want to get home and have sex with my lady again, we are going to hurry this along.” Jack smiled and stepped closer. Zane was looking up at Jack and Harley his eyes wide with fear and pain. “Say goodnight Zane.”

Jack grinned and lifted his cricket bat up over his head with both hands, holding his cigarette between his teeth, a wild grin on his face, just as Harley moved her foot away, Jack brought the bat down before Zane could voice one more protest.

The loud crack that filled the alley was accompanied by the wet sounds of something splattering against the pavement.

Jack laughed, Harley was holding on tightly as they drove home, holding their bloody bats between them.

When they arrived back home, the house was quiet when Jack pulled the motorcycle into the garage. Jack wiped the bike down once they were inside, then the two of them carried their bats with them upstairs to their room.

“I don't know about you hunny bunny, but I had a great day with you.” Jack smiled tossing the bloody bats into a corner to be cleaned later. He kicked his shoes off, pulled his phone out of his jacket pocket and started to strip out of his bloody clothing. He dropped everything into a pile together.

Harley grinned watching him for a long moment. She loved watching him undress, every movement turned her on. She giggled and started taking her sandals off tossing them onto the pile with Jack's clothing and shoes. She pulled her dress off over her head, stripping out of her panties and bra. Jack had already walked naked into the bathroom. She could hear that he had started the water and she could hear the sounds of Doris Day singing.

“Stars shining bright above you

Night breezes seem to whisper I love you

Birds singing in the sycamore tree

Dream a little dream of me
Harley realized it wasn't the sound of the water running for a shower. Harley followed him in to find that Jack was running them a bath...with bubbles!

“A bubble bath puddin’!” Harley clapped her hands which caused Jack to laugh. “Yep! Bubbles!” With that Jack grabbed Harley around the waist lifting her off her feet as he stepped into the tub with her. Harley squealed with delight.

Jack sank down into the water setting Harley down at the same time. Once they were both in the warm silky water, Jack laid back with a groan of contentment. Harley started to move to sit opposite from him, but he grabbed her hand tugging her over to him. “Oh no you don’t, over here with me sweetie.”

Harley giggled and turned to lay back between Jack's legs, her back against his stomach and her head on his chest. Harley sighed happily.

Jack's voice joined Doris Day's, singing along with the music while he held her tight against him. “Stars fading but I linger on, dear
Still craving your kiss
I'm longing to linger till dawn, dear
Just saying this
Sweet dreams till sunbeams find you
Sweet dreams that leave all worries behind you
But in your dreams whatever they be Dream a little dream of me…”

* Jack wrapped an arm around her shoulders leaning down to kiss her ear, then her neck, using his teeth to nibble at her skin, humming the song while he did so. He could see the bruise he had left earlier from their tryst in the bathroom. The bruise made him smile. He then stuck his tongue in her ear which had Harley wiggling and squealing.

Harley giggled loudly. “Jack!”

“What?” Jack's voice brushed across her skin in a warm hushed tone. She could feel the warmth of his smile against her neck. “You're ears are kissable,” Jack whispered. “Just like every part of you. I want to taste every inch of you Harley. I want you on my tongue. I want you always. You belong to me.” His voice dropped lower until she barely heard the last part.

Harley giggled. She could feel his erection against her back. The feel of him made her body ached to be filled with him. Jack leaned in to steal a kiss from her mouth, deepening it until Harley turned fully around to face him.

She shifted her position in order to straddle Jack's lap, wrapping her arms around his neck. Jack pulled her up against him, moving his mouth over hers in a sensual, primal kiss. Jack's hands glided over her wet soapy back, luxuriating in the feel of her wet skin under his hands. She cradled his head, her fingers in his hair, her tongue delving into his mouth. She loved the way he tasted on her tongue. The flavor of Jack's tongue was a mix of expensive alcohol, tobacco and something that made her shiver. He tasted like forbidden fruit and darkness...if madness had a flavor or a scent, it would be Jack Wayne. Harley rubbed against his erection her voice breathless. “You belong to me Jack...always.”

Jack whispered, his hands gliding over her slick rear, “Always Harley. No matter what comes.”

Jack clinched his teeth, his eyes rolling closed while Harley continued to rub against his erection. Jack's breath came in deep pants; she was slick, warm and just when he thought he needed her to stop, Harley slid down on him. Jack groaned throwing his head back against the edge of the tub, his fingers pressing hard into her skin, holding her down on him, feeling her warm wetness engulf him.

Harley couldn't help herself, she needed him. She started rolling her hips, splashing water when she moved a little more vigorously. She slowed her movements down, clenching her muscles around him.

“Jack, my puddin...” she smiled against his mouth easing her thrusts; she wanted this to be slow and exquisite.

Jack groaned, wrapping his arms around her shoulders, one hand sliding down her spine to caress her rear. He held her close while she piston her pelvis in a slow up and down motion. Jack smiled at her pressing his perfect teeth into his bottom lip gazing at her when she pulled back enough to look down at him. Harley loved the way he looked, damp, his hair falling around his features, wet and shining in the bathroom light. He lowered one hand down between them, his thumb pressing on her clitoris. Harley gasped, jerking in response, sitting back, thrusting her hips slowly forward. Jack rolled his thumb against her while Harley continued to move, her hip rolls becoming just a tad faster. Jack hissed with pleasure. “Harls...”

(The music had changed from Doris Day to Halsey's Gasoline.)

Jack grabbed her throat with one hand, pressing his fingers into the delicate skin while squeezing her breast with the other.

Harley hissed, “Yes Jack!”

He growled in response. “Harley, my Harley...”

He thrust upward, meeting her thrusts. She dropped her mouth to his, their tongues playing against each other in a slow delicate dance. Harley pressed her mouth down, moaning into his mouth. Jack responded with his own groan. They climaxed together sharing their cries, their mouths pressed together.

Harley continued to roll her hips, but slower, drawing out their pleasure further. Each movement made Jack moan softly. She ran her fingers over his face tenderly, brushing her lips over his mouth, nose, eyes. Jack closed his eyes smiling, his hands moving slowly up and down her back. “I love you Harls.”
Harley pressed a kiss to his lips. "I love you puddin."

An hour later they were bathed, their bloody clothing bagged up to be disposed of, Jack telling her that he would burn it later. They had cleaned their bats together, leaving them propped in a corner and were now in bed together. Jack had his laptop on his knees with Harley curled beside him.

"So what are you doing puddin?"

"Well, I'm looking at the Gotham Star site to see what I can find out about who took those pictures."

"Oh? Are we going to go kill him? Maybe we could use your formula again?" Harley grinned and Jack laughed. "Look at you! All eager to go killing again."

He kissed the tip of her nose.

Jack was about to say something when his phone vibrated. Jack frowned picked it up and saw Alex's name.

Jack answered. "Hey Alex."

"Jack!! I just found out about a fucking gold mine!" Alex sounded excited.

"Alex, what are you talking about?" Jack closed his laptop gazing at Harley.

"Okay, you gotta come tomorrow. It's a fucking FIGHT CLUB!!" Alex sounded excited.

"What? A fight club? What are you talking about?" Jack frowned, puzzled.

"Okay you and Harley have got to fucking come tomorrow night. It's epic man! And there is money to be made betting on the fighters! It's fucking genius!" Alex chattered excitedly.

"A fight club—who's running it?" Jack asked.

"Fucking Penguin! I mean, sorry. Fucking Cobblepot! He's running out of the basement of that club he just bought, the Iceberg lounge. Anyway, it is brutal man. It's invite only so I'm inviting you and Harley to come with me tomorrow night." Alex chuckled.

"Cobblepot, you don't say? Okay, Harley and I are in." Jack grinned, already thinking.

Alex laughed. "That's fucking great! I knew you would be! Okay, just pick me up tomorrow night around 11 p.m. I'll be at a card game at Amusement Mile...unless you're going to be at the game?"

"No, no I won't be, but we'll pick you up tomorrow. See you then Alex." Jack smiled and hung up. He glanced at Harley with a grin. "I think we are going to be doing something fun tomorrow night."

Chapter End Notes

I have nothing against Vegans!! :)
I'm Meaner than my Demons

Harley was lying on a doctor's couch, but she couldn't remember how she arrived here. She frowned in confusion as she looked around and then looked down at herself; she was wearing her wedding dress. She ran her hands down the dress, a small smile on her face at the thought of marrying Jack. As she looked around, she examined the couch she was lying on. It was a deep mahogany with a couple of worn places on it as well as a handful of missing buttons. The couch reminded her of the old lounger that her thesis adviser, Dr. Bishop had in his office. She remembered him laughing about the old couch telling her it was one of the first things he bought when he started his own practice.

Harley smiled at the memory. He was a kind man who used to like to quote Nietzsche. “One ought to hold on to one's heart; for if one lets it go, one soon loses control of the head too.”

Harley frowned as the words drifted through her mind. She glanced up at the ceiling, her hands lying crossed on her chest trying to figure out where she was. She heard music playing...the Halsey song “Control” a soft whisper, a tickle in her ear floating in the air around her when she heard a woman's voice. Harley smiled to herself; she liked that song...

“Now tell me again, why did you think murdering those people was acceptable?”

Harley jumped a little and frowned at the interruption. The voice was familiar, it sounded like her own. Harley turned her head to see herself sitting in a tall winged-back chair wearing a black pencil skirt, red blouse and white lab coat. Her golden blonde hair was piled onto the top of her head in a professional looking bun, her black framed glasses on the end of her nose.

She held a notepad resting against her knee as she wrote something down with a thin, black pen.

“Murdering? What are you talking about?” Harley pushed herself up to a sitting position.

Harleen smiled. “You deliberately killed three people Harley, that's not even counting what happened in the sewers.”

“I was protecting myself!” Harley protested, but Harleen gave her a steely look. “What about Meg, Walter and Zane? Were you protecting yourself in those cases? Tell me Harley, who is really in control? You—or him?”

Harley frowned as Harleen smiled. “You are past the point of no return Harley. Should you be scared of yourself or him?”

Harley looked down at her wedding dress. It was covered in blood. She heard a soft laugh and turned to see that standing in the dark corner was Jack. He looked handsome, his eyes outlined in black, his lips red, and there was blood on his teeth when he smiled at her. Harley gazed at him longingly whispering to Harleen.

“There is always some madness in love. But there is also always some reason in madness.”

Harleen frowned and glanced over her shoulder to look at Jack. “You will never be able to come back Harleen. He has taken you down a path and you can never come back. Is that what you want? Is he really what you want?”

Harley frowned. “I'm not Harleen anymore. I'm Harley. Harleen is gone.”
Harleen pushed her glasses up her nose, turning back to look at Harley lying on the couch. “Are you even sure this is love? Are you sure he loves you?”

Harley ripped her gaze from Jack. She pushed herself up and stood. She was still in her wedding dress, but now she had her bat in her hand, the one Jack had bought her. She walked closer and stood over Harleen.

Harley smiled down at the other woman. “I have another quote for you, bitch, “When love is not madness it is not love.” That's from Pedro Calderón de la Barca!”

(The tune of Hush Little Baby continued, but Harley heard herself singing to it in a soft whispery voice, the words were completely new...but they spoke to her....)

Hush little baby don't say a word
Mama's gonna kill for you the whole damn world And if the world should wonder why Mama's gonna make it cry and cry
All the weirdos and freaks won't lay a finger on me cause everyone knows who's my baby. Hahahaha!
And if they start to run away,
Momma’s gonna paint the streets with blood.
And once the blood starts to wash off,
Momma’s gonna blow some more heads off.
And if the world still doesn’t laugh,
Momma’s gonna go and poison them.
And once the poison does its job,
Momma’s gonna show you your legacy.
And if the world still tries to fight,
Momma’s gonna burn their houses down.
And if you grow up with his smile,
Momma’s gonna be so…proud of you…..”)

With the lyrics dancing in her head, Harley swung the bat. The wood connected with Harleen's head to the sound of a loud crack and a thunk like a melon splitting open. Blood and brain matter sprayed across Harley's face. She started laughing, her amusement rapidly turning hysterical. That was when the shadow of Jack stepped up behind her to wrap his arms around her waist. He laid his chin against her shoulder, his lips brushing her ear as he whispered softly.

“Find what you love and let it kill you...”

Harley woke up with a start. her heart pounding against her chest hard enough that it hurt. For a split second she didn't know where she was, but she could still hear the tune, a haunting melody that seemed to flow through her mind...

Harley shook her head and looked around frantically trying to grasp onto something that would tell her she wasn't still in that dream. The sunlight was streaming through a break in the curtains, brushing along the floor of the room and across the bed. As Harley calmed down, she saw Jack lying on his side beside her. He was facing her, still asleep. He looked so young and innocent, without a care in the world. Harley smiled and lay back down, letting the soft pillow mold around her, facing Jack, gazing at his handsome face. There was a small smile on his lips in his sleep. She reached out and gently traced the scars now lightly visible on his face that were a reminder from the kidnapping, then along his jaw and over the hint of the tattoo at his neck.

“I love you Jack, no matter what happens, I love you always.” Her voice was a low whisper filled with pain and longing.

She wrapped her arms around Jack. Jack snuggled up against her and murmured in his sleep. She shifted her position moving his head to rest between her breasts and then stroked her fingers through his thick brown hair.

“I don't care Jack. I know I should, but I don't care. I'll follow you anywhere.” Harley closed her eyes and whispered again. After a few moment, she felt the change in his breathing that indicated that he was awake. He shifted his position, his arm slipping around her waist.

“You okay pumpkin?” Jack asked softly, lifting up enough that he could see her face.

Harley opened her eyes to see Jack's blue ones studying her.

“Just a bad dream,” she answered in a hushed tone.

“What kind of bad dream?” Jack asked pressing his forehead lightly against hers. Harley chuckled at him. “Well, there was a lot of quoting Nietzsche, Pedro Calderón de la Barca...you made a quote too, one I didn't know.” Harley spoke softly.

“What was it?” Jack asked as he reached up and ran his fingers through her hair; he shifted his position to pull her into his crook of his arm pushing himself up on his elbow.

Jack gently caressed the side of her neck, his fingers just barely dancing over her skin, his fingertips feather light as he listened to her talk. He dragged his fingertips down to caress the side of her thigh, then back up over her hip.

“You said, 'Find what you love and let it kill you,'” Harley recalled, speaking softly.

Jack laughed. “That's Bukowski, a poet. I've never quoted him to you before?”

Harley shook her head and Jack frowned. “How odd, but I like his work...especially his quotes about love... “Those damn eyes fucked me forever...” Jack laughed dragging his thumb lightly under one of her eyes.

Harley giggled. “Is that a real quote?”

“Yes it is, from his poem The Days Runaway like Wild Horses, so there.” Jack stuck his tongue out at her.

Harley laughed and Jack rolled on top of her nibbling at her neck.

“Love breaks my bones and I laugh...”

Jack whispered before he bit down hard on her collar, his teeth sharp against her skin, sucking on the flesh until she knew he would leave a bruise.

Harley dragged her nails down Jack's back thrusting her hips up at him as she hissed. “I killed myself in the dream with a baseball bat...or at least I killed the me I used to be...bashed her brains in...” Harley giggled at the absurdity.

Jack pressed himself between her legs, biting at her neck and down her to her breasts. He chuckled when she whispered about killing herself in the dream. Before he answered her, he worked at leaving another bruise on her breast causing Harley to groan, reaching up to bury her hands in his hair.

“You just destroyed the part of you that you don't need anymore Harls...you released yourself to be who you truly are...” Jack breathed, his whisper a tickle along the fine hairs of her skin.

Harley groaned feeling Jack thrust teasingly between her legs, the last fragments of her dream falling away. “Who I truly am?” she asked.

Jack flicked his tongue over the nipple of one breast, slowly running his lips over her nipple, tugging with his lips before pressing a kiss down on the sensitive skin.

“Yes...love is merely a madness and you have given yourself over to our love Harley....” Jack squeezed her breasts together, kissing, dragging his lips and tongue over them tenderly, exploring the gentle curves and slopes of her, his thumbs brushing over the hard nipples while his lips moved down her torso, carefully making his way up again, littering her body with kisses.

When his mouth found hers again, Jack reached down between her legs, his fingers stroking against her, diving between her folds. Harley groaned, her body drawn to his touch. Jack smiled against her lips. “Tell me you want me Harls...tell me you need me.”

“Oh Jack, you know I do,” Harley moaned, her fingers sliding across his back feeling the ripple of muscle under her touch. Jack smiled and pushed himself down, dragging his tongue flat across her skin as he did and then moving lower. When he brushed against her stomach with his lips, he open his mouth wide to bite down on her skin. Harley jumped at the feel of his teeth, her hands having moved into his hair. She pulled his hair with a gasp. “Puddin!”

Jack chuckled as he bit his way down lower, pulling at the curling hair at her groin with his lips, then lower still, nestling between her legs. “I want to taste you on my tongue Harley...” He smiled brushing her clitoris with his nose then flicked the tip of his tongue over her sending a jolt of electricity through her body. “Jack...uuhhh...Jack...”

He smiled pressing his lips against her then sucked hard, pulling on her clitoris with his lips. Harley shuddered in pleasure, her fingers tightening in his hair. Jack grinned as he felt the pull on his hair. He sucked slowly causing Harley to shudder again, her body tensing. Jack grinned and whispered... against her, the tickle of his breath sending shivers up her core.

“So pretty Harley…” He chuckled wrapping his arms around her thighs, using the tips of his fingers against her skin to pull back the soft flesh of her folds, widening her for him so that he could run the flat of his tongue against her clitoris in a long, slow drag.

Harley whimpered. “Oh puddin...ohhh...” Her hips arched toward his tongue. Jack giggled, pleased with her reaction. “You want more Harley?”

“Yes Jack, please.” Harley words came out in a shudder.

Jack looked up her torso as he whispered. “Watch me Harley. I want you to watch what I’m doing to you.” His grin widened, touching the tip of his tongue to his upper lip.

Harley swallowed, her cheeks red. She pushed herself up on her elbows, her blonde hair in a mess of tangles that Jack found so appealing. Her eyes met his, gazing down to see his face between her legs, a wicked smile on his face, his blue eyes danced with lust and mischief. His eyes never left her face, as he rolled his tongue over her in a slow figure eight, gliding and caressing her with his tongue, his eyes watching her reactions. He pressed his mouth to her sucking harder, then pulled back to lavish her with his tongue over her clitoris again. He raised his head to meet her eyes, a string of saliva from his tongue to her clitoris connecting them. Harley gasped crying out, jerking her hips as the climax rode over her. “Ooooh...Puddin...”

Jack smiled, pleased with himself. He pressed a kiss to her before he crawled back up her body, pushing her back down against the pillows as he reached between them, brushing her entrance with his erection. She looked up into his eyes; the blue was compelling...pulling her toward him, causing her to fall deeper, spiraling down with Jack. Harley stroked his face, her fingertips running over his lower lip, glistening with her fluids. She smiled rubbing her forefinger back and forth on his bottom lip.

“I’ll go wherever you go Jack, no matter what happens. I will follow you anywhere.”

Jack grinned. “I know Harley...I know.”

Harley raised her legs, spreading them wide for him. Jack slowly eased himself into her, both of them sharing a groan of pleasure, then Jack placed his hands on either side of her head. He hissed with pleasure as her intense heat surrounded him. He leaned forward to press himself deeply into her with a shuddering groan. “Ooo pumpkin...” He grinned and his eyelids fluttered closed for a moment with the feeling of her surrounding him. Harley ran her hands gently down his back, grabbed his rear and pulled him closer, her feet running down the back of his legs while they kissed, sharing their tongues and their breath. Jack rocked his body up and down, staying embedded in her.

He brushed his nose against hers smiling and whispered. “I’ll love you with all the madness in my soul.”

Harley whimpered in delight. “Puddin...”

Jack sat up on his knees, grabbed Harley by her wrists, and pulled her up with him. He wrapped one arm around her waist, his hand pressing into her lower back, splaying his fingers to touch as much of her lower back that he could and provide support. He leaned his weight back on his right arm, thrusting his hips up. Harley groaned, her legs around him and rolling her hips with each of his thrusts. Their panting mixed together as if they were sharing one breath. Harley dragging her hands along the side of his neck staring into his magnetic blue eyes, bouncing in response to each of his thrusts. She was lost in his eyes...Harley suddenly thought of a poem by Sanober Khan she had read in college...in a book called, “Turquoise Dreams.”

“I wish to stay drenched forever in those rain-blue eyes in those...soul-reaching crystals not moving a muscle or breathing just savoring this turquoise ache against my heart.”

That was exactly how Harley felt...she wanted to live forever in Jack's gaze.

Harley had wrapped her legs around him, but now she moved her legs to sit on her knees and started to bounce on Jack's shaft, rolling her hips at the same time giving herself over to the pleasure of feeling him inside her, of knowing he was completely hers. She loved him with her very soul and Jack belonged to her...he was her other half and nothing—murder, death, madness...none of those things would change that...he was hers.

Jack hissed, pressing his teeth hard into his bottom lip, watching her breasts bounce with her movements that were becoming faster, almost frantic. She had started out slow, but her fucking was becoming faster, harder, desperate. Harley dug her nails into his shoulders, gasping for breath, the ripples of pleasure seemed to move in a constant state between them, a neverending circuit of heightened pleasure that blinded them both to anything but each other, until both of them climaxed together, their cries mixing together in one passionate sound, their bodies becoming rigid for a second, paralyzed in ecstasy. Harley wrapped herself around Jack while he pressed hard into her, wanting to be as close to her as he possibly could.

Harley groaned dropping her head to his, pressing her forehead against him. Jack smiled reaching up to stroke her face lovingly, delicately brushing long strands of gold behind her ears, away from her face so he could gaze at her.

“No more bad dreams my sweetling...you're safe with me, always.” Jack chuckled, grabbed her and dropped her onto her back with him on top of her, careful to stay within her.

Harley laughed. “You're right...no more bad dreams.”

Jack grinned and scraped his teeth delicately along her chin with a whispered. “My girl, always. My girl.”

Later that afternoon, with her hair gathered at the nape of her neck and falling down her back in a long golden ponytail, Harley stood outside waiting. She had a helmet on her head, a purple one that was an old one of Jack's, the visor up, wearing a pair of jeans, red tennis shoes, and an over-sized purple T-shirt (that belonged to Jack too.) She had it tied so the shirt set around her waist displaying just a hint of her stomach. She was wearing her knee and elbow pads from roller skating, and a pair of black leather driving gloves. Her lips were painted a light bombshell pink and she had done her eye make-up with soft purples and her eyeliner with a thin cat-eye. She was looking and feeling good. She was rocking on her feet, her hands in her front pockets humming the lullaby from her dream to herself as she waited for Jack.

A couple of minutes later, Jack came around the side of the house pushing a motorcycle (not the one that they had been using, but a much older bike). He was wearing a pair of jeans too, which was extremely unusual for him and had Harley salivating. The jeans made his rear even more bite-able she thought as he shoved the bike up beside her and turned a bit to put the kickstand down. He wore biker boots (which Harley also found was a new turn on) and a white t-shirt that read “My most expensive shirt” across the chest, along with his own pair of purple driving gloves. He had his round purple lensed sunglasses on and a cigarette dangling from his lips. He stopped beside her grinning.

Jack pulled the cigarette out and blew smoke upward into the air.
“This was my first bike. When I wouldn't give up on wanting to learn to drive a motorcycle Alfred gave me this one. It's a Honda CB250. Alfred said he bought it in...I think he said 1968. It was his first bike.”

Harley giggled. “Alfred on a motorcycle?”

Jack grinned. “Apparently he used to be a wild man. I have heard there are actual pictures of him on the bike, but I have yet to find them.” Jack giggled wagging his eyebrow conspiratorially at her. “And believe me, I tried to find them, but that man could be a spy! Wherever they are hidden, they remain safe.” They both laughed. Jack then directed her attention back to the bike. “Anyway, he gave me the bike when I was sixteen, taught me how to ride even though Bruce thought it was a bad idea.”

Harley frowned, stepping closer and running her hands over the seat of the bike. The body of the motorcycle was a light blue with the flat, black leather seat that would make it more comfortable for her to learn. “Seems like Bruce thinks anything you want to do is a bad idea,” Harley said softly.

Jack snorted. “Tell me about it. Don’t know if he is being over-protective or an asshole. Probably a little bit of both.” Jack smiled and patted the seat. “Come on pumpkin, on you go.”

Harley smiled at him and Jack found himself staring at her. She was beautiful, looking adorable with the helmet on, the visor up so he could see her lovely face framed in purple. Jack grinned, hopelessly in love with her. She hopped onto the bike, throwing her leg over and adjusting her position. Jack watched her wiggling her rear around as she searched for a comfortable spot. It was very entertaining.

“Okay, so what do I do?” she asked glancing sideways.

Jack smiled, tearing his attention away from her backside, running his left hand up and down her back as he spoke, taking a drag on the cigarette. “Okay, you know how to drive a stick shift?”

Harley nodded. “Yep, learned from a friend in college.”

Jack nodded. “Good, then this will be easy for you. Okay....first let’s turn the bike on.”

As Jack spoke he pointed at the bike’s key ignition at the same time that he tossed the last nub of cigarette down on the driveway, crushing it with the toe of his shoe. Jack pointed. “You want to hold the clutch in.” He pointed at the handle on the left, showing her the clutch. Harley turned the key then settled back on the seat.

“And you want to kick start, here on the right, then give the bike some gas.” Jack pointed at the right grip. “Twist back and that increases the fuel flow, just like a gas pedal in a car.” Harley twisted the grip back and then jammed her foot down on the kick start pedal, smiling when the motorcycle engine roared to life, feeling the purr of the engine between her legs. Jack smiled and caressed her back. “Okay, now put the bike in gear...” He pointed at the gear lever by her left foot. “Press upward with your toe once to put it into first gear. Give it a little gas again.” Harley did as Jack instructed. “Now while giving it gas, slowly let the clutch out. You don’t want to do it quickly or you're going to go zipping down the drive way faster than you want.”

Harley started to release the clutch very slowly. Jack nodded in approval. “Okay, just slowly start moving, place your feet here and here.” Jack pointed. “Hold them there like you would in a car on the gas and the brake.”

Harley did as Jack told her, the bike moving slowly down the driveway. Jack jogged beside her.
“Good, good. You're doing great sweetie!”

Alfred had been in the front entry sweeping when he heard Jack's and Harley's voices through the door and the purr of a familiar engine. He opened the front door to see Jack jogging beside Harleen, the two of them heading down the driveway as Jack taught her to drive Alfred's old motorcycle. The older man smiled. He remembered doing almost the exact same thing while teaching Master Jack. Alfred shook his head with a smile before he slowly closed the door.

Harley was grinning brightly behind the visor. She made it all the way down the driveway to the gated entrance to the estate without mishap.

Jack clapped. “There ya go! Okay, you want to try it a little faster?”

Harley giggled. “Yeah, okay.”

Just as she turned the bike around (with a little assistance from Jack), a police car pulled up at the gate. One of the police officers stepped out of the car; Jack saw him from the corner of his eye recognizing officer Frost from that night Jack and Harley had ended up in jail, but Jack's attention was quickly brought back to Harley. She had adjusted herself on the bike, but this time, before Jack could stop her, she let off the clutch a little too quickly.

Jack yelped as Harley suddenly zipped away from him. Harley let out a squeak of surprise, the bike racing swiftly up the driveway, leaving Jack behind. She struggled, trying to slow the bike down, but she was panicking just a little. She twisted the wheel too hard to the right, and the bike fell over; she and the bike skidded across the gravel that was part of the driveway this close to the gate, then over the pavement. Harley let go of the handles just as the bike and she fell over skidding across the drive throwing bits of gravel up in the air and across Harley. Harley rolled to a stop off of the pavement and into the grass.

Jack yelled, “HARLEY!” taking off at a run after her.

Jack dropped down next to her running his hands over her, yanking the helmet off and grabbing her face gently in his hands. “Harley! Harley are you alright?”

Harley was giggling. She eased up with Jack carefully helping her to a sitting position as she muttered, “Oops.”

Jack held her face between her hands. “Are you all right?”

Harley grinned. “Just a few scrapes, bruises and my pride.”

Jack laughed, tugging her face close for a kiss. He didn't stop at a simple kiss of relief, but kissed her passionately. Harley moaned against his lips. “Mmm....” reaching her arms around him. That was when they heard Officer Frost call out. “Ah, you okay miss?”

Jack helped her to her feet before picking up the bike, while Harley grabbed the helmet, and walked back to the gate. Harley smiled. “Yeah, I'm fine, thank you.”

Jack was grinning at her, pride clear in his expression, before he turned his attention back to the officer. “What can I do for you Officer Frost.”
Frost looked surprised. “You remember me?”

Jack smiled. “You laughed at my joke, of course I remember you.”

Frost grinned before his smile dropped. “I’m to serve you with a summons to appear in court.” He handed the envelope through the gate. Jack took the envelope opening it up. It was a summons to appear in court on the charge of vandalism...from the Randells.

Jack rolled his eyes handing the summons to Harley who read it over. Jack smiled. “Thanks Officer Frost.”

Frost tilted his hat at Jack and Harley. “Nice to see you two again; sorry it was under these circumstances.”

Jack waved it away. “Don't you worry about it, just doing your job.”

Back at the house, Jack threw the summons onto a table, promptly forgetting all about it as he led Harley to Alfred's miniature doctor's office. He made her hop onto the examination table so he could examine her wounds.

Harley sighed. “I'm fine Jack.”

Jack narrowed his eyes at her as he removed her elbow guards for her, inspecting the scrape along her forearm.

“I'll be the judge of that Harls. Sit...by the way...” He grinned. “Nurses uniform.” He said the phrase with a decidedly lustful look in his eyes. Harley chuckled blushing before she let out a small, “Ouch” when Jack touched her forearm. She had scraped the skin off one small patch of her left arm. It wasn't huge or deep, but it would require a bandage. While Jack worked on cleaning the small wound Harley asked, “So what are you going to do about the summons?”

Harley tilted her head then hissed as Jack dabbed some antiseptic on the scrape. “Ow!”

“Take your pants off,” he ordered, tossing the cotton ball he had used to apply the antiseptic into the trash.

“Oh Jack, in here?” Harley giggled.

Jack's smile was wide. “Don't give me any ideas toots. And no, I want to check your legs.”

Harley hopped off the table, removing her knee pads and shimmied out of her jeans. Jack crouched down to inspect her legs. “I haven't decided yet. I'll pay the fine just to get the courts out of it, but I haven't thought of a way to take care of Troy and Tiffany yet. But I will.”

He cleaned a few nicks and scrapes Harley had, nothing major and gingerly touched a spot on her upper thigh where she hit the gravel. “That is going to leave a nasty bruise.” He murmured softly. Harley held her t-shirt up looking down. “Eww...yeah...”
Jack smiled and placed a gentle kiss on the bruise's location lifting her leg to place another one on her thigh, then her knee. “I think that is enough motorcycle training today. How about we clean up and have lunch. Though if you want to run around in my shirt and your panties I will not complain at all!” Jack gave her a wide grin with a goofy eyebrow waggle.

Harley laughed. “Jack! I don't think Alfred would appreciate it.”

Jack giggled. “Oh, I don't know about that...anyway... I thought maybe we could talk about our wedding.” Jack waggled his eyebrows again, grinning brightly. Harley blushed with pleasure, the warmth of feeling that ran through her filled her with happiness...banishing any lingering feelings still with her from the dream. Jack took her hand helping her down off the examination table and together they headed upstairs to change for lunch.

Across town at the auction house, Bruce, with Selina, were finalizing Bruce's purchases of the paintings. He had ended up buying three of them, the most expensive being Pablo Picasso's Nude, Green Leaves and Bust, which he had paid over 106 million for...It was to be the highlight of the party he was planning with Selina. They had decided to hold the party the following weekend at Wayne Manor, then on Monday he was to make a public donation of the painting to the Gotham Art Museum in his mother's name along with the donations from the party this weekend.

It had been a while since Bruce had held a party at his home, but he agreed with Selina, it would be nice...as long as there was no trouble from Jack and Harley. Bruce sighed as the thought of them being photographed having public sex at the party came to mind. That would be just the sort of publicity his donation didn't need. Bruce sighed making the final transfer of funds and signing papers to arrange for the transfer of the paintings, as well as hiring security and a million other little details he would have to take care of between now and the weekend of the party, sending out invitations, catering...

Selina smiled, watching Bruce as she leaned her head on his shoulder, her arms wrapped around him. So far everything had gone according to plan...except her stupid, stupid feelings. Selina sighed as she reached up and stroked her fingers along Bruce's jaw. “Let me help you with the details Bruce.”

Bruce frowned looking down at her, kissing the tip of her fingers. “Are you sure?”

Selina smiled. “I would love to—planning parties is fun!”

Jack, now dressed in a pair of light khaki colored slacks, a white button-down shirt that he had tucked into the slacks, light brown belt and a navy and light blue striped vest, which he had buttoned up, was pulling some white porcelain salad bowls down from the cabinet while Harley, dressed in a pair of red denim shorts and a light blue with red flowered, racer back, rayon sleeveless top, was pulling down some heavy base highball glasses for some freshly made iced tea. Alfred smiled watching the two of them setting up lunch for the three of them at what Alfred now referred to as their counter.

They had asked him to eat lunch with them to discuss their wedding. Alfred was stirring a large bowl, making an arugula, dried cherry and wild rice salad with a lemon dressing (which was separate and in its owns small ceramic pitcher already on the table.) He sprinkled some fresh shaved almonds over the salad and walked over to set it on the counter. Jack was setting the bowls down, turning on the balls of his feet like a dancer and grabbing the drawer with the silverware while Harley danced her way over to the refrigerator to pull out the glass pitcher of tea and set it down on the counter. Alfred grabbed a few napkins to lay them at the side of each bowl.

He used a spoon to scoop out the rice and arugula mix into each of their bowls. Jack pulled out Harley’s stool for her and brushed the back of his fingers along her cheek before he took his own seat, Alfred and Jack faced each other with Harley between them.

“This looks fantastic Alfred.” Jack smiled as he mixed his salad, after having poured some of the lemon dressing onto his meal.

Harley smiled in agreement. “It does Alfred, thank you.”

Alfred smiled with a slight blush on his cheeks. “Thank you both.”

Harley took a bite making a groan of pleasure. “Oh, this is so good!”

Jack chuckled around a mouthful of rice and dried cherries. Alfred took a small bite and smiled. “So what do you need my help with Master Jack, Miss Harleen? Have you settled on a date yet?”

Jack took a sip of his tea. “Well, I was hoping for next month, but I want a huge wedding. I want all of Gotham to see us.” Jack grinned. “A huge spectacular on the back lawn with lots and lots of flowers, balloons and the biggest cake Gotham has ever seen!”

Harley giggled and glanced at Alfred. “I think he is starting to realized he can't do all that by next month. I mean we have my dress, but Jack needs a suit, a cake, balloons...”

Alfred chuckled and nodded. “Indeed. So when would be a good date? I believe we could plan the wedding for a few months from now, if you perhaps hired a wedding planner?”

Jack pouted stirring his food. “Months?” He sighed, clearly disappointed, but then in the next instant it was clear that Jack had an idea. “We could have an engagement party before then.” Alfred and Harley silently watched Jack and waited since it was clear he wasn't done. It was almost as if the two of them could see the gears moving in Jack's head as he smiled. “What about Halloween for our wedding?”

Harley and Alfred stared at him. “Halloween sir?” Alfred asked with a tone of confusion.

“I don’t mean we have to have to wedding on Halloween, but what about October? That's less than four months away, that should give us plenty of time to get everything in order for a full on spectacle of a wedding! And before that we could have a huge blowout of an engagement party right here in the manor!” Jack grinned brightly, gazing across the counter at Harley. She giggled.

Alfred smiled looking between the two of them. “I think that is, as they say, doable sir, to both ideas.

Jack pushed his seat up and rushed around to pull Harley to her feet and into his arms, covering her mouth with his while Alfred looked away smiling.

Jack cradled the back of Harley's head in his hand, his other hand tight around her waist. Harley wrapped her arms around his neck holding on until Jack finally pulled away to let her breathe.

“Soon you are going to be my wife...Mrs. Jack Wayne...” Jack dropped his voice lower so only Harley could hear him. “My one and only madness...”

Harley traced her fingers along the lines of his face. “Til death do us part Jack.”
Jack sighed smiling happily. “Maybe we should get married on Halloween Harls. I mean, what better holiday for us to be married on than one where we get to dress up?”

Harley giggled glancing over at Alfred. “What do you think?”

Alfred smiled. “Well, Halloween always was Master Jack’s favorite holiday as a child.”

“Then it’s settled!! Halloween it is!! The day I’m going to marry the best girl in the world! My soul mate, my other half...my partner in crime!”

With that Jack wrapped an arm around Harley’s waist, grabbing her right hand in his and started to dance her across the kitchen like Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, both of them laughing together. Alfred smiled thinking to himself it was so nice to have one of the Wayne brothers happy for once.

Alfred smiled watching the two of them for a couple of moments before he spoke. “Though we could have the engagement party in the next few weeks Master Jack. If you and Miss Harleen would like...”

Jack and Harley turned to face Alfred both of them grinning like happy children. Jack let go of Harley and yanked Alfred to his feet. “You are a genius Alfie!! Yes!!” Jack put his arms around both Harley and Alfred dancing them in a circle. “It will be epic!!”

Harley laughed with joy. Never in her life had she felt so happy, so loved and in love...and free. Jack was right...she was free...she was finally her new self.

Later that afternoon the two of them had retreated to their room, Jack deciding that it would be fun to play some games until it was time for them to go pick up Alex and check out this “fight club” he had called them about last night.

Jack had taken the time to hang their cleaned “weapons” on the wall, his cricket bat and her baseball bat side by side next to the desk in his room. The bag of bloody clothing had been shoved under the bed for later disposal; right now they were playing a game together while they made a list of things they wanted at their wedding.

Harley laid on the bed with her hands behind her head and watched Jack finish hanging their 'weapons' when she murmured, “Jack, how would you feel if I decorated my bat?”

Jack had just settled the cricket bat onto its hooks. He turned around. “How?”

“I don’t know, but I think it needs something...like...'good night' written across it...” she giggled. Jack jumped down from the footstool he had been standing on and walked over to throw himself down on his stomach across the bed beside her, kicking his shoes off at the same time. “I like it...'good night'...then WHACK!” Jack giggled.

Harley grinned humming softly and started to sing under her breath.

“Hush little baby, don’t say a word.
Momma’s gonna kill for you the whole damn world.
And if they don’t laugh at our jokes,
Momma’s gonna stab out their goddamn throats

Hush little baby, don’t say a word.

Momma’s gonna kill for you the whole damn world.

And if they don’t laugh at our jokes,

Momma’s gonna stab out their goddamn throats.

All the weirdos and freaks won’t

lay a finger on me cause everyone knows who’s my baby, hahaha!

Harley started giggling. Jack scooted closer wrapping an arm around her waist. “What's that?” he asked softly pressing his lips to her ear.

Harley shrugged and brought one hand from under her head to stroke his face idly, tucking his hair behind his ears. “I don't know...just making it up I suppose. I heard something similar in my dream.”

Her voice sounded slightly lost when she spoke. Jack kissed her cheek, then pressed his lips against her cheek hard and blew, making a terrible noise. The vibration tickled causing Harley to squeal. “PUDDIN!!”

Jack giggled. “Come here you!” He rolled on top of her, grabbing her arms and pinning them over her head. “You are going to play twister with me and get into some really sexually explicit positions...” He grinned wickedly.

Harley laughed bouncing her hips trying to dislodge him. “Puddin!” She smiled softly at him, her gaze full of love. “Off!!” She giggled. But Jack only held her down and nibbled on her chin making her giggle more.

“Oh no you don't my little harlequin. You will never get rid of me!” Jack laughed.

Harley laughed. “I don't ever want to get rid of you my puddin.”

Jack grinned staring down at her. He brushed his nose against hers and whispered.

“If love is madness may I never find sanity again my harlequin.”

Half an hour later, Jack, with a cigarette in his mouth, had cleared the space in the middle of their room and had laid out a Twister game mat on the floor.

Harley was sitting on the edge of the bed, kicking her bare feet against the side of the bed tapping out a tune with her heels as she watched Jack. “Twister?” she inquired skeptically.

Jack grinned at her and winked. “Yep, Twister,” he said as he took the cigarette out and put it out in the ashtray sitting on the floor next to him. He picked the ashtray up, placing it on the table out of the way, and gave her a wicked little boy look that had Harley giggling.
Jack set the spinner on the floor next to the mat, and another spinner with numbers from another boxed game and dropped his cellphone beside both spinners after setting it to play some music. The sound of The Flamingos filtered through the cellphone's speaker. Jack started to sing under his breath.

“My love must be a kind of blind love
I can't see anyone but you
Sha bop sha bop
Sha bop sha bop
Are the stars out tonight
I don't know if it's cloudy or bright
I only have eyes for you dear
Sha bop sha bop
The moon may be high
Sha bop sha bop
But I can't see a thing in the sky
I only have eyes for you....”

He grinned and reached out for Harley's hand. She hopped off the bed as Jack pulled her into his arms and danced her in a circle once before he stopped singing, then tugged her down to the floor where they both sat crossed-legged while the music continued to play in the background.

Harley laughed making herself comfortable. She frowned picking up the spinner with the numbers. “Why do you have this one?”

Jack shrugged. “Don't remember actually, it was just in the box too.” Jack spun the numbered spinner.

“Oh, I know another way we can play that game!”

Jack grinned playfully at her. Harley scooted closer to Jack playing with the numbered spinner. “How about we spin it and whoever gets closest to ten goes first?”

Harley giggled and mock smacked him on the shoulder. “Just spin it.”
Jack chuckled. “Fine, evil woman.”

Jack spun the spinner, glancing at her and grinned.

After about fifteen minutes, Harley was on her back, her left foot on green, her right foot on yellow, her right hand on blue and her left hand on red. Jack was on top of her, his left hand on blue, right on yellow so that his face was in between her legs.

He was grinning. “Now this is a very interesting situation I find myself in.”

Harley giggled. She couldn't see where Jack's legs were, but she had a pretty good idea that he was cheating. Jack licked her thigh causing her to shiver.

“Don't you do it Jack!” Harley giggled trying to hold her position.

“Do what?” Jack smirked and bit her. Harley squeaked collapsing on the mat.

Jack grinned. “Oh, I should have thought to play this game naked! I'm such a fool!”

Jack flopped down on her burying his head between her legs, rubbing his face back and forth vigorously against her groin. Harley gasped, laughing at the same time, the pressure of his mouth against her, the feel of him, heat of his breath against her skin—even through her shorts—traveled through to excite her.

Jack wrapped his arms around her waist, moving his mouth up and down on the cloth of her shorts, providing enough pressure that Harley groaned and threw her head back. Jack giggled against her, grabbed her thighs, his fingers pressing into the soft silky skin, pressing his mouth harder. The heat of his breath and pressure from his mouth made her groan and drop her back against the floor, and then Jack's phone rang. The ring tone was Bruce's. Jack ignored it for a few seconds, transferring his mouth to the exposed skin of her inner thigh, running the flat of his tongue along her skin, tasting the slight salty favor, the silken softness of her flesh against his mouth. Harley's hand had just reached down to grab a fistful of his hair when the phone rang again...and again...and again.

Jack growled and stopped what he was doing to sit up and grab his phone. “What on earth could Bruce want?” he muttered. “We haven't done anything illegal or morally shocking today...” he added with a smirk.

Jack hit the button. “Bruce, I'm a little busy...” Harley sat up watching Jack on the phone. His expression went from annoyed to pleased in a couple of beats. Jack grinned as his eyes met Harley's gaze. “A costume party? Are you serious? Selina? Tell her I love her!” Harley's eyes widened and she sat up fully to smack Jack in the shoulder.

Jack laughed yelping. “Ouch! No sorry, Harley smacked me for saying I love Selina. Ouch! She just did it again!” Harley growled playfully and smacked Jack hard with her fist in his shoulder. “Sure Bruce. No, no, not a problem. Harley and I don't have plans until tonight. Yes. Okay, will do. Sure, bye.”

Jack disconnected the call with a grin. Harley frowned. “What was that all about?”

Jack shook his head in amazement. “Bruce is going to throw a costume party. It's a party slash fundraiser for the Gotham Art Museum. He bought a bunch of paintings at that auction he mentioned and Selina Kyle convinced him to throw a party! A costume party! You know what that means?”
Harley grinned. “Oh, so that's why you love her, eh?”

Jack tackled Harley. She squealed fighting him off with some fairly aggressive punches, kicking her legs as well, but Jack used his own legs, wrapping them around hers, pinning them together. Jack managed to twist her around, forcing her onto her stomach rather painfully, wrinkling up the Twister plastic sheet under them and pinned her arms against the small of her back just before he sat on her rear.

Jack growled playfully in her ear. “I win...” He hissed and grabbed her earlobe with his teeth. He pulled just a little. The whole situation had Harley groaning with need. Jack giggled. “Oh this is giving me all sorts of fun ideas Harley.” Jack licked her ear. Harley squirmed giggling. “It means...” he licked her ear again. “It means we get to dress up!”

Harley grinned. Jack released her, rolling off of her and pulling her into his arms. Harley nuzzled against his chest, but not before she smacked his cheek hard, yet playfully. “Costumes? What would we dress up as?”

Jack was smiling. “Bonnie and Clyde my sweets, Bonnie and Clyde!”

Harley laughed. “I love it! Was that why Bruce called, to tell you about that?”

Jack shook his head. “Nope, he asked if we could go pick up the invitations for him at the printer. Guess he isn't going to have time and Alfred is already doing something else in regards to the party. Thought it might be fun to go pick them up. We could look at designs while we're there for our invites since we are going to need them for the engagement party AND the wedding. Mark one item off the list! And that means also we get to stop at Milano's to get some costumes!”

Harley smiled, closing her eyes for a moment as the thought of her marrying him washed over her again. She was going to be Mrs. Jack Wayne...then her eyes popped open with a grin. “Milano's! We can tell him we're engaged too!”

Jack laughed. “Oh God, he will be excited! Though he is going to be upset about not helping with the dress.” Jack moved to let Harley up.

“Maybe he could help you with what you're going to wear?” Harley asked.

Jack grinned. “That's a perfect solution. And he could help with outfits for our engagement party we need to plan as well.”

Harley beamed. “We could have a 1920's speakeasy themed engagement party.”

Jack stared at her for a moment with no expression at all. For a moment Harley thought she had said something wrong, but then Jack's face slowly transformed into a huge, almost maniacal smile of glee. “Woman, you are the most brilliant person I know next to me!”

Jack tackled her again, covering her face in kisses, which changed to biting and soon morphed into some highly intense sex with Harley on her stomach and Jack pressing her against the plastic sheet.

They both changed clothes before heading out to the printers. Jack was wearing a three piece white linen suit with a light blue button down shirt underneath, minus a tie, with a pair of black and white brogue wingtip oxfords along with a pair of white leather gloves. Harley wore a white skater dress with a circle neckline and a pair of barely there red suede heeled sandals that had a thin strap around the ankle. Her hair was braided in a soft rope braid along the side of her head.
Jack took her to the garage with him to pick out their ride for the day. They were walking along holding hands, examining each of the cars as they went by them. It still amazed her how many vehicles the Waynes actually owned. She was sure that some of them had probably belonged to their parents, but there had to be nearly two hundred or more vehicles in this house-size garage alone. One day Harley swore she was going to have Jack tell her exactly how many they owned.

Jack swung her hand as they walked inspecting cars until he stopped in front of a convertible Porsche 911, a silver and black car with steel grey leather seats. The car had a light film of dust on it which demonstrated that the vehicle hadn't moved from its current location in a while.

“Oh look at the poor thing will you Harley? She hasn't been out in a long time?” Jack ran the flat of his hand along the hood of the car creating a streak through the thin layer of dust. He blew on the fingers of his white glove.

Harley laughed. “She?”

Jack nodded. “Bruce bought this one after a model named Bianca dumped him, at least that's what the papers said; it was as a gift to himself to cover the pain of their break up” Jack put his hand to his breast in a theatrical pronouncement of his brother's broken heart.

Jack laughed and continued. “The press clearly doesn't know my brother's track record with women well. Anyhow, Bruce drove it around for a few weeks before he met this newspaper reporter...Jill Alexander. I think that was her name...anyway, after that he stopped driving her.”

Harley walked over and touched the car, the smooth lines flowed under her fingertips. She grinned and drew a heart in the dust. “So it's a she because Bruce bought it after a woman dumped him?” Harley asked.

“Nah, she just looks like a she to me.” Jack grinned at her. “ I think it's time we took her out for a spin don't you Harls?” Jack smiled with a wink at Harley before he walked away heading over to the safe where the keys were kept. Harley watched him go, disappearing and reappearing in the garage lights like a spook. The lights reflected off the white suit making him look ethereal. A few minutes later Jack came strolling back holding the keys up and jiggling them.

“All right Harls, let's go!”

Selina stood beside Bruce, watching as he spoke with the caterer. They had arrived here just half an hour ago and had been talking food nonstop since they arrived. He was smiling and talking to the young woman who she could tell was staring at Bruce with open mouthed admiration, though Bruce seemed completely unaware of the young woman's attraction. He was discussing the menu for the party, pointing out some things that he want served, cocktail services as well as chef stations. He had already stated that he would be providing the alcohol himself from the Wayne cellars, but that he would need a bartender, maybe two. The conversation had moved from drinks to food. Now Bruce was talking about the baked brie and puffed pastries that were going to be served as well as a list of other foods. Selina's attention was diverted when she thought she saw a flash through the front display window of the caterers.

She glanced over toward the window while Bruce was discussing whether or not to have classic shrimp cocktails served at the party. If he noticed, he made no indication, which she supposed was normal for him. Bruce Wayne was in the papers a great deal, constantly being photographed. Selina narrowed her eyes as she looked out the window. She didn't see anyone at first, but then as she continued to stare out the window, she saw movement across the street. A woman slipped out from behind a tree; that was when she saw Vicki Vale.

“Shit,” Selina thought to herself, quickly shifting her position in order to make it difficult for anyone to take her picture. They would see a dark-haired woman holding onto Bruce's arm, but that would be it. Not that anyone seeing her would necessarily draw any lines between her and her persona, Catwoman master thief, but there was no point in taking any chances...

Jack pulled up in front of the printers, taking his sunglasses off to turn and examine the place. It was a small little son and pop store, one of the few still around. That the place had still managed to stay in business in Gotham despite the online printers and big chain stores was a credit either to their work or their tenacity. The place was located in a corner store in one of the older buildings in Gotham, still retaining that old storefront look that dated back to the early 1900's. The place was called The Calendar Man's Space. Jack hopped out of the car and walked swiftly, his long legs getting him quickly around the car so he could open the door for Harley. Jack took her hand, completely ignoring the stares they were receiving from passersby. They cut quite the dramatic figures in their all white outfits. Jack led Harley inside, holding her hand in his as he pushed the door open for her.

The bald man behind the counter looked up from what he had been doing with a smile. “Good day. I'm Julian Gregory Day, how may I help you two?”

“Well, Julian Gregory Day, we are here to pick up some invitations my brother ordered earlier this afternoon, and we were hoping to discuss wedding invitations and invitations for our engagement party while we are here.” Jack put a hand on the clear glass counter and leaned toward Mr. Day with a grin.

Day smiled brightly. “Oh yes, that was quite a large order from Mr. Wayne and he wanted them within hours instad of days. Quite the rush, but I think he will be happy. He did call to say his brother was picking them up. May I see some ID?”

“Of course.” Jack pulled his wallet out to show his drivers license. “Very good Mr. Wayne. I shall retrieve those from the back. If you wish, I have several binders with examples of the types of wedding invitations I can do. Why don't you and your lovely fiancee take a look while I retrieve the invitations?” Day smiled, indicating a table in the corner. Jack nodded and walked over to where Day had a small table and two chairs set up along with four heavy binders of sample invitations and other types of print work. Harley sat down after Jack pulled her chair out, each of them grabbing a binder to flip through.

Jack laughed softly after only a few moments of perusing his binder. “Some of these are just ridiculous.”

Harley grinned. “Oh I don't know, maybe gold with an individual diamond on each invitation is just not enough...” Harley turned the binder around to show Jack. The invitation was “classy” with laser cutting, gold paper and one teardrop shaped diamond on the invite. Jack grimaced. “Can you imagine having to bribe your guests with a diamond to come to your wedding?”

Harley laughed. “It's unique though.”

“True, true...oh Harley, what about this one?” Jack turned the binder he had in front of him around to show her. The invitation was laser cut in white and gold, an intricate 3d castle design. It was quite stunning Harley thought as she looked at it. Jack pointed. “It says here that you can have any design you want. What about a carnival? You know a Ferris wheel with a carousel? Oh or these for our engagement party?” Jack flipped the page over showing her an invitation that was done in a style of a flier announcing a speakeasy party in a Metropolis style of lettering. The invitation included silhouettes of a man and woman in twenties style clothing.

Harley stared at the invitations, she was about to say something when the bell over the door jingled and another couple walked in.

Harley and Jack turned. Jack muttered under his breath, “Fuck me running and call me Susan.”

Troy and Tiffany Randell stepped into the shop. Harley's eyes widened. What were the fucking chances?! She thought looking over at Jack. Jack's eyes narrowed, though he smiled. “Now this isn't funny?” he whispered.

Troy and Tiffany saw Jack and Harley a split second after Jack and Harley had spied them. Troy stepped forward. “YOU!”

Jack stood up taking Harley's hand as he did so with a broad smile. “Yep. Me and don't forget my darling fiancee.”

Troy started to stomp forward, but Tiffany grabbed his arm. “Not here Troy! Not here!”

Troy hissed. “You low class fucker! I got you on film trashing our house!”

Jack and Harley both laughed. Jack smiled as Harley, who had laid her hands on Jack's shoulder leaned against him and smiled coyly at the Randells.

“Aww, now Troy honey, you hurt my feelings! Oh, a little bit of toilet paper and plastic wrap ruined your home? Seriously?” Jack gave Troy an expression of mock distress.

Troy hissed again. “I'm going to make you pay for what you did!”

Jack laughed. “Oh Troy, I'm so scared. Aren't I scared Harls?”

“Just terrified puddin.” Harley giggled.

Troy narrowed his eyes still letting Tiffany hold him back (though it was clear to both Jack and Harley that Troy wasn't really trying hard to get at the two of them.) Jack gave Troy a mock frown. “Does this mean we can't be besties anymore? I thought we were going to share everything, but now those dreams of being best friends are dashed. Oh darling, you have broken me!” Jack giggled putting the back of his hand to his forehead. Harley burst out laughing, pressing her mouth to Jack's shoulder.

That was the moment that Mr. Day came out from the back of his shop carrying three boxes of invitations. He frowned at the two couples before going into the back and returning with two more boxes. “Here are the invitations Mr. Wayne.”

Day set them on the counter, then frowned when he saw and felt the tension in the room. Day thought about heading into the back again, but thought better of it.

Jack smiled turning to Mr. Day. “Thank you so much Mr. Day. I assumed my brother paid for these already?”

Day frowned glancing at the Randells who he knew were also here to pick up some invitations for a cocktail party they were having; well, not exactly invitations, more of reminders to come to the party. The Randells did that every time they threw a party, invitations and reminders. Mr. Day had to wonder if the couple had problems getting people to come to their events. Based on what he knew about them, it would not surprise him in the least. He pressed his lips together to avoid smiling. If he remembered correctly it was the same day as the Wayne event.

Day glanced again at the Randells before returning his attention of Jack Wayne. “Ah...yes, Mr. Wayne. Would you like to inspect the invitations?” Day glanced at the Randells then back at Mr. Wayne and his female companion.

Jack smiled at Troy and strolled over to the counter. Day pulled out one of the invitations, black paper with gold lettering. Jack smiled and read the invitation out loud. “You are invited to a masquerade and charity event at Wayne Manor this weekend in honor of the Gotham City Art Museum and private showing of Pablo Picasso's Nude, Green Leaves and Bust.”

Jack glanced over to Troy who was frowning.

“When is that again?” Troy asked.

Jack smiled innocently as he looked down at the invite. “Oh, it looks like it's this weekend.”

Tiffany paled. “But that's when our cocktail party is being held Troy!”

Troy huffed. “You can't just suddenly throw that kind of party!! Those things take weeks and weeks of planning! We—we sent out RSVPs weeks in advance and are sending out our reminder invites tomorrow. You—you can't do that!”

Jack giggled fanning himself with the invite. “Goodness Troy, apparently you don't know the Waynes very well do you? Or exactly how much money we Waynes have...though I suppose...wait. You know I was going to insult you Troy, but I'm afraid I won't do as well as nature already has.”

Troy stared at Jack for a moment, the insult clearly not sinking in enough for Troy to get that he had been insulted before he barreled forward. “Well, no one will come at that short notice! Not for a stupid masquerade party over some stupid painting!! All of who's who in Gotham has already agreed to come to our cocktail party this weekend!!”

Jack raised an eyebrow and glanced over at Harley who was having a difficult time not laughing out loud. She shared a look with Jack who grinned.

“All right Troy, you just keep telling yourself that.” Jack picked up three of the boxes of invitations while Harley grabbed the last two.

“All have fun at your party this weekend Troy.” Jack smiled pleasantly turning around to push the door open with his back. Harley followed him and winked at Troy and Tiffany.

Before heading home, Jack and Harley headed over to Milanos, thrilling the man to no end with their requests for not one, but two period costumes.

“I will have the Bonnie and Clyde sent over tomorrow, but the 1920's outfits...give me a week.” Milano smiled.

“Sounds perfect!” Jack grinned handing Milano cash.

Milano nodded, putting the money away. “Now...your wedding attire. I have several ideas—I could sketch up a few things, how do you feel about a top hat and a cane?” Jack's eyes sparkled. “I feel that it would be perfect! I want something unique unusual, something no one has ever worn before, like my darling's dress.”

Harley was smiling as she sat on a stool listening to them discuss Jack's wedding attire, the light sounds of Benny Goodman's “Moonglow” playing in the background as she sipped from a glass that held a black Russian drink that Milano had made her. Milano was quickly jotting down some notes for Jack's tuxedo. “All right, plum colored vest to match the flowers in Harley's dress, black on black pinstripes, the jacket with the slightly longer tails, and a blood red ruby stick pin for the tie to match Harley's shoes...” (Harley had decided just the other day that a pair of sexy, secret red shoes under her dress would be funny.) Milano and Jack nearly had their heads together in discussion while Harley finished her drink smiling contently.

Milano grinned. “I will make whatever I can't find for you Jack, don't you worry my sweet boy. By the time you and my little queen there are walking down the aisle, you will look like a billion dollars.”

Jack grinned yanking Milano into a quick embrace. “I knew I could count on you!”

Jack and Harley didn't have to wait long after completing their errands (stopping at home to change clothes again for going out that evening. Jack was wearing a deep blue on blue checked three-piece suit with a two button jacket, black and white oxfords, a light silver blue tie, with a pair of black leather gloves. Harley changed into a pair of skinny black slacks, a light grey vest, with a white shirt with one of Jack's purple ties, and a fitted men's style jacket that Jack had bought her with a pair of black riding style boots, her hair pulled back in a high ponytail and her own pair of black leather gloves) before it was time for them to drive over to the Amusement Mile and pick up Alex.

They found Alex waiting outside the dark carnival, his hand in his pocket. He was dressed in a bright blue t-shirt with colorful tropical fish all over the shirt with a plaid button down shirt thrown over the top, jeans and the whitest, ugliest pair of dress shoes Harley had ever seen. He was smoking a cigar, the cigar clinched between his teeth, his hair slicked back looking like he had a bit too much product in it, when Jack and Harley pulled up in their Porsche convertible.

Alex grinned. “Hey there, how you two fucking doing? You two looked like you stepped out of the fucking Kingsmen movie.”

Jack laughed. “We're great, get in and thank you. Gotta look better than the riffraff.”

Alex climbed into the back of the car. “Oh haha, you fucker, I know you mean me. Hey I like the fucking make-up Jack, you two look fucking cool. I sure the fuck couldn't pull off eyeliner anyway. Man Jack, this is one fucking nice car!”

Harley giggled shaking her head slightly at Alex as Jack turned around leaning his arm on the back of the seat smiling. “Thank you buddy. How'd you do at the game?”

Alex rolled his eyes and gagged before taking a drag on his cigar “I'm out a fucking grand, but hopefully I can make it back tonight at Cobblepot's fucking fight.”

Jack smiled, only Harley noticed the slight twitch at the corner of Jack's mouth at the mention of Cobblepot. “So where to?”

Alex grinned. “Just go on down to fucking Chinatown. I'll tell you where the fuck to go from there.”
The drive to Chinatown was pleasant. The Gotham evening was cool as the breeze coming off the water brought the temperature of the whole city down. The sky was surprisingly clear above the city lights and Jack had the music turned up loudly. Harley and Jack were almost in tears laughing as Alex sang at the top of his lungs to a cover of “Bad Romance” by Halestorm that started to play over the car's speakers, with Jack joining him about halfway through. Harley was laughing hard enough that tears had sprung to her eyes and she was fighting to save her makeup. Jack was gesturing with one hand as he sang, driving with one hand. Alex was singing terribly, waving his cigar around with his one hand, weaving smoke in the air.

They arrived at Chinatown just as Jack and Alex had started singing Queen's “Killer Queen” with equal loudness, though Jack's voice was gorgeous, singing along in a clear voice and hitting every high note without once breaking, where Alex needed to find a note and stick to it.

Jack winked at Harley singing to her.

“She's a Killer Queen
Gunpowder, gelatine
Dynamite with a laser beam
Guaranteed to blow your mind
Anytime
Recommended at the price
Insatiable an appetite
Wanna try?”

Jack grinned, his tongue touching his upper lip seductively as he sang.

Harley giggled continuing to struggle with her makeup smearing while laughing, which was difficult to avoid, especially as Jack and Alex started to sing Queen's “Don't Stop Me Now.”

Alex leaned forward, his head against Jack's as they both grinned at Harley singing loudly. Alex closed his eyes singing completely off tune while Jack was perfect.

“I'm a shooting star leaping through the sky
Like a tiger defying the laws of gravity
I'm a racing car passing by like Lady Godiva
I'm gonna go go go
There's no stopping me...”

Jack grinned at her, beating out the tune with his gloved fingers on the steering wheel his voice carrying lightly on the night air.
“La da da da daah
Da da da haa
Ha da da ha ha haaa
Ha da daa ha da da aaa
Ooh ooh ooh…”

Alex laughed, sat back, and pointed with his only hand, speaking around his cigar. “Down that fucking street Jack."

He continued to give directions until they reached an abandoned Chinese restaurant called The Mandarin. The windows of the restaurant were boarded up, though the statue of an ancient Chinese dragon stood outside next to a man who was standing unmoving like a statue himself. He had to be at least six feet five inches and he was massively built. Harley figured he would give Killer Croc a run for his money in terms of width and weight. The man had long auburn hair that he had pulled back into a man bun and was standing like a wall with his arms crossed in front of his chest.

Jack parked the car, putting up the top and engaging the lock when they all hopped out. Alex walked up to the big man with a smile sticking his cigar in the side of his mouth.

“How the fuck you doing Mark?”

The man narrowed his eyes looking down at Alex. “What have I told you about calling me that?”

Alex stuck his cigar in his mouth and threw his hand up. “Calm the fuck down. Sorry Blockbuster I just forgot. Fuck man.”

Blockbuster glared. “You forget a lot for a man who supposedly wants to live a long life Alex.”

“Ah come the fuck on, Blockbuster. Don't I treat you well, get you those cigars you like and didn't I get you into that game last week? And let's not forget my sister. You wanted that fucking date with her and didn't I come the fuck through?”

Blockbuster smiled. “Yeah you did, which is why I never pop your head.”

Jack leaned close to Harley and whispered in surprise. “Alex has a sister?”

Harley giggled. “That's a scary thought.”

They both laughed.

That was when the big man noticed Jack and Harley. He gave Alex a quizzical look. “Who yer friends Alex?”

Alex grinned. “This here is fucking Jack and Harley. They came to get in on the fucking fights man. Check it out, make some fucking money. You know, the fucking usual, but Jack here is loaded.”

Blockbuster glanced at Jack, though his eyes lingered a little too long on Harley for Jack's liking. Jack reached out pulling Harley against him, his eyes going flat and dangerous. Blockbuster sneered, but he stepped back and removed a large board revealing a door behind it.

“Go on in.”
Alex grinned. “You're the fucking best. Thanks Blockbuster.”

The three of them walked past, with Blockbuster winking at Harley. Jack’s lip curled, but he let it go without a word, for now. Though he wouldn't forget.

The inside of the restaurant looked exactly as one would think an abandoned restaurant would look. There were still tables and chairs scattered throughout the place, the floor was covered with debris, broken furniture, bits of the ceiling that had fallen to the floor, though there were a few working lights. Alex led them through the middle of the room, pulling back two double doors in the floor that revealed a set of stairs that descended into darkness. Alex took the stairs, igniting his lighter to provide a little more light.

As the made their way down, they could see lights and hear the sounds of shouting and cheering.

Alex hopped off the last step clipping closed his lighter and grinned.

Jack and Harley found themselves in a basement that ran the whole length and breadth of the restaurant. It was a large space that had been cleared of everything except for the large group of people, which was an equal mix of men and women, forming a circle around two men, shirtless, both of them bloody and beating the hell out of each other.

Alex grinned. “Welcome to Cobblepot's fucking fight club.”

Jack saw Cobblepot. The crowd had cleared a space for the little man where he sat on some God awful looking chair that resembled some sort of throne-like chair. He had two beautiful women on each side of him as he leaned forward, his hands on the top of his walking stick, watching the fight with undisclosed glee.

Alex motioned Jack and Harley to follow him over to a short man with a thick “porn star” mustache (at least that was the immediate impression of the man's mustache that came to Harley's mind when she saw him.) He was dressed in a nice suit (though nowhere near as nice as Jack's) and he was talking a mile a minute, taking bets, exchanging money back and forth as the two bare-knuckled men fought in the center of the room.

As Alex walked up, the short man grinned. “Hey Alex, you made it.”

“How the fuck you doing Warren?” Alex grinned pulling out his wallet.

“Come on, Great White Shark...I'm trying to copyright it dude! That's my bad guy name!” The man named Warren whined a bit with a grin.

Alex snorted. “What the fuck ever Warren. I asked how you were doing?”

“Oh I'm great man. Whatcha playing?” the man named Warren asked while writing down someone's bet.

Alex grinned. “Hundred down on Martin there.”

Jack was ignoring the betting, his eyes on the fighters. Harley snaked her arm round his waist watching beside him. “You could take on any of them puddin.” She said softly to him.

Jack grinned glancing down at her without a word. The fight took maybe a solid fifteen minutes before one of the men went down and didn't come back up. The crowd broke into a chorus of cheers and boos as the unconscious man was dragged, bleeding out of the center of the room. Alex came back to stand beside the two of them.

“There rules are...”

Jack turned on Alex with a grin. “If you say the first rule is not to talk about fight club I swear I might hit you.”

Alex chuckled. “Hey, not my fault Cobblepot watched the fucking movie one too many times. But yeah, ya don’t talk about it. There is a lot of money to be made here...and a lot to fucking lose too, so no one talks about it beyond these doors.”

“What happens if you do talk about it?” Jack asked with a grin.

“No fucking clue.” Alex laughed. “Anyway, only two people fight at a time, if someone goes limp, tells ya to stop or taps out, the fight is over, no shirts, no shoes and that includes the ladies though bras are allowed.” Here Alex grinned wider. “Though I've seen a couple of fucking ladies fight bare breasted. Best fight ever. I love it when the ladies fight. Oh and Cobblepot has the fucking rule where it's your first time here, ya gotta fucking fight, but ain't nobody enforcing that one.”

Jack smiled at Harley lifting his brow at her in question without uttering a word. She smiled slowly. The idea of a full on fight, to beat the living shit out of someone...Harleen would have been appalled but Harley only smiled. “I'm in.”

Jack laughed kissing her on the cheek. “Okay Alex, we're in.”

Alex looked between the two of them and shook his head. “Okay, but I ain't fucking betting on you.”

Jack's smile was wide and vicious. “Then you are going to lose more money tonight my friend.”

Alex led them through the crowd and over to Cobblepot's chair. If someone new was going to fight they had to go and say hello to the man who ran the show. When Cobblepot saw Jack Wayne and his girl walk up to him, it was clear he was torn between a wicked grin and a nasty sneer.

“So Jack Wayne, eh?” Cobblepot smiled.

Jack grinned. “Well hello, Penguin. I see you found a way to get back a smidge of the family fortune...”

“Don't call me that! And yes I'm finding I have a knack for making money.” Cobblepot started to stand, but then sat down. Jack narrowed his eyes as he realized the cane wasn't for show...interesting.

“So Wayne, come to fight, eh?” Cobblepot leaned back in his 'throne' as one of the women beside him reached out to run her fingers over his shoulder. Cobblepot glanced up at her with a smile then back to Jack.

Jack smiled. “Sure, why not.”

Cobblepot smirked. “Her too?”

Harley grinned. “Of course.”

Cobblepot motioned to the crowd. “All right my fine ladies and gentlemen. We have a couple of new fighters. Who wants to take on the pretty boy first?”

Alex shook his head leaning in close to Jack. “You're fucking mad Jack, the both of you have fucking lost your minds.”

Jack grinned stripping off his jacket, vest and shirt handing them to Harley. “Everyone new fights right?” Jack asked Alex, who nodded. Jack's eyes narrowed and then he said, “You'll have to tell me about your fight, my friend.”

Alex just smirked and said, “Fuckin’ right...sometime.”

As Jack removed his clothing, a few of the women in the audience started hooting and whistling when Jack took off his shirt to reveal his lean, muscled frame. Harley pressed her lips together in a hard line of anger, but she consoled herself by telling herself that soon she was going to get to beat the living shit out of one of them, thanks to Jack teaching her to defend herself...

Jack ignored the whistles and yells as he took off his shoes and handed them to Harley. He grabbed her around the back of her neck, yanking her close to kiss her, a deep tongue plunging kiss that had the crowd yelling and whistling.

Cobblepot narrowed his eyes; the crowd's reaction just made him hate Jack Wayne all the more and when thedamn asshole took his shirt off and showed off a lean muscled body that had even his four girls staring at him, Cobblepot hated him that much deeper.

Jack walked into the center of the “ring” with a huge smile.

“All right boys, who wants a go?” Jack smiled as he walked around the ring with his arms out looking at each of them, his blue eyes dancing, his confidence almost frightening. “Oh come on now, no one?”

Cobblepot motioned a small man over, Harley noticed from the corner of her eye. She turned with a frown watching the little guy lean close to Cobblepot as the Penguin whispered in his ear. After a second or two the little man took off. A few moments later, she saw Blockbuster walking down the stairs. Harley hissed under her breath and muttered, “God damn cheat.”

Alex who was standing beside Harley whistled. “Fuck that guy! Cobblepot must really hate Jack to bring Blockbuster down here. Blockbuster only fights when Cobblepot wants someone taught a fucking lesson or dead.” Alex shook his head. “Well I'm going to fucking place my bet. Tell Jack I'm fucking sorry man.”

Harley smiled. “I wouldn't bet against him if I was you Alex.”

Alex stopped and turned around to look at Harley. She glanced over her shoulder and smiled. Alex frowned. For a moment the look in her blue eyes was...scary. Alex nodded.

“Okay Harley, okay.”

The crowd moved out of the way to let Blockbuster through and into the ring. As the big man was taking off his shirt and shoes, Cobblepot yelled. “Remember, no biting or gouging!”

Blockbuster smiled at Jack while pulling his shirt off over his head. “Hey, little rich boy.”
Blockbuster was muscled, but Harley smiled. He lacked the real strength that Jack had...she chewed on her bottom lip, the thought of Jack beating this man made her excited.

She smiled, her teeth pressed into her bottom lip.

Jack narrowed his eyes at Blockbuster with a grin. “I'm going to hurt you for the way you looked at my girl. No one looks at her like that but me.”

Blockbuster laughed. “Well after I beat your ass, I'm taking your girl. How you feel about that, ya little prick.”

Jack laughed. “You clearly don't know Harley. Well you know the old saying, the bigger they are the harder they fall. Give me your best shot.”

Jack bounced lightly on his feet, bringing his arms up, his hands held in loose fists, a smile on his face when Blockbuster swung at him. The larger man's fist struck Jack across the cheek twisting his head to the right, then he hit Jack again causing Jack's face to snap to the left. Jack stumbled, dropping to a knee, blood dripping from his nose and his bottom lip.

Blockbuster laughed. “Down already?”

Jack started to move, but Blockbuster surprised him with a quick lunge and grabbed Jack, lifting him off his feet and threw him into the crowd. Harley yelped bringing Jack's clothing up to cover her mouth when she saw him thrown. Blockbuster turned to face the other side of the crowd with a laugh.

“Those pretty rich boys never know what they're doing!” He shouted at the crowd throwing his arms over his head. The crowd cheered him, but behind him Jack had jumped to his feet, a bloody, lipstick smeared smile on his face. Jack stretched his arms over his head and cracked his neck, grinning while blood dripped down from his nose over his lips and off his chin.

He brought a hand up, motioning with his fingers at Blockbuster with a smile. “That all you got big boy?”

Blockbuster turned with a snarl, taking a swing at him, but Jack blocked him, smacking the larger man's hand hard and away, tossing Blockbuster's arm to the side with a disgusted look on his face. Blockbuster twisted around with his fist, but Jack ducked and moved in low and to the side to slam his fist into Blockbuster's kidney, then another to his stomach, causing the larger man to stumble backwards. Blockbuster took two wild swings at Jack, which the slimmer more graceful man dodged easily. Jack's hands snapped out blindingly to land two more hard punches into Blockbuster's side with a laugh.

Harley watched her lover fight, a vicious grin on her face, licking her lips as her eyes ran down Jack's figure, watching the mix of blood and sweat run down his body which made fire run through her blood, exciting her. Her eyes were glued to Jack, her heart beating with excitement; her groin was on fire, the nipples of her breasts tight and hard with desire. Just watching him was turning her on. She was so excited that the thought of having her way with Jack, running her fingers through the blood running down his torso, biting him, tasting his blood on her tongue had her squirming. Harley squeezed her fingers into his clothing with a wide grin.

Jack grinned, dancing around the larger man just before his arm snapped out, hitting Blockbuster in the face, once, twice, a third time, splitting the skin on the big man's cheek, busting his lips while scraping his own knuckles against Blockbuster's teeth. The larger man stumbled back into the crowd as Jack followed him, hitting Blockbuster continually in the face, refusing to let up. But Jack's next swing missed as Blockbuster managed to lean back far enough that Jack's fist overshot his target. Blockbuster brought his ham-sized fist up and struck Jack in the face, his knuckles glancing against the smaller man's chin, but it was hard enough to knock Jack's head back. Jack spun partly to the left; the crowd was going wild, some cheering for him, others for Blockbuster. Blockbuster hit Jack again, this time a glancing blow to the eye, the man's knuckles scraped across Jack's brow splitting the skin and sending a trickle of blood down the side of Jack's face.

Jack kept his footing, turned around and laughed. “Oh hit me again big man, you know you like it.” Blockbuster snarled. “You're crazy!”

Jack grinned showing off bloody teeth. “Oh, so I’ve been told.”

Harley grinned and yelled. “Kill 'im puddin!!!”

Jack's blue eyes glanced to Harley and blew her a kiss.

Blockbuster took another swing, but Jack, bringing his attention quickly back to the fight, ducked under the attack and danced to the side to hit him in the kidney again. The larger man tried again to hit Jack, but Jack swerved and ducked, moving faster than any fighter Blockbuster had ever seen before. The smaller man came up under Blockbuster's guard and slammed his fist into Blockbuster's stomach hard enough that he caused the big man to double over with a grunt. Jack grinned wildly and performed a full, roundhouse kick, his leg connecting to Blockbuster's side again, working the damage up on the same side he had been kidney punching and causing the bigger man to stumble.

Jack next swung his arm up, going for a head shot, but Blockbuster brought his arm up and around, hooking it with Jack's, twisting him around and getting his own hit into Jack's side. Jack winced only slightly and brought his free arm up, and with a power no one would have thought the slender man had, he punched Blockbuster hard enough in the face to break the big man's hold on him, busting Blockbuster's upper lip and sent him stumbling backwards into the crowd. That was when Jack, grinning from ear to ear, spit blood onto the floor and started a cycle of hitting Blockbuster in the face, over and over again with each fist.

Blockbuster went down, hitting the concrete floor like a ton of bricks, his head bouncing on the floor, but Jack didn't stop. He rode the man down to the floor and continued to hit him over and over again, breaking the man's nose, splitting his lips further, cutting his cheeks open. Jack was laughing the entire time as he just kept hitting the man as he sat on his barrel chest.

Harley was watching with a smile when she heard Alex beside her hiss. “Fucking fuck fuck, look at him go.”

Harley hissed back, “Told you not to bet against him.”

Alex glanced at her and smiled. “I bet I shouldn't fucking bet against you either, eh?”

“Nope.” Harley smiled.

Someone from the crowd yelled. “Hey, he is going to kill him!”

Someone else shouted. “Stop him!”

Harley was the one to race forward, tucking Jack's things under her arm and grabbed Jack's arm. “Jack, Jack stop—you won!”

Jack grinned with an unsteady look in his blue eyes, stumbling up and letting Harley tug him to his feet. Blockbuster groaned, rolling over to his side gagging and spitting blood, barely conscious. Jack smiled looking around and then his eyes landed on Penguin who was glaring at him. Jack blew him a kiss.

Penguin smiled. “Now let the woman fight.”

Jack wrapped his arms around Harley. “You don't have to do this cupcake.”

Harley giggled shoving his clothing and shoes at him. “Are you kidding me?”

Jack laughed. “That's my girl.”

Harley stripped down to her deep red bra, earning herself several whistles. Jack growled, reaching out and pulling her to him pressing his forehead to hers. “Be careful my little minx and kick the ass of whoever she is.” He smiled and kissed her. Harley grabbed his head with both hands, her fingers grabbing handfuls of his hair, pressing her lips against his damaged lips hard. Jack dropped his free hand to her rear, pressing her up against him and squeezed.

The crowd roared their approval. Jack let her go with a smack on her ass as she walked out into the middle the fighting floor. That was when the crowd parted and Harley's mouth fell open when she saw the woman she was going to be fighting.

Ivy smiled. “Well, hello again Harley.”
Harley blurted out, her blue eyes huge with shock. “What the actual fuck?!”

Ivy had her hands on her hips and grinned at Harley without a care in the world. She was dressed similarly now as when Harley had seen her at the roller rink; short shorts, fishnet stockings and a Gotham Siren’s t-shirt in a deep forest green, the name of the roller derby group emblazoned across her breasts, and a pair of wedged heeled sneakers in white.

Ivy laughed. “Well, besides roller derby I like to fight. It helps me drain myself of my pent up...energies.” Ivy smiled. “So Harley, what are you doing here?”

Ivy started to untie her shoes, watching Harley with a smile.

Harley frowned. “Well, actually Jack and I just came here with a friend.” Ivy’s smile widened as she tossed her shoes to the side and began to prowl slowly around Harley. She pulled her t-shirt over the top of her head, then tossed the garment into the crowd that let out a roar of approval, some of them fighting over the shirt. A few others started to chant. “Poison Ivy! Poison Ivy!” Ivy smiled seductively at the crowd, running the tips of her fingers along the jaws of a couple of men and a few women while she walked around the edges of the crowd, still circling Harley as she did so and licked her lips. She was wearing a deep green sports bra underneath that she somehow made look just as sexy as the lacy red bra that Harley was wearing.

Ivy smiled. “You could just give up now. I mean, I haven’t lost a fight yet...and I don't think I’m about to lose one now.”

Warren was swiftly exchanging money as betting began in earnest. Jack glanced once toward Warren with narrowed eyes. He motioned at Alex pulling out his wallet and handed some bills to Alex. “Put this on Harley.”

Alex frowned; it was a LOT of money. “You sure man? I know she's your girl and all, but Ivy has fucked up everyone she has fought against.”

Jack's blue eyed gaze slid to Alex. He didn't say a word.

Alex cringed under Jack Wayne's scrutiny. “Okay man.”

Alex made his way over to Warren, watching the exchange of money before turning his eyes back on the two women. He trusted Jack, so with a deep breath Alex pushed his way forward and yelled at Warren smacking Jack's money down, and adding his own to the wager. “Put it all on the new girl Harley.

Warren stared at him for a heartbeat before he shrugged. “All right, new girl it is.”

That was when someone from the back yelled. “Get Ivy's music playing!!”

No one was sure where the music came from, but Penguin motioned with his hand and the sounds of deadmau5 featuring Gerard Way's Professional Griefers started to play, filling the tight space with the thump of the music. The music seemed to feed the crowd even more, the beat running through and over the assembled patrons and fighters, the excitement for the fight becoming palpable.

Harley licked her lips with a smile at Ivy. Ivy bounced on a her feet a little, her hands in loose fists, the music clearly jazzing her up for the fight.

Jack glanced back looking for the source of the music and frowned, curling his lip a little while shrugging back into his shirt. He didn't bother to button it. He shrugged on his vest and jacket as well, leaving everything hanging open, much to the appreciation of several of the women (and a few men) in the crowd.

Alex walked up beside Jack after placing their bets. “Okay man, I placed your fucking bet, but are you sure you wanna bet on your girl? I mean she ain't going to fucking know if you wanna bet on Ivy. Ivy's the sure fucking winner. She wasn't fucking lying when she said she ain't lost yet. I mean, this thing ain't been going on a fucking long time, but still...”

Jack speared Alex with his eyes. “I always bet on Harley. Always.”

Alex took an involuntary step back. “Okay man, it's your fucking money,” Alex muttered. “Don't know why I bet on her, but whatever...”

Harley followed Ivy with her eyes, smirking. “I don't give up, I never give up,” Harley purred sarcastically and twisting round to follow Ivy with her eyes.

Ivy smiled and shrugged. “Fine, I'll do my best to avoid your face.”

When the music had started to play Harley chuckled. “You have your own theme song or something?”

Ivy shrugged again gesturing with her hands, a small self congratulatory smile on her lips. “What can I say? I've never lost, so I get to pick my own music.”

Harley had to laugh again. “Well I guess I will do the same and try to avoid your face...if possible.”

Ivy grinned and brought her hands up into fists, lifting her eyebrows up mockingly at Harley before she leapt, her fist catching Harley by surprise. Harley stepped back, but still took a hard hit in the shoulder knocking her backwards off her feet.

Jack yelped and started to move forward, his instinct to defend Harley, but Alex grabbed him with his one hand surprising Jack with the strength in it as he fingers pressed down on Jack's shoulder holding him in place.

“Hey man, I don't know your girl, but I get the feeling she will fucking kill you if you interrupt.”

Jack snarled, his head whipping around to glare at Alex, his lips pulled back from his teeth. Alex let go of him in surprise, but just as quickly Jack calmed muttering. “You're right Alex...she would...”

Jack chuckled then and said, “One of the many things I love about her.”

Harley rolled to her side when she went down, hitting the concrete floor hard, but not hard enough to disorient her. Her roll allowed her to avoid Ivy's next hit. Ivy's fist hit the concrete just as Harley had rolled away and then she surged to her feet smoothly, her gymnastics training lending her movements grace and skill obvious to the fight patrons. Harley followed her ascent with a swift one-two punch at Ivy's neck. Ivy spun on her knee and leaned back just in time to avoid the full impact of Harley's punches, the knuckles of Harley's fists scraping against Ivy's collarbone as Ivy leaned backwards. The hits hurt, but weren't enough to knock Ivy off her knees or to cause any real damage.

Ivy twisted her body to the side and brought her left leg around for a swift snap kick that caught Harley low, hitting her in the lower abdomen. Harley stumbled back from the impact, stopping herself at the last minute from falling into the crowd. She kept her wits about her and threw herself to the left, avoiding another kick as Ivy came to her feet.

Harley took a swing at Ivy, but she overextended her arm as she missed. Ivy leaned out of the way, caught Harley under her arm. The red head lifted Harley off her feet with her shoulder digging into Harley's armpit. Ivy spun her around and with a roar, Ivy tossed Harley. Harley yelped as she slammed into the crowd; her body knocked several of them down and the harsh impact forced air to expel from her lungs in a painful whoosh. Harley groaned lightly though she took the throw in stride, rolling to her feet. She only wobbled a little, spitting blood onto the concrete floor, her teeth having cut the inside of her mouth. It only took Harley a couple of breaths before she took several fast steps toward Ivy, followed by numerous rapid swings at her opponent with her fists.

Ivy managed, just barely, to knock Harley's fists away with the flats of her hands, the young blonde surprising her with her speed. Harley kept pressing herself forward, forcing Ivy to move backwards, staying on the defensive against Harley's attack. Ivy batted one fist out of the way, then the other, but Harley was forcing Ivy to continually have to move backwards, pushing her across the cleared fighting space. The crowd was moving out of the way while Harley continued a barrage of swift strikes, continuing to force Ivy backwards. Ivy hissed, realizing that Harley was forcing her into a virtual corner. Ivy ducked, fully dodging one of Harley's swings and ducked under Harley's arm to bring her knee up to try to hit Harley in the stomach.

Harley smacked Ivy's leg down with a growl, but Ivy grabbed Harley by the shoulders, forcing Harley forward at the same time trying to bring her knee up into Harley's diaphram. Harley hissed, bending her body forward into Ivy's grip with enough power to throw them both into a somersault. The two women struggled when they fell to the floor, twisting and turning, each trying to get an advantage on the other but instead, the struggle rolled them both across the floor.

Harley laughed then, grabbed Ivy by the hair and slammed her forehead against the red head's. Ivy winced, for a moment disoriented by the head butt. Harley started to slam her forehead forward again, but Ivy pitched herself forward, keeping her hold on Harley just barely, her fingers digging painfully into Harley's shoulders as she rolled them across the floor, slamming into a wall hard enough that the impact forced them to separate. Both women came out of the impromptu somersault, panting as they surged to their feet. Ivy reached for Harley again, trying her best to use her knees once again as a battering ram into Harley's stomach.

With both hands, Harley slammed Ivy's knee to the side hard enough that she caused Ivy to lose her balance. Harley maintained her hold on Ivy's knee and pushed upward with all her strength in order to flip Ivy backwards. Ivy tried to control her landing as she flipped over backwards, but when she landed, she ended up taking several steps backwards as she attempted to maintain her balance. She fell to the floor hard, her breath forced out of her lungs in a painful rush.
Ivy hissed in pain, but she threw her arms back and turned her fall into a somersault, pushing herself up on her hands for a split second, bringing her legs around to come up on her feet again with a smile, panting, blood trickling from her nose.

“Oh, you're good.” She grinned at Harley.

Harley was panting as well, two trails of blood running down from her nose while she hopped lightly in place her hands in loose fists, but she grinned back at Ivy clearly impressed. “You're not bad yourself.”

* Jack was gnawing at his split lower lip as he watched Harley. He could see the trickle of blood running down from the corner of Harley's mouth, the blood smeared across her upper lip from her bloody nose, the sight of which had Jack growing hard for her. He smiled, his eyes traveling along her sweat slicked form. Watching her fight was beautiful he thought to himself...she was an angel, a Valkyrie, an Amazon...Jack's smile was wide with pleasure and lust. He didn't really think Harley would lose, but even if she did, watching her, half naked, the blood...all of it...it was worth it just to see her like this...his desire for her increased ten-fold.

* With a wide smile on her face, Ivy took a few hard swings at Harley. Ivy's arm's were well muscled and she clearly had some kickboxing training which was demonstrated in the way she held herself and the quick smart, snap of her arms when she tried to punch Harley. But Harley moved quickly too, her gymnastics background, her training with Jack and her natural instincts made Harley ready for Ivy this time. Harley ducked away from a few of the punches and slapped the others to the side. Ivy's eyes glowed with anger and a little bit of admiration. She continued to try to get a hit in, but even as tired as she was, Harley was still managing to avoid her punches.

Ivy ducked, using her shoulder to throw herself into Harley's side, sending both women tumbling off their feet. They rolled together on the floor to the deafening cheers of the crowd. Ivy managed to get Harley under her and straddled her. She started to swing her fists down at Harley in quick succession. Harley yelped and brought her arms up trying to use her forearms to block Ivy's punches. One of Ivy's fists caught her in the side of her brow, but Harley managed to block the others, her forearms taking the brunt of Ivy's fists, each a painful impact.

Harley hissed. She had to break this up or Ivy was going to win just by wearing her down! Harley took a deep breath, then, in that split second between punches, she lashed out with one hand to grab Ivy by her shoulder, her fingers digging painfully into Ivy's skin. Harley put all her strength into the move, hauling Ivy to the side as she pulled her opponent with her arm and simultaneously pushed up off the floor, tossing the red head down to the concrete while rolling with her so that Harley ended up sitting between Ivy's legs. (She had meant to straddle Ivy, but Ivy was strong, nearly breaking away from Harley during the roll.)

Harley smiled, her lipstick smeared across her chin, her eye make up was a mess now, the effect of which caused Harley's blue eyes to stand out in startling contrast to the dark smears of eyeshadow and eyeliner. It gave the illusion that Harley was wearing a dark mask across her eyes. Blood trickled from her nose and over her lips as she swung her fists down at Ivy.

Ivy growled, “You blonde bitch!” She brought her legs up to wrap them around Harley's neck. With her legs, Ivy brought Harley's head down toward her and squeezed, cutting off Harley's air.

Harley's blue eyes bugged in surprise. Ivy's thighs around her neck were tight, cutting off her supply of oxygen. At this rate she would pass out. She slammed her fists against Ivy's thighs, but they seemed like granite, unmoving. And then, in the only move that Harley could think of to loosen Ivy's grip on her neck, she reached up and grabbed Ivy's breasts and twisted.

Ivy screamed, her legs loosening.

Jack’s eyes widened at Harley and he burst out laughing, while Alex hissed grabbing his crotch.

“Ah fuck man! I felt that in the gonads!”

Which only made Jack laugh more. “That's my girl!”

Jack grinned, pumping his fist in the air and yelled. “Get her Harls!!”

He chuckled to himself. Watching Harley fight was his newest turn on.

Ivy cried out, releasing Harley, who jumped to her feet, staggering backwards away from Ivy as she took quick painful breaths, fighting off a wave of dizziness. Ivy hopped to her feet, baring her teeth in rage, her hands held protectively on her sore breasts. Both women eyed each other for a couple of seconds, stalking each other as they moved in a circle. Ivy's green eyes were flat with pure rage while Harley giggled. Ivy made a grab for Harley. Harley reached out at the same time, both women grabbing each other around the back of the neck, each snagging handfuls of hair between their fingers in the process.

“That was a low blow Harley!” Ivy hissed, her green eyes glinting with malice.

Harley giggled with a grin and a wink. “I would say I'm sorry, but I'm not!”

The two women twisted around together, staggering in a circle. They ran into the crowd which shoved the women back into the center of the makeshift ring, causing them to break apart. Harley jumped back from Ivy and swung her body around, snapping at out Ivy with her right leg at the same time. She kicked Ivy in the side with a well placed snap of her foot. Ivy hissed in pain, stumbling with the kick, but she didn't go down.

Ivy grinned. “Oh, so going to play that way are we?”

She smiled and with a hop, snapped her leg up and out, catching Harley between the breasts and knocking her backwards. Harley gasped as the air was knocked out from her lungs. She dropped to her hands and knees for a second; from the feel of it, Ivy's kick had come dangerously close to breaking her breastbone.

Ivy grinned, hopping in place, her hands still in fists ready to take another swing at Harley.

“Had enough? There's no shame in tapping out you know? Especially when you're beaten. It's always good to known when you're beaten by the better woman, doll face.” Ivy winked at her which had the crowd whistling and shouting.

Jack growled low and deep. He didn't care how this match turned out, he hated that woman with every fiber of his being. Not only did she rub him the wrong way, but he would swear she was flirting with his Harley at the same time. Jack's hands formed into fist, his blue eyes blazing with jealous fury.

Alex, who had lit himself another cigar, grinned standing next to Jack. “God, I fucking love it when the women fight.”

Jack narrowed his eyes at Alex who shrugged. “Hey man, I can't help it! I'm a fucking low-class dude.”

Jack stared at Alex before he burst out laughing, “Yeah, you are.”

Alex grinned merrily.

Harley narrowed her eyes as she pushed herself up to her feet. She wiped the back of her hand across her mouth, tasting the blood on her tongue. Harley grinned licking her lips (unintentionally seductively, which made Ivy's eyes bug for the briefest of moments. Jack saw it and burned angrily, not at his lover however, for Harley was completely unaware of what she had done.).

Ivy snarled and tried to kick Harley again, but this time Harley was ready for her; she knocked the first kick aside with a simple, yet effective forearm block, then the second. On the third kick, Harley grabbed Ivy's ankle. Her instinct was to slam her fist or elbow down on Ivy's kneecap to break her leg, but she had to calm herself enough not to do it. (Being this savage was something fairly new to Harley, but damn if it didn't feel good she thought briefly.)

This woman might be a friend or a foe in the roller derby and right now, while it would be satisfying to break her leg, Harley had to think about the future as part of the derby team...so she stopped herself at the last possible moment and threw Ivy's leg to the side. Instead she went for a series of quick punches to Ivy's diaphragm. Ivy yelped, managing to back away from Harley enough that she could swing her leg in a low roundhouse kick, catch Harley in her side and send her stumbling away. Harley snarled and maintained her balance, barely. She turned to face her foe, but Ivy rushed her, grabbing Harley by the shoulder and trying to ram her knee into Harley's stomach by forcing Harley's torso down. Harley leaned forward with the shove, tightening her stomach muscles as she did in preparation for the strike to her diaphragm. In the same instant, Harley brought her hands around to block Ivy's attack. With her next movement, Harley violently shrugged out of Ivy's grasp and snapped her hands out to grab Ivy by her upper arms, spinning her around and flung the red haired woman away from her.

Harley followed the swing with a leap, bringing her fist down in a move trying to put Ivy down for good. Ivy shifted away at the last second, Harley's fist hitting her with a glancing blow in the shoulder which still managed to knock her off her feet. Ivy spun herself on the floor coming up onto her feet in a flash. She reached up at the same time she was getting to her feet and grabbed Harley. The two women struggled, turning in a circle together, both of them bleeding from their noses, blood covering their lips and teeth as they both struggled, panting, to get a better grip on the other.

Harley broke free first, slamming the side of her fist down on Ivy's forearm. Ivy gasped in pain and took a swing at Harley, but Harley just barely dodged Ivy's fist. Harley wasn't able to dodge the knee that Ivy brought up between her legs, using her knee to hit Harley in the inner thigh forcing Harley's leg to go wide. Harley stumbled which gave Ivy a chance to use her knee again, but this time the red head's knee caught Harley in the stomach.

Harley coughed painfully and spit blood on the floor, stumbling backwards trying to put some distance between her and Ivy to give herself a chance to regain her breath. Ivy, grinning like a cat, moved quickly trying to press her advantage. She reached out, snagging Harley by her right arm. Ivy took Harley's arm, spun around, lifted Harley off her feet and threw her back down to the floor. Harley hit hard with a shout of pain and a hard exhale of breath; pain raced through her entire body. Ivy fell on Harley thinking she had her this time. Harley reached out when Ivy dropped on top of her, catching Ivy's arms, keeping Ivy from doing any real damage to her. The two women struggled for a few intense moments, but Ivy prevented Harley from getting up, pressing the pretty blonde down on the cement floor. They struggled, Harley shoving with all her strength for a few intense moment until finally Harley snapped a leg up, displaying her flexibility as her thigh smashed into one of Ivy's arms, breaking her hold, on Harley. Harley snapped her leg up, connecting her shin and knee with Ivy's bruised breasts to throw Ivy off of her. Ivy grabbed one of Harley's arms as she stumbled back, forcing the blonde to come with her when Ivy rolled onto her back. When she rolled, Ivy twisted her opponent's arm and slammed Harley down between Ivy's legs again. Ivy grinned as she wrapped her legs around Harley neck, trying to choke her into giving up. Harley gasped in surprised. Ivy's thighs were like iron!! This was twice now that Harley ended up being choked by Ivy's thighs! Harley could feel her breath being cut off, her lips turning blue as Ivy choked her.

"Come on blondie! You don't stand a chance against me! I'm a pro and I haven't lost a fight yet." Ivy smiled at her. "You give up and I'll even kiss you better."

Harley wasn't listening. She struggled, beating uselessly on Ivy's thighs trying to get her to loosen her grip. She balled her right hand into a fist, using the side of her fist, Harley slammed it down hard on Ivy's knee in the soft area between the knee cap and calf. A second strike to the same spot before Ivy could block her strike and she felt Ivy's grip loosen. The pain raced up Ivy's leg, numbing it for a split second, but that was all Harley needed. She broke free rolling to her feet again.

"God Red! You're such a bitch!" Harley grinned.

Ivy, who had risen to her feet as well chuckled. "You have no idea Dollface."

The two women walked slowly around each other, both of them breathing hard. Both women shook their arms out, each with scraped and bloody knuckles. Ivy attacked first. She brought her left knee up and pivoted, turning fully to her side and snap kicked. Harley gasped throwing herself backwards, only the breeze from Ivy's kick brushed across her skin.

* * *

"Man, that is some fucking kung-fu shit Ivy's doing," Alex said around a puff of smoke coming from his open mouth.

Jack frowned watching Harley. "Harley has a few tricks up her sleeves."

Harley came up and lunged forward to kick Ivy in the shin, then following that with a knee to the stomach, forcing Ivy to stumble backwards, but Harley kept coming with another knee kick catching Ivy in the stomach again. Ivy hissed and replied, attacking Harley with a series of quick kicks, but this time Harley met Ivy's kicks with her own, the two women's legs meeting in mid-air as they blocked each other. Ivy finally ducked low and kicked Harley in the side, but Harley did the same, crouching down slightly on one leg, bringing her other leg up and taking Ivy in the opposite side, causing both women to fall. When they hit the ground they both gasped and huffed with exhaustion.

"Would you consider a draw?" Ivy asked.

Harley laughed.
They were lying side by side, their heads almost touching, panting and laughing, when Cobblepot stood up. “NO! No ties!! You two keep fighting until there is a winner!! Those are the rules!”

Ivy snarled. “FINE! You little Birdman!”

She turned to Harley. “Going to have to finish you off unless you want to tap out?”

Harley laughed. “No fucking way Red!”

Both women rolled gracefully to their feet and immediately began attacking each other, though they were both exhausted and moving just a little slower. Ivy came at Harley hard and fast, thinking to end this swiftly, swinging her fists in rapid succession. Harley slapped Ivy's hands away with forearm blocks and tight circular hand deflections, backing herself up. Ivy pressed her attack, unrelenting. Harley, with a slight bounce in her step, twisted her right leg back behind her, then brought her knee up as high as she could, it was a pose she had done many times in gymnastics, a scorpion pose, but this was the first time Harley had ever thought to use it in a way other than as a gymnastics pose. Ivy threw herself forward, slamming her body into Harley's and wrapped her arms around Harley's waist, trying to take her down once and for all. But Harley jerked her leg straight up, arching her back with a slight twist to the side and brought her foot around rapidly, smashing Ivy in the face with as much force as she could.

The impact of Harley's foot to the side of her face snapped Ivy's head to the side, splitting her lip and sending a trail of blood flying into the air. Ivy let go, her eyes dazed by the kick as she stared at Harley with a confused look before she dropped to the floor, unconscious.

Harley giggled. “I know you said no faces, but what can I say...I lied.”

For a moment, no one reacted except Jack who yelled at the top of his lungs with joy. “THAT’S MY GIRL!!!”

That was the moment the crowd broke out into chaos of angry snarls, cheering and a lot of disappointed people who had bet on the wrong woman.

Jack rushed forward wrapping his arms around Harley just under her rear and lifted her off her feet. “You were the most glorious creature in the entire world Harley!!”

Harley giggled looking down at him. “Oh puddin!”

Jack slowly lowered her, letting her body slink against his as he put her on her feet again and grabbed her face between his hands planting a hard kiss on her bloody lips. The two of them forgot about the world around them, the sounds of the enraged crowd died away while they kiss. Jack purred against her mouth taking his time to fully taste the blood on her lips, to caress her tongue before he finally let her go. “You taste like blood and strawberries my sweet cupcake,” he whispered. “Intoxicating.”

Harley giggled pressing her forehead against Jack's. He grinned as he brushed his lips against hers, taking small nips of her lips when Alex came up to the two of them laughing.

“Oh man, that was fucking bad ass! This fight club shit has only been going on for a short time, but that Ivy chick, she ain't lost once—until now! That was fucking majestic! AND I won my grand back plus!” Alex grinned while slapping a wad of bills into Jack's hand. “You did fucking great Jack. I swear to fucking God I will always listen to you!” Jack grinned stuffing the money into his front pocket as Alex dropped a hand onto Jack's shoulder. “Who wants drinks? I'm buying!”

(During all of this a couple of young women came over to Ivy's prone body and lifted her up, removing her unconscious body from the fighting floor.)

Cobblepot stood up and started yelling. “THAT’S ENOUGH!! Everyone calm down!!” That was when a gun shot was fired. The sound not only echoed through the basement deafeningly, but chunks of the ceiling came crumbling down. Jack turned, pulling Harley protectively against him to see Cobblepot with a pistol pointed at the crowd. “Now settle down!”

The crowd started to quiet down, their voices dropping to muffled sounds. Warren had moved over to a corner, the money flying back and forth, though much quieter now.

Cobblepot sneered. “All right, so the two newbies won.” Cobblepot turned his little black glare on Jack.

Jack stepped forward, his arm around Harley's waist. “So now what Penguin?”

Penguin snarled. “You're done for the night Wayne. No more fighting for you, those are the rules, but you are welcome to stay and bet on other fighters. BUT you are both required to show up for the next meeting.” Cobblepot held his fingers up to emphasize the word 'meeting.'

Jack lifted a brow. “We do, eh?”

Cobblepot narrowed his eyes. “Yes, you will get to fight any 'new' members when next we convene.”

“What about you? Do you just sit there on your little throne and squawk? Or do you actually have something to contribute to this little bit of theater?” Jack smiled, releasing Harley long enough to allow her to throw on her shirt, vest and jacket. She buttoned two buttons on her shirt, but left the vest undone while Jack spoke.

Penguin looked like he was turning red as he hissed back at Jack. “You make it through two more fights...then yeah, you'll get to fight me.”

Jack grinned. “Ah, something to aim for then. Who do I fight after a newbie?”

Penguin grinned. It was a vicious smile full of glee and malice. “Oh I think I will have a surprise for you. Just make sure you show up for it, Jack Wayne.”

Jack laughed. “Oh, I would never turn down such a tempting date.” Jack blew Oswald a kiss and winked at him, which had both him and Harley laughing. Oswald snarled as he flopped back in his seat while Jack turned Harley around and headed out with a gleeful Alex right behind them.

They made their way back up the stairs and headed toward the car. Jack had to admit to himself that he was a little surprised that the car was still there, intact...must be a testament to Oswald's security or the threats against anyone who robbed from a participant in the club. Either way Jack was pleased to not have to explain a stolen car, or missing hubcaps to his brother.

“All right most glorious lady of the evening and Alex.” Jack laughed as Alex rolled his eyes with a smile. “I think we should go celebrate our victories!”

Alex grinned. “I love a fucking victory celebration!”

Just as when they were driving to the fight, the three of them had the music blaring out of the car's speakers, but this time it was the three of them singing at the top of their lungs to A-ha's “Take On Me.” Jack and Harley put their heads together and sang perfectly, hitting the high tones.

“Take on me, (take on me)
Take me on, (take on me)
I'll be gone
In a day or two…”

While Alex, his one hand waving around dangerously, threatening to topple him right out of the convertible as he sang loudly and off key, caused Jack and Harley to stumble over the words laughing at Alex.

They ended up driving to the east end of Gotham heading to a place call The Cafeteria, a twenty-four hour diner/restaurant with a basement bar that was also open all hours. When they arrived, Jack and Harley were both still bloody. Jack's shirt and vest were still hanging open, while Harley was only barely covered, a couple of buttons fastened on her shirt, but her vest was open and her cleavage was on full display; Alex still looked like Alex with a big happy grin. The waitress didn't bat an eye. She simply smiled and escorted them to a booth and handed them each a menu.

Alex plopped down and slid across from Jack and Harley who sat down sliding in close to each other. Harley leaned in closer, covering Jack's mouth with hers. She was still riding the high from the fight and she wanted Jack badly. She snaked her fingers into his hair, grabbing tightly, but not so tightly that hair would come out. Her left hand came up to grab a handful of his shirt and jacket, gently tugging Jack closer. Jack growled, his left hand going to her throat, leaning into kiss her deeper, the two of them groaning breathlessly as their kissing became harder.

Alex, paying no attention at all to them, grinned and grabbed up his menu, his eyes reading down the items swiftly. “All right! They serve fucking cocktails and alcoholic coffee drinks. I can fucking deal with that!”

Harley chuckled, pulling back from Jack's mouth, her eyes gazing over his face, settling on Jack's lips for a moment which she traced with her tongue before she sighed and leaned against Jack's shoulder. Jack, who had picked up a napkin, was gently wiping the blood from her face, alternating with licking the blood from her lips, to wiping a little bit of the blood away with the napkin that had dribbled down her neck and over her cleavage. Alex was too busy looking over the drinks to worry too much about the way Jack and Harley were acting. Jack was running his tongue over every bloody place on Harley's face and down her neck where blood from her mouth had dripped down. Harley giggled and purred alternately snuggling up close to Jack and wrapped a leg around his thigh.

Alex grinned reading from the menu. “Oh man, they have fucking Inferno Bloody Mary's! And fuck! This Master Cocktail sounds like just what I fucking need! It has fucking grade A maple cayenne! Man I think I need one of each! Oh fuck me standing, they got Cafe Don Juan which has dark rum in it! Oh fuck it, I'm ordering all three!”

Alex dropped his menu and rubbed his hand over his hair, only then noticing Jack was busily licking Harley's neck moving lower, clearly heading toward her cleavage.

“Oh come the fuck on you two! At least wait until you drop my-soon-to-be-drunk ass off somewhere!” Alex groaned covering his eyes with his one hand.

Jack chuckled running his tongue one more time along Harley’s lips. She purred softly rubbing her thumb along his slightly swollen lip, her own tongue snaking out to lick the blood from the corner of Jack’s mouth as she whispered. “What other coffee drinks do they have?”

Alex picked up the menu shaking his head at the two of them and muttering. “You two are like a couple of fucking horny teenagers...” Alex glanced back at the menu. “Well they have an Amaretto coffee. Sounds like something you might like,” Alex said glancing up at Harley.

Harley purred, her tongue flicking across Jack’s lips. “Mm... Amaretto coffee.”

Jack rubbed the tip of his nose against hers, his fingers playing along the swell of her breasts and further down her cleavage. “Anything you want my sweet. Think I’ll have straight black coffee.”

Jack reluctantly stopped playing with Harley’s cleavage to pick up the menu. He glanced over the items listed in black that ran the length of the laminated menu. “So what would you like to eat my darling pumpkin? After your epic fight, I’m sure you’re hungry. I know I am.” He waggled his eyebrows suggestively at her.

Harley giggled and leaned her head against his shoulder. “How about smoked Gouda and bacon macaroni and cheese?”

Jack chuckled. “Perfect! And I’ll add some old school meatballs! What about you Alex, or are you having a liquid meal?”

Alex chuckled. “I’m fine with a liquid meal, but go ahead and add some blue crab toast to that. Might as well add a cushion to my acholol.”

Jack and Harley had just started to laugh when the waitress returned. She was a bleached blonde with a nice smile and a sweet figure. Alex swallowed letting his eyes run down her. She was a little heavy, but he preferred women with a fuller figure. Her eyes glanced toward Alex and her smile widened as she cocked her hips and pulled out her pad and pencil. “I'm your waitress for the evening. My name is Alice. So what can I get you all to drink?”

Jack grinned. “Well, my dear Alice. My boy Alex there needs a cafe Don Juan, a master cocktail and an Inferno Bloody Mary.”

Alex beamed. “You were listening!”

Jack grinned. “I always listen to my friends.”

Alice chuckled turning her attention to Alex. “Three drink just for you?”

Alex grinned at her. “I'm on a liquid diet and I'm celebrating!”

“Oh, may I ask what?” Alice looked around at the three of them.

Alex grinned. “My friends here just won me a lot of money! Well, at least his girl did.” Alex winked at Harley who giggled. Alice noticed the blossoming bruises on both Jack and Harley, plus the traces of blood, but if she found it unusual she made no comment and no facial reaction Jack noticed. All part and parcel of working the nightshift in Gotham Jack supposed; she had probably seen weirder. Jack turned back to Harley, his arm draped over her shoulders. He leaned in and nipped playfully at her lips. Harley purred running her hand over his still mostly exposed chest.
Alice smiled. “Well that's wonderful.”

Alex grinned and winked at Alice. “So expect a big tip.”

Alice giggled smiling brightly at Alex before turning attention to Jack and Harley. “What can I get the two of you to drink?” She smiled, her pencil poised over her pad.

Jack smiled. “My sweet lady here need an Amaretto coffee and a black coffee for me.”

Alice wrote their orders down and nodded. “All right, I'll get those right out to you.”

After they placed their order, Alice headed off to put their drink orders in. When she returned, setting Jack's and Harley's drinks down in front of them, she leaned over a bit more than necessary toward Alex setting each of his drinks down in front of him. Alex gave her an appreciative grin.

“Thanks Alice. These look fucking fantastic!”

Alice giggled. “Enjoy.”

She hurried off, but glanced back to smile at Alex.

Alex watched her with a pleased grin. “I bet I can get her fucking phone number...”

Jack grinned. “Just make sure she never hears you sing.” Harley snorted almost spilling her drink she had just picked up. Alex stopped halfway to his mouth with his Inferno Bloody Mary and made a face at Jack. “Oh ahaha, some of us ain't as talented as a Wayne.”

Jack laughed as he sipped at his coffee. “So, Alex my friend. You know anything about this surprise Cobblepot hinted at?”

Alex smiled after taking a large sip of his drink. “Nah, he's been hinting around about it for the last week or two, but no one seems to know anything about who or what that surprise might be. I mean I haven't really done any real digging, but I could if you want...”

Alex took another big swallow of his drink. Jack nodded. “Yeah, do it. Usual fee?”

Alex grinned. “Of course!”

Jack took another few sips of his hot coffee before he asked. “You think you can get Troy Randell to show up at Cobblepot's fight club?”

Alex nearly sputtered on his drink “What are you talking about? Why would you want that fucking walking, talking bag of shit to show up there?”

Jack smiled squeezing Harley around the shoulders. He could tell by the way she started to giggle when he mentioned Troy that she knew exactly what he was thinking. Jack sipped his coffee. “Didn't old Penguin say that the next club meeting...” Here Jack chuckled as he continued. “I would have to fight a newbie that showed up? Well, why not make sure the newbie is someone I would really get a kick out of beating to a pulp? Besides, Troy has been making himself a large thorn in my and Harley's side. I think it's time I gave him a lesson.” Jack smiled and took another sip of his coffee while gazing over the rim at Alex. Jack lifted a brow at Alex in a questioning look after he took a sip.

Alex groaned. “Yeah, yeah I could probably get him there. Hell, he would fucking come knowing exactly what it was if he knew you were there and had won your first fight! The few times I've talked to that walking douche bag to place bets or grab him some drugs, all he did was fucking complain about you. He really has a stick up his fucking ass where you're concerned Jack.”

Jack and Harley shared a look, both of them with identical grins. Alex frowned. There was something frightening in their shared glance, but Alex quickly dismissed it.

Jack smiled turning back to Alex while rubbing his hand down Harley's shoulder as he hissed. “Actually, that's what I'm counting on.”

Harley giggled licking her lips. “Poor Tiffany. I almost feel sorry for her...almost.”

Alex looked between the two of them then shrugged. “What the fuck ever man. Yeah, I'll get him there. The next fight is four days from now.”

Jack grinned. “Perfect. It will be after the masquerade. Troy's ass will be burning after the failure of his little cocktail party. He will be wanting revenge even more.” Jack chuckled and Harley giggled.

Alex frowned. “Man, I ain't fucking drunk enough for you two being so creepy.”

Jack laughed. “Don't worry Alex. I'll make it worth your while.”

Alex smiled and picked up one of his drinks. “Thanks Jack, that's one of the fucking reasons I like you, you always pay up without fucking trying to fuck me over.”

Jack lifted his coffee, Harley her drink and Alex his, the three of the clinking their glasses. “To friends you can count on,” Jack said.

Alex grinned. “Fuck yeah!”

Harley smiled. “To friends.”

* *

Jack and Harley ended up having to carrying Alex back to the car after he ended up ordering five more drinks, but he did leave with Alice's phone number in his phone. Jack drove Alex to an apartment building over in Old Gotham district. The building was called the Daytonian with an old brick front, all the windows were small, but with ancient looking eaves over the windows. The year 1901 along with the building's name were carved into the brick over the main door leading into the apartment. By the time they arrived, Alex was three sheets to the wind, passed out in the back of the car.

Jack chuckled. “Think you can help me with him Harls?”

Harley laughed. “Sure thing puddin.”

They both stepped out of the car and hauled Alex out. Jack took a few moments to search him until they came up with a set of keys. Together, Jack and Harley leveraged Alex up, their task made slightly more difficult since Alex only had one arm to drape over their shoulders.

“How do you know where Alex lives?” Harley asked as they made their way up to the apartment building. Jack smiled. “Actually I'm not really sure he 'lives' here. Alex has several 'locations' he can be found at, but he likes to stay on the move. This the last place I remember meeting him, so here is hoping he still uses this place.”

When they came up to the main door they found that it was locked. Jack, balancing Alex with one arm and with Harley's help, managed to make his way through the several keys on Alex's key ring before he found the correct one.

Once inside it was only a matter of looking at the mailboxes. None of them had the name Alex, but one had the name Mr. Vaffanculo Cazzo. Jack snorted nearly dropping Alex. “Okay, that's his apartment right there. 5B."

Harley narrowed her eyes at the name. “How do you know that's him?”

Jack chuckled. “Because that's Italian, the first word is the phrase 'Go fuck yourself' and Cazzo is just Italian for 'dick' but it can be used as 'fuck' too.”

Harley started laughing as they hauled Alex to the elevator.

They managed to find the key on Alex's key ring after taking the elevator to the fifth floor where they opened Alex's apartment and unceremoniously dumped him onto his couch before heading home themselves.

It was nearly five in the morning by the time they arrived back at Wayne Manor. Jack just parked the car up front in the drive way, the two of them nearly stumbling out as exhaustion started to hit them.

When they reached their room, the first thing they both did was strip and head straight for the shower.

Harley sighed closing her eyes when she stepped into the shower with Jack. The warm water felt wonderful on her sore, bruised body. Jack was standing in front of her, his eyes closed, letting the warm run over him as well, his hands resting on her hips and his head back.

“How are you feeling toots?” Jack asked opening one eye to look down at her after they had been standing in the shower quietly for a few minutes.

Harley smiled wrapping her arms around his waist and pulling herself closer to lay her head against his wet chest. “Sore and tired. And my knuckles hurt a lot.”

Jack smiled with a light chuckle, kissing the top of her wet hair. “Me too pumpkin, me too. Though it was a lot of fun beating the crap out of that Blockbuster.”

Harley giggled in agreement. “It was fun beating Ivy.”

Jack caught her chin between his thumb and forefinger lifting her face up. “You were magnificent out there,” Jack whispered.

Harley smiled up at him her eyes warm with affection. “You were amazing Jack. It was so hot just wanting you.”

Jack laughed and purred. “I felt the same way watching you my lovely cupcake. You were gorgeous.”

Jack kissed her, taking soft, light nibbles of her lips. Harley groaned reaching up to wrap her arms around his neck. They kissed long and deep for what seemed forever before Jack pulled away.

“All right my Harls. Let's get cleaned up.”
After their shower, Jack surprised Harley by lifting her up into his arms and carrying her bridal style to the bed. They snuggled down in the cool silk sheets wrapping their naked bodies around each other. Jack stroked her face kissing her softly, the tips of his fingers brushing down her throat and across the tops of her breasts in a gentle caress that lulled her, making her eyes heavy. Jack whispered to her, kissing her cheeks, then her lips. “Go to sleep Harley. We can pick this up in the morning.”

She smiled sleepily up at him, her arms wrapped tight around his naked body. “I love you Jack.”

“Mm...I love you my Harl-girl. Close your eyes,” he whispered pressing his mouth to hers kissing her sweetly. It wasn't long before they fell asleep in each others arms.

Harley dreamed she was back at the fight club, dressed the same as she had been when she was fighting, but instead of Ivy standing before her it was Harleen dressed in her physician's clothing. Harley growled. “I thought I killed you.”

Harleen frowned and tilted her head to examine Harley. “I'm not that easy to get rid of Harley, because I'm the you you started life as, you won't ever be able to completely get rid of me.” Harleen followed Harley with her eyes, her expression one of doctorly concern. “You took a great deal of pleasure in beating Ivy up...would you have stopped if you didn't have to?”

Harley frowned. “I...I don't know.”

Harleen smiled softly. “That's what concerns me so much Harley. You just aren't yourself.” She took her glasses off to clean them with the edge of her lab coat.

“Is there any way I can convince you to stop this madness? You know what Jack is planning on doing to the Randells. He will probably right out kill Troy Randell and he'll expect you to do the same to Tiffany. Unless someone stops him. If he doesn't kill Troy, he'll at least beat him as close to death as possible...you know that's the truth. These are innocent people, Harley!”

Harley smiled walking in a circle around Harleen. “Please, one person's madness is another person's reality—or something like that.” Harley giggled. “And the Randells, innocent? Are you serious? They are as far from innocent as you can get!”

Harleen frowned watching her. “This isn't you. You don't hurt people for no reason Harley.”

Harley stopped, examining Harleen as she stood with her hands on her hips. “You aren't me either Harleen. Jack has showed me so many things! Besides, I've been hurt by plenty of 'innocent' people. My mother, my stepfather, my half-siblings, people who I thought were friends...strangers. And no one ever pays for it. NO ONE!!” Harley's rage bubbled to the surface causing her to growl. “I'm tired of being the victim in my life. Jack has shown me another way. He showed me the humor in everything, in life...everything is unfair! That's the punchline! Life is unfair and you die! So why take anything seriously? Why obey laws put in place that don't protect anyone!” Harley shuddered and started to walk around Harleen again. “Jack said that by killing you I was freeing myself, but you're still here! That isn't FAIR!”

“You won't ever really be free of me Harley. You know that right? You can't just kill off part of yourself—it's not possible.” Harleen smiled and reached out a hand to her. “Let me help you find your way back.”
That was when Harley rushed forward and hit Harleen in the face with her fist as hard as she could trying to break that part of her, trying to separate Harleen from Harley.

“If I can’t kill you, then I’m going to lock you away and bury you so deep that you’ll never find your way back!”

Harley hit Harleen again, dropping her to the floor where Harley pounced on her. Harley straddled Harleen, tears running down her cheeks, her teeth clinched as she hit her over and over and over again until Harleen’s face unrecognizable, a bloody mess.

Harley stood up, her knuckles covered in blood and watched with a smile as an iron box formed around Harleen’s prone form. The metal sides of the box popped into existence around Harleen, folding up, squeezing her, folding her into the box until, in place of Harleen, sat the metal box with a barred opening at the top. Harley walked over and looked in. All she could see was darkness and one blue eye looking up at her.

Harleen’s voice drifted up from the box. “I will always be here—always Harley, always.”

Harley snarled back. “I’m going to bury you so deep you will never bother me again.”

With that, a hole opened up underneath the box and it fell into the darkness below accompanied by Harleen’s screams. “I’M STILL PART OF YOU!!!”

Harley woke with a start and a gasped. “No you’re not!”

She felt the rumble of Jack’s laugh against her cheek where she had her head nestled against his chest.

“There you are. I was beginning to wonder when you were going to wake up. You all right sweets, because you seemed to be having a fight in your dream, the way you were jerking around. Who were you talking to? ‘No you’re not?’ Do you remember what that was about?.” Jack brushed her hair from her eyes as he spoke, shifting his position in order to rest her head in the crook of his arm.

Harley yawned rubbing her eyes. “Oh it was...it was nothing.”

She shifted her position so that she could look into Jack’s face. She smiled. His hair was rumpled, falling across his brow and he smelled so good, a scent that was spicy and sweet at the same time. She smiled happily and ran her hand in a gentle caress across his chest.

Jack frowned with concern. “You sure pumpkin?”

Harley smiled continuing to run her hand over his chest. “Yes, I promise. It was nothing to worry about; just a dream.”

Jack nodded continuing to stroke his fingers through her hair before he said softly with a smile. “I had a fantastic idea for this afternoon.”

Harley giggled. The expression on Jack’s face was child like naughtiness. Jack wagged his eyebrows at her. “We should do yoga.”

“Yoga?” Harley frowned confused because that was not what she was expecting.

Jack chuckled. “One of my first therapists had me doing yoga as a way to ‘calm my anger.’” Jack lay on his back and put his hands together and moved them apart as if he were creating a rainbow of the phrase.

Harley laughed. “I’m gathering from the way you’re saying it, yoga didn’t work?”

Jack shook his head. “Nah. Annoyed me more than it actually helped. Which was why I had a violent outburst one afternoon when he was making me do a series of poses. His voice was the most annoying thing I had ever heard! I wanted to rip his tongue out! Instead I just broke his Adam’s apple.” Jack chuckled while Harley squealed with laughter. “Jack that’s terrible!”

“I know. I’m a troubled person.” He laughed hugging her tight against him. “BUT yoga with you will be fun!”

Jack grabbed her and rolled her onto her back, laying his entire body on top of her. “I thought, after seeing how amazingly flexible you are...I might be willing to try yoga again, you know...for part of my therapy.”

Harley grinned up at him. “Oh you did, did you?”

Jack’s grin was wide, his eyes dancing with mischief. “I do!” That was when he snaked himself down her torso and blew on her stomach until Harley was squealing with laughter. “JACK WAYNE!! YOU ARE TERRIBLE!!”

Jack laughed. “Oh, you don’t know the half of it Harley Quinn!”

They laughed having an impromptu tickle fight when Jack’s head, which had been buried between Harley’s breasts, popped up.

“I almost forgot! I received a text from Bruce earlier. We have been asked to have dinner with him and Selina tonight.” Jack grinned, resting his chin between her breasts.

Harley raised her eyebrows in mild shock. “Really?”

“Yup. I think Bruce wants us to play nice.” Jack sighed rolling off of her, but he pulled her into the crook of his arm as he did so.

“Do you want to play nice?” Harley asked softly.

“Well, sure, I guess we can be good for a night. Bruce has never wanted me to have dinner with any of the women he has dated before.” Jack said slightly confused, as if just realizing this point.

Harley smiled and ventured, “Maybe it will be fun? Where are we going?”

Jack made a rude noise that caused Harley to laugh. “We are heading to Eleven Robinson Park.”

Harley whistled. “That place is expensive and very hard to get into!”

Jack grinned. “Yep, Bruce must really like Selina, going all out on this one.”

“We get to dress up.” Harley said it like she was holding out a treat to Jack. “I can paint your nails, do your make up...”

Jack wrinkled his nose then giggled. “Okay fine, we’ll go...but first you have to...”
Bruce had a million last minutes details to do for the party tomorrow night. Everything had come together quickly with Selina's help and he was confident that the party would go off without a hitch. He had the caterers ready, the decorations, Alfred had perused the wine cellar and picked out several cases for the party, and with the help of the secretary pool here at Wayne Enterprises, the invitations had been sent out first class and he was already receiving RSVP's, the guest list growing by the hour. Bruce had only two details left to take care of before tomorrow night: music and his costume, both of which he hoped to have taken care of before he left the office since after that he would be at his...other job. Selina had her costume; she had sent him a picture earlier this morning showing him that she was wearing a traditional Venetian masquerade dress of black and silver taffeta with painted silver garlands and matching stomacher and petticoat along with an ornate black and silver mask that Bruce could tell was going to make her eyes pop. She was going to look beautiful.

Bruce had decided to match his costume to hers, black and silver with a coat, waistcoat and knee breeches all embroidered with silver, along with his own ornate silver and black mask (though masks were not required at the party), but he really didn't have time to go to pick up the outfit himself. Thankfully Alfred knew exactly where to go and had told Bruce to leave everything to him. So now Bruce was making final arrangements for the music. Bruce sat at his desk in his office making calls to find a string quartet that was free for that evening.

Bruce had just found a group, a local group of young people, all in their early twenties who were not only talented, but free that night when he received a text from Selina.

“How's my Bruce doing, ready to party?”

Bruce chuckled looking down at the text, his heart doing a little flip at the thought of her. Selina did things to him that no other woman did, made him feel something real. This one, she might be the one, she certainly felt like the one, Bruce mused to himself as he texted back.

“Ready to dance with you.”

Selina texted. “Dance the night away under the stars? You have a date Mr. Wayne.”

Bruce texted back. “Still on for dinner tonight? Meet the family?”

There was a bing as he received Selina's text. “Wild horses couldn't keep me away.”

Bruce smiled and texted back. “Thank you Selina. I will pick you up at eight.”

“Where are we going?”

Bruce smiled. “We are having dinner at Eleven Robinson Park restaurant.”

Selina texted back. “How on earth did you get us a table?”

Bruce smiled as he responded. “One of the benefits of being Bruce Wayne.”

Selina sent back. “LOL. See you then Bruce xxx.”

Bruce smiled, but then frowned slightly. He was hoping that dinner tonight with Jack and Harley would be a good bonding experience, for both him and Jack as well as playing a bit of damage control. He knew he didn't know everything that Jack and Harley got up to, which only made him more wary and more worried—he worried constantly about Jack. He felt as if what little grasp he had on his brother had been slowly slipping away and now with Dr. Quinzel...Bruce shook his head, he just didn't know, but maybe—maybe this dinner would be good for them both.
Harley was bent over with her hands under her feet, completely naked. Jack was beside her doing the same pose, also stark naked.

Harley turned her head to look at him with a giggle. “I don't know how you talked me into this!”

Jack chuckled. “It's me, that's how.” He waggled his eyebrows. “You know, I'm finding yoga is still not calming at all—it's rather...erotic.” Jack giggled like a schoolboy. Harley laughed and shook her head.

“Okay, now I want you to watch me and lie flat on the floor.” They both laid on their backs, arms at their sides flat on the floor. Jack grinned watching her as he spoke. “Now press the flat of your feet to the floor and the palms of your hands flat to the floor too.”

Harley did as he instructed. Jack did the same then said softly rolling his head to the side so that they were eye to eye. “All right, raise your rear into the air.” Harley pressed her teeth into her bottom lip with an impish grin, watching Jack lift his hips up, her eyes following the tight line of muscles in his rear, following those lean muscles along his thighs and over his hips, her mouth actually watering.

“Harley, are you paying attention?” Jack grinned. He was a little distracted watching the way her breasts moved as she lifted herself up. Harley giggled. “Yes and no. You're distracting Jack.” Harley waggled her eyebrows at him in an imitation of him which had Jack chuckling. He pushed up on his hands, stretching his back as he formed his body into a perfect arch, with one very noticeable physical difference. Harley’s eyes were right on Jack’s quickly hardening erection, catching her bottom lip in her teeth as she mirrored his pose, her blue eyes taking in every desirable inch of Jack’s body. She had never felt this much need for anyone in her life. She needed Jack like she needed oxygen. He was her everything and right now everything looked damn good she thought.

Jack chuckled then surprised her by bringing his legs around and over his head, placing them flat on the ground before he stood up as gracefully as any gymnast. Harley laughed. “I didn't know you could do that!”

Jack grinned, pleased with himself. “Nice to know I'm still full of surprises.”

Harley giggled doing the same exact move, coming up onto her feet gracefully. Jack sighed. “That was just beautiful. Okay,” he said with a nod, “now for out next position—press your hands flat to the floor and slowly raise your left leg straight into the air behind you like a standing split.”

Harley smirked and did as he suggested, holding the pose. Jack, continuing to be impressed by her flexibility and wondering how far he could push her, slowly walked around her figure his eyes raking over her body, his desire clear in his hardening erection and the way that Jack licked his lips walking a full circle around her.

“All right sweets, now put both feet on the floor, then your hands, with your rear in the air.” He smirked watching her. Harley giggled watching Jack walk around until he was behind her. He stepped in close and she could feel him behind her, a gentle brush of silken hardness against her backside. Jack reached forward and ran the flat of his hands along her lower back first, then over the curve of her rear and down, feeling the satin texture of her skin under his fingertips, the creamy feel of her pale flesh as well as the lean muscles of her body.

Jack purred. “So soft, yet strong Harley, I just want to take a bite out of you..”

He smiled, his eyes picking up each bruise she had received from last night’s fight, each cut,
Jack pressed his hands against her, squeezing gently, his thumbs rolling against her skin, sliding his hands along the back of her thighs and up again causing Harley to exhale a groan of pleasure.

“Mm...perfection,” he whispered.

Harley’s eyes rolled closed with the pleasurable feeling of his fingers against her skin. She pressed her teeth into her bottom lip with a tiny moan. “Hummm...”

Jack rubbed up against her, prodding softly, teasing her damp opening, but no more than that, just a gentle probe while his hands skated up and down her backside. When Jack spoke again his voice was heavy with want...

“Now...” Jack swallowed. “On your knees and bend backwards to wrap your hands around her ankles.”

Jack stepped back to allow her to change her position, watching her move, licking his lips and running the top of his teeth over his bottom lip; his blue eyes glittered with desire. “That’s it Harley.”

Harley bent backwards and smiled at Jack. He stood there unmoving just watching her when Harley whispered. “Come closer Jack.”

Jack grinned gazing down at her, stepping closer. Harley’s blue eyes twinkled. She gazed up at him grinning when Jack wrapped his hand around his shaft and eased the head of his erection along her mouth, tracing the shape of her lips slowly. Harley smiled and then her tongue flicked out. The tip of her warm wet tongue eased along the tip of Jack’s shaft, rolling along the smooth surface of his sensitive skin, teasing him. Jack groaned. “Uhh...”

Jack stepped closer, pressing against her lips. Harley opened her mouth wider and Jack eased himself past her lips.

Jack groaned, his eyes rolled up, and his eyelids fluttered. He arched his back, sliding himself into her mouth, shuddering when he felt the warm wetness of her lips and tongue around him. Harley sucked, her tongue gliding up and down feeling him press against the roof of her mouth. Her teeth pressed back lightly, just enough to add a little spice to her sucking on him.

Jack hissed and spread his legs a little over her just before he bent forward over her body until his mouth was level her groin. He leaned over, trying to use his legs to steady himself while wrapping an arm around her hips, tugging her pelvis up just a little more in order for his tongue to snake between her folds. When she felt his tongue against her, Harley jerked and groaned around him in her mouth, which sent both of them into a fit of giggles, especially when Harley started to lean to the right and Jack lost his balance, falling to the left. Harley released Jack with a laugh as her arms wobbled for a moment and she fell sideways. Jack grabbed her around the waist falling to the floor at the same time.

“HA! Now I can have what I want!!” With that declaration, Jack buried his mouth between her legs. Harley squealed her laughter that quickly morphed into deep moans of pleasure when Jack’s hot wet tongue lavished her with deep licks and probes.

Harley scooted herself a little closer, resuming her oral attentions to Jack’s erection. She tugged one of his legs against her shoulder, her cheek against his inner thigh while she sucked slowly pulled her lips along his length in an agonizingly slow draw of her lips. When she stopped at the head of his penis, she swirled her tongue, covering him in saliva making sure he was wet before she gentle ran her teeth over the tender skin.
Jack rolled onto his back, his hands on her hips taking her with him. Harley almost choked on him when Jack yanked her with him, but she quickly recovered, adjusting herself over him so that she was on her knees and elbows; her sucking, now that she was in an upright position, became more vigorous, alternating between deep-throated sucks to little delicate nibbles and flicks of her tongue. She leaned heavily on one hand while wrapping the other around Jack's shaft, using her hand to punctuate her sucking, with strokes up and down while wetting him with her saliva to create a smooth slippery motion with her hand. Jack groaned; everything was wet and slippery sending chills up his spine.

Jack's moans were sprinkled with the occasional, “Oh Harley, Harls....uuhhh...pumpkin...Oh GOD Harls!!”

She bobbed her head vigorously for a few seconds before she stopped and pressed her lips against him in a sweet, tender kiss, drawing her lips up, until she reached the head where she circled her tongue around him, flicking her tongue against the sensitive spot at the tip of his penis.

Jack whimpered. “Harls...aahh...”

He threw his head back against the floor, unable to process for a few seconds. Harley knew exactly what she was doing and damn if she didn't make him feel like he just might black-out!

Jack focused enough to gaze at her above him, her legs spread presenting him with the beautiful sight of Harley completely exposed to him. Jack grinned, gliding his hands along her smooth rear, digging his fingers into her flesh and pulled her cheeks apart providing him the perfect diving ground for his tongue. Jack's tongue snaked out to take a long, warm lick of her—his soon-to-be-wife he thought—his everything. Jack licked the entirety of her, starting low and dragged his tongue over her like he was licking an ice cream cone, with the same delicate dedication she had shown him. He grinned when he felt her body give a little shudder.

Harley groaned. “Uuggoo...” She shuddered at the soft, wet heat of his tongue moving against her. She arched her back, her mouth full of his swelling mass as she did so. “Mmm...”

Jack caressed his fingers along her lower back continuing to dive and lick, taking his time, enjoying every little detail of her, enjoying the taste of her on his tongue, the muffled little groans of pleasure she made, even the scent of her drove him wild with the need to pound, to feel that ultimate pleasure of being buried inside her, to feel the tightness of her muscles surround him while he thrust hard. He felt the change in her body, the wetness of her surrounding him, the tension that was starting to build. Jack grinned, alternating his licks with tender nips which earned him muffled exclamations of pleasure from Harley that vibrated down his erection and through his groin.

Harley groaned around the silken hard pressure of his shaft against her tongue. “Hmmm...” just before she took him as deeply as she could, relaxing her gag reflex, her one hand pulling up and down rolling and tugging on him before dropping down to cup his balls in her hand and squeeze gently. Jack couldn't take it any longer.

“Oh god Harley...stop!! I need to fuck you!” Jack shoved on her.

Harley released him with a slight “pop” of her lips which caused Jack to groan loudly.

Jack groaned louder still. “God damn!”

Jack gently pushed her forward off his legs so he could get to his knees. He grinned at her, his lips wet with her. She started to roll onto her back, but Jack stopped her.
“Just stay on your side my sweet,” Jack purred. Harley grinned at him and lifted her bent leg. Jack guided himself into her, then hooked his right hand under her thigh while gripping her rear with his other hand.

He moaned. “Uuuhh...” with each thrust, the sound of him slapping against her flesh, the wet sucking noise of his erection moving in and out of her wetness sent goosebumps racing over his skin.

Harley whimpered, arching her back and raising her leg high, her bent leg against his chest. Jack grabbed her leg wrapping his arm around the limb and pressing it against his chest, increasing the speed of his thrusts.

Harley cried out as her orgasm rippled over and through her. “UuhuhUHHH....puddin!”

Jack was panting, thrusting harder, the slapping sound, the wet suction of her body holding onto him made Jack growl. “Yes, yes...Harley.”

She rolled just a little so she was facing him more. Jack slowed his thrusts down into smooth rolls of his body, his hips, using the whole of his body to roll into her. Harley smiled up at him. “Uuhh...uh Jack! Uh Puddin! I love you.”

Jack grinned down at her. “I love you too Harls...uh...you feel so good!”

“Uhh..Jack fuck me harder!” Harley reached up to run her nails down his chest. Jack's eyes rolled up at the exquisite mixture of pleasure and pain. He leaned forward dropping his arms to the side, her leg across his stomach and hissed, “Your wish is my command Harls...” Jack giggled, which turned into a deep growl of pleasure at the feel of her increased wetness. He caressed her throat with his fingers, reaching up to drag the tips of his fingers along her bottom lip. He continued to thrust slowly, but deeply, making Harley dizzy. For a moment she felt as if she couldn't breathe. He felt so good that all she could do was making inarticulate sounds of pleasure.

Jack suddenly leaned back and rolled her the rest of her way onto her back so that she was facing him. He dropped onto his elbows over her, their noses touching. He attacked her mouth with a kiss so deep that his tongue felt like it was completely in her mouth. Harley shivered; he tasted like cigarettes and coffee with a hint of something she couldn't identify, but it was uniquely him. Harley wrapped her arms around his neck, her legs wrapping around his waist, her toes pointed with the extreme intensity of their lovemaking.

Jack groaned into her mouth, surrounded by her taste, sweet vanilla and musk, the sweet feel of her wet tongue stroking his tongue, enveloped in the scent of her, the scent of warm vanilla.

Harley whimpered. “Oh Jack.” He felt her clamp down around him, her body struggled to arch toward him. Jack pressed his teeth into the soft section of flesh between her neck and shoulder. His thrusts picked up, becoming harder, deeper as he came rushing toward his orgasm.

Harley hissed. “Jaaack!!”

She came again, her entire body going tight. Jack thrust hard and fast a few more times before he came, bursting with a rush of hot liquid into her. Jack would have sworn he blacked out for a split second between his orgasm and his collapsing on top of her. The idea of which had him giggling for a few moments as he wrapped his arms around her, holding her tightly against him and settled down peppering her skin, her face, and neck with light butterfly kisses.

They were quiet for a few moments, struggling to catch their breaths went Jack whispered. “Best. Yoga. Ever!”
Harley started giggling. “I agree.”

Jack smiled, stroking her hair back from her face tenderly and gazed down at her. He spoke softly, barely a whisper.

“And for that moment of pure darkness, I see your soul shining brighter than it ever has. I love the weirdness in you and the gentle way you make me go insane.”

He rubbed his nose against her, brushing nips and kisses across her lips.

“Who wrote that?” Harley asked softly her hands stroking up and down his back, fingers playing along his spine. Jack frowned then whispered. “I think Jordon Sarah Weatherhead, though I can't be sure…”

He nuzzled her neck, nibbling on and off as he whispered again. “The world is filled with horrible things that will eventually kill you. Laughter is the best way to tell the universe: 'Not today you bastard.'” Jack giggled. “I like that one quite a bit.”

Harley giggled wrapping herself around him. “I think we should stay here all day until dinner.”

Jack licked her ear and hissed against it. “I think that is a fantastic idea my little cupcake. Should we stay right here on the floor or move to the bed?”

Harley giggled. “The bed, though the floor is a lot of fun too.”

Jack started to laugh, tickling her sides until Harley was squealing for him to stop.

Several hours later, Harley stood by the mirror in the bathroom examining her reflection. She turned left then right admiring the dress that Jack had had sent over that afternoon. The dress was a deep shimmering ruby red, with matching bicep long red gloves. The skirt of the dress was an accordion-pleated tulle with a double V-neckline with a pair of black ghillie strap four inch heels. Underneath she wore only a pair of lace panties, sans bra. She had her hair in an elegant low ponytail, a lock of her hair wrapped around the tail with loose tendrils framing her face and simple diamond studs in her ears.

Her eye makeup was done in a dark metallic smokey eye that made her light blue eyes standout against her pale skin and her lips were done in a neutral shade with just enough shine to make her lips desirable. She did one more spin before she walked out. Her nails were painted a flat shade of black that matched Jack's nails.

Jack was finishing with his tie when Harley stepped out. He stopped to stare at her. “You are a vision, Harley.”

Jack laughed. “Well, thank you my sweet.”

Jack was dressed as he preferred, in a three-piece suit, black on black pinstriped suit, with peaked lapels. The shirt underneath was white, but the tie was a black with deep purple polkadots. His socks matched the tie as he walked over and slipped his shoes on, a pair of black, pointed toe, monk-strapped dress shoes. Jack had matching black leather gloves to go with the suit and had even put a deep purple rose into his lapel. His dark hair was slicked by and Harley had outlined his eyes and glossed his lips.

Jack chuckled putting his arm out to her. “Ready to go play nice with the big brother's new girlfriend?”

Harley laughed as she took Jack's arm. “Are we riding with them or meeting them there?”

“Bruce has already left to pick up Selina, so we are meeting them there.” Jack turned her toward the bedroom door. “Bruce must actually be nervous!” Jack chuckled at the thought. “He must really like this one too, since he took off to go pick her up.”

They headed out to the front where Alfred had brought around a plum colored Bentley Flying Spur with black leather interior. Alfred smiled when he saw the two of them walking down the stairs just as he walked in the front door from delivering the car up front. “You two are a vision.” Alfred said with a smile, unknowingly echoing their compliments to each other upstairs.

The young couple laughed.

“Thanks Alfred!” Jack wrinkled his nose, pleased with the compliment.

“Well, I hope you have a nice dinner with your brother and Miss Kyle,” Alfred said as he held the keys up for Jack. Jack grinned as Alfred dropped the keys into Jack's open palm. “I promise to behave Dad.”

Alfred chuckled. “Thank you Master Jack, I appreciate it. As I'm sure your brother will.”

Harley let go of Jack's arm to take Alfred by the shoulders, giving the older man a peck on the cheek.

“I promise to take care of him Alfred.”

Alfred chuckled. “Thank you Miss Harley. I appreciate it.”

Harley giggled lightly, taking Jack's arm. Alfred watched them leave, waving as they pulled away.

He sighed thinking to himself. “Please let the boys get along tonight.”

Bruce was doing his best not to 'beam,' but since picking up Selina he couldn't keep the smile off his face. She looked amazing. Well, he thought, she always looked amazing, but tonight especially so. She was wearing a black, off the shoulder sheath column dress with white gold appliques on her waist that highlighted her trim figure. Her black hair was styled to frame her face. She had paired the dress with a pair of black stilettos which made her nearly as tall as Bruce.

Bruce walked into the restaurant beside her smiling. He wore a stylish black suit with a solid black tie and black dress shirt and shoes, the two of them looking perfectly matched.

The restaurant was decorated in black and golds, with chandeliers that resembled exploding glass flowers. The lighting was warm and subdued, almost dark, and there was a piano player in the corner playing some light jazz in the background that drifted over the restaurant patrons. There was a small dance floor where a handful of couples were dancing slowly to the music. A waiter dressed in black slacks and vest with a crisp white shirt and a name tag that read Alfie smiled with a slight bow before leading them into the main interior of the restaurant. He was cheerful as he led them to their table in the corner, away from most of the other patrons, giving them a little more privacy.
“When will your brother and his fiancee arrive?” Selina asked as Bruce pulled her seat out for her.

Bruce smiled gently pushing her seat back in once she was seated. “I should think they will be here any time now.”

That was when he heard Jack's voice carry across the restaurant with that slight sing song that Jack liked. “Hey Brucie!” which was accompanied by Harley's giggling. Bruce closed his eyes and took a breath before turning around. Jack and Harley came walking across the restaurant looking stunning. They were both dressed to the nines, smiling and happy; Bruce had to concede they were both dressed impeccably, a dashing and elegant couple.

“Jack, Harley glad you both could make it,” Bruce said with a smile as they approached the table. Bruce frowned slightly in curiosity as he noticed a healing cut on Jack's lip, but he said nothing about it.

Jack laughed. “Wouldn't miss a chance to play family!”

Jack pulled Harley's chair out for her, kissing her cheek and then licking her ear (which made Bruce cringe, but Selina actually found it amusing) before taking the seat next to her and scooting his chair closer to Harley. Bruce frowned for just a brief moment at the way Harley and Jack were looking at him, as if they had a deadly secret that the two of them found entertaining. He felt a tickle run up his spine, a sensation he usually had when there was something vital staring him in the face, but he couldn't see what that vital piece of information was...Bruce shook the feeling away and took his seat again.

The waiter was waiting patiently for the two couples to become settled before he smiled and said. “I'm your waiter for tonight, Alfie. What can I get everyone to drink?”

Bruce smiled. “I will be sticking to water this evening. Selina?”

Selina smiled. “May I have a glass of Bartenura moscato?”

“Of course miss and for you sir? Ma'am?” Alfie turned toward them.

Jack smiled, taking his gloves off as he spoke and sliding them into a pocket inside his jacket. “Oh I love the name, Alfie. I call our butler that sometimes.”

Alfie smiled as Jack continued. “Whiskey, neat. And a grape soda with two straws. Harley?”

Harley smiled, but giggled at Jack's request for a grape soda out of the blue. “Mm...a Rob Roy please.”

Bruce pressed his lips together. He was fairly sure that Jack had driven here, so he was upset that Jack had ordered a drink. He wanted to say something, but he refrained from saying anything. No point in starting out the evening with an argument.

Jack leaned back in his chair, crossing his long legs and folding his hands across his knee. “So, Selina, you and Brucie seem to be getting along really well.”

Harley leaned close to Jack, her red gloved arm went through the circle of his hands resting on his knee. Jack reach up with one finger to stroke her hand.

Selina smiled. “I like to think so.”

Bruce smiled speaking softly, reaching over to take her hand and kiss Selina's knuckles. “I think we are too.”

“So, what are your intentions toward my big brother?” Jack asked as Harley leaned close and kissed his ear. Jack smiled leaning into her. Selina frowned slightly, the two of them were extremely...affectionate. Jack continued. “I mean, you can't escape the fact that there are billions of dollars attached to the Wayne name. None of that is enticing?” “Intentions?” Selina asked glancing at Bruce. (She took a calming breath. This would be tricky because the money was the attraction, but now...damn it Selina! You cannot fall in love with Bruce Wayne, you can't, she told herself.) Bruce frowned at Jack and started to open his mouth, but Jack continued. “Well I figured it's my job to grill you about what your intentions are toward my brother, since he felt the urge to do the same to Harley. On more than one occasion.”

(While they were speaking, the waiter returned with their drinks, placing them on the table in front of their respective owners.)

Harley pressed her fingers against Jack's knee, not to stop him, but to support him. It had been—nasty—the way Bruce had kept questioning her, questioning Jack...both of them, as if Harley had something up her sleeve. Though Harley supposed she really couldn't blame Bruce. He had only just reluctantly started to accept her...

Bruce hissed. “Jack! That's enough!”

Selina smiled and rested a hand on Bruce's arm. “It's fine. I understand. I don't have any 'intentions,' Jack. I just enjoy your brother's company. We have fun, we understand each other, like a lot of the same things and...well that's all I want for right now. I'm not after Bruce's money.” (Which Selina reminded herself was the truth.) She smiled at Jack.

Jack lifted a brow and grinned. “Oooh...a mostly honest answer! Surprising.”

“Mostly?” Bruce narrowed his eyes at Jack who chuckled. “Please Bruce, everyone has their little secrets, even you.” Jack smiled tilting his head at Bruce. Bruce noticed the way his younger brother's blue eyes seemed to bore into his...the deeper blue of Jack's eyes were steady and for a moment Bruce felt a chill run up his spine. For a tense moment Bruce thought Jack might know about Batman...but then the waiter came over again and the spell was broken.

“Is everyone prepared to order?” Alfie smiled.

Bruce picked up his menu. “Yes, ah, I'll have the ribeye steak with peppercorn and blue cheese. Selina?”

Selina perused the menu with a smile. “Yes, I will have the grilled chicken and papaya salad.”

“And for the two of you?” Alfie turned his attention toward Jack and Harley. Jack smiled glancing to Harley. “What would you like my sweet?”

Harley smiled at Jack reaching up to trace his jaw with her gloved finger. “Mm...I think the chicken roulade.”

Jack kissed her cheek, then handed the waiter the menu. “The same for me Alfie dear.”

“Very good.” Alfie smiled and headed off to put their orders in.

Selina smiled after the waiter left. “So, Jack, Harley when is your wedding? Bruce tells me you two are engaged.”
Harley smiled. “We are planning for a Halloween wedding, but we are going to have an engagement party soon.”

Jack grinned at Bruce's reaction though Bruce said nothing. Jack turned to Harley. “Would you like to dance before dinner? My pumpkin?”

Harley smiled taking a sip of her drink and setting it down before she answered. “I would love to.”

Jack stood and held out his hand to Harley. The two of them walked out onto the dance floor, Jack spinning Harley into his embrace. The piano player started to play John Legend's “All of Me.”

Jack smiled weaving slowly, one arm around Harley's waist, the other holding her hand against his. He smiled, his voice dropped to barely a whisper against her ear adding the lyrics to the song that was being played, singing just for her.

“'Cause all of me
Loves all of you
Love your curves and all your edges
All your perfect imperfections
Give your all to me
I'll give my all to you
You're my end and my beginning
Even when I lose I'm winning
'Cause I give you all of me
And you give me all of you, oh oh....”

Bruce frowned watching his brother and Harley for a moment. Selina smiled. “I don't think I have seen two people that much in love before. They seemed...I don't know...” she let the thought trail off.

Selina tilted her head examining them. Bruce frowned deeper; something unsettled him about them, and had from the beginning of their steamroller of a relationship. He just didn't know what it was.

He mentally shook his head clearing his thoughts before turning to Selina. “Would you like to dance?”

She smiled. “I thought you would never ask, Bruce.”

The piano player had started a new song, a piano cover of “A Sky Full of Stars.” Jack and Harley seemed completely unaware of anyone else, continuing to dance, moving in a slow circle in one corner of the dance floor.

Bruce watched his brother for a few seconds before he wrapped his arm around Selina's waist. “Jack—he worries me.”

“Worries you?” Selina frowned and glanced over at Jack and Harley.
“It's...it's a long story.” Bruce turned her around slowly.

“Well, whenever you feel like telling me Bruce, just know I'm here for you.” Selina smiled and kissed his cheek. She surprised herself with how much she meant it.

After another dance, their small group headed back to the table for dinner. Jack took a sip of his whiskey and asked, “So, what costumes are you two wearing tomorrow night? Harley and I are going as Bonnie and Clyde.”

Selina laughed. “Oh, I love that! Wonderful idea! Bruce and I are both wearing traditional Venetian costumes.”

Harley smiled. “Ah that's cute! Couple costumes too!”

Bruce blushed taking a sip of his water before cutting into his steak. “So, Brucie, how much security is going to be crawling about the estate for this party tomorrow night?” Jack cut a bite of his food and fed it to Harley, playing with it across her lips before she opened her mouth, giving Jack a suggestive look while he gradually slipped the fork between her teeth.

“Enough,” Bruce said taking a sip of water. “The paintings will each have two guards, though the Picasso—that is the highlight of the party—will have four, plus just some wandering extra security.”

Selina kept her expression neutral. She had been counting on two guards. “Will you be keeping the paintings overnight?” Selina asked between bites of her salad.

Bruce smiled. “Yes, simply because I expect the party to run late. These things always do, but I do have a safe in a secure room on the manor.”

Selina smiled and nodded. Okay, that at least was part of the plan. She had paid a pretty penny to get access to the Wayne Manor blueprints and a list of the security systems that were used at the estate. She could deal with two extra guards, no problem. Selina glanced sideways at Bruce and for a brief moment, a shadow passed over her features, but just as quickly was gone.

Jack and Harley decided to leave before dessert. Jack was feeling just a little uncomfortable and irritated. Something about Selina was bothering him; he just couldn't put his finger on what it was about her that had him so irritated. He thought maybe it was the way Bruce seemed to leap to her defense at the slightest hint of an insult...or perhaps it was the double standard. Selina, whom Bruce had only known a short time, (just as he had only known Harley a short time when they became a couple) was more trustworthy than Harley? As if since Bruce had chosen her, Selina was fine, perfect! But because Jack had chosen Harley, Harley was suspect, as if because he loved her, clearly there was something wrong with Harley. Because Jack Wayne could never make a 'good' choice! That thought wormed its way under Jack's skin, pissing him off more and more as the evening wore on.

As far as Jack was concerned, there were definitely some secrets behind that woman Selina's smile, but anytime Jack started to steer the conversation toward asking Selina questions about herself, Bruce would come charging in like a protective bulldog. It was clear that Bruce felt as if Jack was being a prick.

Jack stood abruptly, taking Harley's hand to bring her to her feet. He let go only long enough to slip his gloves on. He smiled, but with an undercurrent of sarcasm when he turned his gaze to Bruce.
“Well, it was a wonderful evening, but Harley and I should be going. We are both looking forward to seeing you tomorrow evening at the party.” He smiled flatly at Selina.

Harley reached out for Jack's hand after he slipped his gloves on. She could feel the tension that seemed to rush up his arm to hers. She glanced sideways at him, could see the stiffness in his jaw, the ice in his gaze. She turned back to Bruce and Selina. “It was nice. See you tomorrow.”

With that Jack turned stiffly, tugging her with him.

They walked out to where Jack had parked the car along the back of the restaurant. He was walking quickly and stiffly, dragging Harley behind him.

“Jack?” Harley spoke softly.

Jack didn't say anything until they had reached the car. He opened the door for her on the passenger side nearly tossing her into the car before he walked around and threw himself behind the wheel shoving the key into the ignition.

Harley reached out and stroked his shoulder. “Jack?”

Jack ground his teeth. “Bruce is such a fucking hypocrite! Because she's a woman he picked, then clearly everything is perfect with her. But because you are mine! BECAUSE I chose you, Bruce has to throw doubts on our love, on our relationship as if I can't have anything GOOD in my life! That I am such a fool, such a lost cause, there is no way I could do anything GOOD!” Jack slammed his fists against the steering wheel hard enough that the vibration raced up his arms.

Harley reached out and grabbed Jack's fists, but he turned on her with a snarl, his eyes flashing. For a moment she saw the madness that nestled in the back of Jack's personality like a small black creature crouching in the shadows.

“Jack?” Harley asked timidly, not out of fear for herself, but in worry for the man she loved.

Jack's frown slowly transformed into a snarl as he gazed at her. Then he reached out wrapping his hand round the back of her neck, grabbing a handful of her hair and yanked her toward him, pressing his mouth punishingly against hers. Harley let out a whimper of surprise and pain as her lips pressed painfully against her teeth. Jack crushed his mouth against hers, forcing his tongue past her lips. She could feel the rage in him, in the painful way he held her hair, the force of his kiss, but there was something else there mixed with the rage. Fear and pain...Bruce's disapproval hurt Jack more than he would ever admit out loud while he struggled to dismiss it at the same time.

Harley reached over grabbing Jack's head with both her gloved hands returning his kiss just as hard. Jack fumbled with his other hand, finding the handle and knocking the front seat back as far as it would go before he yanked her over onto his lap. He shoved her dress up to the sound of tearing fabric. Harley groaned, biting hard at his lips, tasting blood when her teeth brushed against the healing cut on Jack's lips and the flavor of whiskey on his tongue. He growled in response which was accompanied by the sound of more tearing fabric when Jack reached under her dress, using both hands to rip her panties away, tossing them to the floor of the car. Harley groaned digging her nails into his skin dragging them down the sides of his neck before she started tearing at his tie, working it free, nearly choking him as she ripped the tie away and threw it to the back of the car. She then peeled his vest open aggressively, popping one of the buttons when she yanked the fabric aside. Next, she grabbed his shirt with both hands and simply tore it open, the whole while biting and sucking at Jack's neck.

Jack’s groan was more animal than human as his hands worked to undo his slacks freeing himself and without preambling he shoved her down hard on his erection. It didn't matter; Harley was wet for him, soaking, aching with need to feel him inside her. Harley gasped at the sudden feel of his body inside hers, but at the same time he felt incredible when he speared her, arching her back with a gutteral gasp of pleasure.

Jack brought his hands up from under her dress and grabbed the front of her outfit with his hands and wrenched, tearing the fabric in two directions, causing a rip to race down from the point of the V that was her neckline, tearing down as Jack continued to pull and tug until the dress was only hanging on Harley by the straps.

Jack attacked her breasts hungrily, sucking and biting in equal parts, tugging at her silky skin with his teeth, pulling back on her skin until she yelped, then he would kiss her skin tenderly, rolling his tongue over the spot he had bitten down on, leaving teeth shaped bruises on her skin. He leaned the seat back as far as it would go, one hand on her thigh, his fingers digging into her skin painfully while his other hand reached back into her hair.

Harley put her hands on the seat behind Jack, grinding her hips to meet his hard upward thrusts. She couldn't think straight; all she could do was feel, the mixture of pleasure that was accentuated with the sharp moments of pain. They fucked hard and fast in the front seat, kissing each other with a greedy desperate need until Harley gasped, arching with the heated explosion that ripped through her. She groaned loudly, indecently loud, digging her fingers into Jack's shoulders with enough strength that she was going to leave bruises. Anyone walking too close would have seen and heard her explosive moans.

(A couple making their way to their vehicle after dinner heard the sounds of grunts and cries. The man had tugged his girlfriend closer to the car where the sounds were emitting from, wondering if someone was in trouble, only to have one of the lights in the parking lot give the couple an explicit hint of what was going on in the Bentley...) Jack grinned watching her climax, her back arched, her lips parted, red from the bruised kisses they had shared, the complete abandon in her expression, the yellow light from outside dancing across her milky white breasts. He pressed both hands against the back of her hips forcing her down on him while he continued to fuck in a series of hard, fast upward thrusts that caused her to bounce slightly, her head knocking lightly against the roof of the car.

“Oohuhuhhh!! Jack!! Puddin!! YES!” Harley whimpered. She continued to feel the intense ripples of pleasure running through her as if her orgasm was just a continuing wave of pleasure rising and crashing over and over again.

Jack was panting hard, his fingers holding her painfully down on him, gazing up at her through his thick lashes, a wide hard grin on his face. “Harley, pumpkin...my girl...Grrr...uuhhh...”

His climax was an explosion, as if his entire body was emptying into her, all his emotion, every ounce of rage, fear and anguish mixed with the intensity of his lust, possessiveness, and love for Harley.

Jack dropped his head back against his seat with a few more thrusts into her body, his eyes closed against the intensity of his orgasm. He groaned letting out a deep sigh as his entire body went limp. Harley wrapped her arms around his shoulders burying her face against the hollow between his neck and shoulder.

“I love you Jack,” she whispered.

Jack stroked his hands up and down her back in slow, lazy movements. “I love you Harley.”

They were quiet for a long while, their breathing returning to normal.
“Sorry about the dress,” Jack said softly.

Harley giggled. “Don't be.”

Jack smiled then, his fingers going into her hair using a fistful of the thick blonde locks to lift her head up. She was smiling, her lips bruised. “Ready to go home?” Jack whispered.

“Mm...Yes puddin...home.” Harley smiled leaning in to nip his lips. Jack chuckled. Harley started to move off his lap, but Jack stopped her. “Just lie back down sweets. I think I can drive home like this.”

Harley giggled pressing herself against him as Jack turned the key and started the engine.

Chapter End Notes

Sorry for this chapter being late! Had a SUPER early appt. at the hospital. Next weeks chapter might be late as well. Going to be having injections in my right shoulder. Doc said I might not be able to use my arm for a few days...but who knows. Going to try and get the chapter done on time! :)
See the end of the chapter for notes.

Jack was awoken the next afternoon by an incoming text. Jack was lying on his stomach, naked in bed, with Harley nearly on top of him. Her leg was across his lower back, her hand in his hair, her body almost rolled on top of him. Jack smiled, content feeling Harley next to him as he reached over blindly for the phone. He managed to pick it up without dropping it and examined the incoming text; it was from Alex.

“Guess who has a date with the fucking waitress!!”

Jack chuckled texting back using just his thumb. “You should bring her tonight.”

“To that fucking party at yr place?”

Jack grinned. “Yup.”

“Oh fuck yeah! Guess who is getting laid tonite!!”

Jack chuckled again. “LOL”

“Hey wht kinda costume should we wear?”

“Cool. See ya 2nite!”

Jack smiled and tossed the phone onto the bedside table when he heard Harley's muffled voice. “Who was that?”

“Alex, he's bringing the waitress from the other night to the party.” Jack shifted position which forced Harley to move her arm and leg. Harley's head came up. “Really?”

Jack chuckled when he saw her; her blonde hair looked as if it had been in a fight with the pillows, sticking up all over her head making her look incredibly adorable. Jack laughed yanking her over to him. “Come here you!”

Harley squealed as Jack hauled her over on top of him, covering her face with kisses when he had her resting across his chest. Harley giggled, wiggling against his body. Jack grinned enjoying the feel of her silken skin moving against his, feeling both erotic and comforting. He had never—not since the night his parents died—known comfort, but with Harley...she was his home now, his life...everything. She was the one light in his darkness.

Jack grabbed her face between his hands, squeezing just a little to make fish lips with her mouth, grinning at how adorable she was before he deepened the kiss further. Harley groaned and wrapped her arms around his neck and under his head, her hands cradling the back of his skull. The kiss was passionate, yet also tender. Jack's hands wandered down her sides, his fingertips moving back and forth slowly, caressing her tenderly when there was a knock at the door.

Jack groaned rolling his eyes as he pulled away from Harley's mouth. “Yes?”

“It's me Master Jack. Your costumes for tonight's gala have been delivered,” Alfred called from the other side of the door.

Jack’s eyes glittered like a kid on Christmas morning. “They are?!?”

He grinned at Harley wrinkling his nose just before he pressed a large, loud kiss on her lips before he unceremoniously rolled her off of him and jumped up, grabbed his pants, and slid into them as he walked to the door. Harley laughed watching him, rolling herself up in a sheet and sitting up watching Jack hurry to the bedroom door.

Jack opened the bedroom door to find Alfred standing there with two large garment boxes wrapped with a large red bow. Alfred smiled. “Master Milano said that these garments are the 'real deal' as he so eloquently put it.” Alfred then motioned with his head at two sets of shoes boxes sitting on the floor beside him. “Along with the shoes.”

Jack laughed. “This is fantastic! Thanks Alfred.”

Alfred nodded with a smile. Harley called from the bed. “What are you dressing up as Alfred?”

Alfred peered into the darken room to see Harley wrapped in a sheet on the bed, her hair having that ruffled 'just woke up' look and her lips slightly swollen from kissing...

The older man quickly averted his eyes with a blush. “I shall be in attendance as a butler Miss Harleen.”

Harley laughed. “Oh come on, aren't you at least going to wear a mask?”

Alfred smiled. “For you Miss Harleen, I shall wear a mask.”

Harley giggled and clapped her hands. “Thanks Alfred!”

The older man smiled and bowed his head. “I live to serve.”

Jack snorted. “Do I hear sarcasm there Alfred?”

“Never Master Jack.” Alfred smiled and heading off down the hall.

Jack chuckled as he brought the boxes into their room and set them on the floor near the bed before hurrying back to get the shoe boxes. “Let's see what Milano sent over!” Jack untied the bow while Harley laid across the bed, her head dangling off the side, as were her arms, watching Jack open the boxes. When Jack removed the lid, he found on top of the first outfit was a folded note. Jack picked it up and read out loud:

“These are not exact Bonnie and Clyde outfits, but they are clothing from the era that I picked. I wanted to capture a combination of the Bonnie and Clyde period, the feel of the wardrobe from the many films, but to also choose outfits that I felt were a reflection of you and your lady-love's personalities. So I tailored my choices to your personalities while still keeping with the theme.

Love, Milano.”

Jack grinned and set the note aside. “Milano is always such an artist!”

Harley giggled. “Oh and I like the idea, it's more like...what we would dress like if we were the real Bonnie and Clyde!”

Jack grinned. “You're right sweetie!”
The first outfit was Jack's. The first thing he lifted out of the box was a dark navy blue fedora. Jack grinned at Harley as he placed the fedora on his head. Harley smiled. “It suits you. You look so handsome!”

Jack chuckled. “Why thank you, my sweet cupcake...now let's see what else...”

He gently unfolded the clothing and laid out the suit that Milano sent over, piece by piece, across the bed. The suit was a 1930’s style drape cut: extra fabric in the shoulders that allowed more freedom of movement, a nipped waist, and full sleeves that tapered at the wrist. The suit was a double-breasted, dark navy blue pinstriped suit, with matching vest, crisp white shirt, with the trousers also being tapered at the ankle. The last piece of the outfit that Jack laid out was the tie. It was a silk, silver, blue and purple diagonal stripped tie.

Harley kicked her legs in excitement. “Oh Jack, it's perfect!”

Jack grinned, nodding his head in agreement while adjusting the fedora so that it sat at a jaunty angle. “It is toots!”

He grinned widely and winked at her before he reached down to open the box with her outfit inside. Jack pulled out a black beret first, tossing it to Harley just as she was sitting up. She caught the beret, but she lost her sheet at the same time. Jack stood up holding the red bolero jacket that went with Harley's outfit, but stopped to stare as his girl put the beret on top of her messy bed hair, completely naked and smiled at him.

“I am one lucky man,” Jack declared with a lopsided smile.

Harley giggled pulling the sheet back in place. Jack wrinkled his nose at her. “My darling you're silly. I've seen everything...and believe me...it is perfect.” Jack grinned licking his lips.

Harley giggled blushing. “Oh puddin.”

Jack redirected his attention back to the outfit that he lifted out of the box. The next part that Jack lifted out was the skirt, which was the same shade of red as the jacket and would hit Harley mid-calf. Next he picked up the collared black tunic blouse that she would wear underneath the bolero jacket. The last pieces of Harley's costume were a thick black belt for her waist, a red and black silk scarf for around her neck, and a pair of silk stockings with a black garter belt and the line up the back of the legs.

Jack's grin was lopsided with clear glee. “You are going to look smashing Harley! Milano knew just the colors for you too! It's going to be hard to let you go to the party.” Jack waggled his eyebrows at her.

Harley giggled blushing, pleased with the outfit and Jack's reaction. “Let's see the shoes!”

Jack grinned grabbing the shoe boxes and flopped onto the bed beside her. The first box he opened held a pair of women's Cuban heeled black leather one-strap or Mary Jane shoes.

“Oh, those are darling!” Harley picked the shoes up when Jack handed her the box. Jack grinned. “They are gonna look sexy on you my sweets.”

Harley grinned and wrinkled her nose at him. “Let's see yours.”

Jack opened his box revealing a pair of shiny leather black and white wing tipped oxfords. Jack grinned. “Now all we need are the Tommy guns!”
“You think Bruce will let us have fakes?” Harley asked as she hopped to her feet and walked over to the dresser to pull out a clean pair of panties and bra. Jack frowned. “He'll have a fit, but I'm going to do it anyway.”

Jack chuckled, which had Harley looking over her shoulder at him. “Where do you get something like that? Let me guess, you know a guy?”

Jack chuckled. “Don't I always?”

Jack dropped back on the bed lying on his back, reaching over to grab his cell phone. After a few minutes he smiled, his head hanging off the side of the bed while he watched Harley dressing. He licked his lips watching the shimmy of her hips as she pulled her red lace panties up.

Jack grinned and said into the phone, “Hey Terrance.”

Harley glanced over. She only heard part of the conversation as she hooked her bra under her breasts before sliding it around under her chest to bring the cups forward and slide her arms through the straps.

“You, it’s Jack. Hey, I was wondering, do you guys have any prop Tommy guns? You do? Could I get a couple from you? Oh for our costumes...yeah, yeah, that big party my brother is holding. Yes, yes...for those pictures he bought. Oh my girl and I are going as Bonnie and Clyde.” Jack laughed softly.

Harley smiled as she picked out a sleeveless, mini tiered maxi dress in a shade of red so dark it reminded Jack of the color of Harley’s blood. He watched her walk into the bathroom, just barely able to see her. He saw the bra being tossed out the door to land on the floor. Jack scooted over so he could see a hint of her in the door shimmying her sexy body into the sleeveless dress, pulling the fabric up over her breasts. She reached behind her to pull up the zipper part way before she picked up a brush and started to run it through her hair. Jack watched her, his blue eyes following the line of her figure hungrily.

“Can you get those to me in the next couple of hours. Yes, I'll take it off what you owe me. Great!
See you soon.”

Jack hung up and tossed the phone onto the bed. “We have weapons! A friend of mine works at the Gotham City theater—they have all sorts of prop guns.”

“A friend of yours?” Harley stuck her head out from around the door. Jack grinned seeing she had brushed her hair out until it shone like gold. She was busily braiding it and wrapping it around her head. Jack somersaulted off the bed, landing gracefully on his feet before he headed into the bathroom.

Jack chuckled. “I know him from the card games at the Amusement mile. He owes me a couple of grand, but I've been taking it out of him in favors.”

Harley chuckled softly while her fingers worked through her hair braiding it. Jack sighed happily as he stood behind her. He smiled at her in the mirror before taking a hold of her zipper and running it the rest of the way up her back. Harley smiled prettily at him in the mirror. Jack placed his hands gently on her bare shoulders, running his hands down her arms just barely touching her. He leaned in and kissed one of her shoulders. He could see a bruise there from the fight, already starting to fade.
When Harley started to wind the braid around her head, he reached up and gently stopped her.

“Just let it fall down your back,” he whispered.
Harley smiled and let the braid drop. He stood back for a moment looking at her before he held his hand up and noticed his nails were chipped. He frowned slightly. “Will you fix my nails sweets?”

Harley turned to face him. “Of course puddin.” She grabbed his hand, opening a drawer in the bathroom and moving a few things around until she came up with the black nail polish and led him by the hand back into the bedroom.

Jack and Harley made their way downstairs a couple of hours later, both looking fresh and crisp with Harley in her red sundress and Jack wearing a pair of black skinny jeans that made his legs look as if they went on for ages. He had on a white cotton, button down shirt with the top four buttons left undone. Harley had fixed his nails, painting them a flat black along with hers. He was wearing a pair of dark brown simple oxfords while Harley was wearing a pair of flat sandals that laced all the way up her calf, the flats illustrated exactly how short Harley was compared the Jack.

When they came down the stairs, they were surprised to see that people were EVERYWHERE. Jack's left eye twitched for a moment as he watched the commotion of decorators, caterers and various other persons moving about the manor. Jack took Harley's hand and hurried them to the kitchen.

The kitchen was just as chaotic if not more so. Jack's grip on Harley's hand tightened when they both heard Alfred. “Master Jack! Miss Harley! Follow me please!”

They hurried over to Alfred who looked a little haggard and annoyed. He smiled when they caught up to him. “I set up lunch for the two of you on the west patio. I also took the liberty of bringing the horseshoes around Master Jack. I thought the two of you might like the spend the next few hours...out of the way.” Alfred smiled.

Jack grinned wrapping an arm around Alfred shoulders. “Thank you Alfie! You're an absolute champ!”

Harley smiled hurrying over to give Alfred a kiss. “Thank you, though if there is anything I can do to help...”

“No, no, Miss Harleen. I have everything under control. I just know Master Jack doesn't like crowds within the manor.” Alfred smiled. “Now, you two have a nice lunch. I will keep the hysterics of party preparation away from this end of the manor.”

Jack grinned watching Alfred leave before he took Harley's hand and together they headed for the west patio.

When they arrived at the glass doors, they found that no one was using this area. It was actually quiet and still on this side of the house. Harley walked over to the glass patio doors that looked out onto the west patio and pulled them open. Outside on the patio sat a glass topped table and two chairs where a bottle of white wine, two wine glasses and two plates with what looked to Jack to be a familiar dish covered with glass lids, sat out just waiting for the two of them.

"Alfred thinks of everything," Jack said with a smile as he strolled over and pulled out a chair for Harley, bowing at the waist, his other hand going across his stomach smiling at her. Harley giggled hurrying over to take her seat. Jack kissed her bare shoulder before pushing her seat in and walking over to his own seat.
Jack grinned and picked up the wine to examine the label. "Ah, a Pinot Grigio! Alfred always has such good taste!"

He leaned over, pouring her a glass before he poured his own and took his seat. The sun was warm, but there was a light breeze this afternoon, making the arrangement outside comfortable.

"You are going to enjoy this," Jack said as he picked up his fork, removing the glass lid from the lunch. "Alfred made this for me before; it's chilled chardonnay-braised pasta...excellent! I swear Alfred could quit working for Bruce and me and start his own restaurant!" Jack chuckled picking up his wine and taking a sip.

Harley did the same before she answered. "It certainly looks good."

"Oh it is!" Jack grinned. He took his fork, wrapping the pasta around it and leaned over holding the bite out to Harley. She smiled opening her mouth as Jack fed her a bite.

Harley rolled the pasta around on her tongue making a soft groan of pleasure. "Oh, this is good Jack!"

Jack grinned. "Told you! Alfred is a wizard."

They shared a soft laugh before they both dug into their lunches.

They talked a little while they ate, just enjoying each others company in the warm, late afternoon sun. The sun was slowly setting casting the sky in a warm sky-blue pink, while few of the lights along the back of the manor had started to come on in the dimming light. Jack was leaning back with his legs stretched out in front of him, his ankles crossed, and sipped his wine. "Have you ever played horseshoes?"

Harley was sitting with her legs crossed which allowed Jack to follow the length of her pale limbs up to her thighs, licking his lips at the thought of those legs of hers wrapped around his....Jack grinned at his thought watching as Harley picked up her napkin and wiped her mouth before she answered. "Nope. Never."

Jack's grin was sly as he studied her. Harley gave him a sidelong look. "What are you planning Jack Wayne?"

"Moi? Plan? You know I don't like to plan...too much." Jack chuckled. "I was considering a wager that would be paid in full before the party tonight."

Harley picked up her wine glass to take another sip. "A wager eh?"

"Yes, we play a game of horseshoes. Whoever wins has to give the other a full-body massage." Jack grinned wickedly.

Harley giggled. "What if we both win?"

Jack frowned in thought. When the idea came to him his face lit up like a child's on Christmas morning. "Then we fight. Hand to hand in the gym...I figure none of the worker bees would be in there..." He indicated the interior of the manor with his shoulder. "...will be in the gym."

Harley frowned rolling her sip of wine in her mouth before she swallowed. "Yes, but you know how to play horseshoes and I don't. So it's not really a fair bet."
Jack grinned. "Harley, Harley, Harley! You have shown on more than one occasion that you are resourceful and a fast learner! You'll do fine."

Harley smiled slowly before she put out her hand to him. "You're on."

Jack giggled. "Perfect! I can't wait for my massage!"

"HEY!" Harley threw her napkin at him and Jack laughed.

A few minutes later, Jack stood on the lawn, a cigarette hanging from his mouth as he held a horseshoe in his hand. Harley was sitting on a tree stump nearby watching him, leaning back with her legs stretched out distractingly in front of her. Jack was ignoring her as she rubbed her legs together in the short dress.

Harley frowned putting a finger to her lips with a big innocent look in her blue eyes as she wiggled her finger slowly, her nail lightly pressed against her lips. "Okay, explain this to me again..." Harley asked just as Jack tossed the horseshoe, missing his mark. Jack turned on Harley with narrowed eyes pulling out his cigarette. His eyes immediately traced the long length of her exposed legs, following the pale line up the hem of the very short dress. He licked his lips. "Are you doing that on purpose?"

Harley giggled. "Maybe." She rubbed one leg slowly against the other, eliciting an involuntary growl from Jack.

Jack chuckled taking a long pull on his cigarette. "Fine then you get the rules again!"

Harley groaned nearly sinking off the tree stump which had Jack laughing. "Didn't think of that did you?!"

Harley burst into a fit of giggles. "No!! Not the rules again!"

"Yes!! These are Jack rules!!" Jack laughed. "You only win if you get ten ringers!"

"Not fair!! I call foul!!" Harley giggled springing to her feet. The skirt of her dress flounced giving Jack a hint of the red lacy panties he had watched her put on earlier.

Jack chuckled. "Of course I'm not playing fair! I want to win!"

Harley made a face at him picking up a horseshoe and walking to the line in the lawn. It was actually a spot where the grass had been worn away to form a line in the lawn where grass didn't grow. "Did you and Bruce used to play horseshoes together?" She swung her arm a few times testing the weight of the horseshoe in her hand.

Jack blew out a trail of smoke. "We did, before our parents were murdered. I think the last time we played was with our father. I remember mother sitting over there..." Jack pointed by a huge old maple tree where Harley could see the weathered remains of a wooden bench. "She would watch the three of us, sitting there wearing a lemon yellow sundress and these huge wide brim hats...." Jack's voice became wistful as he stared at the spot. Harley worried her bottom lip watching him, but then Jack's eyes cleared and he turned back to her. "You better throw that thing or I'm disqualifying you!"

Harley giggled and stuck her tongue out before she tossed the heavy horseshoe.

The horseshoe soared forward, the metal weight of the shoe nicking the iron rod sticking out of the ground. "HA! That should count as something!" Harley turned putting her hands on her hips defying Jack to contradict her.

Jack chuckled. “Maybe...if we weren't playing by Jack rules!!”

“UGH!! I swear you are making them up on the spot aren't you?!” Harley squealed at him.

Jack burst out laughing. “I might be!!”

Harley ran over at him. Jack had just enough time to toss his cigarette down and smash the butt before she was in his arms, Jack lifting her off her feet.

“You are an evil cheater Jack Wayne! I challenge you to a duel of honor!” She giggled rubbing her nose against his.

Jack smirked. “Being cute about it sort of takes away the threat, honey bunch.”

“You've seen me fight. I'm gonna hand your ass to you.” Harley giggled, pressing her lips against his before she let go to drop to her feet. Then just to make things more interesting, Harley took off at a run. Jack blinked as she disappeared between the glass patio doors and into the house.

“Shit! That little minx!” Jack muttered to himself and took off after her.

Jack didn’t think it was possible, but it looked as if the manor was even more crowded with staff now than when he and Harley had walked through just a few hours ago. He caught a glimpse of her weaving through the caterers and florists heading toward the gym. Jack grinned wickedly and gave chase. The different staff members who where bringing in food, flowers, decorations had to jerk, weave and dance out of the way as Jack and Harley raced through them, giggling, heading toward the manor's gym. Harley still managed to arrive first, swiftly removed her shoes, then tossed them to the side. As soon as her shoes were off she stood up, turning round the instant Jack entered the gym, her fists up with a vicious grin on her face.

“Hey puddin!”

Jack's eyes widened in pleasant surprise to see her ready to fight. Watching her the night of the fight club, just the beauty of her fighting, the blood, that killer instinct in her eyes, he had found another turn on with his Harley...

Jack walked slowly backwards, away from her, keeping just enough distance that if she lunged he could easily move out of reach...hopefully. Keeping his eyes glued to her, Jack kicked off his shoes at the same time, aiming them for a corner. He reached down and pulled his socks off, making a slow circuit around her, tossing his socks as he did so, then he unbuttoned his shirt and tossed it aside as well. Harley narrowed her eyes with a smirk.

“You're cheating again Mr. Wayne.”

Jack's grin was wide and just as vicious as Harley's. “Why play fair when you can cheat?” Jack chuckled moving around her, his eyes taking in her stance. “So, you wanna fight eh?”

Harley giggled. “You know I do puddin.”

Harley licked her lips, her eyes gazing over him hungrily. “You know how sexy you are Jack?”

Jack chuckled “ Maybe, why don't you show me sugar bear?” Jack moved around slowly watching her with a glimmer in his eyes. “I want to taste your blood on my lips Harley.” Jack's voice dropped to a seductive whisper.

Harley smiled, gazing at him through her lashes. “Then get over here and see if you can hit me.”

Jack grinned, bouncing on the balls of his feet and inched his way closer to her. Harley danced back, her blue eyes watching him intently. Jack felt her smile wash over him, he loved her smile, that deadly glint in her eyes and the way the skirt flounced with her movements. Jack chuckled, his eyes darting to the side. Harley did exactly what he wanted her to, her eyes moved. That was when he rushed her. Jack grabbed Harley by an arm and pulled her forward as he pivoted his hip to throw her over his hip. Jack lifted her up just a little, but it was enough that when he tossed her, she couldn't keep her feet under her and she hit the ground. Jack rushed her again just as Harley rolled to her feet, grabbing her from behind. Jack's right arm wrapped around her neck, his left hand coming up to lock his arm in place by holding his right wrist.

Harley threw all her weight against him, causing Jack to stumble backwards. He tripped over the corner of a weight bench sitting in one corner of the gym when Harley threw her weight at him, and made him slam into the wall. Jack shoved back, barely managing to keep a hold of her, which caused them both to stumble into another wall when their momentum plunged them forward. Jack struggled to keep his hold of her, but she was fighting like a hellcat against him. Harley's struggles caused the two of them to stumble again, almost crashing into the wall in front of them, but Harley brought her legs up at the last minute, planting her bare feet against the wall and shoved with all her might, using the wall to propel both of them backwards. Jack jerked, trying to keep her off her feet, just managing to keep his footing while pulling back on her neck at the same time. He held her up and back in an arch, far enough that she was on her tiptoes, scrabbling on the floor, her hands still struggling with the arm around her neck. She kept pounding and crawling at Jack's arm, but it was like a steel vice against her throat causing her to see spots for a moment. Harley snarled and brought her legs up at the last minute, planting her bare feet against the wall and shoved with all her might, using the wall to propel both of them backwards. Jack jerked, trying to keep her off her feet, just managing to keep his footing while pulling back on her neck at the same time. He held her up and back in an arch, far enough that she was on her tiptoes, scrabbling on the floor, her hands still struggling with the arm around her neck. She kept pounding and crawling at Jack's arm, but it was like a steel vice against her throat causing her to see spots for a moment. Harley snarled and brought her elbow back with all her might, hitting Jack in the ribs in a quick series of sharp jabs.

Her hits were powerful enough to break his hold on her, bruising his ribs.

Jack winced and shoved her away from him to provide some room to maneuver, shocked at the pain that raced up his side. Harley hit the floor, but she rolled to her hands and knees, smiling up at him. Jack felt his shaft swell in response to seeing her, fighting with her, the way she wasn't holding back, that vicious smile, her hair coming loose from her braid. Her blue eyes danced dangerously with a look of violence and lust that had him wanting her all the more. She made him ache...

Harley felt a purr in the back of her throat looking up at Jack, bare chested, breathing heavily and that damn smile of his, she thought. A row of perfect teeth...teeth she wanted to feel on her skin...she wanted him badly, the line of blood running from the corner of his mouth only made her more determined to have him, naked, pounding against her, sweaty, bloody...Harley purred. “Come on Jack, come and get me.”

Jack rushed forward, his arms snapping out in a quick series of punches. Harley just barely managed to block Jack's fists from making contact with her face or torso, slapping them away, the vibration of which raced up her arms. One of his punches slipped past her guard, clipping her in the chin. Harley stumbled backwards, struggling to keep her guard up.

Jack's right arm snapped out and his knuckles grazed her chin again, this time on the other side, the impact hard enough that it force her back. But this time when her hand jerked out in response to block, Harley snagged his wrist and yanked him forward close enough that she could use her right fist to slam it down onto his shoulder. Jack pitched to the side a little, but it was enough for Harley to hit Jack in the side—his now bruised side—with her fist, following it immediately with a backhanded fist to his cheek. The impact of Harley's fist snapped Jack's head to the side.

Jack laughed as he felt his head wobble from the strike. He loved it, she wasn't holding back at all! God I love this woman, he thought to himself. She knew exactly what to do to get him all hot and bothered!

When he turned back to face her, he was grinning, the line of blood running down from his lip had extended past his chin from where the impact of her fist had reopened his split lip.

“Good one Harls.” He chuckled.

“Thanks puddin!” Harley giggled. Beating him up was making her ache for him, that vicious light in his blue eyes, that seemed to call her to violence... Harley lunged, her fist flying at his face, but Jack blocked her next strike. Harley's arm overextended just far enough that she stumbled forward just a little. Jack grabbed her by her hair with one hand and by her dress with the other, the momentum causing them both to hit the wall again as Jack pitched them both forward. Jack twisted around, managing to get his arm around her neck again, putting his back to the wall to give him some leverage as he hauled back on her, choking her. Harley gasped as her air was suddenly cut off.

Harley struggled, dropping her weight which pulled her down to her knees. The change in her weight loosened Jack's grip marginally. Jack held onto her with his right arm and with his left he hit Harley three times in the back of the shoulder. She snarled in pain, surging to her feet, throwing her elbow backwards to catch him in the thigh and made his leg buckle for a split second. Harley threw her elbow back for another strike that caught Jack under the chin. Jack grunted, grabbing her by the hair again and slammed her head against the wall. Harley blinked, stunned for only a second before she grabbed his right arm and rolled him right over her back and onto the floor.

Jack was laughing when he hit the floor rolling to his feet grinning, panting, and giggling at the same time. “Hahah!! Harley, you little minx!!”

Harley giggled too, grinning. “Oh puddin...”

He licked his lips watching her. Harley used the back of her hand to wipe away the blood that was trickling down her chin.

Jack laughed. “Bruce is going to kill us when we both show up with bloody lips.”

Harley giggled. “It will just make our costumes look more realistic. We'll just say it's part of the make-up.”

Jack chuckled. “My devious, brilliant little minx!”

That was the moment they both charged each other. Harley wrapped her arms around Jack's neck, forcing him backwards. Jack dropped to his knees instead, sending them both down to the ground again. They rolled, struggling with each other before they broke apart. They regained their feet again simultaneously. Jack took a couple of quick swipes at her with his fists, but Harley batted them away with her forearms. They were both laughing as they dodged and weaved away from each other.

They came in close again, but Harley performed a graceful spin, presenting her back to Jack for a split second, too fast for Jack to take advantage of, but then her elbow came up, slamming him in the mouth again. At the same time, she twisted herself around, wrapping her arm around his neck so that his head was caught against her torso, her arm around his throat, squeezing hard enough that she was cutting off his air, much as he had done to her earlier.

Jack was grinning while he struggled, clawing at Harley's arm, hitting her with his fist, but she was determined not to let go. He didn't think he had ever been as turned on as he was at this very moment.
with Harley choking him! Harley leapt up to wrap her legs around Jack's waist, gripping him tighter than before. Jack caught her, his hands going around her calves while she leaned all her body weight against her hold on his neck trying to make him pass out. He stumbled forward, then spun to slam her up against the wall, once, twice. He could hear Harley's gasps of pain until finally he loosened her hold on him.

They kept a hold on each other despite her loosened hold on his neck. Harley dropped her weight back to the floor. As soon as her feet touched the ground, she brought her knee up fast and hard to hit Jack a few times in his lower back, at least once in a kidney, before she threw him away from her. Jack hit the wall, but he didn't go down. She noticed how his eyes were dancing with mischief, his gaze running down her body as he panted. Jack dragged his teeth across his bottom lip, gazing wantonly at her, the press of his teeth causing another trickle of blood to run down his chin. Harley was panting, her eyes wandering down his naked chest and stomach, watching a drop of blood from his lip leave a bloody trail against his chest and slowly run down the slender muscles of his stomach, writhing with wiry muscles The look in Harley's eyes was one of pure lust; her body ached watching the way his chest heaved with his breath.

Jack growled and charged her, his shoulder hit her in her diaphragm, lifted her off her feet and slammed her into the wall. Harley wrapped her legs around his chest, her arms around his head. They hit the wall hard a second time, Jack spun around with her, dropping to his knees then to the floor, Harley's back hitting and knocking the air from her lungs when Jack slammed her against the hard floor. They struggled for a few intense moments before Harley, her legs like iron around him, managed to get the upper hand and push Jack around, causing him to roll, hitting the floor. Harley went with him, ending up on top, straddling him. Harley grabbed his neck with both her hands holding him down. Jack grinned, panting to catch his breath, blood smeared his teeth and lips, a trail of blood running down from his nose while he stared up at her, his blue eyes bright. “What're you going to do now?”

Harley purred, adding a little pressure to his throat. Her hair had come loose from the braid, there was blood on her lips and there was a pressure cut high on her right cheek. She ground her hips against him feeling him hard between her legs. “I win.” Harley leaned down and ran the flat of her tongue along his chin and up over his lips, licking away the blood before she kissed him.

Jack, his hair having fallen loose around his face, chuckled, but then his laughter was muffled when Harley, holding his throat still, her hands tight around his neck, her thumbs forcing his jaw up, pressed her mouth hungrily against his, her tongue delving deeply. Jack groaned, his face slightly flushed from Harley's choking, reached up to grab her shoulders, his fingers digging painfully into her soft flesh. He groaned again, tasting that delightful mix of blood and strawberries that was purely Harley. Harley slowly released her hold on his neck, her touch turning from rough and punishing to tender, a gentle caress, her thumbs lightly caressing his jaw. Jack's hands glided down her arms then around to caress her sides, reaching up her back to find the zipper of her dress, slowly pulling it down the curve of her back, the zipper parting the fabric. Harley moaned at the release of her dress. Jack grabbed both sides of the dress yanking it down to expose her breasts.

Jack bucked, Harley surprising her with the jerking move that broke their kiss. He rolled her onto the floor pressing his body against hers, attacking her mouth again, their tongues twisting, her teeth catching his tongue painfully for a moment that only made him moan with need.

Harley let go with a grin. “So, do I get my massage?”

Jack chuckled. “Oh yes, yes you do.”
Bruce came home to find Alfred in the middle of what could only be described as controlled chaos. The old butler was hollering out orders and pointing here and there as if he were directing plans to land on a runway. People were running up to him with questions and Alfred was answering swiftly, his British accent becoming slightly more pronounced as he gave clipped, precise orders.

Bruce hurried up to him with a smile. “How's it going?”

Alfred raised an eyebrow at Bruce. “Compared to raising two unruly boys sir, this is a picnic.”

Bruce chuckled. “I'm going to hurry and change and pick up Selina. Where are Jack and Harley?”

“I think I saw them chasing each other into the gym an hour ago, Master Bruce,” Alfred said while he was directing two young men and two women with string instruments toward the ballroom.

Bruce lifted his eyebrows a fraction. “Chasing?”

“Yes sir. I believe they were playing some sort of game.” Alfred smiled over his shoulder at Bruce.

Bruce frowned. “All right, going to go ask them to greet guests for me until I get back with Selina.”

“Very good sir, just be careful Master Bruce,” Alfred said, but Bruce was walking quickly away and hadn't seemed to hear the last bit of advice.

The sauna room off the gym was one of the best that money could buy. The room was wide enough and long enough that even without windows it didn't feel claustrophobic and it had been fashioned in the style of a traditional Finnish sauna room. There was an upper and lower bench that ran the circumference of the room along with a heater that was piled with large round stones and a bucket and ladle next to the stove. The walls and benches were solidly built, made of Nordic White Spruce. The lights of the sauna could be changed in color as well as intensity. Jack had switched the lights to a deep purple and blue with soft white lights against the wall making the sauna cozy and romantic.

Harley was lying on her stomach, naked, her hair completely loose, pulled over one shoulder while Jack, also naked was rubbing sweet almond oil into her skin. He ran his long fingers down the curve of her back, slowly working his thumbs into her skin as he pushed his hands up her back.

Harley let out a deep groan. “Oh Jack, that feels nice.”

“Mm...going to make it feel even nicer...” Jack whispered as his hands slipped down her oiled back to her rear. Jack spread her legs, running his oiled hands down the back of her thighs, then slowly, pressing down harder on her skin, he ran his hands back up and over her rear. Harley moaned softly. She jerked just a little when his hand slipped between her legs. Harley groaned while Jack slowly rubbed, two of his fingers sliding deeper. Harley hissed with pleasure, pressing her teeth into her bottom lip, her fingers balling into fists. Jack licked his lips watching her reactions while he eased his fingers into her, then out again. Harley brought her left fist up to her mouth, biting down with an inhaled moan, his slick fingers sliding in. He slowly twisted them around before pulling them out, then deep again, the oil and her own fluids making a soft, wet sound. Jack grinned wider adding a little rotation of his fingers, his slick thumb teasing against her rear. Harley whimpered and arched her hips in response to his attentions. Jack leaned forward and ran the flat of his tongue along the curve of her rear tasting the sweet almond oil on her skin, then he bit her, his teeth pressing into her soft oiled flesh. Harley gasped at the feel of his teeth against her, his fingers inside her; her body ached with need. Jack thrust gently with his fingers a few more times before he whispered, “Roll over Harls.”
She did as he requested, rolling over onto her back. Jack grinned, his eyes twinkling.

“Oh lookie here,” he whispered.

Harley purred stretching her arms over her head gazing at Jack through her lashes.

“Mmm...puddin...” Jack giggled reaching for the oil and poured a generous amount into the palm of his hand. He rubbed his hands together before he shifted between her legs. Jack grasped her hips and slowly eased his hands up her torso, pressing just enough to knead her muscles. Harley groaned arching into his touch. When he came to her breasts he encircled one with both hands and gently began to rub, working his oiled fingers over the soft mound, his oil slicked thumb skating over her hard nipple. Jack wet his lips enjoying the way the oil and the heat of the sauna made her skin glow.

The little sounds that Harley made as he touched were driving him crazy, but when he leaned over to work on her other breast, Harley ran her hands down her stomach, coating them with oil and then reached out for his erection. When she touched him with her warm oiled hands, Jack jerked, the sensation of her oiled hands moving up and down his erection sent hot, erotic ripples up from his groin to spread through his entire body.

His eyes fluttered closed and he groaned loudly. Harley grinned watching his reactions while she ran her oiled hands up and down the length of him, twisting her hands one way then the other, dropping one hand lower to caress his balls, which had Jack groaning loudly again.

“Come here Jack.” Harley tugged gently. Jack dropped his hands onto the bench on either side of her head and grinned down at her. “I thought I was supposed to massage you?” he whispered as he rubbed his nose against hers.

“You did, but I wanted to touch you.” She smiled. “I love the way you feel in my hands...”

Jack grinned lopsidedly at her. “Well, you did win so you get to do what you want.”

Harley grinned purring. “Then I want you inside me...now.”

Jack rolled her hips to the side, raising Harley's leg up, pressing the oiled limb against his chest, he ran his tongue along the side of her calf. She could feel him, the brush of his oiled hands against her skin creating a shiver along her back when he touched her, the head of his erection pressing against her wet opening, made all the more slick by the oils on their bodies. The head of Jack's erection slid and slipped teasingly against her oiled skin, the head of his erection, oiled, satin soft skin and hard at the same time. Harley watched him with a giggle that quickly transformed into a gasp of pleasure when he slowly started to press into her, the oil mixing with her own fluids. He thrust hard the last few inches, making Harley gasp louder. Jack let her leg drop which Harley promptly wrapped her knuckle between her teeth after she cried out, the first time her climax coming the instant he entered her.

Jack shifted his right arm under her leg, lifting the limb higher, his other hand holding her hip as he started to thrust harder. Harley whimpered, coming hard and fast, her groans high-pitched and long. Jack grinned as the wet sounds of their oiled bodies filled the small space mixed with their shared moans of pleasure, prompted him to thrust harder trying to go as deeply into her as he could.

Bruce walked into the gym. “Jack?”

He frowned and look around, wondering where they might have gone. Some of the equipment looked to have been moved around just a little and he saw their shoes along with Jack's socks and shirt in a corner. Bruce walked over picking up his brother's shirt frowning in confusion.

He turned swiftly when he heard a sound, like something banging against the wall and a cry of pain. Bruce cocked his head to the side listening. With a frown Bruce walked through the small hall that led to the sauna.

Harley was panting and groaning, biting down on her knuckles, which was doing nothing to stop the loud noises she was making. Jack panted along with her, grinning down at her, his pelvis slapping against her backside. She arched her back, her eyes screwed closed as the sensations of Jack thrusting washed over her, her orgasm like a flame bursting to life to race through her body. He felt so good she had to say it out loud. “Ooo puddin!!”

Jack's chuckles were mixed with deep moans while he pressed against her, the feel of his pelvis slamming into her, then slowly while he pulled back gently and eased back into her causing her to whimper.

Jack panted. “My little minx...”

He jerked, trying to slow himself down, but he simply couldn't; he lifted her leg around, wrapping his arm around her knee, letting himself go, giving into the hard, deep thrusts. Harley couldn't think of anything but Jack's pounding, touching her so deeply she would have sworn she was going to black out when she came again, an orgasm that prevented coherent thoughts. Jack leaned back, his back arched, crying out her name when he climaxed.

“Harley!!”

That was the moment that the sauna door opened and Bruce stuck his head in. “Jack are you...”

Jack, his expression one of punch-drunk satisfaction, his face slightly red from the heat as well as the intensity of his orgasm grinned at Bruce.

“Hey Brucie!” Jack waved.

Harley giggled arching her head to see Bruce, her arms brought in tight to cover her breasts. The look on Bruce's face was comical as he stepped back and slammed the door shut. From the other side of the door Bruce snarled. “I need you to greet guests until I return with Selina. Think you can do that?”

Jack, staying embedded in Harley laughed. “Sure thing Bro! Just leave it to me!”

Outside Bruce leaned his forehead against the door frame, his eyes closed. There were things he simply didn't want to see...that was one of them.

“Thanks Jack. See you later.” Bruce called back before hurrying out of the gym. “And please, no smoking in the house!”

From the other side of the door he heard Jack yell. “No problem!” Then the sounds of the two of them laughing.

Bruce rubbed a hand over his face muttering. “God Jack...”

An hour later, Jack and Harley, dressed in their Bonnie and Clyde costumes and with Harley having done her hair like Myrna Loy, her beret sassily place upon her head, stood beside Jack who had his hair slicked back, his fedora on, each of them with a fake Tommy gun in hand, stood in the ballroom entrance greeting guests as they arrived. The whole situation was mind-numbingly boring.

The ballroom was beautifully decorated with candlelight, several white covered tables and chairs, flowers, all of them white as well, decorated nearly every available space. Against one wall was an ice sculpture that Jack thought might be a swan, but he wasn’t sure. Harley had said it looked like a piece of abstract art of a dying duck, eliciting a laugh from Jack. The ice sculpture was surrounded by a dessert table. There was another table piled with an assortment of fruits, and yet another with cheeses and crackers. There were waiters and waitresses wandering throughout the room with trays of hors d'oeuvres, and a variety of other finger foods and drinks. A mini-bar had been set up where a clearly skilled bartender crafted drinks. And lastly, security personnel wandered among the crowd, obvious in their plain black suits, wearing ear pieces, and sporting stern expressions. The string quartet played in one corner of the room, the acoustics of the ballroom allowing the music to carry in varying degrees throughout the room. The lighting was soft and warm yet gave the entire room a deeper atmosphere of elegance. Several people were dancing sedately while others ate and drank, talking in little social groups. Jack muttered.

“Bunch of bloated hypocrites.”

Harley turned to watch them, all of the guests with more money than sense.

Jack leaned down to whisper in Harley’s ear. “I swear if I see one more couple dressed like those dopes from the Fifty Shades Darker movie, I'm going to stab someone.” Harley giggled. So far, of the couples that had arrived, twenty of them had been some sort of variation of the Fifty Shades Darker masquerade costumes with the lacy masks. Only a handful had shown up in 'real' costumes. There was a clown or two, a pope, a couple of witches, several prince and princesses...all fairly basic and boring.

Jack groaned loudly. “Wish Bruce would hurry back.”

That was when they both heard, loud enough that the whole ballroom stopped and turned. “Hey, you fucking criminal!!”

Jack and Harley turned to see Alex, with Alice the waitress on his arm. Alex was wearing a truly horrible lion costume, a full body suit that resembled pajamas, a lion’s head with Alex’s smiling face seen through the open mouth and a little tiara on top of the lion’s head. Alice was dressed as a sexy ring master with fishnets, thigh high black boots, corset and red tailcoat.

Jack burst out laughing. “You two look great!”

Harley giggled nodding her agreement.

Alex grinned. “It was Alice's fucking idea! She's fucking brilliant.”

Alice smiled and blushed under the profanity laced compliment.

Jack was still laughing as he patted Alex on the back. “Well go mingle, have fun!”

“I plan on getting drunk as a fucking skunk on the free booze my friend! Alice drove.” Alex grinned and Alice giggled as she led Alex off into the party.
Across town, Bruce was driving with Selina beside him in the passenger seat. She was a little annoyed. Having Bruce drive her was not part of her plan...but, as she reminded herself trying to calm down, she was good at improvising. She could do this, maybe steal one of Bruce's cars? Maybe even this one? Again when Selina thought about stealing from Bruce her heart felt as if that black spot that she carried there would expand, moving across her heart turning it darker and harder...

But right now she could concentrate on her time with Bruce. She turned in her seat to look at him. He was dressed in black knee pants, white stockings, a black coat that was a relatively straight loose garment, with the slight fullness around the knees. The coat fell into folds over the backside of of his hips (when he was standing), am embroidered vest underneath all of it accented with silver. He had a white cravat along with a white haired wig, and in the back of the car sat his mask and embellished, tri-corner hat. He really looked devastatingly gorgeous tonight, Selina thought wistfully.

Selina was wearing a black gown and petticoat with silver embellishments and embroidery, she also had a white period wig and her mask. The only difference between their costumes was that she was wearing part of another one underneath and her outer costume was designed to come off easily with the tug of a thread.

“You know you didn't have to come get me Bruce.” Selina smiled trying to keep her voice casual.

Bruce grinned. “I know, but I wanted to walk into the party with you on my arm. Is that so bad?”

Selina smiled. “No, it's not and it's very sweet of you.”

Bruce grinned. “Not selfish?”

Selina laughed leaning back in her seat. “Maybe just a little.”

She leaned over and pressed a kiss to his cheek. Bruce grinned happily heading home.

Harley had gone into the ballroom and returned with two glasses of champagne. Jack grabbed his glass downing it in one swallow. “How many more guests?” Jack asked with a whine.

Harley chuckled. “I stopped and asked Alfred; he thinks maybe a handful...another ten or twenty at the most.”

Jack groaned. “Next time Bruce asks for a favor like this I am not doing it. I've never been so bored!”

Harley leaned close, draping her arm across his shoulder, sipping at her glass of champagne. “Just imagine picking the ones you could shoot in the head.”

Jack slid his eyes sideways, a wicked grin forming on his lips. “You are the light of my life, do you know that?”

Harley giggled prettily.

Two more guests arrived at the ballroom entrance then, two men. One of the men was tall (Harley figured he had to be at least six feet, though Jack was perhaps an inch taller), slim, with unruly blonde hair that was going grey, piercing eyes behind perfectly round glasses, and thin lips, but there was a quiet, almost eerie stillness to him. He was dressed as a plague doctor, his long-nosed bird-like mask held under his arm. His companion was a shorter man, hitting the tall gentlemen at the shoulder, with a bowl-like hair cut. His features were long, but not as sharp as his taller companion... and his glasses where square shaped. There was a 'washed out' aspect to his features that made him blend into the background. He was dressed as a Civil War surgeon. The taller man spoke, his voice soft and with a quality that made the skin on the back of Harley's neck crawl.

“Dr. Johnathan Crane and Dr. Jeremiah Arkham.” The taller man, Crane, smiled putting out his hand after introducing themselves. Jack took it with a slight curl to his lips. He knew Bruce had invested a lot of money in the asylum. That had always rubbed Jack wrong, as if Bruce was preparing the way to have Jack committed. The issue of committing Jack had come up more times than Jack cared to remember and from a variety of sources. The most recent mention had been from the board of directors of Wayne Enterprises.

Jack's smile didn't reach his eyes as he took Dr. Crane's offered hand. “I know you, both of you work at Arkham Asylum.”

Dr. Arkham took Jack's hand next and smiled. “Yes we do. I’m the head of the asylum, Jeremiah Arkham, and this is my colleague Dr. Crane. Mr. Wayne invited us this evening.”

Harley frowned, a shiver running up her spine, as Dr. Crane took her hand and kissed her knuckles. She smiled and nodded as he stepped aside to allow his companion to take her hand next. Harley knew the names of both these men. Hell, she had read their work while in college! Crane's focus was the study of fear, while Arkham had written papers on the different ways to delve into the troubled mind. She turned, watching them step into the party, Crane now donning his mask.

Jack took her hand. “You all right Harls?”

“You ever have that feeling of someone walking over your grave? Or a feeling that you were just given a premonition?” She asked him and turned around with a strange look in her eyes.

Jack nodded. “Yeah, why pumpkin?”

Harley looked back into the ballroom watching the two doctors.

“Just...it's nothing.” She turned back to face with Jack a smile on her face that didn't quite reach her eyes.

Jack caressed her jaw with his fingertips. “I'll protect you Harls, from anything and anybody.” He smiled at her and Harley nodded. “I know. I would do the same for you.” Jack, his fingers under her chin, guided her mouth closer just as Bruce and Selina entered.

“Everything going all right?” Bruce asked as he stepped up disrupting the kiss.

Jack turned; if he was startled by his brother's silent appearance he made no comment. “Yeah...everything is fine, big brother. Now I can go dance with my girl!” Jack grabbed Harley's hand and hurried away with her without waiting for an answer.

Bruce shook his head. “I guess I should be pleased he stayed doing the job I asked him to do as long as he did.”

Selina smiled and lightly smacked him. “Don't be so hard on him.”

“Fine. I believe there are a few other people coming...I should...” Bruce started, but Selina grabbed his hand and pulled him into the ballroom. “Please, not everyone needs you to meet them at the door. Come on—dance with me.” Selina smiled and dragged Bruce across the ballroom to the dance floor where the string quartet were playing “A Kiss from a Rose.”
No sooner had Bruce and Selina left the ballroom entrance than two more people walked into the room. They were dressed like a couple from the movie “The Purge”, wearing 'no face' masks. The woman was a thin blonde and the man with her had dark brown hair. They both pulled their masks up and looked around the room.

“Look at them all Billy. Bunch of rich bloated...” Vicki Vale didn't continue.

Billy chuckled. “Bitter much?”

Vicki snarled. “Shut it.”

“Hey man, I wasn't the one whose Bruce Wayne exclusive fizzled.” Billy grinned at her.

Vicki Vale sighed. “Whatever. Besides, that wasn't my fault. That was because of Bruce Wayne's crazy brother.”

Billy smiled. “Yeah, weird to be seeing so much of him around Gotham now. Think it has something to do with that woman?”

Billy pointed across the room to where Jack and Harley were dancing so close it looked to her as if they were trying to crawl into each others skin.

“Maybe...that's one of the things I want to find out,” Vicki said as her eyes wandered the crowd.

“So why are we sneaking in, in the first place. Bruce Wayne has press here.” Billy indicated with his thumb the line of press outside the Wayne Manor gate they had encountered on the way inside and then again with his forefinger at the several people, not wearing costumes, who were clearly press with their cameras. There weren't many of them here and they mostly seemed content to quietly take pictures rather than ask any questions.

Vicki glared at Billy. “We are here to snoop Billy.”

“Snoop about what?” Billy asked, sliding his mask back into place.

Vale smiled. “Every rich family has skeletons. I want to find the Wayne hidden bones.”

Jack had already swung Harley out onto the floor, one arm around her waist, the other holding her hand out in a classical dance pose. Jack chuckled watching a few of the other people out here dancing to the music. Jack moved Harley across the floor, the two of them cutting smart figures in their costumes as well as the fact that Jack was an incredible dancer, Harley felt as if she was just along for the ride. She could also feel that Jack was becoming bored already with the party.

“Wish most of these people would slip into a coma...all of them as useless as a knitted condom,” Jack muttered.

Harley chuckled and then pressed her forehead to Jack's shoulder trying not to laugh out loud at his last statement. After taking a couple of seconds to force her breathing back to normal Harley asked softly. “So did you pick the ones you would shoot?”

Jack spun her around with a pleasant smile. “I did, wanna know who?”

Harley grinned and nodded eagerly. Jack's smile was radiant as he indicated a couple near them with his eyes. “See those two?”

Harley nodded as Jack continued. “I’m no proctologist, but I know an asshole when I see one and that one is named Simon Stagg. That’s him and his wife Mara over there. I know for a fact that Stagg does secret work in genetics...on human subjects...illegal work that is. For him, I think I would load him up with some of my secret...venom and see how he likes to be tested on. He donates a lot of money to hide the fact that he is a walking, talking piece of shit. A bullet between the eyes would be too good for him.”

Harley grinned as Jack spun her around and pointed out someone else. “That is the mayor of our fair Gotham City, Hamilton Hill, as corrupt as they come. I think for him I might shoot him in the kneecaps...then I would have to give some thought on what we would do...”

Harley laughed. “Cut his tongue out would be fun or even better, for liars, you would put a nail through the tongue...”

“Ah, my girl you are a wonder! Yes!” Jack laughed spinning her around.

Bruce smiled as he held Selina close. They moved to the music, their bodies pressed close together. Selina was fighting with herself—she could just give up on the painting, just let it go. She didn't have to steal it, didn't need the money. Her client would be angry, but she could handle it...though there was part of her that was just too tempted to steal something so valuable right under the nose...Selina sighed laying her head against Bruce’s chest. She knew in her heart of hearts that it didn't matter, she would steal the painting anyway...her feelings on the matter of Bruce Wayne didn't matter. It was the thrill of the forbidden that drew her to what she did...it was a feeling more powerful that the potential to love anyone.

Even someone as wonderful as Bruce Wayne.

The music had changed, disrupting their conversation. Jack took Harley's hand, leading her off the dance floor. “All these rich people are such a waste...all of them. Everyone ends up in the same place in the end...dead. I suppose that's the joke.” Jack laughed and deftly snagged a couple of glasses of wine from a nearby waiter walking past them. At that moment, Bruce walked to the east wall where the paintings were hung, all covered with curtains. Bruce stood in front of them and called out to the flashes of cameras

“Everyone! Everyone! May I have your attention! Tonight's party is all about art. All of you have donated some money tonight to the Gotham City Art Museum.” There was scattered applause. Bruce smiled. “Now let me...”

Jack downed his drink with one swallow dropping the glass on a table before he grabbed Harley's hand. “Come on, let's go.”

Harley giggled, quickly downing her own drink and tossing her glass onto the table next to Jack's. “Where are we going?”

Jack smiled. “Away from all this bullshit!”

Jack hauled Harley up the stairs holding her hand. “We are going to do something to liven up this Harley was giggling in sudden anticipation. “What? What are we going to do?”

Jack turned and grinned at her. “Just wait!”

Jack pulled Harley into their bedroom and hurried over to the closet. Harley sat on the edge of the bed watching him tearing things out of the bottom until he found what he was looking for. Finally he sat back with a wide grin.

“Here we go!” Jack grinned standing up and walking over to set a box on the bed. He pulled the box open and Harley looked inside. On top were small yellow boxes, one of which was partially open to reveal little glass vials, the rest of the box was filled with tiny red tubes with little fuses sticking out of them. Harley frowned. “What are those?” Jack grinned like a bad little boy. “The glass vials are stink bombs, which I might add, I've made particularly potent...added a little bit of my own chemistry to the mix to make them extra horrible, the rest are M-80's—your classic, very powerful firecracker!” Jack chuckled. “The ones with the black fuses are slow burning and the green fuses are five second fuses.”

Harley pressed her lips together in a coy grin. “How long have you had those?”

Jack frowned in thought. “Since I was younger and was banned from the country club.” Jack smiled innocently. “Though I bought the stink bombs just a few years ago. Just wanted to see what I could do to make them more effective.”

Harley frowned picking one up. “How do you know they are more effective?”

Jack laughed with a wide eyed expression. “Trust me—they are.” He hurried over to his desk and pulled out something else hurrying over to hand them to Harley. They looked like little plastic plugs with tiny filters in them. Harley gave Jack a questioning look. “Nose plugs—my own invention—should keep the stink of the bombs out of your nostrils.”

Harley frowned. “There are only three, what about you?”

Jack grinned tapping the side of his nose. “Immune. Took a while, but I'm immune now.” Harley frowned just slightly then nodded her head and slipping her nose plugs on, holding the other loosely in her hand.

Harley put her other hand on her hip. Her 1930's outfit made her look even more sassy than usual. “What are you planning Jack Wayne?”

Jack grinned. “Causing a little chaos.” He waggled his eyebrows at her. “Let's go find Alex!”

Jack carried the box of ‘party favors’ as he had called them, as the two of them hurried back down the stairs, wending their way through the crowd that had now begun to spill out from the ballroom to fill space everywhere else in the manor. Jack and Harley found Alex and Alice out on one of the veranda’s with a platter full of filled champagne glasses that Alex had clearly misappropriated from one of the wait-staff, half of which were already empty. Alex was giggling at something Alice had said when the two of them showed up. Jack grinned at his friend.

“Alex, I need you for an important mission!” Jack gestured with the box to emphasize his need.
Alex grinned taking a flute glass and downing the drink in one gulp like it was water. “Whatcha fucking need man?”

Jack had carried the box of fireworks and stink bombs over to the table, using the box to move the platter to the side, causing the flutes to shake and clink against one another. Jack opened the box as Alex leaned over.

Alex grinned. “Let me guess, you're fucking bored?”

“Very. Time to start a little chaos.” Jack grinned. “I don't suppose you really need to be worrying about losing any of these tight-asses as clients?”

“Pffftt!! Fuck no! Half of them would lick my fucking tennis shoes if I wanted!” Alex grinned. “They need me, as much as any of them would hate to fucking admit it...”

Alice glanced at Harley. “Is this a good idea?”

Harley snorted. “No, which is why we're going to do it!”

Jack dug in the bottom of the box and pulled out three boxes of matches. Alice gasped her eyes wide. “That...that could have been so bad!”

Jack laughed. “Blah...might have blown up my closet, made my room smell...big deal...caused a big stink.” Jack snorted on a laugh. “Big stink...get it? Anyway, might actually have been funny though...” Jack smiled before he smacked a box of matches into Alice's hand. “One for you.” He put another box in Alex's one hand. “And you, and the last one for Harley and me.”

Alex was snorting, laughing to himself and grabbing another flute of champagne. “This is going to be epic!”

Jack laughed. “Feel free to head to the door when you're done so you don't get caught by security or Bruce.”

Alex saluted Jack with his one hand, the empty glass still in his hand. “Got it! Anywhere particular I shouldn't fucking set one?”

Jack frowned. “Nope, just don't go up the stairs...otherwise any place is fine!”

Jack swung his arm through Harley's. “Ready to make some noise?”

Harley giggled. “Of course puddin!”

Most of the crowd was filing by the paintings, taking this opportunity for a up-close, privileged look at the masterpieces that would soon be part of the art museum's collection. Many in the crowd seemed especially interested in the Picasso. Bruce smiled, watching his guests, sipping from a glass of champagne when Selina came up beside him wrapping her arm around his waist. “Everyone seems pleased.”

Bruce smiled. Her eyes were hypnotic behind the mask. He nodded. “These paintings will be a great draw for the museum.”

Selina smiled, keeping her expression interested, hiding the truth in her eyes. “Yes, yes they will.” “And we made a lot of money in donations to the museum as well; it will allow them to continue their summer programs for local children.” Bruce smiled clearly pleased. Selina comforted herself by reminding her heart that she wouldn’t be taking that money...and only the one painting instead of all of the others as well...though the fact that it was the most expensive painting was beside the point she assured herself.

“For a rich bachelor playboy, you seem to care a lot,” Selina said looking at Bruce over the rim of her champagne flute.

Bruce’s lips curled into a faint smile. “I can be both: rich playboy and care about the city. Gotham means a lot to me. It’s my home.”

Selina frowned ever so slightly dropping her voice. “Even though the city took your parents from you and your brother?”

Bruce took a sip of his drink before he answered. “Yes. I think Gotham has a good heart. Someone needs to nurture that heart for it to grow. Gotham needs people to care, not run away. I think ultimately Gotham can be saved.”

Selina stared at him for a long moment until Bruce blushed. “What?”

Selina smiled and kissed his cheek. “Nothing.”

Jack and Harley hurried into the ballroom, the two of them wrapped around each other, giggling like school children. Jack guided Harley over to the large dessert table that was set up against the wall with the stupid looking ice sculpture they had both decided they hated.

“Do you want to do the honors my little minx?” Jack purred and leaned over to grab her earlobe with his teeth. Harley groaned, her eyes rolling with pleasure at the sharp feel of his teeth against her ear. She giggled, taking the firecracker he offered her and lit a match, careful that no one noticed them. She then rolled the little red tube under the table, then lit another two, tossing them quickly under the table after the first one.

While Harley was doing that, Jack hurried over, lighting his own firework and tossed the slowly burning stick back behind the string quartet and another under the cheese table, careful that no one saw him. Luckily for them both, the few reporters here had their attention on the art works and not whatever Jack Wayne was doing. Harley lit another and rolled the tiny firework until it stopped at the feet of one of the security men.

Jack strategically placed several stink bomb vials around the room in places where, as soon as the crowd reacted to the small explosions of the M-80's the vials would be crushed underfoot adding to the chaos. When Jack was finished, he hurried over and grabbed Harley by the hand, leading her out of the ballroom. Bruce was still with Selina over by the paintings when he caught sight of Jack and Harley, laughing and leaning into each other conspiratorially as they left the ballroom. He narrowed his eyes watching them with a frown, a sudden feeling of trepidation clenching his gut. He glanced around once, but Selina leaned close and whispered something distracting him...

Outside, Alex and Alice made their way around to each of the verandas where guests were drinking, eating and talking. Alex snickered while he and Alice lit and threw fireworks out onto each of the verandas, and onto the front lawn. Alex, under Jack's instructions, had also placed strategically set stink bomb vials outside before the two of them hurried to Alex's car, a 1978 Silver Pontiac Trans Am that was parked a small distance away from the manor house, closer to the gate. Alex was chuckling as he yanked the door open for Alice just as the first firecracker exploded.
Inside the firecrackers that had rolled under the dessert table went off in a series of loud, smart pops that caused the dessert table to jerk, which in turn sent the hideous ice sculpture toppling over the edge and crashing to the floor. The results were instantaneous. People in the crowd screamed, which was accompanied by the loud pops of additional fireworks. The one behind the string quartet went off sending all four of them to leap to their feet, a cello crashing to the floor with a loud, hollow sounding “BOOM!”

There was an a moment of quiet as the party-goers struggled to decide for a few precious seconds whether they were in real danger or not, and that was the moment when the first of the stink bombs was hit, crushed under the heels of one of the party goers, a woman dressed like Anastasia Steele. The smell instantly enveloped her, causing her to cough and gag...which only added to the noise and confusion, especially as other vials of stench-filled liquid began to be crushed under the feet of other costumed guests.

Guests started to make for the exits as the stink rose up and surrounded the party goers. When the first guest vomited, the act started a chain reaction.

Jack and Harley had dashed outside, finding a prime spot out in the garden to watch the chaos they had created without becoming caught up in it.

The M-80’s outside went off at the moment guests started to leave the mansion, sparking another round of panicked cries and led to the crushing of several vials planted outside by Alex and Alice. The fleeing guests were assaulted by the horrible smell from the manor following them even outside—there was no escape.

Jack was laughing so hard that he was struggling to keep the tears wiped off his cheeks. Harley was holding her sides in hysterics leaning heavily on Jack while they watched costumed guests dashing for their cars.

Inside, the few members of the press who had been allowed into the party struggled to document what was happening despite a couple of them getting sick on the marble ballroom floor.

Inside the manor, Bruce was yelling while holding one arm over his nose. “Everyone please calm down!! Please!”

Security had moved to guard the paintings and Bruce Wayne. Selina was beside him, fanning her face with her hands. “Bruce I need to go outside, this is bad!”

Bruce nodded. “Go, go—just be careful!” Then Bruce turned to his security. “Get the paintings out of here and to the safe before the odors ruins them!”

Bruce snarled, his eyes starting to water from the stench. “Jack...” He growled in anger.

Vicki Vale was watching with frustration as the crowds started fleeing. She was struggling not to follow, thinking this was her chance to do some real snooping. But despite her best to resist, she and Billy were pretty much just hauled along with the rest of the guests heading toward the front entrance. The smell was becoming so bad Vicki was sure she would be smelling it for days to come. Just as she and Billy made it out the front door, she was sure she caught a glimpse of Jack Wayne over by the side gardens, either sick or...laughing his head off?
An hour later, Jack and Harley were sitting outside on the side porch in a couple of chairs and holding hands. (Bruce had tried to make her leave them alone, but Jack had refused to send Harley away.) Bruce paced angrily back and forth, fuming. Selina had left a little while ago (at least Bruce was under that assumption).

“This...this was not just irresponsible, but GOD DAMN IT JACK! You could have cost me millions! Those paintings are not just worth a lot of money—they are priceless masterpieces!! Your little prank could have ruined them! And not only that, but now you have made the Wayne family name a laughing stock!”

Jack wrinkled his noise. “Oh please, like a couple of firecrackers and a few stink bombs are going to ruin the Wayne reputation. If your running around with every model or actress to float through Gotham hasn't ruined it, my little prank isn't going to do a thing.”

Bruce turned and glared at his brother, his hands clenched into fists at his side. “You promised to be on your best behavior!”

Jack shrugged. “I was bored. Besides, all those hypocrites clustered together get on my nerves Bruce.”

Bruce groaned and ran a hand down his face. “Jack, just...don't you care?”

Jack smiled. “Not really.”

Bruce sighed. “Damn it, Jack. You have to get along with these people.”

Jack stood up, letting go of Harley's hand. “Why? Why do I have to?” he asked in sudden anger. “That's the problem isn't it? Putting up with people like that!” Jack gestured vaguely behind him. “You put up with people like that because they have money and power and you think you can get them to do the right thing! But the more you put up with them, the worse they get; nothing gets better Bruce...”

Bruce groaned. “Jack, you have to! Yes they have money and power and you have to help them use it the right way! Little displays like this, though? That doesn't do anything!”

“Well, that's the fucking point isn't it! Nothing changes and none of it matters! You can get them to play nice and donate to your little causes trying to make Gotham better, but it isn't better! Our parents were still murdered, the rich are still insufferable and uncaring, Gotham is still a shit hole and nothing changes! It doesn't matter! Everything is a huge joke!” Jack's eyes were wild for a moment. Harley reached up to take his hand. Jack narrowed his eyes at his brother, hissing through his teeth, but he calmed letting Harley tug him back to the seat beside her.

Jack sat, then giggled softly. “Oh Brucie, you never could appreciate a good joke.”

Bruce was silent for a moment before he took a breath. “I'm going to have to issue an apology. I would appreciate it if you would do so with me.”

Jack groaned loudly, sticking his tongue out like he might puke, but then he sighed. “Fine. Whatever.”

Jack stood up tugging Harley up with him and turned without another word to Bruce, heading back into the house. Bruce watched him go with a sigh, dropping down onto the seat Jack had just vacated, leaning his elbows on his knees and covered his face. “What am I going to do with him?”
Bruce moaned to himself.

Jack took the stairs two at a time, tugging Harley along with him.

Harley squeezed Jack's hand. “You all right?”

Jack stopped on one of the stairs and turned back to smile at her. For a moment Harley was knocked breathless by the vision of him, the lights from the stairwell backlighting him, his smile wide as he spoke. “Of course sweets!” He laughed. “That was completely worth getting yelled at by Bruce!” He hauled her up to the stair he was standing on, pressing her body against his, his free hand coming up to stroke the tips of his fingers along her cheek. He grinned and brushed his nose against hers.

Harley laughed softly gazing, mesmerized by his eyes. “Yeah, it was!”

Jack chuckled holding her face with the tips of his fingers. “That's my gal,” he whispered, brushing his lips seductively across hers, setting a fire burning deep in her groin. Jack turned and quickly took the stairs, tugging her along again.

They headed upstairs, then turned the corner heading down the hall toward Jack's bedroom. Jack yanked the door to the room open, practically shoving her through the opening though he never released her hand and turned, slamming the door. He swung Harley around and pushed her up against the wooden door as soon as it was closed.

“Did I tell you how gorgeous you looked tonight in your costume?” Jack asked with a smile, pressing his warm body up against hers so that she could feel every inch of him.

Harley grinned, blushing prettily. “Yes you did puddin, but you can say it again.”

Jack reached up to take the beret from her hair and toss it into the room just before he kissed her. It was one of those kisses that made her groin and breasts ache for attention. She wanted to melt into him. Jack's hands wandered down over her hips grabbing her bottom lip between his teeth pulling her lip out then letting it go with a grin. His long nimble fingers found the zipper of her skirt, sliding it down so that the skirt dropped to the floor, pooling at her feet.

Harley grabbed the front of his slacks, wrapping her fingers around the belt and cuff of his pants before she forced him to walk backwards as she stepped out of her skirt. She moved him until the back of his legs hit the bed, knocking his hat off and they both toppled down on top of the soft mattress, the two of them laughing.

“You are so bad Jack.” Harley giggled, shimmying her body up his so that she was straddling him wearing only her blouse, silk stockings, panties and garter belt with her heels still on. She reached down and started to work his tie loose. Jack watched her and ran his palms up and down the silk stocking as Harley removed his tie, then focused her attention on unbuttoning his vest and shirt. Jack pressed his teeth into his bottom lip, his blue eyes wandering down over her while she worked at his buttons. His nimble fingers once again went to work, finding the clasp of her garter belt against the silk of the stocking and the satin soft skin of her thigh; he played with it for a few seconds without unclasping it.

Jack chuckled running his hands up to her panties. “Why thank you Miss Quinn. I do try to cultivate my bad boy image.”

Harley laughed, working her nimble fingers over the buttons of the shirt he wore tugging it out of his slacks and open once she had all the buttons undone. “You're terrible.”
Jack surprised her by reaching up and grabbing her arms, rolling her off of him and pouncing on her yanking her arms up over her head. “You love it.”

Harley giggled. “I do!”

Jack wiggled a little, working his hand under her blouse and around her back, searching for the clasp of her bra; when he found it he released it with one hand giving her a smirk when he did. Harley giggled. “Talented.”

“Yes I am...now...let's see how talented I am with my tongue. Jack slid down her body, hooking his hands through the sides of her panties and slid them down her thighs. Harley lifted her legs, leaving her shoes and stockings on as Jack freed her panties and tossed them somewhere in the room. Jack grinned at her, spreading her legs and with a wicked smile buried his mouth against her clitoris.

Harley groaned, bringing her legs up. Jack reached up to grab one of her legs, pressing the limb down on his shoulder so he could feel the silk of her stockings against his cheek, the heel of her shoe pressing into his back. Harley groaned bringing her other leg up and around, the heels of both shoes pressing into his back. Jack wrapped his arms around her hips scooting himself back until he could drop off the edge of the bed, yanking her hips with him.

Harley dropped her legs down, prompting Jack to spread them wider. He grinned, his mouth wet and glistening with her. He gazed at her lying across the bed, her hair still in the 1930's style, her blouse open now, the bra loose and the garter belt, stockings and heels still on...she looked delicious, wanton and gorgeous, his little sex kitten he thought...all his. Jack gave her a lopsided grin when Harley smiled at him, one of her hands brushing across her cheek.

“Mmm...I'm gonna eat, as they say in the 1930's, a 'box' lunch.” Jack waggled his eyebrows grinning before his face disappeared from her direct view to please her.

It was late, or early depending on how you looked at it, Selina thought. She was dressed in her leather and vinyl catsuit, her colored goggles pulled over her eyes. She had had to find a place to hide after she 'left' the party, ditching her costume in the trunk of a car before they were all gone. Selina glanced up chewing her bottom lip in concentration. She had her back pressed up against the side of the house, the bricks biting into her back, balancing delicately on one of the windowsills with just the tips of her toes. She was positioned just under one of the windows that led into the room where she knew the safe that held the paintings was located...on the second floor. It had been several hours since the disastrous end of the party and Selina had waited patiently for the commotion to die down and for the Wayne Manor to go silent. Selina wondered for a moment who was responsible for the chaos...Bruce had seemed to know, which made her wonder if it was his brother Jack. If she were to guess by Bruce's reaction...Jack was probably the culprit.

She smiled. It was funny watching all those rich stuffed shirts scurrying out, throwing up on themselves. Under different circumstances she might have congratulated Jack on his prank.

Selina took a breath and looked above her. She had her whip in hand and with a flick of her wrist, the whip caught hold above her...

Jack was lying naked, spooned against Harley's back. His arm was wrapped tightly around her waist, pressing her up against him, when he heard something. His eyes flew open. He lay there unmoving listening for whatever it was he had heard, when he was sure he heard it again, the sound of someone moving around, but it wasn't Bruce or Alfred, he was sure of it. There was a quality to the sound that just didn't feel right. Jack started to move away from Harley when she stirred.

“Jack?”

“I thought I heard something,” Jack whispered.

Harley sat up turning to look at him. “Heard what? Someone in the house?”

Jack nodded and replied, still whispering. “I think so.”

He slipped out of bed and grabbed his boxers from the floor. Harley followed him, grabbing Jack's dress shirt and slipping it on. The shirt hung past her hips so she didn't bother with slipping on her panties, she just buttoned the shirt enough to be decent. Jack walked barefoot and silently across the room, taking their bats down from the wall. He handed Harley's hers and the two of them slipped out of the bedroom.

* Selina leaned against the safe, the two armed guards lying unconscious on the floor having just received a hefty spritz from her knock-out gas. She wasn't sure where the rest of the security were and wondered if some of them had had to leave after the stink bomb incident. She silently chuckled at the thought of Bruce Wayne losing security due to weak stomachs. She refocused her attention back on the safe; it was the latest in safe technology. She pulled out the device from the pouch at her hip and attached it to the safe. This lock decipher was the latest...not even on the black market yet. Her tech guy Harold had said there might be a few glitches, but nothing that should hamper her using the device. She was just starting the device working when she heard a noise and turned—just as Jack Wayne and his fiancee Harley Quinn walked into the room, both armed with bats.

Chapter End Notes

Didn't think I was going to get a chapter out this week but I did it!!
Selina hissed in frustration. “Shit!”

Selina could only just see their faces in the darkened room, but the dark expression that came over Jack face and Harley's as well sent a chill down Selina's spine. She would never have thought those two people could have such cold eyes. Jack's gaze wandered over to the two unconscious security men, whom it seemed Selina had dragged to a corner and tied up.

Jack frowned shaking his head. “Well well, we have a cat problem—and our dogs....” Jack pointed to the unconscious men. “Are clearly not cut out for dealing with cats.”

Harley chuckled with a practice swing of her bat. “Bad kitty kitty.”

Selina saw that they were both armed, Harley with a baseball bat and Jack with a cricket bat. As they stepped closer, the moonlight streaming into the window highlighted both their features more fully...it was clear from the expression in their eyes, she was in trouble—deep trouble.

“God damn it,” she muttered out loud, she hadn't even managed to get the safe open!

“Look...” Selina grabbed her device off the safe, sliding it into the pouch at her hip as quickly as she could, taking a hesitant step backwards toward the window, her hands up in the air to show she was unarmed. (Her whip was at her hip and she wasn't sure she could get to it before one of them hit her with a bat, but her fingers itched to grab it.)

“I didn't take anything, you guys stopped me in time. So how about we just let bygones be bygones and I leave?” Selina smiled.

Jack chuckled. “Oh I don't think so. Stealing is very impolite. I mean, you broke into our home. That's a violation and I think the only way we can call this even is if we teach you a lesson about trying to take from others. Taking things that don't belong to you is extremely naughty, don't you agree Harley?”

Harley giggled. “Oh yes puddin, very naughty.”

Then Harley frowned, something about the woman's voice sounded familiar to her. She quirked her brow and stepped closer, trying to get a better look at the woman in the cat suit. Selina turned her attention on Harley, her hand carefully moving down to the whip at her waist. Harley stared at the woman, something about her face, the eyes, the way she was holding herself, it was all very familiar. Harley's frown deepened. The cat burglar reminded Harley of Bruce's girlfriend...then Harley's voice dropped low as she whispered.

“Selina?”

Selina, who had glanced toward the window, turned to stare at Harley with horror in her eyes. Jack frowned with a glance at Harley then at the burglar; he stared at her then slowly started to laugh.

“Oh my GOD!! Are you fucking with me? Selina Kyle? Brucie's special girl?” Jack wrapped his arms around his middle and let out a full belly laugh.

“That's rich!! Brucie's girlfriend!!”

Jack eye's widened as pieces started to click into place. “You helped him pick out the paintings didn't you? You were at that auction with him! I remember Alfred mentioning it!” Jack choked on a laugh. “Oh fuck, let me guess...the party was your idea too! Wasn't it?!”

Selina felt her heart sinking. Of course they recognized her. She didn't know what to do, this was not what she wanted. She had wanted to steal the painting and disappear from Bruce's life. Yes, he might have drawn a connection between the thief and her, but he wouldn't have done it until she was long gone! She would never have had to confront him and he could have just written this off as a bad experience, albeit an expensive bad experience.

Selina sighed, her gaze flitting between the two of them. “Don't tell Bruce. I'm leaving.”

Harley shook her head. “Tsk tsk, you ain't even going to say goodbye to your boyfriend? What kinda girl are you?”

Jack grinned at Harley. “I really think we should teach her a lesson about lying and stealing, don't you Harley? I mean, I guess it's up to me to defend my brother since Bruce isn't here...isn't it?”

Harley smiled giving her bat a good swing. “Yep puddin, I think you're right! Can't leave without your lesson!” the blonde woman said with a hint of a growl in her words.

Selina took a step backwards, for a moment thinking that if there was going to be a fight, thank God Bruce didn't keep a lot of furniture in this room! Getting hit with a chair was never fun.

But as her attention was brought back to Jack and Harley, Selina shuddered just a little. She knew something had bothered her about the two of them the handful of times she had met them. There had been something unstable about them, but right now, seeing the way they were looking at her, now she was sure of it—they were both crazy.

Jack laughed and swung his bat like a baton. “Hey Selina: What's the difference between a pick pocket and an umpire?”

Jack grinned. “One steals watches and the other watches steals.”

“Look, this...” but she didn't get to finish her sentence before Harley raced forward and took a swing at her, catching her by surprise. Selina yelped, throwing herself backwards into a standing somersault. She kicked up with her legs, catching Harley under the chin with the toe of her boot and knocked her backwards. The somersault put Selina that much closer to the window. At the same time that she landed on her feet, she yanked her whip off her belt when Jack hissed.

“Hey!! You hit my girl! You bitch!”

Jack rushed her, swinging the cricket bat like a baseball bat. Selina barely had time to duck under his swing when Harley raced forward and took a swing at her, catching her by surprise. Selina yelped, throwing herself backwards into a standing somersault. She kicked up with her legs, catching Harley under the chin with the toe of her boot and knocked her backwards. The somersault put Selina that much closer to the window. At the same time that she landed on her feet, she yanked her whip off her belt when Jack hissed.

“Hey!! You hit my girl! You bitch!”

Jack rushed her, swinging the cricket bat like a baseball bat. Selina barely had time to duck under his swing when Harley was back in the game. She snarled and rushed Selina, swinging her bat high and aiming for Selina's head. Selina ducked the first swing, and spun away from her attackers, putting a couple of steps between them again while snapping her whip out at the same time. The thin edge of the whip caught Harley in the shoulder, knocking Harley backwards at step, but Selina snapped her whip again at Harley in a quick double flick of her wrist. The whip's thin tip caught Harley in the torso, ripping the side of the shirt.

Harley stumbled back with a hiss of pain, her free hand immediately covering the spot where the whip had cut through the cloth of the shirt. Harley pulled her hand away to see that it was covered in blood. Blood blossomed on the white shirt like blood in snow, spreading in a wide circle and dripping down Harley's leg.
Jack's eyes blazed when he saw Harley was bleeding. He snarled, his head whiping around back to Selina. Jack dashed toward Selina, then, at the last minute, he dropped onto his knees to slide on the polished floor at the last possible moment. He swung his bat in a underhand swing, using the side of the cricket back to attempt to take Selina's legs out from under her. Selina leapt into the air in a perfect straight legged cartwheel, cracking her whip at the same time, catching Jack across his left cheek.

Jack hissed in pain, his head snapping to the side with the strike of the whip. The thin leather end of the whip left a deep, nasty, bloody line along his skin. The blood oozed from the wound to run down the side of his face. Jack turned his blazing blue eyes on her, using the smoothness of the floor to come to his feet gracefully. Selina felt a cold wave wash over her when her eyes met Jack's. Never had she seen anyone look at her with such cold, dead eyes while smiling. Selina landed in a crouch and pivoted on her left leg, bringing her right leg around to kick Jack, trying to knock his legs out from under him. He leapt backwards, but the toe of her boot caught him in the ankle. He stumbled, though her connection wasn't strong enough to cause Jack any damage.

Harley swiftly came back into the melee with her bat to defend Jack, taking a powerful swing at Selina's side. Selina threw herself onto her hands, bringing her legs up as she balanced on her hands, for a split second, angling her legs to grab Harley around her arm. Selina twisted her body, bringing her legs down again, but she kept her grip and took Harley with her, throwing Harley off her feet. Harley hit the floor hard on her back, knocking the air from her lungs. Selina let go at the last moment, swiftly coming to her feet and backing away. Damn it, she thought, she didn't want to hurt them, but they weren't leaving her any choice in the matter!

Jack snarled and raced up behind Selina.

She turned, bringing her leg up to kick the cricket bat away, while at the same time, she snapped her whip to the side trying to hit Jack again. Jack was ready for the whip this time, dancing elegantly to the side, her strike missing him all together. Selina twisted out of the way, trying to avoid the bat, but Jack's swing nicked her hip. Jack hissed in frustration. He had been aiming for her lower back!

Jack let his swing carry him, turning his body fully around. Selina whirled, trying to keep him in her sights, snapping her whip, trying to catch him up, maybe knock him off his feet with an entangling maneuver.

Jack chuckled and hissed with a wide grin.

"Hey diddle diddle, the cat and the fiddle,
The cow jumped over the moon.
The little dog laughed to see such sport
And the dish ran away with the spoon!"

She cartwheeled away from Jack's next strike. She did three somersaults to create more space between them before she stopped and turned in a crouch only to see Harley come out of her own somersault at the same time in front of her and swing her bat when she was right in Selina's face. Selina yelped in surprise, ducking Harley's bat. The bat slamming into the wall with enough force that Harley left a hole in the wall.

"HA!! You ducked!" Harley laughed.

Jack giggled as he lifted his bat up to his shoulder. "Damn Harley, that's sexy!"
Harley giggled at Jack. “Thank you puddin!”

Harley turned her attention back to Selina after winking at Jack. Selina pressed her lips together and responded by bringing her right leg up and around, trying to hit Harley in the head, but Harley weaved swiftly out of the way.

“Oh, is that how you want to play?” Harley grinned, tossing her bat, which Jack caught out of the air laughing.

“Oh you're in trouble now Selina!” he yelled back.

The two women hesitated for a moment, Harley holding her hands up in loose fists while Selina debated whether to just use her whip and end this...when Harley took a swing. Selina barely had time to block the punch before Harley was swinging at her again. Selina smiled just a little. She was impressed, she didn't really take Harley to be a fighter, but clearly there were a LOT of things that Selina didn't know about the little blonde doctor.

Selina quickly stepped back and dropped to her hands swinging her legs up gracefully as she used her booted feet to kick at Harley. Harley blocked with her forearms, then pivoted, bringing her right leg around for a powerful round house kick. Selina blocked, swung back up on her feet then down again on her hands, trying to use her legs by swinging them in a semicircle in order to knock Harley down, but the little blonde ex-gymnast threw herself back doing a perfectly executed back flip that knocked Selina's legs out of the way.

* Jack, holding both bats was laughing and propped himself against the wall to enjoy the show. He was finding that anytime Harley was fighting, it turned him on immensely, whether she was fighting someone else or him—especially him—but this was pretty hot too he thought. Watching Harley move was the most beautiful thing in the world.

* Both women were back on their feet circling each other.

Harley smiled “You really shouldn't break into peoples houses.”

Selina smiled and shrugged. “What can I say, I like expensive things.”

“Clearly more than you like Bruce.” Harley smiled.

That hurt. Selina realized that the statement hurt more than she wanted to admit. But the statement also had the added effect of distracting her. Harley lunged, but Selina was fast having a few more years of fighting experience under her belt. She dropped down, caught herself on one hand and used both her legs to kick Harley in the stomach. Harley stumbled, almost going down, but she managed to stay upright. Selina hissed doing another one handed flip, trying to use the strength of her legs to grab Harley, but Harley was quick. She wrapped her arm around one of Selina legs and bowled her forward, the two women going down to the floor.

They both slammed to the floor, panting as the air was knocked out of them. Once on the floor, Harley then used one of her fists to hit Selina in the face. Selina brought her arms up, blocking Harley's blow.

They struggled for a few intense seconds before Selina yanked her leg free of Harley's grasp then hauled back and kicked Harley. She tried to go for Harley's head, but instead she only managed to kick her in the shoulder. Still, it was hard enough that she knocked Harley off of her.

Harley rolled onto her back panting. Selina turned to jump on her, the plan to hold her down long enough to get a good solid punch in that would knock her out. But when Selina moved, Harley brought her right leg up and kicked Selina in the chest before rolling herself back to her feet.

Harley giggled, her breathing hard, just before she came at Selina with a few tight swings of her fists. Selina hissed, just barely avoiding getting hit. Selina returned to the offensive, dropping onto her right hand and bringing her legs around in a couple of swift swings, but Harley managed to hold her arms in close to her face and body, taking the kicks on the front of her of arms. Selina then did a series of quick spins, using her legs, trying to back Harley away from her so that she could once again get closer to the window and maybe, just maybe, get out of here. Both women were panting, the intensity of the fight getting to the both of them.

Harley backed up, but not enough for Selina to make a break for the window and there was still Jack who had stood up, cricket bat over his shoulder watching them intently. Selina bounced on her legs for a few moments then twisted her body around to bring her right leg up for a powerful roundhouse. Harley thought she was ready for anything, but Selina was good; she faked the kick to the head and instead dropped her leg down, taking Harley's legs out from under her.

Harley hit the floor hard on her left shoulder and cried out in pain. “Ah!”

Selina rushed in thinking to put her down and out when Jack snarled. “That's enough!”

She turned gasping in surprise as Jack brought his cricket bat down over head, hitting her as she brought her forearm up to try and protect her head. Selina screamed as the bat slammed down on her forearm; the sound of the bat made a dull cracking noise against her arm. The pain vibrated up her limb through her shoulder; the pain was almost enough to cause her to black out. Selina was certain that the weapon's impact had created at least a hairline fracture that ran along the length of her forearm, causing the limb to instantly go numb. Selina's arm dropped like a dead weight to her side, causing her to stumbled backwards and her back slammed against the wall. She was panting, trying to fight the urge to pass out, her eyes darting between Harley and Jack as she stumbled back into a corner.

Jack dropped to his knees at Harley's side, helping her up with one hand. He was tender with her, careful, which Selina found bizarre in contrast to the venom in his gaze when he turned those blue eyes on her. How could a man that could look so murderous have such a tender heart for the one he loved? How could he love at all?

Jack cupped her cheek with his free hand. “Harley?”

“I'm fine,” she said with pained expression as Jack helped her to her feet. Once he had Harley up, his eyes never leaving Selina (who wasn't sure she could get to the window in time) Jack smiled again holding his bat lazily for a moment. He moved Harley over to lean against the wall before Jack edged closer to Selina while whistling with a grin on his face.

He brushed his free hand along Harley's arm as he walked closer to Selina. Harley glanced sideways at Jack.

Jack gave Selina a sweet smile. “Did that hurt? Well, things are about to hurt a lot more.”

Selina looked between them. She knew that her luck was about to run out.

Jack raised his bat, but that was the moment the lights clicked on and a deep voice yelled. “STOP!!”
All three of them turned to stare at Bruce, standing in the doorway wearing a robe, barefoot, his eyes huge with shock and anger. Standing behind him was Alfred.

Bruce had been in the bat cave with Alfred getting ready to head out for the night when the silent alarms had gone off inside the manor. He had thought about leaving anyway, sending Alfred to investigate, or maybe Jack. There was also the security he had hired for the paintings, but something told him no—this was something he needed to take care of himself. Something in his gut told him this was not a simple break-in. So he had quickly stripped out of his Batman suit and hurried back inside.

Bruce glared. His eyes quickly took in the scene, a woman dressed in black, her arm sprained or worse. His brother had a bloody cut along his face, wearing only his boxers and Harley, also wounded, had blood on her side and she was holding her shoulder, dislocated maybe, or broken too. He couldn't tell from here.

“Who are you?” His eyes were on Selina. He couldn't quite see the thief clearly in the dim lights of the room, but he didn't have to wait long to find out who it was when Jack turned laughing. “Oh, you're going to love this Brucie—it's your girlfriend, Selina Kyle has come to rob you.”

Bruce frowned. “Jack I don't...”

“No, no he's right...it's me Bruce.” Selina, holding her arm against her body, stepped closer so that Bruce could see her better in the light.

Jack smiled. “Now isn't this just the cutest thing ever!” He put his hand to his mouth grinning. “What do you think Harley?”

Harley giggled. “Just adorable.”

Bruce stared at Selina. He saw it was her, but for a moment or two he tried to deny it to himself.

“Selina?”

Selina frowned and nodded silently. Bruce pressed his lips together then said softly. “Jack, Harley, I would appreciate it if you two would leave this to me to handle from here.”

“Because Selina and I have a few things to discuss.” Bruce answered, his eyes never leaving Selina's.

“You're going to let her go aren't you?” Jack growled.

“That is none of your concern Jack.” Bruce said flatly, but Jack wasn't having any of it.

“Not my business? This house is just as much mine as it is yours Bruce or did you forget that? Our parents left it and everything in it to us both. So I would say, 'Yes,' your little girlfriend breaking in concerns me!”

Bruce growled at his brother. “Yes I can see how your concern works! Two against one! What were you going to Jack? Beat her to death?”
“I would have been within my rights to do so if I wanted!” Jack yelled back.

Bruce, his jaw going stiff glared at his brother. Alfred's brow furrowed in pain. “Master Bruce, Master Jack, perhaps we should simply call the police?”

“No police,” Bruce said flatly, turning his attention back to Selina.

“What?” Jack, who was now holding his arm around Harley, growled in shock. “What the fuck are you doing Bruce? Is your head so far up your ass or is this you thinking with your dick? As many women as you have had I'm surprised this one sticks out enough for you to care.” Jack sneered at his brother.

Bruce turned his eyes on Jack. “That's enough Jack. Alfred, take them both downstairs. It looks as if Jack needs stitched and I'm not sure about Harley.”

Jack narrowed his eyes at Bruce. “You know Bruce; one day you are not going to be able to just dismiss me like I'm your pesky little brother. One day you are going to have to listen to me.”

Jack, his arm tight around Harley’s waist, followed Alfred out of the room.

Bruce sighed as he turned his full attention back to Selina. The pain that he now showed was real and Selina felt her heart twist. “I'm sorry Bruce.” The words sounded painfully inadequate to her ears.

“I am too. Was all of it just so you could steal these paintings?” Bruce stepped into the room as he spoke, closing the door behind him.

Selina tested her arm. Nope, it was broken, not bad, but she was going to need to see one of the 'friends' to have a cast put on. That was going to cost her, damn it. Bruce looked at her arm. “I can have one of my...”

“No thanks Bruce. I have people.”

He frowned and said, “You didn't answer my question.”

“Yes, okay, yes all of it was about the paintings—well actually just the one painting, the Picasso. I was hired to steal it. So yes, I used you.” Selina turned away so she wouldn't have to look him in the eye.

Bruce closed his eyes then sighed. “Just go.” Bruce wasn't sure what he was doing...Batman would not have let her go, but Bruce Wayne? Bruce Wayne was heartbroken and Bruce didn't make the same choices as the Batman.

Selina stared at him taking a step forward. “Bruce...”

“Don't. Selina just don't. Leave now.” Bruce turned, opened the door, and stepped out, shutting the door closed behind him. Selina stared at the door for a long moment. She didn't know if she was waiting for him to come back or what, but when nothing happened she hurried to the window.

Jack was fuming as he sat on the examination table while Alfred stitched up the wound on his cheek. Harley was lying on her side behind him. (They had had to make a stop at the bedroom to retrieve a pair of Jack's boxers for Harley to slip on before heading downstairs for Alfred to stitch her side up.) Her shoulder was neither broken nor dislocated, just badly bruised. Alfred recommended she wear a sling for a day or two, however.

“I just can't believe Bruce is up there talking to her! Just, just...Aaah!” Jack snarled digging his fingers into the sides of the examination table.

“Master Jack, if you do not stop moving around then you are going to end up with crooked stitches.” Alfred stopped what he was doing to glare at the younger man.

Jack sighed and took a breath. “Sorry.”

Alfred nodded. “Good. I'm almost done Master Jack.”

Harley reached out to lay her hand on Jack's back, rubbing the flat of her hand up and down his back slowly. She felt the tension slowly drain away. Alfred put a few more stitches in as he murmured, “The cut was nice and straight Master Jack, like Miss Harleen's. It will leave a scar, but I think it will be faint.”

“Thanks Alfred,” muttered just as Bruce walked in. Bruce glanced at Jack and Harley. Harley quickly sat up.

Bruce narrowed his eyes at his older brother. “You let her go didn't you?”

Bruce’s lips turned white as he closed his mouth tightly for a moment, but then opened his mouth enough to speak through gritted teeth. “Yes I did. She failed to steal anything...thanks to that two of you. I didn't see any reason to involve the police.”

Jack made a rude noise. “Yeah, I bet. If that had been Harley you would have had the police down here in a heartbeat wouldn't you?”

Bruce narrowed his eyes. “This isn't about Harley or you Jack. This was my mistake and my decision on how to handle it.”

Jack glared. “Fuck you Bruce.”

“Jack...” There was a clear threat in Bruce’s voice, but Jack hopped down from the table, stepping close to Bruce, poking him in the chest. “You are such a hypocrite, Bruce. Clearly you think you are the only one in this family with any sense! You can't tell me if you even thought Harley had stolen anything you wouldn't have had the police here immediately!”

Bruce lost his temper and shoved Jack back hard enough that Jack hit the examination table. Harley squeaked in surprise and Alfred gasped. “Now see here! Both of you need to stop this right now!”

Bruce glared at his younger brother, ignoring Alfred. “It's not my fault Jack if you haven't the ability to make a good decision if your life counted on it! You have been nothing but trouble since our parents died! Everything you do! You don't think of the consequences! You never think! You just do! Do you really think I would trust your opinion on anything or anybody?”

Jack hissed in sudden fury. “You're a fucking...” Jack snarled and started again. “You just can't admit when you're wrong, can you? Bruce Wayne, the perfect big brother, you're just perfect all around aren't you? Bruce Wayne who never does anything wrong. Perfect business man, perfect rich boy with the mentally deficient brother! However do you cope Brucie? Poor Bruce with the crazy brother! Well, you know what Brucie! You aren't as fucking perfect as you think you are! You are just a fallible as the rest of us! Selina is a perfect example!” Jack shoved Bruce in the chest. “And you're just jealous because I found someone! You, with all your women and running around, but it was ME! Your crazy little brother who finally got something you can't have! I have someone who loves me just for who I am Bruce. Harley loves me! And you can't stand that! As flawed as I am, she loves me!”

Bruce didn't know why, what it was...maybe because Jack hit close to home with his remarks. Bruce was responsible for Selina...and Batman would make sure she faced justice, but Bruce Wayne? Bruce Wayne was hurt, Selina had been...he had really thought that maybe...And yes, if he was honest with himself, he was jealous. No matter what he thought, Dr. Quinzel loved his brother...loved him, faults and all. Bruce hadn't found anyone who could love the real him...but he had thought Selina might be it. But he was right, he didn't think Jack was capable of making wise choices. He still thought of Jack as that little boy crying against his chest in the well, or the nights that Jack woke up screaming...the little boy who attacked first when he was older...all the times Jack had gotten into trouble...the trouble he still found himself in...

Bruce didn't know what caused him to do it, but his fist shot out and struck Jack across the jaw hard enough that he knocked his little brother back against the table again, breaking the stitches in Jack's cheek. Harley screamed and Alfred gasped in shock.

“Master Bruce!”

But it was too late—Bruce had thrown the first swing.

Jack let out a harsh laugh. “I knew it!! Hit me again Bruce! Go on! Do it! Do it! Do it! You know you want to!” Jack's laughter, his needling, his inability to see how his actions had consequences, caused something in Bruce to snap. He grabbed Jack by his upper arms and threw him out of the medical room into the hall. And Jack was laughing the entire time. Jack hit the floor sliding into the wall, his breath hitching for a moment when his back slammed against the wall, but then his laughing continued. “Oooh Bruce!! So much rage!! Did your little brother hit a nerve?”

Bruce snarled. “SHUT UP Jack!! Just shut up!!”

Bruce reached down and hauled Jack to his feet by his neck (like he had done to many a criminal while being Batman) holding Jack up so his feet didn't touch the floor. Jack wrapped his hands around Bruce's arm, grinned brightly at his brother, a trickle of blood running down from his nose over his lips.

“Hehe! Bruce, you know you really should see someone about your anger issues!”

Bruce slammed Jack up against the wall, his hand around his brother's throat squeezed. At the moment Bruce wasn't sure where he ended and Batman began; his anger was clouding his judgment.

“Shut up Jack!” Bruce hit him across the face with his other fist trying to stop his little brother's hysterical laughter, which only made Jack laugh even wilder.

“Hehehe!! Oh Bruce, is this for me or for you?” Jack grinned quirking a brow at his brother.

Jack suddenly brought his hands up, slamming his right palm sideways into the crook of Bruce's elbow, breaking Bruce's hold on him. Suddenly freed from Bruce's hold, Jack staggered on his feet for a second before he swung an upper cut, his fist hitting Bruce just under his chin. Jack brought his other fist around, aiming for Bruce's cheek, but his second swing missed as Bruce arched back away from it. Bruce swung, also an upper cut, into his brother's diaphragm twice, then again across the face sending Jack spinning down the hall. Harley screamed again, surprising Bruce when she leapt onto his back.

“STOP IT!” she screamed, her arms around Bruce's neck. Bruce broke her hold and shoved her back causing her to fall into Alfred. Alfred grabbed Harley, tugging her out of the way of the two men, holding the young woman against him, doing his best to prevent her from putting herself between them.

“Get her out of here!” Bruce snarled just as Jack, laughing, punched his brother across the face when Bruce turned back around.

Bruce blinked at the punch, surprised at how strong Jack actually was, but he shook his head and grabbed Jack, lifted his younger brother off his feet once more and slammed him against the wall again as he snarled, “STAY DOWN JACK! Just stay down!”

“Hooohoo!! What're you going to do Bruce? You like how it feels to beat someone up don't you? That freedom to just keep beating them to a bloody pulp—you need it don't you? You understand that sometimes it's the violence that keeps us going don't you?” Jack rose up on one knee and leveled a mad glare at his brother.

“Jack, I'm warning you, shut up!” Bruce hit him in the face, knocking his little brother's head back against the wall with a sharp crack.

Jack was laughing hard enough that he had tears in his eyes. “Oh perfect!! Perfect Bruce has a temper!! Who knew?! There you go! Let it out Bruce!! All that anger under your oh-so-perfect exterior!! Hit me again!! You know you want to! Show me how you really feel Brucie!”

“Shut up!” Bruce hit his brother again, knocking Jack to the floor again. Jack crumpled to the floor laughing, spitting droplets of blood all over the floor as he did.

Jack rolled onto his side. His nose was bleeding, his lips were bleeding and the wound on his face, the bandage gone and the stitches destroyed, but he was still laughing.

“Oh Bruce, hit me again! Show me that anger! Show me the real you!” Jack rolled back onto his back grinning at his brother with bloody teeth. Bruce dropped to his knees, straddling his brother. He held his arm back, ready to hit Jack's laughing face. His mind was racing. Jack, who had been nothing but trouble since their parents' murder with his explosive anger, his needling, dangerous pranks, his constantly being in trouble, and lately with his disregard for the rules of being a public figure, his whirlwind romance, his constant pushing, pushing at the boundaries...always pushing. And now...his constant laughing. Bruce hissed. “Shut up JACK! Stay DOWN!”

Alfred grabbed Bruce's arm hauling back with all his strength. “THAT'S ENOUGH!! BOTH OF YOU!”

Bruce was breathing through his clenched teeth while Jack lay under him laughing, his face covered in blood. Bruce let Alfred pull him off of Jack. Alfred turned Bruce and shoved him up against the wall. “Master Bruce, you need some fresh air. Go. I will take care of Master Jack.”

Bruce stumbled backwards away from Alfred, glaring at Jack who was still laughing as Alfred helped him up. Alfred put Jack's arm around his shoulders as Harley hurried over and took Jack's other arm. Alfred looked at Bruce. There was no anger there, just sadness.

“Master Bruce, just go. Please,” Alfred said softly.

Bruce nodded stumbling away, shocked at his own behavior. He felt as if a mind-numbing haze had settled over him, as if his actions weren't his own. But he knew they were his—all his.

Alfred and Harley led Jack back into the medical room helping him up onto the examination table, laying him back. Jack was still laughing though not as hard, just soft chuckles. Harley took his hand.

“Jack? Are you all right?” She stroked his hair back with her other hand. His face was a bloody mess. Alfred hurried over, cleaning away the blood and checking Jack's nose.

The older man sighed in relief. “It's not broken. That's good.”

Alfred finished cleaning Jack's face, tearing away the rest of the bandage and proceeded to re-clean the wound, removing the damaged stitches.

“I'm going to have to restitch this,” Alfred said softly.

Harley smiled down at Jack, threading her fingers through his hair. “Jack?”

“I'm fine baby girl. I promise.” Jack smiled as he looked up at her, his face a mess, but his eyes clear and full of love for her.

Alfred started to restitch the wound while Harley held Jack's hand and stroked his head. After a few moments Jack had finally stopped laughing and smiled at Alfred.

“Aren't you going to say anything?” Jack asked.

Alfred sighed. “I'm not sure what to say. You two haven't fought like that in years. Not since you were very small, not long after your parents' murder.”

Jack grinned. “Well at least now I know what Bruce really thinks.”

Alfred sighed. “No Master Jack, you don't. You pushed him and it is regrettable, but Master Bruce lost control and answered you in a most inappropriate way. You both need to talk.”

Jack made a rude noise, which only caused Alfred to shake his head. “You both have issues between you that you need to work out. If you don't, you are both going to be responsible for the rift that you are creating between you—have created.” Alfred sighed. “There may come a time when that will be the only way the two of you will be able to communicate is with your fists if you don't do something about it now.”

Jack sighed, looking away. “I don't have anything to say to Bruce.”

Alfred sighed. He finished up with the new stitches and placed a clean bandage over the wound. “Why don't you both go upstairs. I will be there with some tea and scones.”

Jack started to protest, but Harley stopped him with a look before she turned to Alfred. “Thank you.”

Half an hour later, Alfred came to the door with a tray containing a steaming teapot, sugar, cream and a plate of scones. Harley took the tray as Alfred asked in a soft voice, “How is he doing Miss Harleen?”

Harley, now dressed in a pair of bike shorts and one of Jack's t-shirts that hung on her like a mini dress, frowned and glanced behind her. Jack was sitting on the bed in a clean pair of boxers and a white t-shirt with a pack of cards that he was shuffling and doing card tricks with, his attention fully on the cards.
“He’s been quiet,” Harley said softly. Alfred nodded. “Sleep well Miss Harleen.”

She smiled gently. “Thank you Alfred.”

Harley brought the tray over, carefully climbing onto the bed with the tray and sitting down cross legged next to Jack. She lay the tray in front of her knees and poured the tea. “Jack, do you want to talk?” Harley asked as she handed the cup to him.

Jack frowned putting the cards down, taking the tea cup from her and blowing on the hot liquid. “No, not really.”

Harley frowned finishing making her own cup. “Are you sure?”

Jack narrowed his eyes. “Are you wanting to talk as my fiancee or my doctor?”

Harley pressed her lips together. Jack sighed then. “Sorry Harls.” He kissed her cheek. “I'm fine love. Just...need a good night's sleep I suppose.”

Harley frowned as she gazed at him. She didn't want to force him to talk...but...she sighed. Maybe tomorrow.

After leaving Jack and Harleen, Alfred made his way down to the bat cave hoping he might find Master Bruce, but when he arrived, as he suspected, the young man was gone. Alfred sighed standing in the silence of the cave wondering what was going to happen to these two young men he loved like his own sons.

*

When Harley woke the next morning she woke to the sound of Jack singing and dancing around the room as he pulled clothing out of the closet.

“You're just too good to be true
I can't take my eyes off you
You'd be like heaven to touch
I wanna hold you so much
At long last love has arrived
And I thank God I'm alive
You're just too good to be true
Can't take my eyes off you ...”

When he glanced over and noticed Harley watching him, Jack grinned brightly tossing the clothing he had in his hand to the floor and hurried over to her. He grabbed her out of the bed, leaning down to scoop her up into his arms bridal style (careful of her stitches on her side) and carried her around the room continuing to sing.
“Pardon the way that I stare
There's nothing else to compare
The sight of you leaves me weak
There are no words left to speak
But if you feel like I feel
Please let me know that is real
You're just too good to be true
I can't take my eyes off you...”

Harley squealed, laughing and kicking her legs while Jack carried her around singing. He wrinkled his nose at her with a big grin. He had a bruise under one eye, but his lip looked less swollen and the swelling around the cut on his face was better. Jack grinned and laughed. Harley cupped his face, staring into his blue eyes.

“You seem happy this morning,” Harley said softly and kissed him, her lips tender on his as he pressed his mouth against hers in response.

Jack groaned softly, opening his mouth against hers, his tongue flicking out to trace her lips before he spoke. “I'm in a great mood this morning and I'm taking you shopping!”

“Shopping? For what?” Harley asked caressing the back of his head, her fingers brushing the hairs at the back of his neck. (Inside, the doctor...Harleen..whispered to her. He is acting a little bipolar there Harley...be careful. But Harley only shoved Harleen's concerns away. She didn't need to listen to her.)

“I decided when I woke up this morning that I was going to buy you a car.” Jack grinned like a kid. Harley's eyes widened. “A car? Why?”

Jack giggled. “Why not?! And then we are going to fuck in the front seat while parked in the street! AND hopefully get arrested for indecent exposure while we're at it!” Jack laughed swinging her around until she squealed again.

Jack was holding Harley's hand, dancing down the stairs singing as he did so. Harley giggled, her eyes sparkling as she let Jack lead her down the stairs, then start dancing with her, even though he was carrying an empty brief case with him, (Harley had asked about it but he had only winked at her) as if they were performing a scene from “The Gay Divorcee” with Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers.

Jack sang at the top of his lungs in a perfectly beautiful voice.

“Like the beat beat beat of the tom-tom
When the jungle shadows fall
Like the tick tick tock of the stately clock
As it stands against the wall
Like the drip drip drip of the raindrops
When the summer shower is through
So a voice within me keeps repeating you, you, you
Night and day, you are the one
Only you beneath the moon or under the sun
Whether near to me, or far
It's no matter darling where you are
I think of you, night and day
Day and night, why is it so
That this longing for you follows wherever I go
In the roaring traffic's boom
In the silence of my lonely room
I think of you, night and day,
Night and day, night and day
Under the hide of me
There's an oh such a hungry yearning burning inside of me
And it's torment won't be through Until you let me spend my life making love to you
Day and night, night and day

He grinned brightly, holding her hands and dancing up and down the stairs, the two of them looking stunning. Harley wore a retro style knee-length swing skirt of bright red with a white halter-top that didn't quite reach the top of her skirt leaving a thin line of skin visible along with a pair of two-tone white and black gladiator style sandals. Jack was dressed in a white suit with a dark brown vest, a light blue dress shirt that brought out the blue in his eyes, along with a gold and plum colored tie and light brown leather wingtip bluchers. When they neared the last steps, Jack picked Harley up, his hands at her waist and swung her down the last few steps.

They both looked happy, despite the wounds on Jack's face.

Alfred came into the front room. Neither Jack nor Harley had come down for breakfast which had worried him, but now that he was seeing them he was more worried. While Bruce was brooding, having barely come in that night before he was off against this morning, Jack seemed too happy considering the fight the two brothers had had last night. Alfred stopped himself from saying anything to Jack and Harley as they headed for the front door. They were too happy, perhaps overcompensating, and he didn't want to ruin their mood by speaking of last night. Alfred let them leave without a word. Maybe when they returned, he would speak with them then.

* Jack had called a taxi for them, which was waiting outside when Jack opened the door for her. He opening the cab door. “In you go my little cupcake!”

Harley giggled as she slipped into the seat. Jack jogged to his side, opened the door and slid in. The cab driver looked familiar as Harley tilted her head. She started to ask if she knew him when the man turned around to face them. “Where to first Mr. Wayne?”

“Ah, my friend the Riddler!” Jack chuckled while he pulled out a pack of cigarettes offering one to the taxi driver. The young man laughed taking the offered cigarette. “Oh I like that!”

Jack chuckled lighting his cigarette from his personal lighter and even lighting Ed's before he flopped back in the seat with a grin.

“I thought you might,” Jack said with a smile. “Just as you must wear the right costume for the right event, so must your moniker fit you.”

As Jack spoke, Harley remembered the cab driver, Ed Nygma! The guy who had taken them to get their first tattoos and asked riddles. The young man smiled as Jack said grandly, “First to the First National of Gotham!” Jack patted the briefcase, the hollow sounds echoing on the inside of the case. Nygma gave Jack a salute, holding the cigarette between his teeth and started the cab's engine. Jack grinned leaning forward. “So do you have a riddle for us?”

Nygma grinned looking in the rear view mirror. “Who makes it, but has no need of it. Who buys it, but has no use for it. Who uses it, but can neither see nor feel it. What is it?”

Jack frowned as he sat back and thought while he blew a contemplative stream of smoke from between his lips. Harley quirked a brow in thought, and after a full two minutes she smiled. Jack grinned. “You figured it out didn't you?”

She nodded. “A coffin.”

Nygma laughed. “That's right!”

Jack tugged her closer wrapping his arms around her. “My clever girl!” Then he gave her a deep kiss leaning her back in the seat, eliciting a giggle from Harley.

* An hour later, (the bank had taken Jack longer than he had anticipatedd), Nygma pulled up in front of the Lamborghini dealership and let out a low long whistle.

“Damn...those are some nice cars.”

Jack laughed. “Yes they are.” He leaned forward handing Nygma a wad of bills. “Thanks for the ride Riddler.”

“Always a treat Mr. Wayne!” Ed took the money with a salute as Jack hopped out of the car and swiftly came around to open the door for Harley. “Now, let's go pick up your car.”
Jack wrapped her arm around his, the brief case in his other hand, and strolled into the shiny building. As soon as Jack entered, a young woman came racing up to him, her heels clicking frantically on the tiled floor.

“Mr. Wayne!! It is so nice to meet you!” The young woman had inky black hair and large brown eyes behind a pair of cat framed glasses and a pleasant smile. She was dressed in a navy blue pencil skirt that reached just below her knees, which had made her little jog across the floor that much more difficult, which in turn made Harley giggle. Her thick black hair was held in place at the nape of her neck in a bun with a couple of hair sticks holding the hair in place.

The woman took Jack's hand pumping it eagerly before she turned to Harley. “Oh and you must be Miss Quinn, Mr. Wayne's fiancee?”

She extended her hand to Harley who took it. “Hi, that's me, but please call me Harley.”

“My name is Jane Hernandez, please just call me Jane.” The other woman smiled pleasantly letting go of Harley's hand turning and motioning them to follow her. “Well, right after you called this morning Mr. Wayne, I got right on the phone and your car was delivered just an hour ago!” She smiled happily leading them over to a desk. She motioned to the two chairs on one side of the desk while she sat on the other side and continued smiling while she pulled out some papers.

“Metallic red rosso mars color, black leather interior, nero lucido rims, red calipers, carbon engine bonnet, carbon fiber exterior...” Jane looked up.

Jack grinned. “Perfect Jane, just perfect.”

“All right, well the price is as we discussed on the phone and I just need you to sign here, and Miss Quinn, I will need your signature, here, here and here...” Jane was pointing showing each of the places she needed a signature. Jack took the pen to sign, but Harley stopped, her eyes widening when she saw the price...451,350 dollars.

Harley turned to look at Jack as she whispered. “Jack...but...”

Jack smiled at her and wrinkled his nose, giving her a wink. “It's a drop in the bucket sweets, believe me.”

Harley frowned, but nodded as she signed the papers. Jane smiled. “All right, now do you want to set up payments or...”

Jack hauled the brief case up and dropped it onto Jane's desk rather loudly. He grinned as he stood up and popped the lid. “Is cash all right Miss Hernandez?”

Jane stumbled back into her seat, her glasses falling down her nose when Jack dropped the brief case on her desk and her eyes wide. “Yes, yes cash is fine Mr. Wayne,” her voice conveying her surprise.

Jack giggled at her with a broad smile. “I thought it might be.”

Harley laughed as she hit the gas and the car leapt as if it were a caged animal just being released back into the wild.

“Oh God, Jack, she is gorgeous!!”

Jack laughed. “I'm glad you like her Harls! Let's see what she can do.”
Jack narrowed his eyes with a grin when Harley hit the gas. Jack handled the stick shift for her (since she was still learning) and laughed, stopping to clap his hands. “YES!! Go Harley!!! GO!”

Harley grinned savagely as she spun the car out onto the road, slamming the gas. The two of them drove recklessly through traffic with music blaring out the windows. Jack was laughing when several drivers honked at them when Harley weaved through traffic nearly hitting at least four cars. She was shaking a little, but she didn't care. She giggled, glancing at Jack. He was clearly enjoying himself. He pointed ahead of them.

“Head to the Gotham Art Museum!”

Harley gave him a surprised look, but smiled as Jack handled the gearshift for her and they took off.

They zipped into the museum parking lot a few minutes later, Harley almost losing control as she brought the car around, the back in whipping around as she skidded into a parking space. People were staring when the car zipped into the parking lot, but when the two people stepped out there was more staring. Holding Harley’s hand, Jack walked at a quick pace toward the museum entrance.

The Gotham Art Museum looked completely different in the daylight, Harley thought as Jack led her toward the front entrance. She remembered coming for the gala which seemed a life-time ago now...

Jack sneered. “Always thought this place was pretentious.” But his sneer quickly dissolved into a grin. “Let’s go stain the Wayne public persona shall we?”

Harley gave him a quizzical look, but she let Jack grab her hand and pull her up the stairs that led into the museum. They stepped past the giant columns and through the modern glass doors, walking into the vast open gallery and headed straight for the entrance counter where patrons bought tickets for the museum. An older woman was sitting at the counter reading a trashy romance novel—if the cover was an indication—looked up over the top of her reading glasses and frowned, her eyes roaming over their clothing. From her expression she was having a hard time placing where they were in the social circles of Gotham. She was clearly trying to make a judgment about them as she smiled a little condescendingly. She took her glasses off, letting them dangle from the chain around her neck. Then her small brown eyes landed on Jack's hand, clearly taking in the nail polish and lipstick on Jack’s face as well as the clear signs of a fight along his features with disdain.

Jack gave her a pleasant smile and took out his wallet. He pulled out his ID, flopping it down onto the counter in front of the woman. The elderly woman with clearly dyed auburn hair and too much make-up, frowned in displeasure as she took his ID.

She huffed. “I don't know what you think you’re doing throwing your ID at me young man, but...”

She glanced down at the ID and her expression completely changing as she read the name there. Harley had to stifle her laugh.

“Ooh. Ohh my, Mr. Wayne!” The women stood up handing him his ID back.

Jack leaned an elbow on the counter, propping his chin in his hand as he did so and grinned. “Yep. That's me.” He took the card back holding it between two fingers.

“Oh...oh of course, no charge for you. Please enjoy your visit!” The lady smiled motioning toward the inside of the museum.

Jack chuckled. “Thanks, I intend to...”
He winked at the older woman causing her to turn beat red, before he turned on his heel and wrapped his arm around Harley's waist, leading her inside.

Jack grinned glancing around as he hissed. “Sometimes I just want to come in here and deface every bit of art work...all of this supposed timeless art...blah.”

Harley leaned in close. “What are we doing here Jack?”

Jack chuckled. “Well, I thought fucking in the car would be fun, but then as we were driving I came up with an even better idea!”

Harley lifted a brow and Jack giggled. “Just come with me my sweets.”

Jack led Harley through the museum, past beautiful paintings and amazing sculptures, until they came to one of the rooms that contained a specific collection. As they walked toward it Harley took a breath when she saw the name above the entrance. It was the Martha Wayne Wing.

“Jack? What are we doing?” Harley asked as they passed under his mother's name. Jack giggled glancing around and seeing no guards, just a few cameras in the corners. There were only a handful of patrons in this section at the moment, otherwise the room was full of silence and art.

“Bruce is so damn worried about his image and the family's public image. I'm the public disgrace, the bad seed...and I'm such a disappointment anyway. Why not just push the envelope further, eh?” Jack grinned playfully at her.

Harley thought she should protest, but there didn't seem to be any point. One thing she had learned by being in love with Jack Wayne was that once he set his mind on something, there was no changing it. So when Jack pulled her into the room that contained several dozen priceless pieces of art all donated by his family and shoved her up against a corner of the wall between La Belle Dame sans Merci by John Waterhouse and La Belle Dame Sans Merci by Frank Cadogan Cowper where he began attacking her mouth in earnest, Harley just went along for the ride.

Jack chuckled softly against her mouth, his tongue playing along her lips. His hands slid down her sides gathering up handfuls of her skirt as he did so. Harley moaned softly wrapping her arms around his neck, her mouth moving wantonly over his, her eyes slipping closed, forgetting instantly where they were, her only focus on the feel, smell and touch of Jack Wayne. Jack used the entire length of his body to push her back against the corner, one hand snaking under her skirt while his kisses became more fevered with desire. Jack ran the edge of his teeth along her chin, then down her throat, his tongue following the curve of her neck, his teeth catching her soft, delicate skin and biting, sucking while he pressed against her leaving lipstick marks on her delicate skin.

Harley groaned, running her hands through his hair. When Jack brought his mouth back to hers, a lock of his hair falling forward against his brow, she softly bit down on his bottom lip, feeling the swelling against her tongue. Jack made a soft sound of pleasure at the pain she caused, his blue eyes were partly closed, the blue glowing under his lashes.

He pressed harder against her; she could feel already how much he wanted her.

“Jack...why here?” Harley asked, her mouth moving to his ear. She traced the outside of his ear with the tip of her tongue making Jack chuckle then shudder when she caught his lobe with her teeth. Jack hissed before he answered.

“Because sweets...it's a fuck you to Bruce. I'll do whatever I want...he doesn't think I can make smart choices...then fine, I won't. He thinks I'm out of control, then I'll show him out of control. What does it matter?” Jack giggled. “Besides, we've had public sex before...why not again?”

He caught her bottom lip gently with his teeth and wagged his eyebrows at her, the mischief in his eyes made the blue dance.

Harley sighed with pleasure, her eyes fluttering for a moment, then she gasped when Jack's fingers slid under her skirt, tugging her panties aside, his fingers diving into her, pressing her back against the wall. Harley groaned, but Jack cut her groan off by covering her mouth with his, thrusting his tongue deep into her mouth at the same time that his fingers slid deeper into her. Harley responded, all thoughts of where they were vanished as her need for him grew. Her leg came up to wrap around his hip, she pushed up on the ball of her other foot while Jack thrust two of his fingers up, his thumb rolling over her clitoris until she was ready to crawl up the wall, her pants and moans muffled when she came were covered by his tongue and lips.

Jack kept her gasps and moans quiet, kissing her long, hard and deeply while his fingers moved, twisted and rolled within her, becoming wet as he drove her quickly to the edge again. Harley's next climax was again swallowed by Jack's heated kisses, his fingers continuing to press her hips back against the wall as she thrust against his fingers. Jack smiled along her lips, fucking her with his fingers, watching the way her expression morphed and changed with pleasure. Harley's hands grasped desperately at his neck, grabbing handfuls of his hair in her hands when she came, thrusting her hips against his fingers and thumb, her whole body shuddering.

Jack smiled against her mouth, his eyes open to watch her face when she orgasmed for him. He licked her lips when he was sure she wasn't going to cry out.

“That's my girl,” he purred rubbing his nose against hers. “My girl.” He cooed softly licking the entirety of her mouth. Harley moaned softly but before she could come down, Jack removed his fingers causing her to gasp. He quickly undid his pants, lifting her up and shoving her hard against the corner, hard enough that she made a loud thump against the wall. Jack lifted her up, wrapping her legs around his waist as he lifted her higher, pressing his erection deep into her, groaning softly at the feel of her warm wetness surrounding him. He settled her legs around his waist, his arms hooked under her legs, Harley locking her ankles at his waist and her arms around his neck.

Jack grinned groaning softly. “My girl...my lover...my partner...”

“Uhh...Jack...yes.” Harley attacked his mouth, her arms tight around his neck, her skirt bunched up between them. Jack's hands held her under her rear using the corner to help in supporting her weight while he moved, fucking hard, but not fast, taking his time, slowly pressing deep as he held her up against the wall.

“Tell me you're mine Harley, always mine.” Jack purred breathless against her mouth his blue eyes watching her.

“Always puddin, I'm always yours no matter what happens...you'll never get rid of me.” Harley whispered back desperately.

Jack grunted, thrusting into her, making her slide against the wall. He pressed his teeth against his lower lip groaning, coming closer. Harley buryed her face against his neck, holding him tightly, whimpering as another intense orgasm burned through her just as she felt Jack thrust her hard against the wall, this time the sound of her banging against the wall rattled the paintings beside them. Jack bit down on Harley's shoulder, groaning when he climaxed, his eyes rolling closed at the moment someone uncomfortably cleared their throat.
Jack ignored them, thrusting a few more times into Harley. She didn't bother to look up, she just tightened her grip on Jack, her nose and mouth pressed to the side of his neck. Whoever it was cleared their throat again then reached out and touched Jack's shoulder. Jack's hand shot out from under Harley's skirt and grabbed the offending hand so quickly that it shocked the other person who tried to step back, but Jack had gripped their first two fingers in his grip and he squeezed, hard.

Jack slowly turned his head, his eyes narrowed to see one of the museum's guards doing his best to not look in pain, but Jack's grip was threatening to break his fingers.

Jack slowly pulled out of Harley and eased her to her feet. Harley's skirt dropped, covering her, but she quickly zipped Jack up and tucked his shirt back in. When she was done Jack turned around still holding the man's fingers, bending them back as the guards eyes were watering.

“Can I help you?” Jack asked with a deadly smile holding the man at his mercy with just the guard's fingers in his grasp.

The man swallowed his knees were weak, the pain racing up his arm. “You...you can't do that in here sir...”

Jack grinned. “Then it's a good thing we're done isn't it.”

Jack let the man's fingers go and the guard dropped, cradling his hand against his stomach.

“Come on Harls.” Jack took her hand smiling as he led her out of the museum. While passing the entrance counter he waved at the elderly woman. “Thanks sweetie! Had a good time!”

Harley giggled and waved too. “Bye!”

Just as they exited the museum Jack laughed. “That was fantastic! You are always fantastic Harley...Mmm...” Jack yanked her close then hauled her into his arms laughing and carried her bridal-style down the steps with a skip in his step. They had almost reached the car when his phone began to vibrate.

“Harley can you get that?” Jack smiled carrying her to the parking lot as people laughed, stared or waved at them. Harley leaned over Jack's shoulder, her arm tucking under to pull his phone out of his back pocket. She smiled when she saw the caller ID.

“It's Alex!” She grinned.

“Answer it my sweetling!” Jack laughed.

Harley pushed the button and held the phone to her ear. “Hey Alex!”

“Oh fucking hell, I thought something had happened to Jack's voice for a moment!! You fucking startled me! Is Jack there Harley?” Alex asked. He sounded as if he was calling from a car with the window open.

“Yes, but he is carrying me at the moment; can I help you?” Harley asked.

“Carrying you? You okay?” Alex asked with genuine concern.

“I'm fine! He just felt like carrying me I guess.” Harley smiled and looked into Jack's blue eyes.

“Oookay. Tell Jack I got fucking Troy and Tif to come to the club! Troy fucking begged me to get him in! It was fucking crazy!” Alex laughed.
Harley smiled. “Really? Fantastic!” She turned to Jack. “Alex got Troy and Tiffany to come to the club.”

Jack’s eyebrows shot up. They had arrived at the car and Jack set Harley on her feet taking the phone from her. “Alex, it’s official, I love you.”

Alex laughed. “Yeah you fucking do! Okay I gotta go, see you guys! Don’t do anything I won’t do!”

Jack leaned on the hood of the Lamborghini grinning at Harley who had walked over to the passenger side.

“Ready for another fight baby?” Jack asked with a smile.

Harley giggled. “Always.”

Bruce came home that night, but he didn't come home. He went straight to the cave. He had received word from the head of museum security about Jack and Harley’s behavior at the museum. Part of him wanted to storm into the manor and have it out again with Jack, but the part that was now in the cave was still too raw to deal with him. Tonight he was going to look for traces of Selina. Hopefully she had skipped down. He wasn't sure how or if he could deal with her. Bruce took a breath, letting it out slowly when he heard the sound of the elevator coming down. He looked over to see Alfred coming toward him carrying a tray.

“Alfred?” Bruce asked, but he was only answered by Alfred dropping the tray down in front of him. On it was a turkey sandwich, a glass of cold iced tea and an apple.

“You need to eat something before you go out tonight sir,” Alfred said it in a tone of voice that said he would take no guff from Bruce tonight.

Bruce frowned. “Fine.” He picked up half of the sandwich and took a large bite out of it. Alfred nodded his approval before he sighed. “Sir, you need to talk to your brother. You need to mend this.”

Bruce sighed. “I can't Alfred. I just...I just don't understand him! I try to get him help and he just turns around and romances her! I...I give him chances Alfred and he throws them away. He acts like...like a child...just doing whatever he wants whenever he wants. He has...I just...I don't know! He acts like everything is a game, a joke! The only thing he has shown any caring about is Dr. Quinzel and all she is doing is feeding his behavior!”

“Bruce, this is more than his behavior—this is also about yours.” Alfred looked down at Bruce with a frown.

“You have distanced yourself from Jack almost the moment he showed that he was having trouble coping with your parents death. You were not not there for him Master Bruce.” Alfred didn't look angry, he looked sad.

“I was just a child myself Alfred,” Bruce said softly.

“I know Master Bruce, but you were his elder brother. Do you have any idea how much Master Jack worshiped you. I think in many ways, though he would never admit it now, he still does,” Alfred said softly.

Bruce sighed. “What can I do?”
“Perhaps, I might suggest you throw them an engagement party sir, as a gesture of peace? They were discussing it and I think if you showed that you support their marriage more...” Alfred trailed off as Bruce frowned. “I have...when Harley was pregnant I was...” Bruce sighed as he realized he could have done more for his brother after they lost the baby. Yet another blow to Jack's psyche that Bruce didn't pay enough attention to, but he had seemed all right...

“I'll think about it Alfred. I promise.” Bruce stood up taking another bite of the sandwich reaching over and grabbing his hood, pulling it on and setting off toward the batmobile. Alfred frowned watching him leave then sighed and headed back upstairs.

Jack was hyper the day of the next fight club meeting. Not only was he going to get to have a go at Troy, but he would be one more step closer toward having another 'duel' with Oswald Cobblepot.
Harley sensed he also still needed to vent...he and Bruce had been avoiding each other since their fight. The tension in the manor was palpable. Harley was lying on the bed naked, her blonde hair down around her shoulders as she watched Jack while he threw some knives at the wall where a picture he had printed of Batman hung. Batman had made the Gotham news the last few days and Jack was pissed. After the Killer Croc and the Electrocutioner events, Jack didn't see what good the bat was doing for Gotham at all.

Jack stood in the middle of the room, wearing only a pair of purple silk boxers and narrowed his eyes just before he threw one of his knives, hitting the printed picture right in the middle of the Batman's face.

“I still can't believe they were calling him a hero in the news last night,” Jack hissed in scorn.

Harley frowned. “Only that one station. The others were arguing about whether or not a vigilante in Gotham is a good idea. They were talking about other vigilanties in other cities too...apparently vigilanties are becoming the 'thing' in some of the bigger cities.”

Jack walked over and yanked the knife out of the wall, along with a handful of others that were littered around the picture. “I just don't get it. He runs around scaring the shit out of these criminals, catching a few of them for the police, but when it comes right down to it, he won't take that extra step and just put them down permanently.” Jack walked over and flopped onto the bed. “He managed to let that Killer Croc escape and the Electrocutioner...hell, we had to take care of him ourselves! What good did he exactly do?” Jack frowned as lay on his back.

Harley scooted closer to him and lifted his head to her lap where she began to stroke his hair back threading her finger through the thick locks. “We don't need Batman puddin. We'll find Croc and take care of him.”

She smiled as she leaned down to kiss his forehead. Jack grinned enjoying the feel of her breasts, warm and satiny across his face when she leaned in to kiss his forehead.

“You're right, of course my love. Who needs a fucking giant bat, we can mete out our own form of justice!” Jack giggled then kicked his feet in glee. “Beating the living daylights out of Troy is going to be so satisfying!”

Harley giggled. “Punching Tiffany will be pretty rewarding too, I think. I'm going to aim to break her perfectly expensive nose.”

Jack snorted. “Ruin her nose job are you?”
Harley giggled. “You betcha puddin!”

Jack grinned leaning up to lick one of her breasts before he pushed himself to his feet. “Okay, well, we should get ready.”

Harley jumped up too, much to Jack’s delight, watching all the wiggly parts of her wiggle. Jack growled playfully, crouching a little bit, his hands out. “You better hurry and get some clothes on pumpkin or you aren’t going to leave this room...running around naked like that...I’m a weak man!”

Harley giggled and with a squeal of delight when Jack lurched at her she ran to the bathroom slamming the door. Jack laughed. He smiled happily as he thought how since Harley had come into his life so many things made so much more sense to him. He loved having someone to share everything with...someone who understood him and still loved him.

The streetlights had snapped to life and the moon was high when Jack and Harley arrived at the fight club’s location. Alex had called, telling them he would meet them there this time driving his own car (Harley still found it pretty impressive that Alex drove one-handed). The air was cool when they arrived, parking where they had parked last time they were here. When they exited the Lamborghini, they both saw Alex, dressed in a pair of well worn jeans with huge holes in the knees, red high top sneakers, a white t-shirt and an unbuttoned pink and green Hawaiian shirt on over the top, leaning against the wall with a cigar in his mouth. He waited for them by the door with Blockbuster, who also had a cigar. The two men were smoking in what resembled companionable silence. The large man, wearing a pair of cargo pants and a red and white striped shirt, narrowed his eyes when he saw Jack and Harley walking up, but he didn't say a word to them. Jack and Harley also noticed the way Blockbuster kept his eyes averted.

Harley, her hand in Jack’s, wore a pair of red and black booty shorts, a pair of thigh-high black socks that ended with white stripes running horizontally across her thighs, a pair of thick sole ankle boots and a red and black striped t-shirt that stopped just short of her shorts. Her hair was pulled up into two little bun-like ponytails.

Jack, a cigarette between his lips, was dressed in a pair of slim cut black jeans that highlighted Jack’s height and his slim legs. He had on a pair of purple and black striped socks, with a pair of ankle boots and a simple, athletic cut purple t-shirt. Jack smiled and stopped right in front of Blockbuster. He pulled his cigarette out and dropped it to the ground as he blew out a long stream of smoke at the man.

Jack grinned. “How ya doing?”

Alex chuckled. “How the fuck are you? You two look like you’re ready for a fucking fight!”

Jack turned his attention from Blockbuster and smiled at Alex. “Is he here?”

Alex nodded. “Yep, the two of them arrived just fifteen minutes ago. Man that fucking Troy...he’s looking for a fight. Thinks he’s fucking Muhammad Ali! When I told him I could arrange for him to fight you, man that fucking asshole couldn’t agree fast enough. Apparently that little party at your place took away every guest they had. And according to some hints from the uppity ups, it was still more fucking fun than the Randells parties have ever been, even with what we did!” Alex chuckled before he redirected his attention to Blockbuster. “You wanna remove the board there Blockbuster?”

The large man glared at Jack, but he pulled the board out of the way. “Thanks for the cigar,” he grunted at Alex.
Alex waved him off. “It was fucking nothing.”

Alex led the way inside. The place looked exactly the same as the last time they were here. The three of them made their way downstairs to the deep thump of music and the cheers of the spectators.

Alex muttered. “Well, we better get the fuck down there before Cobblepot gives him to someone else. I kinda put in the word that you wanted first go at Troy. I was fucking surprised that Cobblepot didn't like throw a fucking fit or something. He must hate that fucking piece of shit as much as you, wants to see the two of you fight.” Alex glanced at Harley. “Did the same for you, Tiffany is all yours.”

Jack smiled with a shrug. “Whatever works. The enemy of my enemy is my friend sort of thing.”

Harley giggled softly.

When they arrived downstairs there was a fight going on between two women. One, a blonde dressed all in black and fishnets who looked slightly familiar to Harley and another woman with long black hair, dressed in black and purple, were fighting in the middle of the crowd while the audience yelled and money was exchanging hands. Rammstein's 'Ich Tu Dir Weh' was playing in the background as the two women faced off. Alex stopped and pointed. Over in a corner were Troy and Tiffany; Troy was clearly enjoying himself watching the fighters with a grin while Tiffany looked as if she wanted to crawl into a hole and hide. Troy turned pulling out a wad of money, placing a bet with Warren while Tiffany looked on in horror.

“Look at that fucking piece of shit,” Alex yelled over the music shaking his head.

Jack and Harley chuckled at Alex's assessment of Troy, their arms around each others waists.

The two women in the center of the makeshift ring both had bloody noses and split lips, their fists scraped and bleeding. As Alex led them over to where Cobblepot sat on his 'throne,' Harley noticed that the two women clearly knew how to fight by the way their were moving around each other. Alex gestured toward Cobblepot, catching the shorter man's attention. Cobblepot glanced over, his eyes meeting Jack's. He grinned and nodded.

That was the moment the blonde hit the brunette hard enough that she knocked the woman off her feet, sending the brunette to the floor with a sickening looking impact. The brunette went down and didn't get back up. The crowd roared as the blonde was grabbed by her wrist by one of Cobblepot's men who yelled, “BLACK CANARY WINS!”

The blonde woman grinned, pumping her fist once before she wiped the blood from her nose and turned, blending into the crowd, people congratulating her, patting her on the back as she headed over to get her winnings.

Alex grinned. “God, I love it when the chicks fight!”

Cobblepot stood up then and yelled. “QUIET ! Time for the next round!!!”

The crowd quieted down waiting for Cobblepot to announce the next fighters. Cobblepot smiled looking around the crowd. “As you know, last time we gathered here we had a newcomer beat Blockbuster and tonight he's back. Jack Wayne!”

The crowd cheered. Immediately money started being exchanged before Cobblepot announced who Jack was fighting. Jack grabbed Harley, yanking her closer, and kissed her. The crowd roared.
Harley grabbed Jack's face between her hands returning his kiss passionately before they separated and Jack walked into the makeshift ring.

Alex leaned in close to Harley. “Want me to place a bet for you?”

Harley glanced sideways at him and grinned. “Yes.”

Jack pulled his t-shirt off and tossed it to Harley who easily caught it. He stretched his arms over his head to the cheers of the crowd (for a moment the urge to kill them all rushed through Harley with surprising speed. She found herself quaking at the sudden rage, but a few breaths calmed her).

Cobblepot grinned viciously and yelled. “Jack Wayne against TROY RANDELL!”

Troy grinned and started to walk into the circle. Tiffany grabbed for him saying something, but Troy pulled her hands off of him throwing her hands back at her, causing her to stumble backwards. Troy walked into the ring with a condescending smile. Troy was dressed in pair of black and white plaid shorts with a button down denim shirt. He unbuttoned his shirt, taking it off and tossing it at Tiffany who barely caught it. Troy wasn't badly built, but he was missing the slender, razor whip physique of Jack Wayne.

“Finally! I'm going to give you just what you deserve! I'm going to make you pay for everything you did to me and Tiffany.” Troy sneered at Jack as he lifted a hand to thumb his nose at Jack.

Jack smiled pleasantly, lifting a brow at Troy. “Oh boo hoo Troy. Did I hurt your little feelings? I was going to give you a nasty look, but I see you already have one.” The crowd started laughing. Troy narrowed his eyes and started circling Jack. “Oh you think you're funny do you? You...you...piece of shit!”

(Someone changed the music from Rammstein to Marilyn Manson's 'Fight Song.')

Jack smiled bouncing slightly on the balls of his feet. “I know I'm funny Troy. You bring out the best insults in me!”

Troy snarled. “You're a piece of SHIT Jack Wayne!! You're just the crazy little brother of Bruce Wayne! You'll never be anything but a fucking disgrace to the Wayne name, you know that? I bet your parents are glad to be dead so they didn't have to see what a crackpot you turned out to be. An insane shadow to Bruce Wayne! They should lock you up!”

Jack's eye twitched just a little, his lip curling into a cold smile that never reached his eyes. “You know Troy, I'll never forget the first time we met, though I keep trying.”

Troy lunged, but Jack's hand snapped up, wrapping his long fingered hand around Troy's wrist. They struggled for a few intense seconds before Jack reared back and slammed his forehead against Troy's face, causing the other man to lurch back as Jack let go at the same time. Troy stumbled backwards nearly toppling over. Troy tried to slap Jack, but Jack leaned back avoiding the clumsy blow. Troy next brought his leg up to kick Jack in the chest. The kick connected, but lacked any real power to do any harm; the kick failed to knock Jack back any. Jack simply shrugged it off.

Jack chuckled. “Really Troy, this is your best? Though I'm not sure what I was expecting.”

* Alex had placed Harley's bet for her and had come back carrying two bottles with him, both wine coolers and handed one to her.
Harley growled. “Where did you get these?”

Alex grinned. “I have my ways!”

Harley smiled taking a sip of the drink. It was sweet with just the right amount of burn. She smiled pleasantly and asked. “You think Troy will realize that Jack is playing with him?”

“No, not until it’s too fucking late.” Alex laughed in anticipation.

Troy lunged again, aiming for Jack’s face. “ARR!!”

Jack slapped Troy’s hand away with a dismissive gesture and punched Troy across the face while laughing. “You know Troy... I guess you are proof that God makes mistakes.”

The crowd roared with laughter, serving only to make Troy furious.

Troy snarled wiping the blood away from his nose. “You know what you are Jack Wayne! You’re a fucking reject!! I bet your brother laughs at you behind your back!”

Jack hissed in warning, “Stop bringing my brother into this.”

Troy chuckled. “Oh, does that hurt?”

Troy took two more punches at Jack, but the leaner fighter weaved one way, then the other easily avoiding Troy’s sluggish punches.

Jack chuckled. “Really Troy, this is a little sad. You need to try harder sweetheart.”

Troy tried again, lunging low, trying to knock Jack’s legs out from under him, but Jack simply jumped avoiding Troy’s punch. Troy did surprise him when Jack spun around with a roundhouse kick that Troy somehow managed to duck. Jack twisted his body at the waist, putting power behind his move when he twisted his upper body and brought his right elbow around, cracking Troy across the face. Troy’s head snapped to the side and up. Jack followed that by fully turning his body and kicking Troy in the chest.

Troy coughed and groaned as he hit the floor. Jack stepped back. Instead of finishing him, he let Troy get to his feet while laughing the whole while and the crowd was laughing with him. Troy was becoming blind with rage as he pushed himself to his feet. The light haired man lunged again (Jack had to laugh, clearly Troy hadn’t figured out that lunging wasn’t really working for him.) Jack twisted at the waist to the left, his legs in a wide stance, and used his shoulder to hit Troy in the chest, grabbing his arm at the same time and rolled Troy over his back and to the floor. Troy hit the floor hard again, knocking the air from his lungs.

Jack smiled, bouncing back and giving Troy a chance to get to his feet again.

Jack hissed, mocking his opponent. “Oh, did that hurt?”

Troy came to his feet with a cough, but he rushed Jack again, throwing punch after punch. One, two, of the series of punches connected, though Jack seemed to take the punches as if he felt nothing. One punch hit Jack across the face, reopening the split in his lips, blood immediately started to ooze down his lips and chin; the next punch was in the stomach, but Jack barely winced.

Troy hissed, panting to catch his breath, covered in sweat. He staggered around glaring hatefully at Jack. His rage was clear when he started to speak, spitting the words at Jack “You!! Your woman is a WHORE! You hear me JACK WAYNE! A fucking ball sucking CUNT!”

Jack stopped moving then and stared at Troy. His voice was barely a whisper as he asked with narrowing eyes, “What did you just say?”

Troy grinned with bloody teeth. “You heard me!! She's a ball sucking, dick sucking TWAT!”

(Tiffany was in the corner of the room covering her ears in shock at her husband's behavior.)

Harley's eyes narrowed as she started to move, but Alex quickly grabbed her with his one hand pulling her back.

Jack smiled then. “I'm going to fucking kill you Troy.”

Troy took a few swings at Jack, hitting him in the chest, then once in the face again, knocking Jack's head back. Jack's head came up, blood flowing more freely from his nose. He smiled at Troy and waggled his eyebrows at him. Troy looked confused for a moment at Jack's reaction, but then Jack struck. He hunched slightly and hit Troy in the side hard, the smack of a fist against flesh was hard enough that it could be heard. Jack then swung his right arm up, striking Troy under the chin, snapping his head backwards hard enough that Troy went down in a daze.

Troy pushed himself up to his knees, but Jack was there, slamming his fists into him again, across the face with his fist, and again and again in rapid succession. Troy's head snapped back and forth like a punching bag in a cartoon. Jack hit him again, knocking Troy back down to the floor as he straddled him and planted his weight on Troy's chest. Jack hit him hard, a direct knuckle punch to the nose, blood splattering everywhere. Jack started to laugh. Now Jack was using both fists. He hit Troy across his left cheek, splattering more blood, then again and again his fists connecting with each cheek splattering blood and saliva.

Blood was everywhere, Troy's face such a mess of blood, saliva and chipped teeth that the man was becoming unrecognizable. Jack kept hitting him though Troy had stopped struggling to hit back, he just lay on the ground, his arms spread out as Jack continued to savagely beat him.

Jack showed no inclination to stop. Jack smashed his face again, then again. Jack was laughing as Troy's blood splattered his face mixing with his own. A moment later Jack stopped using both fists and just kept pounding against Troy's face with his right fist, over and over.

Harley was laughing, her giggles turning slightly maniacal as she watched Jack beat Troy.

(At some point during the beating, Tiffany had run off, no one noticing when she left.) Jack kept hitting Troy over and over, knocking a couple of his teeth out, breaking his nose, still laughing.

Alex hissed at Harley, “He is going to fucking kill him! You need to get him out of here!
The Unforgiven

Alex was the first one to run out toward the two men to try to stop Jack. Jack just kept hitting Troy over and over. Spittle and blood flew from his lips as he grinned, laughing, his fists raining down in hard, meaty sounding thwacks against Troy's face. Everyone had gone quiet watching while Jack continued to beat Troy; the only other sound was Jack's giggles. Harley didn't move for a few heartbeats watching Jack continue to beat on Troy. She smiled, thinking it was nice to see Troy get exactly what he deserved (she could almost hear a whisper of Harleen's voice yelling at her to stop him, but the voice seemed so far away), but finally her sense of preservation kicked in and she rushed forward to help Alex.

“Jack!! Jack he's down, puddin!! You can stop!!” Harley grabbed Jack's arm while Alex hooked his one arm around Jack's chest doing his best to haul his friend off of Troy. Jack giggled softly, the sound dying slowly as he finally seemed to come to his senses, looking up at Harley at same time that Alex was hauling him to his feet.

Alex was shouting. “JACK STOP!! YOURE GOING TO KILL HIM!!”

Alex hauled Jack back at the moment Jack's attention was on Harley, managing to throw Jack backwards onto the floor. The crowd, which had gone silent watching Jack nearly beat the life out of Troy, erupted into cheers. It didn't seem to matter to them that Jack had almost killed a man, what mattered was that the fight had been a good fight and most of them had put their money on Jack Wayne. Harley and Alex helped Jack to his feet as patrons of the club swarmed him, wanting to pat his back, to touch Jack somehow as if touching him would rub something off on them. Jack seemed a little out of it, smiling, but not really connecting to the situation until Alex dragged him over to the wall and started yelling at people at the same time to give Jack some air. While this was going on, a few men hurried over and dragged a barely conscious Troy out of the way; Tiffany was nowhere to be seen.

“Go on, you bunch of fuckers! Go get yer money! Give the man some fucking room to breathe, ya motherfuckers!” Alex started pushing people away from Jack (and threatening to deck a few) while Harley caught Jack's face between her hands forcing him to look at her.

“Puddin? You okay?” Harley searched his eyes looking for her Jack.

Jack responded with a giggle at first, his mouth and teeth were bloody and there was blood still running freely from his nose. His eyes weren't focused on her at first, but after a moment, as Harley stared hard at him, her thumbs caressing his cheeks, she whispered. “Puddin?”

A big smile bloomed across his face, his blue eyes focused on her. “Hey cupcake.”

Harley smiled letting out a sigh of relief. “There you are.”

Jack chuckled gathering her into his arms. “Mm...you smell delicious sweetie.”

Harley held on tight to him, one hand going into his sweaty hair to cradle his head against her shoulder, her other hand stroking his bare back. Alex, who had gone to make sure he picked up their winnings came back in a hurry. “Hey, Cobblepot wants a fucking word with you Jack.”

Harley released Jack who spat some blood onto the floor. “What the fuck does that wobbling bird want?”

Alex shrugged. “I don't know, but I think you should fucking find out Jack.”
Jack nodded, smacking Alex on the back before he took Harley's hand in his and pushed their way through the crowd to Cobblepot's throne, Alex acting like their bodyguard as he yelled and pushed people out of the way. “Go on you bunch of fucking pussies! Get out of the way!”

Cobblepot, dressed in a three-piece black suit with white shirt and shoes shined to the point they seemed to reflect what little light there was in the dimly lit room, was sitting on his 'throne' when they approached, leaning to the side as one of his girls, a tall woman with dark mocha-colored skin and black hair streaked with blood red color, whispered something in his ear and another, a blonde with green eyes and a doll-like face, sliced bites of apple off with a knife and fed them to Oswald. His hair looked greasier than usual, thick strands across his forehead, some of it sticking up oddly while he laughed at whatever the mocha-skinned woman next to him whispered. He reached up to caress her face, making her smile before he noticed Jack.

Oswald smiled slowly. “Well, well Jack Wayne, quite a show.”

Jack grinned. “What can I say? I'm an entertainer at heart.”

Cobblepot snorted, his eyes wandering over Jack's bare torso for a moment with a curl to his lips before he smiled again. “Well, now you get to fight someone extra special Wayne.”

“You?” Jack asked bringing Harley's hand up to kiss her knuckles, but Cobblepot gave him a condescending look. “No, you get to fight Croc, Killer Croc.”

Jack and Harley both stiffened at the same time. Jack hissed. “What?”

Next to them Alex hissed. “Oh Jesus Fucking Christ on a Ritz Cracker! No wonder I haven't been able to find him! You've had that freak the whole time!”

Cobblepot grinned leaning on his cane and drumming his fingers, his eyes moving from Jack and Harley to Alex. “I had heard that the two of you had a run in a while back, maybe some unfinished business? And that you Alex, were looking for the Croc for Mr. Wayne.”

Alex narrowed his eyes. “Watch it Oswald, you don't want to be on my fucking bad side.”

Jack sneered taking a step toward Oswald, but Harley pulled on his hand stopping him from moving further. Jack snarled. “Don't pretend you don't know what happened Penguin.”

Cobblepot narrowed his eyes at them, but his smile never faltered while he tapped his fingers on his other hand. “Well, I guess you have a chance now for some payback...or not...I'm betting on the walking, talking crocodile myself. We meet again in four days, that should be enough time...”

Everyone turned at the sound of Blockbuster rushing down the stairs, the sounds of sirens following him. “That bitch Randell called the police!!”

Cobblepot stood with a hiss. “EVERYONE GO!!”

Alex grabbed Jack by his upper arm. “Follow me.”

Jack and Harley didn't ask any questions; instead they followed Alex. Alex was following Oswald and his people while the crowd down here all raced for the only way they knew out of the basement, the way they had gotten down here, the stairs leading up.

Blockbuster saw Alex with Jack and Harley following Oswald and his group. Blockbuster started to say something, but Alex put his finger up with his one hand, his eyes narrowed at the larger man. “Hey, who got you those cases of Mansinthe? Me. So you want to stay on my good side, you're going to get us the fuck out of here.”

Blockbuster sighed looking defeated. “Fine, come on.” He motioned with his big hand for them to follow.

Blockbuster stayed close behind Oswald and his girls, trailing them to a far corner of the large basement. One of the women pulled open a door. The door was made from dark, heavy wood, painted to blend into the walls of the basement. It was hidden in the back of the room in such a way that if someone didn't already know it was there, it would be overlooked. The small group hurried through the door with Blockbuster taking up the rear to pull the door back into place. Someone up ahead had a light, a dim beacon in an otherwise black tunnel. Jack, Harley and Alex followed the others through the tunnel for a good ten minutes before another door was opened that led into an abandoned warehouse.

The group came up into the fresh air. Cobblepot frowned when he saw Jack, Harley and Alex coming up through the floor before Blockbuster, but he said nothing.

Alex was the one to mutter loudly. “Thank the fucking gods for prohibition. I love those fucking secret tunnels!”

Cobblepot and his group quickly left the warehouse, though Cobblepot stopped long enough to salute Jack. “See you in a four days,” before he vanished into the evening air.

Alex grumbled. “Man Jack...You need to fucking disappear for a while.”

Jack frowned taking his shirt that Harley handed him and shrugging back into it. “Why?”

“Because man, Tif is going to be telling the cops everything! And when they see how fucked up Troy is, they are going to be looking to question you! I mean, I don't think even fucking Troy is going to say anything, but it's going to be hot around here with the cops being nosy fucks.” He paused to shake his head. “For fuck's sake, Troy was a willing participant, but he ain't going to be able to talk for a while and I'll fucking bury him if he squeals, but until he wakes up... you should just get the fuck out of town, go take a fucking vacation or something. Maybe we'll get fucking lucky and Tif is going to sound like a fucking headcase, but just in case I would get the fuck out of Gotham for a day or two.”

Harley lifted her brows at Jack. “I think it's a good idea puddin. If the police are going to be crawling around looking for you or anyone Tiffany says was here, they are going to talk to Bruce and I don't think you and Bruce need another confrontation.”

Jack snarled. “Bruce...”

Jack's eyes flashed for a moment before he came back to himself. “Fine. Not a problem. We can leave tonight. We'll go home, pack our bags. I can use one of the private jets and head to....” Jack stopped for a moment, his mind raced, then after a couple of seconds a smile formed on his lips. “I know! We'll go to San Francisco...I think there's some summer concert series that is going to be starting there tomorrow...it'll be perfect and maybe fun.” Jack lifted his brows in question at Harley who grinned. “Sounds good puddin...a little getaway would be nice. Just the two of us.” Harley stroked her fingers down his chest.

Alex grinned. “Okay, then let's get to the fucking cars before the cops find them...then none of this will matter...”
Luckily for Jack, Harley, and Alex, the two Gotham cops that came out to investigate Tiffany's call weren’t the best that the police department had to offer, nor the most vigilant. Because the police were busy with Tiffany, it didn’t take too much effort for Alex, Jack and Harley to pick up their cars and leave the area without the Gotham PD seeing them. It probably helped in their escape that Tiffany Randell was hysterical, her husband was beaten unconscious, there were no witnesses and the two cops were fairly sure it was a mugging considering where they were called to, which made the two police far more interested in quizzing Tifanny Randell about why she and her husband were on this end of Gotham—drugs, prostitution, or something else just as nefarious.

When they arrived home, it was nearly four in the morning. Harley had cleaned the blood off of Jack's face and straightened his hair for him (just in case Bruce or Alfred were up when they arrived home) while he drove the car home. (Luckily for them both, Bruce was still out. He wouldn't be back for another few hours and Alfred was sleep.) Jack parked the car in the back of garage, swinging the car into one of the few empty spots in the far back before hopping out and taking Harley's hand as they walked swiftly into the manor.

Jack was grinning brightly, pleased with the idea of leaving Gotham, Bruce...all of it, putting the place behind them for a few days just to be with Harley. He was whistling when they entered the manor swinging Harley's hand with his while he walked briskly inside. Harley frowned as they took the steps two at a time.

“Are you going to fly the plane?” she asked as they turned and headed down the hall to Jack’s room.

Jack snorted. “Nah, we have a couple of pilots on the payroll. Just going to call one of them.”

“Won't Bruce be upset if you just take off with a jet?” Harley frowned. Jack opened the bedroom door, flipping the light switch on as he walked in and tugged Harley with him.

“Yes, but Brucie takes off without telling me all the time. Why can't I do the same?” Jack shrugged. He let go of her hand thinking about calling Alfred to find the luggage when he stopped in the middle of the room as an idea came to him, his eyes dancing.

“You know...don't pack a bag! Just grab your make-up and some other toiletries. We'll just go shopping while we're there! It'll be fun!” Jack chuckled as he turned to walked back out the door.

“Jack where are you going?” Harley asked, reaching out to touch his arm.

“Going to go wake up Alfred to call the pilot for us!” Jack grinned as he walked out the door.

An hour later, Alfred, with a large steaming travel mug of earl grey tea in the cup holder, was driving the Cadillac Escalade with Jack and Harley (who had both washed up and changed, Harley into a simple, sleeveless mini tank dress, a wide brim white hat, her blonde hair loose around her shoulders, with a pair of white and gold crossing-over flat sandals and a pair of oversized white framed sunglasses, while Jack was dressed in a white suit with a light blue shirt underneath, no tie and a pair of white and black oxfords shoes along with a pair of aviator Gucci sunglasses) sitting in the back seat, taking the two of them to the private air strip where the jet they would be taking to San Francisco was kept.

“How long will the two of you be gone again Master Jack? I'm a little sleep deprived,” Alfred said with a smile.

Alfred had to admit, he was happy to see Miss Harleen and Master Jack going on a little vacation, especially after the other night when Bruce and Jack were at each others throats. Maybe a break would be good. Alfred pinched his lips together. He could as least hope that a little separation would help. Perhaps he would take that time to discuss an engagement party for Master Jack and Miss Harleen with Master Bruce. He still believed that would be a nice gesture on Master Bruce's part to put together a party. But he had a few days to work on him. Both these young men were just as stubborn now as they were as children. Pig-headed and both with a tendency to solve problems with their fists first instead of their heads.

“Four days Alfred! Four days in San Francisco! We are going to a four day concert and shopping and having sex as loud and as often as we want!” Jack laughed wrapping his arm around Harley and pressing a loud kiss to her cheek.

Alfred's cheeks turned bright red, but he smiled. “Very good Master Jack. Well, I do hope you both enjoy yourselves. I will inform Master Bruce of your vacation when he returns.”

Jack smiled then pointed as Alfred pulled the car up alongside one of several hangars that lined a smaller runway than was used for the commercial jets. Harley couldn't quite see the jet, despite the lights inside the hangar. When Alfred pulled the car along the side the hangar, Harley caught of a glimpse of a small, slick looking jet.

“There she is, one of the Wayne Enterprises private jets, a Bombardier BD-700.” Jack grinned like a kid, full of excitement.

“One of? How many do you have?” Harley asked while she peered out the window then glanced back, her eyes switching between Jack and Alfred.

Jack chuckled. “We don't own as many planes as we have cars, I promise.”

Harley blinked with a grin and shook her head.

Once Alfred had parked the car, he opened the door of the Cadillac for Harley, took her hand as she stepped out and stared at the jet. It wasn't like she hadn't seen planes or private jets before, but she had never been this close, let alone flown in one before. Harley stared at the plane, unaware of a man quickly approaching them until he was almost on top of them. Jack grinned coming around the car to take Harley's hand.

A tall, dark haired man about the same height as Jack who sported a black mustache and goatee with piecing grey eyes came strolling quickly toward them until he was almost on top of them. Jack grinned coming around the car to take Harley's hand.

“Mr. Wayne! I'm your pilot, Janos Prohaska! It is a pleasure to finally meet the youngest Wayne!”

Jack grinned in return taking the other man's hand. “Pleasure to me you Mr. Prohaska, or can I call you Janos?”

“Janos! Please yes!! And this is your fiancee?” Janos turned his attention to Harley taking her hand and kissing the back of her knuckles.

Jack frowned slightly when Janos kissed her hand, but the contact was brief enough that Jack's smile returned swiftly. “Yes, this is my fiancee, Harley Quinn.”

“It is a pleasure Miss Quinn. You are quite lovely. You are a lucky man Mr. Wayne.” Janos smiled then clapped his hands together loudly, startling Harley. “Now!! It is time to fly!! Are you ready Mr. Wayne, Miss Quinn? Any luggage?”

“Nope, let's go!” Jack grinned taking Harley's hand. “See you in a couple of days Alfred!” Jack waved over his shoulder as did Harley. “Bye Alfred!”

Alfred waved. “Enjoy yourselves Master Jack, Miss Harleen.”

Jack led the way up the steps to the interior of the plane. When Harley stepped through the portal, she couldn't stop herself from gasping. The interior of the plane was gorgeous, like nothing she had ever seen before...nor was it like anything she was expecting! The interior of the jet was done in shining black and whites. The center of the cabin was dominated by a wrap-around couch in white leather that faced a large flat screen TV and a fireplace?! In front of the couch was a black table with a chess set and in front of that was another long shiny black table. There were several high back chairs (all in white leather) set around small black tables. There were vases of flesh flowers and a drink cabinet. Jack walked in, leading her over to the couch, then flopping down and tugging her with him.

“So what do you think?” Jack asked, wrapping his arm around Harley's shoulders and leaning back. Harley giggled taking her hat and sunglasses off to set them on the table.

“This is...wow...I've only seen things like this in the movies!”

Jack laughed. “Well, I have to give Bruce this, he does have taste.”

Janos stuck his head in from the front of the plane (Harley couldn't be sure but it looked as if the plane was divided into sections since there was a half wall between where Janos stuck his head out and this room). “All right, buckle up! We're about to take off!”

Jack hopped up taking Harley's hand and leading her over to the individual chairs, all of which were equipped with seat belts. Jack sat her down and reached around her to grab the buckle and strap her in, taking a tender kiss from her lips before he sat down in the leather seat next to her and strapped himself in. He grinned reaching over and taking her hand. “Ready sweets?”

Harley giggled. “Yep! Let's go puddin’!”

Outside Alfred watched as the plane rolled out of the hangar and onto the runway. He stayed until the plane took off and disappeared into the horizon before he sighed and headed back to the car. Hopefully Bruce wouldn't be too annoyed with Master Jack and Miss Harleen taking one of the jets.

After a few minutes Janos' voice came over the loud speaker. “Feel free to move around the cabin and enjoy your flight! We will be coming into San Francisco in approximately five, maybe five and half hours.”

Jack had just unstrapped his seat belt at the same time Harley did when an attendant came into the cabin from the front of the plane where the half wall and a heavy black curtain separated the cabin from the pilot and the stewardess' area. The attendant was dressed in a conservative navy uniform, complete with a little stewardess hat. Her brown hair was pulled back into a severe bun, but her features were pleasant as she smiled at the both of them. Jack flopped down onto the couch, tugging Harley with him again, who giggled when she landed almost on his lap. Jack grinned tugging her the rest of the way onto his lap, wrapping his arms around her as the stewardess stepped up to them. Harley giggled pushing Jack's sunglasses back up his nose where they had slipped just a little.

“My name is Cindy. Would you both like a night cap, morning coffee, fruit juice? I can mix pretty much any drink you would like? Also we have smoked salmon wrapped around small balls of crème fraîche, whipped crème cheese and chives dipped in caviar, fresh fruit...we are fully stocked with anything you would like…”

Jack grinned. “Sounds great...I mean the salmon things! I'll have a scotch and soda. What would you like Harley my love?”

Harley smiled. “Ah, could I have a New York sour?”

Cindy smiled. “Of course. I will have your drinks and the salmon out in just a moment.”

“Hey Cindy, can you turn on some music, something smooth?” Jack asked with a grin.

“Of course, Mr. Wayne.” Cindy replied before she disappeared behind the curtain. Cindy had only been gone a couple of second when music started to fill the cabin, Lana Del Rey's sultry voice singing “Freak” filled the cabin as a low beat in the background.

Jack snuggled Harley close, nibbling her ear causing Harley to giggle as she asked, “So where are we going to stay while we're in San Francisco?”

Jack's tongue and teeth tickled her neck as his hand slid up her side and gathered up her dress in his fist, pulling it slowly up. Jack stopped long enough to purr in her ear.

“Oh, I called before we left the manor, we are going to stay at the Marriott Marquis! Booked us one of their penthouse rooms. It's amazing what the Wayne name can accomplish at the last minute.”

Jack laughed licking her ear. “Now, I'm more interested in nibbling on you.”

Harley giggled and squealed while Jack ran his hand down her bare legs reaching down to remove her sandals, dragging the tips of his fingers back up her legs, starting with the back of her feet.

“I really like this dress,” Jack purred against her ear, sliding his hand under the skirt of the dress, pressing his hand between her soft warm thighs before working his fingers up higher, his tongue licking at the spot just under her ear, sending shivers down her spine. His other hand was around her waist, holding her against him while his tongue traced the outside of her ear creating goosebumps along her skin. He had just wormed his hand further between her legs, the tips of his fingers brushing her panties when Cindy came in with a tray holding their drinks and food. She was well trained enough (and had had enough flights with Jack Wayne's older brother) that Cindy didn't react to seeing Jack's hand up Harley's dress. She simply set the tray down and removed the drinks, then the plate of salmon.

“There you are. Enjoy and please feel free to hit the button located there…” She pointed at small button that looked like part of the couch's arm rest. Harley frowned when she realized there was a well hidden button there, if you didn't know it was there you would never have seen it.

Cindy smiled, her eyes averted as she left the cabin.

Harley leaned over, reaching for their drinks, Jack holding her legs so that she wouldn't fall off his lap while she picked up their drinks with each of her hands. She smiled handing Jack his and took a sip of her own. Jack adjusted her on his lap, his arm around her waist while he took a drink.

“Oh wow, this is really good,” Harley exclaimed taking another sip of her slightly sour beverage.

Jack grinned. “Bruce only hires the best.”

Jack took another long sip from his drink before setting it aside and leaning over to pick up one of the salmon wrapped snacks, brushing it over Harley's lips. He watched her mouth as he traced her lips, his eyes intense just before he fed her the bite, sliding it slowly between her lips and onto her tongue.

“Mm...Harley. We have almost six hours to play with...” He said softly.

Harley picked up a bite and brushed it over his lips, watching the way his tongue moved when she slipped the bite between his lips. “Mm.. Jack...all that time alone.” She giggled.

Jack grabbed her, making her squeal when he bowled her over onto her back with a laugh. He was about to kiss her when his phone started ringing, the tone indicating that it was Alex calling him.

Jack sat up, Harley started to pull down her skirt and sit up as well, but Jack grinned and put a hand on her holding her down. She giggled, allowing him to push her back, then Jack pushed her skirt back up, rubbing his hand up and down her thighs as he hit the button on his phone.

“Hey Alex, whatcha need?”

“Hey Jack, just got a call from one of my fucking friends who works at Gotham General. Thought you might like to know that fucking Troy is going to live...the stupid motherfucker. Anyway, from what I heard on my grapevine, the cops didn't find a fucking thing, they seem to think Tiffany either hired someone to beat her fucking husband up or she somehow did it herself! They were even looking for some fucking drugs thinking Tif was high as fuck!” Alex was breathless trying to get those sentences out while controlling his laughing.

Jack settled back on the couch, his fingers gently stroking Harley's inner thigh while he talked. “You're joking?” Jack chuckled.

“Nope, last I heard they have Tif in a fucking cell at the PD. I heard that fucking Troy woke up on the way to the hospital and he seems okay. You just gave him a fucking concussion, but he ain't talking. I'm surprised actually. I guess even Troy can once in a while show some fucking sense. Thought you might also want to know what you fucking did to him! According to one of the nurses...Her name is fucking Gina, she could be my mom, but man that woman can gamble...You haven't played cards with her yet, she's a fucking shark!! Hey when you guys get back I got a fucking poker game I'm putting together, high stakes...you guys want in?”

Jack chuckled, his hand having made its way up Harley's leg to grab the side of the lacy piece of cloth that was her panties and he was working it down with one hand.

“Poker? High stakes? How much are you talking about?” Jack licked his lips watching Harley lift her hips up off the couch helping him to pull her panties down as she slowly shoved the sides of the panties down her hips.

Alex laughed. “One hundred thousand pay in. Is that high enough for you?”

Jack chuckled in response. “Count me and Harley in. So, Troy's injuries?”
Harley had rolled off the couch coming to her feet and dropped her panties in Jack's lap just before she kneeled down between his legs, placing her hands on his knees, spreading his legs apart with a cute, coy, smile and started to undo his slacks, her nimble fingers moving slowly, her light blue eyes on his face while she worked. Jack watched her intently over the top of his sunglasses while listening to Alex on the phone. She undid the button, slowly pulled down the zipper, then slipped her hand into the boxers through the front opening. Jack swallowed, pressing his lips together while he watched her. Her hand was warm when she touched him, pulling him out slowly. He was already semi-hard, but when she touched him he wanted to groan loudly. Instead, Jack's breath hitched.

Harley gave him that beautiful smile of hers as she leaned down and began to run her tongue over him, her eyes never leaving his face. Jack watched her, a small smile on his lips while her tongue played over him just before she began to press her lips against him, her tongue circling over the head of his erection in slow, tantalizing circles. Jack caught his bottom lip in his teeth, his features contorting with pleasure watching her while he tried to keep himself from making too much noise over the phone while Alex spoke. “Oh yeah, man you did a fucking number on that fuck head! Gina says he has a broken orbital, a broken nose, you broke at least three teeth and knocked out another two and dislocated his jaw! That's all in fucking addition to that concussion you gave him! And he needed over seventy stitches. You fucked him up Jack!” Alex chuckled.

Jack ground his teeth, dropping his head against the back of the couch, his sunglasses sliding back up his nose when Harley lavished her tongue up and down, licking long and slow, but then altered with flicks of her tongue under the head of his erection while the fingers of one hand dug into his knee before stroking up his thigh, her hand burning through the cloth of his slacks. She dragged her teeth just barely over the silken flesh of his shaft, causing Jack to cross his eyes which made Harley giggle around him in her mouth.

Alex paused. “Hey man, you fucking all right? You sounded fucking weird there for a minute.”

Jack hissed just a little as he replied. “Yeah, yes I'm fine.”

Alex continued.”Okay man, if you fucking say so. Anyway, I mean...Troy better hope he has the money to cover the plastic surgery he is going to need on that fucked up face of his, but I heard that fucking douche is in debt to some bad people. Don't know if he is ever going to be able to get that fucking face of his fixed!” Alex started laughing. “Okay, well just wanted to let you know what the fuck was up. You two have fun! See you in a couple of fucking days and don't you fucking do anything I wouldn't do!”

Jack barely suppressed a grunt when Harley took all of him into her mouth, dragging her lips up his length then down again. She sucked hard, her tongue zigzagging against him until his back was arching off the couch.

He was choking with the effort not to groan loudly over the phone, his voice breathless reaching up to take his sunglasses off and dropping them beside him. “Yeah, yeah bye Alex.”

He pushed the button and dropped the phone like his hand had gone dead, reaching forward to dig his fingers into Harley's hair. She grinned around him sucking long and hard before bobbing her head as Jack let out a loud and long groan. She grabbed him with both hands while she rolled her tongue over the head of his erection, using her grip to jerk her hands up and down while she licked and sucked on the head his erection until Jack was nearly whimpering with the effort of not releasing right then.

Jack growled. “Get up here Harley.”

Harley giggled letting go of him, stood up while she licked her lips, looking coy and cute at the same... time. She pulled her dress up and straddled his lap, adjusting him so that she could slide down as she settled on his lap.

“Mmm...My puddin...” Harley hissed in pleasure.

Jack reached under the short skirt to grab her rear, squeezing as he grinned up at her beautiful face. Harley giggled. “What did Alex want?” she asked as she started to grind, spreading her bent legs further apart, her hands grabbing the back of the couch on either side of Jack’s head.

Jack groaned, the warm wetness of her surrounding him after all the sucking almost set him off, but he managed to keep himself in control, reaching down between them to play with her.

“Alex...grrrr...God Harley...fuck me Harley...yes. Alex just wanted to tell me what was up with... uuhh...Troy and Tiffany...damn it Harley...” Jack struggled to speak around his panting, Harley's thrusts and grinding sent shudders up from his groin to spread through his body like lava.

Harley was starting to pant while Jack's thumb rolled slowly over her clitoris, pressing down and circling causing her groin to tighten with building need. Jack hissed as he continued to talk.

“Uhhaaah...Jack...yes...grr...harder...” Harley groaned.

“Troy is awake...ahh...not talking...Tiffany...shit...Tiffany is in jail...God uuhh...” Jack panted his eyelids lowered to slits watching her.

Harley groaned, arching her back as her orgasm made cry aloud. “Ooooo puddin!! UUHH!!”

She held onto the back of the couch, but leaned dangerously far back, while Jack removed his thumb from her clitoris to grab her hips and yank her closer. She continued to fuck him hard, her pleasure rippling through her and building again. Jack's hands traced up her back gazing at her. Harley licked her lips smiling down at him while she used the leverage of the back of the couch to bounce her hips. She could feel Jack coming close to climax while her second one started to build. She let go of the couch and wrapped her arms around his neck, attacking his mouth, her tongue dancing with his at the same moment that Jack wrapped his arms around her waist, holding her tight while she bounced.

At the same moment, they climaxed together, their cries muffled against each others mouths.

They had moved to the back of the jet where Harley hadn't noticed the wall that divided the very back of the jet from where they had entered. Here there was a king size bed with crispy white cotton sheets and a black comforter, a bedside table and another flat screen TV. Jack was sitting up against the pillows with Harley's head against his chest, both of them naked, with their clothing still in the main area draped across the couch. Jack lazily stroked his fingers through her thick, soft hair and smiled happily. Cindy had brought them fresh drinks along with a large banana split she had made them. Seeing the two of them naked in bed, their clothing tossed around the living room area of the cabin hadn't caused her to blink an eye at all.

Jack was watching 'Public Enemy' with James Cagney. Harley was only half watching the movie, her mind was going over what had happened between Bruce and Jack. Harleen had been whispering to her to talk to him. She didn't want to listen to Harleen on general principle, but she was correct...Jack needed to sort out his feelings about his brother.

“Jack, can I ask you a question?” Harley inquired softly.

Jack frowned as he grabbed the remote and paused the movie. “Sure thing Harley-girl—what's up?”
Harley sat up, holding the sheet up against her chest. Jack chuckled. “Uh-oh, that's a serious expression. What did I do?”

Harley smiled. “I just...I'm worried about you. That fight you and Bruce had...”

Jack’s face turned dark, like a cloud had passed over hiding the sunlight. Harley pressed her lips together feeling a small spike of fear that she might have crossed a line by asking, but in the next instant the cloud was gone. Jack smiled, reached for her and pulled her back against him. She breathed a sigh of relief and settled back with her head against his chest, listening to the steady rhythm of his heart.

“I need a cigarette,” Jack muttered. He startled her by hopping up out of the bed and wandering naked back to the living room area. She frowned, sitting back up. She could hear him rummaging around. Soon he returned with a pack of cigarettes, one unlit one in his mouth and his lighter in his hand. He crawled back into the bed with her, pulling her back into place before he lit the cigarette and took a long drag on it. He sighed then chuckled. “Bruce would hate to know I'm smoking in one of his precious jets. I mean technically they belong to the Wayne family or Wayne Enterprises, but since this is one of the first times I've ever used one I know he sees them as mostly belonging to him.” Jack chuckled again.

Harley was quiet for a heartbeat before she asked again. “What happened between you and Bruce?”

Jack snorted. “You mean besides our parents being murdered in front of us?”

Harley was quiet as she wrapped her arm around his waist. Jack sighed taking another pull on the cigarette. “When our parents died, Bruce changed. He wasn't my brother anymore.”

“What was he?” Harley/Harleen asked.

“I don't know...but he wasn't the brother I needed. I was scared. My parents were suddenly gone, but I didn't have a big brother to protect me either. Bruce became distant...like he had shut himself off not just from the murder of our parents, but from me. I was weak and scared and wanted my big brother to make everything all right, but Bruce wasn't there for me.” Jack sighed taking a long pull on the cigarette, holding it before he slowly let the smoke drift out from between his lips.

“Bruce...he became stern and unyielding. He was all about the rules, the laws...fuck, that was all he seemed to care about! I guess that's why he started to dislike me so much. I didn't conform. I liked to lash out against conformity, the bonds, while Bruce liked to work within the rules. I don't know. Bruce just—he became focused so much that he had no room to deal with his emotionally unstable little brother,” Jack muttered.

“I was scared. My parents were gone...I had nightmares for as long as I could remember after that...” Jack laughed. “I haven't had any since you came into my life...odd...” Jack mused as if he only just realized this strange occurrence.

He took a pull on the cigarette and blew the smoke out through his nostrils. “The nightmares had started to fade some when I began my experiments. Watching people die,” he shrugged. “It quieted them...when I realized there was no meaning to anything in life, everything is chaos, everything that happens to us...there is no control! You just have to enjoy what you have. Then you came along...and it was like a light had been turned on...a partner in the silly game of life where the punchline is we all die in the end...someone who understood there was no point to it...there is no justice...” Jack's voice trailed off again. Harley glanced up to see that Jack was staring off into nothing. She frowned, but then just as quickly he came back to himself.
“We just need to enjoy the moment...” Jack chuckled. He seemed surprised by this notion before he pressed a kiss to the top of her head. “But Brucie? Oh, Brucie thinks there’s some sort of ultimate good out there...he believes in all that shit, law and order. Guess we just...I don't know...part of me still loves my brother, part of me hates him...hates how he sees me, hates how he is always looking to do good for others, but he was never there to help me. He...just...” Jack took a breath as he pondered. “He doesn't see me...except as his weak, mentally fragile little brother who hits first instead of thinking...I guess he gave up on me a long time ago.” Jack frowned looking confused for a moment before he stuck the cigarette back between his lips, his eyes looking haunted as if there was something there he wasn't willing to think about. Harley stroked her fingers along his stomach. She could feel the tension in him, but her touch seemed to relax him.

“You know what hurts the most Harley? Bruce is always donating money to this charity or that charity, trying to help everyone less fortunate than us. He sponsors clubs for kids and events...you name it, if it's good for Gotham, Bruce has donated time or money to it. But he never could see there was someone right in front of him who needed his help too.” Jack angrily ran the back of a hand across his face banishing the tears that threatened to fall. He leaned over and smashed the cigarette angrily right into the top of the bedside table, burning a hole into the finish. Jack hated that it still hurt after all this time...part of him knew what he did, the violence, the murder, was a cry for help, but the other part of him was angry with himself that after all this time, he was still looking for Bruce to save him, when he knew his big brother couldn't save him...or maybe it was that Bruce simply wouldn't. Jack couldn't save himself, maybe Bruce was focused on saving himself...maybe that was for the best. Jack smiled—he was beyond saving.

Jack took a deep breath, swallowing his pain and the tears. Instead of letting the tears take him, he squeezed Harley against his side taking comfort in knowing he now had someone who was on his side, no matter what happened. Harley saw his darkness and unlike his brother, she didn't turn away from him, didn't see him as unworthy of love. Harley loved him despite the darkness in him, despite the wretched creature he was... she had simply thrown herself around him. Jack closed his eyes on the tears. Harley loved him and he loved her. But it was more than simply love. There wasn't a word he could think of that could embrace the way he felt about her. Harley was everything to him.

Harley felt the struggle within Jack as he wrestled with his emotions for a few moments. She held on tight to him, planting tender kisses on his chest until his breathing calmed.

Jack continued. “Anyway. We just started to grow apart...” Jack laughed. “Cliché. Siblings living under the same roof who know nothing about each other. But the more I acted out, the more Bruce wanted nothing to do with me. I don't know...I was too chaotic for him I suppose. He could never understand how I was reacting...I guess he expected me to act like him since we're brothers.” Jack shrugged then frowned. “Hey! Enough of Bruce! This is our little vacation away from Gotham. Let's enjoy it.”

Harley squeezed her arm tight around his stomach. She was frowning slightly as she sat up, took Jack's face between her hands and stared into his eyes. “Jack. I love you. Never forget that I'm in love with you, all of you.”

Jack stared back at her, a small tender smile on his face. “I'm in love with you too Harley. Deeply and forever. Nothing in this world or the next is going to keep me from you.”

Harley smiled stroking her thumbs along his cheeks then she kissed him. Jack smiled wider and wrapped his arms around her, dropping and scooting down on the pillows taking her with him as they both started to giggle.
By the time they landed in San Francisco, California, Harley and Jack were dressed again in their matching white outfits. They both looked dramatic walking off the plane, sunglasses on, hand in the hand. The first thing that Harley noticed on exiting the plane, was the difference in the temperature. Where Gotham was still fairly warm, San Francisco was a few degrees cooler. The next thing she noticed was that there was a car waiting for them, a black Mercedes S550 sedan to be exact, (the only reason she knew what kind of car it was, was because of her growing knowledge of the Wayne fleet of vehicles.)

Jack had his arm around her waist and grinned at Harley as they walked swiftly toward the parked vehicle and gestured with his free hand as he spoke.

“Wayne Enterprise has offices all over the world with their fingers in everything you can think of! So the Wayne name is everywhere. And that means I have access to cars wherever I am. Though this is the first time I really put it to the test.” Jack laughed. “Bruce is the one who travels—me, I tend to like Gotham, never really cared to travel until now...with you, but this is going to be fun!”

Jack turned Harley around in his arms, grabbing her hand and danced with her to the car, the two of them laughing as they spun toward the back of the vehicle.

Their first stop was the hotel to check in. The car pulled up in front of the hotel while Harley was nearly plastered to the window. It was a gorgeous hotel. The building was a postmodern highrise that reminded Harley of a fancy jukebox. The driver had remained silent most of the ride and didn't laugh at Jack's joke: There is a theory that sooner or later anything in America that is any fun at all will be ruined by people from California! Harley had found it hilarious, the driver had only grunted.

Holding hands, their fingers threaded together, Jack and Harley stepped into the hotel lobby, a wide, softly lit area that was all warm colors; beige, deep orange reds, with beige and brown marble floors. The check-in counter was a long, soft brown marble that Jack strolled up to and stopped, leaning his chin on his free hand waiting until the young woman behind the counter noticed him. He grinned brightly, a lock of his hair falling forward, curling around his forehead seductively, making Harley's fingers itch to reach up and brush it back into place.

The young woman at the counter's eyes widened when she looked up from her computer and saw Jack watching her. The young woman's first thought was that she had never seen eyes so beautiful, but then the rest of him was devastatingly handsome. Harley could almost see the thoughts in the other woman's head as they came to her, which only made Harley hate the other woman with a passion, though Harley couldn't blame her. Jack was a damn good looking man; but if she didn't shut her mouth and check them in soon, Harley was going to reach across the counter and tear her throat out. Harleen's voice whispered to her. You would kill her for staring at your Jack? Isn't that a little extreme Harley?

Harley glanced at Jack while she mentally responded. “Shut up Harleen, if I want your opinion I'll ask for it!

I think you should think about why your reaction is so violent Harley. What does that say about you? And if it wasn't for Jack, would you react this way? Harleen asked softly.

Harley snarled in her mind. “No one is like Jack, no one...he is. You just don't understand...besides, I like the violence, so shut it Harleen!

Jack smiled wider when the young woman continued to stare at him. His smile never faltered as he leaned on his elbow, leaning over, his eyes reading her name tag, a gold tag that was displayed prominently over her left breast, pinned to her white shirt.

Jack lifted his brows at her. “So, Lisa, can you check us in or are you trying to catch flies?”

Lisa, who’s mouth had fallen open, her eyes wide as she continued to stare at Jack, snapped her mouth shut and blushed. “Ah, yes, how can I help you? I mean, name please?”

Jack grinned. “Jack Wayne.”

Lisa brushed a lock of thick brown hair from her face, blushing prettily and glanced at Jack, tittering a little as her fingers worked over the computer keys. (Clearly Lisa was only aware of Jack. She gave no indication that she noticed Harley was standing there.)

Lisa giggled again, her eyes giving Jack a flirty ‘come hither’ look as gazed up at him through her lashes, her fingers flying quickly over the keys. “Oh yes Jack Wayne, you called us this morning. You have a room on the our 38th floor, one of our suites with a fantastic city view Mr. Wayne.”

Lisa smiled gazing up at him like a love sick puppy.

Harley’s lip curled. In her mind Harleen whispered. “I would call this a case of possessive disorder…”

Mentally Harley snarled. “Shut the fuck up Harleen!”

She may have to teach Lisa a lesson…a fatal lesson if she didn't lighten up soon with the swooning at her fiance! Harley grinned. She could hear Harleen protesting, but her voice was becoming more and more distant while Harley ignored her.

* *

Lisa stood and gazed over the counter, looking right through Harley while she examined the floor. “No luggage Mr. Wayne?” she asked looking up and smiling prettily at him.

Jack laughed. “Nope, but we're planning on shopping while we're here.”

Lisa giggled. “Oh how fun Mr. Wayne. There are so many fabulous places to shop here in San Francisco. If you need any help feel free to ask.”

Harley narrowed her eyes.

Lisa turned away, her back to them while she opened a locked cabinet behind the counter where she pulled out a key card (But Harley noticed the little bitch was still completely blind to Harley standing RIGHT BESIDE JACK. Lisa even had the audacity to wiggle her hips in her tight skirt, a little too much. Harley narrowed her eyes to angry slits.)

Lisa turned back around and handed Jack the card.

“This is your key card, don’t lose it.” She giggled smiling at him. “And I just need you to sign our register.”

Lisa directed Jack's attention to a large open book on the counter. Jack laughed. “Oh that's so quaint! I love it!” He took the key card, then wrapped his arm around Harley's waist, pulling her close so that they could both look at the book at the same time.

“Shall I go first?” Jack asked smiling at Harley.

Harley was still annoyed with Lisa though Jack seemed completely obvious (just like with Meg).

“Yes, you go first.” Harley growled just a little.

Jack frowned gazing at her for a moment before he shrugged and signed the book then handed the pen to Harley. Harley sighed and signed her name 'Harley Quinn' next to Jack's. Jack chuckled.

“Soon to be Harley Wayne.” He pressed a kiss to her cheek.

Lisa amazingly still seemed to find Harley invisible, turned the book around again and grinned.

“Now if you need anything at all Mr. Wayne, don't hesitate to call. And please feel free to ask for me by name, Lisa. I will do everything in my power to make your stay with us a pleasant one. Anything at all.” Lisa emphasized that last three words.

Harley's hands formed into fists and she started to say something, but Jack had put his arm around her waist and cheerfully led her toward the elevators. Harley shot a look over her shoulder at Lisa only to find Lisa watching Jack's ass. Harley growled.

Jack glanced sideways at her. “You okay angel?”

Harley frowned. “Yeah, I'm...I'm fine.”

They entered the elevator. This elevator was the kind that had the transparent back to allow the rider to have a view of the city while the elevator took them up to their rooms. The doors closed cutting them off from the world, and Lisa, for a few moments. Jack reached around Harley, hitting the button for their floor, but in the next moment, Jack grabbed her by the waist, twisting Harley around to press her up against the back of the elevator where anyone looking up could see them. Jack crushed his mouth against hers within seconds, his hands moving greedily down her body. Harley's ire was forgotten.

Her attention was drawn instead to the sweet sensation of Jack's tongue in her mouth and his hands yanking the skirt of her dress up just to run his hands under her panties and squeeze her rear.

“Don't you worry about anyone else Harley.” Jack purred against her mouth. “But you can take care of her before we leave if you want to, my jealous little minx.” Jack laughed which earned him a giggle from Harley.

“Really?”

Jack purred. “Anything you want baby. You are my only girl, ever.” Jack's fingers squeezed.

Before Harley could respond, Jack yanked her panties down, dropping them to the elevator floor. Harley smiled and dropped her hands between them, working the button of his slacks, their mouths hungrily kissing each other to the sound of his zipper being pushed down. Jack lifted her up, his teeth gliding over her lips, biting her jaw then back to her mouth while he lifted her up, hooking his arms under her legs. Jack dragged his tongue along her cheek, caressed her jaw and down her neck causing Harley to groan. Harley's groan turned into a gasp when Jack thrust into her, holding her up against the glass wall of the elevator, riding her and the elevator up to their room.

When the elevator chimed at their floor, their were both all smiles, holding hands, (Harley with her panties dangling from her other hand) as Jack led the way to their room. “Ah, here we are!” Jack slid the card into the lock; the little light turned green releasing the door. Jack grabbed Harley, yanking her up into his arms and kicked the door open carrying her inside while she laughed.

The room was spacious with a queen size bed in the middle and one whole wall was a window looking out onto the San Francisco skyline. The sky was beginning to turn a bright, clear blue with a few clouds rolling in. Someone had opened the curtains showing off the impressive view and laid the bed back with chocolates on each of the pillows. There was a large flat screen TV, on the wall opposite the bed. The walls themselves alternated between shiny wood paneling, along with sections that were painted a warm golden beige. The floor was laid with a thick plush carpet in complimentary colors. There was a lounge area with two plush chairs in deep rich browns with a round table set nearby, decorated with a vase of fresh flowers.

The bathroom was its own separate room where the color scheme continued with a large whirlpool tub, more than big enough for the two of them, a separate shower with multiple shower heads so that water could spray from nearly any angle, one wall which was all mirror and double marble sinks. The hotel had provided several candles throughout the bathroom.

Jack grinned like a child. “So, do you like it?”

“Oh Jack, this is fabulous!” Harley laughed.

Jack grinned. “Well, Wayne Enterprises has a personal shopper on staff, I'm going to give them a call and have a couple of new outfits brought up while we shower. Then how about we grab something to eat upstairs at the lounge before we go shopping!”

Harley immediately started to strip when Jack laid on his stomach across the bed with his phone, dialing up the local Wayne offices. While he was on hold, he leaned across the bed, hanging over to watch Harley moving around the bathroom naked, filling the tub with water, squealing when she found bubble bath in the cabinet, then watching her step into the tub. He lost sight of her, but he heard her call.

“Hurry up Jack!”

Jack chuckled standing up, beginning to strip while on the phone. “Yes, this is Jack Wayne...I need someone to bring me two sets of clothes...”

The sky was just beginning to turn a delightful shade of sky blue pink as evening approached when Jack and Harley returned. Most of their packages had already been delivered to the hotel ahead of their return. There were packages everywhere, stacked neatly along the wall, on the table and some on the bed. There was also a brand new set of luggage set on the floor near the window.

Harley flopped onto the bed, kicking off the booties she was wearing with the black and white linen swing dress, her blonde hair piled into a loose bun at the base of her neck with two hair sticks. She pulled the sticks out to let her hair fall loose down her back. Jack kicked the door closed, carrying the last of their packages with him, grinning as he danced into the room.

“The concert doesn't start for another couple of hours, plenty of time for room service.” Jack set the packages on the floor and stepped over to flop down next to her. Harley grinned wrapping her arms around him and yanking him down with her on the bed causing a few of the boxes and bags that had been balanced on the mattress to fall to the floor.
Harley giggled wrapping herself around him. “So who is at this concert again?”

Jack rolled onto his back taking Harley with him laughing. “Let's see, not sure who is on tonight, it does run over the next few days, but we have, Metallica, the Who, Gorillaz, A Tribe Called Quest, Lana del Ray, St. Vincent...there's a bunch more, but I can't remember...all I know is we are going to have some fun. Now. You figure out what you're going to wear and I am going to order us room service and then we can paint each others nails. Then we can figure out the best make-up.”

Harley giggled licking the tip of his nose whispering. “I love putting make-up on you...especially lipstick.”

Jack smiled. “Mm...You like kissing it off of me.”

Harley giggled. “Guilty as charged puddin.”

Back in Gotham, Bruce had returned home from his night of trying to keep the streets of Gotham safe, his mood dark. He still felt the fight with Jack brewing down deep in his chest like a chaotic twisting mass. Jack just always managed to bring out the worst in him, Bruce thought. But he also knew that Jack had been correct...if it had been Harley trying to steal from him, he wouldn't have hesitated to call the police. Bruce grabbed the cowl, yanked it off of his head and threw it across the room where it slapped against the computers he kept down here in his 'Batcave'. Why couldn't he and Jack find each other again. They had been so close before their parents murder...but after...it was as if their parents' death had created a wedge between them instead of bringing them together, as if more than their parents had died that night.

Bruce wondered if he had brought Jack in...told him about his vow, his plans, what he did...maybe...But it was too late now Bruce thought to himself. Too late to change. When he had gone out that night, Bruce had told himself he was not looking for Selina, but he had been searching for her, hoping that he might catch a glimpse. He had gone to her apartment...rather he had crouched on top of the building across from her apartment. But the place had remained dark. He had waited an hour before he had slipped into the apartment building only to find the apartment was intact, though all of Selina's clothes were missing...that was when he realized that this hadn't really been her place. As he had studied it, he realized there was nothing of Selina here. He had been so blind...

Bruce walked over to the computer chair and flopped down. Tonight he had probably used more force than necessary to put down a few muggers, a couple of thieves and one potential rapist. One of them he left with a broken leg, the other had several cracked ribs, one man he was sure had two broken orbitals along with his nose, and the last one, he had dislocated his jaw, broke his arm and if he ever walked straight again Bruce would be surprised. Nothing that they couldn't live through, but it had been more force than was necessary. Bruce had come close to crossing the line with the rapist. Bruce took a deep breath—he could utilize violence against criminals, but he could not become an executioner.

“Sir, I brought you some dinner.”

Bruce looked up startled to see Alfred standing there with a tray. Bruce leapt to his feet, his fist raised before he had realized what he was doing. “I didn't hear you,” Bruce muttered “Well I'm glad I was over here when I spoke.” Alfred eyed Bruce's raised fist. Bruce looked embarrassed and lowered his arm. “Sorry,” he said softly.

Alfred stepped the rest of the way into the cave carrying the tray which he set in front of Bruce. “I brought you a glass of milk and a peanut butter and jelly with grape jam sir, just as you liked it as a child.” Alfred took a step back.

Bruce chuckled when he looked down at the sandwich, cut at a diagonal just as he liked it as a kid, some ruffled potato chips and a large glass of white milk. The meal of vigilantes everywhere...“Thanks Alfred.”

“You are welcome Master Bruce. I also wanted to tell you that Master Jack will be gone for a few days along with Dr. Quinzel.” Alfred had put his hands behind his back when he spoke.

Bruce frowned, he had just picked up half of the sandwich when he turned a shocked expression on Alfred. “What do you mean he's gone? Where?”

“He took one of the jets to San Francisco,” Alfred said evenly.

Bruce stood up. “WHAT?”

Alfred leveled a steady stare at Bruce. “He and Dr. Quinzel are in San Francisco for the next few days Master Bruce.”

Bruce snarled. “That's it—I'm bringing him back...” Bruce started to walk past Alfred, but was shocked when Alfred put a hand on his shoulder.

“Master Bruce, Master Jack is a grown man. You cannot fly off and fetch him home like a unruly boy.”

“But.. Alfred, he's unstable...he...” Bruce frowned, but Alfred just 'looked' at him.

“Master Jack no longer has to ask permission to leave Master Bruce and I might add, you haven't been able to control his actions in a long time, nor have you had him declared 'unstable.' Perhaps trying to control your brother is why there is such tension between the two of you? And while I know Dr. Quinzel was hired to help your brother as his doctor, maybe she is doing more to help him with their close relationship?”

Bruce sighed and sat back down, his brow was furrowed.

Alfred tilted his head studying Bruce. “I'm assuming there was no sign of Miss Kyle while you were out tonight.”

“No.” Bruce picked up his milk taking a sip.

“I'm sorry to hear that Master Bruce.” Alfred said quietly. He frowned wanting to say something else but instead he turned to leave stopping long enough to turn and say. “Please gets some rest Master Bruce.”

Later, Harley sat wearing only her panties and bra, showing off the new tattoo she had received that afternoon on her side, the letter 'J ' done in Gothic lettering. The tattoo also consisted of curving lines that seemed to suddenly end. Jack was sitting across from her, wearing only his silk purple boxers; on his side was a letter 'H' in the same style of lettering as Harley's 'J' along with the same curving lines on his side that seemed to end in nothing. But they had designed the tattoo so that when they stood back to the back the lines connected, Jack had called it their line of fate...they were fated to be together. The tattoos still looked red and raw since they had just received them a few hours earlier. Harley reached over to grab a baby carrot from the salad that was sitting on the table next to the bed.
where she and Jack sat, the contents of her makeup bag scattered over the bed. She popped the carrot into her mouth, crunching it between her teeth before she leaned forward with the eyeliner, her hand steady as she traced out Jack's eyes. She smiled while she worked. Jack was looking up at the ceiling, his lips slightly open while Harley worked on his eyes. Harley was careful, but she enjoyed studying the deep blue of his eyes. There was such depth to them, and such shadows. She could see them lurking in his eyes like living creatures flowing through his soul. She licked her lips wanting to kiss his mouth, to feel his lips on her, moving across her body; his soft, fine lips.

Harley finished with his eyes and sat back. Jack closed his eyes rolling them under his lids for a moment before he opened them and focused on her with a grin.

“My turn!” Jack laughed taking the eyeliner from her.

Harley smiled sitting still and leaning forward a little while Jack began to work on her eyes.

“Have you ever been to a concert before?” Harley asked, her eyes closed while Jack traced her eyes.

“Mm...once in Gotham. I was seventeen and the band was Tool. I went because Bruce had told me no. He didn't like them, too violent he said.” Jack chuckled as he worked carefully. He reached up and lightly held his finger over her eyebrow, pulling the skin just a little while he worked. “I bought my way in at the last minute. Snuck out of the manor and stole a car. It was fun...violent. You should have seen me then. My hair was past my shoulders.” Jack laughed as he slowly eased the eyeliner under her eyes.

“I can't imagine you with long hair.” Harley giggled, opening her eyes just slightly to steal a glance at Jack before he started to work on her other eye.

Jack grinned. “Yep, long hair, holes in my jeans, black t-shirts, black leather jacket, motorcycle boots...the whole nine yards. Man did I piss Bruce off then, even more than now if you can imagine!” He chuckled lightly, his fingers delicate against her eyes.

“What were you like when you were seventeen?” Jack asked removing his hand and the pencil. Harley blinked her eyes a few times before focusing on him. “Me? I was boring really. I mean, I wore a lot of pink, but I listened to loud music which got me grounded or smacked, a lot.”

Jack snorted. “I bet you looked so cute!” He smiled, but his features darkened slightly. “I'm glad I killed your step-father because if I hadn't, I would be going to kill him again.” Jack growled then seemed to shake himself from his darker thoughts.

“Would you have gone out with me?” he asked picking up a tube of lipstick and catching her chin with the tips of his fingers. He slowly started to trace her lips in the deep red color of the lipstick.

Harley’s eyes were on him as he worked, watching the intent way his eyes followed the color across her lips. “Yes, yes I would have,” Harley said softly when he finished.

Jack’s eyes looked up to meet hers as he whispered, “I would have made you mine then too.”

They stared at each other, lost in each others eyes until Harley reached up and took the lipstick from him. “My turn,” she said softly.

Jack smiled holding his lips slightly parted, allowing Harley to slowly trace them with the red lipstick. “You have beautiful lips Jack,” Harley said softly.

Jack chuckled. “Thank you Miss Quinn...all the better to kiss you with.”
Harley giggled. “You have a nice tongue Jack.”

“All the better to lick you with...” Jack purred

She giggled again and blushed softly. “Better start on your nails or we won't be ready in time.”

Jack wrinkled his nose at her. “You're right. I'll just ravage you when we get back.”

“That better be a promise.” Harley grinned pulling out bottles of nail polish from her bag.

“Oh it is.” Jack crossed his heart with a giggle.

Soon they were in a SMW Z4 that Jack had rented, headed toward the concert. It was a large outdoor affair at the Golden Gate Park. They pulled up in front of the VIP entrance where a young man came running out in a uniform to take the vehicle and park it for them after Jack tossed him the keys. The VIP entrance (which Jack had been able to get tickets for despite the lateness of the date...as Jack had told Harley, the Wayne name and money tossed here and there could get a LOT done in a short period of time) included a VIP hospitality area and viewing area for the concerts, though Jack said they were going to mix with the regular crowd because that was where all the energy was going to be. With his dark brown hair slicked back, Jack wore a pair of black jeans, cut to accentuate his long legs, a pair of black and white Vans, with a black enfants riches déprimés t-shirt and a purple and black checked button down shirt over the top and his Gucci aviators on.

Harley had her long blonde hair down, loose and wavy around her shoulders. She had on a pair of black thigh high socks, with a pair of black and white sneakers. She also wore a pair of extreme cut-off denim shorts that highlighted the length of her legs and the shape of her rear. They were too short for her to wear panties with, so at the last minute (and to Jack's delight) she had removed her panties leaving them at the hotel. She had on a red, ribbed knit, crew neckline, wrap design crop top and a black leather jacket with fringe along the arms. She was wearing a new pair of large cat eye sunglasses. As they walked through the gate heading over to pick up their wrists bands for the VIP area, the two of them drew a great deal of attention. The press (which was there to snap photos of celebrities and the wealthy) made sure to take several shots of the two of them without knowing who they were until one of the reporters, a blonde woman yelled out. “Julie Greer for KN News! Who are you two?”

Jack laughed taking off his glasses. “Jack Wayne and this is my fiancee Harley Quinn.”

Greer's eyes lit up. “As in Bruce Wayne's reclusive brother?”

Jack snorted. “Yep, that's me, the recluse weirdo of the Wayne family!” He laughed grabbing Harley around the waist and guided her past the paparizzi and into the VIP area waving over his shoulder. “I'm going to go be reclusive in here!!”

Greer was beaming. “Oh...get me everything on Jack Wayne! I want to know it all.”

Her cameraman who had been snapping photos frowned. “Why?”

“There's a story there, I can smell it.”

Jack and Harley could hear the sounds of music playing though the main attraction at the centerstage hadn't started yet. A group called Fleet Foxes was playing a song titled 'Mykonos' to a smaller crowd of listeners.

As they stepped out of the VIP area Harley realized just how huge this park was, with several different places to buy food, drink, vendors selling jewelry, art and any number of other things. And the people! There were people milling about everywhere, wearing a wild variety of fashions.

With his arm around her waist, Jack led Harley walking toward a large tented area.

“Let's go get a little drunk.” Jack laughed leading her through the crowds over where there was a large covered area under which several tables were set up, each representing a different local winery.

By the time the main concert for the evening started, Harley was slightly tipsy—though not so badly that she thought she might fall asleep, just enough to make her horny as hell. Jack didn't seem to be affected at all by how much wine they had tried, but he was perfectly happy to have her hanging all over him. Harley had her arms resting around his shoulders, her fingers lightly interlocked, her hips pressed snuggly against his as she swayed back and forth to the song 'If You Need to Keep Time on Me' as the Fleet Foxes played their last song.

Jack smiled watching her, swaying along with her, his hands sliding up and down her sides gently before wrapping around to grab her rear, pressing her closer. Harley giggled softly, brushing her nose against his, then her lips. Jack licked her mouth tasting the lipstick and the wine on her tongue when her tongue brushed his tenderly.

“Mm...My baby...” He purred.

“Jack, will you be mine forever?” Harley asked softly before she brushed her lips against his for a tender kiss.

“Yes Harley. Nothing in this world can tear us apart. Nothing in this world is strong enough to come between us. Our love is stronger than anything.” Jack spoke with conviction, wrapping his arms tight around her waist. “Don't you worry pumpkin, I'll kill anything that tries to get between us.”

Harley giggled softly, but then Jack lifted her off her feet and swung her around making her laugh just before she covered his mouth with hers, cradling his head, kissing him as if her life depended on his breath.

Soon the main event for this night started. Metallica took the stage and Jack and Harley became swept up in the music along with everyone else. The crowd was full of energy as night fell and the lights came on, the air cooling, but the press and amount of bodies kept everyone warm.

Jack kept a hand on Harley, whether brushing against her side, touching her lower back or hooking a finger through the loop of her shorts, always touching her as if he were afraid of losing her in the crowd, or of someone taking her...(He had no intention of being caught unawares again.)

Harley was careful to stay close to Jack, never straying even when she was jumping up and down to the music; she stayed close enough that she would bump Jack. He would laugh and grab her hips, jumping with her as he held on to her.

Near the end of the show, the group performed their last song of the night, 'The Unforgiven.'

Jack leaned in, yelling so Harley could hear him. “I love this song!”
Harley turned into Jack as he wrapped an arm around her waist and pulled her close, singing the last half of the song under his breath. They swayed together, their foreheads pressed together.

“...What I've felt,
What I've known
Never shined through in what I've shown.
Never free.
Never me.
So I dub thee unforgiven.
You labelled me,
I'll label you.
So I dub thee unforgiven...”

Jack lifted her up. Harley's arms wrapped around his neck, her legs wrapped tight around his waist. She laid her head against his shoulder. Jack started carrying her toward the VIP section. The crowd was still engrossed in the song so it was easy to make their way over to the other side of the concert grounds. Jack spoke into her ear. “Let's go back to the room. I want to make love to you again.” He brushed his lips against her cheek.

Harley purred softly nuzzling against his neck. “Mm...Jack.”

They didn't make it out to their car before the crowd started to slowly flow from the park like water, everyone looking for their rides, or walking home. It was crazy busy with people everywhere. There were still paprazzi trying to grab pictures of celebrities leaving the VIP area so there was flashing lights, as well as fans milling about holding out for a glance, photo or autograph of their favorite celebrity.

Jack grumbled and dropped Harley delicately to her feet, though he was careful to keep a hand on her, and they started to make their way to the VIP parking attendants who were clearly becoming overwhelmed by everyone leaving at once, retrieving cars and trying to avoid getting slammed by bodyguards and other security people. Jack saw the kid who had parked their car.

“Harley, hop on.” Jack turned his back to her holding his hands back, clearly wanting her to jump on his back for a piggyback ride. She frowned in confusion, but did as he asked, wrapping her arms loosely around his neck as he grabbed her legs, hefting him up so she could wrap them more securely around his waist, then with a huge grin, Jack muscled his way toward the valets.

Jack yelled, waving a hand to get the kid's attention. “Hey, over here!”

The valet looked up. “Sir if you will get in line...”

Jack shook his head. “Just toss me the keys. I'll get the car myself.”
The kid looked relieved. It only took him a couple of seconds to find the keys before he threw them over the heads of the crowd. Jack, holding Harley with one hand did a little jump and caught the keys out of the air.

Jack yelled back. “Where's it parked?”

The kid shouted back. “Red 10!”

The kid waved at him and Jack laughed, waving back before he headed out of the VIP area.

Jack frowned when they wandered into the parking lot. The VIP lot was right up against the regular parking lot, so people were cutting through this one to get to the other. Jack noticed there were poles out here marked with colors and numbers, so following that to the car shouldn't be too difficult, but it was a little a challenge with all the people milling around and the lighting here wasn't as good as it could have been, leaving dark pools of shadows every so many feet. There were security personnel here and there throughout the lot, some on foot and others driving golf carts doing their best to control the chaos (which was why most people in the VIP area were content to wait for their vehicles to be brought to them) but there simply weren't enough of them.

Jack set Harley down on her feet and put his arms around Harley's waist, his fingers through the loops of her shorts so that he wouldn't lose her, when he finally spotted the car.

“There we are! Finally!” Jack growled making his way over to the vehicle. He stopped at Harley's side of the car, bending over to put the key in the door when he heard Harley yelp. Jack's reaction was so quick that neither the man that he grabbed, nor Harley, saw Jack move until Jack had shoved the guy up against the car door, his hand on the man's chest holding him in place. Jack's face was right up in front of the other man's, their noses nearly touching as Jack smiled.

“Boo,” Jack hissed.

The man was about five feet ten inches, skinny with a long brown beard and long brown hair pulled up in a man bun wearing jeans with holes in the knees and a plaid shirt that made Harley think “cult leader” chic. Jack grinned holding the guy against the car; no one paid any attention to them.

“So what do you think you're doing?” Jack smiled, though the pleasant way he spoke was not reflected in his eyes.

“Hey man I wasn't doing anything! I just bumped into her, that was all man.” The guy put his hands up his eyes darting back and forth between them.

“Hey man I wasn't doing anything! I just bumped into her, that was all man.” The guy put his hands up his eyes darting back and forth between them.

Jack smiled, glancing at Harley. “Is that what happened sweets?”

“I think he was trying to take my wallet.” Harley patted her back pocket where she had slipped her wallet before leaving so she would not be encumbered by a purse. Jack's eyes darted back to the man. “Pickpocketing eh?”

The man stared wide-eyed at Jack and started to bolt, but Jack shoved him back in place. “Oh now, I don't think you're going to go anywhere. I mean, you clearly think you need someone else's money. How about this, you come with us and maybe we'll show you a good time, eh? Have some fun, get some drinks? Whataya say?”

Jack smiled again. Harley could see it, the smile didn't reach Jack's eyes, but she saw something else, the shadows behind the vivid blue stirring.
She grinned, immediately in sync with her Jack. “Sure, come on, we can get a couple of drinks, it'll be fun!”

The guy turned to look at Harley then back at Jack. Harley thought the man must clearly be an imbecile because his next words sealed his fate. “Uh...sure man, I'm into some freaky shit.”

Jack laughed softly. “I bet you are. Well, come on friend, you can ride with us.” Jack released him reaching around the man to open the door. “What's your name friend?” Jack asked as the man slipped into the back.

“Oh, hey man, I'm Jason.” The man grinned at them both.

Jack smiled his false smile. “Nice to meet you Jason.” Jack glanced up at Harley grinning. “Ready to have some more fun baby?”

Harley giggled. “Of course puddin.”

Jack held the door open for her and as she slipped into the car, taking the seat in front of Jason, Jack smacked her rear making her giggle before he closed the door.

“Yeah, let's go have some fun. Teach our new friend Jason a little lesson,” Jack said softly to himself as he walked around the car opening the driver side door and slipped inside.
Jason drummed his fingers nervously on his knees, fidgeting in the backseat. He kept looking between the two people up front, wishing they had something to drink or a hit of something to take the edge off until they made it to a party or their place. He was pretty excited; rich people always had the best shit and were some of the kinkiest motherfuckyers he ever came across. He couldn't believe his good luck, that a pickpocketing going wrong would land him in the back seat of an expensive car about to get funky with two pretty hot people who had the money to buy the good stuff. Jason grinned. He had thought his night was going down hill, but now he looked to be riding the night up to an epic high and some probably fucking good fucking too! Jason grinned wide, the jitters momentarily forgotten.

Jack glanced in the rear view mirror. Jason didn't notice the coldness to Jack's eyes or the way his smile never seemed to quite reach his eyes, or when it did, there was something unhinged about the grin.

Jack hummed something pleasantly under his breath, his fingers playing a tune on the steering wheel as they waited in the long line to drive out of the park. After a few minutes of sitting Jack started to sing under his breath.

“Hey, Miss Murder, can I—
Hey, Miss Murder, can I
Make beauty stay if I take my life?...”

Harley turned around, wrapped her arm around the head rest, and smiled at Jason.

“So, what exactly do you need money for Jason?”

Jason frowned screwing his lips together before he spoke. “Well I—man I was just looking to get some cocaine, maybe some thizzles, and some acholol man, just wanted to party, used all my money up on some girl at the park then she turned around and dumped me.” Jason ran his hand through his hair in the twitchy way of someone in need of a fix; Harley recalled all the signs from medical school.

Jack looked in the rearview mirror. “Well ain't that a shame Jason. A real shame.” Jack grinned. “And it was a woman who led you down the path of crime?”

Jason snorted. “Nah man, I've picked pockets before, though I don't get caught a lot. I've sold some amp joints, and banano, made meth for a while until this dude named Walter, well until he blew the place up. Some small time robbery, broke into a couple of houses, stole some jewelry and other shit to sell, all pretty low level shit.”

Harley reached over to run her hand casually along Jack's leg grinning. Jack chuckled. “So you're not a really 'bad' guy then are you?”

Jason smiled. “Hell no.” Then the young man chuckled. “Man, you guys are really cool. I mean I expected to get slugged in the face, but it's nice to run into some fellow freaks.” Jason leered a bit. “I mean and it's nice to meet some freaks who are good looking. Usually they ain't all that great, but once the drugs hit, everything is great, know what I mean? You and your lady there are both hot so I'm totally down with anything tonight. You guys like to party right? I mean I got it right...right?"

Jack chuckled and winked at Harley, the two of them sharing a secret smile.

“You have no idea,” Jack purred as he drove.

Harley giggled softly. “So your plan was to get some cash and drown your sorrows?”

Jason shrugged. “Yeah, something like that. I mean there’s a party I was going to down at the Black Sands beach. I was going to go anyway no matter how things played out with that chick, but man she took all my money and I didn't even get in her shorts. Sucks.”

Jack smiled serenely. “Direct us to the party, Jason.”

Jack leaned forward and turned the knob on the car's stereo and the sounds of Godsmack's 'Whatever' began to fill the car's interior.

Jack laughed. “Perfect!” He turned the music up, hitting the gas hard as soon as they were clear of the park, speeding down the street. Jason grabbed hold of the sides in the backseat his eyes going wide while Harley laughed.

“Go puddin, go!”

It took them nearly half an hour, give or take, to drive to the beach that Jason indicated. They found a place to park that wasn't too obvious, hidden between two street lights. From where they parked Jack and Harley could hear some people shouting, music and the wavering light from a bonfire. Jack grinned, without a worry in the world, taking Harley's hand and dancing her into his arms. Jason watched them with a grin thinking once they were both drugged and drunk this was going to be fun. Before the three of them headed down the wooden steps that led to the beach, Jack moved around to the trunk of the car pulling out the tire iron. Jack grinned swinging it like a baton. If Jason thought this strange he made no indication, simply taking it in stride as he headed off in the direction of the beach, motioning to Jack and Harley to follow him.

“Come on you two. I hear Maisy is supposed to be here. She sells the best shit!” Jason grinned happily his jitters forgotten in anticipation of scoring something soon.

Jack laughed. “Hear that sweets, the best shit.”

Harley giggled. “Oh wonderful!”

Jack and Harley, clearly in sync with one another, laughed and followed Jason as he quickly maneuvered the wooden steps down to the beach.

The three of them made their way down the steps onto the beach where the sand was indeed black (though it was hard to tell in the bonfire light.) The sounds of the water lapping against the sand were muffled by the sounds of The Pussy Cats Dolls 'Buttons' playing, people laughing, yelling while some were dancing around the fire, drinking, some clearly tripping on drugs, while others were having sex in the sand. Harley stopped at the edge of the walkway, taking her shoes off, then rolled her socks down, slipping them off and stuffed them into her shoes. She laughed hopping onto the sand and wiggled her toes.

“OH it's still a little warm puddin!” she giggled before she began dancing her way down to the fire, the light playing over her body. Harley spun on the balls of her feet, flowing gracefully, letting the jacket fall off her arms into the sand before she curled her arms tracing her body sensually, throwing her arms over her head. She swayed her hips, immediately grabbing Jason's attention and several other men (and women) while she moved. Jack noticed the looks Harley was getting from some of the men and women around the fire, but he let it wash off of him; she was his. If they did more than look...if they said anything...well, then he would teach them a lesson about keeping their hands off of things that didn't belong to them.

Harley grinned, spun in the sand, and turned to face Jack, making a 'come hither' motion with her finger, her arms snaking back and forth. Harley arched her back, throwing a leg up, her arms parting the air. She dropped her foot to the sand smiling at Jack while the music washed over her. She ran her hands up her sides again letting the music lead her movements, her head back, long blonde hair catching the firelight, then she brought her head up, grinning at Jack and dropped into a splits (which earned her applause from the party.)

Jack grinned and bit his bottom lip as he watched her dance, the sway of her hips, the way she ran her hands down her body, licked her lips, and the play of the firelight on her hair. Then those splits, he felt his pants becoming tight watching her. He glanced once at Jason who looked like he was going to have a problem soon, with Jack's fists. The way the young man was watching Harley it was clear what he wanted. Jack narrowed his eyes slightly, but consoled himself that Jason would be paying his price soon, might as well let him enjoy what he thought he might be getting...

Harley arched her body, using her hands and spread legs to push herself back up. Slowly rolling her hands back up her body before tracing her bottom lip with her finger. She then swayed to the side, then back the other way, She dropped herself to the sand once more in a sensual roll before she lifted herself up on her arm, hand flat in the sand, rolling her legs over her head into a long legged somersault, coming up on her feet and rolling her body in a sensual curve while sand flew in the firelight. She laughed, gracefully falling back to the sand and rolling onto her chest showing more fully her gymnastics training as she did a perfect split with her legs in the air.

For a moment, Jack forgot about the game to teach Jason a lesson, and instead focused his attention on Harley and her body; the shorts clung to her hips, the wide inviting split, her bare feet in the sand, the sexy exposed section of her stomach...

His eyes wandered, his imagination picturing her dancing naked for him, those long wickedly flexible legs, the way she moved, smelled, tasted...Jack growled softly, a barely audible sound of desperate want.

Harley rolled up to her knees, arching her back, weaving her torso, licking her lips, sliding her hands over her body and up to her breasts. Gazing at Jack, she bit her lip as she grabbed her breasts and hopped back up to her feet.

Harley giggled while she pushed herself up on her hands and did another split with her legs in the air. Jack growled again, but he shot Jason a deadly gaze as the other man grinned and said, “Man, she is one bad bitch.”

Jack tilted his head at Jason narrowing his eyes, but Jason just kept talking, running off at the mouth.

“I have to tell you I'm really a backdoor kind of guy and man does she have a nice backdoor.” Jason made a hip thrusting gesture at Harley that had Jack seeing red. Jack's hands balled into fist, the knuckles of the hand around the tire iron turned white, but Jack did nothing, he simply walked... through the sand to Harley when the song was done. The music switched to 'First to Love' by Blaqk Audio and a few people started to dance, mostly swaying in place to the music. Harley smiled at Jack weaving in place herself, holding her arms out while she swayed her hips, her eyes on Jack's, waiting for him to come and wrap his arms around her.

Jack scooped her up once he was close enough, lifting her off her feet and into his embrace his mouth crushing hers. Harley wrapped herself around Jack, her hands cradling the sides of his face, her tongue exploring his mouth with intimate determination, hooking her ankles behind his back. Jack groaned, squeezing her rear. He pulled away from her lips just long enough to hiss.

"I'm gong to fuck you so hard Harley."

Harley giggled and nipped at his lips. "Promise?"

Jack chuckled. "Oh yeah, I promise sweets..."

Jason watched them for a moment, clearly wanting in on the groping, but instead he hurried off when it was clear that Harley was done dancing. It didn't take long for Jason to find someone willing to give him a few beers. Jason hurried back holding three bottles of beer in one hand and a joint in the other.

"Hey guys, got us some beers! And a mummy finger!!" Jason held the joint up while he continued talking. "And Maisy's here! She's got a little bit of everything. What you guys into?" Jason grinned handing them each a bottle of beer. His eyes kept wandering down Harley's body. Jack had put her back on her feet, his arm around her waist while Jason spoke, though Jason gave no indication that he noticed Jack's hard stare at all. Jack let go of Harley long enough to pull his wallet out and hand the young man a couple of hundred dollar bills.

"You get whatever you want Jason. Why don't you go do that then meet us over there?" Jack pointed with the tire iron. A ways down from the bonfire was the shadow of a pier.

The only light in that direction came from the moon and the bonfire's light reflecting off the water.

Jason grinned and licked his lips. "Okay man, have our own private party! I get ya. Here why don't you hold on to this and I'll go get us some real drugs." He handed the joint to Jack before he hurried off into the crowd again. Jack shrugged sticking the joint in his pocket before turning his attention back to Harley.

Harley giggled. "That's a good place to take him." She indicated the pier with her head.

Jack chuckled. "I thought so. I had an idea of what we can do to teach him a lesson about trying to take things that don't belong to him."

Harley grinned, her eyes slightly manic. "Ooo tell me puddin!"

Jack leaned close, his lips tickling her ear as he told her his plan.

Jason was already a giggling mess, his arms draped around Jack and Harley's shoulders as the three of them made their way across the black sand beach toward the pier, the pockets of his jeans stuffed with the drugs he had used Jack's money to buy. No one from the party tried to stop them or even looked in their direction while Jack and Harley practically dragged Jason. He had clearly taken a few hits of whatever drugs he had bought before he sought Jack and Harley out again.
They made their way under the pier where the smell of fish, seaweed and saltwater was nearly overpowering. There were large granite colored rocks under here, along with beer cans, dead fish and other trash. There were pieces of damp clothing, lost sandals and the remains of what might have been a campfire now long dead and cold. Jack and Harley both let go of Jason, settling the young man up against one of the tall, slimy wooden columns that formed part of the pier.

Jason sighed happily. “Oh man, I feel so good right now. Hey I've been meaning to ask you guys your names all night. I keep forgetting. All you ever call him is puddin? Why puddin?” Jason laughed.

Harley shared a look with Jack, running a finger along Jack's jaw before she walked closer to Jason. “Because he's my puddin. Now Jason, you ready to have some fun?”

Jason giggled. “Fuck yeah!”

Harley purred. “Well good. Why don't you take off all your clothes for me first.” Jason's smile became bigger. “Yeah okay.” Immediately he started stripping, kicking his shoes off and nearly ripping his shirt to get it off quickly. Harley watched him while Jack moved silently into the deeper shadows of the pier. Jason was completely oblivious to Jack's disappearance, stripping and watching while Harley teased him by opening the button of her shorts and letting them hang open running the flat of her hand against her stomach, teasingly sliding her fingers lower, under her shorts, pushing the zipper down as she did so. Within seconds Jason was naked, tossing his clothes haphazardly on the ground along with his shoes. He had a hard on, which he grabbed, and licked his lips grinning at Harley. “This better?”

Harley giggled (though mentally she was ready to vomit) as Jason took a step toward her. She reached out, placing a finger on his chest and walked him back toward the column. “Oh, that's just perfect Jason, just perfect. Now, I want you to wait right there.”

Jason's back hit the column, his eyes raking over her having for the moment forgotten about Jack. Grinning Jason asked. “You gonna take your clothes off?”

Harley giggled. “No, silly.”

Jason frowned at the strange sound of tearing cloth, but he was moving too sluggishly from the drugs in his system to understand what the sound was or to respond. That was when Jack came up from behind the pillar, his face appearing from the darkness like the grinning face of death and grabbed Jason's arms, yanking them back around the column. Jason didn't think to struggle, he was too confused and then began grinning thinking this was all part of the game. “Hey man, what's this…”

He didn't struggle, but instead the young man grinned stupidly. “Oh man are we going to get really kinky? I can dig it, I'm into some BDSM.”

Jack used Jason's clothing (having easily torn the cheap shirt the young man was wearing into strips) to secure him tightly to the slimy column, first by binding Jason's wrists, then wrapping another length of cloth around Jason's chest.

Jason was grinning. “Oh man this is going to be fun ain't it?”

Jack came waltzing back around with a smile. “Oh, it sure is Jason, I promise you that.”

Jack quickly stuffed Jason's underwear into the drug-addled man's' mouth, then used some of the remainder of Jason's shirt to wrap around his mouth securing the gag in place.

“There we go. Though I really wish I had some duct tape.” Jack sighed dramatically. “Well, guess we’ll just have to make due.”

Jack walked back behind Jason into the shadows under the pier, coming back a second later with the tire iron he had carried out from the car. He swung it a few times like a baton with a wide grin.

“Bet you are asking yourself now why I brought this?” Jack chuckled at Jason who still didn't seem to be reacting appropriately to his current situation.

Jack walked over to Harley, putting his arm around around her waist and giving her a tight squeeze, pressing the tire iron against her side. Harley giggled and wiggled up against Jack.

“Oh puddin, you did a fabulous job tying him up.”

Jack laughed cupping Harley's chin and rubbing his nose against hers. “You are just the sweetest my little cupcake.”

Jack turned his attention back to Jason. “I have a joke for you Jason since you informed us of your liking of a little BDSM. One day a mom was cleaning junior's room and in the closet she found a bondage S&M magazine. This was highly upsetting for her. She hid the magazine until his father got home and showed it to him. He looked at it and handed it back to her without a word. She finally asked him, "Well what should we do about this?" The dad looked at her and said, "Well I don't think you should spank him."

Jason tried to laugh around the wad of cloth in his mouth, though his eyes looks slightly confused. He was still smiling, his erection still hard, clearly thinking this was all part of the game they were going to play.

Jack cupped Harley's cheek, brushing the pad of his thumb along her lips before he turned his attention back to Jason. “Now Jason. I thought perhaps we would play a game with you.” Jack stepped away from Harley, swinging the tire iron as he spoke and circled Jason. “You know...you ever see that movie 'Four Rooms' by Quentin Tarantino where they talk about the lighter bet?”

Jack frowned. “I'm going to take that as a negative. Well, in the movie, Bruce Willis, Tarantino, a couple of other people...Anyway, the movie centers about Tim Roth's character, a bell boy in this hotel. These guys, drunk guys, want to perform this bet from an Alfred Hitchcock movie where one guy has to light his lighter ten times straight, no misfires. If he does, he wins the other guy's car, if not he loses his pinky finger. Now, I thought about doing that. It would be fun, but, I don't want you messing up our hotel room, I don't have the supplies I need for a really good game, AND I don't like you enough to play a game with you. SO...I've decided, along with my lovely minx here, that instead we are simply going to punish you.”

Jack leaned forward holding the tire iron behind him as he grinned at Jason. “Aren't you lucky? I mean, we can take care of our business and you can just go about whatever it is creeps like you do. Then again...maybe not.” Jack barked out a laugh. “So, tonight you have a few lessons to learn. This is your first: Your first mistake tonight was touching my girl. No one—and I mean no one—touches my girl.”

Jack moved so swiftly that even Harley didn't follow his strike until he had already hit Jason in the knee with a loud, dull thunk and crunching sound. Jason yelled, his cries muffled by the gag.

Harley giggled. Jack smiled and handed the tire iron to her. “Now, lesson number two! You stuck your sticky little hands where they shouldn't have been. “
Jack waltzed behind Jason who was struggling against his bonds, but he was slightly drunk and very high, even with the shock of the pain sobering him up a little, it wasn't enough for him to really fight his bonds. Jack stood behind Jason, looking down at Jason's hands which were tied together. Jack studied Jason's hands while Jason was whimpering.

Jack leaned over. “Sweetling, you wanna come over here. This is a perfect teaching moment I think.”

Harley smiled with a wink at Jason as she skipped over to Jack, holding the tire iron behind her back as she did so looking too adorable for what they were doing. “Yes puddin.”

“Okay, see his hands. Now since they are tied up, this is going to be a little more difficult, but...” Here Jack grabbed Jason's right hand forcing the thumb out. “Now, take his thumb and I want you to haul back with all your strength.”

Jason was struggling. Harley leaned the tire iron against the side of the column next to Jason then flexed her fingers before she stepped closer. She grabbed his thumb, like Jack showed her, and with a quick movement, no hesitation at all, Harley hauled back on Jason's thumb, snapping it easily. The sound was like a loud crack accompanied by a pop. Jason screamed around his gag, thrashing about. Harley grinned when Jack kissed her cheek.

“Well done sweets! Well done indeed!”

Jack grabbed Jason's pinkie and with a swift twist, broke the pinkie finger, the only sound a quick sounding snap and Jason's whimpering.

“There, I think the pinkie is probably easier than the thumb.” Jack mused letting Jason's hand go.

Harley frowned. “Is that all we're going to do puddin?”

Jack turned to smile at her. “What did you have in mind sweets?”

Harley picked up the tire iron. “Seems a shame to only leave him with a couple of broken fingers and a shattered kneecap, especially after he not only tried to steal from us, but he had the nerve to think either one of us would want to be with him.”

Jack blinked. “You're right sweets!!” Jack put his hand to his chest in mock horror.

Jack took the tire iron from her and turned, holding himself ready as if he were about to swing at a ball coming his way. Jason groaned and struggled. Jack mock swung twice, then on the third swing Jack let the tire iron hit, smashing into Jason's bound wrists with a loud thunk of the metal bar hitting Jason's wrists and part of the tool hitting the wood of the column.

Jack stood back grinning at the awkward, almost inhuman looking way Jason's hands were hanging, the swelling immediately beginning to malform the hands further and cut into the cloth Jack had used to bind Jason's wrists.

Jack grinned with a very slight giggle. “I think I might have broken all sixteen wrist bones, imagine that?”

Harley laughed and clapped her hands. “Good one puddin!”

Jack and Harley walked around the column, one on either side, the column barely holding up a now sagging Jason. Jack held the tire iron on his shoulder as Harley danced over to take Jack's hand only to see that Jason was rolling his eyes looking dazed, incoherent words falling from his gagged lips.
“Whathauh...”

Harley frowned touching her chin with her thumb and forefinger, looking every inch the professional doctor she once was while examining Jason with a clinical expression. “You know puddin, I think he's going into shock.”

Which was when Jason made a soft groan and passed out, sagging against his bonds and broken knee. Jack lifted the young man's chin with the end of the tire iron. “I hope that taught you a lesson young man, no touching things that aren't yours.” Jack rolled his eyes. “I believe my brother tried to drum that one into me often enough, along with don't pick fights and 'stop talking to yourself Jack, you sound crazy.' Though he never thought to break my wrists. Hmm...” Jack dropped Jason's chin and then wrapped his arm around Harley's waist. “Anyway, Jason old friend, we have to go, things to do and all. We only have a few more days in town. You have fun here. I truly do hope someone finds you before...you know, it's too late.” Jack smiled turning away with Harley who waved over her shoulder at the unconscious Jason. “Bye now sugar.”

“So, tomorrow, I thought we might go see Alcatraz...” Jack said as the two of them walked back onto the beach. The bonfire was still going as was the music, (which sounded like Coldplay) the soft sounds drifting over the beach. Less people were dancing and the one's that were seemed to mostly be swaying in place, leaning on each other for support. Most of the crowd were either passed out, asleep or having sex on the beach while Jack and Harley walked by, picking up Harley's jacket as well as her shoes and socks.

“I think that sounds like a great idea puddin!” Harley giggled dropping her jacket over her arm. Jack carried her shoes and socks.

Jack chuckled when they walked past a couple vigorously having sex near the steps leading off the beach. “They are going to have beach bugs in the morning and sand where they really don't want it.”

Harley giggled leaning against Jack while they took the wooden stairs. Jack smiled glancing sideways at her. “Wanna hear a joke?”

Harley grinned wrapped her arms around him as they walked. “Yes.”

“What did the ocean say to the beach?” Jack grinned.

“What?” Harley asked.

Jack gave her a boyish grin. “I know! I have a worse one.”

Harley narrowed her eyes at him, though with an amused expression on her face while Jack let go of her to unlock the car. “Vacationing in Hawaii, two priests decide to wear casual clothes so they won't be identified as clergy. They buy Hawaiian shirts and sandals, and soon head for the beach. They notice a gorgeous blond in a tiny bikini. "Good afternoon, Fathers," she says as she strolls by. The men are stunned. How does she know they are clergy? Later that day, they buy even wilder attire consisting of surfer shorts, tie dyed T-shirts, and dark glasses. The next day, they return to the beach. The same fabulous blond, now wearing a string bikini, passes by, nods politely at them and says, "Good morning Fathers."

"Just a minute young lady,", says one of the priests. "We are priests and proud of it, but how in the world did you know? The blonde replies, "Don't you recognize me? I'm sister Katherine from the Harley burst out laughing just as Jack held the door open for her. He laughed closing the door and hurrying around to get behind the wheel. Harley grinned at him. “That one was pretty funny.”

Jack bowed of his head. “Thank you sweets.” He started the car with a smile and started back for the hotel.

Back in Gotham, Bruce had just finished showering. Today he was wearing a Tom Ford Windsor base peak-labeled two piece black suit, with a crisp white shirt and circle medallion red and gold silk tie. He looked every inch the playboy billionaire with his good looks and expensive suit. Today he was doing a tour of some new Wayne Enterprise technologies offices that were opening in a fresh new building in downtown Gotham. Bruce had just finished with his tie and was about to leave the room when he heard a knock at his bedroom door.

Curious, Bruce opened the door to see Alfred standing there. “I have a message for you Master Bruce, it was just delivered.” Alfred, holding a silver tray on which lay a beige envelope, was standing in perfect butler pose. Bruce took the envelop and opened it. Inside was a simple card with a cute little drawn cat, that read:

Dear Bruce,

This is not what I wanted to happen. I truly am sorry. I haven't left Gotham yet, maybe you would let me explain in person?

If so, just call this number. 555-4680

Selina

Bruce stared at the note then at Alfred. “It's from Selina.”

Alfred lifted a brow in surprise. “Sir?”

“She wants to meet.” Bruce's voice held a mixture of wonder, shock and, now that he thought about it, excitement. He was thrilled she hadn't left Gotham after all, but he wasn't sure of the rest of his feelings; was he angry? Hurt...yes, but he still felt that pull toward her.

Bruce sighed. “Thank you Alfred.”

“Of course Master Bruce.” Alfred nodded heading downstairs.

Once Bruce was sitting in the back seat of the car on his way to the tour, he dialed the number. Almost immediately Selina's voice came through. “Hello Bruce.”

“Selina.” Bruce tried to keep his voice neutral, but it was difficult.

He heard Selina sigh. “I just...I had to talk to you and apologize. I...it wasn't personal Bruce. I...I didn't mean for any of this to happen, but I wanted you to know that my feelings for you, those weren't fake, those were real.”

Bruce frowned staring out the window. “I'm not sure what you want me to do with that information Selina.”
Selina sighed. “Nothing. I just needed to let you know.”

“Are you staying in Gotham?” Bruce asked softly.

“I don't know yet. I didn't finish that job. It wasn't for me. I was hired to steal that painting and since I failed I have a target on my back...”

“Maybe I can help you with that?” Bruce asked quickly, but Selina laughed. “Bruce, sometimes all the money in the world won't help, but I appreciate the offer.”

“Will I see you again?” Bruce asked gently.

“Do you want to?” Selina's voice was slightly sad.

“I do.” Bruce answered honestly which made Selina smile, he could heard it in her voice. “Then, you just might.”

And then the phone went dead. Bruce dialed the number again, but now all he received was a computer generated voice telling him that the number he had reached had been disconnected.

Harley woke to the sound of Jack laughing. She was lying in bed on her stomach, her hair in her face, naked. She smiled when Jack laughed again, and then the smell of fresh coffee hit her, along with the scent of bacon, eggs, and something baked. Harley pushed herself up to a sitting position, running her hands through her hair. Jack smiled when he saw she was awake. He was propped against some pillows, sipping from a cup of coffee watching an old “I Love Lucy” episode, but when he saw Harley was awake he turned the TV down.

“How'd you sleep sweets?” Jack asked getting up and walking, also naked, over to a room service cart that Harley could see was loaded with breakfast food. Harley yawned stretching her arms over her head. Jack was in the process of loading food onto a plate, but he stopped to watch her stretch, the fall of her hair over her breasts, the pale creamy texture of her skin...his body immediately reacting to seeing her naked. Jack grinned then finished loading up a plate for her. He hurried back to the bed, handing her the plate before he walked back to the tray and poured her some coffee, fixing it just the way she liked it before moving back to crawl onto the bed next to her. Harley giggled. “Aww! Jack that was so sweet, thank you!”

Jack grinned. “Hey, just want to make sure my angel has everything she needs.”

Harley wrinkled her nose as she smiled at him and took a bite of bacon. “How long have you been awake?”

Jack shrugged. “Not long.”

Harley gave him a look that said she didn't believe him while she sipped her coffee.

Jack grinned. “So, ready to go see Alcatraz?”

Harley took a bite of egg, nodding with enthusiasm. “Yes!”

Jack grinned and gave her a big kiss on the cheek. “Well eat up my sweets!”

Jack walked over to the boxes of clothing they had bought yesterday while Harley ate, and then he started pulling clothing out. Harley watched him while she ate, enjoying the view of his naked backside as he crouched and pulled a few things out.

Jack mused while he looked through their new clothing. “You know, when I was a kid I was fascinated with Al Capone, George “Machine-gun” Kelly, Alvin Karpis...all those gangster types, the ones that were so bad they had to be sent to Alcatraz because no other prison could deal with them. Sorta like Blackgate in Gotham. Anyway, I always liked the fact that they lived life by their own rules. Didn't let society tell them how to live...I don't know. I just always found that fascinating. Yet another thing about me that Bruce hated. He was always trying to get me to read about 'real' heroes, but I always found the criminals fascinating.” Jack chuckled as he stood up with a dress for Harley.

“How do feel about wearing this today sweets?” The dress that Jack held up was a vintage '50's style sleeveless swing dress with a boat neckline in black with roses printed all over it. He had also purchased her a pair of red ankle strap wedge sandals to go with the dress.

Harley grinned. “Of course puddin.”

Jack laughed as he lay the dress on the bed. “Mm...I love you Harley.”

Harley smiled. “Oh puddin, I love you.” She giggled in delight, finishing off her bacon.

Within the hour they were on their way out. Harley was looking every inch vintage in the dress that Jack had picked for her, with her hair done up in a softer, slightly more modern take on the victory rolls hair style—which had Jack nearly drooling—and a matching red quilted purse with a cute little bow and a little red shrug over her shoulders. When they stepped off the elevator, Lisa, who was working at the counter saw Jack and called him over.

“Oh Mr. Wayne!”

She was standing up waving her arm to get his attention. Harley narrowed her eyes, a slight curl on her deep red lips. Lisa came hurrying from around the counter with a huge grin on her face. She was wearing a tight bright blue pencil skirt with a sleeveless black blouse that had a neckline that was bordering on being inappropriate for her job. Lisa had her hair up swept to stress her neck and the plunging neckline of the blouse. Harley was nearly seeing red with anger. She knew exactly what Lisa was trying to do. That was when a whispering voice pushed to the forefront of Harley's mind.

“Are you sure it's anger?” Harleen hissed from the shadows of Harley's consciousness. “Isn't it jealousy? Or maybe Harley, maybe Lisa represents all those girls that used to make fun of you, put you down, just like your step-father? All those girls who thought they were better than you? Maybe that's why you hate her?” Harley snarled at Harleen.

“Maybe, but she is also flirting with Jack and Jack is MINE. Harleen giggled. ‘True, true, but you know you're scared, scared of losing him, scared of not being able to keep up... Part of Harley thought she should be a little more concerned about the fact she was hearing voices on a more regular basis lately. Granted, it was technically her own voice and not 'voices' but still...the doctor part of her...Harleen...smiled and poked. “You know what that means don't you?”

Harley muttered mentally. “I'm not schizophrenic..maybe I'm becoming a sociopath? Affective psychosis? Dissociative disorders? Though remember Harleen, new studies show that not everyone who hears voices is mentally ill or unstable, 2 out of 3 people who hear voices are quite healthy and function well.”

Harleen laughed. “Well Harley, you aren't mentally healthy because you have murdered and hurt people and you're thinking about murder right now. What do you say to that?”

Harley frowned then hissed in her mind. “Oh shut up Harleen! You know what, I don't care the reasons why I hear your voice or hate Lisa. All I care about is that Lisa is trying to put herself in my place and I am not going to stand by and let her continue.” Harleen frowned. “Don't you trust Jack?”

Harley smiled. “Oh I do, with all my heart, but just because I trust him doesn't mean I have to let some bimbo try to put the moves on him. He's just as much ours as we're his Harleen. You know that even if you don't want to admit it.”

Harleen was silent then answered slowly. “Maybe in this case you're right Harley, maybe we should teach Lisa a lesson.”

Harley giggled. “Now you're talking.”

Jack frowned, then slowly let out an exasperated sigh before walking over to where Lisa waited by the counter, making a little scene trying to grab his attention. Jack strolled over with Harley's arm through his, but as before, Lisa didn't seem to see Harley at all; in fact, a look of triumph crossed over her face when she saw Jack turn around and come toward her. Jack looked devastatingly handsome today wearing a pair of black slacks, black wingtips with a black jacket under which he was wearing a low, scoop neck shirt of deep purple. The shirt's neckline was low enough that his neck looked long (causing Harley to have to practice her willpower not to lick and bite him...yet). Lisa's eyes went straight to Jack's throat, then raked up and down his body before finally zeroing in on his face.

“Hi Mr. Wayne. I wanted to let you know that I was able to get a hold of some tickets to the showing of Chicago tonight, down at Orpheum Theatre. I thought you might be interested.” Lisa smiled showing off rows of perfect teeth. She cocked her hip, leaning against the counter in an attempt to look sexy.

Jack frowned then glanced at Harley. “Would you like to go dear?”

Harley smiled looking right at Lisa who just now seemed to notice Harley. “Sure puddin, that might be fun.”

Jack grinned. “Why thank you Lisa. Harley and I would love to go tonight.”

Lisa frowned, chewing her upper lip for a moment. “Are you sure? I mean if, ah...your friend is too tired to go...”

Jack leaned forward. “I'm sure. Thank you Lisa. I'll pick the tickets up when we get back.”

Harley was having a difficult time not laughing out loud as Jack spun them around and left. The urge to turn around and give Lisa the finger was almost too much to resist, but Harley did.

Harley leaned in close to Jack's ear, her breath tickling his ear. “I really want to do something about her.”

“Do you want to kill her?” Jack asked, his blue eyes smiled with innocent inquiry.
Harley snarled. "I guess not kill...but I want to do something really, really bad to her."

Jack grinned. "Let me call Alex and have him do a little research on our friend Lisa. Maybe he can give us something we can work with?"

Harley giggled. "Okay, that sounds great puddin. Thank you."

"Anything for my girl," Jack purred into her ear. As they walked out the door, they both slipped on their sunglasses giggling together. Jack pulled out his phone while they waited for their rented car to be brought around.

Alex answered the phone with a, "How the fuck are you man? Liking California?"

Jack laughed. "The only difference between here and Gotham is the sun, I think. Anyway, Alex, I have a job for you."

Alex laughed. "Fuck man, you can't even go on vacation without needing something, eh? Okay what is it?"

"There is this young woman named Lisa, works here at the Marriott Marquis. I need as much information as you can give me. Who she is, where she was born, what she likes to eat, allergies...etc.." Jack said as he took the keys from the valet and hopped into the car after holding the door for Harley.

"Man, what the fuck she do?" Alex asked though Jack could hear the click of computer keys in the background.

"She upset Harley," Jack said as he put the car in gear.

Alex laughed. "Oh well...shit. Okay I'll call back when I have something...regular fee."

"Thanks Alex. Speak to you soon." Jack smiled hanging up the phone and taking off.

Running that day in the entertainment section of one of San Francisco's local papers, a small article tucked into the gossip and entertainment section of the paper, was a story about Bruce Wayne's younger and reclusive brother. The article also mentioned Wayne Enterprises and how the Wayne brothers of Gotham were a couple of the wealthiest young bachelors around.

The article by Julie Greer read:

"Jack Wayne, who is visiting our fair state with his fiancee Dr. Harleen Quinzel, is the youngest of the Wayne family members. There was not much known about how the happy couple met, except that Bruce Wayne had a part in the fateful meeting that led to their engagement. Bruce Wayne's brother, up to this point, has lived in obscurity in recent years, feeding rumors in Gotham that there was something wrong with the young man, but seeing him in public today he seems just fine."

The article went on to discuss the net worth of the two brothers, properties the family held and other public information. The article also ran a picture of Jack Wayne and Bruce (no picture of Harleen Quinzel was included in the article.)

The ride over to Alcatraz on the ferry was lovely. There was a nice breeze blowing off the water, the smell of the salt in the air, whipping Harley and Jack's hair where they stood at the rail watching their crossing toward the prison. Jack and Harley had a spot near the railing up near the front of the ferry, watching the island prison come into view. Jack had his arm around Harley's waist holding her close.
Harley leaned against him enjoying the view from the ferry, the warmth of his body next to hers, the sounds of the waves on the water. Harley was smiling serenely when she pointed. “Is that the Golden Gate bridge?”

Jack smiled narrowing his eyes behind his Gucci sunglasses trying to see into the distance.

“Yes it is,” Jack said against her ear.

They were both quiet watching the prison island come into view, Jack wrapped both arms around her tugging her against him. Jack leaned close whispering in her ear to be heard over the wind and the waves.

“I bet I would have been able to escape if I'd been here.” Jack grinned.

“Really?” Harley asked turning toward him.

“Sure. I think the problem with most criminals is their inability to think big enough.” Jack smiled serenely.

Harley laughed. “I think you're right puddin.”

“Yup, oh and their inability to think outside the box. If you are going to be a world class criminal you have to think bigger and better! No small time stuff, your plans should be so elaborate that the sheer size confuses your enemies into looking in the wrong direction while you're doing your crime, robbery, murder, kidnapping—whatever it is—right under their noses.” Jack chuckled, moving his hand in front of him as if he were cutting the air.

Harley giggled as Jack continued. “That's the problem with the good guys, so confined by the rules.
They never work outside their precious rules. The only reason the good guys ever win is because the writers of movies, TV, comics, make it happen. Real life...heroes are losers.” Jack laughed.

Harley giggled brushing her hair behind her ear. “So when you become a master criminal, do I get to be your moll?”

Jack made a rude noise squeezing her closer. “Moll? Hell no! You are more than just my girl Harley!
You're my partner! We will become master criminals together!” he exclaimed quietly, yet emphatically.

Jack squeezed her tight against him, rubbing his nose with hers. Harley giggled and whispered. “I'll go wherever you go Jack.”

Jack purred then quickly licked her lips. “And I'll go wherever you go my sweets.”

When they landed on the island, they walked with the group of people toward one of the rangers who was calling the crowd to them. The ranger, a young woman with bright blue eyes wearing the ranger uniform, asked the group questions about where they were from, why there were there...the usual. Jack yawned, quickly becoming bored as the ranger droned on about some of the famous inmates to Alcatraz. She mentioned Al Capone and Alvin “Creeper” Karjis, she then continued speaking about the history of the place, how it was once a Civil War fort, a demonstration site. Jack leaned toward Harley's ear, his lips close enough that they tickled.
“You know they called Alvin Karjis the Creeper because of his smile, which I think is completely unfair...a good smile is never creepy.” Jack gave her his best smile. Harley giggled leaning in close to him.

The ranger continued talking about the history of the place, droning on and on. Jack groaned, laying his head on top of Harley's making her giggle. “Hey you're going to ruin my hair,” she hissed at him.

Jack chuckled then whined. “Oh. My. God. This is boring!”

The crowd started to break apart, some continuing to follow the guide, others to just walk the area (since there were no 'guided' tours), when Harley grabbed Jack's arm and held him back. She gave him a wicked little grin. When the crowds were well ahead of them, people having spread out to explore the island prison, Harley motioned for Jack to follow her.

“Where are we going?” Jack asked while Harley pulled him through a door she spotted. “I have no idea! I thought we might find a cell and you know...” Harley giggled giving him a meaningful look.

Jack laughed. “Harley, you are a naughty girl! Sex on historical property! In a cell!”

Harley continued to giggle the two of them slipping silently through a door.

It took them a little while to find one of the prison blocks. Jack looked around and let out a little laugh. “We're in the D-block!”

“What does that mean?” Harley asked looking around. The place was completely vacant with the eerie quality that spoke of ghosts. The paint was a dull beige that was peeling in places and even the tiniest sound seemed to echo off the walls.

Jack smiled taking her hand and walked down the empty hall swinging their hands between them. “D-block was solitary confinement, also called the Hole.”

Jack suddenly tugged Harley with him, the two of them slipping into one of the cells. The tiny room had a cot bolted to the floor, a toilet and nothing else. The atmosphere was dark and gloomy inside the tiny room. Jack spun her around, pressing her front up against the wall his hands immediately under her dress, his long fingers grasping at her panties and yanking them down below her hips.

Harley gasped in surprise, but smiling at the touch of his warm fingers against her skin. “Jack!”

He chuckled whispering against her ear while he worked her panties down further. “Pretend you came to visit me...” He hissed against her ear before taking a deep breath, smelling the vanilla on her skin. “I haven't seen you in ages. All I can think of is fucking you...hard...thrusting into your wet, waiting...”

Harley groaned, feeling heat race to her groin, that warm tickle of wanting him to touch her. She pressed the flat of her hands against the wall, feeling the rough cement against her palms, arching her back and spreading her legs, trying to make it easier for him to get her panties off of her. Harley pressed her teeth into her lip, wiggling her hips slightly to let the thin cloth slide down her legs where she stepped out of them.

Jack growled glancing down to see her panties on the floor of the cell, the sight arousing him more, prompting him to growl softly. He grinned and growled again when he spun her around, shoving her hard up against the wall. Her little gasp of surprise, the way her body hit the wall...God she turned him on. He pressed his mouth to hers, attacking her lips with burning need. His teeth caught her bottom lip tugging with just enough pain to make it hurt in a way that made her groan, watching the way her eyes filled with heat. His hands slid hungrily down her sides then up again over her breasts, grasping her breasts over her dress, his fingers digging in around her breasts squeezing. Harley groaned, thrusting her hips against him. She could feel the hard pressure of him against his slacks.

Jack dragged his teeth down her neck, biting hard, sucking on her throat, letting go of her for just long enough in order to work his slacks down, just enough to free himself. Jack lifted her left leg up, thrusting into her at the same time once he was free. Harley gasped in pleasure and wrapped her arms around his neck, her hands gliding into his hair, luxuriating in the silky softness of his hair, when she felt him, hard, hot entering her body with a powerful thrust, filling her, pressing into her and sending heat spiking through her body. Now all she wanted was for him to hold her down and fuck her. Jack yanked her, and her leg, up higher, which allowed him to angle himself for deeper thrusts. He grinned at her before pressing her back against the wall again, both of them panting breathless as he fucked her hard, and fast, pressing her painfully against the wall, the sweet, wet sounds of their bodies meeting filled the tiny cell.

“Uuhh Jack...uuhh Jack...” Harley whimpered, her whole body tightening around him. Jack hissed yanking her leg up higher using the wall to hold her up while he continued to thrust a few more times. They kissed furiously, his hips jerking hard and fast, her liquid heat washing over him, when he suddenly came with a guttural groan. Jack kissed her cheek, her nose, her lips pressing his forehead against hers. Harley groaned feeling that wet burst of pleasure dragging Jack's mouth to hers, swallowing his orgasm wrought groans.

“Mmm...My sweet thing.” Jack purred, rubbing his face against hers, continuing his thrusts into her causing her to bounce and jerk against the wall.

Harley sighed, all the air leaving her lungs while she held on to him.

“Oh Jack,” she whispered.

He was just considering easing her to her feet when his phone rang, the sound loud in the tiny cell (and also alerting anyone to their presence if their moans had not). Jack cursed pulling out of Harley and yanking up his slacks. Harley grabbed her underwear and snatched up her purse, pulling out a few tissues, hurriedly cleaning herself up before she wiggled back into her panties as Jack sat on the bunk and hit the button.

“What?!” he growled.

“What the fuck man!” Alex muttered. “Geez Jack.”

Jack chuckled. “Sorry Alex.” He glanced at Harley who smiled and sat down on the bunk next to him. “So, I got all kinds of fucking dirt on Lisa for you. Like she had two brothers in prison and she lost a job for supposedly having a fucking affair with the manager.”

Jack was holding the phone between him and Harley with the volume up so she could hear too. “That's nice, but not really helpful.” Jack muttered.

“Well, I found out she has a shellfish allergy, pretty fucking bad one too.” Alex said with a crush of something he was eating on the other line.
Harley giggled. “Oh, now that I can work with.”

They could both hear Alex on the other end. “Man, I almost feel sorry for this bitch. Okay that all you guys need? If so I got a fucking date with Alice!”

“That's perfect Alex. I'll wire the money as soon as I get back to the hotel room.”

“Whatever do you have in mind my little minx?” Jack purred reaching out to run a finger along her jaw.

Harley giggled. “How do you feel about taking another woman out on a date?”

Before heading back to the hotel for their little 'scene' they planned, Jack and Harley stopped and purchased a lipstick for Lisa. It was a Christian Louboutin silky satin lipstick. The lipstick, as the sales lady—an extremely tall, thin woman of nearly sixty years with perfectly white hair—held the lipstick up as if she were presenting them with a rare jewel told them. “This lipstick is presented in a jewelry box and offered with a silk carrying pouch, the design mirrors an objet d'art so intimate as to be worn like a precious jewel; it transforms a forgotten object into a woman's magic wand.” She uttered her sales pitch with the grandeur of an old stage actress.

Harley did her best not to giggle. “Does it come in pink?”

The sales lady's eye twitched at Harley, her tone flat. “Yes, it does.”

Within the next fifteen minutes the two of them were leaving, (After Jack made sure to pay with cash), with the ninety dollar lipstick in a shopping bag ready for Jack to present to Lisa after 'dumping' Harley in the lobby, except they had stopped by the theater and purchased a ticket for Harley...so she could see the 'show' tonight.

That evening Harley was sitting on the edge of the bed in her underwear. She knew she needed to get dressed, but she was distracted watching Jack. She had on her lacy red panties and her lacy red bra, other than that she wasn't wearing anything else. The outfit she was going to wear tonight was hanging up against the wall, a spaghetti strapped burgundy mini dress with the leather jacket (express cleaned for tonight) and a pair of matching burgundy open toe stilleto booties. She was planning on styling her hair around her face in such a way that it would be easy to conceal her features, but she was pretty confident Lisa would never see her because her eyes would be only on Jack.

Beside Harley on the bed was a small plate with different slices and cubes of cheese, as part of an appetizer plate that Jack had ordered to their room. Harley kicked her bare feet, her heels bouncing against the side of the bed while she watched Jack dressing, popping a cube of cheese into her mouth. He had gone downstairs earlier and played his role of the sexually deprived husband-to-be looking for a fling or a mistress, but implying that there were 'financial benefits'...gifts as it were.

He explained to Lisa how he wasn't happy and had noticed her from the moment he had checked in with his fiancee, how he needed a real woman...blah blah blah...the whole sickening story.

Jack said Lisa had eaten it up. Harley shuddered at the thought of that ...woman!...staring and slobbering all over Jack with her eyes. Of course, it was part of their plan, but it still made Harley want to vomit knowing that woman was going to be hanging all over him tonight, thinking he was going to take her somewhere intimate afterward...though Jack had said emphatically that he was not going to kiss her. That made Harley grin from ear to ear.

The lipstick, which Harley had carefully laced with shellfish oil (which they had also purchased before returning home), lay in its bag next to Harley on the bed. Jack had a bottle of scotch and a glass on the counter next to him, where he was adjusting his tie, glaring at the offending silk cloth in the mirror's reflection. Jack also kept pouring liquor into his glass and swallowing in one shot, his cigarette lay next to that, balanced at the side of the ash tray. He was already on his fourth cigarette which clearly illustrated his annoyance at having to spend time with another woman tonight. He was clearly agitated by having to do this 'thing' this evening even though he wanted to be there for the outcome.

Jack gave up on his tie for the time being and glared at himself in the mirror. He wore a grey Armani collezioni suit with a pair of black leather Ermenegildo Zegna monk strap shoes. He looked so handsome, Harley thought, which only made the idea of that Lisa thinking she had won that much more bitter. Harley really wanted to tear the other woman's eyeballs out, BUT she reminded herself, this was going to be funnier. For a moment, Harley wondered how many times she would have to worry about women like Meg or Lisa, but then she shrugged, probably a great deal since she was marrying a Wayne.

Harley stood up and walked over to where Jack was standing. He picked up his cigarette and took a long pull on it as Harley took the untied tie around his neck. Harley began to work on tying the offending bit of cloth for him. Jack sighed putting the cigarette out then let his eyes slide over her once. “I like your outfit, but I'm going to have to insist you don't wear that to the theater.”

Harley laughed, finishing with his tie. “Fine, I'll wear something else.” Harley chuckled taking a step back from him after she finished with the tie.

“How do I look?” Jack turned around with his arms out and doing a little spin. He had just a little eyeliner on tonight, just enough that his blue eyes stood out; he was sans lipstick this evening.

Harley licked her lips feeling that warm burn in her groin. “You look very handsome Jack. If I had my baseball bat, I would have to beat her off of you. Which would be a lot of fun.” Harley grinned brightly.

Jack laughed. “Oh my little sugar bear...” He gathered her up into his arms rubbing his nose against hers. “I'm sorry you don't have your bat.”

Harley pushed out her bottom lip in a pout which only made Jack laugh more, kissing her on her pouty lip. He let her go reluctantly. “All right, I guess I better go pick her up. I'll give her the lipstick after we're seated.”

Harley nodded grinning. “I'll be there with the car.”

Jack grinned brushing his finger and thumb across her chin. “See ya soon, pooh bear.”

Harley sighed after Jack left, then quickly started to get dressed.

Jack grimaced as he walked outside the hotel entrance with Lisa on his arm. She was dressed in a black sleeveless jumpsuit with black stilleto sandals. She had her hair up in a high ponytail with all her jewelry in gold. She was talking a mile a minute as they waited outside for the taxi. “I just knew when I saw you Jack that you and I were destined to be together.” She grinned. “I mean, a man like you with a woman like that? I mean I saw her and at first I was sure she was just a prostitute you had picked up. But then when you got a room together I was just shocked you know? You could do so much better than that blonde. And I was right?! Here you are!” She cuddled his arm leaning her head against his shoulder. “What would you like to do after the show tonight? We could go to my place for a nightcap, if you like?”

Jack did an impressive amount of acting on his part not to roll his eyes or gag as he muttered. “Sure thing.”

The interior of the Orpheum Theatre was gorgeous; it was an old theater, left over from the 1920's. Harley walked in by herself, looking around her with mouth hanging slightly open. Harley had done a little internet research before she came to the theater tonight. As she gazed around she saw the ceiling, modeled after a twelfth century Spanish cathedral and as she walked into the seating area with its red covered seats, she could see the carved figures that aligned the walls of the theater. Harley pressed her lips together trying not to pout, wishing she was here with Jack for the hundredth time since she left the hotel, driving their rented car here in order to be able to drive Jack and her back to the hotel later.

Harley carefully made her way through the crowd and to the stairs, trying to find her seat which was up in the large balcony area of the theater. It took a little effort, but she finally found her seat and edged her way through the row. She smiled to herself. It was fairly far up, but she could see all the seats below her. She scanned the seats and after a few seconds, she saw Jack and Lisa. She grinned. Her seat was perfect! Jack and Lisa were fairly close to the stage, easily visible from Harley's vantage point. Harley leaned forward and wrapped her hands around the rail when she saw Lisa lean her head against Jack's shoulder, her knuckles turning white as murderous thoughts drifted through her mind.

Down below, Jack was having to bite the inside of his cheek to stop himself from saying something not funny, but nasty to Lisa. She had been talking nonstop since they had left the hotel and her constant touching of his person was really annoying Jack to the point that the thought of pulling a knife out and shoving it right up under her jaw was the only thing keeping him sane at the moment. He really hoped she was as allergic to shellfish as Alex had said, because the longer he was in her company, the more he wanted her dead.

Lisa was not only the hotel's concierge, but she had a degree in liberal arts, had two brothers, her parents were divorced and she loved shows like 'The Bachelor' and she knew she was meant to meet a prince charming...the rest of it had turned into white noise while she continued to speak incessantly. Jack let her hold onto his arm, counting the minutes. He was supposed to give her the lipstick just when the lights dimmed for the performance. Harley had doused the lipstick one more time before he left just to make sure it was coated, so hopefully it would work quickly.

Lisa suddenly caught Jack's chin forcing his face around to face her. “You know, you are just like a real life prince out of a fairy story. I mean you are so handsome, wealthy, just everything I ever dreamed about! And then you asked me out!! I mean, just...wow.” Then she kissed him.

Jack's eyes widened, all the blood draining from his face.

Harley snarled standing up leaning so far forward that a man sitting next to her grabbed her. “Hey miss, be careful!”

Harley yanked herself out of the man’s grip. “I’m fine thanks,” she snarled between her clenched teeth. The man let go of her quickly. “Sorry.”

Harley closed her eyes to calm herself. Slowly, she returned to her seat. Lisa was going to get hers soon, she told herself. Soon.

*

Lisa pulled away all smiles, and if she noticed Jack’s stiffness or lack of response, she made no indication. Mentally Jack was ready to strangle her, watching the light go out of her eyes with his hands around her throat seemed like a really fantastic idea, but instead he smiled stiffly.

“I have a gift for you.”

Lisa gasped. “You do! Oh how sweet!” With one of her arms wrapped around his, Lisa leaned forward. “What did you get me?”

Jack pulled open his jacket and pulled the pouch of lipstick from his inner pocket. “This.”

He handed her the pouch. Lisa excitedly opened the gift.

Up above Harley grinned. It was a little soon, but Jack had just handed her the gift. Harley giggled nearly bouncing in her seat, watching the other woman like a hawk.

“Oh Jack!!” Lisa squealed when she pulled out the expensive tube of lipstick. “Oh my God, this is Christian Louboutin! Oh gosh this is so wonderful!!” Lisa opened the tube of lipstick. “Oh gosh its such a pretty shade of pink!! I should put some on right now!”

Lisa opened her purse digging around for her compact. Jack abruptly stood up. “You do that...ummm, I'll be right back...I have to...”

Lisa smiled. “Oh I understand. Hurry back.” She purred and winked at him, popping open her compact. This time, Jack's smile was genuine, making his eyes sparkle. For a moment Lisa was spellbound by how handsome he was now that she was finally receiving the full effect of a true smile from him.

“Wait for me,” Jack cooed, grinning as he made his way out of the row of seats to the aisle. He glanced up when he made the aisle, his eyes clearly searching the balcony for Harley. When he spied her up above, his grinned widened further, their eyes meeting. Harley pressed her fingers to her lips and blew him a kiss. Jack winked at her before he headed out of the theater.

Harley waited. (Harleen frowned. “You just have to watch don't you?”)

Mentally, Harley laughed, the mental laughter translated to a radiant smile on her face as she leaned forward, folding her arms along the railing and resting her chin on her hands watching Lisa. (“Of course I do Harleen. That bitch thought she could take Jack—have to watch her learn her lesson.”)

Lisa pulled out a tissue and wiped her lipstick away. She then started to apply the expensive Christian Louboutin to her lips. Lisa applied two coats of the lipstick, rubbing her lips together then carefully wiping some of the lipstick from her teeth and off the tip of her tongue. She gazed at herself in the little compact mirror admiring her reflection. She grinned and snapped the compact closed, thinking to herself that this time she had really finally caught her prince charming. A guy with enough money so she could live like a princess, but he was also handsome, far more handsome than she expected her prince to be...and that made her very happy.

She settled back in her seat folding her arms in her lap thinking about kissing him again, but when he came back she was going to try and loosen him up a little more. He seemed stiff, maybe he was feeling guilty about that woman he came with? Lisa sighed, but that was when she noticed that her lips felt funny. She pressed them together, rubbing them, they felt slightly swollen. The next moment Lisa cleared her throat which felt slightly scratchy. Lisa reached up and touched her neck, the itch was feeling worse. She coughed reaching up to scratch the corner of her mouth that tingled and itched. Lisa gasped, trying to catch her breath, but it was difficult. She pressed her lips together again coughing; breathing was becoming more difficult.

Harley smiled serenely watching as Lisa started to twitch, obviously feeling some discomfort. Harley giggled. That was the moment she felt a hand on her shoulder, she instantly knew who it was as she looked up to see Jack standing beside her. He smiled. Harley jumped up and into his arms.

Jack hugged her tightly against him giving her a deep enough kiss that some of the people sitting in her row looked a little uncomfortable. Jack grinned. “Come on sweets.” The two of them moved out to the aisle, but they stayed to watch Lisa for a little bit longer.

Lisa coughed harder. It was becoming more difficult to breathe and her tongue felt swollen in her mouth. She turned looking back down the aisle, but Jack hadn't returned yet. Her breathing was becoming more difficult and it felt as if her heart was hammering hard against her chest trying to break out. That was the moment the music began to play and the lights dimmed.

Jack laughed softly, his arm around Harley's waist. “And that's our cue to leave, my sweet little pumpkin.”

Harley giggled as they two of them walked up the aisle of the theater whispering. “Do you think she'll live puddin?”

Jack frowned in thought. “OH, I certainly hope not, but who knows...” He waved his hand in the air. “Que sera sera...” They both laughed walking outside the theater.

Jack sighed. 'I think it's time to go home to Gotham sweets.'

'I couldn't agree more puddin.” Harley giggled.
It was late afternoon, the sun had reached its peak and was now on its slow descent when the taxi dropped Jack and Harley off in front of the manor. Bruce was still out so only Alfred was there to greet them, which was fine by Jack. They had been gone nearly three days. When Jack stepped out of the cab, he grinned throwing his arms wide as he faced the manor. “Ah, there is no place like home!”

“Did you enjoy your trip Master Jack? Miss Harleen?” Alfred immediately walked out when they arrived, heading to the back of the cab to help them with their bags. He had an amused expression at the amount of baggage they brought back, considering they had left with nothing.

Jack, one lock of hair falling out of place and framing the side of his narrow face looked not exactly rested, but pleased. He was dressed in a pair of black slacks, his white button down shirt untucked, with the sleeves rolled up and minus a tie, a pair of purple and black checked socks with his black oxfords. His Gucci sunglasses had slid to the tip of his nose, and he stretched his back which made popping sounds. “Yes we did, Alfie! Didn't we sweets?”

Harley, who had just stepped out of the cab, held her hand on her head to keep her hat from falling off, was wearing a white shift dress with tassels along the bottom that highlighted her shapely legs, with three-quarter sleeves making her look ready for a day at the beach. Her long hair was loose and she wore the oversize white straw hat she had left in. She smiled and took off her sunglasses. “It was fun Alfred! We went to Alcatraz! And we went to this HUGE concert festival in Golden Gate Park. I got to see the Golden Gate bridge too!”

Jack grinned at Harley’s enthusiasm, reaching out for her and drawing her into the circle of his arms just so he could rub his nose against hers. “You had a good time, didn't you pumpkin?”

Harley giggled scrunching her nose at him. “I did.”

Alfred chuckled, his eyes warm with delight at the two of them. “You will have to tell me all about it Miss Harleen. Can I get either of you something to eat or drink?”

Jack let Harley go with a quick lick to the tip of her nose, then he frowned in thought. “Actually I'm starved. We only snacked on the plane.”

Harley giggled. Actually what they had done was have sex across the table, knocking the snacks onto the floor and Jack had indulged himself between her legs, his tongue and teeth causing her to scream loudly on the flight home. She blushed reaching down to grab a couple of the bags to hide her knowing smile. Jack glanced sideways at her, catching her giggle and gave her a wink and a suggestive lick of his lips. Alfred, noticing all this, simply walked back into the house saying as he went, “How about I make something simple, perhaps some teriyaki chicken and a bottle of Beaujolais?”

Harley grinned as her stomach made a clear sound of agreement, which caused another blush to creep across her cheeks. “That sounds great Alfred!”

Alfred chuckled. “Then after I help takes these to your rooms, I will get started. Where would you like to eat?”
Jack grabbed a couple of bags. “Oh, just bring it up our room.”

Harley smiled softly. Little things like that, calling it ‘our room’ still made her heart patter with joy. It was such a simple thing, but those sweet little gestures sometimes meant more than all the huge declarations of love. Harley's smile widened when she stepped into the manor. Home, this was her home now. No...Jack was her home, but this place was an extension of him and that made it her home too. Her face alight, Harley made her way up the stairs.

Once they had dropped all the packages onto the floor of the room, Jack didn't feel like unpacking. Instead he stripped down to his boxers (tossing his clothes in a corner) and socks, hopped onto bed, grabbing his old deck of cards that were sitting on the bedside table where he usually left them, and lit a cigarette while he started to shuffle the cards. Harley changed into a pair of yoga pants and an oversized black t-shirt that read “Alcatraz swim team” across the chest along with a silhouette of the prison in the background. She came over, bare foot, and hopped onto the bed causing Jack to almost fumble the cards. He grinned at her with his cigarette held firmly between his teeth.

“So, you getting ready for the poker game tomorrow?” Harley asked. She sat cross-legged in front of him, her hands between her legs and watched Jack perform a variety of shuffling tricks quickly and with the ease of someone who had been doing them for a long time. Jack smiled at her with one brow lifted while a grin spread across his lips. “Yup.”

Harley pressed her lips together watching him. “Are these game dangerous?”

Jack frowned in thought while he shuffled. “Can be I suppose. There is a lot of money on the line and a lot of dangerous people play. I've been buying in for a while. Sometimes I win, sometimes I lose...everyone is pretty safe as long as no one cheats.”

Jack held the cards with one hand as he moved his arm in a graceful arch, the cards seemed to roll, floating smoothly from one hand back into his opposite hand. Harley grinned, her eyes twinkling with admiration. She was amazed how sexy Jack and his cards were...he dropped them all into one hand then gracefully rolled them with his fingers, holding just one up from the pack, the joker and winked. “The joker is always wild, my sweets.”

Harley giggled.

“Will I have to play?” Harley asked, watching while Jack divided the deck in two then with one hand, divided that half into fours, holding them with one hand between his fingers and moving them, creating a strange optical illusion just before he brought the four stacks of cards back together into one deck.

“No my sweets. Your job is to look sexy—and distracting—so that when the other players' attention is on you, then they'll play badly. Besides, it's an excuse for me to buy you a new, sexy dress.” Jack smiled. “I like buying you dresses. Though I might have to kill everyone there for staring at you...hmm...but then the poker game won't go well...shoot.

Guess I'll have to be nice.”

Harley looked away sideways with a slight smile.” Jack...

A soft knock sounded at their door. Harley hopped off the bed and headed to the door, opening it to find Alfred waiting with a tray, the warm smells of teriyaki chicken wafting through the doorway, two wine glasses and a bottle of wine.
“Oh Alfred, thank you!” Harley leaned forward to take the tray from him. Alfred smiled at her. “You are very welcome Miss Harleen. Just set the tray outside your door when you're done, if you please.”

Jack waved. “Thanks Alfie!!”

Alfred waved his hand. “You're welcome Master Jack.”

Harley closed the door and carefully walked across the floor with their food, crawling up onto the mattress and then settled the tray between them. Jack gathered the cards and placed them on the table by the bed. “We should get you a dress tomorrow,” Jack said as he grabbed the bottle of wine, already opened for them. He poured them each a glass of wine.

Harley unwrapped the silverware that Alfred had rolled up in the napkins for them, handing Jack his fork and knife. Jack took them, his long fingers brushing against hers.

They gazed at each other when Jack said, “Eat quickly—I feel like drinking my wine.”

Harley lifted a brow quizzically at Jack when he said that, but she cut into her chicken with a smile. He was always full of surprises, she thought.

It was around nine that evening. Harley was lying naked on the bed and her wrists were tied together with one of Jack's purple silk neck ties. From there he had tied her wrists to the bed's headboard so that they were pulled tight, stretched over her head. Sitting on the side of the bed, Jack grinned down at her and reached out to stroke her thick blonde locks from her face. Harley giggled and struggled just a little.

He smiled. “Better be good Harley or I'll tie your ankles down too.”

Harley gave him a sweet little grin with steel in her eyes, giving him a little wrinkle of her nose. “Oh you will, will you?”

Jack stood up with a laugh. “Now you've done it! You bad girl!”

He hurried over to a drawer, pulled it open and grabbed out a couple more ties. She watched him, her eyes raking down the curve of his spine, the lean muscles of his back, the way the boxers rode low on his hips. Her body ached with want. Jack turned around and dangled a tie in each hand, grinning at her like a bad little boy, his blue eyes dancing with mischief. He walked over slowly to the bed and his willing prisoner. “You going to be good?”

Harley giggled. “Nope!”

Then Jack pounced.

Harley squealed and kicked her legs, trying to snatch her legs away from his grasp, but Jack grabbed her right leg by the ankle, forcing her leg down on the bed and spread her leg wide. He worked swiftly and gracefully despite her struggles, wrapping the silk tie to her ankle then used the rest of the tie to secure her to the footboard. She kicked again with her other leg, but he snatched her ankle, once again yanking her leg wide and securing that leg as well, her legs spread wide across the mattress. Jack's grin was wide and all teeth as he sat on the edge of the mattress, his blue eyes raking down her body.

“Mm...now that looks good...very good indeed.” He dragged just the tips of his blunt nails down between her breasts watching with satisfaction when her skin goose-bumped at his touch, her nipples becoming hard. Harley rolled her tongue over her bottom lip as she watched him with hooded eyes.

Jack reached over to pick up the bottle of wine they had set on the bedside table next to his cards. He picked up the bottle rolling it over in his hand. “Good year,” he murmured.

He winked at her and slowly, starting at the point just below the hollow of her throat, poured the wine over her breasts in small drops of clear liquid, watching the way the white wine rolled down between her breasts, gradually trailing down to her stomach. He stopped long enough to lean down and wrap his lips around one of her now wet nipples and suck the wine from her skin. Harley moaned softly, but then Jack flicked his tongue over the sensitive surface. Harley hissed, arching, her whole body on fire.

“Jack...uuhh...Jack...”

Jack poured a little more wine onto her breasts, switching the bottle to his other hand so that while he curled his tongue around her nipple, he could pinch the other with his free hand.

Harley whimpered. “Oh God Jack!”

Some of the wine pooled at her belly button, then overflowed and rolled down her stomach, creeping lower across her tattoo, the chilled liquid progressing down to her groin like a slow sensual snake, rolling down over her clitoris; the chilled liquid sent shivers up her body.

Harley groaned. “Oh Jack! Jack...It's still cold.”

Jack stood, taking the bottle with him as he walked around the bed. He then dropped down on his knees at the foot of the bed grinning as he looked up the length of her body. The footboard ran low along the mattress, through the corners were high enough to tie Harley with ease.

“Mmm...I do enjoy my wine,” he whispered.

He leaned in, his blue eyes flicking up to meet her gaze, as his tongue rolled along his bottom lip just before he leaned in close to her and licked gradually at the wine dripping down her clitoris. Harley arched, groaning at the warm feel of his wet tongue tracing up her vagina in a slow lick, using the flat of his tongue to cover as much space as he could. Jack sat back for a moment and licked his lips chuckling. “Mm...such a good year.”

He poured a few more drops of wine on her groin, using his thumb to control the amount of liquid to leave the bottle and watched the expensive liquid ease lower in a shining trail to drip down over her. Jack set the wine on the floor before he leaned forward and pressed his mouth to her, sucking slowly, moving his jaw gently, up and down, his lips pressed against her and his tongue lapping up the fluid that dripped between her legs. Harley gasped, bucking her hips just slightly, but when Jack started to suck on her clitoris and flick his tongue across her, Harley moaned softly. “Uuuuhh...”

Jack’s hands stroked tenderly along the inside of her silky thighs while he deepened his kiss on her clitoris, his tongue curling along her sensitive flesh, his teeth catching her labia and tugging gently...when his phone rang.

Harley was moaning loudly, her back arching off the mattress, her toes pointed, her arms yanking back on the tie that secured her to the headboard and her legs jerked against the ties that held her legs apart. His mouth felt like heaven, the intense way he sucked on her, the warmth of his tongue and lips mixed with the chilled wine. Harley's hips came off the bed, the small pool of wine at her belly spilled down her sides and she cried out as a wave of pleasure washed over her, causing her to climax. Jack moved his jaw more frantically, his mouth covering her as he sucked deeply while sliding his hands under her rear, squeezing just before he lifted her up and held her, needing to taste more of her. Jack thrust his tongue deep into her when she came, sucking more strongly, then using his tongue to fuck her, only stopping long enough to pour a little more wine over her groin. The phone just kept ringing. It would stop, then start again.

It was quickly becoming annoying.

Jack ignored it, his two middle fingers sliding into her while he rolled his tongue vigorously over her clitoris, needing to make her come again, wanting to drink from her, his fingers sliding in and out, the sound of how wet she was made him growl, but the phone kept ringing, throwing him off with its insistent jingle.

Finally, with his mouth wet and covered in her juices, Jack pushed himself from the bed with an angry snarl. “That fucking PHONE!” he hissed.

Jack stomped over to where he had left his phone on the desk. Harley, panting, struggled to catch her breath, watched him walk across the room. She grinned seeing how hard his erection was straining against his boxers. Her body ached to feel him inside her...

Jack snarled as he picked up the phone. “WHAT?”

“Jack! It's me! Lisa! I'm so sorry, but I just had to call you!” Her high pitched annoying voice carried over the line.

Jack frowned looking confused for a moment as if he had no idea who Lisa was. He wiped a hand over his mouth and chin, wiping away Harley's fluids. “Lisa?”

“Yes! I had to call. I'm so sorry. I'm assuming that bitch of a fiancee found you at the theater and forced you to leave. But I had to tell you what happened. That gift you gave me, that bitch messed with it! Can you believe it!? I'm not sure how she found out about the gift, guess it wasn't her color...anyway. But I put the lipstick on after you left and I had an allergic reaction. I thought I was going to die! But someone got me to the hospital in time. Anyway, I just had to warn you that she tried to kill me! I'm going to see if I can file a complaint with the police, but Jack darling, you have to get rid of her. She's completely psycho.” (At Lisa's words, especially her use of the term 'psycho,' Jack's lip curled and his eyelid twitched.) Come back to San Francisco and we can be together after we get her in jail okay?”

Jack's lip curled more, his voice a snarl, but Lisa didn't seem to notice. “Really?” Jack asked.

“Oh yes, Jack. I miss you.” (She made kissy noises that made Jack want to vomit.)

Jack glanced at Harley, the sight of her tied to the bed settled his escalating annoyance with Lisa. Harley frowned, watching him from across the room. He winked at her to let her know that everything was all right. God he wanted to get over there and take her right then; he licked his lips, tasting her on them and smiled. The sight of Harley tied to his bed was making his groin hurt, but this bitch Lisa was ruining everything! He was angry now—not only had Lisa lived, but she had the nerve to call him on his private line? AND she thought she was going to cause trouble by going to the police to try to have Harley arrested?

Jack smiled. “Don't worry Lisa, I'll take care of everything.”

“Okay, thank you Jack. I can't wait to see you. Love you! Kisses!” She sounded extremely excited.

Jack clicked the button, glaring at the phone. Harley frowned. “Jack?”
He looked over at Harley, taking a breath to calm himself before he smiled. “Just...a minute sweets, I have to take care of this first...then I'm going to finish taking care you.” He winked at her. Harley's smile washed over him, calming him further.

He dialed the number of the hotel while he paced the room, taking a chance that Lisa wasn't actually working at the desk, which paid off when a young woman answered who wasn't Lisa.

“This is the Marriott Marquis, I'm Morgan, how may I help you today?”

Jack smiled. “I would like to speak to the hotel manager.”

“Sir, is there a problem; maybe I could help you?” The young woman on the other end of the line sounded professional, but when Jack said there was a problem he could almost see the woman on the other end straighten up.

Jack snarled. “Yes, Morgan, there is a problem and I want to speak to the manager. Tell him Jack Wayne, brother of Bruce Wayne is calling.”

“Yes sir, right way.”

Jack was only on hold for a couple of minutes before the phone was answered by a man with a deep, rough—albeit polite—voice. “Yes Mr. Wayne, this is Chuck Pacioni, how can I help you?”

Jack's grin was wicked. “Why yes Chuck, you can. I have a problem with one of your concierges...”

When Jack hung up, he tossed the phone back onto the desk and looked much more relaxed again. He grinned, feeling better. Lisa would be fired right away, the manager had assured him after Jack threatened to bring the entirety of the Wayne legal team down on his head. Jack also informed the man that he would be filing a restraining order and if Lisa persisted, he would take more extreme legal action.

Jack grinned as he made his way back to Harley licking his lips once more as he gazed at her tied to the bed. She had been waiting patiently, unable to move.

“Lisa thinks you found out about us sweets and laced her lipstick with something to trigger her allergy,” Jack said while dragging his fingernails along the top of her thigh.

Harley shivered at his touch and chuckled. “Oh?”

Jack nodded. “She called me on my private line. Can you believe that? Well...she has now lost her job.”

Jack resettled himself on the floor at the foot of the bed leaning on his elbows between her legs and dragged his fingertips along her inner thighs, then lower to trace her vagina in slow lazy touches.

Harley shivered then giggled at the tickling sensation of his fingers. “Is she going to the police?”

Jack continued to idly stroke the inside of her thighs, then traced the outline of her labia, his eyes following the trail of his finger. “Mm...probably, but what proof does she have? And she has just been fired for inappropriate conduct with a client. I think in the morning you and I should head over to the Gotham Police department and find out about filing a restraining order don't you? This crazy woman has it in her head that there was something between her and I...” Jack chuckled as his fingers teased at her clitoris.
Harley giggled, then hissed with pleasure at his touch. “That sounds like a great idea puddin.”

“Now, where was I before I was so rudely interrupted? Oh yes...” Jack mused leaning in to run the flat of his tongue up the entire length of her vagina, stopping at her clitoris to roll his tongue. Harley hissed with a jerk. “Oh Jack...”

Jack smiled and said quietly, “Yep, that's exactly where I was...”

Jack licked her a few more times, moving his tongue slowly making sure she could feel every movement, but he needed to fuck her. Jack stood up while stripping off his socks and boxers, climbing onto the bed. He rested on his knees, running his hands up and down her thighs enjoying the view of her wet and exposed.

“Damn Harley...you are so sexy...” Jack hissed, grabbing himself and stroking a few times just gazing at her. His eyes traveled up her body, stroking harder as his eyes reached hers...Harley was panting with expectation and need; watching him touch himself was making her groin ache.

“Come on Jack...” she purred.

Jack grinned. “Tell me what you want Harley, tell me.”

Harley moaned. “Fuck me Jack. I want you to fuck me.”

Jack's grin spread across his face while he scooted closer, rubbing the head of himself against her wet opening, coating himself with her fluids. He continued to stroke himself more vigorously, reaching over with his other hand to press his thumb against her clitoris, rolling the pad of his thumb over her as he had earlier. Harley groaned and whimpered, lifting her hips up. Jack pressed his teeth into his bottom lip, just watching her while he brought her to climax again. Then when he couldn't stand it anymore, he lifted her up just enough to enter her before he started pounding into her with abandon.

Harley cried out when he entered her, thrusting hard and fast. Harley screamed with pleasure, tugging on her bonds and came when Jack leaned down and bit her breast. Harley's body trembled with her orgasm, but Jack kept thrusting, leaning back and grabbing her hips, grinning while he watched the jiggle of her breasts with each thrust. He held on tight to her hips, fucking harder, faster until he cried out loudly. “Ahhh, fuck Harley!!”

He nearly collapsed on top of her, dropping down to his hands, resting his forehead between her breasts breathing heavy. “Jack, you okay?” Harley asked unable to wrap her arms around him.

Jack laughed. “Yeah, just...just give me a minute pumpkin.”

They stayed like that for a few minutes before Jack pulled out. He gently untied her, stopping to kiss the places where the ties had left marks on her pale skin. “I didn't hurt you did I?” Jack asked with concern in his blue eyes.

Harley giggled. “Never Jack, you never hurt me.”

He smiled thinking how lucky he was...never had any interest in sex until he met her and now he just couldn't get enough of her...ever.

He finished untying her, then, not only did he clean himself off, but he cleaned her. When they were finished Jack pulled the covers on the bed back and gathered her into his arms with a contented sigh (luckily only the top blanket was slightly damp from the wine.)

Jack pressed her head against his chest and stroked his fingers through her hair. “You put a smile on my face every single day Harley,” he whispered. “Nobody will ever come between us.”

With her arm tight around his waist, Harley smiled and closed her eyes. “Never Jack. There is nothing that can stand between us.”

They fell asleep that way, wrapped in each other's arms.

The next morning, at the Gotham Police department, Frost was annoyed. He was just having trouble with his job. The fact that most of the police department didn't really seem to care about carrying out the law actually didn't bother him as much as it should, but it was the fact that he couldn't seem to advance. He took bribes like all the cops on the beat (of course that was going to get harder with the new commissioner, a guy named Jim Gordon. Seemed to be a real straight arrow.) Frost was having trouble making ends meet, his wife was becoming more and more demanding and becoming a bigger bitch. She was always telling him about their neighbor Jessica and her husband. Jessica's husband bought her jewels and expensive clothing. Of course Jessica's husband was a drug dealer, Frost was sure of it. When he had told his wife Aylesa about that, she had only said that maybe he should consider a job change then. Frost was considering a divorce. He sighed, wishing he could step out for a cigarette then he looked up when the front doors opened and was surprised to see Jack Wayne and his girl walk in.

Jack Wayne was wearing an expensive looking black, textured jacket, cut slim to highlight the man's thin, tall frame, a John Varavatos if Frost wasn't mistaken (he had looked at suits like those... he wanted to dress in suits, be a man who people looked at with fear and respect. So he knew his suits and Jack Wayne had taste, expensive taste, but really damn good taste he thought.) The jacket was paired with black pants, a white dress shirt and a forest green vest, no tie and a pair of expensive black Sutor Mantellassi Oswald leather derby boots (another thing Frost knew, expensive shoes). Wayne's woman looked just as expensive as Jack Wayne, the dress she was wearing was an Akris punto color block dress in red and black. (That little detail he had received from his wife... she liked expensive clothing too.) The dress was crew neck, sleeveless with cap sleeves. She wore a pair of Alexander McQueen black platform sandals. Her hair was pulled back in what he would only describe as a modern take on a 1960's ponytail.

Jack Wayne strolled up to the counter and smiled. “Well, well, Officer Frost! What a pleasure!”

Frost beamed. His few encounters with Jack Wayne had been pleasant, he liked the man even if there was something about him that seemed off. “Hello Mr. Wayne, how are you?”

“Well Frost my dear, I have a problem.”

“What can I do to solve your problem sir?” Frost inquired.

“I need to file a restraining order against a woman in San Francisco who...well, she became obsessed with me and she is making herself a problem. Calling me, threatening me and my fiancee.” Jack tilted his head toward Harley, her arm through Jack's. She leaned against him, smiling at Frost. “It's very distressing,” she said softly.

“Well, sir, you'll have to go to the clerk's office for the paperwork, and proof of harassment...” Frost frowned. “But you know what Mr. Wayne, let me take care of everything for you. No need for you to waste your time on something like this. I'll get it done for you.” Frost smiled.

“Truly?” Jack asked in surprise, then grinned. “Thank you Frost. Whenever you're ready to work in the private sector, give me a call.” Jack pulled out his wallet and one of his cards, setting it down on the counter and sliding it to Frost. “I could use someone who can get things done...someone loyal...” Jack's smile held a lot more to it and Frost saw in.

“Thank you Mr. Wayne. I've been considering a change of scenery, truth be told.”

Jack laughed. “Fantastic! Thank you for taking care of this Frost. How long will all of this take?”

Frost smiled. “This woman will be served by the end of the day in San Francisco, you have my word.”

Jack laughed looking at Harley. “I love this man! Thank you Frost.”

Frost nodded. “Thank you sir.”

Jack and Harley started to turn to leave, but Jack stopped and turned around to face the police officer again.

“Actually Frost, you free tonight? Harley and I are going out, but it's someplace where I could use someone I trust to stay with my car.” Jack leaned forward, putting his hand aside his mouth and whispered. “I promise I pay well.”

Frost smiled. “I get off at seven—will that work sir?”

Jack grinned. “I think it will work just fine. I'll call you later with the details of the job.”

“Thank you sir.” Frost smiled and nodded to them. Nothing wrong with a little moonlighting.

He watched the two of them leave. It was strange, it was as if he felt a shift in his fortunes was about to take place.

Jack and Harley returned that afternoon to the manor, having purchased a dress for Harley to wear that night to the poker game. It was a champagne pink Halston Heritage strapless flounce skirt dress along with a pair of Jimmy Choo strappy leather heeled sandals in the same color.

While Harley was painting her toenails, sitting on the bed in their room with just a pair of white lace panties, and nothing else, Jack was on the phone with Alex.

“Yeah man, game's at the fucking abandoned theater in the theater district, it's that one...fuck...what's it called...” Jack could hear the tap of a pen on a table from the sounds of it through the phone as Alex tried to remember the name of the place. “Oh yeah, it's that fucking Uptown theater. We got a table set up on the fucking stage. Had some of my guys go in, got lights, air, music and I hired a few nice ass girls to serve drinks tonight. We got a whole fucking nest of Gotham's worst, but some of the richest...and that includes Gina!!” Alex laughed. “Nah...ain't going to be that bad. It's you, Gina, the bad bitch of a nurse—I still haven't figured where she gets her money, but man that fucking woman can play cards. Me of course since I'm the fucking host, Tobias Whale, one big ass mother-fucker! He is the CEO of Kord Enterprises, but I know for a fact it's a front for his fucking criminal gang. Anyway I got this freak named Professor Pyg, well actually his name is Laalo Valentin, but he goes by the Pyg name for some fucking reason. Anyway, the guy is a plastic surgeon, heard if you're in the mob and want to disappear, Pyg's the guy to go to if you really wanna disappear. Course you know that fuck Simon Stagg, owns Stagg Enterprises, thought that might make you fucking laugh. That fucking gangster, Tony Zucco and Yuri Dimitrov, or as everyone in the underground likes to call him, The Russian, also a mob boss. He and that fuck Zucco hate each other. Oh and this fucking jerk Jimmy Stilles. That fuckhead inherited his daddy's real estate business, slum lord and all around shit-for-brains with too much money. And there ya have it, the whole fucking gang!"

Jack laughed. “Big group tonight, surprised.”

“Hey they all know I run a fucking clean game...mostly.” Alex laughed. “So game starts at nine, see you there.”

Jack grinned. “This should be fun.”

Jack walked over to sit on the side of the bed to make one more phone call. The phone rang only once before it was answered. “Frost here, Mr. Wayne.”

Jack grinned. “You have the suit I sent over for tonight? I made a guess on your size.”

“Oh yes, Mr. Wayne. It fits perfectly. Thank you sir.” Frost was wearing a Calvin Klein black suit with black shirt and black tie along with a pair of new shoes, all courtesy of his employer for the night, Mr. Wayne. “I'm going to have a taxi bring me over sir.”

“Good good, make sure you're armed, just in case.” Jack laughed. “Mostly your job will be watching the car. Probably a night of boredom.”

“See ya soon Frost!” Jack hung up with a smile, glancing over at Harley. “You know toots, I like Frost.”

Harley looked up from painting her nails to smile at him. “I like him too puddin. Now get dressed and I'll do your make-up.”

Jack grinned wrinkling his nose at her. “Yes ma'am.”

They took the Bentley that night to the Uptown theater. At one time the theater had been a grand beauty in the elaborate art deco style that dominated the architecture of Gotham, but now the building was a pale reflection of what it used to be. Frost parked the car down the alley where Alex had suggested when Jack called ahead that night. There were no other cars here, but that was expected. Alex had said he wanted to give Jack a place away from the trash coming tonight...just in case. Jack had been to a handful of Alex's poker games, not once had one ended peacefully. With that much money involved, someone always became ass-sore when they lost Alex said. Jack usually found the whole thing funny when an argument had broken out. He was perfectly fine with leaning back and watching the drama unfold, but tonight he wasn't sure. Now he had Harley with him...he didn't want her hurt.

Jack stepped out of the car, taking Harley's hand and leading her out. She looked gorgeous in the dress he had bought her, her shoulders creamy and bare and her long blonde hair was piled atop her hair in a mess up do that highlighted her slender neck, curling locks of blonde hair falling down to frame her pretty face. Jack was dressed in a solid black three piece suit, complete with gold chain across his abdomen, and a purple tie so dark the color could only be seen if the light hit just right. He had black eyeliner around his blue eyes making them almost hypnotic in how vividly they stood out from his face. (Harley had painted his lips a deep red that Harley had giggled about and told him was called Unicorn Blood; Jack had loved the name. She had painted his nails a similar shade that matched the polish she wore called Moscow Red.)
Harley's makeup was all in soft colors to match her dress. Where Jack was all darkness and shadows, Harley was looking light, soft and creamy, like peaches and cream, Jack had told her.

Jack and Harley walked into the theater without being bothered by anyone. (Alex never had a guard at the door for two reasons. One: people who came to the poker game were invited. And two: guards put people on edge. And three, he added, claiming this was the most important reason: he was a cheap fucking bastard). Jack's arm was around Harley's waist as they stepped in and stopped to take in the remains of the old place. Alex had some music playing lightly. Jack had to laugh. Alex was playing System of A Down's “This Cocaine Makes me Feel...” an extremely Alex choice of music. The lights were on, not bright, but casting a soft glow through the ancient and decaying theater. The only lights that were brighter were the ones that were on the stage where Jack and Harley could see the poker table and chairs that had been set up.

The theater had a three story lobby, stadium seating, rows and rows of decaying seats that led down to the stage and an orchestra pit below. The whole place smelled of dust and decay. Another aspect of the theater they noticed as they made their way down the aisle was that there was so much marble! The style of the theater's interior was Spanish baroque, which Harley could still see in the remains of the buildings walls and ceilings. The walls had once been painted—now fading—with Spanish women, animals, kings and maybe even knights in great murals across the walls.

Jack escorted Harley down the aisle toward the stage where it looked as if most of the players were already here, several well-dressed men milling about the stage. The table was a large, long, oval antique walnut Holdem table with a green cloth top, along with ten antique-looking walnut swivel chairs, each with brown upholstery and intricate flower patterns. The back of each chair had delicate carved decorations around the top. The chairs surrounded the table along with a few extra chairs for guests. Nine of the chairs had chips sitting in front of them, representing everyone's buy-in to the game. On the stage there were also four young, scantily clad women dressed in black mini skirts and halter tops, one African American, two caucasian and one young woman who looked to be Korean. At the corner of the stage, Alex had somehow set up a bar that looked to have everything anyone could possibly want to drink, along with a formally dressed bartender. Jack could see Alex leaning against the bar talking to the bartender. Where everyone else was dressed in their finest, except Gina who was in hospital nurse scrubs with Winnie-the-pooh on them, Alex was in holey jeans, a black t-shirt that read, “Bluffing: A Pair of Balls Beats Everything” across the chest, along with his favorite pair of Converse and a short sleeved red, black and white plaid shirt over the top.

Alex was chatting away with the bartender, smoking a large cigar, when he saw Jack and Harley approaching the stage. “JACK!! HARLEY!! How the fuck are you two?? Damn Harley, you look hot!! I think you're too good for old Jack boy here!” Alex came rushing over to greet them patting Jack on the back with his one hand before taking Harley's hand and kissing her knuckles lightly. (Jack didn't feel a spike of jealousy from Alex kissing Harley's hand. Alex was one of the few people Jack trusted...someone he would actually trust to protect Harley. And someone Jack knew would never dare make a move on her.)

Alex turned, grinning at all the players and their guests. “Okay boys and girls, the fucking gang is all here! Everyone take a fucking seat. Before we start though, put in your drink orders with the lovely fucking ladies over there and Bernard here is the fucking bartender.” Alex pointed with his one hand as he spoke around his cigar. “Benard is great and he doesn't come fucking cheap so ya'll better use his services! Once everyone is ready, then we will go over the fucking rules.”

“Rules? What the fuck? It's poker.” A skinny man with shiny, shaggy, blonde hair, with a crooked nose that looked as if it had been broken at least one muttered loudly. Overall he looked like someone Jack wanted to hit. No, Jack thought, someone he wanted to watch bleed to death. The shaggy blonde was dressed in expensive clothing, a pair of brown slacks so dark they almost looked black and a matching dress shirt, with matching jacket, but he wore the clothing in such a way that he managed to make it look cheap.

Alex narrowed his eyes. “Jimmy, you shut the fuck up and listen or you're out and your fucking buy-in is mine.”

Jimmy started to open his mouth, but Alex just pointed at him with his one hand and Jimmy snapped his jaws shut with almost an audible snap of his teeth, clearly irritated but not willing to test the information broker.

Alex smiled. “Good. All right you fucks! Fucking listen. First rule, nobody and I mean nobody, insults anyone else’s date here tonight. That’s just fucking bad taste man. Second, I catch you fucking cheating, you're out on your fucking ass. No second chances and you never get to buy into one of my fucking games again. Rule three, you get too fucking drunk to play, that's on you...and again, you're out on your fucking ass, all your winnings are mine. Rule four, no fucking weapons. I'm fucking trusting you 'cause some of you fucks have been here before...the rest of you who are fucking new...I find out any of you brought a fucking weapon to my game I will fucking end you. And last rule, I reserve the fucking right to change or add to the fucking rules whenever I want. You have a problem with that, get the fuck out. You try to mess with me and mine at any fucking time...I will ruin you and you all know I fucking can.” Alex glared at everyone, except Jack and Harley...he winked at them. “Okay, take your fucking seats in the next twenty minutes and let's play some fucking poker!”

They had twenty minutes to put in their drink orders in, introduce themselves to each other if they wished and settle in to play. Jack walked Harley over to their seats. “You wait here angel. I'll go place our drink orders. Anything particular you want?”

Harley smiled. “Nah, surprise me puddin.”

Jack smiled at her brushing his fingers along her jaw before he walked over to the bar. No sooner had Jack stepped away than Jimmy Stilles flopped down in the seat next to her. “Hey sexy, what you doing here with a loser like Jack Wayne?”

Harley narrowed her eyes. “Watch it, Jack Wayne is my fiance.”

Jimmy laughed. “Oh I see—money. Hell honey, I could buy and sell the Waynes if money is what a girl like you wants...I could pay really well for your services. Really, really well.” His eyes raked over her making Harley feel more than a little uncomfortable.

“’You better watch it, my puddin doesn't like anyone messing with me,” Harley warned, but Jimmy laughed. “Please, that skinny freak? I know he's a whackjob, we've all heard the stories. Girl like you could do so much better than him.” Jimmy grabbed himself as if that somehow proved his point.

Harley made a disgusted face as she leaned forward, which had Jimmy's gaze going straight for her breasts. She had crossed her legs, laying her arm across her knee as she hissed at him. “You touch me, it's not my puddin you're going to have to worry about.”

Jimmy grinned. “Oh I like you. I guarantee by the end of the night, you'll be my bitch.” He did a thrusting motion with his hips. “Gonna have you riding me like a fucking horse.”

With that Jimmy stood up, winking at her and heading over to the bar. Harley's hands balled into fists as she imagined taking her bat to his head while she simultaneously shuddered wishing she could take a shower to wash his stare off. He made her feel dirty. She glanced over at the bar. Jack was speaking with The Russian, Yuri. He glanced over at her with a question in his eyes, his gaze going over to Jimmy, instantly going cold. It was clear from Jack's eyes he realized Jimmy had done something even if he didn't know the specifics at the moment. Harley shook her head. She would tell him later, didn't want that jerk to ruin her puddin's game tonight...at least not yet.

The game had been going back and forth for over an hour, several hands quickly played, but now they seemed to have hit the long play, the money in the middle had been steadily rising. Alex had done everyone a favor and switched the music playing to something a little less, agitating. Now Alex had techno dance music playing in the background, which was currently Skrillex's “Kill Everybody.”

Stagg was puffing on a cigar, his eyes narrowed, while his date—a woman who had to be almost twenty years his junior if not more—was sipping on a glass of champagne, her legs crossed so that her short dress fell away to reveal her thigh and hip. She had thick black hair pulled back in a tight bun at the base of her neck and was resting her elbow on Stagg's shoulder her eyes gazing at everyone at the table crossing between narrowed disregard and downright hate. Zucco, who had come alone, was spending a great deal of his time focused on The Russian. Yuri Dimitrov was a tall, not unattractive man with short black hair and wore a fur coat with an silk shirt underneath (though Harley thought the coat was overkill in this heat if he was wearing it to maintain a look.) His date was a young man, very pretty with thick eyelashes framing deep green eyes.

Gina, who came alone, was drinking a beer and leaning back studying her cards without a care in the world. Tobias Whale was fairly quiet, sipping his pomegranate martini delicately, the fragile glass looking especially dainty in the large man's hand. He would occasionally glance up at the other players, but only a quick glance, his eyes staying glued to his cards and his chips. His date was a slender wisp of a woman, so white that she almost seemed see-through. Pyg was also fairly quiet and alone. The man had shown up in an expensive black suit, but the top half of his face was covered by a pig's mask. It had taken Harley giving him a good pinch in the hip to stop Jack from barking out a laugh at the sight of the round little man with a pig mask.

(Jack had gathered Harley into his arms, pressing her tight against him, fighting his laughter as Jack hissed against her ear. “Why did the pig go to the casino?”

Harley giggled licking his cheek. “Why?”

Jack snickered like a child. “To play the slop machine!”

The last man, Jimmy Stilles, who was sitting on Harley's right, came alone much to Harley's annoyance because he would not stop leering at her.

Jack took a pull on his cigarette before setting it back down in the ash tray on his left. Harley was seated on his right. Stagg's date kept glaring daggers at Harley. Jack had simply smiled leaning over to whisper into Harley's ear. “I think the evil queen over there just realized she isn't the fairest in the land anymore.”

Harley blushed and chuckled. “Jack!”

Jack shrugged. “What?” He laughed and reached for his drink, a Screaming Orgasm which he had made of point of whispering to Harley. “Just like the one you had earlier today...”

Harley giggled and looked sideways at him with a grin as her cheeks reddened. She crossed her legs, the ruffled layers of the silken material of her dress falling back from her thigh while she picked up her own drink, a drink called Sex Appeal. Jack's hand immediately dropped to stroke her thigh, brushing up her leg, his fingers caressing her skin in a way that sent chills up her spine.

Harley glanced at Jack's cards. She wasn't sure, but she thought he had a good hand. She then glanced up at the other players, trying to read their expressions. Alex was easy. He grinned watching everyone (he was the dealer in this game) and it was clear to Harley that Alex was having a great time, especially when Jack threw out a couple of grey chips into the pile after Tobias threw out a grey chip. “I see your thousand and raise you another thousand.”

The intensity of the silence that came from the players seemed to increase. Harley was guessing that was a big chip Jack threw out. He had explained to her the worth of the chips before they left and she might have usually remembered, but he had been telling her while sliding his fingers under her panties. A girl really couldn't think straight when that was happening. She suppressed a giggle, sipping her drink to cover her blush as the memory of his fingers against her made her squirm in her seat.

Harley's gaze returned to watching Stilles, trying to use her drink to hide her expression. Something about the man was bothering her. It wasn't just his overall ickiness, but there was something about the way he was holding his cards close to his chest, the way his gaze kept roaming over the other players, there was an stiffness about his body language that bothered her. Something was definitely off with him besides the fact that he was a fucking asshole.

Plus it didn't help that whenever he caught her watching him he would leer at her, licking his lips (or at one point he held up his hand and waggled his tongue quickly between two of his fingers at her) his eyes raking down her body in such a way that it made her feel dirty. He especially liked to stare at her breasts which only made Harley acutely aware that she wasn't wearing a bra with this dress.

Jack drew her attention back to him by stroking his fingertips along her bare neck, then down her bare shoulder. She turned her attention back to her puddin with a smile. She was pretty sure Jack had cought Jimmy looking at her because she would feel Jack stiffen occasionally next to her in a way that told her he was ready to pounce and when she had met Jack's eyes, he had that murderous gleam in them directed at Jimmy. Harley had put her hand on his thigh to calm him. But Jimmy was becoming bolder in his leering at Harley, even leaning over to whisper loudly. “I notice you're not wearing a bra with that dress...nice.”

Jack started to rise, but Harley's hand on his knee stopped him...only barely.

Gina threw out a couple of grey clips with a smile. Alex lifted a brow at her in surprise, then Zucco cursed. “Fuck, I fold.”

That was when Jimmy threw out five grey clips with what Harley thought of as a shit-eating grin.
The tension at the table became thick enough to be cut by a knife. Professor Pym growled. “I fold.”

Jack chuckled. “This is going to be funny.” He threw out another six grey chips. Stagg threw out seven grey chips and Tobias tossed another eight grey chips out to the middle. Gina took a long drink from her beer. “I fold boys.”

Jimmy laughed. “Oh getting to only us big boys playing, eh? I'll raise you boys another ten, I think yer all bluffing.” Jimmy tossed out the chips.

That was when Harley saw it, from the corner of her eye; Jimmy palmed a card. He was good, she almost didn't catch it, but she saw it, a card; he slipped it out of his hand and switched it. She didn't quite catch the switch, because when she looked at his hand, the number of cards was the same. His sleight of hand was almost perfect. She quickly leaned in to Jack and hissed against his ear. “He's cheating!”

Jack frowned leaning to the side watching the other players. “What?”

“Jimmy Stilles, I saw him palm a card! I'm sure of it.” Harley laid her hand on Jack's knee when she spoke.

Jack turned his cold blue gaze on Jimmy. The man wasn't paying attention to Jack; his eyes were now on Harley's legs. He wasn't even trying to hide the fact that he was gawking at her legs. He even went so far as to lick his lips. That was when the slow boil that Jack had been feeling since the moment he knew Jimmy was eyeballing Harley—and now to know the man was cheating at the game as well—caused what little control Jack had to boil over. He moved so quickly that Harley wasn't prepared for what happened next. Jack dropped his cards on the table, twisting around and grabbed the back of Harley's chair dragging her and the chair out of the way so swiftly that she didn't have time to react before Jack lunged, grabbing a pen out from an inner pocket of his jacket. The fountain pen seemed to flash before her eyes, the light catching the gold accents on the pen as Jack moved past her with almost inhuman speed. She had seen the pen before—it was a custom fountain pen she had seen him use on occasion. It was purple with a “J” on the side.

Jack grabbed Jimmy by the side of the head, yanking the man out of his chair. Jack's fingers grabbed a fistful of Jimmy's hair at the same time, yanking his head to the side. Then in the next second, before Jimmy had time to fight back, Jack slammed the fountain pen into Jimmy's neck.

Harley grabbed the arms of her chairs, her eyes wide. Everything seemed to slow down for her, as if the world was moving in slow motion. Jack lunging and thrusting the pen into the side of Jimmy's neck was like a graceful dance, the way Jack moved, his jacket flying back from him, the clenched smile of his perfectly white teeth and deep, blood red lips. She could even see the light catching Jack's blue eyes making them glow. He held the pen in Jimmy's neck, his hair falling down around his face, his smile wide, eyes dancing while he gazed down at Jimmy. With the pen embedded deep in Jimmy's neck, time seemed to stretch for Harley. She watched her lover hold the pen in place, grinning with undisclosed glee, then in the next second, Jack yanked the pen out, throwing his arm back wide. The light caught an arc of blood exploding from Jimmy's neck, thin, but the red of the blood glowed like Jack's eyes in the dim light. Blood started to flow from Jimmy's neck, dark red blood, like a fountain staining Jimmy's shirt, though it was hard to tell since Jimmy's clothes were so dark, the blood seemed to simply enhance the color. Jimmy stared up at Jack in shock as his life started to seep away. Jack smiled down at Jimmy, holding him up as the blood flowed fast from the hole in his neck.

Jack hissed low at Jimmy. “Look upon thy death.”

It was only when Jack stepped back, dropping Jimmy who landed on the floor with a thud, and began to convulse for a couple of seconds before he stopped moving, staring up at the ceiling, a darkening pool of blood gathering under him, that the rest of the poker table reacted. The young women who were serving drinks had started screaming. The bartender had ducked behind the bar hiding. Harley, still in her chair, started to giggle.

Everyone else began to yell, stumbling back from their chairs, the woman with Stagg was screaming. Whale was fairly calm, keeping his seat and frowning, but otherwise he didn't move and his lady did much the same. Professor Pyg made an actual piggy noise of...surprise? Stagg had stumbled up to his feet, a hand to his chest, but when his date had started to scream, Stagg grabbed her by the hair, shaking her and hissed, “SHUT IT FLORENCE!”

The Russian had gathered up his boyfriend who had burst into tears. Gina didn't react except to Zucco pulled a gun and was holding it on Jack screaming. “WHAT THE FUCK??!!”

But it was Alex who was the voice of reason, yelling when he jumped up from his seat. “EVERYONE SHUT THE FUCK UP!!!”

Everyone was suddenly silent.

Jack turned to face the table with a smile on his face looking perfectly calm after his outburst of violence. “Sorry about that everyone, but Jimmy here was cheating.” Alex looked pale. He walked over to where Jimmy lay on the floor, the pool of blood under his body was so dark that it looked black under the lights.

Alex pressed his lips together stepping back to avoid the ever expanding pool of blood. “Cheating eh?”

“Yes, Harley saw him palm a card. Don't believe me, search him.” Jack said calmly, pulling out a handkerchief from his jacket's breast pocket and started to clean his pen.

Harley stood up walking closer. “He palmed a card. I'm sure of it.”

Jack reached out to take her hand. She smiled at him, weaving her fingers with his as she stepped closer.

Alex's expression conveyed his displeasure, but he dropped into a crouch and with his one hand, he searched the body. After a few seconds Alex came up with extra cards, hidden up the sleeves of Jimmy's shirt and another card in the pocket of his slacks. Alex narrowed his eyes in anger as he stood up showing everyone the cards.

“Mr. Wayne and Miss Quinn were correct...Jimmy was fucking cheating.” Alex tossed the cards down on the table then turned a hard gaze on Zucco. “You brought a fucking gun to my game Zucco?”

Zucco snarled, putting the gun back where it had been hidden under his jacket. “Yeah...what're you going to do, eh?”

Alex snarled pointing with one hand. “Get the fuck out Zucco, you're blacklisted.”

“You can't do that!” Zucco hissed, but Alex smiled. “Don't push me Zucco...don't push me.”

Zucco looked at everyone then at the body and shrugged. “Fuck you all.”

“Oh and Zucco, you try anything, I got your dad's personal number. Remember that you fucktard.” Alex said without looking at Zucco, his attention back on the body. Zucco paled even more, then quickly turned and left, the sounds of his running feet echoed off the walls of the old theater.

“Oh Okay everyone, get out. I mean the fucking game is over. Don't know how long Jimmy here was cheating so everyone, except Zucco, gets their buy-in back. I'll fucking reschedule the game.” Alex waved everyone out with his one hand.

The players muttered among themselves, but nobody disputed Alex. Instead they gathered up their things and left. Alex watched them go before turning back to the problem at hand.

It wasn't long before the place had been cleared out when Alex groaned. “God damn Jack, I don't know whether I should be fucking impressed or irritated!” Alex shook his head. “What did you kill him with?” Alex turned to look at Jack who held up his pen.

Alex blinked, his eyes widening in surprise, then he shook his head again. “A fucking pen? Are you fucking with me?”

Jack grinned and shrugged. “You said no weapons.”

Harley giggled at this and placed a quick kiss on Jack's cheeks. “You are so gifted puddin.”

“Yeah...I fucking did. Man...I didn't know you...well...shit.” Alex rubbed the back of his neck looking at Jimmy with Jack standing beside him. Jack wrapped his arm protectively around Harley's waist. “So, what are we going to do Alex?” Jack asked casually, seemingly unconcerned.

Alex shrugged. If he was disturbed by Jack and Harley's calm after Jack's murder of Stilles, he didn't show it. “I got a gal who does clean up. You work with the fucking mob like I do, you need a cleaner...just in case.”

Jack asked softly. “What about your employees here or everyone at the game?”

For a moment Alex noticed the cold way Jack's gaze took in Alex's employees and Alex knew, Jack and Harley would not have an issue with disposing of them. Alex shivered, but then made a rude noise. “Don't you fucking worry about any of them, they know who butters their bread and who will fucking make their lives a living hell if they fuck with me. I ain't worried about the others either. All of them have fucking skeletons rattling around and I know about fucking all of them. They won't want to get involved.” Alex frowned staring down at the body and shook his head again.

“Just...wow man. I didn't know you had it in you, even with the fight club stuff. I'm fucking impressed!”

Jack shrugged and chuckled. “There's a few things about me you don't know Alex.”

Alex smiled. “Hey man, you're my fucking friend, no matter what.” Alex smacked him on the back. “You and Harley go on. I'll take care of this. Knew I shouldn't have let this fuckhead buy-in to the game,” Alex muttered more to himself then to them.

Jack took Harley's hand and led her off the stage. They had just started up the aisle when Alex yelled after them. “Hey, you still gonna go fight Croc tomorrow night?”

Jack turned with a laugh. “Of course. I have a score to settle with him.”

Alex chuckled and shook his head. “You're a fucking monster, man, just fucking nuts. I'll be there though. Not going to pass an opportunity up to bet on you! Gotta make some money after the fuck show this game was...” Alex waved.

Jack waved back. “You have no idea Alex! No idea at all! See you tomorrow!”

Frost was reading when Jack and Harley came out. He was a little surprised to see them so soon, but he made no comment as they stepped into the car. He started the engine.

“Where to boss?”

“Take us home Frost my love!” Jack was laughing. “Well, that was a lot more exciting than I bargained for.”
Harley giggled. “I loved the way you handled the situation puddin.” She giggled licking her lips seductively. “It was a real turn on puddin.”

Jack chuckled. “Oh?”

Harley nodded pressing her teeth into her bottom lip, gazing at Jack through her eyes lashes. “Uhuh...That was one of the sexiest things you have ever done puddin.”

Jack purred reaching out with one finger to trace her collarbone. “Was it really?”

He yanked her closer, making Harley squeal in surprise, covering her mouth with his for a kiss that caused her to burn with want. Jack dragged his teeth across her tongue when he pulled away from her mouth and with a husky voice he purred again. “Wanna show me just how sexy you thought it was?”

He licked his lips smiling that wicked smile she loved so much.

Harley's smile in response was beautiful. “Oh yes puddin, I do...”

Harley licked her lips reaching over to undo the top button of his slacks while Jack leaned back against the seat. She pulled then zipper down, her hand slowly caressing him over his boxers, squeezing gently. Jack hissed with pleasure, his eyes hooded with lust as he whispered. “Harley girl...”

Harley giggled pulling him out, her hand wrapped around his quickly hardening erection. She leaned down and gradually ran her tongue up the length of him stopping at the head of his shaft to place a tender kiss. Jack dropped his head back against the back of the seat, letting out a long low groan. “Harley...”

He grabbed the back of her hair, weaving his fingers through her mess updo, his fingers forming a fist in her hair, his other hand pressed against the window while Harley sucked him into her mouth. “Mmm...” she moaned bobbing her head, her tongue slathering him with her saliva. She wrapped her other hand around him, sliding and twisting her hands while she pulled up on his shaft with both her hands and her lips. Jack's whole body jerked.

He grinned. “Oh Damn Harls!”

Frost had started to lay his hand along the back of the seat to begin backing up the car when he saw Miss Quinn going down on Mr. Wayne. He quickly turned around reaching up to adjust the rear view mirror to help him back up without catching sight of them two of them in the backseat. The last thing he did see though was Miss Quinn crawling onto Mr. Wayne's lap, pressing her hands to the ceiling of his car when she started to grind her hips.

When they arrived back at the manor, Harley stumbled out of the car first while yanking the top of her dress up at the same time, quickly straightening up the skirt of her dress giggling and laughing the whole time. Jack hopped out after her pulling up his slacks and swiftly zipping them up. He grabbed Harley's hand, dancing around to where Frost started to get out of the car. Jack grabbed the door leaning on the top of it and grinning down at Frost.

“Hey Frost, you feel like being our driver again tomorrow night?” Jack grinned holding on to a giggling Harley's hand.

Frost smiled. “Sure thing!”

Jack raised an eyebrow at him. “You sure? Because we are going to be doing something pretty illegal!!”

Frost frowned in thought...

Jack tilted his head to the side. “The pay will be double and if you are good at keeping your mouth closed and want a different career, I wouldn't mind hiring you on permanently.”

“Permanently?” Frost looked like he had just won the lottery. “You sure, Mr. Wayne?”

Jack's smile was sincere. “I always take care of my friends. You wanna be my friend Frost?”

Frost grinned and nodded. “Whatever you want, Boss.”

Jack thumped the top of the door before he pushed away from it. “Perfect. Take the car, it's yours and be here tomorrow by 9 pm. I'll have another suit sent over for you.”

“Thank you, Mr. Wayne,” Frost said, proud that he kept his tone calm.

Jack and Harley turned together before heading to the door. Jack waved at him.

“No, thank you Frost my love, thank you!”

Jack and Harley laughed as they headed inside.

The next morning Bruce was downstairs in the kitchen with Alfred. He was dressed casual, grey slacks and a dark blue and white checked button down shirt. He had decided to let Jack know that he wanted to throw them an engagement party; deciding to take Alfred's advice...an olive branch, but he also had something rather important he wanted to discuss with Jack. He wanted to arrange for Jack to meet with one of the family lawyers to write up a prenuptial agreement. After careful thought Bruce had decided it would be for the best.

Bruce stood by the coffeemaker having just finished making himself some coffee while Alfred was cooking breakfast. Bruce watched the older man's back while Alfred worked. “Do you think they will be down or should I head up?” Bruce asked.

Alfred turned with the skillet of scrambled eggs in his hands. He had two plates set out on a tray, along with toast, butter, jam and bacon. “They were out late last night Master Bruce. I suspect that they will be eating upstairs this morning, which is why I'm making their breakfast accordingly.”

Bruce smiled. “Let me take it up to them.”

Alfred frowned slightly as if he wanted to disagree, but instead he nodded. “As you wish, Master Bruce.”

Harley giggled trying to worm herself away from Jack, squealing and giggling.

“Stop!!” she yelled, but Jack wasn't having any of it. Laughing, he grabbed her, rolling her around, at the same time jumping on top of her so that he was straddling her. He grabbed her wrists and held her arms out to the side, pushing them down and slightly up holding her down against the mattress.

“And where do you think you're going Miss Quinn?” Jack chuckled leaning down to lick the tip of her nose.

Harley giggled wiggling under him which she noticed made him harder, his shaft hot against her stomach. “Nowhere Mr. Wayne...did you want something?”

Jack grinned wide. “Oh I want something all right.”

Harley laughed. “Well, you have to fight me for it!”

She bucked, catching Jack off guard. The sudden thrust of her hips upward caused him to lose his grip on her since he really hadn't been holding down all that tightly. Harley managed to yank one of her legs free, twisting it around to wrap around his waist and flipped him, but she rolled with him so that he was flat on his back. She swiftly grabbed his wrists and pinned his arms over his head.

“Now, who has the upper hand Mr. Wayne?” Harley giggled, her hair falling wildly around her face framing her in gold.

Jack grinned, his teeth pressed into his bottom lip, his hair a mess making him look much younger and more vulnerable as he purred. “Now what are you going to do to me Miss Quinn?”

Harley giggled. “Oh I'm going to...” but before she could finish what she was about to say, there was a knock at the bedroom door.

Jack frowned for a moment then smiled. “I bet it's Alfred with breakfast.”

Harley let him go and jumped up. “Better let me go get it, you're in no condition to be answering the door.” She looked pointedly at his hard erection with a cute predatory smile.

Jack grinned. “You're probably right.” He pulled the sheet and blanket up to cover himself while Harley hopped off the bed and grabbed her robe from the floor. The robe was black made from silk. Jack had picked it up for her when they were in California.

Harley swept her hair back and walked quickly across the room to open the door. “Morning Alf...” but her voice trailed off in shock when she saw Bruce standing there holding the tray. Bruce smiled a little awkwardly when he saw Jack was still in bed and Harley was wearing a thin robe.

“I...I brought your breakfast up for you,” Bruce explained, glancing down at the tray. (Bruce had noticed the tattoo, but said nothing) “And...and I was hoping I could talk to you in private Jack.”

Jack frowned in confusion looking young and hurt with his hair curling around his long features making him look no older than eighteen. Jack narrowed his eyes suspiciously at Bruce. “Why? Anything you can say to me can be said in front of Harley, big brother.”

Bruce frowned looking uncomfortable. Harley took the tray from him, walking back into the room and setting it on one of the bedside tables. Bruce rubbed the back of his neck. “Jack, I just need to talk to you. Could you meet me in the library after you eat?”

Jack started to snap something back, but Harley reached over and touched his arm. “It's okay puddin. You go talk to your brother. I can straighten up in here, okay?”

Jack frowned and stared at her for a couple of heartbeats before he sighed. “Fine, I'll be down after breakfast.”

Bruce smiled at Jack. “Thank you Jack.” Bruce reached over and grabbed the doorknob stepping back and closing the door. Jack crossed his arms over his chest looking sour as he muttered. “What on earth could he possibly want? Need to get after me about something I'm sure.”

Harley giggled and poured some coffee into one of the mugs on the tray from the pot Alfred had sent up.

“Don't be such a grump puddin.” She handed him his coffee. “You know, after your little meeting, we could go swimming, naked in the pool.” Harley waggled her eyebrows at him making Jack laugh and then Harley purred. “I could start out wearing that little bikini you bought me. You know the one I haven't worn yet...”

Jack grinned and licked his lips. “Okay, since you have given me incentive, I’ll do my best to be good.”

Harley giggled climbing back into the bed and slipped out of the robe at the same time. Jack's eyes raked slowly over her smooth creamy skin, his body immediately reacting to the sight of her naked, the curve of her hip, the swell of her breasts, the hardness of her nipples...

Jack purred. “Oh I’ll be very good.”

Harley giggled picking up a fork, and scooped up some of the eggs. “Open up puddin...”

Forty-five minutes later, Jack came down to the library. He was all smiles and singing as he hopped down the manor stairs and danced into the library.

Bruce could hear Jack's singing voice—which he had to admit was stellar—before Jack entered the room.

“Linger in my arms
A little longer, baby
Hold me tight
While my love for you
Is growing stronger, baby
It ain't right to say goodnight....”

Jack was wearing a pair of grey, almost silver, slim cut slacks that accented his thin figure and height, along with a white button down shirt, the top four buttons of which were undone showing off just a little of his chest. The sleeves were rolled up and he wore a pair of distressed white bucks with a pair of grey and white striped socks. Jack's hair was slicked back now and Bruce could see that Harleen must have put eyeliner on him again because the blue of Jack's eyes was quite vivid.

“So Bruce, what did you need to see me about that is so important? Did Harley and I break the table in the jet?” Jack grinned wickedly clearly not the least bit upset if they had broken the table. He rocked on his feet for a moment in front of his older brother, his hands shoved into his front pockets.

“No, no,” Bruce waved that notion off. “I...I decided that I would like to throw you and Harley an engagement party,” Bruce said.

Jack blinked, clearly in shock and flopped down onto one of the leather wing-backed chairs. “You what?”

“I want to plan an engagement party for you and Harley.” Bruce smiled, as if he were trying the expression on for the right fit.

Jack narrowed his eyes. “Where's my brother and what have you done with him?”

Bruce chuckled. “I want to make amends Jack. You're my only brother, I don't want us to always be at each others throats for the rest of our lives. I want to extend an olive branch and I thought this might be a way to do that.”

Jack leaned back in the chair crossing his long legs, his hands wrapped around his narrow knee, studying his brother. “All right, what's the catch?”

Bruce looked uncomfortable for a moment before he sighed. “I want to set up a meeting with one of the family lawyers for you to draw up a prenuptial agreement.”

Jack went very still. Bruce noticed Jack's altered posture as the younger Wayne said, “You want what?”

Bruce sat forward, motioning with his hands. “You need a prenup Jack. You can't just roll full steam ahead into a marriage without getting a prenuptial to protect yourself and the family fortune. If you end up in a divorce, if there are any children, things like that can become really messy…”

Jack snarled as he leapt to his feet, but Bruce noticed there was more than simply anger in Jack’s eyes, he could see the beginning of tears, glistening at the edges (much like Jack would do when they were younger; he could become so angry he would start to cry, but as they became older Jack would instead start to laugh, which Bruce found disconcerting, which was what happened now.)

Jack’s smile was sharp and the chuckle that accompanied it was just as sharp. “You know Bruce, you are a fucking jerk! Harley and I are going to be together forever, come what may. She isn't simply the woman I love, she is so much more than that! You just have no understanding of a real, undying forever love! She is my soul mate, my lover, my best friend and my partner! You don't understand that kind of love Bruce. Complete and utter trust. She will never betray me, never. And I will never betray her!”

Bruce stood up and reached for Jack, but Jack angrily yanked himself out of his brother's grip. “I will not make Harley sign a prenup Bruce. I won't!”

Bruce put his hands up as if he were trying to calm of wild, unpredictable animal. “All right all right Jack,” Bruce conceded. “The prenup is off the table all right...but please, just promise me you will at least think about it.”

Jack narrowed his blues eyes, the same blue eyes Bruce shared and their father had shared, but while Bruce’s eyes held the stern and unmovong calm that their father's had, Jack's eyes were wild, untamed, channeling their mother's free spirit rather than their father's stern determination.

“No. I won't even consider it,” Jack hissed low and menacing.

Bruce pressed his lips together. He wanted to argue further, but he knew he was losing whatever ground he had gained with Jack with the offer of the engagement party, an official endorsement of their wedding.
Bruce nodded. “Fine Jack, fine...no prenup.”

Jack breathed heavily through his nose in an effort to control his temper then nodded. “Thank you. And thank you for the offer of the engagement party.”

Bruce smiled. “I'm still going to do that...we'll have Gotham's best and brightest there; make an official announcement. The papers will love it.”

Jack’s smile was hesitant as if he wasn’t sure whether to believe his brother or not. That hurt Bruce, that their relationship had deteriorated over the years to the point that Jack didn't fully trust him. After several heartbeats Jack smiled and nodded. “Thank you Bruce.”

Bruce reached for Jack again, but this time Jack didn't resist, he let Bruce pull him in for a hug. Bruce squeezed his brother. “I love you Jack. No matter what you may think, I love you. You're my only brother; I just want what's best for you.”

Jack closed his eyes holding onto Bruce, laying his head against his brothers shoulder. “I love you too Bruce.”

The brothers were quiet for a handful of heartbeats, just holding each other. For this brief moment they were brothers again, the brothers their parents had wanted them to be. When Jack pulled away, he grabbed Bruce by the face and planted a loud kiss on his brothers lips. “MMUUFFPPP!!” He made loud popping kiss sound before he let Bruce go.

Bruce chuckled wiping his mouth with the back of his hand. “Eewww!!”

(It was a routine from their childhood, before their parents death...Jack would kiss Bruce on the lips and Bruce would act disgusted.)

“Well, I'm going to go tell Harley!” Jack started to trot to the door when Bruce called out. “We should get together, the three of us to discuss details and when to have the party.”

Jack grinned from the doorway. “I know the when: as soon as possible.” With that Jack winked at his brother and headed out.

Bruce smiled thinking to himself that maybe they did have a chance to repair their relationship and there was still the chance he might find a way to convince Jack to reconsider the prenup. He just had to handle Jack carefully.

Jack found Harley at the pool where she said she would be waiting for him. He walked into the enclosed space to see her floating on her back with her eyes closed. She looked like an angel, her long blonde hair floating around her head in the water, her arms moving gradually back and forth. She was wearing a micro red string bikini he had bought while in California. He grinned watching her. There was barely enough material to cover...anything. The top only covered her nipples and the bottoms were a thong. She had blushed when he had bought it, but now she was wearing it. Jack stepped further into the room moving quietly. Harley didn't react, so clearly she didn't hear him. He slipped out of his clothing, stripping down to nothing at all, placing his outfit on one of the lounge chairs in here, then silently slipped into the water with little to no sound. He sank slowly under the water, like a predator, only his eyes and forehead visible above the waterline, but as he moved deeper into the pool he slowly sank down completely under the water. Harley sighed content to let the water hold her as she waited for Jack to return from speaking with his brother. She moved her hands through the water in slow waves, letting her mind wander. She was smiling as she thought... about running her tongue long Jack's neck, tracing out his tattoo with the tip of her tongue, when there was a burst of water and she was grabbed. Harley yelped, but then she was quickly struggling for breath as she was yanked down below the water's surface. Harley struggled, twisting her arm around until her elbow connected. That was the moment she realized it was Jack who had grabbed her. He pushed away from her grabbing his nose, a small stream of blood floated in the water from between his hands where he grabbed his face. They both headed to the water's surface, both of them gasping for air.

“OH MY GOD JACK!” Harley yelled as soon as she had air and swam over to him. Jack tested his nose. “You didn't break anything sweets, but damn, great right elbow there.” Jack laughed then. Harley grabbed Jack's face between her hands and kissed his face all over, tenderly kissing his nose. “Oh Jack, I'm so sorry!”

Jack laughed. “Harley, it's fine.” He pulled her into his arms wrapping them around her. Harley pouted which only made Jack laugh more.

“I'm proud of you, you silly little thing.” He kissed her until Harley relaxed wrapping her kiss with enthusiasm.

He licked her lips once before breaking the kiss.

“I like the suit.” He smirked.

Harley laughed. “I'm glad because you are the only one who will ever see it.”

“Mm...I can live with that.” Jack chuckled.

“So what did Bruce want?” Harley asked as the two of them lazily floated in a circle in the middle of the pool.

“Well, he wants to plan our engagement party,” Jack said while he began to nibble on her chin.

“What?? really?” Harley looked startled.

“Yup. He almost ruined it by insisting on a prenup though...” Jack's attention moved to her ear.

“Oh.”Harley frowned then added softly. “I'll sign whatever you want me to puddin. I want to be your wife,” Harley whispered back while Jack began to run the tip of his tongue along the lobe of her ear, tracing the ear softly.

“I know you would my little pumpkin, but I don't want a prenup. You're my girl. Always. I trust you more than I trust myself Harley. You are my everything. I don't need or want a prenup.” Jack purred against her ear before sticking his tongue in her ear making her giggle, squeal and squirm in his arms. Jack laughed at her reaction.

“Jack, I love you.” Harley said it tenderly.

Jack smiled looking into her blue eyes. His were so much more vivid, the eyeliner around them smeared to cover the whole of his eyelid, almost like a clowns make-up except Jack didn't look funny at all. He looked...magnetic. His eyes were like the pull of a black hole, inescapable.

“You are the only person I love Harley. Only you, ever.” Jack kissed her, a sweet yet passionate kiss. He pulled back to grin playfully. “Now didn't you promise I could take this off of you?”

Harley giggled. “I did.”
“Mm...” Jack smiled and dragged his teeth along his bottom lip in anticipation. Harley felt the first pull of the ties behind her back coming loose...

When Frost arrived to pick Jack and Harley up, he was wearing his second new suit in as many days. This one was a well-tailored navy blue suit, with white shirt and a navy, white and silver striped tie. Frost had even gone to have his hair trimmed and cleaned up. He looked every inch the driver/bodyguard for some wealthy personage. He was waiting in the car when Jack and Harley stepped out of the manor. Harley wore a pair of denim shorts that were cut especially short, and a red crop top with black trim, fish net stocking and a pair of black and red Converse high tops. Her hair was pulled into two low hanging tied pigtails. She looked ready to go roller derby, thought Frost when he saw her walking beside Mr. Wayne. Walking at her side, holding her hand, Jack Wayne was dressed in slim fitted black jeans, a solid white t-shirt and some black vans.

They both hopped into the back seat, all smiles and laughs. Jack leaned forward and handed Frost a card with an address on it. (The card had arrived this afternoon with the address for the new fight club.)

Frost glanced at the note. “This is in Otisburg, right?”

Jack nodded. “Far as I know. Think you can get us there?”

Frost grinned. “Of course Boss, just hold on.”

Jack laughed dropping back into the seat wrapping his arm around Harley's shoulders. “I love this man sweets.”

Harley laughed and smiled up at Jack.

Frost pulled up in front of a large abandoned building that had the painted remains on the side stating that this place use to be a brewery. Blockbuster was outside leaning against the wall smoking a cigarette with a bottle of beer at his feet, looking like just some man wasting time on a muggy Gotham night.

Frost pulled around and parked the car between two buildings. “You want me to wait here Boss?” Frost asked looking out the front window, clearly not happy with their current location.

Jack smiled. “Yeah, yeah, nothing to worry about here—among friends my dear Frost.”

Frost didn’t look sure, but he nodded. “Whatever you say Boss.”

The inside of the building had been recently cleaned, the old and abandoned equipment had been pushed to the sides to create a large space for the fight. When Jack and Harley walked in though they were both surprised at the size of the crowd. The two fights that Jack and Harley had been to had both been well attended, but this crowd was the size of both of those together.

Jack frowned. “Wonder what's going on?”

Harley frowned too, then hissed. “You don't think this is all for your fight with Croc do you?”
Jack frowned in thought, but slowly a wide smile spread across his face. “Oh, this is going to be so much fun!!”

Music was playing, Marilyn Manson’s “Killing Strangers” filled the area while people milled about placing bets, passing around beers, and a few were in the corner playing cards while they waited for the main event to take place. Jack and Harley wove their way through the crowd heading over to where Warren was taking bets left and right. Standing next to him was Alex, smoking a cigarette and a holding a bottle of beer. When Alex saw him he threw his arm up. “The man of the hour!! How the fuck you two doing?”

Jack laughed. “So what is going on tonight?” He and Alex exchanged a quick embrace, then Alex did the same with Harley.

Alex laughed. “Fuck man, everyone is here to see you fight that fucking crocodile man of Penguin's!!”

Harley glanced around. “How's the betting going?”

“So far the odds are 2 to 1 against...a lot of people are putting their money on the lizard. There are some side bets going on whether or not Croc is going to bite your head off.” Warren smiled apologetically.

Harley scowled. “What?” She took a step toward Warren like she wanted to punch him, but Alex put his hand on her shoulder. “Hold on Harley, not Warren's fault. Just a rumor that got started about Croc being a cannibal. Anyway, I'm betting on you Jack.” Alex grinned and winked.

Harley pulled out her wallet from her back pocket. She didn't have a lot of cash on her (since Jack usually paid for everything), but she yanked out two fifties and handed them to Warren. “On Jack.”

Warren smiled and nodded. “Okay, one hundred on Jack Wayne.”

Jack laughed yanking Harley up against him. “Oh my sweet, sweet girl. I'm going to carve his eyeballs out just for you.”

Harley grinned gazing up at Jack lovingly. “Promise?”

“I promise sweets.” Jack kissed her, grabbing her rear with his other hand and pressed her hard against him. The thought of violence, blood and murder was turning them both on to the point that Alex cleared his throat. “Hey guys, you might want to save the groping for later.”

Jack chuckled against Harley's lips. He pulled back, but kept a hand around her waist. He was about to say something when everyone quieted, turning to look in one particular direction as someone turned off the music. Penguin entered the room.

Oswald Cobblepot was flanked on both sides by the same two attractive women as last time, along with an additional two new women who...well, no one could be sure what they looked liked. The women had their faces covered by white, expressionless masks and tight, red bodysuits giving them each an eerie appearance.

A new throne was set against the wall more or less facing the middle of the room. Penguin, dressed in a fancy suit of black and grey and looking rather stylish as he used his cane, kept his back straight not looking at anyone until he had taken his seat. The new 'throne' was a Victorian wing back styled chair with black upholstery.
Jack leaned in close to Harley whispering, “I have to give old Oswald props for the drama.”

Once Oswald was seated, he grinned, his eyes scanning the mostly silent crowd until he saw Jack Wayne. “I see you came after all.”

Jack stepped forward, yanking his shirt over his head and handed it to Harley. “Of course I did Pengie. One more tier and then it’s me and you again.” Jack winked at him, blowing Oswald a kiss at the same time. Cobblepot sneered, but the expression quickly morphed into a wicked smile. “Let the fight begin!!”

The music started up again, this time whomever was in charge of the music had In This Moment's 'Sick like Me' playing. Then the crowd started to part. Jack turned, following everyone's gaze as Killer Croc slowly entered the room. Harley felt a knot form in the pit of her stomach when she saw him, remembering the dark sewer, the blood and death down there where he had taken both of them. Harley paled, but her overriding emotions were anger that quickly escalated to rage and bloodlust. She wanted to see her puddin kill this monster who had dared to hurt them both.

Jack smiled darkly, his gaze following Killer Croc as the huge figure lumbered to the center of the room. Everyone was quiet as the large crocodile man stopped, suddenly as immobile and eerie as a crocodile waiting for the chance to strike. Jack wasn't sure, but it looked to him as if Croc had somehow grown bigger.

Jack grinned as he walked over to stand in front of Croc and looked up at the man who had to be well over seven feet tall. “Wanna hear a joke?” Jack asked and continued before Killer Croc could answer. “What do you get when you cross a crocodile with a flower?”

Croc grinned a fanged, toothy grin down at Jack. “I don't know, what do you get?”

Jack giggled. “I don't know either, but I'm not going to smell it!”

Croc chuckled, his clawed hand snapping out to grab Jack around the neck.

Chapter End Notes

Thanks to Mabelmadness for the lipstick color!!
Croc lifted Jack off his feet, his large clawed hand squeezing Jack's throat while at the same time the crocodile man opened his mouth wide, displaying rows of sharp four inch canines along with other large fanged teeth. Jack grinned and wrinkled his nose at the same time. “Damn man, don't you brush between victims?”

He laughed and wrapped his hands around Croc's wrist (though his hands didn't quite wrap completely around the larger man's wrist), Jack brought his legs up and planted his feet against the giant man's scaled chest and pushed with all his strength. The suddenly shift and power behind the move threw Croc off, whose hold on Jack was broken. Jack hit the concrete floor hard, knocking the air from his lungs, but he threw his arms behind his head, bringing his legs up and thrust himself up onto his feet just as Croc lunged.

Harley cried out, “Jack!” as she brought her hands up and covered her mouth with her knuckles. Her blue eyes were wide when Croc took a swipe at Jack, his claws raking across Jack's side, slicing through his skin. Jack leapt back just barely in time, the claws only making a shallow line across his stomach instead of gutting him as Croc intended, but the pain still burned white hot through Jack. He hissed, sparing a quick glance down at the ragged three lines across his stomach, the top of his jeans suddenly soaked in blood.

“Oh that was a good one Croc. Let's see what else you have.” Jack ducked under another swipe. Croc took another one, but Jack slapped it away causing Croc to look down at his hand oddly. Jack danced back a few steps with a grin, then he leapt up taking a swing with his right fist to hit Croc in the jaw, then another with his left hitting Croc's jaw on the other side. Then Jack wrapped his fists together landing a blow on the top of Croc's head when he leapt into the air.

While Jack's hits seemed to be distracting at the most, they didn't seem to have much affect on Killer Croc. Jack hissed as he tried to take another swing, but Croc grabbed Jack's arm in a vice like grip. Jack twisted his body around, bringing his left leg up in a roundhouse kick, smacking his shin into Croc's side.

Croc only snarled. “Little man!”

Croc released Jack's arms and grabbed Jack by his upper arms to lift him off his feet before tossing Jack into the crowd. Jack hit the group of people, who didn't know whether to catch him or not, knocking several of the audience down with him but the effect at least cushioned his fall.

Penguin chuckled watching Jack begin the slide to a loss—a painful, perhaps permanent loss. Oswald's eyes wandered over to Jack's fiancee and he wondered how much she would cost him...

Croc lunged again, spittle flying from his mouth. “That all you got Wayne?”

Croc slashed with his claws at Jack, catching Jack in the face, his forefinger claw cutting across Jack's cheek, leaving a long bloody cut.
Harley cried out. “JACK!”

Alex wrapped his arm around her shoulders. “It's okay Harley!”

She turned to look at Alex, who could see that there was real fear in her eyes.

* Jack hissed in pain, feeling the sudden warmth of blood dripping down his face and off his chin, but he ducked and kicked, caught Croc in the knee with a sickening sounding crack, which caused the larger man to stumble to the side. Jack was certain that he had not caused lasting damage to the mutated brute, but it gave him the opportunity to quickly unbuckle his belt and pull off the buckle, which was more than simply a buckle. It was also a knife with a small, but comfortable grip; over three inches and double edged. Holding the knife's hilt with his teeth, Jack swiftly wrapped the thick leather of his belt around his right fist as he dodged a clumsy backhanded swipe from Croc, flexing his fingers once while his eyed Croc.

Someone from the crowd yelled. “Hey, he has a weapon!”

* Harley turned, her eyes wild. She stalked through the crowd, shoving people aside as the speaker continued to yell at anyone who would listen about the knife that Jack Wayne now held. When Harley found him, she saw that the man was an average guy who looked like he might go to the gym on a regular basis with muscles that were clearly more for show than for any real use. He was wearing a sleeveless t-shirt and jeans, his hair slicked back like he thought of himself as James Dean, full with a cigarette hanging out of his mouth. Harley pushed by Alex (who had followed her then tried to put himself in front of her saying, “Now Harley...” but then as she shoved passed Alex, he shrugged and so Pokemon, Alex noted with mild interest, had not uttered a word about the weapon Jack Wayne had. The all muscle and little brains young man was standing on his toes in the crowd, his hands cupped over his mouth yelling his head off.

“That fuck has a knife!! Ain't someone gonna call foul on that?”

Harley walked right up to the guy with Alex close behind her. (He figured it was sort of his job to keep an eye on Jack's girl for him even though Jack had never asked him to do so, but that was what friends were for...) Harley grabbed the kid by the front of his shirt. Alex could tell from the younger man's expression, for a half beat the young guy thought the gorgeous blonde was going to try to kiss him, but that was quickly dispelled when she quick walked him backwards before she slammed the man up against the wall.

“You see that giant Crocodile out there?! Well he has fucking claws and teeth! So my puddin having a blade is only fair!” She put her face right up in the younger man's nearly spitting at him in her rage. She shook the man for good measure while she spoke. The young man, no more than twenty-three of so, just stared at her. Harley let go of his shirt.

“So shut your mouth unless you want me to knock your teeth out.”

She turned and started to move away. Then he did something that made Alex grimace and shake his head at the stupidity of some people, as the young man muttered out loud.

“Okay, okay...geez you crazy bitch!”
Harley's narrowed her eyes. Alex saw her form a fist at her side. He grinned shaking his head—not to indicate that she shouldn't, but in amusement about what was about to occur. Harley turned so quickly the guy didn't know what hit him when her fist connected with his face, causing several people to turn and cheer when she clearly broke this man's nose.

The man with the big mouth hit the wall and screeched, his hands going to his face in disbelief. “You fucking psycho bitch! You broke my nose!!”

He snarled at her and tried to take a punch, swinging his arm wildly. Harley brought her leg up to plant her foot against his chest in a kick that sent him stumbling back to hit the wall again. He hissed and spit out a string of curses as he tried to throw another punch at her. Harley blocked the punch with her forearms before she slammed her fist into his face again. The impact of her knuckles against his teeth cracked one of his front teeth.

Harley yanked her hand back, her knuckles clearly cut and bleeding. The stupid young man gasped in pain, his lips bloody from where she had smashed them against his teeth.

Alex groaned. “Oh, you fucking moron.”

The man tried yet again to hit Harley, clearly too stubborn to know when he had met his match—or rather, his better. Alex shrugged thinking it served the fucking asshole right if Harley smashed his face in.

Harley twisted her torso while pivoting on one foot and performed a roundhouse kick, snapping her leg out in a vicious assault to the man's chest. He gasped, the air knocked from his lungs from the impact. Harley then rushed forward, grabbed him around the back of the neck with one hand, and with a vicious grin, she narrowed eyes. The kid blinked at the deadly look in Harley's eyes. Before he could react, she used her free hand, between her thumb and fingers, slammed her hand into his throat. The kid choked, grabbing his neck and dropping to his knees as Harley stepped back from him.

Harley grinned. “No one ever calls me a bitch and no one ever tries to talk trash about my puddin.”

She turned on her heel walking away from the choking kid to a few cheers from the crowd that saw Harely put the young man down. Alex hurried to keep up with her, grinning from ear to ear.

“Fucking hell Harley, where you learn to fight like that?” She seemed even better and faster now than when he had seen her fight Ivy.

Harley smiled at Alex. “Jack.”

Jack threw a punch with his blade (gripped like one might hold brass knuckles) and sliced across Croc's chest, leaving a long cut, not mortally deep, but with enough of a bite that Croc took a surprised step backward, blood leaking from the wound. Jack grinned seeing the red blood and knowing that Croc could indeed be hurt, excited that he had actually made a cut in the croc's thick hide. He swung with his other fist, aiming for Killer Croc's head as Jack took a leap up trying for the monster's face. Croc snarled and smacked Jack's hand down before he grabbed him around the neck again, lifting Jack off his feet.

Jack wrinkled his nose. This close the smell of the other man was pungent, a strange combination of reptile and sweating human.

Jack grinned, his voice choked when he laughed back at Croc's face. “This is really kinky ya know. I mean a little choking before hand is always fun, but we really need to come up with a safe word!!!

Croc snarled and threw him. Jack hit the concrete on his left shoulder, rolling for a moment before he stopped. The impact rattled through his shoulder sending white hot jolts of pain through his arm and neck. The impact also caused Jack's teeth to snap together hard, catching the tip of his tongue. Jack tasted blood in his mouth when he rolled to his feet, just barely avoiding Croc trying to stomp on him. Jack staggered backwards holding the blade in front of him and grinned with bloody lips at Croc.

When Jack gained his feet, he dropped low and spun his leg out, hoping to catch Croc in the knee again, maybe break it this time. But Croc seemed prepared, so when Jack's leg shot out, his foot only brushed across the big man's knee cap. The impact still caused the large crocodile man to stumble, but not enough.

Croc twisted back around and hit Jack square in the jaw with the back of one ham-sized fist, opening a pressure cut at the corner of Jack's mouth. The thinner man stumbled back a little with the power of the punch, blood trailing down from the corner of his mouth, but then Jack snarled, grinning with blood covered teeth. He moved swiftly, lunging forward, aiming his punch with the hand that held the blade, at Croc's side. The small belt buckle blade caught the light for a moment, twinkling like a star just before it impacted with the thick hide of Killer Croc. Jack pressed the blade swiftly into Croc in a series of punctures, quick and fast. Jack repeatedly struck the man's side trying for as many puncture wounds as he could.

The monster was bleeding, but there was no way to tell if the blade was actually penetrating deep enough to cause any real damage. Croc snarled, but instead of punching Jack, he wrapped his clawed hands around Jack's shoulders and shoved, sending the shorter man stumbling backward and creating some space between them. Croc took a heavy, wide swing, but Jack dropped down into a crouch, the large fist sweeping over Jack's head, missing by an inch or two.

Harley screamed, her hands around her mouth. "YES! KILL'EM JACK!!"

At that moment Harley would have done anything for a pair of pompoms and a skimpy cheerleader outfit to cheer her puddin on.

Croc came in closer to Jack, taking several swipes at Jack's face and torso, though only one swipe connected with Jack's shoulder, leaving three grooves that instantly bled down Jack's arm. Jack brought his arms up, dancing back and forth trying to avoid the worst of the blows that Croc could inflict by constantly moving. Croc threw several punches, each blow landing on Jack's forearms. Jack gritted his teeth against the pain, but luckily none of the blows landed well enough to break his arms. Jack was always more confident in speed than strength, intelligence—or cunning—over brute force.

Croc snarled and swung hard, broke through Jack's defense and connected with the smaller man's already wounded cheek. Jack stumbled as the flash of pain threw him off, going down on both knees and seeing stars for a split second. He spit blood onto the floor.

With sweat dripping down his lean body, Jack twisted on his knees to avoid Croc's follow up attack—a knee aimed at his chin—and rose up with a swift upward strike with the hand that held the blade, catching Croc under his scaly chin. The blade slashed deeply into flesh, scraped against the bone of Croc's chin and sent blood flying into the air. Croc stumbled, dropping to his hands a knees for a split second. Jack, who had twisted to the side rushed the large scaled man, twisting his lean graceful body to the side and brought his right knee up to slam Croc in the side of the face; the impact of Jack's knee to Croc's jaw made a sickening sound. Croc snarled and took a backhand swipe at Jack, but he had already moved out of the way in time...just barely.

Croc lumbered to his feet, spitting a fang out onto the floor. Jack chuckled and tried to come in for another swing, but Croc grabbed him again, lifting Jack off the ground and with a roar that made everyone in the place go quiet, he bit down on Jack's right shoulder. Jack let out a cry as the four inch teeth sank into his flesh. “FUCK!”

Harley screamed. “NO!” and started to rush out to him, but Alex grabbed her by the shoulder.

“Harley, no you can't go out there! Croc could fucking hurt you or worse! Then Jack would kill me and I couldn't even be fucking mad about it!!!” Harley turned on Alex, ready to punch him, her hand already in a fist; but she managed, just barely, to stop herself. She was panting, breathing heavily through her clenched teeth.

Alex squeezed her shoulder. “I still think he is going to win,” he said bluntly.

Harley stared. Alex could see the anger and fear in her eyes, but she nodded turning back around to watch the fight. Alex kept his one hand on her shoulder, afraid if he let go she would rush out there and get herself killed.

Jack slugged Croc across the face with the hand that held the blade, desperately trying to break the giant crocodile man's hold on his shoulder. The small knife sliced across Croc's cheek and mouth, the blade cutting deep into Croc's mouth, slicing the softer flesh between the reptilian man's upper and lower lips, slicing a wider opening as the cut ran nearly to the hinge of Croc's jaw.

Croc released Jack's shoulder with a roar, which only ripped the wound that Jack had inflicted wider, blood rushing down over Croc and Jack.

Croc gargled a hiss. “I'm going to eat you, little Wayne!”

Croc started to rear his head back, almost like a snake, opening his mouth wide. It was clear to the audience that Croc was going to try and bite Jack's head off. But before Croc could strike, Jack shoved his right hand forward, the fist covered in his leather belt, into Croc's mouth.

Jack's hand went right into Croc's mouth near the back and the wound that Jack had given Croc. The long, sharp teeth still clamped down on Jack's hand, but instead of Croc's teeth sinking into Jack's flesh the monster's teeth caught in the leather of the belt. The audible sound of bones breaking were heard by the onlookers as the powerful jaws clamped down on Jack's hand.

Jack cried out in pain, but he kept his hand planted inside of Croc's mouth. Croc couldn't shut his mouth any more firmly down because not only was Jack's thick belt preventing him, his smaller, rear teeth sunk into the leather, but Jack had grabbed a hold of the palatal valve behind Croc's tongue.

In a real crocodile, the palatal valve would automatically come up to prevent water from going down the crocodile's throat so that it would not drown when it opened its mouth underwater. Jack hadn't known for sure that Killer Croc had such a flap, but he had gambled that the mutated man did, judging by the fact that Croc had become that much more...crocodile-like since the last time he had seen him. Jack's gamble paid off.
Croc was struggling, choking with Jack's fist in his mouth, his fingers wrapped around that fleshy valve holding on for dear life, pleased that the leather belt held up under a stress its makers had surely never imagined. (Jack was thankful for the Harry's of London Alligator Basel belt that cost him almost two thousand dollars, or else Croc would have bitten his arm right off.)

Jack grinned viciously, blood staining his lips and teeth.

He hissed at Croc. “This is for hurting my Harley. No one touches her—EVER.”

Jack thrust the small blade into Croc's eye with all his might, burying the blade to the hilt. Croc roared releasing Jack's arm from the grip of his teeth (leaving a tooth behind in the leather), as well as dropping the younger man. When Jack fell, he yanked his blade out at the same time, ripping the metal from the eye socket.

Jack hit the concrete hard, but he rolled to his feet grinning wildly while Croc snarled and snapped his teeth. “MY EYE, MY EYE!!”

Jack laughed. “'No animal is half as vile! As Crocky–Wock, the crocodile!'”

Croc turned toward Jack, his eye socket a bloody mess his one still intact yellow eye filled with hate. “I'm going to eat your heart out in front of your woman and then I'm going to feed on her too after I fuck her!!!!”

Jack lip curled, madness and hatred mixed in his blue eyes to an extent that for a moment Croc felt something like the icy tendrils of fear in his blood, but what made him even more afraid was the fact that Jack Wayne started to laugh.

Croc, blind in one eye and raging, lunged at Jack. Jack danced backwards, his slim dancer's body making the movement graceful. Jack's right hand was useless, the finger bones in his hand broken or worse, possibly crushed. Jack couldn't know for sure, but the pain was strangely only a dull throb, easy for him to ignore right now, hatred for Croc being his overwhelming emotion at the moment. Jack, sweat rolling down his face and over his body, held his broken hand protective against him, the hand with the knife held in front of him. Jack chuckled, his smile wide and perfect as his blue eyes stayed glued to the reptile in front of him.

Jack circled Croc looking for an opening. Croc wasn't trying to lunge this time, he was trying to stalk Jack, but with the use of only one eye and then mind-numbing pain in his mouth and the agonizing loss of the other eye, the crocodile was having a difficult time. Jack knew he had to end this now or he wasn't going to last much longer. Despite his rage and ability to push past the pain, his body could only take so much. Just a few more wounds, or another bite...Croc would win. Jack knew exactly what he needed to do to end this match, to make Killer Croc pay for everything he had done to him and Harley.

Croc snarled, the blood running down his throat from the wound Jack had inflicted in his mouth, the bloody eye socket with a ruined eye all came together to create an image straight from a horror movie.

Harley's hands were balled into fist, her knuckles white, and her whole body was tight with tension. She was ready to close the distance between her and Jack, ready to throw herself in front of Croc. Alex's fingers held on tightly to her shoulder. He couldn't really stop her, but she knew she had to stay where she was, she knew that Jack needed this...but if anything happened to him she wasn't going to live without him. She would die making Croc pay.
Jack chuckled. “Oh, look, that greasy greenish skin! The shining teeth, the greedy smile! It's Crocky–Wock, the Crocodile!”

Croc snarled. “Shut up, you fucking nut!”

Jack grinned sweetly. “Don’t like Roald Dahl? Such a shame…”

Jack moved like a striking snake knowing that if he didn’t do this swiftly, Croc was going to kill him. Jack ducked low and charged, his left arm whipping out ahead of him, starting low, then Jack threw his arms and the blade upward, the blade cutting into the soft skin between the thigh and groin not protected by scaly hide. Croc wasn’t watching what Jack was doing, confident in his superiority, thick hide, and the damage he had already done to the weak little rich man. Croc simply grabbed him, wrapping his muscled arms around Jack's middle when the smaller man's body hit him.

Jack led with his bitten shoulder, ramming it into Croc's stomach. The pain was blinding, but Jack didn’t let that stop him; this close, he jammed his blade into the soft tissue between the groin and thigh of Croc's leg, then with all his strength, Jack dragged the small blade down.

Croc felt a slight sting, but he was beyond caring, not feeling the full extent of the injury as he roared loud enough that the entire building seemed to shake. He lifted Jack off his feet and threw him into the crowd again, aiming for the wall beyond.

Harley screamed. “JACK!!”

Jack slammed into the crowd, taking several of the watchers with him. He rolled and came to a stop, bloody and unmoving. Harley rushed over, using her fist to push people out of her way, dropping her to her knees, and pulled Jack's head onto her lap. “Jack!! JACK!!”

Croc was hissing and snarling sounding every inch the crocodile that he looked like, snapping at anyone who came too close. He didn’t notice the thick trail of deep red blood that was flowing from his groin. In the dim light of the building the blood almost looked black, pooling swiftly around his huge clawed feet. Croc growled, whipping his head back and forth, the blood pool at his feet quickly expanding until he staggered, then stumbled. The huge crocodile man looked confused as his strength was leaving him swiftly. He felt strangely cold, but he didn’t seem to understand.

Everyone in the crowd watched, too scared to move close to him even if any of them were inclined to do so.

Alex rushed over to Harley who was struggling to get Jack on his feet. Jack only seemed semiconscious.

Penguin stood up from his throne, furious. Croc was supposed to dispose of Wayne, to pull the thorn in his side, but instead Jack Wayne had won. Why was life so unfair? Oswald thought just before he yelled. “Get them out of here!!”

That was the moment Croc stumbled, dropping to his knees still looking confused. But then the giant of a man fell, hitting the floor like a great tree falling, the accompanying sound of his impact echoed through the building.

Harley staggered to her feet. Covered in blood and sweat, Jack was laughing weakly, his right arm dangling at his side. “I killed the crocodile sweets!! I finally got him!!”
Harley gave Alex a pleading look. “Help me get him to the car, he needs medical attention!”

Alex muttered, “Fuck me sideways,” as he rushed over to aid Harley.

Someone had finally, cautiously, approached Croc who hadn't moved since he fell. “Fuck! Cobblepot, Killer Croc is dead!”

Jack started to laughing maniacally. “Hehe!! Bet you thought it was going to be me, didn't you Penguin old buddy!! Joke's on you!!”

Penguin glared with distaste at Jack while the slimmer man laughed even more. “You're next Pengie! You and me!!”

Harley hissed. “Come on Jack, we need to go.”

Alex grabbed Jack’s other arm throwing it over his shoulders. “Let's go, you fucking lunatic!”

Penguin glared at their backs while Harley and Alex staggered out of the building nearly dragging Jack with them while the crowd remained relatively silent.

With the news that Croc was dead, the entire club started to scatter. Harley, with Alex's help, hauled Jack to the car where Frost looked out, watching the people fleeing the building. When he saw Jack Wayne practically being dragged by some strange man and Miss Quinn, he jumped out of the car, yanking the back door open.

“What the hell happened?” he asked as they came closer.

Harley's bottom lip was trembling, though her eyes looked icy. “Just get us back to the manor, now. I'll explain in the car.”

Frost nodded and helped her lift Jack—who was still laughing to himself—into the back. Alex rubbed the blood from Jack on his jeans looking concerned. “You want me to come with you?”

Harley shook her head. “No, it's fine—I can handle it from here.”

Alex nodded. “Call me, let me know how he is, okay?”

“I will.” Harley smiled.

Just before she slipped into the car Alex grinned. “Jack's a fucking lunatic, Harley.”

She poked her head out of the door and laughed. “One of the many reasons I love him.”

Inside the building Penguin was yelling out orders to his people. “Take that body and put it in the sewer where it belongs! I want this place clean of any evidence within the hour. Anyone blabs to the police, you guys know what to do...that's what I pay you for.”

The four women and Blockbuster all nodded in response.

Frost pulled out glancing in the rear at Jack Wayne. He looked bad. It was clear to Frost that Wayne had a broken hand, and if he wasn't mistaken that looked like an animal bite in his shoulder?! But Frost drove, doing exactly as Miss Quinn asked.

In the back seat Harley had moved Jack's head to her shoulder, she was using his t-shirt he had given her before the fight to stop the bleeding from the bite wound. She was fighting back tears and tried to focus as she had been taught in med school. She could see that his hand with the belt was broken and there was a deep slice across his cheek and stomach; all of them she was sure were going to leave scars. She stroked her fingers along his undamaged cheek, gazing down on him.

“Jack?” Harley called softly. “I love you Jack. Please be al; right. I need you. I can't be without you.”

He had stopped laughing a few minutes ago. She had thought maybe he had passed out, but Jack opened his eyes, the gorgeous blue looking up at her. Surprisingly his eyes were clear. He grinned. “Hey sweets.”

Harley pressed her lips together fighting back tears, but her rebellious body refused to cooperate with her. “You scared me.”

He grinned starting to reach up with his left hand, the movement aggravating the bite mark causing it to bleed more “Ouch...that kinda hurts.”

Harley laughed, a few rebellious tears dropping from the corner of her eyes as she pressed down on the wound again. “Oh puddin!”

Frost turned when he heard Jack's voice. “You sure I shouldn't take you to the hospital Boss?”

“No, no...home, take us home,” Jack mumbled.

Frost nodded with a sigh.

Frost hurried around once they were parked in front of the manor, easing Jack out of the vehicle while Harley hurried inside. “ALFRED!! ALFRED!!”

Alfred, dressed still in most of his butler's uniform, just missing the jacket and his tie was undone, had been in the kitchen fixing himself a cup of tea, came rushing out and stopped in his tracks when he saw Miss Harleen covered in blood. “Miss Harleen!”

That was the same moment that Frost came staggering in with Jack who had passed out. Alfred paled. “Master Jack!”

Alfred rushed over and helped Frost carry Jack the three of them taking him to the Wayne manor's infirmary.

Once they were inside the manor, Alfred led them to the medical room. Frost helped lift Jack, who was muttering only half aware, up onto the exam table. Frost then took a step back staying out of the butler's way while Alfred hurriedly examined Jack.

“What bit him?” Alfred asked as he gingerly examined the bite wound first. He turned to Harley who was hovering close by with an understandably worried expression on her tear streaked face.

She looked pale as she murmured. “A crocodile-man.”
Alfred stared at her, several questions in his eyes before he nodded. This wasn't the first Wayne to return to the manor with wounds and bizarre reasons for them, but Alfred focused on what was important.

“All right. I'm going to treat the bite like a regular crocodile bite.” He smiled at Harley and pointed at one of several cabinets in the room. “If you could help me Miss Harleen? We'll have Master Jack taken care of in no time at all.”

She nodded. Alfred's calm self-assurance helped to calm her own nerves. She turned to Frost. “You can go on home. I'll have Jack call you when he can.”

Frost nodded, then inclined his head to Alfred, taking one last glance at Jack Wayne's prone figure on the examination table before he left.

Alfred turned to Harley. “All right Miss Harleen, ready to be my nurse, my dear?”

Harley nodded vigorously. “Yes, anything you need Alfred.”

It was a couple of hours later. Jack was resting in bed upstairs, his eyes closed, and breathing softly in sleep. He had received stitches on his cheek, the slashes across his stomach and the bite mark, all of which were now covered in fresh bandages. He was connected to an IV pumping antibiotics and some pain medication into his body. His hand was in a cast, his last three fingers bound together, the cast extending just a short way up his wrist (Harley was impressed with how expertly Alfred had set the bone and made and applied the cast with the cool and calm of someone who had done this more than once) and resting across his abdomen.

Alfred looked weary. His sleeves were rolled up, his clothing looked rumpled, and his thinning hair was in a little disarray. He sighed. “Master Bruce is not going to be happy with either of you.”

Harley was sitting on the bed, exhausted, her face still pale, her make-up having run down her cheeks from her earlier crying. She gazed at Jack, her fingers lightly touching his arm. She had told Alfred about the fight without giving any more details than it was a fight club and Jack had fought Killer Croc. Harley mentally crossed her fingers. Hopefully Cobblepot would take care of the monstrous Killer Croc. The giant man had evaded police this long...his vanishing would not be unusual...she would assume no participants in the fight club would have the desire to go to the police about the incident or suffer the wrath of Oswald Cobblepot, Alex, or the Gotham City police.

Alfred continued. “I will keep him on the antibiotics for twenty-four hours. The hand will take approximately six weeks to heal if all goes normally. He was very lucky Miss Harleen, that belt saved his hand from worse damage.”

Harley nodded. “Thank you so much Alfred.”

He sighed and nodded. “Of course Miss Harleen. I would do anything for either of you. But I'm going to have to tell Master Bruce when he returns. This is not something that the two of you will be able to avoid.”

“I know.” Harley smiled.

Alfred gazed at her saying softly. “Why don't you shower Miss Harleen. I'll bring you up some tea.”

“Thank you Alfred.” Harley kissed Jack's forehead and stood.
“I'll just leave the tray outside the door Miss Harleen.” Alfred started to turn and leave, but Harley rushed forward and wrapped her arms around him. Alfred smiled and held her close, then he heard and felt the sob. “Oh Alfred, I don't know what I would do if anything ever happened to Jack...I don't think I could live without him.”

Alfred stroked her back. “There, there Miss Harleen. It was just a fight. Master Jack has been in plenty of fights growing up. He will be right as rain in the morning and he will be a terrible patient. I know from experience. But it will be just fine.”

Harley squeezed him. “Thank you Alfred.”

“Of course Miss Harleen. Now you go shower my dear and make yourself comfortable. You need rest too.” Alfred stepped back placing one hand on her shoulder and lightly cupped her chin.

“Yes Alfred.” Harley gave him a smile.

Once Harley was clean, having showered and washed her hair quickly, she slipped into a pair of yoga pants and one of Jack's t-shirts from the closet. She retrieved the tea and curled up next to Jack. He only stirred a little, his body leaning more heavily toward her. Harley gently moved his head into the crook of her arm before closing her eyes and going to sleep.

The next morning Harley was awakened by knocking at the door. Jack grumbled trying to wake up. Harley hurried to the door opening it to find Bruce, dressed in one of his well cut black suits, standing there looking like a walking, talking storm cloud. “Is Jack awake?”

Harley glanced behind her. Jack hadn't opened his eyes yet, though she could see he was starting to stir even with his eyes were still closed. She surprised Bruce by shoving him into the hall and closing the door behind her. “Not yet,” she hissed.

Bruce took a deep breath clearly calming himself as he muttered, “Alfred said Jack was participating in a 'fight club' and he was hurt badly?”

Harley frowned and nodded. “He was. Broke his hand and had to have a few stitches.”

Bruce narrowed his eyes at her. “Alfred said he had been bitten by Killer Croc?”

Harley paled and nodded. “He was. Broke his hand and had to have a few stitches.”

Bruce narrowed his eyes at her. “Alfred said he had been bitten by Killer Croc?”

Harley paled and nodded. Bruce snarled though there wasn't a lot of heat behind his words.

“Why didn't you call the police?! The police are looking for him in connection to your kidnapping? What was Jack thinking? Fight him then call the cops? I see how well that worked out for him.” Bruce's anger and disappointment were obvious.

(Harleen whispered to Harley, the two of them watching Bruce, his face struggling between emotions of rage and concern. “You know that Bruce is using his anger to cover his pain. He is really worried about Jack, but at the same time if makes him furious that Jack does this to himself. I think Bruce blames himself for Jack's recklessness. Remember, Alfred had said Jack had gotten into fights before...”)

Harley reached out and laid a hand on Bruce's arm. “He is going to be all right. Alfred took care of him.”
Bruce sighed. “I know Harley, but...I hired you to help deal with his behavior, yet here you are supporting him going to a fight club?”

Harley pressed her lips together. “You more than anyone should know that if Jack decides to do something, there is no stopping him. Besides...this was a chance for him to get back at the man who took us...who scarred him.”

Bruce hissed. “Well according to Alfred, Croc scarred Jack again. And for what?! He is gone yet again, no clues, no leads...this was dangerous Harley—and foolish.”

Bruce took a deep breath, letting it out slowly. He frowned rubbing the back of his neck.

Harley remained quiet, letting Bruce vent. “Just, please, don't let him do this again.”

Harley didn't say anything, but she gave a nod. “I should go back in and check on him.”

Bruce frowned and nodded. “All right. Just...just tell him I came by?”

Harley smiled. “I will Bruce, I promise.”

Bruce turned to go, stopping and turning back before Harley closed the door.

“Perhaps...perhaps when Jack is feeling better the three of us could get together and discuss your engagement party...” Bruce wanted to end the conversation on a high note.

Harley smiled. “I think we would both enjoy that.”

Bruce gave her a small smile before heading back down the hall thinking to himself that Batman would have to find about this 'fight club' and see if he could break it up.

(A week and a half later)

Jack was lying naked on the bed, propped up on pillows, finishing his cigarette while waiting on Harley. She had ordered him undressed with an adorable glint in her eyes and a mischievous wrinkle to her nose, when she said she was going to play nurse. This was the first day in almost two weeks that Jack had felt himself. His wounds were healing quickly, though he would now have a whole new set of scars. The bite mark was looking much better, but there would be marks left on his shoulder. Harley had suggested getting another tattoo later to mix with the scar.

The one on his stomach would fade with time, Alfred had said, as would the one on his cheek, though it would still remain a light scar, a reminder on his face. He could have plastic surgery to take care of it if he wished, but Jack wasn't sure he cared to...Harley had said it was sexy. And ultimately, her opinion was the only one that mattered to him. As he leaned over to put his cigarette out, Jack looked toward the bathroom where he could hear Harley moving around.

“What are you doing in there?” Jack asked.

He held his arm up studying the cast when finally Harley come out of the bathroom. She grinned at him playfully, stopping and posing with one arm up in the air and the other held across her stomach. She was dressed in a sexy nurse outfit, though a highly unusual one. Harley had on a red and blue corset that had not just ties, but buckles along her torso with a little white puff sleeved top underneath. The top was opened in such a way that it exposed the top of a blue and red bra underneath...leather by the looks of it. Her stomach was bare, and riding low on her hips—held in place by a thick leather belt—was a tiny white skirt ruffle with a tiny white thong under that which he received a good look at when she turned and wiggled her enticing rear at him. She also had on a pair of thigh-high fishnet stockings, with a pair of high heeled thigh-high red and blue leather boots. Her hair was pulled up in pigtails and she had a little nurse cap on.

She was holding a bottle of almond oil in one hand as she posed for him. “Ready for some special treatment?”

Jack grinned. “Oh now, what have we here?”

Harley giggled. “I'm your nurse for today Mr. Wayne. I'm going to take good care of you.” Harley placed her forefinger against her bottom lip, smiling seductively.

Jack licked his lips letting his eyes roam down Harley's body, then back up, his own body reacting immediately to seeing her dressed like that. “Oh and how are you going to do that nurse?”

Harley giggled and paced closer. Jack started to reach out to run the fingers of his good hand along the edge of her skirt, just under her bellybutton, but she playfully smacked his hands. “Oh no...no touching until Nurse Harley says you can puddin. You're just supposed to lay there right now and let me do all the work.”

Jack grinned. “Oh am I?”

Harley giggled pumping the bottle, filling one hand with oil. “Uhuh...you just be a good boy and let Nurse Harley take care of you.”

Harley ran her oiled hands together, warming the oil that covered her fingers before she slowly smoothed them along Jack's chest, running her slick hands over his pecs and down his stomach, (careful of his wounds). Jack smiled, relaxing back against the pillows, his eyes fluttering closed while her hands worked gently over the muscles of his chest, then down to his stomach kneading and caressing his body. Harley smiled, enjoying herself, watching Jack relax back into the pillows. She picked up the bottle, dribbling a few more drops of oil onto his skin before she ran her hands down over the little drops of oil and then slid her hands along his hips. She wanted him to feel good, to help him not just relax, but to show him how much she wanted him, loved him.

She had been more scared over the last week and a half than she had ever been. This was the first time Jack had been hurt badly enough that he actually seemed to require time to heal, to rest. Those first couple of days had been the worst, watching him lying in bed, pale...weak, though he had laughed about it, cracking jokes. Even so, she had been frightened for him. She just knew she couldn't face the world without him.

Harley cleared her mind. She was not going to focus on what had scared her, instead she was going to focus on right now...making him feel good, getting to be with him after more than a week...

Harley ran her oiled hands down his torso again, feeling the muscles, the sleek lines of his body, the softness of his skin. She slid her hands down his groin, not quite touching him yet, her fingers gliding oil over his hairless body. She liked that he was hairless, that he waxed all the hair away. It was unusual, but sexy as hell. If he stopped she wouldn't care, she would still find every inch of him desirable, but she enjoyed the lack of hair while her fingers worked over him. She caressed the extremely sensitive space where his thighs met his body, her oiled fingers gliding easily over his skin. Jack groaned softly, his eyes remaining closed while her fingers started to knead his thighs. Harley licked her lips; she liked touching him. She liked having full access to his body like this and she adored the fact that Jack made himself vulnerable to her and only her. She grabbed the bottle of oil. Squeezing the pump, she added a few more drops to each of his legs before she began to work her hands down his slim calves. Jack made a soft moan of contentment.
She ran her hands down his calves, tenderly working her hands over the muscles. She worked her way down to his feet which she massaged, then back up again. She picked up the oil and dribbled it over his hardening shaft, her gaze heated with lust while she watch the oil ooze slowly down his long hard shaft, and roll down over his tightening scrotum. Jack made a small moan when the warm oil hit his sensitive skin, which made Harley smile. She gently began to rub her hands over his groin, sliding her fingers down along with the slick oil, tracing the “V” of his groin before cupping his scrotum, squeezing gently, sliding her hands down further between his legs, low enough that she could slide her fingers between his butt cheeks, pressing just enough to make him groan before she dragged her hands up again, coating him with the oil so that her fingers slid along the sides of his scrotum, then under, then up again, eliciting a groan from Jack.

Jack hissed, the tight pull in his groin burned up his body. “Harley...”

Harley giggled. “Just relax puddin.”

“It's a little hard when you're doing that.” Jack pouted. She had her back to him while she worked, but she turned just a little to smile over her shoulder at him.

Harley giggled. “A little hard?”

Jack opened his eyes to grin at her and waggle his eyebrows. Harley giggled taking him in her oiled hands and started to slowly twist her hands up his erection slowly. Jack's eyes rolled as he moaned loudly. “Oh God Harley...!!”

She giggled softly turning to face him and climbed onto the bed settling between his legs. She gently dragged the tips of her oiled fingers along his erection causing his whole body to shudder. Jack hissed arching his head back into the pillows. “Oh damn Harley.”

Harley cooed softly. “You like that puddin?” She continued to draw her fingers up then slowly down again over his heated flesh. She grasped him in both hands and gently rotated her grip. Jack grabbed the sheets beside him with his undamaged hand, his hips jerking upward.

“Uuhh...” he moaned.

Harley rolled her oiled hands up then she pressed just her thumbs along his shaft, sliding her hands low to the base of his erection, then gradually traveled up again, her hands sliding while her thumbs pressed into his soft oiled skin, very slowly until she came to the head of his erection. Jack was panting, hissing through his teeth. Harley used the pads of her thumbs to gently massage just behind the head of his penis.

Jack's fingers in his cast twitched, while his free hand dug harder into the sheet.

Jack groaned loudly. “Harley!! Ughh....damn it Harley!!” Jack jerked, cumming just a little at the same time he was begging Harley to stop. “Please Harley...damn...” Jack panted. Harley leaned down to run her tongue up the back of his erection to the head where she rolled her tongue over him before asking him. “You want me puddin?”

Jack was watching her through hooded eyes. He groaned softly. “Yes I want you Harley...I need you.”

Harley grinned stand up on her knees. “That's just what Nurse Harley needed to hear.” She giggled and started to unlace her corset. Jack watched her as Harley dropped the corset to the floor. She next tugged off the blouse, pulling it carefully over her head. She then unstrapped the bra, dropping it to the floor along with the rest.
Jack opened his mouth, the tip of his tongue pressed to the back of his upper teeth while his blue eyes roamed over her body. He grinned. “Take the thong off, but leave everything else on.”

Harley giggled. “If that will help my patient…”

Jack's grin spread across his face. “Yes Nurse Harley, that would help your patient a great deal.”

Giggling, Harley hopped off the bed. She grabbed the thong from under the tiny skirt and shimmied out of it, stepping carefully trying not to snag it on her boots before she was finally able to drop the thong to the floor.

Jack chuckled. “Mm…come here Nurse Harley.”

Harley climbed back onto the bed, straddling Jack. He reached up then stopped. “Can I have a bit of that oil nurse?”

Harley laughed. “Whatever the patient wants.”

She leaned over grabbing the bottle where she had set it on the bedside table and pumped some of the clear liquid into Jack's good hand. After she set the bottle back Jack rubbed the oil over her breasts. He loved the way it make her breasts shine, the hard nipples somehow looked darker, enticing with the shine of the oil on them.

“Mmm...that is very nice.” Jack cooed watching the way the oil glimmered on her skin, a few drops slowly gliding down over the soft roundness of her breast to ooze down her torso. He enjoyed the way her nipples tightened when his fingers brushed over them, the oil making the slip and slide of his thumb smoother.

Harley groaned. “I missed you touching me like this puddin.”

Jack grinned. “Mm...I missed it too.” He rolled the flat of his thumb over one nipple watching the way the oil smoothed over it. Harley pressed her lips together making a delight moan at the same time that she grasped his shaft in one hand, holding him steady for her as she lowered herself down on him. Jack tensed, his eyes rolling upward when she lowered herself down, enveloping him in her wetness and warmth, the heat of which rolled through his entire body almost causing him to cum at the that very moment, but he wanted to last, wanted this to last just a little longer, until he heard her cry out. That was what he wanted more than anything right now was to hear his Harley sing with pleasure, to hear his name moaned on her lips. So Jack bit down on the inside of his cheek to stop himself from losing control.

As soon she lowered herself down, Harley pressed her hands against his chest and started to roll her hips. Jack grabbed her thigh with his good hand panting when he started to grind. Harley whimpered. “Oh Jack ooOoh Jack!!”

Jack snaked his hand to her groin, pressing his thumb against her clitoris rolling the pad of his thumb over her, watching her fuck. “God Harley...uh..you're so beautiful…”

Harley arched her back grabbing his legs as she leaned and thrust her hips. “Puddin...oh puddin…”

Jack grinned watching her, the way her back was bowed, glancing down to watch himself disappearing into her body. Jack stroked her hissing. “Cum for me Harley...I wanna hear you baby...”

Harley groaned pressing her eyes closed as ripples washed over her until she couldn't hold back. She peaked with a cry, her orgasm rushing through her making her whole body tingle then flood with warmth. “JACK!”

Jack grinned, Harley's nails dug into his legs when she came, but it was a good sort of hurt that sent Jack stumbling over the edge. He came with her, gasping her name when he did, heat pooling and bursting from him. “HARLEY!!”

Harley dropped forward, her hands on either side of his head as she looked down at him. “I love you Jack Wayne...I love you so much.”

Jack smiled. “Mm...I love you Nurse Harley.”

She giggled and wrapped her arms around him, settling herself around his body. Jack wrapped his arms around her holding her tight.

Much later that afternoon, Harley was standing with Jack in the garage examining the 'fleet' of Wayne vehicles. Jack could drive one-handed, but today was their first outing since Jack was injured and Harley had insisted on driving. Today was her first practice as a member of the Gotham City Sirens. Harley had been pretty surprised when she had received the phone call telling her that the first practice was in a couple of days. After beating Ivy, Harley had been sure she would be kicked out.

She was dressed in a pair of black booty shorts, fishnet stockings, a baseball-style t-shirt with black sleeves and a fat, little red devil on the front along with a pair of red high tops. Her hair was still in pig-tails and she had on a knee-high pair of red and black socks. Harley was chewing her lips staring at the cars when she whispered.

“Any one of them?”

With his cast in a sling, Jack gestured vaguely and grinned. He was dressed in a pair of slim-cut black jeans, a deep plum colored button down shirt and a blazer in black over that, with a pair of black oxfords completing his outfit. Even with his healing injuries he still looked delectable to Harley. “Yes, any one you want to drive.” He laughed at her overwhelmed expression.

Harley muttered, “So many...”

They ended up taking a 1967 Ford Shelby Mustang GT500 that was painted silver with an almost bronze undercoat. Harley had had no idea what the car was when she saw it, she only knew she had to drive it!

When they arrived at the roller rink, Harley was holding Jack's good hand and had her skates slung over her shoulder. Almost immediately she saw the other girls working around the ring practicing moves while Halestorm was playing in the background and Ivy yelled out directions from the edges, skated around, and pointed occasionally slamming her shoulder in to break up some of the girls when it looked as if an actual fight was going to start. As she and Jack approached, Ivy spotted her and waved. “Hey Harley!”

Harley smiled and waved back. “Ivy!”

Harley eased Jack down on one of the bleachers where he would have a great view. Jack laughed. “Harley stop treating me like glass, sweets. I'm healing up just fine.”
“I know, I just...you didn't see yourself after the fight puddin.” She leaned down to kiss him. Jack reached up with his uninjured hand, brushing his fingers along her jaw. “Go out there and have some fun my darling girl,” he whispered with a grin. “Besides, I wanna see you skating in those tiny shorts you have on.”

Harley giggled hurrying away toward Ivy, but not before Jack managed a light whack on her tush as she jogged away from him.

Harley stopped when she was by Ivy. “I was kinda shocked you guys called me.” Harley frowned.

Ivy frowned in confusion. “Why? So you beat me, so what? That's what the fight club is for....fighting and one of us won.” Ivy smiled and wrapped an arm around Harley's shoulders. “Just means you are going to be a great member of our team!”

Harley grinned. “Thanks Red.”

Pamela laughed. “No problem, now get out there and show me how you can kick ass on the team!”

Practice took a little over two hours with all the new girls learning the different positions more in-depth than at try outs, practicing maneuvers, learning rules, doing drills as well as learning game scenarios and scrimmaging. Jack was grinning the whole time watching Harley and no one else. He licked his lips admiring not just the power in her legs, but the strength of her entire body as she worked with the other girls. By the time practice had come to an end Jack was more than ready to go home...for a little more practice of a different sort.

Harley came skating over to him, sliding to a stop with a wide grin and yanking off her helmet. Her blonde hair was plastered to her face and there was a sheen of sweat on her skin, but Jack had never seen her look sexier.

“You ready to go puddin?” Harley asked panting slightly.

“Oh yes my sweets...I think we should take a shower, together, when we arrive home.” Jack winked at her.

Harley giggled pretending innocence as she asked. “You don't think I should shower here?”

Jack lifted his brows. “Hell no.”

Harley giggled coming over to sit next to him to remove her skates while Jack whispered. “I think you should drive quickly.”

* *

The following day, Harley giggled helping Jack with his pants. He was holding his arms up watching her with a wide grin. “This is fun, you dressing me every day. I don't think I will ever take my hand out of the cast.”

Harley giggled. “I enjoy it too, but I also like you having two hands.” She glanced up from zipping up his slacks and winked at him which had Jack laughing. Harley giggled.

“Except I know you're ambidexterous and you just like me playing with your zipper.”

Jack chuckled. “You caught me. I like you playing with a LOT of things.” He leaned down and kissed her nose just as she was standing up.

Harley had filled him in on the details afterward as she received them from Alex. There are been no sign or mention of Killer Croc anywhere in the news, so Harley could only assume that Cobblepot had indeed taken care of everything. Alex had said that as far as he knew, all evidence of the fight had vanished and no one was stupid enough to bring it up.

Today was their first outing in which Harley was allowing Jack to actually “DO” something besides sit and watch, though watching her practice roller derby had been extremely fun. Jack loved her clothing choices and seeing Harley elbow, hiss and fight...seeing the woman he knew her to be had been more than a little exciting. But today, they were going to do something in which Jack could participate (he hated being an “invalid” if only for a short time) which was why today Jack was almost literally bouncing off the walls of their bedroom. Harley had planned a fun outing for them to play some golf at Gotham FunZone.

Jack had insisted on them wearing “golf” costumes for the fun of it. The weather was still warm enough for shorts, so Harley was wearing a short skort (skirt and short combo) along with some knee-high socks, a pair of black and white saddle shoes and a red and black shirt with a diamond pattern like the diamonds on a set of playing cards (which Jack especially appreciated), her hair in pigtails with a matching visor against the sun and her oversized white sunglasses.

Harley ran her hands down the sides of Jack's purple and white plaid pants straightening them out before she started to run the belt through the slacks' loops. Jack kept giving her 'looks' every time she would brush against his groin or 'accidentally' grope his rear.

Harley giggled at the pants. “Where did you ever find these!” Harley asked as she stepped back examining the slacks.

Jack grinned like a little kid. “In a golf catalogue of course! They're purple! I had to have them! And lookie—they match my cast!” (Jack had convinced Fred to wrap the cast with purple sticky gauze so that it would go with his outfit.)

Harley giggled. “Well, only you could make those look good.”

Jack, still topless (which was fine with Harley) did a little spin stopping with his back to her and wiggled his rear. “You like them, admit it.”

She giggled picking the polo up off the bed and walked over to help tug it over his head, helping to guide his arm still in the cast through the arm hole before tugging the shirt the rest of the way down and tucking it in. She grinned looking into his blue eyes as her hand slipped low into his pants. Jack quirked an eyebrow at her. “Maybe we should skip the golf?”

Harley giggled. “Or maybe you should wait 'til we get home and I can undress you...slowly...with my mouth.”

Jack grinned. “You can do that?”

“Maybe.” Harley giggled finishing tucking his shirt in for him. The polo was white with a purple “J” embroidered on the breast. Jack then dropped down on the edge of the bed and with Harley's help slipped on a pair of a brown and white saddle shoes. Jack was grinning at her. “Oh, I want you to try...definitely!”

She giggled. “Come on, let's go have some fun!”
Alfred was waiting downstairs for them smiling serenely. “Ah Master Jack, nice to see you up and around.”

Jack grinned. “All thanks to you and Harley's tender loving care.”

“Well still Master Jack, don't extert yourself too much, please?”

Jack saluted throwing off his Gucci sunglasses at the same time. “I solemnly swear to behave myself to the best of my abilities.”

Alfred made a show of groaning. “Oh dear.”

Jack laughed. “See ya later Alfie!”

Harley waved her arm through Jack’s. “Bye Alfred!”

The aging butler waved in return. “Have fun.”

Frost was waiting outside for them when they stepped out of the front door. He was standing by the car in a nice grey suit, ready to open the doors. “Glad to see you up again, Mr. Wayne.”

Jack laughed. “Me too Frosty, me too.”

Jack slipped into the back with Harley following right behind him. Jack immediately pulled her close wrapping his arm around her. Harley wrapped her arms around his waist snuggling close. Jack let out a sigh of contentment settling back with Harley against him.

The Gotham FunZone was more than simply the miniature golf course, though it was huge by miniature golf course standards. The place also had go-karts, water bumper cars, an old fashioned arcade with dozens of video games and pinball machines, along with a driving range and batting cages.

Jack was laughing as they headed inside. “This is fantastic Harley.”

Harley grinned, proud of herself. “I thought it might be. We can do the arcade, but I don't think we should do the go-karts or the water bumper cars.”

Jack pouted at her. “No bumper cars?”

Harley started to giggle. “No! You're lucky I'm letting you play golf!”

Jack laughed with a fake pout. “Woman—you are so mean!”

“I'll make it up to you. I promise...I've been reading up on the healing capabilities of a good massage.” Harley purred.

Jack smirked. “Oh? Thought we had already tried that?”

“We did, but I didn't get to try all the new ways to massage you...” Harley licked her lips before tugging Jack to the ticket counter to buy their tickets.
Gotham FunZone was busy, but not overly crowded. Jack grinned with pleasure watching Harley bend over to hit the ball, wiggling her rear back and forth...on purpose he was sure of it, especially judging by the way she looked over her shoulder at him, when he frowned slightly. Just across from them he saw a family of four: Mom, Dad, two kids, a boy and a girl. The woman was blonde, attractive, the husband slim, well dressed, the children adorable...Jack watched as they laughed and hit the golf balls, teasing one another...Jack sighed softly, but he wasn't sure why he sighed. That wasn't for him and Harley...a family, a normal life. When Harley was pregnant he had thought maybe, maybe a family with children was his future, domestic happiness, but he knew now that wasn't for either of them.

Jack frowned ever so slightly. He hadn't realized just how alone he had felt until Harley came into his life. He had had no one to share his vision of the world with, to understand that all of it was pointless...so alone. He hadn't realized that the loneliness was eating him alive...but then Harley came into his life!! She understood him and what was even better...she accepted him! Loved him! Just as he was! Harley wasn't trying to change him into something he could never be, she wanted him just as he was...Jack felt that ache in his chest, that overwhelming feeling of love he held just for Harley. Jack smiled looking over at her, watching her as she grinned at him. She was everything to him.

His life, their life, was chaos and he liked it that way. Harley and he were not meant for that...a family, a normal life. At least not anymore. Harley was all he needed. She was his one constant, the only steady thing in his life...his Harley...his anchor to this world. There was no room for anything, or anyone else...just her. Jack smiled, turning his attention back to the woman he loved just as she hit the ball and sent it rolling around a nearly impossible curve to fall right into the hole.

Harley leapt into the air throwing her hands up and cheered. “YES!!”

Jack grinned watching her. She was his everything, he thought. Harley turned around bouncing on the balls of her feet making Jack laughed. “Did you see that puddin! Right in the hole!”

Jack opened his arms to her and she bounced into his embrace. He wrapped his good arm around her waist and tugged her close. “That's my girl. Though I'm pretty good at getting it in the hole too.” He chuckled and winked at her.

That was the moment that his cellphone rang. Jack stole a quick kiss before he let her go and pulled out his phone thinking that maybe it was Alex. He frowned when he looked down at the display; unknown caller.

Jack held the phone, up hitting the button. “Yes?”

“Jack!! It's Lisa!! Oh my God!! I'm so sorry I haven't called. It's just been crazy here! I got fired! Someone called...well I know who called, but she got me fired and filed a restraining order against me! I figured it was all her, you would never do that...anyway, guess where I am?”

Jack blinked in shock as a cold creeping feeling of absolute rage washed over him before he gritted out between suddenly clenched teeth. “Where?”

He glanced over at Harley who was watching him with a frown, her hand was around her golf club, the knuckles turning white and her lips were set in a thin line.

“I'm in Gotham! I just arrived!!” Lisa nearly crowed. “Anyway I'm going to be staying at the Best Western near the stadium in Otisburg. I was hoping maybe we could get together...like tonight?”

Lisa begged softly.
Jack's eyes narrowed with anger. "Tonight Lisa....ah..."

Harley hissed. "Yes—tell her yes."

Jack looked confused for a split second, but nodded. "Tonight would be fine Lisa...around ten?"

Harley grinned with a nod. On the phone Lisa giggled. "Oh Jack, I can't wait to see you again!"

"Yeah, me either," Jack said with no warmth in his tone at all. "I'll come pick you up. Meet me in front of the stadium."

Lisa squealed. "Oh Jack, I can't wait to see you!!"

Jack rolled his eyes. "So you said..." he whispered and then said, "Me either, see you soon." He hit the button disconnecting the call, angrily shoving his phone into his back pocket.

Harley snarled. "I can't believe she came here?!!" Harley threw her golf club down onto ground.

Jack reached over with his good hand, taking her by the shoulder and tugging her into his arms. "Hey don't worry my sweet cupcake, we'll take care of her once and for all." Harley laid her head against his shoulder. "We need to take her someplace quiet...someplace where I can smash her head in." Harley wrapped her arms around his waist and hissed quietly against his shoulder.

Jack grinned. He loved the fact that Harley wanted to kill someone who was trying to come between them, trying to take him away from her. It proved to him just how much she loved him, how much she cherished what they had. Jack kissed the top of her head and grinned as an idea came to him. "I know the perfect place Harls..."

They had decided to take Lisa someplace where they could leave her, a place where Lisa would look like one of the countless victims of a senseless crime in Gotham City. Sheldon Park. It had once been a lovely park years and years before, when Jack's parents had still been alive. But since their death, the park had become a place ripe with muggings, rapes, drug deals and murders. The perfect place for someone new to Gotham to accidentally go...and not come back.

Jack had told Harley to be waiting at the center of the park where a statue of an old founder of Gotham who nobody remembered stood. A perfect place for her to wait, hidden in darkness, ready for her revenge.

Harley finished braiding her hair and frowned at herself in the mirror. She was dressed all in black, black slim cut jeans and a black athletic cut t-shirt. She had braided her hair and had just stuck up her long braid under a dark ball cap before she picked up the leather gloves that she had laying in front of her. She slipped them on, wiggling her fingers as she pulled them on. Harley then looked at herself again in the mirror and rubbed her lips together spreading the lip gloss she had applied just a moment ago over her lips, then grinned at herself. She was finally getting to use her bat on someone she hated...it was exciting, thrilling! Harley narrowed her blue eyes at herself in the mirror. No one—no one would ever get between her and her puddin...ever.

(As she stared at herself in the mirror she heard a soft voice. "Harley are you sure about this?" Harleen whispered. "What do you mean, 'Am I sure?'") happily in reply. “I know...”

Harley giggled

Harley slipped out of the bedroom grabbing the bag that she had sitting by the door and threw it over her shoulder, closing the door quietly before she headed down the stairs and made her way quietly out the door. The bag she was carrying with her contained a change of clothes along with a pair of black stilletos. Jack had already left ahead of her, taking Frost's old car, a 2014 Ford Focus under the idea that he would tell Lisa that he didn't want Harley to find him or for anyone in Gotham to recognize him, that their meeting had to be in secret.

Harley turned and quietly closed the front door, turning around and making her way silently down the drive to the gate where Frost was waiting for her in the Bentley. She quickly punched in the code for the gate, slipped through and then into the back of the car.

“Hey Frost,” Harley said with a grin as she settled into the back.

Frost knew only that he was supposed to drive Miss Quinn to Sheldon Park where he would be trading cars with Mr. Wayne. From there, he was supposed to drive his car to a chop shop that was under the Gotham PD's protection, where they were to 'dispose' of his car, no questions asked. From there Frost would take a cab to the Upper Eastside, where Jack and Harley would pick him up and he was to drive them to Sky High Gotham restaurant where they were going to have dinner.

Frost had a feeling something bad—very bad—was going down, but he found that he didn't really care. Jack Wayne seemed to be the kind of guy who looked after his own, and Frost was one of his now.

Jack was dressed in a three-piece slim-cut black suit with a blood red dress shirt and black tie with matching, highly polished embossed leather Oxfords and, of course, one glove of a pair of Italian leather black leather gloves on his unbroken hand. If he could have crammed the glove on his other hand he would have, anything to not have to touch Lisa. His hair was slicked back, his eyes traced out in black eye-liner and his lips were a soft glossy red. Lisa was sitting next to him wearing what Jack supposed she thought was a sexy dress; it was a sheer, low cut black shimmering mini dress with a pair of black lace-up stilettos.

Jack was very proud of himself, he hadn't vomited yet! She had her hand on his thigh while he drove and occasionally she would try to lower her hand down between his legs. Jack would put his cast covered hand down on hers and move her hand back up his leg or try to push her hand off completely. Inwardly Jack groaned, did women have to put up with this all the time? Being groped when they didn't want to be? Jack shook his head sighing. Most men needed their hands cut off at the wrist or just a few more murders of creeps that did that...Jack frowned, thinking of killing men who just looked at Harley wrong, let alone touched her!

Lisa ran her fingers delicately along his broken hand. “I still can't believe you drove yourself with your hand all banged up like that. You still haven't told me what happened? Did she do this to you?” Lisa frowned. “You poor thing...”

Jack closed his eyes for a split second telling himself patience was a virtue. “No, Harley didn't do this. I was in a fight. Nothing to worry about.”

Lisa grinned. “I suppose you're right. I mean with your money, any scars that an injury would leave you could have taken care of.”

Jack frowned. “Now why on earth would I do that? I mean scars are proof of life aren't they?
Lisa frowned clearly confused. “But don't you want to look perfect?” She reached up and touched the healing cut on his cheek. “You are so handsome, why have a scar to detract from that?

Jack glanced sideways at her, wishing she would stop touching him. He tried not to growl. “I like scars.”

Lisa pouted then decided to change the subject. “So why do you wear make-up, Jack honey? I mean, you wear it well, but men don't usually wear make-up.”

Jack ground his teeth in annoyance. “I like it.”

Lisa made a face. “Well honey, I think you should consider what kind of message it sends and maybe stop wearing it. Especially the lipstick.” Jack bit down hard on his tongue, but said nothing. He just let himself imagine the look of glee on his Harls' face when she swung her bat.

“So where are we going?” Lisa purred. “Someplace private I hope.” Again her fingers tried to dance between his legs. Jack nearly slapped her as he took her hand and moved it off his legs, placing her hand in her own lap.

Jack smiled at her. “Don't worry; it will be nice and dark and very private.”

Lisa giggled, the sound rolling over Jack's ears like old, dirty oil. “I'm so looking forward to it.”

Jack parked over to the side in the main parking lot leading into Sheldon Park. He stepped out of the car and came around to let Lisa out of the car. (She had clearly expected him to since she had sat in the car when he stepped out without moving a muscle to open her own door.) Jack took her hand helping her out of car. Lisa frowned looking around.

“Why are we here darling?”

Jack twitched, the endearment scraping over his skin like sandpaper. “I though a walk in the park, just the two of us alone would be nice...maybe find a park bench to sit and enjoy the stars.”

Lisa looked up frowning. “You can't really see them from here though, the lights are a bit much.”

Jack smiled his most charming smile at her. “Who said those are the only stars in Gotham?”

Lisa twittered and blushed wrapping her arm around his, leaning into his shoulder.

Harley arrived at the park and hopped out of the Bentley with a grin and popping bubbles with the bubblegum she had made Frost stop and buy her. Frost stepped out too with a look around. His years as a police officer—and just being a Gothamite knowing about this park—had his senses on overload for the potential dangers here. “You sure about this Miss Quinn? This park isn't safe. It's known for the number of murders, rapes and muggings that happen here. You know that's why they call it Murder Park.”

Harley swung her bat with a laugh. “Thanks Frost. I'll be fine.” She blew a bubble and popped it with a giggle. “God, I forgot how much I love bubblegum!”

Frost didn't look pleased. “Miss Quinn I don't think Mr. Wayne would be too happy if I let anything happen to you.”

Harley walked over and laid her hand on his shoulder. “Frost,” she said with a comforting smile.
“Just stick to the plan okay?”

Frost stared down at her. Miss Quinn was petite, compact and he could tell she was swift and deadly. After a heartbeat, he nodded and opened the car door. “All right Miss Quinn.”

Harley grabbed his door, grinning at him. “See ya soon.”

She closed his door and sauntered into the park, twirling her bat easily in one hand.

Harley was grinning happily. She had been regretting not using her bat on Meg for ages now. (Harleen whispered. “You really are crossing a line Harley.” “Oh shut up Harleen.” Harley continued to smile. “Don't try to ruin my good mood.” Harleen sighed. “I don't know who you are.” Harley laughed. “You're not a very good doctor Harleen if you don't know who we are anymore...”)

The park was barely a park; it looked more like the inside of a dumpster. There was garbage everywhere, graffiti and she could swear she could smell urine and vomit. It had once been nice, with brick paths, flowering shrubs, and thick growth of trees. It had probably been gorgeous at one time, she thought but now it was definitely a dump. Harley made a face. “Pleasant.”

She was on her way to the center where the statue of the namesake of the park stood. The statue was surrounded by park benches and located in its own little alcove, surrounded by tall evergreen bushes. It would be a great place to make out and not be caught if the park hadn't been so dangerous.

When Harley stepped into the little space, three men jumped out of the bushes in front of her. “Hey sweetheart! Whatcha up to wandering about by yourself?” One was a young guy, early twenties, might have been good-looking except for the tattoo across his forehead. Harley couldn't be real sure what it was in the dim light from a light post not too far away, but to her it looked like he had a penis tattooed on his head. She giggled to herself. Okay that one's called dickhead. The other two, a tall skinny man that reminded her of a walking skeleton...okay Bones she thought and last, a heavy set man with a couple of chins...Jabba. Harley grinned pleased with her names for the three punks.

Harley stopped in her tracks and narrowed her blue eyes. She hadn't bothered to move the bat from her shoulder yet. “You know if ya'll were smart, you would shove off.” She blew at bubble at them.

The tall skinny, half starved looking guy (Bones as Harley called him to herself) walked closer. “You think that bat is going to protect you girlie?”

Harley swung the bat off her shoulder and smacked it into her opposite hand with a satisfying 'thwack' of wood against flesh. “I think so.”

Bones decided to rush her. As skinny as he was, Harley wasn't sure what he thought he was going to accomplish, it was an extremely stupid move, she thought. Chewing her gum and then clenching her teeth in a bright, eager, vicious smile, Harley swung her bat low and to the side. Before the man could lay a hand on her, she shattered his kneecap, the bat connecting with a hard thunk against the man's leg. The snap of bone was audible to his companions. Immediately Bones started to howl as he dropped his hands down to his damaged knee trying to catch himself, but Harley didn't stop there. She slammed the bat upward, catching Bones in the mouth with another satisfying thunk sound, shattering at least two teeth and knocking out two others. Bones made a really laughable sound of pain, falling backwards onto the ground.

Harley giggled and popped her gum. “Who's next?”

Dickhead shoved Jabba at her. “Go on Wally, you get her.”
Jabba staggered forward, pulling a switchblade from his pocket at the same time. “Come on pretty, just come have a little fun with us. Nobody needs to get hurt.”

Harley swung her bat around grinning, blowing bubbles and popping them. “Really? Oh I don't know—I think someone does.” She moved so swiftly that Jabba didn't have time to react before Harley brought the bat down on the forearm holding the knife. The man's yell was hilarious and Harley wished Jack could be here to share this with her when the hard impact of bat hitting bone filled the small area. Jabba screamed. “MY ARM!!”

He stumbled back, having dropped the switchblade, which skittered along the broken brick path vanishing into the dark. Harley giggled at Dickhead. “Mm...two out of three...whatdya think your chances are?”

Dickhead apparently had a little more brains as he rushed forward and grabbed Bones, dragging him with him while Jabba followed quickly behind. Dickhead yelled over his shoulder. “I'm gonna find you and kill you, you little cunt!!”

Harley rolled her eyes with a giggle then found herself a prime hiding spot and waited.

Twenty minutes later after Harley had had to scare away a hooker and her john with the threat of using her bat on his privates, Harley caught a glimpse of Jack and Lisa walking under one of the park lights. Lisa had her arm through Jack's and her head was lying on his shoulder.

Harley sneered, her eyes narrowing with hatred watching the way Lisa was fawning all over Jack. How dare that woman try to butt her way into what she and Jack had. No one touched Jack but her...and they had even given her a chance to live, but the stupid bitch just couldn't stay away! She just had to keep butting her head in, just had to keep trying to take Jack away from her.

Harley's fists around the handle of her bat held on tight until her knuckles were turning white under her gloves. She watched until Jack and Lisa had strolled pass her hiding spot when Harley stepped out.

“Well, well, well...Lisa,” Harley said around her gum, sneering at the other woman.

Lisa turned with Jack and let out a little yelp. “You! What are you doing here?! You're stalking him aren't you! What the fuck is wrong with you? Can't you tell he doesn't want you any more?? He's in love with me!”

Lisa took a step away from Jack who was just standing there with an amused look on his face. Harley glanced at Jack giving him a wink before she blew a bubble at Lisa. “You know what, you're the one who is delusional. I don't know if Jack told you, but I'm a licensed psychiatrist and you honey, are nuts.” Harley giggled. “So to quote the newest Taylor Swift song. 'Look what you made me do.'”

With a wide grin Harley took a couple of steps back, then leading with her right foot she stepped forward, pulling her bat back over her shoulder as she stepped up with her left foot and swung, the bat cutting through the air and hitting the confused Lisa in the chest. There was a loud thump as the bat hit her in the chest and a crack of her breast bone breaking as Lisa flew backwards comically off her heels, her eyes going wide and a gasp catching in her throat.

Jack snorted out a laugh when Lisa fell clutching at her chest, wheezing for breath for a couple of seconds, her eyes wide as saucers before she stopped, her last breath coming out like a sigh.
walked over and looked down at Lisa leaning on the head of her bat watching. Harley frowned then looked up at Jack. “Is that it?”

Jack dropped to a crouch next to the prone woman and covered Lisa's nose and mouth with his one gloved hand. “I have heard of people dying from a blow to the chest if it's hard enough.”

Harley looked sour as she crouched down too, her right hand on the top of her bat. “Well this is just getting to be disappointing...again.”

Jack smiled. “I'm sorry sweets, but she is as dead as a door nail.”

Harley pouted blowing a bubble. “I had more fun hitting those jerks before you came.”

Jack stood up. “What?”

Harley pushed herself to her feet with a shrug. “Just a a trio of asses. I took care of them.”

Jack laughed softly while Harley reached down for Lisa's purse taking out the woman's wallet and shoving it into her back pocket. She crouched down to examine Lisa's earrings and necklace.
“Should I take those too?” She looked up at Jack who nodded. “Yep. Then come on—I'm starved sweets.”

Harley giggled snapping the necklace and removing the earrings dropping them into her pocket.
“Okay puddin I'm ready. Though we need to do something where I can use my bat more.”

Jack put his arm around Harley's waist walking out of the park. “I'm sorry sweets. Make it up to you tonight?"

Harley giggled. “Sure.”

Jack drove while Harley stripped. He found it distracting watching her in the back seat (where there was more room for her to maneuver in than the Bentley) raising her hips up to shimmy out of her jeans. He grinned seeing the lacy black thong she was wearing. He licked his lips when she pulled off her t-shirt then her bra, moving around to lift out the dress. The dress itself was black, like his suit. The front of the dress was a halter with a keyhole opening between her breasts and it was backless, the jersey fabric falling to her hips showing the smooth creamy expanse of her slender back. He pressed his teeth into his bottom lip, his groin tightening and hardening while he watched her dress, unbraiding her hair and running her fingers through it before she started to gather it up into a mess up do, thick curls framing her face.

She next pulled out a pair of Christian Louboutin's black suede Pigalle Follies pumps. Jack's blue eyes followed the length of her calf, continuing to watch while she crossed her legs to slip the shoe on, the fabric of the dress falling away to reveal the thigh high slit in the dress.

Jack groaned. “Damn it Harley.”

She looked up, her blue eyes catching his as she quirked an amused brow at him. “What is it puddin?”

Jack laughed. “You know exactly what you're doing to do me. That dress is going to kill me.”

Harley giggled taking out her make up and started to do her face. Jack grinned happily tapping the fingers of his good hand on the steering wheel as he drove to pick up Frost.
The Sky High Gotham restaurant was located in one of the tallest buildings in Gotham, the Wayne International Plaza. The restaurant itself was located on the top floor, surrounded by windows providing several fantastic views of the city from every direction. The floor was a slick black marble, the chairs and seats were all covered in white table clothes, the lighting was warm soft purples and blues like an evening sky, with candles on each table. The daytime view was stunning, but it was the evening view that really drew the crowds to this restaurant, which was one of the reasons this place stayed open until 5 a.m.

Jack and Harley exited the elevator, the two of them drawing a few stares while they stepped up to the podium. With them both dressed in black, they looked like a pair of high end Goths. The only color on Jack was his shirt or blood red and on Harley it was the necklace Jack had given her, a ruby that sat at the hollow of her throat and her engagement ring.

When the man at the podium, an olive-skinned young man with pleasant brown eyes, glanced up he slowly smiled pleasantly. “Mr. Wayne, a pleasure. Right this way, please—you're table is waiting.”

“Thank you Louis, it's been a while,” Jack commented as they were led to a table by the window that had one of the most spectacular views of the city below, Jack felt.

Louis smiled while Jack pulled a chair out for Harley. “It has indeed sir. I had heard through the grapevine that you were engaged.”

Jack grinned. “I am indeedie! This is my love Harley,” Jack gestured toward Harley. Louis took her hand. “A pleasure. You are very lovely.”

Harley blushed. “Thank you.”

Jack grinned. “So how’s the husband Louis, and the kids?”

Louis smiled. “Hugo is right as rain and the kids are growing too fast.”

Louis smiled. “Perfect Mr. Wayne. I will fetch that for you right away and you can look over the menu.”

Jack smiled. “Thank you my dear.”

Soon Jack was pouring wine into Harley's glass and smiling. “I feel...” He sighed happily. “Extremely happy...we have freed ourselves of two burdens and now I feel like dancing!”

Harley laughed holding her wine up and taking a sip. There wasn't a dance floor in the restaurant, though some music was playing, light classical. Jack grinned, putting out his hand to her across the table. “Would you like to dance with me?”

Harley giggled “Yes!”

Jack took her hand as they both stood, then he pulled Harley into his arms. Jack wrapped his arm with the cast around her waist tugging her up against him. The Blue Danube Waltz was playing softly in the background. Jack started to waltz with her, smiling into her eyes. Jack spun slowly with her, both of them pointing their right feet out, then Jack elegantly spun her around, then took both her hands the two of them stepping away from each other before Jack turned her around into his arms, her back up against his chest.

Jack leaned close and kissed her ear. “I love you my little murder kitten.”

Harley gigled. “Mm...I love you my dark prince charming.”

Jack laughed swinging her out and holding her hand, turning her in a circle before he tugged her back into his arms again. “Mmm...I can't wait until I'm introducing you as Mrs. Wayne...my wife...”

Harley giggled. “Mrs. Wayne...I do love the sound of that—my husband...Jack Wayne...” She grinned letting Jack swing her out again and back into his arms to dip her. The restaurant patrons applauded.

Jack smiled down at her. “Nothing and no one will ever tear us apart Harley...ever.”
Cementing Frienships

It was several weeks after the fight with Croc and Harley's killing of Lisa.

Harley woke up to the smell of fresh coffee and Jack singing. She smiled, wrapping her arms around her pillow and snuggling into it listening to the warm sounds of Jack's voice.

“Oh, her eyes, her eyes make the stars look like they're not shining

Her hair, her hair falls perfectly without her trying

She's so beautiful

And I tell her everyday....”

Harley smiled with her eyes closed and listened to Jack sing Bruno Mars.

The Wayne family cabin was an intimate structure, smaller than she was expecting, but the inside of it was beautiful. There were stone and wood tiled floors, with a large picture window that looked out onto a beautiful mountain and forest landscape. There was a wide open living room with a fireplace and a large comfortable beige couch, accompanied by several sitting chairs. The kitchen was off the living room/dining room with a small round wooden table and a couple of solidly crafted wooden chairs. The bedroom was cozy with its own picture window, a large queen size bed and a small fireplace in the corner. There was even a bear skin on the wall! It was the sort of place Harley had only seen in magazine pictures.

Harley giggled sitting up and grabbing the sheet, wrapping it around her naked body and walked barefoot into the cabin's living room. She could see Jack, barefoot, in a pair of dark purple and white striped boxers—otherwise he was wearing nothing else. His thick dark brown hair was curling around his face though he kept sweeping it back while he sang and danced, all while making pancakes. He had the cast removed from his hand by a doctor in town just a few days ago and he had been enjoying having the freedom of both his hands back immensely...especially if last night was any indication, Harley thought with a pleased blush.

Harley stopped to watch him. After killing Lisa (who had only made the Gotham papers as another unfortunate mugging of an out-of-towner in Gotham, in the wrong place at the wrong time) Jack had decided that they should take a couple of weeks away from Gotham and spend some time in a cabin owned by the Waynes in upstate New York. It had been the right decision. Jack and Harley had spent the most wonderful time together without the distractions of family or Gotham City.

Harley giggled when Jack did a complete spin with the pan in one hand and spatula in the other, then grinned when he saw her watching him. He pointed with the spatula at her, using the pan as a microphone continuing to sing Bruno Mars.

“And when you smile

The whole world stops and stares for a while

'Cause girl, you're amazing

Just the way you are
Her lips, her lips, I could kiss them all day if she'd let me

Her laugh her laugh, she hates but I think it's so sexy

She's so beautiful

And I tell her everyday...”

He trailed off putting the pan down on one of the off burners, tossed the spatula down so that he could stalk over to her, grinning and waggling his eyebrows with a devilish gleam in his eyes. He strolled across the floor, grabbed Harley and yanked her into his arms. She squealed as she struggled to hold the sheet up, swiftly tucking it around her so that it would not fall to the floor while Jack pulled her against him. His hands moved down her back in a slow sensual caress before he started to sway, pressing her body flush against his while moving to unheard music. Jack's voice provided the only melody they were dancing to; Jack's smile was broad as he held her hand, twisting her out from him making Harley do a full spin (nearly losing the sheet) then back again with her back pressed against his chest. Jack chuckled licking her ear as he continued to sing softly.

“When I see your face

There's not a thing that I would change

’Cause you're amazing

Just the way you are...”

He twisted her back around to face him, took a few long quick tango-like steps across the living room floor before he stopped and dipped her back to place a kiss between her breasts. He set her back on her feet. “And how is my little minx this morning?”

Harley grinned at him. “Happy. How are you?”

Jack grinned as he stole a kiss before he let her go and walked back to the kitchen. “I'm making breakfast and feeling fantastic! Especially after last night's exercise. You, my dear, are very flexible...I love it!”

Harley giggled, her cheeks turning red as she straightened up her sheet and walked into the kitchen. “Mm...the coffee smells fantastic, Jack!”

Jack smiled softly at her, reaching up to pull a cup down for her and began preparing her coffee. “So my sweets, ready to head back to Gotham? Bruce called this morning to check to see if we were still planning on meeting him for dinner tonight.”

Harley smiled taking the offered cup when he was finished and held it up to her nose to take a deep whiff of coffee. “Sure if you are puddin?”

He grinned. “I suppose we can't stay here forever, though I've enjoyed myself. Oh, I also got a phone call from Alex; apparently Penguin is ready for our promised fight.”

Harley looked up from her coffee. “What?”

Jack prepared his own cup of coffee while he spoke. “Yep, I thought the little bird would find a way out of it because of what happened with Croc, but I guess his pride took over. So, yes, our fight is in a day or two...Alex said he would let me know, but he also called to tell me he's rescheduled the poker game for tomorrow night.”
“Busy week,” Harley noted.

Jack grinned with a nod as he set his mug of coffee down and went back to making pancakes. “Yep. What can I say? You and I are popular toots!” Jack slid the finished pancake onto a plate and handed it to Harley while he set about making another for himself. “Bruce wants to meet us at Ducards, this really fancy French restaurant...if you don't show up dressed up, they kick your ass out.” Jack laughed.

“Is it nice or just pretending to be nice?” Harley asked while she adjusted her sheet before cutting into her pancake.

“No the food there is actually good. I was there once with Bruce when he first became official head of Wayne Enterprises...when he came of age and had proven himself. Anyway we went out for a celebration: Bruce, Alfred and me.” Jack tilted his head in thought. “I think that was also the dinner where I put a steak knife through this really rude waiter's hand...he kept talking to me like I was slow.” Jack chuckled. “Oh, Bruce was upset and embarrassed!...Or maybe he was just upset. Anyway that was when I ended up under a doctor's careful eye for about a month until he declared me sane again. Apparently I was suffering from pathological jealousy...or something like that.” Jack shrugged carrying his plate over to sit at the little dining room table with Harley.

“But the real reason I stabbed the waiter was that he was condescending and a bore.” Jack giggled cutting a bite off his pancake after lathering it in butter and syrup. He grinned around a mouthful. “I don't think I've been back to that restuarant since!”

Harley giggled. “Oh I can just see the look on Bruce's face when you did that!”

Jack laughed. “It was priceless!”

By mid-afternoon Jack and Harley had the Bentley Bentayga loaded up and were headed back to Gotham. Jack drove, singing along with Harley. They had the windows rolled down and the cool breeze was blowing through their hair. Harley leaned her head on Jack's shoulder thinking to herself that moment, everything was right with the world...at least with her world.

When they arrived home, Alfred was waiting for them with a small smile on his lips. He was clearly happy to see them. “Nice to see you both back again. Did you have a nice stay at the cabin?” Alfred asked while he walked out to the car to help with their bags.

“Oh, it was wonderful Alfred!” Harley grinned rushing over to hug Alfred. She looked adorable in a pair of “Daisy Duke” shorts and a red and black plaid button down shirt with her hair in pigtails.

Jack smiled at her, admiring her backside for a moment. He was dressed casually as well, in dark blue slacks and a white button down shirt with the sleeves rolled up. “Yep, we had a nice time away from all the cares of Gotham! So is Bruce around?” Jack asked picking up two of their bags and walked through the manor's front doors.

“No, he is not Master Jack,” Alfred answered. “Master Bruce is still at the office, though he did want me to tell you that he will be not running late for dinner tonight.” Alfred smiled. “Would either of you like some tea?”

Jack glanced over his shoulder at Harley who nodded. “That sounds great.”
Jack and Alfred had just headed up the stairs, Harley following along with her own couple of bags when her cellphone rang. She frowned. Harley didn't receive calls often. Usually they were wrong numbers or solicitors and usually Harley would check the number before answering, but this time she just dropped the bags and grabbed her phone out of the back pocket of her jean shorts without thinking before she answered. “Hello?”

“Well if it isn't Quinz.”

Harley froze at the foot of the stairs, her eyes going wide in shock. She knew that voice.

The man on the other end continued; his voice slithered down her spine like a vile snake, then creeping up her back, drilling into the back of her skull. The old Harleen came to the surface and Harley shivered stepping back mentally. Harleen actually quivered with an old fear.

“How are you babe? Saw your pic in the paper. Hanging out with the rich boys now, are ya? Dating a Wayne? How the fuck a whore like you hook a Wayne? I couldn't get you to spread your legs for nothing...course my trying got me kicked out of school, didn't it ya frigged bitch? Though I suppose if I had the money you would have opened up just fine, eh?” He laughed on the other end and Harleen felt a tear she hadn't realized she was crying run down her cheek to drip off her chin. Her old fears, the memories of him holding her down, trying to...punching her in the face, threatening her...while these images from Harleen's past rotated through her mind, he continued to talk.

“Don't have time for your old boyfriend anymore, do you Quinz? You too good for me now huh? Course you thought you were too good for me then too when you fucking ruined my life.”

Harleen reached up unconsciously and touched her cheek where he had hit her, feeling the old bruise that had vanished years ago, her fingers dragged down over the phantom of a pressure wound, blood trailing down over a swollen bloody lip, brushing along the tooth he had chipped when he hit her, now replaced with a cap. She had dated him briefly. Good-looking, blonde with that sort of all-American boy look, the athlete, football player that rode into college on a scholarship...the sort of guy she thought might give her...something good. She had buried her brief three-week relationship with Guy deep down, to the the point she had almost forgotten about it until she heard his voice again. The hitting had started after the first week and had grown more and more severe so that by the time she left him, he was hitting her regularly...that night, the night she had finally wrestled up the courage to tell him no, had been the night he had hit her in the face and tried to rape her.

She did her best to keep her voice from trembling as images of that man, the night he had attacked her when she had refused to be his girl, refused to be with him...Harleen closed her eyes. Images came to her mind, images of him pressing her down against the brick path in the park that ran alongside the campus. His hands ripping the front of her dress, his mouth on her neck, whispering to her that she wanted this, she was making him do this...it was her fault...
